- 16 You shall have sons, O king, in place of your forefathers
and will make them rulers over all the land. ^c
- 17 I will declare your fame to all generations;
therefore the nations will praise you for ever and ever.

46

- 1 God is our shelter and our refuge,
a timely help in trouble;
2 so we are not afraid when the earth heaves
and the mountains are hurled into the sea, 3 when its waters seethe in tumult and the mountains quake before his majesty.
- 4 There is a river whose streams gladden the city of God, ^d which the Most High has made his holy dwelling;

^a the courage . . . away: prob. rdg.; Heb. obscure. ^b honour awaits her: prob. rdg.; Heb. all honoured. ^c over all the land: or in all the earth. ^d the city of God: or a wondrous city.

God is in that city; she will not be overthrown, and he will help her at the break of day. 5 Nations are in tumult, kingdoms hurled down; 6
 when he thunders, the earth surges like the sea.
 The LORD of Hosts is with us, 7
 the God of Jacob our high stronghold.

Come and see what the LORD has done, the devastation he has brought upon earth, 8 from end to end of the earth he stamps out war: 9
 he breaks the bow, he snaps the spear and burns the shield in the fire.

Let be then: learn that I am God, 10 high over the nations, high above earth.
 The LORD of Hosts is with us, 11
 the God of Jacob our high stronghold.

Clap your hands, all you nations; 1 acclaim our God with shouts of joy.
 How fearful is the LORD Most High, 2 great sovereign over all the earth!
 He lays the nations prostrate beneath us, 3
 he lays peoples under our feet;
 he chose our patrimony for us, 4
 the pride of Jacob whom he loved.

God has gone up with shouts of acclamation,
 the LORD has gone up with a fanfare of trumpets. 5 Praise God,^a praise him with psalms; 6 praise our king, praise him with psalms.
 God is king of all the earth; 7 sing psalms with all your art.
 God reigns over the nations, 8
 God is seated on his holy throne.
 The princes of the nations assemble 9 with the families of Abraham's line; ^b for the mighty ones of earth belong to God, and he is raised above them all.

The LORD is great and worthy of our praise 1
 in the city of our God, upon his holy hill.

^a Praise God: or Praise, you gods.
 Heb. the God of Abraham.

^b the families of Abraham's line: prob. rdg. ;

2 Fair and lofty, the joy of the whole earth is Zion's hill, like the farthest reaches of the north,^a the hill of the great King's city.

3 In her palaces God is known for a tower of strength.
 4 See how the kings all gather round her, marching on in company.

5 They are struck with amazement when they see her,
 they are filled with alarm and panic;
 6 they are seized with trembling,
 they toss in pain like a woman in labour, 7 like the ships of Tarshish when an east wind wrecks them.

8 All we had heard we saw with our own eyes in the city of the LORD of Hosts,
 in the city of our God,
 the city which God plants firm for evermore.

9 O God, we re-enact the story of thy true love within thy temple;
 10 the praise thy name deserves, O God,
 is heard at earth's farthest bounds.
 Thy hand is charged with justice,
 11 and the hill of Zion rejoices, Judah's daughter-cities exult in thy judgements.

12 Make the round of Zion in procession, count the number of her towers, 13 take good note of her ramparts,
 pass her palaces in review,
 that you may tell generations yet to come:
 14 Such is God,
 our God for ever and ever;
 he shall be our guide eternally.

49

1 Hear this, all you nations;
 listen, all who inhabit this world,
 2 all mankind, every living man,
 rich and poor alike;
 3 for the words that I speak are wise,
 my thoughtful heart is full of understanding.

4 I will set my ear to catch the moral of the story and tell on the harp how I read the riddle;
 5 why should I be afraid in evil times,
 beset by the wickedness of treacherous foes,

^a Or of Zaphon.

who trust in their riches and boast of their great wealth?	6
Alas! no man can ever ransom himself nor pay God the price of that release; his ransom would cost too much, for ever beyond his power to pay, the ransom that would let him live on always and never see the pit of death.	7 8 9
But remember this: ^a wise men must die; stupid men, brutish men, all perish. ^b	10
The grave is their eternal home, their dwelling for all time to come; they may give their own names to estates, but they must leave their riches to others. ^c	11
For men are like oxen whose life cannot last, they are like cattle whose time is short.	12
Such is the fate of foolish men and of all who seek to please them: like sheep they run headlong into Sheol, the land of Death;	13 14
he is their shepherd and urges them on; their flesh must rot away ^d and their bodies be wasted by Sheol, stripped of all honour.
But God will ransom my life, he will take me from the power of Sheol.	15
Do not envy a man when he grows rich, when the wealth of his family increases; for he will take nothing when he dies, and his wealth will not go with him.	16 17
Though in his lifetime he counts himself happy and men praise him in his ^e prosperity, he ^f will go to join the company of his forefathers who will never again see the light.	18 19
For men are like oxen whose life cannot last, they are like cattle whose time is short.	20

- 4 He summons heaven on high and earth
 to the judgement of his people:
 5 'Gather to me my loyal servants,
 all who by sacrifice have made a covenant with me.'
 6 The heavens proclaim his justice, for God himself is the judge.
- 7 Listen, my people, and I will speak;
 I will bear witness against you, O Israel:
 I am God, your God,
 8 shall I not^b find fault with your sacrifices, though^c your offerings are before me always?
 9 I need take no young bull from your house,
 no he-goat from your folds;
 10 for all the beasts of the forest are mine and the cattle in thousands on my hills.
 11 I know every bird on those hills,
 the teeming life of the fields is my care.
 12 If I were hungry, I would not tell you, for the world and all that is in it are mine.
 13 Shall I eat the flesh of your bulls or drink the blood of he-goats?
 14 Offer to God the sacrifice of thanksgiving and pay your vows to the Most High.
 15 If you call upon me in time of trouble,
 I will come to your rescue, and you shall honour me.
- 16 God's word to the wicked man is this:
 What right have you to recite my laws
 and make so free with the words of my covenant, 17 you who hate correction
 and turn your back when I am speaking?
 18 If you meet a thief, you choose him as your friend;
 you make common cause with adulterers;
 19 you charge your mouth with wickedness and harness your tongue to slander.
 20 You are for ever talking against your brother, stabbing your own mother's son in the back.
 21 All this you have done, and shall I keep silence?
 You thought that I was another like yourself,
 but point by point I will rebuke you to your face.
 22 Think well on this, you who forget God, or I will tear you in pieces and no one shall save you.

^a and wreathes him closely round: or and rages round him.^c Or for.^b Or I will not.

He who offers a sacrifice of thanksgiving 23
 does me due honour, and to him who follows my way ^a
 I will show the salvation of God.

Be gracious to me, O God, in thy true love; 1 in the fullness of thy mercy blot out my misdeeds.

Wash away all my guilt 2
 and cleanse me from my sin.

For well I know my misdeeds, 3
 and my sins confront me all the day long.
 Against thee, thee only, I have sinned 4
 and done what displeases thee, so that thou mayest be proved right in thy charge and just in passing sentence.

In iniquity I was brought to birth 5 and my mother conceived me in sin;
 yet, though thou hast hidden the truth in darkness, 6 through this mystery thou dost teach me wisdom.

Take hyssop ^b and sprinkle me, that I may be clean; 7
 wash me, that I may become whiter than snow;
 let me hear the sounds of joy and gladness, 8
 let the bones dance which thou hast broken.

Turn away thy face from my sins 9 and blot out all my guilt.

Create a pure heart in me, O God, 10
 and give me a new and steadfast spirit;
 do not drive me from thy presence 11
 or take thy holy spirit from me;
 revive in me the joy of thy deliverance 12
 and grant me a willing spirit to uphold me.

I will teach transgressors the ways that lead to thee, 13
 and sinners shall return to thee again.

O LORD God, my deliverer, save me from bloodshed, ^c 14
 and I will sing the praises of thy justice.

Open my lips, O Lord, 15
 that my mouth may proclaim thy praise. 16
 Thou hast no delight in sacrifice;
 if I brought thee an offering, thou wouldst not accept it. 17
 My sacrifice, O God, is a broken spirit;
 a wounded heart, O God, thou wilt not despise.

^a him who follows my way: prob. rdg.; Heb. him who puts a way.

^b Or marjoram.

^c Or from punishment by death.

- 18 Let it be thy pleasure to do good to Zion,
to build anew the walls of Jerusalem.
19 Then only shalt thou delight in the appointed sacrifices; ^a then shall young bulls be offered on thy altar.

- 1-2 Why make your wickedness your boast, you man of might,
forging wild lies all day against God's loyal servant?
Your slanderous tongue is sharp as a razor.
3 You love evil and not good,
falsehood, not speaking the truth;
4 cruel gossip you love and slanderous talk.
5 So may God ^b pull you down to the ground, sweep you away, leave you ruined and homeless,
uprooted from the land of the living.
6 The righteous will look on, awestruck,
and laugh at his plight:
7 'This is the man', they say,
'who does not make God his refuge,
but trusts in his great wealth and takes refuge in wild lies.'
8 But I am like a spreading olive-tree in God's house;
for I trust in God's true love for ever and ever.
9 I will praise thee for ever for what thou hast done,
and glorify thy name among thy loyal servants;
for that is good.

- 1^c The impious fool says in his heart,
'There is no God.'
How vile men are, how depraved and loathsome;
not one does anything good!
2 God looks down from heaven on all mankind
to see if any act wisely,
if any seek out God.
3 But all are unfaithful, all are rotten to the core;
not one does anything good,
no, not even one.

Save me, O God, by the power of thy name, and vindicate me through thy might. 1
 O God, hear my prayer,

 Insolent men rise to attack me, ruthless men seek my life; 3
 they give no thought to God.
 But God is my helper,

I have seen violence and strife in the city;
10 day and night they encircle it,

12 It was no enemy that taunted me,

may they go down alive into Sheol;

- 16 But I will call upon God;

 Philistia is the target of my anger.'
- 9 Who can bring me to the fortified city,
 who can guide me to Edom,

Hear my cry, O God, listen to my prayer. 1
 From the end of the earth I call to thee with fainting heart;
 lift me up and set me upon a rock. 2
 For thou hast been my shelter, a tower for refuge from the enemy. 3
 In thy tent will I make my home for ever and find my shelter under the cover of thy wings. 4
 For thou, O God, hast heard my vows and granted the wish^a of all who revere thy name. 5
 To the king's life add length of days,
 year upon year for many generations;
 may he dwell in God's presence for ever,
 may true and constant love preserve him. 7
 So will I ever sing psalms in honour of thy name as I fulfil my vows day after day. 8

Truly my heart waits silently for God;
 my deliverance comes from him. 1
 In truth he is my rock of deliverance,
 my tower of strength, so that I stand unshaken. 2
 How long will you assail a man with your threats, all battering on a leaning wall? 3
 In truth men plan to topple him from his height, and stamp on the fallen stones.^b 4
 With their lips they bless him, the hypocrites, but revile him in their hearts.
 Truly my heart waits silently for God;
 my hope of deliverance comes from him. 5
 In truth he is my rock of deliverance,
 my tower of strength, so that I am unshaken. 6
 My deliverance and my honour depend upon God,
 God who is my rock of refuge and my shelter. 7
 Trust always in God, my people, pour out your hearts before him;
 God is our shelter. 8
 In very truth men are a puff of wind, all men are faithless; 9
 put them in the balance and they can only rise, all of them lighter than wind.

^b the fallen stones: transposed from end of

10 Put no trust in extortion, do not be proud of stolen goods;
though wealth breeds wealth, set not your heart on it.
11 One thing God has spoken,
two things I have learnt:
'Power belongs to God'
12 and 'True love, O Lord, is thine';
thou dost requite a man for his deeds.

1 O God, thou art my God, I seek thee early with a heart that thirsts for thee and a body wasted with longing for thee,
like a dry and thirsty land that has no water.
2 So longing, I come before thee in the sanctuary to look upon thy power and glory.
3 Thy true love is better than life;
therefore I will sing thy praises.
4 And so I bless thee all my life and in thy name lift my hands in prayer.
5 I am satisfied as with a rich and sumptuous feast and wake the echoes with thy praise.
6 When I call thee to mind upon my bed and think on thee in the watches of the night, 7 remembering how thou hast been my help and that I am safe in the shadow of thy wings, 8 then I humbly follow thee with all my heart, and thy right hand is my support.
9 Those who seek my life, bent on evil, shall sink into the depths of the earth;
10 they shall be given over to the sword;
they shall be carrion for jackals.
11 The king shall rejoice in God, and whoever swears by God's name shall exult;
the voice of falsehood shall be silenced.

1 Hear me, O God, hear my lament;
keep me safe from the threats of the enemy.
2 Hide me from the factions of the wicked,
from the turbulent mob of evildoers, 3 who sharpen their tongues like swords and wing their cruel words like arrows,^a 4 to shoot down the innocent from cover, shooting suddenly, themselves unseen.

^a and wing . . . arrows: prob. rdg.; Heb. they tread their arrow a cruel word.

They boldly ^a hide their snares, sure that none will see them; 5
 they hatch their secret plans ^b with skill and cunning, with evil ^c purpose and deep design. 6
 But God with his arrow shoots them down, and sudden is their overthrow. 7
 They may repeat their wicked tales, ^d
 but their mischievous tongues ^e are their undoing. 8
 All who see their fate take fright at it, every man is afraid; 9
 'This is God's work', they declare;
 they learn their lesson from what he has done.
 The righteous rejoice and seek refuge in the LORD 10
 and all the upright exult.

We owe thee praise, O God, in Zion; 1-2
 thou hearest prayer, vows shall be paid to thee.
 All men shall lay their guilt before thee: 3
 our sins are too heavy for us;
 only thou canst blot them out.
 Happy is the man of thy choice, whom thou dost bring 4
 to dwell in thy courts;
 let us enjoy the blessing of thy house,
 thy holy temple.
 By deeds of terror answer us with victory, 5
 O God of our deliverance,
 in whom men trust from the ends of the earth and far-off seas;
 thou art girded with strength, 6
 and by thy might dost fix the mountains in their place, dost calm the rage of the seas and their raging waves. ^f 7
 The dwellers at the ends of the earth 8
 hold thy signs in awe;
 thou makest morning and evening sing aloud in triumph.
 Thou dost visit the earth and give it abundance, 9
 as often as thou dost enrich it

1 Acclaim our God, all men on earth;
 2 let psalms declare the glory of his name,
 make glorious his praise.
 3 Say unto God, 'How fearful are thy works!
 4 Thy foes cower before the greatness of thy strength.
 All men on earth fall prostrate in thy presence, and sing to thee, sing psalms in honour of thy name.'
 5 Come and see all that God has done, tremendous in his dealings with mankind.
 6 He turned the waters into dry land
 so that his people passed through the sea on foot;
 there did we rejoice in him. ^a 7 He rules for ever by his power, his eye rests on the nations;
 let no rebel rise in defiance.
 8 Bless our God, all nations;
 let his praise be heard far and near.
 9 He set us in the land of the living;
 he keeps our feet from stumbling.
 10 For thou, O God, hast put us to the proof and refined us like silver.
 11 Thou hast caught us in a net,
 thou hast bound our bodies fast;
 12 thou hast let men ride over our heads.
 We went through fire and water,
 but thou hast brought us out into liberty.
 13 I will bring sacrifices into thy temple and fulfil my vows to thee, 14 vows which I made with my own lips
 and swore with my own mouth when in distress.
 15 I will offer thee fat beasts as sacrifices and burn rams as a savoury offering;
 I will make ready oxen and he-goats.
 16 Come, listen, all who fear God,
 and I will tell you all that he has done for me;

^a there . . . him: or where we see this, we will rejoice in him.

I lifted up my voice in prayer, his high praise was on my lips.	17
If I had cherished evil thoughts, the Lord would not have heard me; but in truth God has heard and given heed to my prayer. Blessed is God	18 19 20 who has not withdrawn his love and care from me.

God be gracious to us and bless us, God make his face shine upon us, that his ways may be known on earth and his saving power among all the nations. Let the peoples praise thee, O God; let all peoples praise thee. Let all nations rejoice and shout in triumph; for thou dost judge the peoples with justice and guidest the nations of the earth. Let the peoples praise thee, O God; let all peoples praise thee. The earth has given its increase and God, our God, will bless us.	1 2 3 4 5 6
God grant us his blessing, that all the ends of the earth may fear him.	7

God arises and his enemies are scattered ; those who hate him flee before him, driven away like smoke in the wind; like wax melting at the fire, the wicked perish at the presence of God. But the righteous are joyful, they exult before God, they are jubilant and shout for joy.	1 2 3 thy own land in its weariness, the land which thou thyself didst provide,

 which thou, O God, in thy goodness providest for the poor.

11-13 The Lord proclaims good news: ^a 'Kings with their armies have fled headlong.'
 O mighty host, will you linger among the sheepfolds while the women in your tents divide the spoil—an image of a dove, its wings sheathed in silver and its pinions in yellow gold—14 while the Almighty scatters kings far and wide like snowflakes falling on Zalmon?

15 The hill of Bashan is a hill of God indeed, a hill of many peaks is Bashan's hill.

16 But, O hill of many peaks, why gaze in envy
 at the hill where the LORD delights to dwell, where the LORD himself will live for ever?

17 Twice ten thousand were God's chariots, thousands upon thousands,
 when the Lord came in holiness from Sinai. ^b 18 Thou didst go up to thy lofty home with captives in thy train, having received tribute from men;
 in the presence of the LORD God no rebel could live.

- 1 How good God is to the upright!^b
 How good to those who are pure in heart!
- 2 My feet had almost slipped,
 my foothold had all but given way,
 3 because the boasts of sinners roused my envy
 when I saw how they prosper.
- 4 No pain, no suffering is theirs;
 they are sleek and sound in limb;
 5 they are not plunged in trouble as other men are,
 nor do they suffer the torments of mortal men.
- 6 Therefore pride is their collar of jewels and violence the robe that wraps them round.
- 7 Their eyes gleam through folds of fat;
 while vain fancies pass through their minds.
- 8 Their talk is all sneers and malice;
 scornfully they spread their calumnies.
- 9 Their slanders reach up to heaven,
 while their tongues ply to and fro on earth.
- 10 And so my people follow their lead^c and find nothing to blame in them,^d

So wicked men talk, yet still they prosper, and rogues ^a amass great wealth.	12
So it was all in vain that I kept my heart pure and washed my hands in innocence.	13
For all day long I suffer torment and am punished every morning.	14
Yet had I let myself talk on in this fashion,	15
I should have betrayed the family of God.
So I set myself to think this out but I found it too hard for me, until I went into God's sacred courts; there I saw clearly what their end would be.	16 17
How often thou dost set them on slippery ground and drive them headlong into ruin!	18
Then in a moment how dreadful their end, cut off root and branch by death with all its terrors, like a dream when a man rouses himself, O Lord, like images in sleep which are dismissed on waking!	19 20
When my heart was embittered I felt the pangs of envy, I would not understand, so brutish was I, I was a mere beast in thy sight, O God.	21 22
Yet I am always with thee, thou holdest my right hand;	23
thou dost guide me by thy counsel and afterwards wilt receive me with glory.	24
Whom have I in heaven but thee?	25
And having thee, ^b I desire nothing else on earth.
Though heart and body fail, yet God is my possession for ever.	26
They who are far from thee are lost; thou dost destroy all who wantonly forsake thee.	27
But my chief good is to be near thee, O God; I have chosen thee, Lord GOD, to be my refuge. ^c	28

 No power from the east nor from the west, 6
 no power from the wilderness, can raise a man up.
 For God is judge; 7
 he puts one man down and raises up another.
 The LORD holds a cup in his hand, 8
 and the wine foams in it, hot with spice;
 he offers it to every man for drink,
 and all the wicked on earth must drain it to the dregs.
 But I will glorify him for ever; 9
 I will sing praises to the God of Jacob.

I will break off the horns of the wicked, 10
 but the horns of the righteous shall be lifted high.

Mark my teaching, O my people, listen to the words I am to speak.	1
I will tell you a story with a meaning, I will expound the riddle of things past, things that we have heard and know, and our fathers have repeated to us.	2
From their sons we will not hide the praises of the LORD and his might nor the wonderful acts he has performed; then they shall repeat them to the next generation.	3
He laid on Jacob a solemn charge and established a law in Israel, which he commanded our fathers to teach their sons,	4
that it might be known to a future generation, to children yet unborn, and these would repeat it to their sons in turn.	5
He charged them to put their trust in God, to hold his great acts ever in mind and to keep all his commandments;	6
not to do as their fathers did, a disobedient and rebellious race, a generation with no firm purpose, with hearts not fixed steadfastly on God.	7
The men of Ephraim, bowmen all and marksmen, turned and ran in the hour of battle.	8
The men of Ephraim, bowmen all and marksmen, turned and ran in the hour of battle.	9

^a Or in the chariot-wheels.

10 They had not kept God's covenant and had refused to live by his law; 11 they forgot all that he had done and the wonderful acts which he had shown them.

12 He did wonders in their fathers' sight
in the land of Egypt, the country of Zoan:
13 he divided the sea and took them through it, making the water stand up like banks on either side.
14 He led them with a cloud by day and all night long with a glowing fire.
15 He cleft the rock in the wilderness and gave them water to drink, abundant as the sea; 16 he brought streams out of the cliff and made water run down like rivers.
17 But they sinned against him yet again:
in the desert they defied the Most High, 18 they tried God's patience wilfully, demanding food to satisfy their hunger.
19 They vented their grievance against God and said,
'Can God spread a table in the wilderness?' 20 When he struck a rock, water gushed out until the gullies overflowed;
they said, 'Can he give bread as well,
can he provide meat for his people?'

21 When he heard this, the LORD was filled with fury:
fire raged against Jacob,
anger blazed up against Israel, 22 because they put no trust in God and had no faith in his power to save.
23 Then he gave orders to the skies above and threw open heaven's doors, 24 he rained down manna for them to eat and gave them the grain of heaven.
25 So men ate the bread of angels;
he sent them food to their heart's desire.
26 He let loose the east wind from heaven and drove the south wind by his power; 27 he rained meat like a dust-storm upon them,
flying birds like the sand of the sea-shore, 28 which he made settle all over the camp round the tents where they lived.
29 So the people ate and were well filled,
for he had given them what they craved.
30 Yet they did not abandon their complaints^a even while the food was in their mouths.
31 Then the anger of God blazed up against them;

^a Or craving.

he spread death among their stoutest men and brought the young men of Israel to the ground.

In spite of all, they persisted in their sin and had no faith in his wonderful acts.	32
So in one moment he snuffed out their lives and ended their years in calamity.	33
When he struck them, they began to seek him, they would turn and look eagerly for God; they remembered that God was their Creator, that God Most High was their deliverer.	34 35
But still they beguiled him with words and deceived him with fine speeches; they were not loyal to him in their hearts nor were they faithful to his covenant.	36 37
Yet he wiped out their guilt and did not smother his own ^a natural affection; often he restrained his wrath and did not rouse his anger to its height.	38
He remembered that they were only mortal men, who pass by like a wind and never return.	39
How often they rebelled against him in the wilderness and grieved him in the desert!	40
Again and again they tried God's patience and provoked the Holy One of Israel.	41
They did not remember his prowess on the day when he saved them from the enemy, how he set his signs in Egypt, his portents in the land of Zoan.	42 43
He turned their streams into blood, and they could not drink the running water.	44
He sent swarms of flies which devoured them, and frogs which brought devastation; he gave their harvest over to locusts and their produce to the grubs; he killed their vines with hailstones and their figs with torrents of rain;	45 46 47
he abandoned their cattle to the plague and their beasts to the arrows of pestilence.	48
He loosed upon them the violence of his anger, wrath and enmity and rage, launching those messengers of evil to open a way for his fury.	49
He struck down all the first-born in Egypt, the flower of their manhood in the tents of Ham, not shielding their lives from death but abandoning their bodies to the plague.	50-51

52 But he led out his own people like sheep and guided them like a flock in the wilderness.
53 He led them in safety and they were not afraid, and the sea closed over their enemies.
54 He brought them to his holy mountain,
the hill which his right hand had won;
55 he drove out nations before them,
he allotted their lands to Israel as a possession and settled his tribes in their dwellings.
56 Yet they tried God's patience and rebelled against him;
they did not keep the commands of the Most High; 57 they were renegades, traitors like their fathers,
they changed, they went slack like a bow.
58 They provoked him to anger with their hill-shrines and roused his jealousy with their carved images.
59 When God heard this, he put them out of mind and utterly rejected Israel.
60 He forsook his home at Shiloh,
the tabernacle in which he dwelt among men;
61 he surrendered the symbol of his strength into captivity and his pride into enemy hands; 62 he gave his people over to the sword and put his own possession out of mind.
63 Fire devoured his young men, and his maidens could raise no lament for them; 64 his priests fell by the sword,
and his widows could not weep.
65 Then the Lord awoke as a sleeper awakes, like a warrior heated with wine;
66 he struck his foes in the back parts and brought perpetual shame upon them.
67 He despised the clan of Joseph and did not choose the tribe of Ephraim; 68 he chose the tribe of Judah and Mount Zion which he loved; 69 he built his sanctuary high as the heavens,
founded like the earth to last for ever.
70 He chose David to be his servant
and took him from the sheepfolds; 71 he brought him from minding the ewes to be the shepherd of his people Jacob; ^a 72 and he shepherded them in singleness of heart and guided them with skilful hand.

O God, the heathen have set foot in thy domain, defiled thy holy temple and laid Jerusalem in ruins.	1
They have thrown out the dead bodies of thy servants to feed the birds of the air; they have made thy loyal servants carrion for wild beasts.	2
Their blood is spilled all round Jerusalem like water, and there they lie unburied.	3
We suffer the contempt of our neighbours, the gibes and mockery of all around us.	4
How long, O LORD, wilt thou be roused to such fury? Must thy jealousy rage like a fire?	5
Pour out thy wrath over nations which do not know thee and over kingdoms which do not invoke thee by name; see how they have devoured Jacob and laid waste his homesteads.	6
Do not remember against us the guilt of past generations but let thy compassion come swiftly to meet us, we have been brought so low.	7
Help us, O God our saviour, for the honour of thy name; for thy name's sake deliver us and wipe out our sins.	8
Why should the nations ask, 'Where is their God?' Let thy vengeance for the bloody slaughter of thy servants fall on those nations before our very eyes.	9
Let the groaning of the captives reach thy presence and in thy great might set free death's prisoners.	10
As for the contempt our neighbours pour on thee, O Lord, turn it back sevenfold on their own heads.	11
Then we thy people, the flock which thou dost shepherd, will give thee thanks for ever and repeat thy praise to every generation.	12

Hear us, O shepherd of Israel, who ledest Joseph like a flock of sheep.	1
Show thyself, thou that art throned on the cherubim, to Ephraim and to Benjamin.	2
Rouse thy victorious might from slumber, ^a come to our rescue.
Restore us, O God, and make thy face shine upon us that we may be saved.	3
O LORD God of Hosts, how long wilt thou resist thy people's prayer?	4

^a from slumber: prob. rdg.; Heb. and Manasseh.

- 5 Thou hast made sorrow their daily bread and tears of threefold grief their drink.
- 6 Thou hast humbled us before our neighbours,
and our enemies mock us to their hearts' content.
- 7 O God of Hosts, restore us;
make thy face shine upon us that we may be saved.
- 8 Thou didst bring a vine out of Egypt;
thou didst drive out nations and plant it;
- 9 thou didst clear the ground before it,
so that it made good roots and filled the land.
- 10 The mountains were covered with its shade,
and its branches were like those of mighty cedars.
- 11 It put out boughs all the way to the Sea and its shoots as far as the River.
- 12 Why hast thou broken down the wall round it so that every passer-by can pluck its fruit?
- 13 The wild boar from the thickets gnaws it,
and swarming insects from the fields feed on it.
- 14 O God of Hosts, once more look down from heaven,
take thought for this vine and tend it,
this stock that thy right hand has planted. ^a
- 15 Let them that set fire to it or cut it down perish before thy angry face.
- 16 Let thy hand rest upon the man at thy right side,
the man whom thou hast made strong for thy service.
- 17 We have not turned back from thee,
so grant us new life, and we will invoke thee by name.
- 18 LORD God of Hosts, restore us;
make thy face shine upon us that we may be saved.

When you cried to me in distress, I rescued you; 7
 unseen, I answered you in thunder.
 I tested you at the waters of Meribah, where I opened your mouths and filled them. ^a I fed Israel ^b with the finest wheat-flour 16^c and satisfied him with honey from the rocks.
 Listen, my people, while I give you a solemn charge— 8
 do but listen to me, O Israel:
 you shall have no strange god 9
 nor bow down to any foreign god;
 I am the LORD your God 10
 who brought you up from Egypt. ^d
 But my people did not listen to my words 11
 and Israel would have none of me;
 so I sent them off, stubborn as they were, 12
 to follow their own devices.

 If my people would but listen to me, 13
 if Israel would only conform to my ways, I would soon bring their enemies to their knees 14
 and lay a heavy hand upon their persecutors.
 Let those who hate them ^e come cringing to them, 15
 and meet with everlasting troubles. ^f

God takes his stand in the court of heaven 1 to deliver judgement among the gods themselves.

 How long will you judge unjustly 2
 and show favour to the wicked?
 You ought to give judgement for the weak and the orphan, 3 and see right done to the destitute and downtrodden, you ought to rescue the weak and the poor, 4
 and save them from the clutches of wicked men.
 But you know nothing, you understand nothing, 5
 you walk in the dark
 while earth's foundations are giving way.
 This is my sentence: Gods you may be, 6 sons all of you of a high god, ^g yet you shall die as men die; ^h 7 princes fall, every one of them, and so shall you.

 Arise, O God, and judge the earth; 8 for thou dost pass all nations through thy sieve.

1 Rest not, O God;
 O God, be neither silent nor still,
 2 for thy enemies are making a tumult,
 and those that hate thee carry their heads high.
 3 They devise cunning schemes against thy people and conspire against those thou hast made thy treasure:
 4 'Come, away with them,' they cry,
 'let them be a nation no longer,
 let Israel's name be remembered no more.'
 5 With one mind they have agreed together to make a league against thee:
 6 the families of Edom, the Ishmaelites, Moabites and Hagarenes,
 7 Gebal, Ammon and Amalek, Philistia and the citizens of Tyre,
 8 Asshur too their ally,
 all of them lending aid to the descendants of Lot.
 9 Deal with them as with Sisera,
 as with Jabin by the torrent of Kishon, 10 who fell vanquished as Midian^a fell at En-harod,^b and were spread on the battlefield like dung.
 11 Make their princes like Oreb and Zeeb, make all their nobles like Zebah and Zalmunna; 12 for they said, 'We will seize for ourselves
 all the pastures of God's people.' 13 Scatter them, O God, like thistledown, like chaff before the wind.
 14 Like fire raging through the forest or flames which blaze across the hills, 15 hunt them down with thy tempest,
 and dismay them with thy storm-wind.
 16 Heap shame upon their heads, O LORD, until they confess the greatness of thy name.
 17 Let them be abashed, and live in perpetual dismay;
 let them feel their shame and perish.
 18 So let them learn that thou alone art LORD,
 God Most High over all the earth.

I have called upon thee, O LORD, every day and spread out my hands in prayer to thee.

Lord, thou hast been our refuge	1
from generation to generation.
Before the mountains were brought forth,	2
or earth and world were born in travail,
from age to age everlasting thou art God.
Thou turnest man back into dust;	3
'Turn back,' thou sayest, 'you sons of men';
for in thy sight a thousand years are as yesterday;	4
a night-watch passes, and thou hast cut them off;	5
they are like a dream at daybreak, they fade like grass which springs up ^c with the morning	6
but when evening comes is parched and withered.
So we are brought to an end by thy anger	7
and silenced by thy wrath.
Thou dost lay bare our iniquities before thee	8
and our lusts in the full light of thy presence.
All our days go by under the shadow of thy wrath;	9
our years die away like a murmur.
Seventy years is the span of our life,	10
eighty if our strength holds; ^d
the hurrying years are labour and sorrow,
so quickly they pass and are forgotten.
Who feels the power of thy anger,	11
who feels thy wrath like those that fear thee?
Teach us to order our days rightly,	12
that we may enter the gate of wisdom.

 7 A thousand may fall at your side,

 I will lift him beyond danger, for he knows me by my name.
 15 When he calls upon me, I will answer;
 I will be with him in time of trouble;
 I will rescue him and bring him to honour.

O LORD, it is good to give thee thanks, 1
to sing psalms to thy name, O Most High, to declare thy love in the morning 2
and thy constancy every night, to the music of a ten-stringed lute, 3
to the sounding chords of the harp.
Thy acts, O LORD, fill me with exultation; 4
I shout in triumph at thy mighty deeds.
How great are thy deeds, O LORD! 5
How fathomless thy thoughts!

He who does not know this is a brute, 6
a fool is he who does not understand this:
that though the wicked grow like grass 7
and every evildoer prospers, they will be destroyed for ever.

While thou, LORD, dost reign on high eternally, 8 thy foes will surely perish, 9
all evildoers will be scattered.

I lift my head high, like a wild ox tossing its horn; 10
I am anointed richly with oil.
I gloat over all who speak ill of me, 11
I listen for the downfall of my cruel foes.
The righteous flourish like a palm-tree, 12
they grow tall as a cedar on Lebanon; planted as they are in the house of the LORD, 13
they flourish in the courts of our God, vigorous in old age like trees full of sap, 14
luxuriant, wide-spreading, eager to declare that the LORD is just, 15
the LORD my rock,^a in whom there is no unrighteousness.

The LORD is king; he is clothed in majesty; 1
the LORD clothes himself with might and fastens on his belt of wrath.

Thou hast fixed the earth immovable and firm, thy throne firm from of old; 2
from all eternity thou art God.

O LORD, the ocean lifts up, the ocean lifts up its clamour; 3
the ocean lifts up^b its pounding waves.

^a Or creator. ^b the ocean lifts up: or let the ocean lift up.

- 4 The LORD on high is mightier far than the noise of great waters, mightier than the breakers of the sea.
- 5 Thy law stands firm, and holiness is the beauty of thy temple, while time shall last, O LORD.

- 1 O LORD, thou God of vengeance, thou God of vengeance, show thyself.
- 2 Rise up, judge of the earth;
 punish the arrogant as they deserve.
- 3 How long shall the wicked, O LORD,
 how long shall the wicked exult?
- 4 Evildoers are full of bluster,
 boasting and swaggering;
- 5 they beat down thy people, O LORD,
 and oppress thy chosen nation;
- 6 they murder the widow and the stranger
 and do the fatherless to death;
- 7 they say, 'The LORD does not see,
 the God of Jacob pays no heed.'
- 8 Pay heed yourselves, most brutish of the people;
 you fools, when will you be wise?
- 9 Does he that planted the ear not hear,
 he that moulded the eye not see?
- 10 Shall not he that instructs the nations correct them?
 The teacher of mankind, has he no^a knowledge?
- 11 The LORD knows the thoughts of man,
 that they are but a puff of wind.
- 12 Happy the man whom thou dost instruct, O LORD,
 and teach out of thy law,
 giving him respite from adversity
 until a pit is dug for the wicked.
- 13 The LORD will not abandon his people
 nor forsake his chosen nation;
- 14 for righteousness still informs his judgement,^b and all upright men follow it.
- 15 Who is on my side against these sinful men?
 Who will stand up for me against these evildoers?
- 16 If the LORD had not been my helper,
 I should soon have slept in the silent grave.
- 17 When I felt that my foot was slipping, thy love, O LORD, held me up.

 will return as far as righteousness.

^b for . . . judgement: prob. rdg.; Hcb. for judgement

Anxious thoughts may fill my heart, 19
 but thy presence is my joy and my consolation.
 Shall sanctimonious calumny call thee partner, 20 or he that contrives a mischief under cover of law?
 For they put the righteous on trial^a for his life 21
 and condemn to death innocent men.
 But the LORD has been my strong tower, 22
 and God my rock of refuge;
 our God requites the wicked for their injustice, 23
 the LORD puts them to silence for their misdeeds.

Come! Let us raise a joyful song to the LORD, 1 a shout of triumph to the Rock of our salvation.
 Let us come into his presence with thanksgiving, 2
 and sing him psalms of triumph.
 For the LORD is a great God, 3
 a great king over all gods;
 the farthest places of the earth are in his hands, 4 and the folds of the hills are his;
 the sea is his, he made it; 5
 the dry land fashioned by his hands is his.
 Come! Let us throw ourselves at his feet in homage, 6
 let us kneel before the LORD who made us;
 for he is our God, 7
 we are his people, we the flock he shepherds.
 You shall know^b his power today
 if you will listen to his voice.

Do not grow stubborn, as you were at Meribah,^c 8
 as at the time of Massah^d in the wilderness, when your forefathers challenged me, 9
 tested me and saw for themselves all that I did.
 For forty years I was indignant 10
 with that generation, and I said:
 They are a people whose hearts are astray,
 and they will not discern my ways.
 As I swore in my anger: 11
 They shall never enter my rest.

Sing a new song to the LORD; 1^e

 1-13: cp. 1 Chr. 16. 23-33.

- 2 Sing to the LORD and bless his name, proclaim his triumph day by day.
- 3 Declare his glory among the nations,
his marvellous deeds among all peoples.
- 4 Great is the LORD and worthy of all praise;
he is more to be feared than all gods.
- 5 For the gods of the nations are idols every one;
but the LORD made the heavens.
- 6 Majesty and splendour attend him,
might and beauty are in his sanctuary.
- 7 Ascribe to the LORD, you families of nations, ascribe to the LORD glory and might;
- 8 ascribe to the LORD the glory due to his name,
bring a gift and come into his courts.
- 9 Bow down to the LORD in the splendour of holiness,^a and dance in his honour, all men on earth.
- 10 Declare among the nations, 'The LORD is king.
He has fixed the earth firm, immovable;
he will judge the peoples justly.'
- 11 Let the heavens rejoice and the earth exult,
let the sea roar and all the creatures in it, 12 let the fields exult and all that is in them;
then let all the trees of the forest shout for joy 13 before the LORD when he comes to judge the earth.
He will judge the earth with righteousness and the peoples in good faith.

- 1 The LORD is king, let the earth be glad,
let coasts and islands all rejoice.
- 2 Cloud and mist enfold him, righteousness and justice
are the foundation of his throne.
- 3 Fire goes before him
and burns up his enemies all around.
- 4 The world is lit up beneath his lightning-flash;
the earth sees it and writhes in pain.
- 5 The mountains melt like wax as the LORD approaches,
the Lord of all the earth.
- 6 The heavens proclaim his righteousness,
and all peoples see his glory.
- 7 Let all who worship images, who vaunt their idols,
be put to shame;
bow down, all gods,^b before him.

^a the splendour of holiness: or holy vestments.

^b bow . . . gods: or all gods

Zion heard and rejoiced, the cities of Judah were glad at thy judgements, O LORD.	8
For thou, LORD, art most high over all the earth, far exalted above all gods.	9
The LORD loves ^a those who hate evil; he keeps his loyal servants safe and rescues them from the wicked.	10
A harvest of light is sown for the righteous, and joy for all good men.	11
You that are righteous, rejoice in the LORD and praise his holy name.	12

Sing a new song to the LORD, for he has done marvellous deeds;	1
his right hand and holy arm have won him victory. The LORD has made his victory known;	2
he has displayed his righteousness to all the nations. He has remembered his constancy, his love for the house of Israel.	3
All the ends of the earth have seen the victory of our God.
Acclaim the LORD, all men on earth, break into songs of joy, sing psalms.	4
Sing psalms in the LORD's honour with the harp, with the harp and with the music of the psaltery.	5
With trumpet and echoing horn acclaim the presence of the LORD our king.	6
Let the sea roar and all its creatures, the world and those who dwell in it.	7
Let the rivers clap their hands, let the hills sing aloud together	8
before the LORD; for he comes to judge the earth.	9
He will judge the world with righteousness and the peoples in justice.

The LORD is king, the peoples are perturbed; he is throned on the cherubim, earth quivers.	1
The LORD is great in Zion; he is exalted above all the peoples.	2

^a The LORD loves: prob. rdg.; Heb. Lovers of the LORD.

They extol his^a name as great and terrible;
 he is holy, he is mighty,
 a king who loves justice.

Thou hast established justice and equity;
 thou hast dealt righteously in Jacob.
 Exalt the LORD our God,
 bow down before his footstool;
 he is holy.

Moses and Aaron among his priests,
 and Samuel among those who call on his name,
 called to the LORD, and he answered.
 He spoke to them in a pillar of cloud;
 they followed his teaching and kept the law he gave them.
 Thou, O LORD our God, thou didst answer them;
 thou wast a God who forgave all their misdeeds and held them innocent.
 Exalt the LORD our God,
 bow down towards his holy hill;
 for the LORD our God is holy.

100

Acclaim the LORD, all men on earth, worship the LORD in gladness;
 enter his presence with songs of exultation.
 Know that the LORD is God;
 he has made us and we are his own,
 his people, the flock which he shepherds.
 Enter his gates with thanksgiving and his courts with praise.
 Give thanks to him and bless his name;
 or the LORD is good and his love is everlasting,
 his constancy endures to all generations.

I sing of loyalty and justice;
 I will raise a psalm to thee, O LORD.^b
 I will follow a wise and blameless course, whatever may befall me.^c
 I will go about my house in purity of heart.
 I will set before myself no sordid aim;
 I will hate disloyalty, I will have none of it.

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. thy.^b I sing . . . O LORD: or I will follow a course of justice and loyalty; I will hold thee in awe, O LORD.^c whatever may befall me: prob. rdg.; Heb. when comest thou to me?

I will reject all crooked thoughts; 4
 I will have no dealings with evil.
 I will silence those who spread tales behind men's backs, 5
 I will not sit at table with proud, pompous men,
 I will choose the most loyal for my companions; 6
 my servants shall be men whose lives are blameless.
 No scandal-monger shall live in my household; 7
 no liar shall set himself up where I can see him.
 Morning after morning I will put all wicked men to silence 8 and will rid the LORD's city of all evildoers.

LORD, hear my prayer 1
 and let my cry for help reach thee.
 Hide not thy face from me 2
 when I am in distress.
 Listen to my prayer
 and, when I call, answer me soon;
 for my days vanish like smoke, 3
 my body is burnt up as in an oven.
 I am stricken, withered like grass; 4
 I cannot find the strength to eat.
 Wasted away,^a I groan aloud 5
 and my skin hangs on my bones.
 I am like a desert-owl in the wilderness, 6 an owl that lives among ruins.
 Thin and meagre, I wail in solitude, 7
 like a bird that flutters on the roof-top.
 My enemies insult me all the day long; 8
 mad with rage, they conspire against me.
 I have eaten ashes for bread 9
 and mingled tears with my drink.
 In thy wrath and fury 10
 thou hast taken me up and flung me aside.
 My days decline as the shadows lengthen, 11
 and like grass I wither away.
 But thou, LORD, art enthroned for ever 12
 and thy fame shall be known to all generations.
 Thou wilt arise and have mercy on Zion; 13
 for the time is come^b to pity her.
 Her very stones are dear to thy servants, 14
 and even her dust moves them with pity.
 Then shall the nations revere thy name, O LORD; 15
 and all the kings of the earth thy glory,

^a Wasted away: transposed from previous verse.

^b Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds scason.

16 when the LORD builds up Zion again and shows himself in his glory.
 17 He turns to hear the prayer of the destitute and does not scorn them when they pray.
 18 This shall be written down for future generations, and a people yet unborn shall praise the LORD.
 19 The LORD looks down from his sanctuary on high,
 from heaven he surveys the earth 20 to listen to the groaning of the prisoners and set free men under sentence of death;
 21 so shall the LORD's name be on men's lips in Zion and his praise shall be told in Jerusalem, 22 when peoples are assembled together, peoples and kingdoms, to serve the LORD.
 23 My strength is broken in mid course;
 24 the time allotted me is short.
 Snatch me not away before half my days are done,
 for thy years last through all generations.
 25 Long ago thou didst lay the foundations of the earth, and the heavens were thy handiwork.
 26 They shall pass away, but thou endurest;
 like clothes they shall all grow old;
 thou shalt cast them off like a cloak,
 and they shall vanish;
 27 but thou art the same and thy years shall have no end;
 28 thy servants' children shall continue,
 and their posterity shall be established in thy presence.

1 Bless the LORD, my soul;
 my innermost heart, bless his holy name.
 2 Bless the LORD, my soul,
 and forget none of his benefits.
 3 He pardons all my guilt and heals all my suffering.
 4 He rescues me from the pit of death and surrounds me with constant love, with tender affection;
 5 he contents me with all good in the prime of life,
 and my youth is ever new like an eagle's.
 6 The LORD is righteous in his acts;
 he brings justice to all who have been wronged.
 7 He taught Moses to know his way and showed the Israelites what he could do.
 8 The LORD is compassionate and gracious, long-suffering and for ever constant;

he will not always be the accuser or nurse his anger for all time.	9
He has not treated us as our sins deserve or requited us for our misdeeds.	10
For as the heaven stands high above the earth, so his strong love stands high over all who fear him.	11
Far as east is from west, so far has he put our offences away from us.	12
As a father has compassion on his children, so has the LORD compassion on all who fear him.	13
For he knows how we were made, he knows full well that we are dust.	14
Man's days are like the grass; he blossoms like the flowers of the field: a wind passes over them, and they cease to be, and their place knows them no more.	15
But the LORD's love never fails those who fear him; his righteousness never fails their sons and their grandsons who listen to his voice ^a and keep his covenant, who remember his commandments and obey them.	17
The LORD has established his throne in heaven, his kingly power over the whole world.	19
Bless the LORD, all his angels, creatures of might who do his bidding.	20
Bless the LORD, all his hosts, his ministers who serve his will.	21
Bless the LORD, all created things, in every place where he has dominion.	22

O LORD my God, thou art great indeed, clothed in majesty and splendour, and wrapped in a robe of light.	2
Thou hast spread out the heavens like a tent and on their waters laid the beams of thy pavilion; who takest the clouds for thy chariot, riding on the wings of the wind; who makest the winds thy messengers and flames of fire thy servants; thou didst fix the earth on its foundation so that it never can be shaken;	3

- 6 the deep overspread it like a cloak,
and the waters lay above the mountains.
- 7 At thy rebuke they ran,
at the sound of thy thunder they rushed away, 8 flowing over the hills,
pouring down into the valleys
to the place appointed for them.
- 9 Thou didst fix a boundary which they might not pass;
they shall not return to cover the earth.
- 10 Thou dost make springs break out in the gullies,
so that their water runs between the hills.
- 11 The wild beasts all drink from them,
the wild asses quench their thirst; 12 the birds of the air nest on their banks and sing among the leaves.
- 13 From thy high pavilion thou dost water the hills;
the earth is enriched by thy provision.
- 14 Thou makest grass grow for the cattle and green things for those who toil for man, bringing bread out of the earth and wine to gladden men's hearts, 15 oil to make their faces shine and bread to sustain their strength.
- 16 The trees of the LORD are green and leafy,
the cedars of Lebanon which he planted; 17 the birds build their nests in them,
the stork makes her home in their tops.^a
- 18 High hills are the haunt of the mountain-goat,
and boulders a refuge for the rock-badger.
- 19 Thou hast made the moon to measure the year and taught the sun where to set.
- 20 When thou makest darkness and it is night,
all the beasts of the forest come forth; 21 the young lions roar for prey, seeking their food from God.
- 22 When thou makest the sun rise, they slink away
and go to rest in their lairs; 23 but man comes out to his work and to his labours until evening.
- 24 Countless are the things thou hast made, O LORD.
Thou hast made all by thy wisdom;
and the earth is full of thy creatures,
25 beasts great and small.

^a in their tops: prob. rdg.; Heb. the pine-trees.

Here is the great immeasurable sea,
 in which move creatures beyond number.
 Here ships sail to and fro, 26
 here is Leviathan whom thou hast made thy plaything.^a

All of them look expectantly to thee 27
 to give them their food at the proper time;
 what thou givest them they gather up; 28
 when thou openest thy hand, they eat their fill.
 Then thou hidest thy face, and they are restless and troubled; 29
 when thou takest away their breath, they fail [and they return to the dust from which they came];
 but when thou breathest into them, they recover; 30
 thou givest new life to the earth.

May the glory of the LORD stand for ever 31
 and may he rejoice in his works!
 When he looks at the earth, it quakes; 32
 when he touches the hills, they pour forth smoke.

I will sing to the LORD as long as I live, 33
 all my life I will sing psalms to my God.
 May my meditation please the LORD, 34
 as I show my joy in him!
 Away with all sinners from the earth 35
 and may the wicked be no more!

Bless the LORD, my soul.

O praise the LORD.

105

Give the LORD thanks and invoke him by name, 1^b make his deeds known in the world around.
 Pay him honour with song and psalm 2
 and think upon all his wonders.
 Exult in his hallowed name; 3 let those who seek the LORD be joyful in heart.
 Turn to the LORD, your strength, 4 seek his presence always.
 Remember the wonders that he has wrought, 5
 his portents and the judgements he has given, O offspring of Abraham his servant, O chosen sons of Jacob. 6
 He is the LORD our God; 7
 his judgements fill the earth.

^a thy plaything: or that it may sport in it.

^b Verses 1-15: cp. 1 Chr. 16. 8-22.

8 He called to mind his covenant from long ago,^a the promise he extended to a thousand generations—9 the covenant made with Abraham,
his oath given to Isaac,
10 the decree by which he bound himself for Jacob,
his everlasting covenant with Israel:
11 'I will give you the land of Canaan', he said,
'to be your possession, your patrimony.'
12 A small company it was,
few in number, strangers in that land, 13 roaming from nation to nation,
from one kingdom to another;
14 but he let no one ill-treat them,
for their sake he admonished kings:
15 'Touch not my anointed servants,
do my prophets no harm.'

16 He called down famine on the land and cut short their daily bread.
17 But he had sent on a man before them,
Joseph, who was sold into slavery;
18 he was kept a prisoner with fetters on his feet and an iron collar clamped on his neck.
19 He was tested by the LORD's command until what he foretold came true.
20 Then the king sent and set him free,
the ruler of nations released him;
21 he made him master of his household and ruler over all his possessions, 22 to correct his officers at will and teach his counsellors wisdom.

23 Then Israel too went down into Egypt and Jacob came to live in the land of Ham.
24 There God made his people very fruitful,
he made them stronger than their enemies, 25 whose hearts he turned to hatred of his people and double-dealing with his servants.

26 He sent his servant Moses and Aaron whom he had chosen.
27 They were his mouthpiece to announce his signs,
his portents in the land of Ham.
28 He sent darkness, and all was dark,
but still they resisted his commands.
29 He turned their waters into blood and killed all their fish.
30 Their country swarmed with frogs, even their princes' inner chambers.

^a from long ago: or for ever.

At his command came swarms of flies and maggots the whole land through.	31
He changed their rain into hail and flashed fire over their country.	32
He blasted their vines and their fig-trees and splintered the trees throughout the land.	33
At his command came locusts, hoppers past all number,	34
they consumed every green thing in the land, consumed all the produce of the soil.	35
Then he struck down all the first-born in Egypt, the firstfruits of their manhood;	36
he led Israel out, laden with silver and gold, and among all their tribes no man fell.	37
The Egyptians were glad when they went, for fear of Israel had taken hold of them.	38
He spread a cloud as a screen, and fire to light up the night.	39
They asked, and he sent them quails, he gave them bread from heaven in plenty.	40
He opened a rock and water gushed out, a river flowing in a parched land;	41
for he had remembered his solemn promise given to his servant Abraham.	42
So he led out his people rejoicing, his chosen ones in triumph.	43
He gave them the lands of heathen nations and they took possession where others had toiled,	44
so that they might keep his statutes and obey his laws.	45
O praise the LORD.

O praise the LORD.	1
It is good to give thanks to the LORD; for his love endures for ever.
Who will tell of the LORD's mighty acts and make his praises heard?	2
Happy are they who act justly and do right at all times!	3
Remember me, LORD, when thou showest favour to thy people, look upon me when thou savest them,	4
that I may see the prosperity of thy chosen, rejoice in thy nation's joy and exult with thy own people.	5
We have sinned like our forefathers, we have erred and done wrong.	6

- 7 Our fathers in Egypt took no account of thy marvels,
they did not remember thy many acts of faithful love,
8 but in spite of all^a they rebelled by the Red Sea.^b
9 Yet the LORD delivered them for his name's sake and so made known his mighty power.
10 He rebuked the Red Sea and it dried up, he led his people through the deeps as through the wilderness.
11 So he delivered them from those who hated them,
and claimed them back from the enemy's hand.
12 The waters closed over their adversaries, not one of them survived.
13 Then they believed his promises and sang praises to him.
- 14 But they quickly forgot all he had done
and would not wait to hear his counsel; 15 their greed was insatiable in the wilderness,
they tried God's patience in the desert.
16 He gave them what they asked but sent a wasting sickness among them.^c
- 17 They were envious of Moses in the camp,
and of Aaron, who was consecrated to the LORD.
18 The earth opened and swallowed Dathan,
it closed over the company of Abiram;
19 fire raged through their company,
the wicked perished in flames.
- 20 At Horeb they made a calf
and bowed down to an image;
21 they exchanged their Glory^d for the image of a bull that feeds on grass.
22 They forgot God their deliverer, who had done great deeds in Egypt, 23 marvels in the land of Ham, terrible things at the Red Sea.
24 So his purpose was to destroy them, but Moses, the man he had chosen, threw himself into the breach
to turn back his wrath lest it destroy them.
- 25 They made light of the pleasant land,
disbelieving his promise;
26 they muttered treason in their tents and would not obey the LORD.
27 So with uplifted hand he swore to strike them down in the wilderness,

^a in spite of all: prob. rdg.; Heb. obscure. ^b Or the Sea of Reeds. ^c among them: or in their throats. ^d their Glory: or the glory of God (cp. Jer. 2. 11; Romans 1. 23).

to scatter their descendants among the nations and disperse them throughout the world.	27
They joined in worshipping the Baal of Peor and ate meat sacrificed to lifeless gods.	28
Their deeds provoked the LORD to anger, and plague broke out amongst them;	29
but Phinehas stood up and interceded, so the plague was stopped.	30
This was counted to him as righteousness throughout all generations for ever.	31
They roused the LORD to anger at the waters of Meribah, and Moses suffered because of them;	32
for they had embittered his spirit and he had spoken rashly.	33
They did not destroy the peoples round about, as the LORD had commanded them to do,	34
but they mingled with the nations, learning their ways;	35
they worshipped their idols and were ensnared by them.	36
Their sons and their daughters they sacrificed to foreign demons;	37
they shed innocent blood, the blood of sons and daughters offered to the gods of Canaan, and the land was polluted with blood.	38
Thus they defiled themselves by their conduct and they followed their lusts and broke faith with God.	39
Then the LORD grew angry with his people and loathed them, his own chosen nation;	40
so he gave them into the hands of the nations, and they were ruled by their foes;	41
their enemies oppressed them and made them subject to their power.	42
Many times he came to their rescue, but they were disobedient and rebellious still. ^a	43
And yet, when he heard them wail and cry aloud, he looked with pity on their distress;	44
he called to mind his covenant with them and, in his boundless love, relented;	45
he roused compassion for them in the hearts of all their captors.	46

47 Deliver us, O LORD our God, and gather us in from among the nations that we may give thanks to thy holy name and make thy praise our pride.

48 Blessed be the LORD the God of Israel from everlasting to everlasting;
and let all the people say 'Amen.'

O praise the LORD.

1 It is good to give thanks to the LORD,
for his love endures for ever.

2 So let them say who were redeemed by the LORD, redeemed by him from the power of the enemy 3 and gathered out of every land, from east and west, from north and south.

4 Some lost their way in desert wastes;
they found no road to a city to live in;
5 hungry and thirsty,
their spirit sank within them.

6 So they cried to the LORD in their trouble,
and he rescued them from their distress;
7 he led them by a straight and easy way until they came to a city to live in.

8 Let them thank the LORD for his enduring love
and for the marvellous things he has done for men:
9 he has satisfied the thirsty and filled the hungry with good things.

10 Some sat in darkness, dark as death, prisoners bound fast in iron, 11 because they had rebelled against God's commands and flouted the purpose of the Most High.

12 Their spirit was subdued by hard labour;
they stumbled and fell with none to help them.

13 So they cried to the LORD in their trouble,
and he saved them from their distress;
14 he brought them out of darkness, dark as death,
and broke their chains.

15 Let them thank the LORD for his enduring love
and for the marvellous things he has done for men:

he has shattered doors of bronze, bars of iron he has snapped in two.	16
Some were fools, they took to rebellious ways, and for their transgression they suffered punishment.	17
They sickened at the sight of food and drew near to the very gates of death.	18
So they cried to the LORD in their trouble, and he saved them from their distress;	19
he sent his word to heal them and bring them alive out of the pit of death. ^a	20
Let them thank the LORD for his enduring love and for the marvellous things he has done for men.	21
Let them offer sacrifices of thanksgiving and recite his deeds with shouts of joy.	22
Others there are who go to sea in ships and make their living on the wide waters.	23
These men have seen the acts of the LORD and his marvellous doings in the deep.	24
At his command the storm-wind rose and lifted the waves high.	25
Carried up to heaven, plunged down to the depths, tossed to and fro in peril,	26
they reeled and staggered like drunken men, and their seamanship was all in vain.	27
So they cried to the LORD in their trouble, and he brought them out of their distress.	28
The storm sank to a murmur and the waves of the sea were stilled.	29
They were glad then that all was calm, as he guided them to the harbour they desired.	30
Let them thank the LORD for his enduring love and for the marvellous things he has done for men.	31
Let them exalt him in the assembly of the people and praise him in the council of the elders.	32
He turns rivers into desert and springs of water into thirsty ground;	33
he turns fruitful land into salt waste, because the men who dwell there are so wicked.	34
Desert he changes into standing pools, and parched land into springs of water.	35
There he gives the hungry a home, and they build themselves a city to live in;	36
they sow fields and plant vineyards and reap a fruitful harvest.	37

38 He blesses them and their numbers increase,
and he does not let their herds lose strength.
39 Tyrants^a lose their strength and are brought low in the grip of misfortune and sorrow; 40 he brings princes into contempt
and leaves them wandering in a trackless waste.
41 But the poor man he lifts clear of his troubles and makes families increase like flocks of sheep.
42 The upright see it and are glad,
while evildoers are filled with disgust.
43 Let the wise man lay these things to heart,
and ponder the record of the LORD's enduring love.

1^b My heart is steadfast, O God,
my heart is steadfast.
I will sing and raise a psalm;
awake,^c my spirit,
2 awake, lute and harp,
I will awake at dawn of day.^d
3 I will confess thee, O LORD, among the peoples, among the nations I will raise a psalm to thee;
4 for thy unfailing love is wider than the heavens and thy truth reaches to the skies.
5 Show thyself, O God, high above the heavens;
let thy glory shine over all the earth.
6^e Deliver those that are dear to thee;
save with thy right hand and answer.
7 God has spoken from his sanctuary: ^f
'I will go up now and measure out Shechem;
I will divide the valley of Succoth into plots;
8 Gilead and Manasseh are mine;
Ephraim is my helmet, Judah my sceptre;
9 Moab is my wash-bowl, I fling my shoes at Edom;
Philistia is the target of my anger.'
10 Who can bring me to the impregnable city,
who can guide me to Edom,
11 since thou, O God, hast abandoned us and goest not forth with our armies?
12 Grant us help against the enemy,
for deliverance by man is a vain hope.
13 With God's help we shall do valiantly, and God himself will tread our enemies under foot.

109

O God of my praise, be silent no longer,	1
for wicked men heap calumnies upon me.	2
They have lied to my face
and ringed me round with words of hate.	3
They have attacked me without a cause ^a and accused me though I have done nothing unseemly. ^b	4
They have repaid me evil for good	5
and hatred in return for my love.
They say, 'Put up some rascal to denounce him,	6 an accuser to stand at his right side.'
But when judgement is given, that rascal will be exposed	7 and his follies accounted a sin.
May his days be few;	8
may his hoarded wealth ^c fall to another!
May his children be fatherless,	9
his wife a widow!
May his children be vagabonds and beggars,	10
driven from their homes!
May the money-lender distraint on all his goods	11
and strangers seize his earnings!
May none remain loyal to him,	12
and none have mercy on his fatherless children!
May his line be doomed to extinction,	13
may their name be wiped out within a generation!
May the sins of his forefathers be remembered	14
and his mother's wickedness never be wiped out!
May they remain on record before the LORD,	15
but may he extinguish their name from the earth!
For that man never set himself	16
to be loyal to his friend
but persecuted the downtrodden and the poor and hounded the broken-hearted to their death.
Curses he loved: may the curse fall on him!	17
He took no pleasure in blessing: may no blessing be his!
He clothed himself in cursing like a garment:	18
may it seep into his body like water and into his bones like oil!
May it wrap him round like the clothes he puts on,	19
like the belt which he wears every day!
May the LORD so requite my accusers	20
and those who speak evil against me!
But thou, O LORD God,	21
deal with me as befits thy honour;

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds in return for my love. ^b though . . . unseemly: prob. rdg.; Heb. obscure. ^c hoarded wealth: or charge, cp. Acts 1. 20.

- 22 in the goodness of thy unfailing love deliver me,
 for I am downtrodden and poor,
 and my heart within me is distracted.
 23 I fade like a passing shadow,
 I am shaken off like a locust.
 24 My knees are weak with fasting and my flesh wastes away, so meagre is my fare.
 25 I have become the victim of their taunts;
 when they see me they toss their heads.
 26 Help me, O LORD my God;
 save me, by thy unfailing love, 27 that men may know this is thy doing and thou alone, O LORD, hast done it.
 28 They may curse, but thou dost bless;
 may my opponents be put to shame,
 but may thy servant rejoice!
 29 May my accusers be clothed with dishonour, wrapped in their shame as in a cloak!
 30 I will lift up my voice to extol the LORD,
 and before a great company I will praise him.
 31 For he stands at the poor man's right side to save him from his adversaries. ^a 111

O praise the LORD. 1

With all my heart will I praise the LORD
 in the company of good men, in the whole congregation.
 Great are the doings of the LORD; 2
 all men study them for their delight.
 His acts are full of majesty and splendour; 3 righteousness is his for ever.
 He has won a name by his marvellous deeds; 4
 the LORD is gracious and compassionate.
 He gives food to those who fear him, 5
 he keeps his covenant always in mind.
 He showed his people what his strength could do, 6 bestowing on them the lands of other nations.
 His works are truth and justice; 7
 his precepts all stand on firm foundations, strongly based to endure for ever, 8
 their fabric goodness and truth.
 He sent and redeemed his people; 9
 he decreed that his covenant should always endure.
 Holy is his name, inspiring awe.
 The fear of the LORD is the beginning ^a of wisdom, 10
 and they who live by it grow in understanding.
 Praise will be his for ever.

112

O praise the LORD. 1

Happy is the man who fears the LORD and finds great joy in his commandments.
 His descendants shall be the mightiest in the land, 2
 a blessed generation of good men.
 His house shall be full of wealth and riches; 3 righteousness shall be his for ever.
 He is gracious, compassionate, good, 4
 a beacon in darkness for honest men.
 It is right for a man to be gracious in his lending, 5 to order his affairs with judgement.
 Nothing shall ever shake him; 6
 his goodness shall be remembered for all time.
 Bad news shall have no terrors for him, 7
 because his heart is steadfast, trusting in the LORD.
 His confidence is strongly based, he will have no fear; 8
 and in the end he willloat over his enemies.

^a Or chief part.

9 He gives freely to the poor;
 righteousness shall be his for ever;
 in honour he carries his head high.
 10 The wicked man shall see it with rising anger and grind his teeth in despair;
 the hopes of wicked men shall come to nothing.

113

1 O praise the LORD.
 Praise the LORD, you that are his servants,
 praise the name of the LORD.
 2 Blessed be the name of the LORD
 now and evermore.
 3 From the rising of the sun to its setting may the LORD's name be praised.
 4 High is the LORD above all nations,
 his glory above the heavens.
 5-6 There is none like the LORD our God in heaven or on earth,
 who sets his throne so high
 but deigns to look down so low;
 7 who lifts the weak out of the dust and raises the poor from the dunghill, 8 giving them a place among princes,
 among the princes of his people;
 9 who makes the woman in a childless house a happy mother of children. ^a

1 O praise the LORD. ^b
 When Israel came out of Egypt,
 Jacob from a people of outlandish speech,
 2 Judah became his sanctuary,
 Israel his dominion.
 3 The sea looked and ran away;
 Jordan turned back.
 4 The mountains skipped like rams,
 the hills like young sheep.
 5 What was it, sea? Why did you run?
 Jordan, why did you turn back?
 6 Why, mountains, did you skip like rams, and you, hills, like young sheep?

^a O praise the LORD transposed to the beginning of Ps. 114.
 on Ps. 113. 9.

^b See note

Dance, O earth, at the presence of the Lord, 7 at the presence of the God of Jacob, who turned the rock into a pool of water, 8
 the granite cliff into a fountain.

Not to us, O LORD, not to us, 1
 but to thy name ascribe the glory,
 for thy true love and for thy constancy.

Why do the nations ask, 2
 'Where then is their God?'
 Our God is in high heaven; 3
 he does whatever pleases him.
 Their idols are silver and gold, 4
 made by the hands of men.
 They have mouths that cannot speak, 5
 and eyes that cannot see;
 they have ears that cannot hear, 6
 nostrils, and cannot smell;
 with their hands they cannot feel, 7
 with their feet they cannot walk, and no sound comes from their throats.
 Their makers grow to be like them, 8
 and so do all who trust in them.

But Israel trusts in the LORD; 9
 he is their helper and their shield.
 The house of Aaron trusts in the LORD; 10
 he is their helper and their shield.
 Those who fear the LORD trust in the LORD; 11
 he is their helper and their shield.
 The LORD remembers us, and he will bless us; 12
 he will bless the house of Israel,
 he will bless the house of Aaron.
 The LORD will bless all who fear him, 13
 high and low alike.

May the LORD give you increase, 14
 both you and your sons.
 You are blessed by the LORD, 15
 the LORD who made heaven and earth.
 The heavens, they are the LORD's; 16
 the earth he has given to all mankind.
 It is not the dead who praise the LORD, 17
 not those who go down into silence;

but we, the living, bless the LORD,
now and for evermore.

O praise the LORD.

116

I love the LORD, for he has heard me
and listens to my prayer;
for he has given me a hearing
whenever I have cried to him.
The cords of death bound me,
Sheol held me in its grip.
Anguish and torment held me fast;
so I invoked the LORD by name,
'Deliver me, O LORD, I beseech thee;
for I am thy slave.'^a Gracious is the LORD and righteous,
our God is full of compassion.
The LORD preserves the simple-hearted;
I was brought low and he saved me.
Be at rest once more, my heart,
for the LORD has showered gifts upon you.
He has rescued me from death and my feet from stumbling.
I will walk in the presence of the LORD
in the land of the living.

I was sure that I should be swept away,
and my distress was bitter.
In panic I cried,
'How faithless all men are!'
How can I repay the LORD
for all his gifts to me?
I will take in my hands the cup of salvation
and invoke the LORD by name.
I will pay my vows to the LORD
in the presence of all his people.
A precious thing in the LORD's sight is the death of those who die faithful to him.
^b I am thy slave, thy slave-girl's son;
thou hast undone the bonds that bound me.
To thee will I bring a thank-offering
and invoke the LORD by name.
I will pay my vows to the LORD
in the presence of all his people,

^a for . . . slave: transposed from the beginning of verse 16; Heb. adds O LORD.

^b Prob. rdg.; Heb. prefixes For I am thy slave, O LORD; see note on verse 4.

in the courts of the LORD's house,

O praise the LORD.

Praise the LORD, all nations, 1
extol him, all you peoples;
for his love protecting us is strong, 2
the LORD's constancy is everlasting.

O praise the LORD.

It is good to give thanks to the LORD, 1
for his love endures for ever.
Declare it, house of Israel: 2
his love endures for ever.
Declare it, house of Aaron: 3
his love endures for ever.
Declare it, you that fear the LORD: 4
his love endures for ever.
When in my distress I called to the LORD, 5
his answer was to set me free.
The LORD is on my side, I have no fear; 6
what can man do to me?
The LORD is on my side, he is my helper, 7
and I shall gloat over my enemies.
It is better to find refuge in the LORD 8
than to trust in men.
It is better to find refuge in the LORD 9
than to trust in princes.
All nations surround me, 10
but in the LORD's name I will drive them away.
They surround me on this side and on that, 11
but in the LORD's name I will drive them away.
They surround me like bees at the honey; 12
they attack me, as fire attacks brushwood,
but in the LORD's name I will drive them away.
They thrust hard against me so that I nearly fall; 13
but the LORD has helped me.
The LORD is my refuge and defence, 14
and he has become my deliverer.
Hark! Shouts of deliverance 15 in the camp of the victors^a!

^a Or righteous.

16 With his right hand the LORD does mighty deeds, the right hand of the LORD raises up.
 17 I shall not die but live to proclaim the works of the LORD.
 18 The LORD did indeed chasten me,
 but he did not surrender me to Death.
 19 Open to me the gates of victory; ^a
 I will enter by them and praise the LORD.
 20 This is the gate of the LORD;
 the victors ^b shall make their entry through it.
 21 I will praise thee, for thou hast answered me and hast become my deliverer.
 22 The stone which the builders rejected has become the chief corner-stone.
 23 This is the LORD's doing;
 it is marvellous in our eyes.
 24 This is the day on which the LORD has acted: ^c let us exult and rejoice in it.
 25 We pray thee, O LORD, deliver us;
 we pray thee, O LORD, send us prosperity.
 26 Blessed in the name of the LORD are all who come;
 we bless you from the house of the LORD.
 27 The LORD is God; he has given light to us, the ordered line of pilgrims by the horns of the altar.
 28 Thou art my God and I will praise thee;
 my God, I will exalt thee.
 29 It is good to give thanks to the LORD,
 for his love endures for ever.

1 Happy are they whose life is blameless, who conform to the law of the LORD.
 2 Happy are they who obey his instruction,
 who set their heart on finding him;
 3 who have done no wrong and have lived according to his will.
 4 Thou, Lord, hast laid down thy precepts for men to keep them faithfully.
 5 If only I might hold a steady course, keeping thy statutes!
 6 I shall never be put to shame
 if I fix my eyes on thy commandments.
 7 I will praise thee in sincerity of heart
 as I learn thy just decrees.

^a Or righteousness.^b Or righteous.^c Or which the LORD has made.

Thy statutes will I keep faithfully; O do not leave me forsaken.	8
How shall a young man steer an honest course? By holding to thy word.	9
With all my heart I strive to find thee; let me not stray from thy commandments.	10
I treasure thy promise in my heart, for fear that I might sin against thee.	11
Blessed art thou, O LORD; teach me thy statutes.	12
I say them over, one by one, the decrees that thou hast proclaimed.	13
I have found more joy along the path of thy instruction than in any kind of wealth.	14
I will meditate on thy precepts and keep thy paths ever before my eyes.	15
In thy statutes I find continual delight; I will not forget thy word.	16
Grant this to me, thy servant: let me live and, living, keep thy word.	17
Take the veil from my eyes, that I may see the marvels that spring from thy law.	18
I am but a stranger here on earth, ^a do not hide thy commandments from me.	19
My heart pines with longing day and night for thy decrees.	20
The proud have felt thy rebuke; cursed are those who turn from thy commandments.	21
Set me free from scorn and insult, for I have obeyed thy instruction.	22
The powers that be sit scheming together against me; but I, thy servant, will study thy statutes.	23
Thy instruction is my continual delight; I turn to it for counsel.	24
I lie prone in the dust; grant me life according to thy word.	25
I tell thee all I have done and thou dost answer me; teach me thy statutes.	26
Show me the way set out in thy precepts, and I will meditate on thy wonders.	27
I cannot rest for misery; renew my strength in accordance with thy word.	28
Keep falsehood far from me and grant me the grace of living by thy law.	29

^a Or in the land.

- 30 I have chosen the path of truth and have set thy decrees before me.
- 31 I hold fast to thy instruction;
O LORD, let me not be put to shame.
- 32 I will run the course set out in thy commandments,
for they gladden my heart.
- 33 Teach me, O LORD, the way set out in thy statutes, and in keeping them I shall find my reward.
- 34 Give me the insight to obey thy law
and to keep it with all my heart; 35 make me walk in the path of thy commandments,
for that is my desire.
- 36 Dispose my heart toward thy instruction
and not toward ill-gotten gains; 37 turn away my eyes from all that is vile,
grant me life by thy word.
- 38 Fulfil thy promise for thy servant,
the promise made to those who fear thee.
- 39 Turn away the censure which I dread,
for thy decrees are good.
- 40 How I long for thy precepts!
In thy righteousness grant me life.
- 41 Thy love never fails; let it light on me, O LORD,
and thy deliverance, for that was thy promise;
42 then I shall have my answer to the man who taunts me, because I trust in thy word.
- 43 Rob me not of my power to speak the truth,
for I put my hope in thy decrees.
- 44 I will heed thy law continually,
for ever and ever;
45 I walk in freedom wherever I will,
because I have studied thy precepts.
- 46 I will speak of thy instruction before kings
and will not be ashamed;
47 in thy commandments I find continuing delight;
I love them with all my heart.
- 48 I will welcome thy commandments^a and will meditate on thy statutes.
- 49 Remember the word spoken to me, thy servant,
on which thou hast taught me to fix my hope.
- 50 In time of trouble my consolation is this,
that thy promise has given me life.
- 51 Proud men treat me with insolent scorn,
but I do not swerve from thy law.

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds which I love.

I have cherished thy decrees all my life long, and in them I find consolation, O LORD.	52
Gusts of anger seize me as I think of evil men who forsake thy law.	53
Thy statutes are the theme of my song ^a wherever I make my home.	54
In the night I remember thy name, O LORD, and dwell upon thy law.	55
This is true of me, that I have kept thy precepts.	56
Thou, LORD, art all I have ; I have promised to keep thy word.	57
With all my heart I have tried to please thee ; fulfil thy promise and be gracious to me.	58
I have thought much about the course of my life and always turned back to thy instruction ;	59
I have never delayed but always made haste to keep thy commandments.	60
Bands of evil men close round me, but I do not forget thy law.	61
At midnight I rise to give thee thanks for the justice of thy decrees.	62
I keep company with all who fear thee, with all who follow thy precepts.	63
The earth is full of thy never-failing love ; O LORD, teach me thy statutes.	64
Thou hast shown thy servant much kindness, fulfilling thy word, O LORD.	65
Give me insight, give me knowledge, for I put my trust in thy commandments.	66
I went astray before I was punished ; but now I pay heed to thy promise.	67
Thou art good and thou doest good ; teach me thy statutes.	68
Proud men blacken my name with lies, yet I follow thy precepts with all my heart ; their hearts are thick and gross ; but I continually delight in thy law.	69 70
How good it is for me to have been punished, to school me in thy statutes !	71
The law thou hast ordained means more to me than a fortune in gold and silver.	72
Thy hands moulded me and made me what I am ; show me how I may learn thy commandments.	73

^a the theme of my song : or wonderful to me.

- 74 Let all who fear thee be glad when they see me,
because I hope for the fulfilment of thy word.
- 75 I know, O LORD, that thy decrees are just and even in punishing thou keepest faith with me.
- 76 Let thy never-failing love console me,
as thou hast promised me, thy servant.
- 77 Extend thy compassion to me, that I may live;
for thy law is my continual delight.
- 78 Put the proud to shame, for with their lies they wrong me;
but I will meditate on thy precepts.
- 79 Let all who fear thee turn to me,
all who cherish thy instruction.
- 80 Let me give my whole heart to thy statutes,
so that I am not put to shame.
- 81 I long with all my heart for thy deliverance,
hoping for the fulfilment of thy word;
- 82 my sight grows dim with looking for thy promise and still I cry, 'When wilt thou comfort me?'
- 83 Though I shrivel like a wine-skin in the smoke,
I do not forget thy statutes.
- 84 How long has thy servant to wait for thee to fulfil thy decree against my persecutors?
- 85 Proud men who flout thy law spread tales about me.
- 86 Help me, for they hound me with their lies,
but thy commandments all stand for ever.
- 87 They had almost swept me from the earth,
but I did not forsake thy precepts;
- 88 grant me life, as thy love is unchanging,
that I may follow all thy instruction.
- 89 Eternal is thy word, O LORD, planted firm in heaven.
- 90 Thy promise^a endures for all time, stable as the earth which thou hast fixed.
- 91 This day, as ever, thy decrees stand fast;
for all things serve thee.
- 92 If thy law had not been my continual delight,
I should have perished in all my troubles;
- 93 never will I forget thy precepts,
for through them thou hast given me life.
- 94 I am thine; O save me,
for I have pondered thy precepts.
- 95 Evil men lie in wait to destroy me;
but I will give thought to thy instruction.

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. Thy constancy.

I see that all things come to an end, but thy commandment has no limit.	96
O how I love thy law! It is my study all day long.	97
Thy commandments are mine for ever; through them I am wiser than my enemies.	98
I have more insight than all my teachers, for thy instruction is my study;	99
I have more wisdom than the old, because I have kept thy precepts.	100
I set no foot on any evil path in my obedience to thy word;	101
I do not swerve from thy decrees, for thou thyself hast been my teacher.	102
How sweet is thy promise in my mouth, sweeter on my tongue than honey!	103
From thy precepts I learn wisdom; therefore I hate the paths of falsehood.	104
Thy word is a lamp to guide my feet and a light on my path;	105
I have bound myself by oath and solemn vow to keep thy just decrees.	106
I am cruelly afflicted; O LORD, revive me and make good thy word.	107
Accept, O LORD, the willing tribute of my lips and teach me thy decrees.	108
Every day I take my life in my hands, yet I never forget thy law.	109
Evil men have set traps for me, but I do not stray from thy precepts.	110
Thy instruction is my everlasting inheritance; it is the joy of my heart.	111
I am resolved to fulfil thy statutes; they are a reward that never fails.	112
I hate men who are not single-minded, but I love thy law.	113
Thou art my shield and hiding-place; I hope for the fulfilment of thy word.	114
Go, you evildoers, and leave me to myself, that I may keep the commandments of my God.	115
Support me as thou hast promised, that I may live; do not disappoint my hope.	116
Sustain me, that I may see deliverance; so shall I always be occupied with thy statutes.	117
Thou dost reject those who stray from thy statutes, for their talk is all malice and lies.	118

- 119 In thy sight all the wicked on earth are scum;
therefore I love thy instruction.
- 120 The dread of thee makes my flesh creep,
and I stand in awe of thy decrees.
- 121 I have done what is just and right;
thou wilt not abandon me to my oppressors.
- 122 Stand surety for the welfare of thy servant;
let not the proud oppress me.^a
- 123 My sight grows dim with looking for thy deliverance and waiting for thy righteous promise.
- 124 In all thy dealings with me, LORD, show thy true love
and teach me thy statutes.
- 125 I am thy servant; give me insight to understand thy instruction.
- 126 It is time to act, O LORD;
for men have broken thy law.
- 127 Truly I love thy commandments
more than the finest gold.
- 128 It is by thy precepts that I find the right way;
I hate the paths of falsehood.
- 129 Thy instruction is wonderful;
therefore I gladly keep it.
- 130 Thy word is revealed, and all is light;
it gives understanding even to the untaught.
- 131 I pant, I thirst,
longing for thy commandments.
- 132 Turn to me and be gracious,
as thou hast decreed for those who love thy name.
- 133 Make my step firm according to thy promise,
and let no wrong have the mastery over me.
- 134 Set me free from man's oppression,
that I may observe thy precepts.
- 135 Let thy face shine upon thy servant
and teach me thy statutes.
- 136 My eyes stream with tears
because men do not heed thy law.
- 137 How just thou art, O LORD!
How straight and true are thy decrees!
- 138 How just is the instruction thou givest!
It is fixed firm and sure.
- 139 I am speechless with resentment,
for my enemies have forgotten thy words.
- 140 Thy promise has been tested through and through,
and thy servant loves it.

^a oppress me: or charge me falsely.

I may be despised and of little account, but I do not forget thy precepts.	141
Thy justice is an everlasting justice, and thy law is truth.	142
Though I am oppressed by trouble and anxiety, thy commandments are my continual delight.	143
Thy instruction is ever just; give me understanding that I may live.	144
I call with my whole heart; answer me, LORD. I will keep thy statutes.	145
I call to thee; O save me that I may heed thy instruction.	146
I rise before dawn and cry for help; I hope for the fulfilment of thy word.	147
Before the midnight watch also my eyes are open for meditation on thy promise.	148
Hear me, as thy love is unchanging, and give me life, O LORD, by thy decree.	149
My pursuers in their malice are close behind me, but they are far from thy law.	150
Yet thou art near, O LORD, and all thy commandments are true.	151
I have long known from thy instruction that thou hast given it eternal foundations.	152
See in what trouble I am and set me free, for I do not forget thy law.	153
Be thou my advocate and win release for me; true to thy promise, give me life.	154
Such deliverance is beyond the reach of wicked men, because they do not ponder thy statutes.	155
Great is thy compassion, O LORD; grant me life by thy decree.	156
Many are my persecutors and enemies, but I have not swerved from thy instruction.	157
I was cut to the quick when I saw traitors who had no regard for thy promise.	158
See how I love thy precepts, O LORD! Grant me life, as thy love is unchanging.	159
Thy word is founded in truth, and thy just decrees are everlasting.	160
The powers that be persecute me without cause, yet my heart thrills at thy word.	161
I am jubilant over thy promise, like a man carrying off much booty.	162
Falsehood I detest and loathe, but I love thy law.	163

164 Seven times a day I praise thee for the justice of thy decrees.
 165 Peace is the reward of those who love thy law;
 no pitfalls beset their path.
 166 I hope for thy deliverance, O LORD,
 and I fulfil thy commandments;
 167 gladly I heed thy instruction and love it greatly.
 168 I heed thy precepts and thy instruction,
 for all my life lies open before thee.
 169 Let my cry of joy reach thee, O LORD;
 give me understanding of thy word.
 170 Let my supplication reach thee;
 be true to thy promise and save me.
 171 Let thy praise pour from my lips,
 because thou teachest me thy statutes;
 172 let the music of thy promises be on my tongue,
 for thy commandments are justice itself.
 173 Let thy hand be prompt to help me,
 for I have chosen thy precepts;
 174 I long for thy deliverance, O LORD,
 and thy law is my continual delight.
 175 Let me live and I will praise thee;
 let thy decrees be my support.
 176 I have strayed like a lost sheep;
 come, search for thy servant,
 for I have not forgotten thy commandments.

120

1 I called to the LORD in my distress,
 and he answered me.
 2 'O LORD,' I cried, 'save me from lying lips and from the tongue of slander.'
 3 What has he in store for you, slanderous tongue?
 What more has he for you?
 4 Nothing but a warrior's sharp arrows or red-hot charcoal.
 5 Hard is my lot, exiled in Meshech, dwelling by the tents of Kedar.
 6 All the time that I dwelt among men who hated peace,
 7 I sought peace; but whenever I spoke of it,
 they were for war.

If I lift up my eyes to the hills,	1
where shall I find help?
Help comes only from the LORD,	2
maker of heaven and earth.
How could he let your foot stumble?	3
How could he, your guardian, sleep?
The guardian of Israel	4
never slumbers, never sleeps.
The LORD is your guardian,	5
your defence at your right hand;
the sun will not strike you by day	6
nor the moon by night.
The LORD will guard you against all evil;	7
he will guard you, body and soul.
The LORD will guard your going and your coming,	8
now and for evermore.

I rejoiced when they said to me,	1
‘Let us go to the house of the LORD.’
Now we stand within your gates,	2
O Jerusalem:
Jerusalem that is built to be a city	3
where people come together in unity;
to which the tribes resort, the tribes of the LORD,	4
to give thanks to the LORD himself,
the bounden duty of Israel.
For in her are set the thrones of justice,	5
the thrones of the house of David.
Pray for the peace of Jerusalem:	6
‘May those who love you prosper;
peace be within your ramparts	7
and prosperity in your palaces.’
For the sake of these my brothers and my friends,	8
I will say, ‘Peace be within you.’
For the sake of the house of the LORD our God	9
I will pray for your good.

123

I lift my eyes to thee	1
whose throne is in heaven.
As the eyes of a slave follow his master’s hand	2
or the eyes of a slave-girl her mistress, so our eyes are turned to the LORD our God waiting for kindness from him.

3 Deal kindly with us, O LORD, deal kindly,
 for we have suffered insult enough;
 4 too long have we had to suffer
 the insults of the wealthy,
 the scorn of proud men.

124

1 If the LORD had not been on our side,
 Israel may now say,
 2 if the LORD had not been on our side
 when they assailed us,
 3 they would have swallowed us alive
 when their anger was roused against us.
 4 The waters would have carried us away and the torrent swept over us; 5 over us would have swept the seething waters.
 6 Blessed be the LORD, who did not leave us to be the prey between their teeth.
 7 We have escaped like a bird from the fowler's trap;
 the trap broke, and so we escaped.
 8 Our help is in the name of the LORD,
 maker of heaven and earth.

1 Those who trust in the LORD are like Mount Zion, which cannot be shaken but stands fast for ever.
 2 As the hills enfold Jerusalem,
 so the LORD enfolds his people, now and evermore.
 3 The sceptre of wickedness shall surely find no home in the land allotted to the righteous, so that the righteous shall not set their hands to injustice.
 4 Do good, O LORD, to those who are good and to those who are upright in heart.
 5 But those who turn aside into crooked ways,
 may the LORD destroy them, as he destroys all evildoers!
 Peace be upon Israel!

1 When the LORD turned the tide of Zion's fortune, we were like men who had found new health.^a

^a like . . . health: or like dreamers.

Our mouths were full of laughter 2
 and our tongues sang aloud for joy.
 Then word went round among the nations,
 'The LORD has done great things for them.'
 Great things indeed the LORD then did for us, 3 and we rejoiced.

Turn once again our fortune, LORD, 4
 as streams return in the dry south.
 Those who sow in tears 5 shall reap with songs of joy.
 A man may go out weeping, 6 carrying his bag of seed;
 but he will come back with songs of joy,
 carrying home his sheaves.

Unless the LORD builds the house, 1
 its builders will have toiled in vain.
 Unless the LORD keeps watch over a city,
 in vain the watchman stands on guard.
 In vain you rise up early 2
 and go late to rest, toiling for the bread you eat;
 he supplies the need of those he loves.^a Sons are a gift from the LORD 3
 and children a reward from him.
 Like arrows in the hand of a fighting man 4
 are the sons of a man's youth.
 Happy is the man 5
 who has his quiver full of them;
 such men shall not be put to shame
 when they confront their enemies in court.

Happy are all who fear the LORD, 1
 who live according to his will.
 You shall eat the fruit of your own labours, 2
 you shall be happy and you shall prosper.
 Your wife shall be like a fruitful vine 3
 in the heart of your house;
 your sons shall be like olive-shoots round about your table.
 This is the blessing in store for the man 4 who fears the LORD.

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds an unintelligible word.

5 May the LORD bless you from Zion;
 may you share the prosperity of Jerusalem
 all the days of your life,
 6 and live to see your children's children!
 Peace be upon Israel!

1 Often since I was young have men attacked me—
 let Israel now say—
 2 often since I was young have men attacked me,
 but never have they prevailed.
 3 They scored my back with scourges, like ploughmen driving long furrows.
 4 Yet the LORD in his justice has cut me loose from the bonds of the wicked.
 5 Let all enemies of Zion
 be thrown back in shame;
 6 let them be like grass growing on the roof,
 which withers before it can shoot, 7 which will never fill a mower's hand
 nor yield an armful for the harvester, 8 so that passers-by will never say to them,
 'The blessing of the LORD be upon you!
 We bless you in the name of the LORD.'

1 Out of the depths have I called to thee, O LORD;
 2 LORD, hear my cry.
 Let thy ears be attentive
 to my plea for mercy.
 3 If thou, LORD, shouldest keep account of sins, who, O Lord, could hold up his head?
 4 But in thee is forgiveness, and therefore thou art revered.
 5 I wait for the LORD with all my soul,
 I hope for the fulfilment of his word.
 6 My soul waits^a for the Lord
 more eagerly than watchmen for the morning.
 Like men who watch for the morning,
 7 O Israel, look for the LORD.
 For in the LORD is love unfailing,
 and great is his power to set men free.
 8 He alone will set Israel free from all their sins.

^a waits: transposed from after the LORD in verse 5.

131

O LORD, my heart is not proud, 1
 nor are my eyes haughty;
 I do not busy myself with great matters or things too marvellous for me.
 No; I submit myself, I account myself lowly, 2
 as a weaned child clinging to its mother.^a O Israel, look for the LORD 3
 now and evermore.

132

O LORD, remember David 1
 in the time of his adversity,
 how he swore to the LORD 2
 and made a vow to the Mighty One of Jacob:
 'I will not enter my house 3
 nor will I mount my bed,
 I will not close my eyes in sleep 4
 or my eyelids in slumber, until I find a sanctuary for the LORD, 5 a dwelling for the Mighty One of Jacob.'
 We heard of it in Ephrathah; 6
 we came upon it in the region of Jaar.
 Let us enter his dwelling, 7
 let us fall in worship at his footstool.
 Arise, O LORD, and come to thy resting-place, 8
 thou and the ark of thy power.
 Let thy priests be clothed in righteousness 9
 and let thy loyal servants shout for joy.
 For thy servant David's sake 10 reject not thy anointed king.
 The LORD swore to David 11
 an oath which he will not break:
 'A prince of your own line will I set upon your throne.
 If your sons keep my covenant 12
 and heed the teaching that I give them, their sons in turn for all time shall sit upon your throne.'
 For the LORD has chosen Zion 13
 and desired it for his home:
 'This is my resting-place for ever; 14
 here will I make my home, for such is my desire.

15 I will richly bless her destitute ^a and satisfy her needy with bread.
16 With salvation will I clothe her priests;
her loyal servants shall shout for joy.
17 There will I renew the line of David's house and light a lamp for my anointed king; 18 his enemies will I clothe with shame,
but on his head shall be a shining crown.⁷

133

1 How good it is and how pleasant for brothers to live ^b together!
2 It is fragrant as oil poured upon the head and falling over the beard, Aaron's beard, when the oil runs down over the collar of his vestments.
3 It is like the dew of Hermon falling upon the hills of Zion.
There the LORD bestows his blessing, life for evermore.

1 Come, bless the LORD,
all you servants of the LORD, who stand night after night
in the house of the LORD.
2 Lift up your hands in the sanctuary and bless the LORD.
3 The LORD, maker of heaven and earth, bless you from Zion!

1 O praise the LORD.
Praise the name of the LORD;
praise him, you servants of the LORD,
2 who stand in the house of the LORD,
in the temple courts of our God.
3 Praise the LORD, for that is good;
honour his name with psalms, for that is pleasant.
4 The LORD has chosen Jacob to be his own and Israel as his special treasure.
5 I know that the LORD is great,
that our Lord is above all gods.

^a her destitute: prob. rdg.; Heb. her provisions.^b Or to worship.

Whatever the LORD pleases, that he does, in heaven and on earth, in the sea, in the depths of ocean.	6
He brings up the mist from the ends of the earth, he opens rifts ^a for the rain, and brings the wind out of his storehouses.	7
He struck down all the first-born in Egypt, both man and beast.	8
In Egypt he sent signs and portents against Pharaoh and all his subjects.	9
He struck down mighty nations and slew great kings,	10
Sihon king of the Amorites, Og the king of Bashan, and all the princes of Canaan, and gave their land to Israel, to Israel his people as their patrimony.	11
O LORD, thy name endures for ever; thy renown, O LORD, shall last for all generations.	12
The LORD will give his people justice and have compassion on his servants.	13
The gods of the nations are idols of silver and gold, made by the hands of men.	14
They have mouths that cannot speak and eyes that cannot see;	15
they have ears that do not hear, and there is no breath in their nostrils. ^b	16
Their makers grow like them, and so do all who trust in them.	17
O house of Israel, bless the LORD; O house of Aaron, bless the LORD.	18
O house of Levi, bless the LORD; you who fear the LORD, bless the LORD.	19
Blessed from Zion be the LORD who dwells in Jerusalem.	20
O praise the LORD.	21

136

It is good to give thanks to the LORD, for his love endures for ever.	1
Give thanks to the God of gods; his love endures for ever.	2
Give thanks to the Lord of lords; his love endures for ever.	3
Alone he works great marvels; his love endures for ever.	4

5 In wisdom he made the heavens;
his love endures for ever.

6 He laid the earth upon the waters;
his love endures for ever.

7 He made the great lights,
his love endures for ever,

8 the sun to rule by day,
his love endures for ever,

9 the moon and the stars to rule by night;
his love endures for ever.

10 He struck down the first-born of the Egyptians,
his love endures for ever,

11 and brought Israel from among them;
his love endures for ever.

12 With strong hand and outstretched arm,
his love endures for ever,

13 he divided the Red Sea in two,
his love endures for ever,

14 and made Israel pass through it,
his love endures for ever;

15 but Pharaoh and his host he swept into the sea;
his love endures for ever.

16 He led his people through the wilderness;
his love endures for ever.

17 He struck down great kings;
his love endures for ever.

18 He slew mighty kings,
his love endures for ever,

19 Sihon king of the Amorites,
his love endures for ever,

20 and Og the king of Bashan;
his love endures for ever.

21 He gave their land to Israel,
his love endures for ever,

22 to Israel his servant as their patrimony;
his love endures for ever.

23 He remembered us when we were cast down,
his love endures for ever,

24 and rescued us from our enemies;
his love endures for ever.

25 He gives food to all his creatures;
his love endures for ever.

26 Give thanks to the God of heaven,
for his love endures for ever.

137

By the rivers of Babylon we sat down and wept 1
 when we remembered Zion.
 There on the willow-trees ^a 2
 we hung up our harps, for there those who carried us off 3
 demanded music and singing,
 and our captors called on us to be merry:
 ‘Sing us one of the songs of Zion.’
 How could we sing the LORD’s song 4 in a foreign land?

 If I forget you, O Jerusalem, 5
 let my right hand wither away;
 let my tongue cling to the roof of my mouth 6
 if I do not remember you,
 if I do not set Jerusalem above my highest joy.
 Remember, O LORD, against the people of Edom 7
 the day of Jerusalem’s fall, when they said, ‘Down with it, down with it, down to its very foundations!’
 O Babylon, Babylon the destroyer, 8 happy the man who repays you for all that you did to us!
 Happy is he who shall seize your children 9 and dash them against the rock.

I will praise thee, O LORD, with all my heart; 1 boldly, O God, will I sing psalms to thee. ^b I will bow down towards thy holy temple, 2
 for thy love and faithfulness I will praise thy name; for thou hast made thy promise wide as the heavens.
 When I called to thee thou didst answer me 3
 and make me bold and valiant-hearted.
 Let all the kings of the earth praise ^c thee, O LORD, 4
 when they hear the words thou hast spoken;
 and let them sing of ^d the LORD’s ways, 5
 for great is the glory of the LORD.
 For the LORD, high as he is, cares for the lowly, 6
 and from afar he humbles the proud.
 Though I walk among foes thou dost preserve my life, 7 exerting thy power against the rage of my enemies, and with thy right hand thou savest me.

^a Or poplars.^b boldly . . . thee: or I will sing psalms to thee before the gods.^c Or confess.^d Or walk in.

The LORD will accomplish his purpose for me.
 Thy true love, O LORD, endures for ever;
 leave not thy work unfinished.

139

LORD, thou hast examined me and knowest me.
 Thou knowest all, whether I sit down or rise up;
 thou hast discerned my thoughts from afar.
 Thou hast traced my journey and my resting places,
 and art familiar with all my paths.
 For there is not a word on my tongue
 but thou, LORD, knowest them all.^a Thou hast kept close guard before me and behind and hast spread thy hand over me.
 Such knowledge is beyond my understanding,
 so high that I cannot reach it.
 Where can I escape from thy spirit?
 Where can I flee from thy presence?
 If I climb up to heaven, thou art there;
 if I make my bed in Sheol, again I find thee.
 If I take my flight to the frontiers of the morning or dwell at the limit of the western sea, even there thy hand will meet me and thy right hand will hold me fast.
 If I say, 'Surely darkness will steal over me,
 night will close around me', darkness is no darkness for thee
 and night is luminous as day;
 to thee both dark and light are one.

Thou it was who didst fashion my inward parts;
 thou didst knit me together in my mother's womb.
 I will praise thee, for thou dost fill me with awe;
 wonderful thou art, and wonderful thy works.
 Thou knowest me through and through:
 my body is no mystery to thee,
 how I was secretly kneaded into shape and patterned in the depths of the earth.
 Thou didst see my limbs unformed in the womb,
 and in thy book they are all recorded;
 day by day they were fashioned,
 not one of them was late in growing.^b
 How deep I find thy thoughts, O God, how inexhaustible their themes!

^a For . . . them all: or If there is any offence on my tongue, thou, LORD, knowest it all.

^b was late in growing: prob. rdg.; Heb. om.

Can I count them? They outnumber the grains of sand; to finish the count, my years must equal thine.	18
O God, if only thou wouldst slay the wicked! If those men of blood would but leave me in peace— those who provoke thee with deliberate evil and rise in vicious rebellion against thee!	19 20
How I hate them, O LORD, that hate thee! I am cut to the quick when they oppose thee; I hate them with undying hatred; I hold them all my enemies.	21 22
Examine me, O God, and know my thoughts; test me, and understand my misgivings.	23
Watch lest I follow any path that grieves thee; guide me in the ancient ^a ways.	24

Rescue me, O LORD, from evil men; keep me safe from violent men, whose heads are full of wicked schemes, who stir up contention day after day.	1 2
Their tongues are sharp as serpents' fangs; on their lips is spiders' poison.	3
Guard me, O LORD, from wicked men; keep me safe from violent men, who plan to thrust me out of the way.	4
Arrogant men set hidden traps for me, rogues spread their nets and lay snares for me along the path.	5
I said, 'O LORD, thou art my God; O LORD, hear my plea for mercy.	6
O LORD God, stronghold of my safety, thou hast shielded my head in the day of battle.	7
Frustrate, O LORD, their designs against me; never let the wicked gain their purpose.	8-9
If any of those at my table rise against me, let their own conspiracies be their undoing.
Let burning coals be tipped upon them; let them be plunged into the miry depths, never to rise again.	10
Slander shall find no home in the land; evil and violence shall be hounded to destruction.'	11
I know that the LORD will give their due to the needy and justice to the downtrodden.	12

^a Or everlasting.

Righteous men will surely give thanks to thy name;
the upright will worship in thy presence.

O LORD, I call to thee, come quickly to my aid;
listen to my cry when I call to thee.
Let my prayer be like incense duly set before thee and my raised hands like the evening sacrifice.
Set a guard, O LORD, over my mouth;
keep watch at the door of my lips.
Turn not my heart to sinful thoughts nor to any pursuit of evil courses.
The evildoers appal me;^a not for me the delights of their table.
I would rather be buffeted by the righteous and reproved by good men.
My head shall not be anointed with the oil of wicked men,
for that would make me a party to their crimes.
They shall founder on the rock of justice and shall learn how acceptable my words are.
Their bones shall be scattered at the mouth of Sheol,
like splinters of wood or stone on the ground.
But my eyes are fixed on thee, O LORD God;
thou art my refuge; leave me not unprotected.
Keep me from the trap which they have set for me,
from the snares of evildoers.
Let the wicked fall into their own nets,
whilst I pass in safety, all alone.

142

I cry aloud to the LORD;
to the LORD I plead aloud for mercy.
I pour out my complaint before him and tell over my troubles in his presence.
When my spirit is faint within me,
thou art there to watch over my steps.
In the path that I should take they have hidden a snare.
I look to my right hand,
I find no friend by my side;
no way of escape is in sight,
no one comes to rescue me.
I cry to thee, O LORD,
and say, 'Thou art my refuge;

^a appal me: prob. rdg.; Heb. with men.

thou art all I have
 in the land of the living.
 Give me a hearing when I cry, 6
 for I am brought very low;
 save me from my pursuers,
 for they are too strong for me.
 Set me free from my prison, 7
 so that I may praise thy name.^a The righteous shall crown me with garlands,^a when thou givest me my due reward.

143

LORD, hear my prayer; 1
 be true to thyself, and listen to my pleading;
 then in thy righteousness answer me.
 Bring not thy servant to trial before thee; 2 against thee no man on earth can be right.
 An enemy has hunted me down, 3 has ground my living body under foot and plunged me into darkness like a man long dead, so that my spirit fails me 4
 and my heart is dazed with despair.
 I dwell upon the years long past, 5
 upon the memory of all that thou hast done;
 the wonders of thy creation fill my mind.
 To thee I lift my outspread hands, 6
 athirst for thee in a thirsty land.
 LORD, make haste to answer, 7
 for my spirit faints.
 Do not hide thy face from me or I shall be like those who go down to the abyss.
 In the morning let me know thy true love; 8
 I have put my trust in thee.
 Show me the way that I must take;
 to thee I offer all my heart.
 Deliver me, LORD, from my enemies, 9
 for with thee have I sought refuge.
 Teach me to do thy will, for thou art my God; 10
 in thy gracious kindness, show me the level road.
 Keep me safe, O LORD, for the honour of thy name 11
 and, as thou art just, release me from my distress.
 In thy love for me, reduce my enemies to silence 12
 and bring destruction on all who oppress me;
 for I am thy servant.

^a crown me with garlands: or crowd round me.

144

Blessed is the LORD, my rock, who trains my hands for war,
 my fingers for battle;
 my help that never fails, my fortress,
 my strong tower and my refuge,
 my shield in which I trust,
 he who puts nations under my feet.

O LORD, what is man that thou carest for him?
 What is mankind? Why give a thought to them?
 Man is no more than a puff of wind,
 his days a passing shadow.

If thou, LORD, but tilt the heavens, down they come;
 touch the mountains, and they smoke.

Shoot forth thy lightning flashes, far and wide,
 and send thy arrows whistling.

Stretch out thy hands from on high to rescue me and snatch me from great waters.^a

I will sing a new song to thee, O God, psalms to the music of a ten-stringed lute.

O God who gavest victory to kings and deliverance to thy servant David, rescue me from the cruel sword;
 snatch me from the power of foreign foes,
 whose every word is false
 and all their oaths are perjury.

Happy^b are we whose sons in their early prime stand like tall towers, our daughters like sculptured pillars
 at the corners of a palace.

Our barns are full and furnish plentiful provision;
 our sheep bear lambs in thousands upon thousands;
 the oxen in our fields are fat and sleek;
 there is no miscarriage or untimely birth,
 no cries of distress in our public places.

Happy are the people in such a case as ours;
 happy the people who have the LORD for their God.

145

I will extol thee, O God my king,
 and bless thy name for ever and ever.

Every day will I bless thee and praise thy name for ever and ever.

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds from the power of foreign foes, (8) whose every word is false and all their oaths are perjury (cp. verse 11). ^b Prob. rdg.; Heb. Who.

Great is the LORD and worthy of all praise; his greatness is unfathomable.	3
One generation shall commend thy works to another and set forth thy mighty deeds.	4
My theme shall be thy marvellous works, the glorious splendour of thy majesty.	5
Men shall declare thy mighty acts with awe and tell of thy great deeds.	6
They shall recite the story of thy abounding goodness and sing of thy righteousness with joy.	7
The LORD is gracious and compassionate, forbearing, and constant in his love.	8
The LORD is good to all men, and his tender care rests upon all his creatures.	9
All thy creatures praise thee, LORD, and thy servants bless thee.	10
They talk of the glory of thy kingdom and tell of thy might,	11
they proclaim to their fellows how mighty are thy deeds, how glorious the majesty of thy kingdom.	12
Thy kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and thy dominion stands for all generations.	13
In all his promises the LORD keeps faith, he is unchanging in all his works;	14
the LORD holds up those who stumble and straightens backs which are bent.
The eyes of all are lifted to thee in hope, and thou givest them their food when it is due;	15
with open and bountiful hand thou givest what they desire ^a to every living creature.	16
The LORD is righteous in all his ways, unchanging in all that he does;	17
very near is the LORD to those who call to him, who call to him in singleness of heart.	18
He fulfils their desire if only they fear him; he hears their cry and saves them.	19
The LORD watches over all who love him but sends the wicked to their doom.	20
My tongue shall speak out the praises of the LORD, and all creatures shall bless his holy name for ever and ever.	21

^a they desire: or thou wilt.

O praise the LORD.

Praise the LORD, my soul.
 As long as I live I will praise the LORD;
 I will sing psalms to my God all my life long.
 Put no faith in princes,
 in any man, who has no power to save.
 He breathes his last breath,
 he returns to the dust;
 and in that same hour all his thinking ends.

Happy the man whose helper is the God of Jacob, whose hopes are in the LORD his God,
 maker of heaven and earth,
 the sea, and all that is in them;
 who serves wrongdoers as he has sworn and deals out justice to the oppressed.
 The LORD feeds the hungry and sets the prisoner free.
 The LORD restores sight to the blind and straightens backs which are bent;
 the LORD loves the righteous and watches over the stranger;
 the LORD gives heart to the orphan and widow but turns the course of the wicked to their ruin.
 The LORD shall reign for ever,
 thy God, O Zion, for all generations.

O praise the LORD.

147

O praise the LORD.

How good it is to sing psalms to our God!
 How pleasant to praise him!
 The LORD is rebuilding Jerusalem;
 he gathers in the scattered sons of Israel.
 It is he who heals the broken in spirit and binds up their wounds, he who numbers the stars one by one and names them one and all.
 Mighty is our Lord and great his power,
 and his wisdom beyond all telling.
 The LORD gives new heart to the humble and brings evildoers down to the dust.
 Sing to the LORD a song of thanksgiving,
 sing psalms to the harp in honour of our God.

He veils the sky in clouds and prepares rain for the earth; he clothes the hills with grass and green plants for the use of man.	8
He gives the cattle their food and the young ravens all that they gather.	9
The LORD sets no store by the strength of a horse and takes no pleasure in a runner's legs; his pleasure is in those who fear him, who wait for his true love.	10 11
Sing to the LORD, Jerusalem; O Zion, praise your God,	12
for he has put new bars in your gates; he has blessed your children within them.	13
He has brought peace to your realm and given you fine wheat in plenty.	14
He sends his command to the ends of the earth, and his word runs swiftly.	15
He showers down snow, white as wool, and sprinkles hoar-frost thick as ashes; crystals of ice he scatters like bread-crumbs;	16 17
he sends the cold, and the water stands frozen, he utters his word, and the ice is melted; he blows with his wind and the waters flow.	18
To Jacob he makes his word known, his statutes and decrees to Israel;	19
he has not done this for any other nation, nor taught them his decrees.	20
O praise the LORD.

O praise the LORD.	1
Praise the LORD out of heaven; praise him in the heights.
Praise him, all his angels; praise him, all his host.	2
Praise him, sun and moon; praise him, all you shining stars;	3
praise him, heaven of heavens, and you waters above the heavens.	4
Let them all praise the name of the LORD, for he spoke the word and they were created; he established them for ever and ever by an ordinance which shall never pass away.	5 6

7 Praise the LORD from the earth,
 you water-spouts and ocean depths;
 8 fire and hail, snow and ice,
 gales of wind obeying his voice;
 9 all mountains and hills;
 all fruit-trees and all cedars;
 10 wild beasts and cattle, creeping things and winged birds;
 11 kings and all earthly rulers, princes and judges over the whole earth;
 12 young men and maidens,
 old men and young together.
 13 Let all praise the name of the LORD, for his name is high above all others,
 and his majesty above earth and heaven;
 14 he has exalted his people in the pride of power and crowned with praise his loyal servants, all Israel, the people nearest him.

O praise the LORD.

149

1 O praise the LORD.

Sing to the LORD a new song,
 sing his praise in the assembly of the faithful;
 2 let Israel rejoice in his maker and the sons of Zion exult in their king.
 3 Let them praise his name in the dance, and sing him psalms with tambourine and harp.
 4 For the LORD accepts the service of his people;
 he crowns his humble folk with victory.
 5 Let his faithful servants exult in triumph;
 let them shout for joy as they kneel before him.
 6 Let the high praises of God be on their lips and a two-edged sword in their hand, 7 to wreak vengeance on the nations and to chastise the heathen;
 8 to load their kings with chains and put their nobles in irons;
 9 to execute the judgement decreed against them—
 this is the glory of all his faithful servants.

O praise the LORD.

O praise the LORD.	1
O praise God in his holy place, praise him in the vault of heaven, the vault of his power;
praise him for his mighty works, praise him for his immeasurable greatness.	2
Praise him with fanfares on the trumpet, praise him upon lute and harp;	3
praise him with tambourines and dancing, praise him with flute and strings;	4
praise him with the clash of cymbals, praise him with triumphant cymbals;	5
let everything that has breath praise the LORD!	6
O praise the LORD.

PROVERBS

Advice to the reader

- 1 The proverbs of Solomon son of David, king of Israel,
2 by which men will come to wisdom and instruction
3 and will understand words that bring understanding,
4 and by which they will gain a well-instructed intelligence,
5 righteousness, justice, and probity.
6 The simple will be endowed with shrewdness
7 and the young with knowledge and prudence.
8 If the wise man listens, he will increase his learning,
9 and the man of understanding will acquire skill
10 to understand proverbs and parables, 11 the sayings of wise men and their riddles.
- 12 The fear of the LORD is the beginning^a of knowledge, 13 but fools scorn wisdom and discipline.
- 14 Attend, my son, to your father's instruction
15 and do not reject the teaching of your mother;
16 for they are a garland of grace on your head
17 and a chain of honour round your neck.
- 18 My son, bad men may tempt you^b and say,
19 'Come with us; let us lie in wait for someone's blood;
20 let us waylay^c an innocent man who has done us no harm.
21 Like Sheol we will swallow them alive;
22 though blameless, they shall be like men who go down to the abyss.
23 We shall take rich treasure of every sort 24 and fill our homes with booty;
25 throw in your lot with us,
26 and we will have a common purse.'
27 My son, do not go along with them,
28 keep clear of their ways;
29 they hasten hot-foot into crime,
30 impatient to shed blood.
- 31 In vain is a net spread wide 32 if any bird that flies can see it.
- 33 These men lie in wait for their own blood 34 and waylay^c no one but themselves.

^a Or chief part.
not consent.

^b Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds do not come, or, with some MSS., do

This is the fate ^a of men eager for ill-gotten gain: it robs those who get it of their lives.	19
Wisdom cries aloud in the open air, she raises her voice in public places; she calls at the top of the busy street and proclaims at the open gates of the city: 'Simple fools, how long will you be content with your simplicity?' ^b If only you would respond to my reproof, I would give you my counsel and teach you my precepts. But because you refused to listen when I called, because no one attended when I stretched out my hand, because you spurned all my advice and would have nothing to do with my reproof, I in my turn will laugh at your doom and deride you when terror comes upon you, when terror comes upon you like a hurricane and your doom descends like a whirlwind. ^c Insolent men delight in their insolence; stupid men hate knowledge. ^d When they call upon me, I will not answer them; when they search for me, they shall not find me. Because they hate knowledge and have not chosen to fear the LORD, because they have not accepted my counsel and have spurned all my reproof, they shall eat the fruits of their behaviour and have a surfeit of their own devices; for the simpleton turns a deaf ear and comes to grief, and the stupid are ruined by their own complacency. But whoever listens to me shall live without a care, undisturbed by fear of misfortune.'	20 21 22 23 24 25 26 27 28 29 30 31 32 33
My son, if you take my words to heart and lay up my commands in your mind, giving your attention to wisdom and your mind to understanding, if you summon discernment to your aid and invoke understanding, if you seek her out like silver and dig for her like buried treasure, then you will understand the fear of the LORD and attain to the knowledge of God; for the LORD bestows wisdom and teaches knowledge and understanding.	2 2 3 4 5 6

7 Out of his store he endows the upright with ability as a shield for those who live blameless lives;
8 for he guards the course of justice and keeps watch over the way of his loyal servants.

9 Then you will understand what is right and just and keep^a only to the good man's path; 10 for wisdom will sink into your mind,
and knowledge will be your heart's delight.
11 Prudence will keep watch over you, understanding will guard you, 12 it will save you from evil ways
and from men whose talk is subversive, 13 who forsake the honest course to walk in ways of darkness, 14 who rejoice in doing evil and exult in evil and subversive acts, 15 whose own ways are crooked,
whose tracks are devious.
16 It will save you from the adulteress,
from the loose woman with her seductive words, 17 who forsakes the teaching of her childhood and has forgotten the covenant of her God; 18 for her path^b runs downhill towards death,
and her course is set for the land of the dead.
19 No one who resorts to her^c finds his way back or regains the path to life.

20 See then that you follow the footsteps of good men and keep to the course of the righteous; 21 for the upright shall dwell on earth and blameless men remain there; 22 but the wicked shall be uprooted from it and traitors weeded out.

3 My son, do not forget my teaching,
but guard my commands in your heart;
2 for long life and years in plenty will they bring you, and prosperity as well.
3 Let your good faith and loyalty never fail,
but bind them about your neck.
4 Thus will you win favour and success in the sight of God and man.

Do not think how wise you are, but fear the LORD and turn from evil.	7

Honour the LORD with your wealth as the first charge on all your earnings; then your granaries will be filled with corn ^a and your vats bursting with new wine.	9 10
My son, do not spurn the LORD's correction or take offence at his reproof; for those whom he loves the LORD reproves, and he punishes a favourite son.	11 12
Happy he who has found wisdom, and the man who has acquired understanding; for wisdom is more profitable than silver, and the gain she brings is better than gold.	13 14
She is more precious than red coral, and all your jewels are no match for her. Long life is in her right hand, in her left hand are riches and honour.	15 16
Her ways are pleasant ways and all her paths lead to prosperity. She is a staff of life to all who grasp her, and those who hold her fast are safe.	17 18
In wisdom the LORD founded the earth and by understanding he set the heavens in their place; by his knowledge the depths burst forth and the clouds dropped dew.	19 20
My son, keep watch over your ability and prudence, do not let them slip from sight; they shall be a charm hung about your neck and an ornament on your breast.	21 22
Then you will go your way without a care, and your feet will not stumble.	23

do not set foot on it, but avoid it; 15 turn aside and go on your way.
 For they cannot sleep unless they have done some wrong; 16 unless they have been someone's downfall they lose their sleep.
 The bread they eat is the fruit of crime 17
 and they drink wine got by violence.
 The course of the righteous is like morning light, 18 growing brighter till it is broad day;
 but the ways of the wicked are like darkness at night, 19
 and they do not know what has been their downfall.

My son, attend to my speech, 20
 pay heed to my words;
 do not let them slip out of your mind, 21
 keep them close in your heart;
 for they are life to him who finds them, 22
 and health to his whole body.
 Guard your heart more than any treasure, 23
 for it is the source of all life.
 Keep your mouth from crooked speech 24
 and your lips from deceitful talk.

 Look out for the path that your feet must take, 26
 and your ways will be secure.
 Swerve neither to right nor left, 27
 and keep clear of every evil thing.

My son, attend to my wisdom 5
 and listen to my good counsel, so that you may observe proper prudence 2
 and your speech be informed with knowledge.
 For though the lips of an adulteress drip honey 3
 and her tongue is smoother than oil, yet in the end she is more bitter than wormwood, 4
 and sharp as a two-edged sword.
 Her feet go downwards on the path to death, 5
 her course is set for Sheol.
 She does not watch for the road that leads to life; 6 her course turns this way and that, and what does she care? ^a

Now, my son, listen to me 7
 and do not ignore what I say:
 keep well away from her 8
 and do not go near the door of her house; or you will lose your dignity in the eyes of others 9
 and your honour before strangers;

^a what . . . care?: or she is restless.

- 10 strangers will batten on your wealth,
and your hard-won gains pass to another man's family.
- 11 The end will be that you will starve,
you will shrink to mere skin and bones.
- 12 Then you will say, 'Why did I hate correction and set my heart against reproof?
- 13 I did not listen to the voice of my teachers or pay attention to my masters.
- 14 I soon earned ^a a bad name
and was despised in the public assembly.'
- 15 Drink water from your own cistern
and running water from your own spring; 16 do not let your ^b well overflow into the road,
your runnels of water pour into the street;
17 let them be yours alone,
not shared with strangers.
- 18 Let your fountain, the wife of your youth,
be blessed, rejoice in her,
19 a lovely doe, a graceful hind, let her be your companion;
you will at all times be bathed in her love,
and her love will continually wrap you round.
Wherever you turn, she will guide you;
when you lie in bed, she will watch over you,
and when you wake she will talk with you. ^c
- 20 Why, my son, are you wrapped up in the love of an adulteress?
Why do you embrace a loose woman?
- 21 For a man's ways are always in the LORD's sight who watches for every path that he must take.
- 22 The wicked man is caught in his own iniquities
and held fast in the toils of his own sin; 23 he will perish for want of discipline,
wrapped in the shroud of his boundless folly.
- 6 My son, if you pledge yourself to another man and stand surety for a stranger, 2 if you are caught by your promise, trapped by some promise you have made,
3 do what I now tell you and save yourself, my son:
when you fall into another man's power,
bestir yourself, go and pester the man, 4 give yourself no rest,
allow yourself no sleep.
- 5 Save yourself like a gazelle from the toils,
like a bird from the grasp of the fowler.

Go to the ant, you sluggard, watch her ways and get wisdom.	6
She has no overseer, no governor or ruler;	7
but in summer she prepares her store of food and lays in her supplies at harvest.	8
How long, you sluggard, will you lie abed? When will you rouse yourself from sleep?	9
A little sleep, a little slumber, a little folding of the hands in rest, and poverty will come upon you like a robber, want like a ruffian.	10 11
A scoundrel, a mischievous man, is he who prowls about with crooked talk— a wink of the eye, a touch with the foot, a sign with the fingers.	12 13
Subversion is the evil that he is plotting, he stirs up quarrels all the time. Down comes disaster suddenly upon him; suddenly he is broken beyond all remedy.	14 15
Six things the LORD hates, seven things are detestable to him: a proud eye, a false tongue, hands that shed innocent blood, a heart that forges thoughts of mischief, and feet that run swiftly to do evil, a false witness telling a pack of lies, and one who stirs up quarrels between brothers.	16 17 18 19
My son, observe your father's commands and do not reject the teaching of your mother; wear them always next your heart and bind them close about your neck; for a command is a lamp, and teaching a light, reproof and correction point the way of life, to keep you from the wife of another man, from the seductive tongue of the loose woman. Do not desire her beauty in your heart or let her glance provoke you; for a prostitute can be had for the price of a loaf, but a married woman is out for bigger game.	20 21 23 ^a 24 25 26
Can a man kindle fire in his bosom without burning his clothes?	27

^a Verse 22 transposed to follow wrap you round in 5. 19.

28 If a man walks on hot coals, will his feet not be scorched?
29 So is he who sleeps with his neighbour's wife;
no one can touch such a woman and go free.
30 Is not a thief contemptible when he steals to satisfy his appetite, even if he is hungry?
31 And, if he is caught, must he not pay seven times over and surrender all that his house contains?
32 So one who commits adultery is a senseless fool:
he dishonours the woman and ruins himself;
33 he will get nothing but blows and contumely and will never live down the disgrace; 34 for a husband's anger is a jealous anger and in the day of vengeance he will show no mercy; 35 compensation will not buy his forgiveness;^a no bribe, however large, will purchase his connivance.

7 My son, keep my words,
store up my commands in your mind.
2 Keep my commands if you would live,
and treasure my teaching as the apple of your eye.
3 Wear them like a ring on your finger;
write them on the tablet of your memory.
4 Call Wisdom your sister, greet Understanding as a familiar friend;
5 then they will save you from the adulteress,
from the loose woman with her seductive words.

6 I glanced^b out of the window of my house,
I looked down through the lattice,
7 and I saw among simple youths, there amongst the boys I noticed a lad, a foolish lad,
8 passing along the street, at the corner, stepping out in the direction of her house 9 at twilight, as the day faded,
at dusk as the night grew dark;
10 suddenly a woman came to meet him,
dressed like a prostitute, full of wiles, 11 flighty and inconstant,
a woman never content to stay at home, 12 lying in wait at every corner,
now in the street, now in the public squares.
13 She caught hold of him and kissed him;
brazenly she accosted him and said, 14 'I have had a sacrifice, an offering, to make and I have paid my vows today;

Come! Let us drown ourselves in pleasure, let us spend a whole night of love; for the man of the house is away, he has gone on a long journey, he has taken a bag of silver with him; until the moon is full he will not be home. ⁷	18 19 20
Persuasively she led him on, she pressed him with seductive words.	21
Like a simple fool he followed her, like an ox on its way to the slaughter-house, like an antelope bounding into the noose, like a bird hurrying into the trap; he did not know that he was risking his life until the arrow pierced his vitals.	22 23
But now, my son, listen to me, attend to what I say.	24
Do not let your heart entice you into her ways, do not stray down her paths; many has she pierced and laid low, and her victims are without number.	25 26
Her house is the entrance to Sheol, which leads down to the halls of death.	27

Wisdom and folly contrasted

Hear how Wisdom lifts her voice and Understanding cries out.	8
She stands at the cross-roads, by the wayside, at the top of the hill; beside the gate, at the entrance to the city, at the entry by the open gate she calls aloud: 'Men, it is to you I call, I appeal to every man: understand, you simple fools, what it is to be shrewd; you stupid people, understand what sense means. Listen! For I will speak clearly, you will have plain speech from me; for I speak nothing but truth and my lips detest wicked talk.	2 3 4 5 6 7

- 8 All that I say is right,

- 9 All is straightforward to him who can understand,
all is plain to the man who has knowledge.
- 10 Accept instruction and not silver,

- 11 for wisdom is better than red coral,
no jewels can match her.
- 12 I am Wisdom, I bestow shrewdness
and show the way to knowledge and prudence.
- 13 ^a Pride, presumption, evil courses,
subversive talk, all these I hate.
- 14 I have force, I also have ability;
understanding and power are mine.
- 15 Through me kings are sovereign

long before the hills I was born,

- 27 When he set the heavens in their place I was there,

Then I was at his side each day, his darling and delight, playing in his presence continually, playing on the earth, when he had finished it, while my delight was in mankind.	30 31
'Now, my sons, listen to me, listen to instruction and grow wise, do not reject it. Happy is the man who keeps to my ways, happy the man who listens to me, watching daily at my threshold with his eyes on the doorway; for he who finds me finds life and wins favour with the LORD, while he who finds me not, hurts himself, and all who hate me are in love with death.'	32-33 34 35 36
Wisdom has built her house, she has hewn her seven pillars; she has killed a beast and spiced her wine, and she has spread her table. She has sent out her maidens to proclaim from the highest part of the town, 'Come in, you simpletons.' She says also to the fool, 'Come, dine with me and taste the wine that I have spiced. Cease to be silly, and you will live, you will grow in understanding.'	9 2 3 4 5 6

Lecture a wise man, and he will grow wiser; teach a righteous man, and his learning will increase.	7 8 9
The first step to wisdom is the fear of the LORD, and knowledge of the Holy One is understanding; for through me your days will be multiplied and years will be added to your life. Sayings of Agur son of Jakeh from Massa: ^a 30

This is the great man's very word: I am weary, O God,
 I am weary and worn out;
 I am a dumb brute, scarcely a man, 2
 without a man's powers of understanding;
 I have not learnt wisdom 3
 nor have I received knowledge from the Holy One.
 Who has ever gone up to heaven and come down again? 4
 Who has cupped the wind in the hollow of his hands?
 Who has bound up the waters in the fold of his garment?
 Who has fixed the boundaries of the earth?
 What is his name or his son's name, if you know it?

God's every promise has stood the test: 5
 he is a shield to all who seek refuge with him.
 Add nothing to his words, 6 or he will expose you for a liar.
 Two things I ask of thee; 7
 do not withhold them from me before I die.
 Put fraud and lying far from me; 8
 give me neither poverty nor wealth, provide me only with the food I need.
 If I have too much, I shall deny thee 9 and say, 'Who is the LORD?'
 If I am reduced to poverty, I shall steal and blacken the name of my God.

Never disparage a slave to his master, 10

There is a sort of people who defame their fathers 11

 how disdainful their glances!

The emptiness of all endeavour

- 1 THE WORDS OF THE SPEAKER, the son of David, king in Jerusalem.
- 2 Emptiness, emptiness, says the Speaker, emptiness, all is empty.
- 3 What does man gain from all his labour and his toil here under the sun?
- 4 Generations come and generations go, while the earth endures for ever.
- 5 The sun rises and the sun goes down; back it returns to its place ^b and 6 rises there again. The wind blows south, the wind blows north, round and 7 round it goes and returns full circle. All streams run into the sea, yet the sea never overflows; back to the place from which the streams ran they return to run again.

All things are wearisome;^a no man can speak of them all. Is not the eye surfeited with seeing, and the ear sated with hearing? What has happened will happen again, and what has been done will be done again, and there is nothing new under the sun. Is there anything of which one can say, 'Look, this is new'? No, it has already existed, long ago before our time. The men of old are not remembered, and those who follow will not be remembered by those who follow them.

I, the Speaker, ruled as king over Israel in Jerusalem; and in wisdom I applied my mind to study and explore all that is done under heaven. It is a sorry business that God has given men to busy themselves with. I have seen all the deeds that are done here under the sun; they are all emptiness and chasing the wind. What is crooked cannot become straight; what is not there cannot be counted. I said to myself, 'I have amassed great wisdom, more than all my predecessors on the throne in Jerusalem; I have become familiar with wisdom and knowledge.' So I applied my mind to understand wisdom and knowledge, madness and folly, and I came to see that this too is chasing the wind. For in much wisdom is much vexation, and the more a man knows, the more he has to suffer.

I said to myself, 'Come, I will plunge into pleasures and enjoy myself'; but this too was emptiness. Of laughter I said, 'It is madness!' And of pleasure, 'What is the good of that?' So I sought to stimulate myself with wine, in the hope of finding out what was good for men to do under heaven throughout the brief span of their lives. But my mind was guided by wisdom, not blinded by^b folly.

I undertook great works; I built myself houses and planted vineyards; I made myself gardens and parks and planted all kinds of fruit-trees in them; I made myself pools of water to irrigate a grove of growing trees; I bought slaves, male and female, and I had my home-born slaves as well; I had possessions, more cattle and flocks than any of my predecessors in Jerusalem; I amassed silver and gold also, the treasure of kings and provinces; I acquired singers, men and women, and all that man delights in.^c I was great, greater than all my predecessors in Jerusalem; and my wisdom stood me in good stead. Whatever my eyes coveted, I refused them nothing, nor did I deny myself any pleasure. Yes indeed, I got pleasure from all my labour, and for all my labour this was my reward. Then I turned and reviewed all my handiwork, all my labour and toil, and I saw that everything was emptiness and chasing the wind, of no profit under the sun.

I set myself to look at wisdom and at madness and folly.^d Then I perceived that wisdom is more profitable than folly, as light is more profitable than darkness: the wise man has eyes in his head, but the fool walks in the dark. Yet I saw also that one and the same fate overtakes them both. So I said to myself, 'I too shall suffer the fate of the fool. To what purpose have I been wise? What^e is the profit of it? Even this', I said to myself, 'is

16 emptiness. The wise man is remembered no longer than the fool, for, as 17 the passing days multiply,^a all will be forgotten. Alas, wise man and fool 18 die the same death!' So I came to hate life, since everything that was done 19 here under the sun was a trouble to me; for all is emptiness and chasing the 20 wind. So I came to hate all my labour and toil here under the sun, since I 21 should have to leave its fruits to my successor. What sort of a man will he 22 be who succeeds me, who inherits what others have acquired?^b Who knows 23 whether he will be a wise man or a fool? Yet he will be master of all the 24 fruits of my labour and skill here under the sun. This too is emptiness.

25 Then I turned and gave myself up to despair, reflecting upon all my 26 labour and toil here under the sun. For anyone who toils with wisdom, 27 knowledge, and skill must leave it all to a man who has spent no labour on 28 it. This too is emptiness and utterly wrong. What reward has a man for all 29 his labour, his scheming, and his toil here under the sun? All his life long 30 his business is pain and vexation to him; even at night his mind knows no 31 rest. This too is emptiness. There is nothing better for a man to do than to 32 eat and drink and enjoy himself in return for his labours. And yet I saw 33 that this comes from the hand of God. For without him who can enjoy his 34 food, or who can be anxious? God gives wisdom and knowledge and joy 35 to the man who pleases him, while to the sinner is given the trouble of 36 gathering and amassing wealth only to hand it over to someone else who 37 pleases God. This too is emptiness and chasing the wind.

3 FOR EVERYTHING ITS SEASON, and for every activity under heaven its time:

- 2 a time to be born and a time to die;
- 3 a time to plant and a time to uproot;
- 4 a time to kill and a time to heal;
- 5 a time to pull down and a time to build up;
- 6 a time to weep and a time to laugh;
- 7 a time for mourning and a time for dancing;
- 8 a time to scatter stones and a time to gather them;
- 9 a time to embrace and a time to refrain from embracing;
- 10 a time to seek and a time to lose;
- 11 a time to keep and a time to throw away;
- 12 a time to tear and a time to mend;
- 13 a time for silence and a time for speech;
- 14 a time to love and a time to hate;
- 15 a time for war and a time for peace.

9 10 What profit does one who works get from all his labour? I have seen 11 the business that God has given men to keep them busy. He has made 12 everything to suit its time; moreover he has given men a sense of time past 13 and future, but no comprehension of God's work from beginning to end.
 14 I know that there is nothing good for man^c except to be happy and live 15 the best life he can while he is alive. Moreover, that a man should eat and drink and enjoy himself, in return for all his labours, is a gift of God. I know that whatever God does lasts for ever; to add to it or subtract from it is impossible. And he has done it all in such a way that men must feel awe in his presence. Whatever is has been already,^a and whatever is to come has been already, and God summons each event back in its turn. Moreover I saw here under the sun that, where justice ought to be, there was wickedness, and where righteousness ought to be, there was wickedness. I said to myself, 'God will judge the just man and the wicked equally; every activity and^b every purpose has its proper time.' I said to myself, 'In dealing with men it is God's purpose^c to test them and to see what they truly are.'^d For man is a creature of chance and the beasts are creatures of chance, and one mischance awaits them all: death comes to both alike. They all draw the same breath. Men have no advantage over beasts; for everything is emptiness. All go to the same place: all came from the dust, and to the dust all return. Who knows whether the spirit^e of man goes upward or whether the spirit^e of the beast goes downward to the earth?' So I saw that there is nothing better than that a man should enjoy his work, since that is his lot. For who can bring him through to see what will happen next?

Again, I considered all the acts of oppression here under the sun; I saw the tears of the oppressed, and I saw that there was no one to comfort them. Strength was on the side of their oppressors, and there was no one to avenge them. I counted the dead happy because they were dead, happier than the living who are still in life. More fortunate than either I reckoned the man yet unborn, who had not witnessed the wicked deeds done here under the sun. I considered all toil and all achievement and saw that it comes from rivalry between man and man. This too is emptiness and chasing the wind. The fool folds his arms and wastes away. Better one hand full and peace of mind, than both fists full and toil that is chasing the wind.

Here again, I saw emptiness under the sun: a lonely man without a friend, without son or brother, toiling endlessly yet never satisfied with his wealth—'For whom', he asks, 'am I toiling and denying myself the good things of life?' This too is emptiness, a sorry business. Two are better than one; they receive a good reward for their toil, because, if one falls, the other^f can help his companion up again; but alas for the man who falls alone with no partner to help him up. And, if two lie side by side, they keep each other warm; but how can one keep warm by himself? If a man is alone, an assailant may overpower him, but two can resist; and a cord of three strands is not quickly snapped.

Better a young man poor and wise than a king old and foolish who will listen to advice no longer. A man who leaves prison may well come to be king, though born a pauper in his future kingdom. But I have studied all life here under the sun, and I saw his place taken by yet another young man, and no limit set to the number of the subjects whose master he became. And he in turn will be no hero to those who come after him. This too is emptiness and chasing the wind.

- 5 Go carefully when you visit the house of God. Better draw near in 2 obedience than offer the sacrifice of fools, who sin without a thought. Do not rush into speech, let there be no hasty utterance in God's presence.
 3 God is in heaven, you are on earth; so let your words be few. The sensible man has much business on his hands; the fool talks and it is so much chatter.
 4 When you make a vow to God, do not be slow to pay it, for he has no use for 5 fools; pay whatever you vow. Better not vow at all than vow and fail to pay.
 6 Do not let your tongue lead you into sin, and then say before the angel of God that it was a mistake; or God will be angry at your words, and all your 7 achievements will be brought to nothing.^a You must fear God.
- 8 If you witness in some province the oppression of the poor and the denial of right and justice, do not be surprised at what goes on, for every official has a higher one set over him, and the highest^b keeps watch over 9 them all. The best thing for a country is a king whose^c own lands are well tilled.
- 10 The man who loves money can never have enough, and the man who is in love with great wealth enjoys no return from it. This too is emptiness.
 11 When riches multiply, so do those who live off them; and what advantage 12 has the owner, except to look at them? Sweet is the sleep of the labourer whether he eats little or much; but the rich man owns too much and cannot 13 sleep. There is a singular evil here under the sun which I have seen: a man 14 hoards wealth to his own hurt, and then that wealth is lost through an 15 unlucky venture, and the owner's son left with nothing. As he came from the womb of mother earth, so must he return, naked as he came; all his 16 toil produces nothing which he can take away with him. This too is a singular evil: exactly as he came, so shall he go, and what profit does he 17 get when his labour is all for the wind? What is more, all his days are overshadowed; gnawing anxiety and great vexation are his lot, sickness^d and 18 resentment. What I have seen is this: that it is good and proper for a man to eat and drink and enjoy himself in return for his labours here under the 19 sun, throughout the brief span of life which God has allotted him. Moreover, it is a gift of God that every man to whom he has granted wealth and riches and the power to enjoy them should accept his lot and rejoice in his 20 labour. He will not dwell overmuch upon the passing years; for God fills his^e time with joy of heart.
- 6 Here is an evil under the sun which I have seen, and it weighs heavy 2 upon men. Consider the man to whom God grants wealth, riches, and substance,^f and who lacks nothing that he has set his heart on: if God has not given him the power to enjoy these things, but a stranger enjoys them 3 instead, that is emptiness and a grave disorder. A man may have a hundred children and live a long life; but however many his days may be, if he does not get satisfaction from the good things of life and in the end receives no 4 burial, then I maintain that the still-born child is in better case than he. Its coming is an empty thing, it departs into darkness, and in darkness its name is hidden; it has never seen the sun or known anything,^a yet its state is better than his. What if a man should live a thousand years twice over, and never prosper? Do not both go to one place?

The end of all man's toil is but to fill his belly, yet his appetite is never satisfied. What advantage then in facing life has the wise man over the fool, or the poor man for all his experience? It is better to be satisfied with what is before your eyes than give rein to desire; this too is emptiness and chasing the wind. Whatever has already existed has been given a name, its nature is known; a man cannot contend with what is stronger than he. The more words one uses the greater is the emptiness of it all; and where is the advantage to a man? For who can know what is good for a man in this life, this brief span of empty existence through which he passes like a shadow?
 Who can tell a man what is to happen next here under the sun?

Wisdom and folly compared

A GOOD NAME SMELLS SWEETER than the finest ointment, and the day of death is better than the day of birth. Better to visit the house of mourning than the house of feasting; for to be mourned is the lot of every man, and the living should take this to heart. Grief is better than laughter:
 a sad face may go with a cheerful heart. Wise men's thoughts are at home in the house of mourning, but a fool's thoughts in the house of mirth. It is better to listen to a wise man's rebuke than to the praise of fools. For the laughter of a fool is like the crackling of thorns under a pot. This too is emptiness. Slander drives a wise man crazy and breaks a strong man's^b spirit. Better the end of anything than its beginning; better patience than pride. Do not be quick to show resentment; for resentment is nursed by fools. Do not ask why the old days were better than these; for that is a foolish question. Wisdom is better than possessions and an advantage to all who see the sun. Better have wisdom behind you than money; wisdom profits men by giving life to those who know her.

Consider God's handiwork; who can straighten what he has made crooked? When things go well, be glad; but when things go ill, consider this: God has set the one alongside the other in such a way that no one can find out what is to happen next.^c In my empty existence I have seen it all, from a righteous man perishing in his righteousness to a wicked man growing old in his wickedness. Do not be over-righteous and do not be over-wise. Why make yourself a laughing-stock? Do not be over-wicked and do not be a fool. Why should you die before your time? It is good to hold on to the one thing and not lose hold of the other; for a man who fears God will succeed both ways. Wisdom makes the wise man stronger than the ten rulers of a city. The world contains no man so righteous that he can do right always and never do wrong.^d Moreover, do not pay attention to everything men say, or you may hear your servant disparage you; for you

^a Or it. ^b strong man's: prob. rdg.; Heb. obscure. ^c find out . . . next: or hold him responsible. ^d can do . . . wrong; or prospers without ever making a mistake.

23 know very well how many times you yourself have disparaged others. All 24 this I have put to the test of wisdom. I said, 'I am resolved to be wise', but wisdom was beyond my grasp—whatever has happened lies beyond our grasp, deep down, deeper than man can fathom.

25 I went on to reflect, I set my mind^a to inquire and search for wisdom and for the reason in things, only to discover that it is folly to be wicked and 26 madness to act like a fool. The wiles of a woman I find mightier^b than death; her heart is a trap to catch you and her arms are fetters. The man 27 who is pleasing to God may escape her, but she will catch a sinner. 'See,' says the Speaker, 'this is what I have found, reasoning things out one by 28 one, after searching long without success: I have found one man in a thousand worth the name, but I have not found one woman among them 29 all. This alone I have found, that God, when he made man, made him straightforward, but man invents endless subtleties of his own.'

8 Who is wise enough for all this? Who knows the meaning of anything?
 2 Wisdom lights up a man's face, but grim looks make a man hated.^c Do as the king commands you, and if you have to swear by God, do not be 3 precipitate. Leave the king's presence and do not persist in a thing which 4 displeases him; he does what he chooses. For the king's word carries 5 authority. Who can question what he does? Whoever obeys a command will come to no harm. A wise man knows in his heart the right time and 6 method for action. There is a time and a method for every enterprise, 7 although man is greatly troubled by ignorance of the future; who can tell 8 him what it will bring? It is not in man's power to restrain the wind,^d and no one has power over the day of death. In war no one can lay aside 9 his arms, no wealth will save its possessor. All this I have seen, having applied my mind to everything done under the sun. There was a time when 10 one man had power over another and could make him suffer. It was then that I saw wicked men approaching and even entering^e the holy place; and they went about the city priding themselves on having done right. This 11 too is emptiness. It is because sentence upon a wicked act is not promptly 12 carried out that men do evil so boldly. A sinner may do wrong^f and live to old age, yet I know that it will be well with those who fear God: their fear 13 of him ensures this, but it will not be well with a wicked man nor will he 14 live long; the man who does not fear God is a mere shadow. There is an empty thing found on earth: when the just man gets what is due to the unjust, and the unjust what is due to the just. I maintain that this too is 15 emptiness. So I commend enjoyment, since there is nothing good for a man to do here under the sun but to eat and drink and enjoy himself; this is all that will remain with him to reward his toil throughout the span of 16 life which God grants him here under the sun. I applied my mind to acquire wisdom and to observe the business which goes on upon earth, when man never closes an eye in sleep day or night; and always I perceived that God 17 has so ordered it that man should not be able to discover what is happening here under the sun. However hard a man may try, he will not find out; the wise man may think that he knows, but he will be unable to find the truth of it.

I applied my mind to all this, and I understood that the righteous and the wise and all their doings are under God's control; but is it love or hatred? No man knows. Everything that confronts him, everything is empty, since one and the same fate befalls every one, just and unjust alike, good and bad, clean and unclean, the man who offers sacrifice and the man who does not. Good man and sinner fare alike, the man who can take an oath and the man who dares not. This is what is wrong in all that is done here under the sun: that one and the same fate befalls every man. The hearts of men are full of evil; madness fills their hearts all through their lives, and after that they go down to join the dead. But for a man who is counted among the living there is still hope: remember, a live dog is better than a dead lion. True, the living know that they will die; but the dead know nothing. There are no more rewards for them; they are utterly forgotten. For them love, hate, ambition,^a all are now over. Never again will they have any part in what is done here under the sun.

Go to it then, eat your food and enjoy it, and drink your wine with a cheerful heart; for already God has accepted what you have done. Always be dressed in white and never fail to anoint your head. Enjoy life with a woman you love all the days of your allotted span here under the sun, empty as they are;^b for that is your lot while you live and labour here under the sun. Whatever task lies to your hand, do it with all your might; because in Sheol, for which you are bound, there is neither doing nor thinking, neither understanding nor wisdom. One more thing I have observed here under the sun: speed does not win the race nor strength the battle. Bread does not belong to the wise, nor wealth to the intelligent, nor success to the skilful; time and chance govern all. Moreover, no man knows when his hour will come; like fish caught in a net, like a bird taken in a snare, so men are trapped when bad times come suddenly.

This too is an example of wisdom as I have observed it here under the sun, and notable I find it. There was a small town with few inhabitants, and a great king came to attack it; he besieged it and constructed great siege-works against it. There was in it a poor wise man, and he alone might have saved the town by his wisdom, but no one remembered that poor wise man. 'Surely', I said to myself, 'wisdom is better than strength.' But the poor man's wisdom was despised, and his words went unheeded. A wise man who speaks his mind calmly is more to be heeded than a commander shouting orders among fools. Wisdom is better than weapons of war, and one mistake can undo many things done well.

Dead flies make the perfumer's sweet ointment turn rancid and ferment; so can a little folly make wisdom lose its worth. The mind of the wise man faces right, but the mind of the fool faces left. Even when he walks along the road, the fool shows no sense and calls everyone else^c a fool. If your ruler breaks out in anger against you, do not resign your post; submission makes amends for great mistakes. There is an evil that I have observed

^a Or passion.

^b Prob. rdg. ; Heb. adds all your days, empty as they are.

^c calls everyone else: or tells everyone he is.

6 here under the sun, an error for which a ruler is responsible: the fool given
 7 high office, but ^a the great and the rich in humble posts. I have seen slaves 8 on horseback and men of high rank going on foot like slaves. The man who 9 digs a pit may fall into it, and he who pulls down a wall may be bitten by a 10 snake. The man who quarries stones may strain himself, and the wood-11 cutter runs a risk of injury. When the axe is blunt and has not first ^b been sharpened, then one must use more force; the wise man has a better chance of success. If a snake bites before it is charmed, the snake-charmer loses his fee.

12 A wise man's words win him favour, but a fool's tongue is his undoing.
 13 14 He begins by talking nonsense and ends in mischief run mad. The fool talks on and on; but no man knows what is coming, and who can tell him 15 what will come after that? The fool wearies himself to death ^c with all his labour, for he does not know the way to town.

16 Woe betide the land when a slave has become its king, and its princes 17 feast in the morning. Happy the land when its king is nobly born, and its princes feast at the right time of day, with self-control, and not as drunkards.
 18 If the owner is negligent the rafters collapse, and if he is idle the house
 19 crumbles away. The table has its pleasures, and wine makes a cheerful 20 life; and money is behind it all. Do not speak ill of the king in your ease, or of a rich man in your bedroom; for a bird may carry your voice, and a winged messenger may repeat what you say.

1 2 Send your grain across the seas, and in time you will get a return. Divide your merchandise among seven ventures, eight maybe, since you do not 3 know what disasters may occur on earth. ^d If the clouds are heavy with rain, they will discharge it on the earth; whether a tree falls south or north, it 4 must lie as it falls. He who watches the wind will never sow, and he who 5 keeps an eye on the clouds will never reap. You do not know how a pregnant woman comes to have a body and a living spirit in her womb; nor do you 6 know how God, the maker of all things, works. In the morning sow your seed betimes, and do not stop work until evening, for you do not know whether this or that sowing will be successful, or whether both alike will do well.

Advice to a young man

7 THE LIGHT OF DAY IS SWEET, and pleasant to the eye is the sight 8 of the sun; if a man lives for many years, he should rejoice in all of them. But let him remember that the days of darkness will be many.
 9 Everything that is to come will be emptiness. Delight in your boyhood, young man, make the most of the days of your youth; let your heart and your eyes show you the way; but remember that for all these things 10 God will call you to account. Banish discontent from your mind, and shake off the troubles of the body; boyhood and the prime of life are mere emptiness.

^a but: prob. rdg.; Heb. om.

^d Or on land.

^c fool . . . death:

Remember your Creator in the days of your youth, before the time of trouble comes and the years draw near when you will say, 'I see no purpose in them.'^a Remember him before the sun and the light of day give place to darkness, before the moon and the stars grow dim, and the clouds return with the rain—when the guardians of the house tremble, and the strong men stoop, when the women grinding the meal cease work because they are few, and those who look through the windows look no longer, when the street-doors are shut, when the noise of the mill is low, when the chirping of the sparrow grows faint^b and the song-birds fall silent;^c when men are afraid of a steep place and the street is full of terrors, when the blossom whitens on the almond-tree and the locust's paunch is swollen and caper-buds have no more zest. For man goes to his everlasting home, and the mourners go about the streets. Remember him before the silver cord is snapped^d and the golden bowl is broken, before the pitcher is shattered at the spring and the wheel broken at the well, before the dust returns to the earth as it began and the spirit^e returns to God who gave it. Emptiness, emptiness, says the Speaker, all is empty.

So the Speaker, in his wisdom, continued to teach the people what he knew. He turned over many maxims in his mind and sought how best to set them out. He chose his words to give pleasure, but what he wrote was the honest truth. The sayings of the wise are sharp as goads, like nails driven home; they lead the assembled people, for they come from one shepherd. One further warning, my son: the use of books is endless, and much study is wearisome.

This is the end of the matter: you have heard it all. Fear God and obey his commands; there is no more to man than this. For God brings everything we do to judgement, and every secret, whether good or bad.

THE SONG OF SONGS

Bride^f

I will sing the song of all songs to Solomon that he may^g smother me with kisses.

Your love is more fragrant than wine,
fragrant is^h the scent of your perfume,

Let us rejoice and be glad for you;
 let us praise your love more than wine,
 and your caresses more than any song.

Bride

- 5 I am dark but lovely, daughters of Jerusalem, like the tents of Kedar
 or the tent-curtains of Shalmah.
- 6 Do not look down on me; a little dark I may be because I am scorched by the sun.
 My mother's sons were displeased with me,
 they sent me to watch over the vineyards;
 so I did not watch over my own vineyard.
- 7 Tell me, my true love,
 where you mind your flocks,
 where you rest them at midday,
 that I may not be left picking lice
 as I sit among your companions' herds.

Bridegroom

- 8 If you yourself do not know,
 O fairest of women,
 go, follow the tracks of the sheep and mind your kids by the shepherds' huts.
- 9 I would compare you, my dearest,
 to Pharaoh's chariot-horses.
- 10 Your cheeks are lovely between plaited tresses,
 your neck with its jewelled chains.

Companions

- 11 We will make you braided plaits of gold
 set with beads of silver.

Bride

- 12 While the king reclines on his couch,
 my spikenard gives forth its scent.

 as he lies on my breast,

 from the vineyards of En-gedi.

 O how beautiful,
 your eyes are like doves!

Our couch is shaded with branches;
the beams of our house are of cedar,
our ceilings are all of fir. 17

I am an asphodel in Sharon,
a lily growing in the valley. 2

No, a lily among thorns is my dearest among girls. 2

Bride

Like an apricot-tree among the trees of the wood,
so is my beloved among boys. 3

To sit in its shadow was my delight,
and its fruit was sweet to my taste.

He took me into the wine-garden and gave me loving glances. 4

He refreshed me with raisins, he revived me with apricots;
for I was faint with love. 5

His left arm was under my head, his right arm was round me. 6

bounding over the mountains, leaping over the hills. 8

My beloved is like a gazelle

13 when the green figs will ripen on the fig-trees and the vines ^a give forth their fragrance.
Rise up, my darling;

or in crannies on the high ledges, let me see your face, let me hear your voice;
for your voice is pleasant, your face is lovely.

I have sought my true love;
I have sought him but not found him,
I have called him but he has not answered.
2 I said, 'I will rise and go the rounds of the city,

I sought him but I did not find him,

3 The watchmen, going the rounds of the city, met me, and I asked, 'Have you seen my true love?'

when I met my true love.

What is this coming up from the wilderness 6
like a column of smoke
from burning myrrh or frankincense,
from all the powdered spices that merchants bring?
Look; it is Solomon carried in his litter; 7 sixty of Israel's chosen warriors are his escort,
all of them skilled swordsmen, 8
all trained to handle arms,
each with his sword ready at his side
to ward off the demon of the night.

The palanquin which King Solomon had made for himself 9
was of wood from Lebanon.
Its poles he had made of silver, 10
its head-rest of gold;
its seat was of purple stuff,
and its lining was of leather.
Come out, daughters of Jerusalem; 11
you daughters of Zion, come out and welcome King Solomon, wearing the crown with which his mother has crowned him,
on his wedding day, on his day of joy.

Bridegroom

How beautiful you are, my dearest, how beautiful! 4
Your eyes behind your veil are like doves, your hair like a flock of goats streaming down Mount Gilead.
Your teeth are like a flock of ewes just shorn 2
which have come up fresh from the dipping;
each ewe has twins and none has cast a lamb.
Your lips are like a scarlet thread, 3
and your words are delightful; ^c
your parted lips behind your veil
are like a pomegranate cut open.

- 8 Come from Lebanon, my bride;
come with me from Lebanon.
Hurry down from the top of Amana,
from Senir's top and Hermon's,
from the lions' lairs, and the hills the leopards haunt.
- 9 You have stolen my heart,^b my sister,
you have stolen it,^c my bride,
with one of your eyes, with one jewel of your necklace.
- 10 How beautiful are your breasts, my sister, my bride!
Your love is more fragrant than wine,

syrup and milk are under your tongue,
and your dress has the scent of Lebanon.

Bride

Bride

I sleep but my heart is awake. 2
Listen! My beloved is knocking:

'Open to me, my sister, my dearest,
my dove, my perfect one;
for my head is drenched with dew,
my locks with the moisture of the night.'

'I have stripped off my dress; must I put it on again? 3
I have washed my feet; must I soil them again?'

When my beloved slipped his hand through the latch-hole, 4 my bowels stirred within me.

When I arose to open for my beloved, 5
my hands dripped with myrrh;
the liquid myrrh from my fingers ran over the knobs of the bolt.

With my own hands I opened to my love, 6
but my love had turned away and gone by;
my heart sank when he turned his back.

I sought him but I did not find him,
I called him but he did not answer.

The watchmen, going the rounds of the city, met me; 7
they struck me and wounded me;

the watchmen on the walls took away my cloak. 8

His head is gold, finest gold; 11 his locks are like palm-fronds. ^b

^b Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds black as

15 His legs are pillars of marble in sockets of finest gold;
his aspect is like Lebanon, noble as cedars.
16 His whispers are^a sweetness itself, wholly desirable.
Such is my beloved, such is my darling, daughters of Jerusalem.

Companions

- 6 Where has your beloved gone,
O fairest of women?
Which way did your beloved go,
that we may help you to seek him?

Bride

- 2 My beloved has gone down to his garden,
to the beds where balsam grows,
to delight in the garden^b and to pick the lilies.
3 I am my beloved's, and my beloved is mine,
he who delights in the lilies.

Bridegroom

- 4 You are beautiful, my dearest, as Tirzah, lovely as Jerusalem.^c 5 Turn your eyes away from me;
they dazzle me.
6 Your hair is like a flock of goats streaming down Mount Gilead;
your teeth are like a flock of ewes come up fresh from the dipping,
each ewe has twins and none has cast a lamb.
7 Your parted lips behind your veil
are like a pomegranate cut open.
8 There may be sixty princesses, eighty concubines, and young women past counting, 9 but there is one alone, my dove, my perfect one,
her mother's only child,
devoted to the mother who bore her;
young girls see her and call her happy,
princesses and concubines praise her.
10 Who is this that looks out like the dawn, beautiful as the moon, bright as the sun,
majestic as the starry heavens?

How you love to gaze on the Shulammitte maiden,
 as she moves between the lines of dancers!

How beautiful are your sandalled feet, O prince's daughter! 7

The curves of your thighs are like jewels,

Your belly is a heap of wheat

Your neck is like a tower of ivory. 4

Your eyes are the pools in Heshbon,

Your nose is like towering Lebanon

You carry your head like Carmel; 5
 the flowing hair on your head is lustrous black,

your tresses are braided with ribbons.
 How beautiful, how entrancing you are, 6

You are stately as a palm-tree, 7
 and your breasts are the clusters of dates.

I said, 'I will climb up into the palm 8
 to grasp its fronds.'

May I find your breasts like clusters of grapes on the vine,
 the scent of your breath like apricots,

and your whispers like spiced wine 9 flowing smoothly to welcome my caresses, gliding down through lips and teeth.

Bride

I am my beloved's, his longing is all for me. 10

There will I give you my love, and all rare fruits are ready at our door, fruits new and old

which I have in store for you, my love.
- 8 If only you were my own true brother that sucked my mother's breasts!
Then, if I found you outside, I would kiss you,
and no man would despise me.

bring you to her house for you to embrace me;^a
I would give you mulled wine to drink

Companions

Bridegroom

- Under the apricot-trees I roused you,
there where your mother was in labour with you,
there where she who bore you was in labour.
6 Wear me as a seal upon your heart,
as a seal upon your arm;
for love is strong as death,
passion cruel as the grave;
it blazes up like blazing fire,
fiercer than any flame.
7 Many waters cannot quench love:
no flood can sweep it away;
if a man were to offer for love

it would be utterly scorned.

THE BOOK OF THE PROPHET ISAIAH

Judah arraigned

1 THE VISION RECEIVED BY ISAIAH son of Amoz concerning Judah and Jerusalem during the reigns of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah.

- 2 Hark you heavens, and earth give ear,
 for the LORD has spoken:
 I have sons whom I reared and brought up,
 but they have rebelled against me.
- 3 The ox knows its owner
 and the ass its master's stall;
 but Israel, my own people,
 has no knowledge, no discernment.
- 4 O sinful nation, people loaded with iniquity, race of evildoers, wanton destructive children who have deserted the LORD, spurned the Holy One of Israel and turned your backs on him.
- 5 Where can you still be struck
 if you will be disloyal still?
 Your head is covered with sores,
 your body diseased;
- 6 from head to foot there is not a sound spot in you—nothing but bruises and weals and raw wounds which have not felt compress or bandage or soothing oil.
- 7 Your country is desolate, your cities lie in ashes.
 Strangers devour your land before your eyes;
 it is desolate as Sodom^a in its overthrow.
- 8 Only Zion is left,
 like a watchman's shelter in a vineyard,
 a shed in a field of cucumbers,
 a city well guarded.
- 9 If the LORD of Hosts had not left us a remnant,
 we should soon have been like Sodom,
 no better than Gomorrah.

^a Sodom: prob. rdg.; Heb. strangers.

Hear the word of the LORD, you rulers of Sodom; attend, you people of Gomorrah, to the instruction of our God:	10
Your countless sacrifices, what are they to me? says the LORD.	11
I am sated with whole-offerings of rams and the fat of buffaloes; I have no desire for the blood of bulls, of sheep and of he-goats.
Whenever you come to enter my presence— who asked you for this?	12-13
No more shall you trample my courts. The offer of your gifts is useless, the reek of sacrifice is abhorrent to me. New moons and sabbaths and assemblies, sacred seasons and ceremonies, I cannot endure.
I cannot tolerate your new moons and your festivals; they have become a burden to me, and I can put up with them no longer.	14
When you lift your hands outspread in prayer, I will hide my eyes from you. Though you offer countless prayers, I will not listen.	15
There is blood on your hands; wash yourselves and be clean. Put away the evil of your deeds, away out of my sight.	16
Cease to do evil and learn to do right, pursue justice and champion the oppressed; give the orphan his rights, plead the widow's cause.	17
Come now, let us argue it out, says the LORD.	18
Though your sins are scarlet, they may become white as snow; though they are dyed crimson, they may yet be like wool. Obey with a will, and you shall eat the best that earth yields; but, if you refuse and rebel, locust-beans shall be your only food. ^a	19 20
The LORD himself has spoken.
How the faithful city has played the whore, once the home of justice where righteousness dwelt— but now murderers!	21
Your silver has turned into base metal and your liquor is diluted with water.	22

^a locust-beans . . . food: or, with Scroll, you shall be eaten by the sword.

- 23 Your very rulers are rebels, confederate with thieves;
 every man of them loves a bribe
 and itches for a gift;
 they do not give the orphan his rights,
 and the widow's cause never comes before them.
- 24 This therefore is the word of the Lord, the LORD of Hosts, the Mighty
 One of Israel:
- Enough! I will secure a respite from my foes and take vengeance on my enemies.
- 25 Once again I will act against you to refine away your base metal as with potash and purge all your impurities;
- 26 I will again make your judges what once they were
 and your counsellors like those of old.
 Then at length you shall be called the home of righteousness, the faithful city.
- 27 Justice shall redeem Zion
 and righteousness her repentant people.
- 28 Rebels and sinners shall be broken together and those who forsake the LORD shall cease to be.
- 29 For the sacred oaks in which you delighted shall fail you,
 the garden-shrines of your fancy shall disappoint you.
- 30 You shall be like a terebinth whose leaves have withered,
 like a garden without water;
- 31 the strongest tree^a shall become like tow,
 and what is made of it^b shall go up in sparks,
 and the two shall burst into flames together with no one to quench them.
- 2 This is the word which Isaiah son of Amoz received in a vision concerning Judah and Jerusalem.
- 2^c In days to come the mountain of the LORD's house shall be set over all other mountains, lifted high above the hills.
- 3 All the nations shall come streaming to it,
 and many peoples shall come and say,
 'Come, let us climb up on to the mountain of the LORD,
 to the house of the God of Jacob,
 that he may teach us his ways
 and we may walk in his paths.'
- For instruction issues from Zion,
 and out of Jerusalem comes the word of the LORD;
 4 he will be judge between nations, arbiter among many peoples.

^a Or the strong man. ^b Or what he makes.

^c Verses 2-4: cp. Mic. 4. 1-3.

They shall beat their swords into mattocks and their spears into pruning-knives; ^a nation shall not lift sword against nation
 nor ever again be trained for war.

O people of Jacob, come, 5
 let us walk in the light of the LORD.
 Thou hast abandoned thy people the house of Jacob; 6
 for they are crowded with traders ^b and barbarians like the Philistines, and with the children of foreigners everywhere.
 Their land is filled with silver and gold, 7
 and there is no end to their treasure;
 their land is filled with horses,
 and there is no end to their chariots; 8
 their land is filled with idols, and they bow down to the work of their own hands,
 to what their fingers have made.
 Mankind shall be brought low, 9
 all men shall be humbled;
 and how can they raise themselves? ^c Get you into the rocks and hide yourselves in the ground 10 from the dread of the LORD and the splendour of his majesty.
 Man's proud eyes shall be humbled, 11
 the loftiness of men brought low,
 and the LORD alone shall be exalted
 on that day.

For the LORD of Hosts has a day of doom waiting 12
 for all that is proud and lofty,
 for all that is high and lifted up,
 for all the cedars of Lebanon, lofty and high, 13
 and for all the oaks of Bashan, for all lofty mountains and for all high hills, 14
 for every high tower and for every sheer wall, 15 for all ships of Tarshish and all the dhows of Arabia. 16
 Then man's pride shall be brought low, 17
 and the loftiness of man shall be humbled,
 and the LORD alone shall be exalted
 on that day,
 while the idols shall pass away utterly. 18 Get you into caves in the rocks 19 and crevices in the ground
 from the dread of the LORD and the splendour of his majesty,
 when he rises to inspire the earth with fear.
 On that day a man shall fling away 20

^a They shall beat . . . pruning-knives: cp. Joel 3. 9-12.

^c Prob. rdg.; Heb. and do not forgive them.

^b Or hawkers.

- his idols of silver and his idols of gold which he has made for himself to worship;
 he shall fling them to the dung-beetles and the bats, 21 and creep into clefts in the rocks and crannies in the cliffs from the dread of the LORD and the splendour of his majesty,
 when he rises to inspire the earth with fear.
- 22 Have no more to do with man, for what is he worth?
 He is no more than the breath in his nostrils.
- 3 Be warned: the Lord, the LORD of Hosts, is stripping Jerusalem and Judah of every prop and stay,^a 2 warrior and soldier,
 judge and prophet, diviner and elder,
 3 captains of companies and men of rank, counsellor, magician, and cunning enchanter.
- 4 Then I will appoint mere boys to be their captains,
 who shall govern as the fancy takes them;
 5 the people shall deal harshly
 each man with his fellow and with his neighbour;
 children shall break out against their elders,
 and nobodies against men of substance.
- 6 If a man takes hold of his brother in his father's house, saying, 'You have a cloak, you shall be our chief;
 our stricken family shall be under you',
 7 he will cry out that day and say,
 'I will not be your master;
 there is neither bread nor cloak in my house,
 and you shall not make me head of the clan.'
- 8 Jerusalem is stricken and Judah fallen because they have spoken and acted against the LORD, rebelling against the glance of his glorious eye.
- 9 The look on their faces testifies against them;
 like Sodom they proclaim their sins and do not conceal them.^b
- Woe upon them! they have earned their own disaster.
- 10 Happy^c the righteous man! all goes well with him,
 for such men enjoy the fruit of their actions.
- 11 Woe betide the wicked! with him all goes ill,
 for he reaps the reward that he has earned.
- 12 Money-lenders strip my people bare,
 and usurers lord it over them.
 O my people! your guides lead you astray and confuse the path that you should take.

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds all stay of bread and all stay of water. ^b like . . . them:
 or and their sins, like those of Sodom, denounce them; they do not deny them. ^c Prob.

- The LORD comes forward to argue his case and stands to judge his people. 13
- The LORD opens the indictment against the elders of his people and their officers: 14
- You have ravaged the vineyard,
and the spoils of the poor are in your houses.
- Is it nothing to you that you crush my people and grind the faces of the poor? 15
- This is the very word of the Lord, the LORD of Hosts.
- Then the LORD said: 16
- Because the women of Zion hold themselves high and walk with necks outstretched and wanton glances, moving with mincing gait
and jingling feet,
the Lord will give the women of Zion bald heads, 17
the LORD will strip the hair from their foreheads.
- In that day the Lord will take away all finery: anklets, discs, crescents, 18
pendants, bangles, coronets, head-bands, armlets, necklaces, lockets, 19 20 charms, signets, nose-rings, fine dresses, mantles, cloaks, flounced skirts, 21 22 scarves of gauze, kerchiefs of linen, turbans, and flowing veils. 23
- So instead of perfume you shall have the stench of decay, 24
and a rope in place of a girdle, baldness instead of hair elegantly coiled,
a loin-cloth of sacking instead of a mantle,
and branding instead of beauty.
- Your men shall fall by the sword, 25
and your warriors in battle;
then Zion's gates shall mourn and lament, 26
and she shall sit on the ground stripped bare.
- Then on that day 4
seven women shall take hold of one man and say,
'We will eat our own bread and wear our own clothes
if only we may be called by your name;
take away our disgrace.'
- On that day the plant that the LORD has grown 2
shall become glorious in its beauty, and the fruit of the land shall be the pride and splendour of the survivors of Israel.
- Then those who are left in Zion, who remain in Jerusalem, every one 3 enrolled in the book of life, shall be called holy. If the Lord washes away 4 the filth of the women of Zion and cleanses Jerusalem from the blood that is in it by a spirit of judgement, a consuming spirit, then over every build- 5 ing on Mount Zion and on all her places of assembly the LORD will create a cloud of smoke by day and a bright flame of fire by night; for glory shall

- 6 be spread over all as a covering and a canopy, a shade from the heat by day, a refuge and a shelter from rain and tempest.
- 5 I will sing for my beloved my love-song about his vineyard:
My beloved had a vineyard
high up on a fertile hill-side.
- 2 He trenched it and cleared it of stones
and planted it with red vines;
he built a watch-tower in the middle and then hewed out a winepress in it.
He looked for it to yield grapes,
but it yielded wild grapes.
- 3 Now, you who live in Jerusalem,
and you men of Judah,
judge between me and my vineyard.
- 4 What more could have been done for my vineyard that I did not do in it?
Why, when I looked for it to yield grapes,
did it yield wild grapes?
- 5 Now listen while I tell you what I will do to my vineyard:
I will take away its fences and let it be burnt,
I will break down its walls and let it be trampled underfoot,
- 6 and so I will leave it derelict;
it shall be neither pruned nor hoed,
but shall grow thorns and briars.
Then I will command the clouds to send no more rain upon it.
- 7 The vineyard of the LORD of Hosts is Israel,
and the men of Judah are the plant he cherished.
He looked for justice and found it denied,
for righteousness but heard cries of distress.
- 8 Shame on you! you who add house to house
and join field to field,
until not an acre remains,
and you are left to dwell alone in the land.
- 9 The LORD of Hosts has sworn^a in my hearing:
Many houses shall go to ruin,
fine large houses shall be uninhabited.
- 10 Five acres of vineyard shall yield only a gallon,
and ten bushels of seed return only a peck.
- 11 Shame on you! you who rise early in the morning to go in pursuit of liquor and draw out the evening inflamed with wine, at whose feasts there are harp and lute,
tabor and pipe and wine,
- 12

^a has sworn: prob. rdg.; Heb. om.

who have no eyes for the work of the LORD, and never see the things that he has done. Therefore my people are dwindling away all unawares; the nobles are starving to death, and the common folk die of thirst.	13
Therefore Sheol gapes with straining throat and has opened her measureless jaws: down go nobility and common people, their noisy bustling mob. ^a	14
Mankind is brought low, men are humbled, humbled are haughty looks.	15
But the LORD of Hosts sits high in judgement, and by righteousness the holy God shows himself holy.	16
Young rams shall feed where fat bullocks once pastured, and kids shall graze broad acres where cattle grew fat. ^b	17
Shame on you! you who drag wickedness along like a tethered sheep and sin like a heifer on a rope, who say, 'Let the LORD make haste, let him speed up his work for us to see it, let the purpose of the Holy One of Israel be soon fulfilled, so that we may know it.'	18 19
Shame on you! you who call evil good and good evil, who turn darkness into light and light into darkness, who make bitter sweet and sweet bitter.	20
Shame on you! you who are wise in your own eyes and prudent in your own esteem.	21
Shame on you! you mighty toppers, valiant mixers of drink, who for a bribe acquit the guilty and deny justice to those in the right.	22 23
So he will hoist a signal to a nation far away, he will whistle to call them from the end of the earth; and see, they come, speedy and swift; none is weary, not one of them stumbles, not one slumbers or sleeps.	26 ^c 27
None has his belt loose about his waist or a broken thong to his sandals.
Their arrows are sharpened and their bows all strung, their horses' hooves flash like shooting stars, their chariot-wheels are like the whirlwind.	28
Their growling is the growling of a lioness, they growl like young lions, which roar as they seize the prey and carry it beyond reach of rescue.	29

The call of Isaiah

- 6 IN THE YEAR OF KING UZZIAH'S DEATH I saw the Lord seated on a 2 throne, high and exalted, and the skirt of his robe filled the temple. About him were attendant seraphim, and each had six wings; one pair covered 3 his face and one pair his feet, and one pair was spread in flight. They were calling ceaselessly to one another,

Holy, holy, holy is the LORD of Hosts:
the whole earth is full of his glory.

- 4 And, as each one called, the threshold shook to its foundations, while the 5 house was filled with smoke. Then I cried, Woe is me! I am lost, for I am a man of unclean lips

and I dwell among a people of unclean lips;
yet with these eyes I have seen the King, the LORD of Hosts.

- 6 Then one of the seraphim flew to me carrying in his hand a glowing coal 7 which he had taken from the altar with a pair of tongs. He touched my mouth with it and said,

See, this has touched your lips;
your iniquity is removed,
and your sin is wiped away.

- 8 Then I heard the Lord saying, Whom shall I send? Who will go for me?
9 And I answered, Here am I; send me. He said, Go and tell this people:

You may listen and listen, but you will not understand.^b
You may look and look again, but you will never know.^c

- 10 This people's wits are dulled,
their ears are deafened and their eyes blinded,
so that they cannot see with their eyes nor listen with their ears
nor understand with their wits,
so that they may turn and be healed.

- 11 Then I asked, How long, O Lord? And he answered, Until cities fall in ruins and are deserted, houses are left without people,
and the land goes to ruin and lies waste, 12 until the LORD has sent all mankind far away,
and the whole country is one vast desolation.

Prophecies during the Syro-Ephraimite war

WHILE AHAZ SON OF JOTHAM and grandson of Uzziah was king of 7
 Judah, Rezin king of Aram with Pekah son of Remaliah, king of 7 Israel, marched on Jerusalem, but could not force a battle. When the house 2 of David heard that the Aramaeans had come to terms with the Ephraimites, king and people were shaken like forest trees in the wind. Then the LORD 3 said to Isaiah, Go out with your son Shear-jashub^b to meet Ahaz at the end of the conduit of the Upper Pool by the causeway leading to the Fuller's 4 Field, and say to him, Be on your guard, keep calm; do not be frightened or unmanned by these two smouldering stumps of firewood, because Rezin 4 and his Aramaeans with Remaliah's son are burning with rage. The 5 Aramaeans with Ephraim and Remaliah's son have laid their plans against you, saying, Let us invade Judah and break her spirit;^c let us make her 6 join with us, and set the son of Tabeal on the throne. Therefore the Lord 7
 GOD has said:

This shall not happen now, and never shall,
 for all that the chief city of Aram is Damascus, 8 and Rezin is the chief of Damascus;
 within sixty-five years

Ephraim shall cease to be a nation, for all that Samaria is the chief city of Ephraim, 9
 and Remaliah's son the chief of Samaria.

Have firm faith, or you will not stand firm.

Once again the LORD spoke to Ahaz and said, Ask the LORD your God 10 11 for a sign, from lowest Sheol or from highest heaven. But Ahaz said, No, 12
 I will not put the LORD to the test by asking for a sign. Then the answer 13 came: Listen, house of David. Are you not content to wear out men's patience? Must you also wear out the patience of my God? Therefore the 14 Lord himself shall give you a sign: A young woman is with child, and she will bear a son, and will^d call him Immanuel.^e By the time that he has learnt 15 to reject evil and choose good, he will be eating curds and honey; ^f before 16 that child has learnt to reject evil and choose good, desolation will come upon the land before whose two kings you cower now. The LORD will bring 17 on you, your people, and your house, a time the like of which has not been seen since Ephraim broke away from Judah.^g

On that day the LORD will whistle for the fly from the distant streams of 18
 Egypt and for the bee from Assyria. They shall all come and settle in the 19 precipitous ravines and in the clefts of the rock; camel-thorn and stink-wood shall be black with them. On that day the Lord shall shave the head and body with a razor hired on the banks of the Euphrates,^a and it shall remove the beard as well. On that day a man shall save alive a young cow and two ewes; and he shall get so much milk that he eats curds; for all who are left in the land shall eat curds and honey. On that day every place where there used to be a thousand vines worth a thousand pieces of silver shall be given over to thorns and briars. A man shall go there only to hunt with bow and arrows, for thorns and briars cover the whole land; and no one who fears thorns and briars shall set foot on any of those hills once worked with the hoe. Oxen shall be turned loose on them, and sheep shall trample them.

8 The LORD said to me, Take a large tablet and write on it in common writing,^b Maher-shalal-hash-baz;^c and fetch Uriah the priest and Zech-ariah son of Jeberechiah for me as trustworthy witnesses. Then I lay with the prophetess, and she conceived and bore a son; and the LORD said to me, Call him Maher-shalal-hash-baz. Before the boy can say Father or Mother, the wealth of Damascus and the spoils of Samaria shall be carried off and presented to the king of Assyria.

5 Once again the LORD said to me:

6 Because this nation has rejected the waters of Shiloah, which run so softly and gently,^d 7 therefore the Lord will bring up against it the strong, flooding waters of the Euphrates,
the king of Assyria and all his glory;
it shall run up all its channels
and overflow all its banks;
8 it shall sweep through Judah in a flood,
pouring over it and rising shoulder-high.
The whole expanse of the land shall be filled,
so wide he spreads his wings; for God is with us.^e 9 Take note, you nations, and be dismayed.
Listen, all you distant parts of the earth:
you may arm yourselves but will be dismayed;
you may arm yourselves but will be dismayed.
10 Make your plans, but they will be foiled, propose what you please, but it shall not stand;
for God is with us.^e

11 These were the words of the LORD to me, for his hand was strong upon me; and he warned me not to follow^f the ways of this people:
12 You shall not say 'too hard' of everything that this people calls hard;
13 you shall neither dread nor fear that which they fear. It is the LORD of Hosts whom you must count 'hard';^g he it is whom you must fear and 14 dread. He shall become your 'hardship',^g a boulder and a rock which the two houses of Israel shall run against and over which they shall stumble, a trap and a snare to those who live in Jerusalem; and many shall stumble over them, many shall fall and be broken, many shall be snared and caught. 15

Fasten up the message, 16
seal the oracle with my teaching;^a and I will wait for the LORD 17

who hides his face from the house of Jacob;
I will watch for him.

See, I and the sons whom the LORD has given me 18
are to be signs and portents in Israel, sent by the LORD of Hosts who dwells on Mount Zion.

But men will say to you, 19 'Seek guidance of ghosts and familiar spirits who squeak and gibber;
a nation may surely seek guidance of its gods,
of the dead on behalf of the living,
for an oracle or a message?' 20

They will surely say some such thing as this;
but what they say is futile.

So despondency and fear will come over them, 21
and then, when they are afraid and fearful,
they will turn against their king and their gods.

Then, whether they turn their gaze upwards or look down, 22 everywhere is distress and darkness inescapable, constraint and gloom that cannot be avoided;
for there is no escape for an oppressed people. 9

For, while the first invader has dealt lightly with the land of Zebulun and the land of Naphtali, the second has dealt heavily with Galilee of the Nations on the road beyond Jordan to the sea.

The people who walked in darkness 2
have seen a great light:
light has dawned upon them,
dwellers in a land as dark as death.

Thou hast increased their joy and ^b given them great gladness; 3 they rejoice in thy presence as men rejoice at harvest, or as they are glad when they share out the spoil;

for thou hast shattered the yoke that burdened them, 4
the collar that lay heavy on their shoulders,
the driver's goad, as on the day of Midian's defeat.

All the boots of trampling soldiers 5 and the garments fouled with blood shall become a burning mass, fuel for fire.

 bestowed on David's throne and on his kingdom,
 to establish it and sustain it with justice and righteousness from now and for evermore.
 The zeal of the LORD of Hosts shall do this.

Prophecies addressed to Israel

- 8 The Lord has sent forth his word against Jacob and it shall fall on Israel;
 9 all the people shall be humbled,
 Ephraim and the dwellers in Samaria,
 though in their pride and arrogance they say, 10 The bricks are fallen, but we will build in hewn stone;
 the sycomores are hacked down,
 but we will use cedars instead.
- 11 The LORD has raised their foes^b high against them and spurred on their enemies, 12 Aramaeans from the east and Philistines from the west, and they have swallowed Israel in one mouthful.
 For all this his anger has not turned back,
 and his hand is stretched out still.
- 13 Yet the people did not come back to him who struck them,
 or seek guidance of the LORD of Hosts;
 14 therefore on one day the LORD cut off from Israel head and tail, palm and reed.^c
- 16 This people's guides have led them astray;
 those who should have been guided are in confusion.
- 17 Therefore the Lord showed no mercy to their young men,
 no tenderness to their orphans and widows;
 all were godless and evildoers,
 every one speaking profanity.
 For all this his anger has not turned back,
 and his hand is stretched out still.
- 18 Wicked men have been set ablaze like a fire
 fed with briars and thorns, kindled in the forest thickets;
 they are wrapped in a murky pall of smoke.

^a Or of a wide realm.^b their foes: prob. rdg.; Heb. the foes of Rezin^c Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds (15) The aged and honoured are the head, and the prophet who gives false instruction is the tail.

The land is scorched by the fury of the LORD of Hosts, and the people have become fuel for the fire. ^a	19
On the right, one man eats his fill but yet is hungry; on the left, another devours but is not satisfied; each feeds on his own children's flesh, and neither spares his own brother. ^b	20
^c For all this his anger has not turned back, and his hand is stretched out still.	21
Shame on you! you who make unjust laws and publish burdensome decrees, depriving the poor of justice, robbing the weakest of my people of their rights, despoiling the widow and plundering the orphan.	10
What will you do when called to account, when ruin from afar confronts you?	2
To whom will you flee for help and where will you leave your children, so that they do not cower before the gaoler or fall by the executioner's hand?	3
For all this his anger has not turned back, and his hand is stretched out still.	4
So, as tongues of fire lick up the stubble and the heat of the flame dies down, their root shall moulder away, and their shoots vanish like dust;	[24 ^d]
for they have spurned the instruction of the LORD of Hosts and have rejected the word of the Holy One of Israel.
So the anger of the LORD is roused against his people, he has stretched out his hand against them and struck them down; the mountains trembled, and their corpses lay like offal in the streets.	[25 ^d]
For all this his anger has not turned back, and his hand is stretched out still.
The Assyrian! He is the rod that I wield in my anger, and the staff of my wrath is in his hand. ^e	5
I send him against a godless nation, I bid him march against a people who rouse my wrath, to spoil and plunder at will and trample them down like mud in the streets.	6
But this man's purpose is lawless, lawless are the plans in his mind;	7

^a See note on verse 20.^b and neither . . . brother: transposed from end of verse 19.^c Prob. rdg.; Heb. prefixes Manasseh devours Ephraim, and Ephraim Manasseh; together they are against Judah.^d These are verses 24 and 25 of ch. 5, transposed to this point.^e and . . . hand: prob. rdg.; Heb. obscure.

Is not Hamath like Arpad, and Samaria like Damascus?
10 Before now I have found kingdoms full of idols, with more images than Jerusalem and Samaria, 11 and now, what I have done to Samaria and her worthless gods,
I will do also to Jerusalem and her idols.'
- 12 When the Lord has finished all that he means to do on Mount Zion and in Jerusalem, he will punish the king of Assyria for this fruit of his pride 13 and for his arrogance and vainglory, because he said:
- By my own might I have acted and in my own wisdom I have laid my schemes;
I have removed the frontiers of nations and plundered their treasures,
like a bull I have trampled on their inhabitants.
- 14 My hand has found its way to the wealth of nations, and, as a man takes the eggs from a deserted nest,
so have I taken every land;
not a wing fluttered,
not a beak gaped, no chirp was heard.
- 15 Shall the axe set itself up against the hewer,
or the saw claim mastery over the sawyer,
as if a stick were to brandish him who wields it,
or a staff of wood to wield one who is not wood?
- 16 Therefore the Lord, the LORD of Hosts, will send disease on his sturdy frame, from head to toe,^a and within his flesh^b a fever like fire shall burn.
- 17 The light of Israel shall become a fire
and his Holy One a flame, which in one day shall burn up and consume
his thorns and his briars;
- 18 the glory of forest and meadow shall be destroyed
as when a man falls in a fit; 19 and the remnant of trees in the forest shall be so few that a child may count them one by one.
- 20 On that day the remnant of Israel, the survivors of Jacob, shall cease to lean on him that proved their destroyer, but shall loyally lean on the LORD,
the Holy One of Israel.
- 21 A remnant shall turn again, a remnant of Jacob,
to God their champion.

Your people, Israel, may be many as the sands of the sea, 22 upon all the earth.

Therefore these are the words of the Lord, the LORD of Hosts: My 24 people who live in Zion, you must not be afraid of the Assyrians, though they beat you with their rod and lift their staff against you as the Egyptians did; for soon, very soon, my anger will come to an end, and my wrath will 25 all be spent.^b Then the LORD of Hosts will brandish his whip over them as 26
 he did when he struck Midian at the Rock of Oreb, and will lift his staff against the River as he did against Egypt.

On that day 27
 the burden they laid on your shoulder shall be removed

- 7 the cow and the bear shall be friends,
and their young shall lie down together.
The lion shall eat straw like cattle;
- 8 the infant shall play over the hole of the cobra,
and the young child dance over the viper's nest.
- 9 They shall not hurt or destroy in all my holy mountain;
for as the waters fill the sea,
so shall the land be filled with the knowledge of the LORD.
- 10 On that day a scion from the root of Jesse shall be set up as a signal to the peoples;
the nations shall rally to it,
and its resting-place shall be glorious.
- 11 On that day the Lord will make his power more glorious by recovering the remnant of his people, those who are still left, from Assyria and Egypt, from Pathros, from Cush and Elam, from Shinar, Hamath and the islands of the sea.
- 12 Then he will raise a signal to the nations
and gather together those driven out of Israel;
he will assemble Judah's scattered people from the four corners of the earth.
- 13 Ephraim's jealousy shall vanish,
and Judah's enmity shall be done away.
Ephraim shall not be jealous of Judah, nor Judah the enemy of Ephraim.
- 14 They shall swoop down on the Philistine flank in the west and together they shall plunder the tribes of the east; Edom and Moab shall be within their grasp,
and Ammon shall obey them.
- 15 The LORD will divide the tongue of the Egyptian sea and wave his hand over the River to bring a scorching wind;
he shall split it into seven channels and let men go across dry-shod.
- 16 So there shall be a causeway for the remnant of his people, for the remnant rescued from Assyria,
as there was for Israel when they came up out of Egypt.

^a Prob. rdg. ; Heb. land.

You shall say on that day: I will praise thee, O LORD, though thou hast been angry with me; thy anger has turned back, and thou hast comforted me.	12
God is indeed my deliverer. I am confident and unafraid; for the LORD is my refuge and defence and has shown himself my deliverer.	2
And so you shall draw water with joy from the springs of deliverance.	3
You shall all say on that day: Give thanks to the LORD and invoke him by name, make his deeds known in the world around; declare that his name is supreme.	4
Sing psalms to the LORD, for he has triumphed, and this must be made known in all the world.	5
Cry out, shout aloud, you that dwell in Zion, for the Holy One of Israel is among you in majesty.	6

Prophecies relating to foreign nations

BABYLON: AN ORACLE which Isaiah son of Amoz received in a vision. 13

Raise the standard on a windy height, roar out your summons, beckon with arm upraised to the advance, draw your swords, you nobles.	2
I have given my warriors their orders and summoned my fighting men to launch my anger; they are eager for my triumph.	3
Hark, a tumult in the mountains, the sound of a vast multitude; hark, the roar of kingdoms, of nations gathering!	4
The LORD of Hosts is mustering a host for war, men from a far country, from beyond the horizon.	5
It is the LORD with the weapons of his wrath coming to lay the whole land waste.
Howl, for the Day of the LORD is at hand; it comes, a mighty blow from Almighty God.	6
Thereat shall every hand hang limp, every man's courage shall melt away, his stomach hollow with fear;	7
anguish shall grip them, like a woman in labour.	8
One man shall look aghast at another, and their faces shall burn with shame.
The Day of the LORD is coming indeed, that cruel day of wrath and fury,	9

to make the land a desolation and exterminate its wicked people.

10 The stars of heaven in their constellations shall give no light, the sun shall be darkened at its rising,
and the moon refuse to shine.

11 I will bring disaster upon the world and their due punishment upon the wicked.

I will check the pride of the haughty and bring low the arrogance of ruthless men.

12 I will make men scarcer than fine gold, rarer than gold of Ophir.

13 Then the heavens shall shudder,^a and the earth shall be shaken from its place at the fury of the LORD of Hosts, on the day of his anger.

14 Then, like a gazelle before the hunter or a flock with no man to round it up,
each man will go back to his own people,
every one will flee to his own land.

15 All who are found will be stabbed,
all who are taken will fall by the sword;
16 their infants will be dashed to the ground before their eyes, their houses rifled and their wives ravished.

17 I will stir up against them the Medes, who care nothing for silver and are not tempted by gold,^b 18 who have no pity on little children and spare no mother's son;

19 and Babylon, fairest of kingdoms, proud beauty of the Chaldeans, shall be like Sodom and Gomorrah
when God overthrew them.

20 Never again shall she be inhabited,
no man shall dwell in her through all the ages;
there no Arab shall pitch his tent,
no shepherds fold their flocks.

21 There marmots shall have their lairs,
and porcupines shall overrun her houses;
there desert owls shall dwell,
and there he-goats shall gambol;

22 jackals shall occupy her mansions,^c and wolves her gorgeous palaces.

Her time draws very near,
and her days have not long to run.

14 The LORD will show compassion for Jacob and will once again make Israel his choice. He will settle them on their own soil, and strangers will 2 come to join them and attach themselves to Jacob. Many nations shall

^a Prob. rdg. ; Heb. Then I will make the heavens shudder.
adds bows shall dash young men to the ground.

^b Prob. rdg. ; Heb.
^c Prob. rdg. ; Heb. her widows.

escort Israel to her place, and she shall employ them as slaves and slave-girls on the land of the LORD; she shall take her captors captive and rule over her task-masters.

When the LORD gives you relief from your pain and your fears and from the cruel slavery laid upon you, you will take up this song of derision over the king of Babylon:

See how the oppressor has met his end and his frenzy ceased!
The LORD has broken the rod of the wicked, 5

the sceptre of the ruler who struck down peoples in his rage 6
with unerring blows,

who crushed nations in anger
and persecuted them unceasingly.

The whole world has rest and is at peace; 7
it breaks into cries of joy.

The pines themselves and the cedars of Lebanon exult over you: 8
Since you have been laid low, they say, no man comes up to fell us.

Sheol below was all astir 9
to meet you at your coming;

she roused the ancient dead to meet you,
all who had been leaders on earth;
she made all who had been kings of the nations rise from their thrones.

One and all they greet you with these words: 10
So you too are weak as we are,
and have become one of us!

Your pride and all the music of your lutes 11 have been brought down to Sheol;^a maggots are the pallet beneath you, and worms your coverlet.

How you have fallen from heaven, bright morning star, 12
felled to the earth, sprawling helpless across the nations!

You thought in your own mind, 13
I will scale the heavens;

I will set my throne high above the stars of God,
I will sit on the mountain where the gods meet in the far recesses of the north.

I will rise high above the cloud-banks 14
and make myself like the Most High.

Yet you shall be brought down to Sheol, 15
to the depths of the abyss.

Those who see you will stare at you, 16
they will look at you and ponder:

^a Or Your pride has been brought down to Sheol to the crowding throng of your dead.

- Is this, they will say, the man who shook the earth,
who made kingdoms quake, 17 who turned the world into a desert and laid its cities in ruins,
who never let his prisoners go free to their homes, 18 the kings of every land?
Now they lie all of them in honour,
each in his last home.
19 But you have been flung out unburied,
mere loathsome carrion,
a companion to the slain pierced by the sword
who have gone down to the stony abyss.
And you, a corpse trampled underfoot, 20 shall not share burial with them,
for you have ruined your land and slaughtered your people.
Such a brood of evildoers shall never be seen again.
21 Make the shambles ready for his sons butchered for their fathers' sin;
they shall not rise up and possess the world
nor cover the face of the earth with cities.
- 22 I will rise against them, says the LORD of Hosts; I will destroy the name of Babylon and what remains of her, her offspring and posterity, says the 23 LORD; I will make her a haunt of the bustard, a waste of fen, and sweep her with the besom of destruction. This is the very word of the LORD of Hosts.
- 24 The LORD of Hosts has sworn:
In very truth, as I planned, so shall it be;
as I designed, so shall it fall out:
25 I will break the Assyrian in my own land and trample him underfoot upon my mountains;
his yoke shall be lifted from you,
his burden taken from your shoulders.
- 26 This is the plan prepared for the whole earth,
this the hand stretched out over all the nations.
27 For the LORD of Hosts has prepared his plan:
who shall frustrate it?
His is the hand stretched out, and who shall turn it back?
- 28 In the year that King Ahaz died this oracle came from God:
29 Let none of you rejoice, you Philistines, because the rod that chastised you is broken;
for a viper shall be born of a snake as a plant from the root,
and its fruit shall be a flying serpent.
- 30 But the poor shall graze their flocks in my meadows,
and the destitute shall lie down in peace;
but the offspring of your roots I will kill by starvation,
and put the remnant of you to death.

Howl in the gate, cry for help in the city, let all Philistia be in turmoil; for a great enemy is coming from the north, not a man straying from his ranks.	31
What answer is there for the envoys of the nation? This, that the LORD has fixed Zion in her place, and the afflicted among his people shall take refuge there.	32
Moab: an oracle.	15
On the night when Ar is sacked, Moab meets her doom; on the night when Kir is sacked, Moab meets her doom. The people of Dibon go up ^a to the hill-shrines to weep; Moab howls over Nebo and over Medeba.	2
The hair is torn from every head, and every beard shaved off. In the streets men go clothed with sackcloth, they cry out on the roofs; in the public squares every man howls, weeping as he goes through them.	3
Heshbon and Elealeh cry for help, their voices are heard as far as Jahaz. Thus Moab's stoutest warriors become cowards, and her courage ebbs away.	4
My heart cries out for Moab, whose nobles have fled ^b as far as Zoar. ^c	5
On the ascent to Luhith men go up weeping; on the road to Horonaim there are cries of 'Disaster!' The waters of Nimrim are desolate indeed; the grass is parched, the herbage dead, not a green thing is left; and so the people carry off across the gorge of the Arabim their hard-earned wealth and all their savings.	6
The cry for help echoes round the frontiers of Moab, their howling reaches Eglaim and Beer-elim. The waters of Dimon already run with blood; yet I have more troubles in store for Dimon, for I have a vision ^d of the survivors of Moab, of the remnant of Admah.	8
The rulers of the country send a present of lambs from Sela in the wilderness to the hill of the daughter of Zion; the daughters of Moab at the fords of the Arnon shall be like fluttering birds, like scattered nestlings.	16
'Take up our cause with all your might; let your shadow shield us at high noon, dark as night.	2 3

^a The people . . . go up: prob. rdg.; Heb. He has gone up to the house and Dibon.

^b have fled: prob. rdg.; Heb. om.

^c Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds Eglath Shelishiya.

^d I have a vision: prob. rdg.; Heb. a lion.

4 Shelter the homeless, do not betray the fugitive;
let the homeless people of Moab find refuge with you;
hide them from the despoiler.^a

5 When extortion has done its work and the looting is over, when the heel of the oppressor has vanished from the land, a throne shall be set up in mutual trust in David's tent,
and on it there shall sit a true judge,
one who seeks justice and is swift to do right.

6 We have heard tell of Moab's pride, how great it is,
we have heard of his pride, his overweening pride;
his talk is full of lies.

7 For this all Moab shall howl;
Moab shall howl indeed;

8 he^a shall mourn for the prosperous farmers of Kir-hareseth, utterly ruined;
the orchards of Heshbon,
the vines of Sibmah languish, though their red grapes once laid low the lords of the nations, though they reached as far as Jazer
and trailed out to the wilderness, though their branches spread abroad and crossed the sea.
9 Therefore I will weep for Sibmah's vines as I weep for Jazer.
I will drench you with my tears, Heshbon and Elealeh;
for over your summer-fruits and your harvest
the shouts of the harvesters are ended.

10 Joy and gladness shall be banished from the meadows,
no more shall men shout and sing in the vineyards,
no more shall they tread wine in the winepresses;
I have silenced the shouting of the harvesters.

11 Therefore my heart throbs
like a harp for Moab, and my very soul for Kir-hareseth.^b

12 When Moab comes to worship and wearies himself at the hill-shrines, when he enters his sanctuary to pray,
he will gain nothing.

13 14 These are the words which the LORD spoke long ago about Moab; and now he says, In three years, as a hired labourer counts them off, the glory of Moab shall become contemptible for all his vast numbers; a handful shall be left and those of no account.

17 Damascus: an oracle.

Damascus shall be a city no longer,
she shall be but a heap of ruins.

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. you.

^b Prob. rdg.; Heb. Kir-hares.

For ever desolate, flocks shall have her for their own, and lie there undisturbed.	2
No longer shall Ephraim boast a fortified city, or Damascus a kingdom; the remnant of Aram and the glory of Israel, their fate is one. This is the very word of the LORD of Hosts.	3
On that day Jacob's weight shall dwindle and the fat on his limbs waste away, as when the harvester gathers up the standing corn and reaps the ears in armfuls, or as when a man gleanes the ears in the Vale of Rephaim, or as when one beats an olive-tree and only gleanings are left on it, two or three berries on the top of a branch, four or five on the boughs of the fruiting tree. This is the very word of the LORD the God of Israel.	4 5 6
On that day men shall look to their Maker and turn their eyes to the Holy One of Israel; they shall not look to the altars made by their own hands nor to anything that their fingers have made, sacred poles or incense- altars.	7 8
On that day their strong cities shall be deserted like the cities of the Hivites and the Amorites, which they abandoned when Israel came in; all shall be desolate.	9
For you forgot the God who delivered you, and did not remember the rock, your stronghold. Plant then, if you will, your gardens in honour of Adonis, strike your cuttings for a foreign god; protect your gardens on the day you plant them, and next day make the seed sprout. But the crop will be scorched when wasting disease comes in the day of incurable pain.	10 11
Listen! it is the thunder of many peoples, they thunder with the thunder of the sea. Listen! it is the roar of nations roaring with the roar of mighty waters. When he rebukes them, away they fly, driven like chaff on the hills before the wind, like thistledown before the storm. At evening all is confusion, and before morning they are gone. Such is the fate of our plunderers, the lot of those who despoil us.	12 13 14
There is a land of sailing ships, a land beyond the rivers of Cush which sends its envoys by the Nile, journeying on the waters in vessels of reed.	18 2

- Go, swift messengers,
 go to a people tall and smooth-skinned,
 to a people dreaded near and far,
 a nation strong and proud,
 whose land is scoured by rivers.
- 3 All you who dwell in the world, inhabitants of earth, shall see when the signal is hoisted on the mountains and shall hear when the trumpet sounds.
- 4 These were the words of the LORD to me:
 From my dwelling-place I will look quietly down when the heat shimmers in the summer sun, when the dew is heavy at harvest time.
- 5 Before the vintage, when the budding is over and the flower ripens into a berry,
 the shoots shall be cut down with knives,
 the branches struck off and cleared away.
- 6 All shall be left to birds of prey on the hills and to beasts of the earth;
 in summer the birds shall make their home there,
 in winter every beast of the earth.
- 7 At that time tribute shall be brought to the LORD of Hosts from a people tall and smooth-skinned, dreaded near and far, a nation strong and proud, whose land is scoured by rivers. They shall bring it to Mount Zion, the place where men invoke the name of the LORD of Hosts.

19

Egypt: an oracle.

- See how the LORD comes riding swiftly upon a cloud,
 he shall descend upon Egypt;
 the idols of Egypt quail before him,
 Egypt's courage melts within her.
- 2 I will set Egyptian against Egyptian,
 and they shall fight one against another,
 neighbour against neighbour,
 city against city and kingdom against kingdom.
- 3 Egypt's spirit shall sink within her,
 and I will throw her counsels into confusion.
 They may resort to idols and oracle-mongers,
 to ghosts and spirits,
- 4 but I will hand Egypt over to a hard master,
 and a cruel king shall rule over them.
 This is the very word of the Lord, the LORD of Hosts.
- 5 The waters of the Nile shall drain away,
 the river shall be parched and run dry;
 its channels shall stink,
- 6 the streams of Egypt shall be parched and dry up;
 reeds and rushes shall wither away;

the lotus too beside the Nile ^a 7
 and all that is sown along the Nile shall dry up, shall be blown away and vanish.
 The fishermen shall groan and lament, 8
 all who cast their hooks into the Nile and those who spread nets on the water shall lose heart.
 The flax-dressers shall hang their heads, 9
 the women carding and the weavers shall grow pale, Egypt's spinners shall be downcast, 10
 and all her artisans sick at heart.
 Fools that you are, you princes of Zoan! 11 Wisest of Pharaoh's counsellors you may be,
 but stupid counsellors you are.
 How can you say to Pharaoh,
 'I am the heir of wise men and spring from ancient kings'?
 Where are your wise men, Pharaoh, 12 to teach you and make known to you what the LORD of Hosts has planned for Egypt?
 Zoan's princes are fools, the princes of Noph are dupes; 13
 the chieftains of her clans have led Egypt astray.
 The LORD has infused into them 14
 a spirit that warps their judgement;
 they make Egypt miss her way in all she does,
 as a drunkard will miss his footing as he vomits.
 There shall be nothing in Egypt that any man can do, 15
 head or tail, palm or rush.

When that day comes the Egyptians shall become weak as women; they 16 shall fear and tremble when they see the LORD of Hosts raise his hand against them, as raise it he will. The land of Judah shall strike terror into 17 Egypt; its very name shall cause dismay, because of the plans that the LORD of Hosts has laid against them.

When that day comes there shall be five cities in Egypt speaking the 18 language of Canaan and swearing allegiance to the LORD of Hosts, and one of them shall be called the City of the Sun. ^b

When that day comes there shall be an altar to the LORD in the heart of 19 Egypt, and a sacred pillar set up for the LORD upon her frontier. It shall 20 stand as a token and a reminder to the LORD of Hosts in Egypt, so that when they appeal to him against their oppressors, he may send a deliverer to champion their cause, and he shall rescue them. The LORD will make 21 himself known to the Egyptians; on that day they shall acknowledge the LORD and do him service with sacrifice and grain-offering, make vows to him and pay them. The LORD will strike down Egypt, healing as he 22 strikes; then they will turn back to him and he will hear their prayers and heal them.

When that day comes there shall be a highway between Egypt and 23

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds on the mouth of the Nile.

^b the City of the Sun: or Heliopolis.

Assyria; Assyrians shall come to Egypt and Egyptians to Assyria; then Egyptians shall worship with^a Assyrians.

- 24 When that day comes Israel shall rank with Egypt and Assyria, those 25 three, and shall be a blessing in the centre of the world. So the LORD of Hosts will bless them: A blessing be upon Egypt my people, upon Assyria the work of my hands, and upon Israel my possession.

- 20 SARGON KING OF ASSYRIA SENT his commander-in-chief^b to Ashdod, 2 and he took it by storm. At that time the LORD said to Isaiah son of Amoz, Come, strip the sackcloth from your waist and take your sandals off. He did so, and went about naked and barefoot. The LORD said, My servant Isaiah has gone naked and barefoot for three years as a sign and a warning to 3 Egypt and Cush; just so shall the king of Assyria lead the captives of 4 Egypt and the exiles of Cush naked and barefoot, their buttocks shamefully exposed, young and old alike. All men shall be dismayed, their hopes
5 in Cush and their pride in Egypt humbled. On that day those who dwell
6 along this coast will say, So much for all our hopes on which we relied for help and deliverance from the king of Assyria; what escape have we now?

- 21 A wilderness: an oracle.

Rough weather, advancing like a storm in the south,
coming from the wilderness, from a land of terror!

- 2 Grim is the vision shown to me:
the traitor betrayed, the spoiler himself despoiled.
Up, Elam; up, Medes, to the siege,
no time for weariness!

- 3 At this my limbs writhe in anguish,
I am gripped by pangs like a woman in labour.
I am distraught past hearing, dazed past seeing,
4 my mind reels, sudden convulsions seize me.

- The cool twilight I longed for has become a terror:
5 the banquet is set out, the rugs are spread;
they are eating and drinking—rise, princes, burnish your shields.

- 6 For these were the words of the Lord to me:
Go, post a watchman to report what he sees.
7 He sees chariots, two-horsed chariots, riders on asses, riders on camels.
He is alert, alert, always on the alert.

- 8 Then the look-out cried:
All day long I stand on the Lord's watch-tower and night after night I keep my station.
9 See, there come men in a chariot, a two-horsed chariot.

And a voice calls back:
Fallen, fallen is Babylon, and all the images of her gods lie shattered on the ground.

^a Or shall be slaves to.

^b Or sent Tartan.

O my people, 10
 once trodden out and winnowed on the threshing-floor, what I have heard from the LORD of Hosts,
 from the God of Israel, I have told you.

Dumah: an oracle. 11

One calls to me from Seir:
 Watchman, what is left of the night?
 Watchman, what is left?
 The watchman answered: 12
 Morning comes, and also night. ^a
 Ask if you must; then come back again.

With the Arabs: an oracle. 13

You caravans of Dedan, that camp in the scrub with the Arabs, bring water to meet the thirsty. 14
 You dwellers in Tema, meet the fugitives with food, for they flee from the sword, the sharp edge of the sword, 15 from the bent bow, and from the press of battle.

For these are the words of the Lord to me: Within a year, as a hired labourer counts off the years, all the glory of Kedar shall come to an end;
 few shall be the bows left to the warriors of Kedar. 17
 The LORD the God of Israel has spoken.

The Valley of Vision: ^b an oracle. 22

Tell me, what is amiss
 that you have all climbed on to the roofs, O city full of tumult, town in ferment 2
 and filled with uproar, whose slain were not slain with the sword
 and did not die in battle?
 Your commanders are all in flight, huddled together out of bowshot; 3
 all your stoutest warriors are huddled together,
 they have taken to their heels.
 Then I said, Turn your eyes away from me; 4
 leave me to weep in misery.
 Do not thrust consolation on me for the ruin of my own people.

For the Lord, the LORD of Hosts, has ordained a day of tumult, a day of 5 trampling and turmoil in the Valley of Vision, ^b rousing cries for help that echo among the mountains.

Elam took up his quiver, 6 horses were harnessed to the chariots of Aram, ^c Kir took the cover from his shield.

^a and also night: or and the night is full spent.

^b Or of Calamity.

^c Prob. rdg.; Heb. man.

7 Your fairest valleys were overrun by chariots and horsemen,
the gates were hard beset,
8 the heart of Judah's defence was laid open.

On that day you looked to the weapons stored in the House of the Forest;
9 you filled all the many pools in the City of David, collecting water from 10 the Lower Pool.^a Then you surveyed the houses in Jerusalem, tearing some 11 down to make the wall inaccessible, and between the two walls you made a cistern for the Waters of the Old Pool;
but you did not look to the Maker of it all or consider him who fashioned it long ago.

12 On that day the Lord, the LORD of Hosts, called for weeping and beating the breast,
for shaving the head and putting on sackcloth; 13 but instead there was joy and merry-making, slaughtering of cattle and killing of sheep,
eating of meat and drinking of wine, as you thought,
Let us eat and drink; for tomorrow we die.

14 The LORD of Hosts has revealed himself to me; in my hearing he swore:
Your wickedness shall never be purged until you die.
This is the word of the Lord, the LORD of Hosts.

15 These were the words of the Lord, the LORD of Hosts:
Go to this steward,
to Shebna, comptroller of the household, and say:
16 What right, what business, have you here,
that you have dug yourself a grave here, cutting out your grave on a height
and carving yourself a resting-place in the rock?
17 The LORD will shake you out, shake you as a garment^b is shaken out to rid it of lice;
18 then he will bundle you tightly and throw you like a ball into a great wide land.
There you shall die,
and there shall lie your chariot of honour,
an object of contempt to your master's household.
19 I will remove you from office and drive you from your post.

20 21 On that day I will send for my servant Eliakim son of Hilkiah; I will invest him with your robe, gird him with your sash; and hand over your authority to him. He shall be a father to the inhabitants of Jerusalem and 22 the people of Judah. I will lay the key of the house of David on his shoulder;
what he opens no man shall shut, and what he shuts no man shall open.

^a you filled . . . Lower Pool: or you took note of the cracks, many as they were, in the wall of the City of David, and you collected water from the Lower Pool. ^b Prob. rdg.; Heb. man.

He shall be a seat of honour for his father's family; I will fasten him firmly in place like a peg. On him shall hang all the weight of the family, down to the lowest dregs—all the little vessels, both bowls and pots. On that day, says the LORD of Hosts, the peg which was firmly fastened in its place shall be removed; it shall be hacked out and shall fall, and the load of things hanging on it shall be destroyed. The LORD has spoken.

Tyre: an oracle.

23

The ships of Tarshish howl, for the harbour is sacked;
 the port of entry from Kittim is swept away.

The people of the sea-coast, the merchants of Sidon, wail,
 people whose agents cross the great waters,
 whose harvest^a is the grain of the Shihor
 and their revenue the trade of nations.

Sidon, the sea-fortress,^b cries in her disappointment,^c
 I no longer feel the anguish of labour or bear children;
 I have no young sons to rear, no daughters to bring up.

When the news is confirmed in Egypt
 her people sway in anguish at the fate of Tyre.

Make your way to Tarshish, they say, howl, you who dwell by the sea-coast.

Is this your busy city, ancient in story,
 on whose voyages you were carried to settle far away?

Whose plan was this against Tyre, the city of battlements, whose merchants were princes

and her traders the most honoured men on earth?
 The LORD of Hosts planned it to prick every noble's pride and bring all the most honoured men on earth into contempt.

Take to the tillage of your fields, you people of Tarshish;
 for your market^d is lost.

The LORD has stretched out his hand over the sea
 and shaken kingdoms,

he has given his command to destroy the marts of Canaan;
 and he has said, You shall busy yourselves no more,
 you, the sorely oppressed virgin city of Sidon.

Though you arise and cross over to Kittim,
 even there you shall find no rest.

Look at this land, the destined home of ships^e! The Chaldaeans^f erected their^g siege-towers, dismantled its palaces and laid it in ruins.

Howl, you ships of Tarshish;
 for your haven is sacked.

Heb. his.

- 15 From that day Tyre shall be forgotten for seventy years, the span of one king's life. At the end of the seventy years her plight shall be that of the harlot in the song:
- 16 Take your harp, go round the city,
 poor forgotten harlot;
 touch the strings sweetly, sing all your songs,
 make men remember you again.
- 17 At the end of seventy years, the LORD will turn again to Tyre; she shall go 18 back to her old trade and hire herself out to every kingdom on earth. The profits of her trading will be dedicated to the LORD; they shall not be hoarded or stored up, but shall be given to those who worship the LORD, to purchase food in plenty and fine attire.

The LORD's judgement on the earth

- 24 Beware, the LORD will empty the earth, split it open and turn it upside down,
and scatter its inhabitants.
- 2 Then it will be the same for priest and people,
the same for master and slave, mistress and slave-girl,
seller and buyer,
borrower and lender, debtor and creditor.
- 3 The earth is emptied clean away
and stripped clean bare.
- 4 For this is the word that the LORD has spoken.
The earth dries up and withers,
the whole world withers and grows sick;
the earth's high places sicken,
5 and earth itself is desecrated by the feet of those who live in it, because they have broken the laws, disobeyed the statutes and violated the eternal covenant.
- 6 For this a curse has devoured the earth and its inhabitants stand aghast.
For this those who inhabit the earth dwindle and only a few men are left.
- 7 The new wine dries up, the vines sicken,
and all the revellers turn to sorrow.
- 8 Silent the merry beat of tambourines,
hushed the shouts of revelry,
the merry harp is silent.
- 9 No one shall drink wine to the sound of song;
the liquor will be bitter to the man who drinks it.
- 10 The city of chaos is a broken city,
every house barred, that no one may enter.
- 11 Men call for wine in the streets;
all revelry is darkened,
and mirth is banished from the land.

Desolation alone is left in the city and the gate is broken into pieces.	12
So shall it be in all the world, in every nation, as when an olive-tree is beaten and stripped, as when the vintage is ended.	13
Men raise their voices and cry aloud, they shout in the west, ^a so great is the LORD's majesty.	14
Therefore let the LORD be glorified in the regions of the east, and the name of the LORD the God of Israel in the coasts and islands of the west.	15
From the ends of the earth we have heard them sing, How lovely is righteousness!	16
But I thought, Villainy, villainy! Woe to the traitors and their treachery! Traitors double-dyed they are indeed!
The hunter's scare, the pit, and the trap threaten all who dwell in the land;	17
if a man runs from the rattle of the scare he will fall into the pit;	18
if he climbs out of the pit he will be caught in the trap.
When the windows of heaven above are opened and earth's foundations shake, the earth is utterly shattered,	19
it is convulsed and reels wildly.
The earth reels to and fro like a drunken man and sways like a watchman's shelter;	20
the sins of men weigh heavy upon it, and it falls to rise no more.
On that day the LORD will punish the host of heaven in heaven, and on earth the kings of the earth, herded together, close packed like prisoners in a dungeon;	21
shut up in gaol, after a long time they shall be punished.	22
The moon shall grow pale and the sun hide its face in shame;	23
for the LORD of Hosts has become king on Mount Zion and in Jerusalem, and shows his glory before their elders.

The deliverance and ingathering of Judah

O LORD, thou art my God;	25
I will exalt thee and praise thy name; for thou hast accomplished a wonderful purpose, certain and sure, from of old.

^a in the west: or more loudly than the sea.

- 2 For thou hast turned cities into heaps of ruin,
and fortified towns into rubble;
every mansion in the cities is swept away,
never to be rebuilt.
- 3 For this a cruel nation holds thee in honour,
the cities of ruthless nations fear thee.
- 4 Truly thou hast been a refuge to the poor,
a refuge to the needy in his trouble,
shelter from the tempest and shade from the heat.
For the blast of the ruthless is like an icy storm
or a scorching drought;
5 thou subduest the roar of the foe,^a
and the song of the ruthless dies away.
- 6 On this mountain the LORD of Hosts will prepare a banquet of rich fare for all the peoples,
a banquet of wines well matured and richest fare, well-matured wines strained clear.
- 7 On this mountain the LORD will swallow up that veil that shrouds all the peoples,
the pall thrown over all the nations;
8 he will swallow up death for ever.
Then the Lord GOD will wipe away the tears from every face
and remove the reproach of his people from the whole earth.
The LORD has spoken.
- 9 On that day men will say,
See, this is our God
for whom we have waited to deliver us;
this is the LORD for whom we have waited;
let us rejoice and exult in his deliverance.
- 10 For the hand of the LORD will rest on this mountain, but Moab shall be trampled under his feet
as straw is trampled into a midden.
- 11 In it Moab shall spread out his hands
as a swimmer spreads his hands to swim, but he shall sink his pride with every stroke of his hands.
- 12 The LORD has thrown down the high defences of your walls, has levelled them to the earth and brought them down to the dust.
- 26 On that day this song shall be sung in Judah:
We have a strong city
whose walls and ramparts are our deliverance.
2 Open the gates to let a righteous nation in,
a nation that keeps faith.

Thou dost keep in peace men of constant mind, in peace because they trust in thee.	3
Trust in the LORD for ever; for the LORD himself is an everlasting rock.	4
He has brought low all who dwell high in a towering city; he levels it to the ground and lays it in the dust, that the oppressed and the poor may tread it underfoot.	5 6
The path of the righteous is level, and thou markest out the right way for the upright.	7
We too look to the path prescribed in thy laws, O LORD; thy name and thy memory are our heart's desire.	8
With all my heart I long for thee in the night, I seek thee eagerly when dawn breaks; for, when thy laws prevail in the land, the inhabitants of the world learn justice.	9
The wicked are destroyed, they have never learnt justice; corrupt in a land of honest ways, they do not regard the majesty of the LORD.	10
O LORD, thy hand is lifted high, but the bitter enemies of thy people do not see it; ^a let the fire of thy enmity destroy them.	11
O LORD, thou wilt bestow prosperity on us; for in truth all our works are thy doing.	12
O LORD our God, other lords than thou have been our masters, but thee alone do we invoke by name.	13
The dead will not live again, those long in their graves will not rise; to this end thou hast punished them and destroyed them, and made all memory of them perish.	14
Thou hast enlarged the nation, O LORD, enlarged it and won thyself honour, thou hast extended all the frontiers of the land.	15
In our distress, O LORD, we ^b sought thee out, chastened by the mere whisper of thy rebuke.	16
As a woman with child, when her time is near, is in labour and cries out in her pains, so were we in thy presence, O LORD.	17
We have been with child, we have been in labour, but have brought forth wind.	18
We have won no success for the land, and no one will be born to inhabit the world. But thy dead live, their bodies will rise again.	19
They that sleep in the earth will awake and shout for joy; for thy dew is a dew of sparkling light, and the earth will bring those long dead to birth again.

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds let them see and be ashamed.^b Prob. rdg.; Heb. they.

20 Go, my people, enter your rooms and shut your doors behind you;
withdraw for a brief while, until wrath has gone by.
21 For see, the LORD is coming from his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their sin;^s then the earth shall uncover her blood-stains and hide her slain no more.

27 On that day the LORD will punish with his cruel sword, his mighty and powerful sword, Leviathan that twisting^a sea-serpent,
that writhing serpent Leviathan,
and slay the monster of the deep.

2 On that day sing to the pleasant vineyard,
3 I the LORD am its keeper, moment by moment I water it for fear its green leaves fail.
Night and day I tend it,
4 but I get no wine;
I would as soon have briars and thorns,
then I would wage war upon it and burn it all up, 5 unless it grasps me as its refuge and makes peace with me—unless it makes peace with me.

6 In time to come Jacob's offspring shall take root and Israel shall bud and blossom,
and they shall fill the whole earth with fruit.

7 Has God struck him down as he struck others down?
Has the slayer been slain as he slew others?
8-10^b This then purges Jacob's iniquity, this^c has removed his sin:
that he grinds all altar stones to powder like chalk;
no sacred poles and incense-altars are left standing.

The fortified city is left solitary, and his quarrel with her ends in brushing her away,^d
removing her by a cruel blast when the east wind blows;
it is a homestead stripped bare, deserted like a wilderness;
there the calf grazes and there lies down,
and crops every twig.

11 Its boughs snap off when they grow dry,
and women come and light their fires with them.
For they are a people without sense;
therefore their maker will show them no mercy,
he who formed them will show them no favour.

^a Or primeval.
Heb. adds all fruit.

^b Verses 8-10 re-arranged thus: 9, 10a, 8, 10b.
^d Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds by dismissing her.

^c Prob. rdg.;

On that day the LORD will beat out the grain, 12
 from the streams of the Euphrates to the Torrent of Egypt;
 but you Israelites will be gleaned
 one by one.

On that day 13
 a blast shall be blown on a great trumpet, and those who are lost in Assyria and those dispersed in Egypt will come in and worship the LORD on the holy mountain, in Jerusalem.

Assyria and Judah

Oh, the proud garlands of the drunkards of Ephraim 28
 and the flowering sprays, so lovely in their beauty,
 on the heads of revellers dripping with perfumes,
 overcome with wine!

See, the Lord has one at his bidding, mighty and strong, 2 whom he sets to work with violence against the land, like a sweeping storm of hail, like a destroying tempest,
 like a torrent of water in overwhelming flood.

The proud garlands of Ephraim's drunkards 3 shall be trampled underfoot,
 and the flowering sprays, so lovely in their beauty 4
 on the heads dripping with perfumes, shall be like early figs ripe before summer;
 he who sees them plucks them,
 and their bloom is gone while they lie in his hand.

On that day the LORD of Hosts shall be a lovely garland, 5 a beautiful diadem for the remnant of his people, a spirit of justice for one who presides in a court of justice, 6 and of valour for^a those who repel the enemy at the gate.

These too are addicted to wine, 7
 clamouring in their cups:
 priest and prophet are addicted to strong drink
 and bemused with wine;
 clamouring in their cups, confirmed toppers,^b hiccuping in drunken stupor;
 every table is covered with vomit, 8
 filth that leaves no clean spot.
 Who is it that the prophet hopes to teach, 9
 to whom will what they hear make sense?

^a for: prob. rdg.; Heb. om.

^b These too . . . toppers: or These too lose their way through wine and are set wandering by strong drink: priest and prophet lose their way through strong drink and are fuddled with wine; are set wandering by strong drink, lose their way through tripping.

- Are they babes newly weaned, just taken from the breast?
 It is all harsh cries and raucous shouts,
 10 'A little more here, a little there!'
- 11 So it will be with barbarous speech and strange tongue that this people will hear God speaking, 12 this people to whom he once said,
 'This is true rest; let the exhausted have rest.
 This is repose', and they refused to listen.
- 13 Now to them the word of the LORD will be harsh cries and raucous shouts,
 'A little more here, a little there!'—
 and so, as they walk, they will stumble backwards, they will be injured, trapped and caught.
- 14 Listen then to the word of the LORD, you arrogant men who rule this people in Jerusalem.
- 15 You say, 'We have made a treaty with Death and signed a pact with Sheol:
 so that, when the raging flood sweeps by, it shall not touch us;
 for we have taken refuge in lies and sheltered behind falsehood.'
- 16 These then are the words of the Lord GOD:
 Look, I am laying a stone in Zion, a block of granite,
 a precious corner-stone for a firm foundation;
 he who has faith shall not waver.
- 17 I will use justice as a plumb-line
 and righteousness as a plummet; hail shall sweep away your refuge of lies,
 and flood-waters carry away your shelter.
- 18 Then your treaty with Death shall be annulled
 and your pact with Sheol shall not stand;
 the raging waters will sweep by,
 and you will be like land swept by the flood.
- 19 As often as it sweeps by, it will take you;
 morning after morning it will sweep by,
 day and night.
 The very thought of such tidings
 will bring nothing but dismay; 20 for 'The bed is too short for a man to stretch,
 and the blanket too narrow to cover him.'
- 21 But the LORD shall arise as he rose on Mount Perazim and storm with rage as he did in the Vale of Gibeon to do what he must do—how strange a deed!
 to perform his work—how outlandish a work!
- 22 But now have done with your arrogance,
 lest your bonds grow tighter;
 for I have heard destruction decreed by the Lord GOD of Hosts for the whole land.

Listen and hear what I say, attend and hear my words.	23
Will the ploughman continually plough for the sowing, breaking his ground and harrowing it?	24
Does he not, once he has levelled it, broadcast the dill and scatter the cummin?	25
Does he not plant the wheat in rows with barley ^a and spelt along the edge?
Does not his God instruct him and train him aright?	26
Dill is not threshed with a sledge, and the cartwheel is not rolled over cummin; dill is beaten with a rod, and cummin with a flail.	27
Corn is crushed, but not to the uttermost, not with a final crushing;	28 his cartwheels rumble over it and break it up, but they do not grind it fine.
This message, too, comes from the LORD of Hosts, whose purposes are wonderful and his power great.	29
Alas for Ariel! Ariel, the city where David encamped.	29
Add year to year, let the pilgrim-feasts run their round, and I will bring Ariel to sore straits, when there shall be moaning and lamentation.	2
I will make her my Ariel indeed, my fiery altar.
I will throw my army round you like a wall; I will set a ring of outposts all round you and erect siege-works against you.	3
You shall be brought low, you will speak out of the ground and your words will issue from the earth;	4 your voice will come like a ghost's from the ground, and your words will squeak out of the earth.
Yet the horde of your enemies shall crumble into dust, the horde of ruthless foes shall fly like chaff.	5
Then suddenly, all in an instant, punishment shall come from the LORD of Hosts with thunder and earthquake and a great noise, with storm and tempest and a flame of devouring fire;	6
and the horde of all the nations warring against Ariel, all their baggage-trains and siege-works, and all her oppressors themselves, shall fade as a dream, a vision of the night.	7
Like a starving man who dreams and thinks that he is eating,	8

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds an unintelligible word.

but wakes up to find himself empty,
 or a thirsty man who dreams
 and thinks that he is drinking,
 but wakes up to find himself thirsty and dry, so shall the horde of all the nations be that war against Mount Zion.

9 Loiter and be dazed, enjoy yourselves and be blinded, be drunk but not with wine, reel but not with strong drink;
 10 for the LORD has poured upon you a spirit of deep stupor;
 he has closed your eyes, the prophets,
 and muffled your heads, the seers.

11 All prophetic vision has become for you like a sealed book. Give such a book to one who can read and say, 'Come, read this'; he will answer, 12 'I cannot', because it is sealed. Give it to one who cannot read and say,
 'Come, read this'; he will answer, 'I cannot read.'

13 Then the Lord said:

Because this people approach me with their mouths and honour me with their lips
 while their hearts are far from me, and their religion is but a precept of men, learnt by rote, 14 therefore I will yet again shock this people, adding shock to shock:
 the wisdom of their wise men shall vanish
 and the discernment of the discerning shall be lost.

15 Shame upon those who seek to hide their purpose too deep for the LORD to see,
 and who, when their deeds are done in the dark, say, 'Who sees us? Who knows of us?'
 16 How you turn things upside down,
 as if the potter ranked no higher than the clay!
 Shall the thing made say of its maker, 'He did not make me'?
 Shall the pot say of the potter, 'He has no skill'?

17 The time is but short before Lebanon goes back to grassland and the grassland is no better than scrub.

18 On that day deaf men shall hear when a book is read, and the eyes of the blind shall see out of impenetrable darkness.

19 The lowly shall once again rejoice in the LORD, and the poorest of men exult in the Holy One of Israel.
 20 The ruthless shall be no more, the arrogant shall cease to be;
 those who are quick to see mischief, 21 those who charge others with a sin or lay traps for him who brings the wrongdoer into court or by falsehood deny justice to the righteous—

all these shall be exterminated.

Therefore these are the words of the LORD the God of the house of 22
Jacob, the God who ransomed Abraham:

This is no time for Jacob to be shamed,
no time for his face to grow pale;
for his descendants will hallow my name 23
when they see what I have done in their nation.
They will hallow the Holy One of Jacob and hold the God of Israel in awe;
those whose minds are confused will gain understanding, 24
and the obstinate will receive instruction.

Oh, rebel sons! says the LORD, 30
you make plans, but not of my devising,
you weave schemes, but not inspired by me,
piling sin upon sin;
you hurry down to Egypt without consulting me, 2
to seek protection under Pharaoh's shelter and take refuge under Egypt's wing.
Pharaoh's protection will bring you disappointment 3
and refuge under Egypt's wing humiliation;
for, though his officers are at Zoan 4
and his envoys reach as far as Hanes, all are left in sorry plight by that unprofitable nation, 5 no help they find, no profit, only disappointment and disgrace.

The Beasts of the South: an oracle. 6

Through a land of hardship and distress
the tribes of lioness and roaring lion, sand-viper and venomous flying serpent, carry their wealth on the backs of asses
and their treasures on camels' humps to an unprofitable people.
Vain and worthless is the help of Egypt; 7 therefore have I given her this name, Rahab Quelled.
Now come and write it on a tablet, 8
engrave it as an inscription before their eyes, that it may be there in future days,
a testimony for all time.
For they are a race of rebels, disloyal sons, 9 sons who will not listen to the LORD's instruction;
they say to the seers, 'You shall not see', 10
and to the visionaries, 'You shall have no true visions';
give us smooth words and seductive visions.

- 11 Turn aside, leave the straight path, and rid us for ever of the Holy One of Israel.’
- 12 These are the words of the Holy One of Israel:
Because you have rejected this warning and trust in devious and dishonest practices, resting on them for support, 13 therefore you shall find this iniquity will be like a crack running down
a high wall, which bulges
and suddenly, all in an instant, comes crashing down, 14 as an earthen jar is broken with a crash, mercilessly shattered,
so that not a shard is found among the fragments
to take fire from the glowing embers, or to scoop up water from a pool.
- 15 These are the words of the Lord GOD the Holy One of Israel:
Come back, keep peace, and you will be safe;
in stillness and in staying quiet, there lies your strength.
16 But you would have none of it; you said, No,
we will take horse and flee;
therefore you shall be put to flight:
We will ride apace;
therefore swift shall be the pace of your pursuers.
17 When a thousand flee at the challenge of one,
you shall all flee at the challenge of five, until you are left like a pole on a mountain-top, a signal post on a hill.
18 Yet the LORD is waiting to show you his favour,
yet he yearns to have pity on you;
for the LORD is a God of justice.
Happy are all who wait for him!
- 19 O people of Zion who dwell in Jerusalem, you shall weep no more. The LORD will show you favour and answer you when he hears your cry for 20 help. The Lord may give you bread of adversity and water of affliction, but he who teaches you shall no longer be hidden out of sight, but with 21 your own eyes you shall see him always. If you stray from the road to right or left you shall hear with your own ears a voice behind you saying, This 22 is the way; follow it. You will reject, as things unclean, your silvered images and your idols sheathed in gold; you will loathe them like a foul 23 discharge and call them ordure.^d The Lord will give you rain for the seed you sow, and as the produce of your soil he will give you heavy crops of 24 corn in plenty. When that day comes the cattle shall graze in broad pastures; the oxen and asses that work your land shall be fed with well-seasoned 25 fodder, winnowed with shovel and fork. On each high mountain and each lofty hill shall be streams of running water, on the day of massacre when the 26 highest in the land fall. The moon shall shine with a brightness like the sun's, and the sun with seven times his wonted brightness, seven days' light in one, on the day when the LORD binds up the broken limbs of his people and heals their wounds.

^d call them ordure: or say to them, Be off.

See, the name of the LORD comes from afar, 27
his anger blazing and his doom heavy.

His lips are charged with wrath
and his tongue is a devouring fire.
His breath is like a torrent in spate, 28
rising neck-high,

a yoke to force the nations to their ruin,
a bit in the mouth to guide the peoples astray.

But for you there shall be songs, 29
as on a night of sacred pilgrimage, your hearts glad, as the hearts of men who walk to the sound of the pipe on their way to the LORD's hill, to the rock of Israel.

Then the LORD shall make his voice heard in majesty 30 and show his arm sweeping down in fierce anger with devouring flames of fire,

with cloudburst and tempests of rain and hailstones;
for at the voice of the LORD Assyria's heart fails her, 31
as she feels the stroke of his rod.

Tambourines and harps and shaking sistrums 32 shall keep time
with every stroke of his rod,

of the chastisement which the LORD inflicts on her.
Long ago was Topheth made ready,^a 33 made deep and broad,

its fire-pit a blazing mass of logs, and the breath of the LORD like a stream of brimstone blazing in it.

Shame upon those who go down to Egypt for help 31
and rely on horses,

putting their trust in chariots many in number and in horsemen in their thousands, but do not look to the Holy One of Israel or seek guidance of the LORD!

Yet the LORD too in his wisdom can bring about trouble 2
and he does not take back his words;

he will rise up against the league of evildoers,
against all who help those who do wrong.

The Egyptians are men, not God,^b 3
their horses are flesh, not spirit;
and, when the LORD stretches out his hand,
the helper will stumble and he who is helped will fall,
and they will all vanish together.

^a Prob. rdg. ; Heb. adds is that prepared also for the king?

^b Or gods.

4 This is what the LORD has said to me :

As a lion or a young lion growls over its prey
when the muster of shepherds is called out against it, and is not scared at their noise
or cowed by their clamour, so shall the LORD of Hosts come down to do battle for Mount Zion and her high summit.

5 Thus the LORD of Hosts, like a bird hovering over its young, will be a shield over Jerusalem ;
he will shield her and deliver her,
standing over her and delivering her.

6 O Israel, come back to him whom you have so deeply offended,
7 for on that day when you spurn, one and all,
the idols of silver and the idols of gold which your own sinful hands have made,

8 Assyria shall fall by the sword, but by no sword of man ;
a sword that no man wields shall devour him.
He shall flee before the sword,
and his young warriors shall be put to forced labour, 9 his officers shall be helpless from terror and his captains too dismayed to flee.

This is the very word of the LORD
whose fire blazes in Zion,
and whose furnace is set up in Jerusalem.

32 Behold, a king shall reign in righteousness and his rulers rule with justice, 2 and a man shall be a refuge from the wind and a shelter from the tempest, or like runnels of water in dry ground,
like the shadow of a great rock in a thirsty land.

3 The eyes that can see will not be clouded,
and the ears that can hear will listen ;
4 the anxious heart will understand and know,
and the man who stammers will at once speak plain.

5 The scoundrel will no longer be thought noble,
nor the villain called a prince ;
6 for the scoundrel will speak like a scoundrel and will hatch evil in his heart ;
he is an impostor in all his actions,
and in his words a liar even to the LORD ;
he starves the hungry of their food and refuses drink to the thirsty.

7 The villain's ways are villainous and he devises infamous plans to ruin the poor with his lies and deny justice to the needy.

- But the man of noble mind forms noble designs and stands firm in his nobility. 8
- You women that live at ease, stand up and hear what I have to say. 9
- You young women without a care, mark my words.
You have no cares now, but when the year is out, you will tremble, for the vintage will be over and no produce gathered in. 10
- You who are now at ease, be anxious;
tremble, you who have no cares. 11
- Strip yourselves bare;
put a cloth round your waists and beat your breasts 12
- for the pleasant fields and fruitful vines.
On the soil of my people shall spring up thorns and briars,
in every happy home and in the busy town,
for the palace is forsaken and the crowded streets deserted;
citadel^a and watch-tower are turned into open heath,
the joy of wild asses ever after and pasture for the flocks, until a spirit from on high is lavished upon us. 15
- Then the wilderness will become grassland
and grassland will be cheap as scrub;
then justice shall make its home in the wilderness,
and righteousness dwell in the grassland;
when righteousness shall yield peace 16
- and its fruit be quietness and confidence for ever. 17
- Then my people shall live in a tranquil country, dwelling in peace, in houses full of ease;
it will be cool on the slopes of the forest then,
and cities shall lie peaceful in the plain. 18
- Happy shall you be, sowing every man by the water-side, and letting ox and ass run free. 20
- Ah! you destroyer, yourself undestroyed, betrayer still unbetrayed, 33
- when you cease to destroy you will be destroyed,
after all your betrayals, you will be betrayed yourself.
- O LORD, show us thy favour; we hope in thee. 2
- Uphold us every morning,
save us when troubles come.
- At the roar of the thunder the peoples flee,
at thy rumbling nations are scattered; 3
- their spoil is swept up as if young locusts had swept it, like a swarm of locusts men swarm upon it. 4
- The LORD is supreme, for he dwells on high;
if you fill Zion with justice and with righteousness, 5

^a Or hill; Heb. Ophel.

- 6 then he will be the mainstay of the age: ^a wisdom and knowledge are the assurance of salvation;
 the fear of the LORD is her ^b treasure.
- 7 Hark, how the valiant cry aloud for help,
 and those sent to sue for peace weep bitterly!
- 8 The highways are deserted, no travellers tread the roads.
 Covenants are broken, treaties are flouted;
 man is of no account.
- 9 The land is parched and wilting,
 Lebanon is eaten away and crumbling;
 Sharon has become a desert,
 Bashan and Carmel are stripped bare.
- 10 Now, says the LORD, I will rise up.
 Now I will exalt myself, now lift myself up.
- 11 What you conceive and bring to birth is chaff and stubble;
 a wind like fire shall devour you.
- 12 Whole nations shall be heaps of white ash,
 or like thorns cut down and set on fire.
- 13 You who dwell far away, hear what I have done;
 acknowledge my might, you who are near.
- 14 In Zion sinners quake with terror,
 the godless are seized with trembling and ask,
 Can any of us live with a devouring fire?
 Can any live in endless burning?
- 15 The man who lives an upright life and speaks the truth,
 who scorns to enrich himself by extortion,
 who snaps his fingers at a bribe,
 who stops his ears to hear nothing of bloodshed,
 who closes his eyes to the sight of evil—
- 16 that is the man who shall dwell on the heights,
 his refuge a fastness in the cliffs,
 his bread secure and his water never failing.
- 17 Your eyes shall see a king in his splendour
 and will look upon a land of far distances.
- 18 You will call to mind what once you feared:
 ‘Where then is he that counted, where is he that weighed,
 where is he that counted the treasures?’
- 19 You will no longer see that barbarous people, that people whose speech was so hard to catch,
 whose stuttering speech you could not understand.
- 20 Look upon Zion, city of our solemn feasts,
 let your eyes rest on Jerusalem,
 a land of comfort, a tent that shall never be shifted,
 whose pegs shall never be pulled up,
 not one of its ropes cast loose.

There we have the LORD's majesty; ^a 21

For the LORD our judge, the LORD our law-giver, 22
 the LORD our king—he himself will save us.
 [Men may say, Your rigging is slack; 23
 it will not hold the mast firm in its socket, nor can the sails be spread.]

Then the blind man shall have a full share of the spoil and the lame shall take part in the pillage;
 no man who dwells there shall say, 'I am sick'; 24
 and the sins of the people who live there shall be pardoned.

Edom and Israel

Approach, you nations, to listen, 34
 and attend, you peoples;
 let the earth listen and everything in it,
 the world and all that it yields;
 for the LORD's anger is turned against all the nations 2
 and his wrath against all the host of them:
 he gives them over to slaughter and destruction.
 Their slain shall be flung out, 3
 the stench shall rise from their corpses,
 and the mountains shall stream with their blood.
 All the host of heaven shall crumble into nothing, 4
 the heavens shall be rolled up like a scroll, and the starry host fade away,
 as the leaf withers from the vine
 and the ripening fruit from the fig-tree;
 for the sword of the LORD^d appears in heaven. 5
 See how it descends in judgement on Edom, on the people whom he dooms^e to destruction.

The LORD has a sword steeped in blood, 6
 it is gorged with fat,
 the fat of rams' kidneys, and the blood of lambs and goats;
 for he has a sacrifice in Bozrah,
 a great slaughter in Edom.

Wild oxen shall come down and buffaloes^f with them, 7
 bull and bison together,
 and the land shall drink deep of blood and the soil be sated with fat.

For the LORD has a day of vengeance, 8

- 9 the champion of Zion has a year when he will requite.
 Edom's torrents shall be turned into pitch and its soil into brimstone, 10 and the land shall become blazing pitch,
 which night and day shall never be quenched,
 and its smoke shall go up for ever.
 From generation to generation it shall lie waste,
 and no man shall pass through it ever again.
 11 Horned owl and bustard shall make their home in it, screech-owl and raven shall haunt it.
 He has stretched across it a measuring-line of chaos,
 12 and its frontiers shall be a jumble of stones.
 No king shall be acclaimed there,
 and all its princes shall come to nought.
 13 Thorns shall sprout in its palaces;
 nettles and briars shall cover its walled towns.
 It shall be rough land fit for wolves, a haunt of desert-owls.
 14 Marmots shall consort with jackals,
 and he-goat shall encounter he-goat.
 There too the nightjar shall rest and find herself a place for repose.
 15 There the sand-partridge shall make her nest, lay her eggs and hatch them and gather her brood under her wings;
 there shall the kites gather,
 one after another.
 16 Consult the book of the LORD and read it:
 not one of these shall be lacking,
 not one miss its fellow,
 for with his own mouth he has ordered it and with his own breath he has brought them together.
 17 He it is who has allotted each its place,
 and his hand has measured out their portions;
 they shall occupy it for ever and dwell there from generation to generation.
- 35 Let the wilderness and the thirsty land be glad,
 let the desert rejoice and burst into flower.
 2 Let it flower with fields of asphodel,
 let it rejoice and shout for joy.
 The glory of Lebanon is given to it,
 the splendour too of Carmel and Sharon;
 these shall see the glory of the LORD, the splendour of our God.
 3 Strengthen the feeble arms,
 steady the tottering knees;
 4 say to the anxious, Be strong and fear not.
 See, your God comes with vengeance,
 with dread retribution he comes to save you.

Then shall blind men's eyes be opened,
and the ears of the deaf unstopped. 5
Then shall the lame man leap like a deer, 6
and the tongue of the dumb shout aloud;
for water springs up in the wilderness,
and torrents flow in dry land.
The mirage becomes a pool, 7
the thirsty land bubbling springs;
instead of reeds and rushes, grass shall grow in the rough land where wolves now lurk.
And there shall be a causeway there 8
which shall be called the Way of Holiness, and the unclean shall not pass along it;
it shall become a pilgrim's way,^a no fool shall trespass on it.
No lion shall come there, 9
no savage beast climb on to it;
not one shall be found there.
By it those he has ransomed shall return and the LORD's redeemed come home; 10
they shall enter Zion with shouts of triumph, crowned with everlasting gladness.
Gladness and joy shall be their escort,
and suffering and weariness shall flee away.

Jerusalem delivered from Sennacherib

IN THE FOURTEENTH YEAR of the reign of Hezekiah, Sennacherib king 36 1^b of Assyria attacked and took all the fortified cities of Judah. From Lachish 2 he sent the chief officer^c with a strong force to King Hezekiah at Jerusalem; and he halted by the conduit of the Upper Pool on the causeway which leads to the Fuller's Field. There Eliakim son of Hilkiah, the comp- 3 troller of the household, came out to him, with Shebna the adjutant-general and Joah son of Asaph, the secretary of state. The chief officer said to 4 them, 'Tell Hezekiah that this is the message of the Great King, the king of Assyria: "What ground have you for this confidence of yours? Do you 5 think fine words can take the place of skill and numbers? On whom then do you rely for support in your rebellion against me? On Egypt? Egypt 6 is a splintered cane that will run into a man's hand and pierce it if he leans on it. That is what Pharaoh king of Egypt proves to all who rely on him.
And if you tell me that you are relying on the LORD your God, is he not the 7 god whose hill-shrines and altars Hezekiah has suppressed, telling Judah and Jerusalem that they must prostrate themselves before this altar alone?"
'Now, make a bargain with my master the king of Assyria: I will give 8 you two thousand horses if you can find riders for them. Will you reject 9

10 the authority of even the least of my master's servants and rely on Egypt for chariots and horsemen? Do you think that I have come to attack this land and destroy it without the consent of the LORD? No; the LORD himself said to me, "Attack this land and destroy it."

11 Eliakim, Shebna, and Joah said to the chief officer, 'Please speak to us in Aramaic, for we understand it; do not speak Hebrew to us within earshot
12 of the people on the city wall.' The chief officer answered, 'Is it to your master and to you that my master has sent me to say this? Is it not to the people sitting on the wall who, like you, will have to eat their own dung and drink their own urine?' Then he stood and shouted in Hebrew, 'Hear 13 the message of the Great King, the king of Assyria. These are the king's 14 words: "Do not be taken in by Hezekiah. He cannot save you. Do not let him persuade you to rely on the LORD, and tell you that the LORD will save 15 you and that this city will never be surrendered to the king of Assyria."
16 Do not listen to Hezekiah; these are the words of the king of Assyria: "Make peace with me. Come out to me, and then you shall each eat the fruit of his own vine and his own fig-tree, and drink the water of his own
17 cistern, until I come and take you to a land like your own, a land of grain 18 and new wine, of corn and vineyards. Beware lest Hezekiah mislead you by telling you that the LORD will save you. Did the god of any of these 19 nations save his land from the king of Assyria? Where are the gods of Hamath and Arpad? Where are the gods of Sepharvaim? Where are the 20 gods of Samaria? Did they save Samaria from me? Among all the gods of these nations is there one who saved his land from me? And how is the LORD to save Jerusalem?"'

21 The people were silent and answered not a word, for the king had given 22 orders that no one was to answer him. Eliakim son of Hilkiah, comptroller of the household, Shebna the adjutant-general, and Joah son of Asaph, secretary of state, came to Hezekiah with their clothes rent and reported what the chief officer had said.

37 1^a When King Hezekiah heard their report, he rent his clothes and wrapped
2 himself in sackcloth, and went into the house of the LORD. He sent Eliakim comptroller of the household, Shebna the adjutant-general, and the senior
3 priests, all covered in sackcloth, to the prophet Isaiah son of Amoz, to give him this message from the king: 'This day is a day of trouble for us,
4 a day of reproof and contempt. We are like a woman who has no strength to bear the child that is coming to the birth. It may be that the LORD your 5 God heard the words of the chief officer whom his master the king of Assyria sent to taunt the living God, and will confute what he, the LORD
6 your God, heard. Offer a prayer for those who still survive.' King Hezekiah's
7 servants came to Isaiah, and he told them to say this to their master: 'This is the word of the LORD: "Do not be alarmed at what you heard when the 8 lackeys of the king of Assyria blasphemed me. I will put a spirit in him, and he shall hear a rumour and withdraw to his own country; and there I will 9 make him fall by the sword."''

8 So the chief officer withdrew. He heard that the king of Assyria had 9 left Lachish, and he found him attacking Libnah. But when the king learnt that Tirhakah king of Cush was on the way to make war on him, he sent messengers again^a to Hezekiah king of Judah, to say to him, 'How can you be deluded by your god on whom you rely when he promises that Jerusalem shall not fall into the hands of the king of Assyria? Surely you have heard what the kings of Assyria have done to all countries, exterminating their people; can you then hope to escape? Did their gods save the nations which my forefathers destroyed, Gozan, Harran, Rezep, and the people of Beth-eden living in Telassar? Where are the kings of Hamath, of Arpad, and of Lahir, Sepharvaim, Hena, and Ivvah?'

Hezekiah took the letter from the messengers and read it; then he went up into the house of the LORD, spread it out before the LORD and offered this prayer: 'O LORD of Hosts, God of Israel, enthroned on the cherubim, thou alone art God of all the kingdoms of the earth; thou hast made heaven and earth. Turn thy ear to me, O LORD, and listen; open thine eyes, O LORD, and see; hear the message that Sennacherib has sent to taunt the living God. It is true, O LORD, that the kings of Assyria have laid waste every country, that they have consigned their gods to the fire and destroyed them; for they were no gods but the work of men's hands, mere wood and stone. But now, O LORD our God, save us from his power, so that all the kingdoms of the earth may know that thou, O LORD, alone art God.'

Isaiah son of Amoz sent to Hezekiah and said, 'This is the word of the LORD the God of Israel: I have heard your prayer to me concerning Sennacherib king of Assyria. This is the word which the LORD has spoken concerning him:

The virgin daughter of Zion disdains you,
she laughs you to scorn;
the daughter of Jerusalem tosses her head
as you retreat.

Whom have you taunted and blasphemed?
Against whom have you clamoured,
casting haughty glances at the Holy One of Israel?
You have sent your servants to taunt the Lord,
and said:

With my countless chariots I have gone up high in the mountains, into the recesses of Lebanon.
I have cut down its tallest cedars,
the best of its pines,
I have reached its highest limit of forest and meadow.^b
I have dug wells
and drunk the waters of a foreign land, and with the soles of my feet I have dried up all the streams of Egypt.

Have you not heard long ago?
I did it all.

In days gone by I planned it and now I have brought it about, making fortified cities tumble down into heaps of rubble.

- 27 Their citizens, shorn of strength, disheartened and ashamed,
were but as plants in the field, as green herbs,
as grass on the roof-tops blasted before the east wind.
28 I know your rising up and your sitting down, your going out and your coming in.
29 The frenzy of your rage against me and your arrogance have come to my ears.
I will put a ring in your nose
and a hook in your lips, and I will take you back by the road
on which you have come.

- 30 This shall be the sign for you: this year you shall eat shed grain and in the second year what is self-sown; but in the third year sow and reap, plant 31 vineyards and eat their fruit. The survivors left in Judah shall strike fresh 32 root under ground and yield fruit above ground, for a remnant shall come out of Jerusalem and survivors from Mount Zion. The zeal of the LORD of Hosts will perform this.

- 33 'Therefore, this is the word of the LORD concerning the king of Assyria:

He shall not enter this city
nor shoot an arrow there,
he shall not advance against it with shield
nor cast up a siege-ramp against it.

- 34 By the way on which he came he shall go back;
this city he shall not enter.

This is the very word of the LORD.

- 35 I will shield this city to deliver it, for my own sake and for the sake of my servant David.'

- 36 The angel of the LORD went out and struck down a hundred and eighty-five thousand men in the Assyrian camp; when morning dawned, they 37 all lay dead. So Sennacherib king of Assyria broke camp, went back to 38 Nineveh and stayed there. One day, while he was worshipping in the temple of his god Nisroch, Adrammelech and Sharezer his sons murdered him and escaped to the land of Ararat. He was succeeded by his son Esarhaddon.

- 38 ^{1a} At this time Hezekiah fell dangerously ill and the prophet Isaiah son of Amoz came to him and said, 'This is the word of the LORD: Give your last instructions to your household, for you are a dying man and will not 2 recover.' Hezekiah turned his face to the wall and offered this prayer to 3 the LORD: 'O LORD, remember how I have lived before thee, faithful and loyal in thy service, always doing what was good in thine eyes.' And he 4 5 wept bitterly. Then the word of the LORD came to Isaiah: 'Go and say to Hezekiah: "This is the word of the LORD the God of your father David:

^a Verses 1-8, 21, 22: cp. 2 Kgs. 20. 1-11.

I have heard your prayer and seen your tears; I will add fifteen years to your life. I will deliver you and this city from the king of Assyria and will protect this city.”^a Then Isaiah told them to apply a fig-plaster; so they made one and applied it to the boil, and he recovered. Then Hezekiah said, ‘By what sign shall I know that I shall go up into the house of the LORD?’ And Isaiah said,^b ‘This shall be your sign from the LORD that he will do what he has promised. Watch the shadow cast by the sun on the stairway of Ahaz: I will bring backwards ten steps the shadow which has gone down on the stairway.’ And the sun went back ten steps on the stairway down which it had gone.

A poem of Hezekiah king of Judah after his recovery from his illness, as it was written down:

I thought: In the prime of life I must pass away;
 for the rest of my years I am consigned to the gates of Sheol. 10
 I said: I shall no longer see the LORD 11
 in the land of the living;
 never again, like those who live in the world,
 shall I look on a man.
 My dwelling is taken from me, 12 pulled up like a shepherd's tent;
 thou hast cut short my life like a weaver who severs the web from the thrum.
 From morning to night thou tormentest me,
 then I am racked with pain till the morning. 13
 All my bones are broken, as a lion would break them;
 from morning to night thou tormentest me.
 I twitter as if I were a swallow, 14
 I moan like a dove.
 My eyes falter as I look up to the heights;
 O Lord, pay heed, stand surety for me.
 How can I complain, what can I say to the LORD 15
 when he himself has done this?
 I wander to and fro all my life long in the bitterness of my soul.
 Yet, O Lord, my soul shall live with thee; 16
 do thou give my spirit rest.^c Restore me and give me life.
 Bitterness had indeed been my lot in place of prosperity; 17
 but thou by thy love hast brought me back from the pit of destruction;
 for thou hast cast all my sins behind thee.
 Sheol cannot confess thee, 18
 Death cannot praise thee, nor can they who go down to the abyss hope for thy truth.

^c Yet . . . rest: prob. rdg.; Heb. unintelligible.

19 The living, the living alone can confess thee
 as I do this day,

 20 The LORD is at hand to save me;
 so let us sound the music of our praises
 all our life long in the house of the LORD.^d

39 1^b At this time Merodach-baladan son of Baladan king of Babylon sent envoys with a gift to Hezekiah; for he had heard that he had been ill and 2 was well again. Hezekiah welcomed them and showed them all his treasury, silver and gold, spices and fragrant oil, his entire armoury and everything 3 to be found among his treasures; there was nothing in his house and in all his realm that Hezekiah did not show them. Then the prophet Isaiah came to King Hezekiah and asked him, 'What did these men say and where have they come from?' 'They have come from a far-off country,' Hezekiah 4 answered, 'from Babylon.' Then Isaiah asked, 'What did they see in your house?' 'They saw everything,' Hezekiah replied; 'there was nothing among 5 my treasures that I did not show them.' Then Isaiah said to Hezekiah, 6 'Hear the word of the LORD of Hosts: The time is coming, says the LORD, when everything in your house, and all that your forefathers have amassed till the present day, will be carried away to Babylon; not a thing shall be 7 left. And some of the sons who will be born to you, sons of your own begetting, shall be taken and shall be made eunuchs in the palace of the 8 king of Babylon.' Hezekiah answered, 'The word of the LORD which you have spoken is good'; thinking to himself that peace and security would last out his lifetime.

they last no longer than a flower of the field.

the grass withers, the flowers fade, 8
but the word of our God endures for evermore.'

You who bring Zion good news, ^c up with you to the mountain-top; 9

you who bring good news to Jerusalem, ^d lift it up fearlessly;

Here is the Lord GOD coming in might, 10 coming to rule with his right arm.
His recompense comes with him,
he carries his reward before him.
He will tend his flock like a shepherd 11
and gather them together with his arm;
he will carry the lambs in his bosom
and lead the ewes to water.

Israel delivered and redeemed

Who has gauged the waters in the palm of his hand, 12

With whom did he confer to gain discernment? 14
Who taught him how to do justice

Do you not know, have you not heard?	28
The LORD, the everlasting God, creator of the wide world, grows neither weary nor faint; no man can fathom his understanding.
He gives vigour to the weary, new strength to the exhausted.	29
Young men may grow weary and faint, even in their prime they may stumble and fall; but those who look to the LORD will win new strength,	30
they will grow wings like eagles; they will run and not be weary, they will march on and never grow faint.	31
Keep silence before me, all you coasts and islands; let the peoples come to meet me. ^a	41

It is I, the LORD, I am the first, and to the last of them I am He.

 he marches over viceroys as if they were mud,
 like a potter treading his clay.
 Tell us, who declared this from the beginning, that we might know it, 26 or told us beforehand so that we could say, 'He was right'?
 Not one declared, not one foretold,
 not one heard a sound from you.
 Here is one who will speak first as advocate for Zion, 27
 here I appoint defending counsel for Jerusalem;
 but from the other side no advocate steps forward 28
 and, when I look, there is no one there.
 I ask a question and no one answers;
 see what empty things they are! 29
 Nothing that they do has any worth, their effigies are wind, mere nothings.
 Here is my servant, whom I uphold, 42
 my chosen one in whom I delight,
 I have bestowed my spirit upon him,
 and he will make justice shine on the nations.
 He will not call out or lift his voice high, 2 or^b make himself heard in the open street.
 He will not break a bruised reed, 3 or snuff out a smouldering wick;
 he will make justice shine on every race,^c never faltering, never breaking down,^d 4
 he will plant justice on earth,
 while coasts and islands wait for his teaching.
 Thus speaks the LORD who is God, 5
 he who created the skies and stretched them out,
 who fashioned the earth and all that grows in it,
 who gave breath to its people,
 the breath of life to all who walk upon it:
 I, the LORD, have called you with righteous purpose 6
 and taken you by the hand;
 I have formed you, and appointed you to be a light^e to all peoples,
 a beacon for the nations,

^a summoned him in: or who will call on. ^b He will not . . . or: or In very truth he will call out and lift his voice high, and . . . ^c on every race: or in truth.
^d never faltering . . . down: or he will neither rebuke nor wound. ^e Or a covenant.

- 7 to open eyes that are blind,
to bring captives out of prison,
out of the dungeons where they lie in darkness.
- 8 I am the LORD; the LORD^a is my name;
I will not give my glory to another god,
nor my praise to any idol.
- 9 See how the first prophecies have come to pass,
and now I declare new things;
before they break from the bud I announce them to you.
- 10 Sing a new song to the LORD,
sing his praise throughout the earth,
you that sail the sea, and all sea-creatures,
and you that inhabit the coasts and islands.
- 11 Let the wilderness and its towns rejoice,
and the villages of the tribe of Kedar.
Let those who live in Sela shout for joy and cry out from the hill-tops.
- 12 You coasts and islands, all uplift his praises;
let all ascribe glory to the LORD.
- 13 The LORD will go forth as a warrior,
he will rouse the frenzy of battle like a hero;
he will shout, he will raise the battle-cry
and triumph over his foes.
- 14 Long have I lain still,
I kept silence and held myself in check;
now I will cry like a woman in labour, whimpering, panting and gasping.
- 15 I will lay waste mountains and hills and shrivel all their green herbs;
I will turn rivers into desert wastes^b and dry up all the pools.
- 16 Then will I lead blind men on their way^c
and guide them by paths they do not know;
I will turn darkness into light before them and straighten their twisting roads.
- 17 All this I will do and leave nothing undone.
Those who trust in an image,
those who take idols for their gods
turn tail in bitter shame.
- 18 Hear now, you that are deaf;
you blind men, look and see:
yet who is blind but my servant,
who so deaf as the messenger whom I send?
Who so blind as the one who holds my commission,
so deaf as the servant of the LORD?

^a the LORD: or He.^b desert wastes: prob. rdg.; Heb. coasts and islands.^c Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds which they do not know.

You have seen much but remembered little, your ears are wide open but nothing is heard.	20
It pleased the LORD, for the furtherance of his justice, to make his law a law of surpassing majesty;	21
yet here is a people plundered and taken as prey, all of them ensnared, trapped in holes, lost to sight in dungeons, carried off as spoil without hope of rescue, as plunder with no one to say, 'Give it back.'	22
Hear this, all of you who will, listen henceforward and give me a hearing:	23
who gave away Jacob for plunder, who gave Israel away for spoil?	24
Was it not the LORD? They sinned against him, they would not follow his ways and refused obedience to his law;
so in his anger he poured out upon Jacob his wrath and the fury of battle.	25
It wrapped him in flames, yet still he did not learn the lesson, scorched him, yet he did not lay it to heart.
 But now this is the word of the LORD, the word of your creator, O Jacob, of him who fashioned you, Israel:	43
Have no fear; for I have paid your ransom; I have called you by name and you are my own.
When you pass through deep waters, I am with you, when you pass through rivers, they will not sweep you away; walk through fire and you will not be scorched, through flames and they will not burn you.	2
For I am the LORD your God, the Holy One of Israel, your deliverer;	3 for your ransom I give Egypt, Nubia and Seba are your price.
You are more precious to me than the Assyrians, you are honoured and I have loved you, I would give the Edomites in exchange for you, and the Leummim for your life.	4
 Have no fear; for I am with you; I will bring your children from the east and gather you all from the west.	5
I will say to the north, 'Give them up', and to the south, 'Do not hold them back.'	6
Bring my sons and daughters from afar, bring them from the ends of the earth; bring every one who is called by my name,	7

- all whom I have created, whom I have formed,
all whom I have made for my glory.'
- 8 Bring out this people,
a people who have eyes but are blind,
who have ears but are deaf.
- 9 All the nations are gathered together
and the peoples assembled.
Who amongst them can expound this thing
and interpret for us all that has gone before?
Let them produce witnesses to prove their case, or let them listen and say, 'That is the truth.'
- 10 My witnesses, says the LORD, are you, my servants, you whom I have chosen to know me and put your faith in me and understand that I am He.
Before me there was no god fashioned nor ever shall be after me.
- 11 I am the LORD, I myself,
and none but I can deliver.
- 12 I myself have made it known in full, and declared it,
I and no alien god amongst you,
and you are my witnesses, says the LORD.
- 13 I am God; from this very day I am He.
What my hand holds, none can snatch away;
what I do, none can undo.
- 14 Thus says the LORD your ransomer, the Holy One of Israel:
For your sakes I have sent to Babylon;
I will lay the Chaldeans prostrate as they flee,
and their cry of triumph will turn to groaning.
- 15 I am the LORD, your Holy One,
your creator, Israel, and your King.
- 16 Thus says the LORD,
who opened a way in the sea
and a path through mighty waters,
who drew on chariot and horse to their destruction,
a whole army, men of valour;
there they lay, never to rise again;
they were crushed, snuffed out like a wick:
- 18 Cease to dwell on days gone by and to brood over past history.
- 19 Here and now I will do a new thing;
this moment it will break from the bud.
Can you not perceive it?
- I will make a way even through the wilderness and paths in the barren desert;
the wild beasts shall do me honour,
the wolf and the ostrich;
- 20

for I will provide water in the wilderness and rivers in the barren desert, where my chosen people may drink.
I have formed this people for myself and they shall proclaim my praises.	21
Yet you did not call upon me, O Jacob; much less did you weary yourself in my service, O Israel.	22
You did not bring me sheep as whole-offerings or honour me with sacrifices;	23
I asked you for no burdensome offerings and wearied you with no demands for incense.
You did not buy me sweet-cane with your money or glut me with the fat of your sacrifices; rather you burdened me with your sins and wearied me with your iniquities.	24
I alone, I am He, who for his own sake wipes out your transgressions, who will remember your sins no more.	25
Cite me by name, let us argue it out; set forth your pleading and justify yourselves.	26
Your first father transgressed, your spokesmen rebelled against me, and your princes profaned my sanctuary;	27
so I sent Jacob to his doom and left Israel to execration.	28
Hear me now, Jacob my servant, hear me, my chosen Israel.	44
Thus says the LORD your maker, your helper, who fashioned you from birth: have no fear, Jacob my servant, Jeshurun whom I have chosen, for I will pour down rain on a thirsty land, showers on the dry ground.	2
I will pour out my spirit on your offspring and my blessing on your children.
They shall spring up like a green tamarisk, like poplars by a flowing stream.	3
This man shall say, 'I am the LORD's man', that one shall call himself a son of Jacob, another shall write the LORD's name on his hand and shall add the name of Israel to his own.	4
Thus says the LORD, Israel's King, the LORD of Hosts, his ransom:	5
I am the first and I am the last, and there is no god but me.
Who is like me? Let him stand up, let him declare himself and speak and show me his evidence,	6 7

let him announce beforehand^a things to come,
let him^b declare what is yet to happen.

8

Take heart, do not be afraid.
Did I not foretell this long ago?
I declared it, and you are my witnesses.
Is there any god beside me,
or any creator, even one that I do not know?

9

Those who make idols are less than nothing;
all their cherished images profit nobody;
their worshippers are blind,
sheer ignorance makes fools of them.

10

If a man makes a god or casts an image,
his labour is wasted.

11

Why! its votaries show their folly;
the craftsmen too are but men.
Let them all gather together and confront me,
all will be afraid and look the fools they are.

12

The blacksmith sharpens a graving tool and hammers out his work^c hot from the coals and shapes it with his strong arm; when he grows hungry his strength fails, if he has no water to drink he tires. The woodworker draws his line taut and marks out a figure with a scribe; he planes the wood and measures it with callipers, and he carves it to the shape of a man, comely as the human form, to be set up presently in a house.^d

A man plants a cedar and the rain makes it grow, so that later on he will have cedars to cut down; or he chooses an ilex or an oak to raise a stout tree for himself in the forest. It becomes fuel for his fire: some of it he takes and warms himself, some he kindles and bakes bread on it, and some he makes into a god and prostrates himself, shaping it into an idol and bowing down before it. The one half of it he burns in the fire and on this he roasts meat, so that he may eat his roast and be satisfied; he also warms himself at it and he says, 'Good! I can feel the heat, I am growing warm.'

17

Then what is left of the wood he makes into a god by carving it into shape;
he bows down to it and prostrates himself and prays to it, saying, 'Save me;
for thou art my god.' Such people neither know nor understand, their eyes made too blind to see, their minds too narrow to discern. Such a man will not use his reason, he has neither the wit nor the sense to say, 'Half of it I have burnt, yes, and used its embers to bake bread; I have roasted meat on them too and eaten it; but the rest of it I turn into this abominable thing and so I am worshipping a log of wood.' He feeds on ashes indeed! His own deluded mind has misled him, he cannot recollect himself so far as to say, 'Why! this thing in my hand is a sham.'

21

Remember all this, Jacob,
remember, Israel, for you are my servant,
I have fashioned you, and you are to serve me;

^a let him announce beforehand: prob. rdg.; Heb. since my appointing an ancient people and . . . ^b Prob. rdg.; Heb. them. ^c his work: prob. rdg.; Heb. he works.

^d Or a shrine.

- you shall not forget me, Israel.
 I have swept away your sins like a dissolving mist, 22
 and your transgressions are dispersed like clouds;
 turn back to me; for I have ransomed you.
 Shout in triumph, you heavens, for it is the LORD's doing; 23 cry out for joy, you lowest depths of the earth;
 break into songs of triumph, you mountains,
 you forest and all your trees;
 for the LORD has ransomed Jacob
 and made Israel his masterpiece.
- Thus says the LORD, your ransom, 24
 who fashioned you from birth:
 I am the LORD who made all things,
 by myself I stretched out the skies,
 alone I hammered out the floor of the earth.
 I frustrate false prophets and their signs 25
 and make fools of diviners;
 I reverse what wise men say and make nonsense of their wisdom.
 I make my servants' prophecies come true 26
 and give effect to my messengers' designs.
 I say of Jerusalem,
 'She shall be inhabited once more',
 and of the cities of Judah, 'They shall be rebuilt;
 all their ruins I will restore.'
 I say to the deep waters, 'Be dried up; 27
 I will make your streams run dry.'
 I say to Cyrus, 'You shall be my shepherd 28
 to carry out all my purpose, so that Jerusalem may be rebuilt and the foundations of the temple may be laid.'
- Thus says the LORD to Cyrus his anointed, 45
 Cyrus whom he has taken by the hand to subdue nations before him and undo the might of kings;
 before whom gates shall be opened and no doors be shut:
 I will go before you 2
 and level the swelling hills;
 I will break down gates of bronze and hack through iron bars.
 I will give you treasures from dark vaults, 3
 hoarded in secret places,
 that you may know that I am the LORD,
 Israel's God who calls you by name.

- 4 For the sake of Jacob my servant and Israel my chosen
I have called you by name and given you your title, though you have not known me.
- 5 I am the LORD, there is no other;
there is no god beside me.
I will strengthen you though you have not known me,
6 so that men from the rising and the setting sun
may know that there is none but I:
I am the LORD, there is no other;
7 I make the light, I create darkness,
author alike of prosperity and trouble.
I, the LORD, do all these things.
- 8 Rain righteousness, you heavens,
let the skies above pour down;
let the earth open to receive it,
that it may bear the fruit of salvation
with righteousness in blossom at its side.
All this I, the LORD, have created.
- 9 Will the pot contend^a with the potter,
or the earthenware^b with the hand that shapes it?
Will the clay ask the potter what he is making?
or his^c handiwork say to him, 'You have no skill'?
- 10 Will the babe say^d to his father, 'What are you begetting?', or to his mother, 'What are you bringing to birth?'
- 11 Thus says the LORD, Israel's Holy One, his maker:
Would you dare question me concerning my children,
or instruct me in my handiwork?
12 I alone, I made the earth and created man upon it;
I, with my own hands, stretched out the heavens and caused all their host to shine.
- 13 I alone have roused this man in righteousness,
and I will smooth his path before him;
he shall rebuild my city and let my exiles go free—
not for a price nor for a bribe,
says the LORD of Hosts.
- 14 Thus says the LORD:
Toilers of Egypt and Nubian merchants and Sabaeans bearing tribute^e shall come into your power and be your slaves, shall come and march behind you in chains;

^a Will . . . contend: prob. rdg.; Heb. Ho! he has contended.

^b Or shard.

^c Prob. rdg.; Heb. your.

^d Will . . . say: prob. rdg.; Heb. Ho! you that say.

^e bearing tribute: or men of stature.

- they shall bow down before you in supplication, saying,
 'Surely God is among you and there is no other,
 no other god.
 How then canst thou be a god that hidest thyself,
 O God of Israel, the deliverer?' 15
- Those who defy him are confounded and brought to shame,
 those who make idols perish in confusion. 16
 But Israel has been delivered by the LORD, delivered for all time to come; 17
 they shall not be confounded or put to shame for all eternity.
- Thus says the LORD, the creator of the heavens,
 he who is God, 18
 who made the earth and fashioned it and himself fixed it fast, who created it no empty void,
 but made it for a place to dwell in:
 I am the LORD, there is no other.
 I do not speak in secret, in realms of darkness, 19
 I do not say to the sons of Jacob,
 'Look for me in the empty void.'
- I the LORD speak what is right, declare what is just. 20 Gather together, come, draw near,
 all you survivors of the nations,
 you fools, who carry your wooden idols in procession and pray to a god that cannot save you.
- Come forward and urge your case, consult together: 21 who foretold this in days of old,
 who stated it long ago?
 Was it not I the LORD?
 There is no god but me;
 there is no god other than I, victorious and able to save. 22
 Look to me and be saved,
 you peoples from all corners of the earth;
 for I am God, there is no other.
- By my life I have sworn, 23
 I have given a promise of victory,
 a promise that will not be broken,
 that to me every knee shall bend
 and by me every tongue shall swear.
- In the LORD alone, men shall say, 24 are victory and might;
 and all who defy him
 shall stand ashamed in his presence, but all the sons of Israel shall stand victorious 25
 and find their glory in the LORD.

- 46 Bel has crouched down, Nebo has stooped low:
 their images, once carried in your processions,
 have been loaded on to beasts and cattle,
 a burden for the weary creatures;
 2 they stoop and they crouch;
 not for them to bring the burden to safety;
 the gods themselves go into captivity.
 3 Listen to me, house of Jacob and all the remnant of the house of Israel, a load on me from your birth, carried by me from the womb:
 4 till you grow old I am He,
 and when white hairs come, I will carry you still;
 I have made you and I will bear the burden,
 I will carry you and bring you to safety.
 5 To whom will you liken me? Who is my equal?
 With whom can you compare me? Where is my like?
 6 Those who squander their bags of gold and weigh out their silver with a balance hire a goldsmith to fashion them into a god;
 then they worship it and fall prostrate before it;
 7 they hoist it shoulder-high and carry it home;
 they set it down on its base;
 there it must stand, it cannot stir from its place.
 Let a man cry to it as he will, it never answers him;
 it cannot deliver him from his troubles.
- 8 Remember this, you rebels,
 consider it well, and abandon hope, 9 remember all that happened long ago;
 for I am God, there is no other,
 I am God, and there is no one like me;
 10 I reveal the end from the beginning,
 from ancient times I reveal what is to be;
 I say, 'My purpose shall take effect,
 I will accomplish all that I please.'
 11 I summon a bird of prey^a from the east,
 one from a distant land to fulfil my purpose.
 Mark this; I have spoken, and I will bring it about,
 I have a plan to carry out, and carry it out I will.
 12 Listen to me, all you stubborn hearts,
 for whom victory is far off:
 13 I bring my victory near, it is not far off,
 and my deliverance shall not be delayed;
 I will grant deliverance in Zion and give my glory to Israel.^b

^a a bird of prey: or a massed host.

^b and give my glory to Israel: or for Israel my glory.

- Down with you, sit in the dust,
virgin daughter of Babylon. 47
- Down from your throne, sit on the ground, daughter of the Chaldeans;
never again shall men call you soft-skinned and delicate.
- Take up the millstone, grind meal, uncover your tresses; 2 strip off your skirt, bare your thighs, wade through rivers, so that your nakedness may be plain to see 3
and your shame exposed.
- I will take vengeance, I will treat with none of you, says the Holy One of Israel, our ransom, 4
whose name is the LORD of Hosts.
- Sit silent, 5
be off into the shadows, daughter of the Chaldeans;
for never again shall men call you queen of many kingdoms.
- When I was angry with my people, 6
I dishonoured my own possession and gave them into your power.
- You showed them no mercy,
you made your yoke weigh heavy on the aged.
You said then, 'I shall reign a queen for ever', 7 while^a you gave no thought to this and did not consider how it would end.
- Now therefore listen to this, 8
you lover of luxury, carefree on your throne.
You say to yourself,
'I am, and who but I?'
No widow's weeds for me, no deaths of children.' 9
Yet suddenly, in a single day,
these two things shall come upon you;
they shall both come upon you in full measure: ^b children's deaths and widowhood, for all your monstrous sorceries, your countless spells.
- Secure in your wicked ways you thought, 'No one is looking.' 10
Your wisdom betrayed you, omniscient as you were,
and you said to yourself,
'I am, and who but I?'
Therefore evil shall come upon you, 11
and you will not know how to master it;
disaster shall befall you,
and you will not be able to charm it away;
ruin all unforeseen
shall come suddenly upon you.

^a for ever', while: or of a wide realm, for all time'; but.

^b in full measure: or at random.

12 Persist in your spells and your monstrous sorceries,^a maybe you can get help from them, maybe you will yet inspire awe.

13 But no! in spite of your many wiles you are powerless.
 Let your astrologers, your star-gazers
 who foretell your future month by month, persist, and save you!

14 But look, they are gone like chaff;
 fire burns them up;
 they cannot snatch themselves from the flames;
 this is no glowing coal to warm them,
 no fire for them to sit by.

15 So much for your magicians with whom you have trafficked all your life:
 they have stumbled off, each his own way,
 and there is no one to save you.

48 Hear this, you house of Jacob,
 you who are called by the name of Israel,
 you who spring from the seed of Judah;
 who swear by the name of the LORD and boast in the God of Israel,
 but not in honesty or sincerity,
 2 although you call yourselves citizens of a holy city and lean for support on the God of Israel;
 his name is the LORD of Hosts.

3 Long ago I announced what would first happen,
 I revealed it with my own mouth;
 suddenly I acted and it came about.

4 I knew that you were stubborn,
 your neck stiff as iron, your brow like bronze, 5 therefore I told you of these things long ago,
 and declared them before they came about,
 so that you could not say, 'This was my idol's doing;
 my image, the god that I fashioned, he ordained them.'

6 You have heard what I said; consider it well, and you must admit the truth of it.
 Now I show you new things,
 hidden things which you did not know before.

7 They were not created long ago, but in this very hour;
 you had never heard of them before today.
 You cannot say, 'I know them already.'

8 You neither heard nor knew,
 long ago your ears were closed;
 for I knew that you were untrustworthy, treacherous,
 a notorious rebel from your birth.

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds with which you have trafficked all your life (cp. verse 15).

For the sake of my own name I was patient, ^a rather than destroy you I held myself in check.	9
See how I tested you, not as silver is tested, but in the furnace of affliction; there I purified you.	10
For my honour, for my own honour I did it; let them disparage my past triumphs ^b if they will: I will not give my glory to any other god.	11
Hear me, Jacob, and Israel whom I called:	12
I am He; I am the first, I am the last also.
With my own hands I founded the earth, with my right hand I formed the expanse of sky; when I summoned them, they sprang at once into being.	13
Assemble, all of you, and listen to me; which of you has declared what is coming, that he whom I love shall wreak my ^c will on Babylon and the Chaldaeans shall be scattered?	14
I, I myself, have spoken, I have called him, I have made him appear, and wherever he goes he shall prosper.	15
Draw near to me and hear this: from the beginning I have never spoken in secret; from the moment of its first happening I was there. ^d	16
Thus says the LORD your ransomer, the Holy One of Israel: I am the LORD your God:	17
I teach you for your own advantage and lead you in the way you must go.
If only you had listened to my commands, your prosperity would have rolled on like a river in flood and your just success like the waves of the sea;	18
in number your children would have been like the sand and your descendants countless as its grains;	19
their name would never be erased or blotted from my sight. Come out of Babylon, hasten away from the Chaldaeans; proclaim it with loud songs of triumph, crying the news to the ends of the earth;	20
tell them, 'The LORD has ransomed his servant Jacob.' Though he led them through desert places they suffered no thirst, for them he made water run from the rock, for them he cleft the rock and streams gushed forth.	21
There is no peace for the wicked, says the LORD.	22

^a See note on verse 11. ^b my past triumphs: transposed from verse 9. ^c Or his.
^d Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds and now the Lord God has sent me, and his spirit.

Israel a light to the nations

- 49 Listen to me, you coasts and islands,
 pay heed, you peoples far away:
 from birth the LORD called me,
 he named me from my mother's womb.
- 2 He made my tongue his sharp sword and concealed me under cover of his hand;
 he made me a polished arrow and hid me out of sight in his quiver.
- 3 He said to me, 'You are my servant,
 Israel through whom I shall win glory';
 so I rose to honour in the LORD's sight and my God became my strength.^a
- 4 Once I said, 'I have laboured in vain;
 I have spent my strength for nothing, to no purpose';
 yet in truth my cause is with the LORD and my reward is in God's hands.
- 5 And now the LORD who formed me in the womb to be his servant,
 to bring Jacob back to him that Israel should be gathered to him,^b
 now the LORD calls me again:^c
- 6 it is too slight a task for you, as my servant,
 to restore the tribes of Jacob,
 to bring back the descendants of Israel:
 I will make you a light to the nations,
 to be my salvation^d to earth's farthest bounds.
- 7 Thus says the Holy One, the LORD who ransoms Israel,
 to one who thinks little of himself,
 whom every nation abhors,
 the slave of tyrants:
 When they see you kings shall rise, princes shall rise and bow down,
 because of the LORD who is faithful,
 because of the Holy One of Israel who has chosen you.
- 8 Thus says the LORD:
 In the hour of my favour I answered you, and I helped you on the day of deliverance,^e putting the land to rights and sharing out afresh its desolate fields;
- 9 I said to the prisoners, 'Go free',
 and to those in darkness, 'Come out and be seen.'

^a so I rose . . . strength: transposed from end of verse 5. or not be swept away.

^c See note on verse 3.

^b be gathered to him:
^d to be my salvation: or that my salvation may reach.

^e Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds I have formed you, and appointed you to be a light to all peoples (cp. 42. 6).

- They shall find pasture in the desert sands^a and grazing on all the dunes.
- They shall neither hunger nor thirst, 10
no scorching heat or sun shall distress them;
for one who loves them shall lead them
and take them to water at bubbling springs.
- I will make every hill a path 11
and build embankments for my highways.
- See, they come; some from far away, 12
these from the north and these from the west and those from the land of Syene.
- Shout for joy, you heavens, rejoice, O earth, 13
you mountains, break into songs of triumph, for the LORD has comforted his people and has had pity on his own in their distress.
- But Zion says, 14
'The LORD has forsaken me; my God has forgotten me.'
- Can a woman forget the infant at her breast, 15
or a loving mother the child of her womb?
Even these forget, yet I will not forget you.
- Your walls are always before my eyes, 16
I have engraved them on the palms of my hands.
- Those who are to rebuild you make better speed 17
than those who pulled you down,
while those who laid you waste depart.
- Raise your eyes and look around you: 18
see how they assemble, how they are flocking back to you.
- By my life I, the LORD, swear it,
you shall wear them proudly as your jewels,
and adorn yourself with them like a bride;
- I did indeed make you waste and desolate, 19
I razed you to the ground, but your boundaries^b shall now be too narrow for your inhabitants—
and those who laid you in ruins are far away.
- The children born in your bereavement shall yet say in your hearing, 20
'This place is too narrow; make room for me to live in.'
- Then you will say to yourself, 21
'All these children, how did I come by them, bereaved and barren as I was?
Who reared them
when I was left alone, left by myself;
where did I get them all?'

22 The Lord GOD says,
 Now is the time: I will beckon to the nations and hoist a signal to the peoples, and they shall bring your sons in their arms
 and carry your daughters on their shoulders; 23 kings shall be your foster-fathers and their princesses shall be your nurses.
 They shall bow to the earth before you and lick the dust from your feet;
 and you shall know that I am the LORD
 and that none who look to me will be disappointed.
 24 Can his prey be taken from the strong man, or the captive be rescued from the ruthless?
 25 And the LORD answers,
 The captive shall be taken even from the strong,
 and the prey of the ruthless shall be rescued;
 I will contend with all who contend against you and save your children from them.
 26 I will force your oppressors to feed on their own flesh and make them drunk with their own blood as if with fresh wine, and all mankind shall know that it is I, the LORD, who save you,
 I your ransom, the Mighty One of Jacob.

50 The LORD says,
 Is there anywhere a deed of divorce
 by which I have put your mother away?
 Was there some creditor of mine to whom I sold you?
 No; it was through your own wickedness that you were sold and for your own misconduct that your mother was put away.
 2 Why, then, did I find no one when I came?
 Why, when I called, did no one answer?
 Did you think my arm too short to redeem,
 did you think I had no power to save?
 Not so. By my rebuke I dried up the sea and turned rivers into desert;
 their fish perished for lack of water and died on the thirsty ground;
 3 I clothed the skies in mourning and covered them with sackcloth.
 4 The Lord GOD has given me the tongue of a teacher and skill to console the weary with a word in the morning;
 he sharpened my hearing
 that I might listen like one who is taught.

The Lord GOD opened my ears 5
 and I did not disobey or turn back in defiance.
 I offered my back to the lash, 6
 and let my beard be plucked from my chin,
 I did not hide my face from spitting and insult;
 but the Lord GOD stands by to help me; 7 therefore no insult can wound me.
 I have set my face like flint,
 for I know that I shall not be put to shame, because one who will clear my name is at my side. 8
 Who dare argue against me? Let us confront one another.
 Who will dispute my cause? Let him come forward.
 The Lord GOD will help me; 9
 who then can prove me guilty?
 They will all wear out like a garment,
 the moths will eat them up.

Which of you fears the LORD and obeys his servant's commands? 10
 The man who walks in dark places with no light, yet trusts in the name of the LORD and leans on his God.
 But you who kindle a fire and set fire-brands alight, 11 go, walk into your own fire and among the fire-brands you have set ablaze.
 This is your fate at my hands:
 you shall lie down in torment.

Listen to me, all who follow the right and seek the LORD: 51 look to the rock from which you were hewn, to the quarry from which you were dug;
 look to your father Abraham 2 and to Sarah who gave you birth:
 when I called him he was but one,
 I blessed him and made him many.
 The LORD has indeed comforted Zion, 3 comforted all her ruined homes, turning her wilderness into an Eden,
 her thirsty plains into a garden of the LORD.
 Joy and gladness shall be found in her,
 thanksgiving and melody.
 Pay heed to me, my people, 4
 and hear me, O my nation;
 for my law shall shine forth and I will flash the light of my judgement over the nations.
 My victory is near, my deliverance has gone ^a forth 5
 and my arm shall rule the nations;
 for me coasts and islands shall wait
 and they shall look to me for protection.

^a Or shone.

- 6 Lift your eyes to the heavens,
look at the earth beneath:
the heavens grow murky as smoke;
the earth wears into tatters like a garment,
and those who live on it die like maggots;
but my deliverance is everlasting and my saving power shall never wane.
- 7 Listen to me, my people who know what is right,
you who lay my law to heart:
do not fear the taunts of men,
let no reproaches dismay you;
8 for the grub will devour them like a garment and the moth as if they were wool, but my saving power shall last for ever and my deliverance to all generations.
- 9 Awake, awake, put on your strength, O arm of the LORD, awake as you did long ago, in days gone by.
Was it not you
who hacked the Rahab in pieces and ran the dragon through?
10 Was it not you
who dried up the sea, the waters of the great abyss,
and made the ocean depths a path for the ransomed?
11 So the LORD's people shall come back, set free, and enter Zion with shouts of triumph, crowned with everlasting joy;
joy and gladness shall overtake them as they come,
and sorrow and sighing shall flee away.
- 12 I, I myself, am he that comforts you.
Why then fear man, man who must die,
man frail as grass?
13 Why have you forgotten the LORD your maker, who stretched out the skies and founded the earth?
Why are you continually afraid, all the day long,
why dread the fury of oppressors ready to destroy you?
Where is that fury?
- 14 He that cowers under it shall soon stand upright and not die,
he shall soon reap the early crop and not lack bread.
- 15 I am the LORD your God, the LORD of Hosts is my name. I cleft the sea 16 and its waves roared, that I might fix the heavens in place and form the earth and say to Zion, 'You are my people.' I have put my words in your mouth and kept you safe under the shelter of my hand.
- 17 Awake, awake; rise up, Jerusalem.
You have drunk from the LORD's hand
the cup of his wrath, drained to its dregs the bowl of drunkenness;

of all the sons you have borne there is not one to guide you, 18 of all you have reared, not one to take you by the hand.

These two disasters have overtaken you; 19 who can console you?—

havoc and ruin, famine and the sword;
 who can comfort you?

Your sons are in stupor, they lie at the head of every street, 20 like antelopes caught in the net, glutted with the wrath of the LORD,
 the rebuke of your God.

Therefore listen to this, in your affliction, 21
 drunk that you are, but not with wine:

thus says the LORD, your Lord and your God, 22
 who will plead his people's cause:

Look, I take from your hand
 the cup of drunkenness;
 you shall never again drink from the bowl of my wrath,
 I will give it instead to your tormentors and oppressors, 23
 those who said to you, 'Lie down and we will walk over you';
 and you made your backs like the ground beneath them,
 like a roadway for passers-by.

Awake, awake, put on your strength, O Zion, 52
 put on your loveliest garments, holy city of Jerusalem;
 for never shall the uncircumcised and the unclean enter you again.
 Rise up, captive Jerusalem, shake off the dust; 2 loose your neck from the collar that binds it, O captive daughter of Zion.

The LORD says, You were sold but no price was paid, and without pay- 3 ment you shall be ransomed. The Lord GOD says, At the beginning my 4 people went down into Egypt to live there, and at the end it was the Assyrians who oppressed them; but now what do I find here? says the 5
 LORD. My people carried off and no price paid, their rulers derided, and my name reviled all day long, says the LORD. But on that day my 6 people shall know my name; they shall know that it is I who speak; here
 I am.

How lovely on the mountains are the feet of the herald 7 who comes to proclaim prosperity and bring good news,
 the news of deliverance,

calling to Zion, 'Your God is king.'
 Hark, your watchmen raise their voices 8
 and shout together in triumph;
 for with their own eyes they shall see the LORD returning in pity to Zion.

Break forth together in shouts of triumph, 9
 you ruins of Jerusalem;
 for the LORD has taken pity on his people and has ransomed Jerusalem.

- 10 The LORD has bared his holy arm
in the sight of all nations, and the whole world from end to end shall see the deliverance of our God.
- 11 Away from Babylon; come out, come out, touch nothing unclean.
Come out from Babylon, keep yourselves pure,
you who carry the vessels of the LORD.
- 12 But you shall not come out in urgent haste
nor leave like fugitives;
for the LORD will march at your head,
your rearguard will be Israel's God.
- 13 Behold, my servant shall prosper,
he shall be lifted up, exalted to the heights.
- 14 Time was when many ^a were aghast at you, my people; ^b 15 so now many nations^c recoil at sight of him, and kings curl their lips in disgust.
For they see what they had never been told and things unheard before fill their thoughts.
- 53 Who could have believed what we have heard,
and to whom has the power of the LORD been revealed?
- 2 He grew up before the LORD like a young plant whose roots are in parched ground;
he had no beauty, no majesty to draw our eyes,
no grace to make us delight in him;
his form, disfigured, lost all the likeness of a man,
his beauty changed beyond human semblance. ^d
- 3 He was despised, he shrank from the sight of men, tormented and humbled by suffering;
we despised him, we held him of no account,
a thing from which men turn away their eyes.
- 4 Yet on himself he bore our sufferings,
our torments he endured,
while we counted him smitten by God,
struck down by disease and misery;
5 but he was pierced for our transgressions, tortured for our iniquities;
the chastisement he bore is health for us and by his scourging we are healed.
- 6 We had all strayed like sheep,
each of us had gone his own way;
but the LORD laid upon him
the guilt of us all.

^a Or the great.

^c Or great nations.

^d his form . . .

- He was afflicted, he submitted to be struck down and did not open his mouth;
 he was led like a sheep to the slaughter,
 like a ewe that is dumb before the shearers.^a
- Without protection, without justice,^b he was taken away;
 and who gave a thought to his fate,
 how he was cut off from the world of living men,
 stricken to the death for my people's transgression?
 He was assigned a grave with the wicked,
 a burial-place among the refuse of mankind,
 though he had done no violence and spoken no word of treachery.
- Yet the LORD took thought for his tortured servant
 and healed him who had made himself^c a sacrifice for sin;
 so shall he enjoy long life and see his children's children,
 and in his hand the LORD's cause shall prosper.
- After all his pains he shall be bathed in light,
 after his disgrace he shall be fully vindicated;
 so shall he, my servant, vindicate many,
 himself bearing the penalty of their guilt.
- Therefore I will allot him a portion with the great,
 and he shall share the spoil with the mighty,
 because he exposed himself to face death^d
 and was reckoned among transgressors, because he bore the sin of many and interceded for their transgressions.
- Sing aloud, O barren woman who never bore a child, break into cries of joy, you who have never been in labour;
 for the deserted wife has more sons than she who lives in wedlock,
 says the LORD.
- Enlarge the limits of your home, spread wide the curtains of your tent;
 let out its ropes to the full and drive the pegs home;
 for you shall break out of your confines right and left,
 your descendants shall dispossess wide regions,^e
 and re-people cities now desolate.
- Fear not; you shall not be put to shame,
 you shall suffer no insult, have no cause to blush.
 It is time to forget the shame of your younger days
 and remember no more the reproach of your widowhood;
 for your husband is your maker, whose name is the LORD of Hosts;
 your ransom is the Holy One of Israel who is called God of all the earth.

- 6 The LORD has acknowledged you a wife again, once deserted and heart-broken,
 your God has called you a bride still young though once rejected.
- 7 On the impulse of a moment I forsook you,
but with tender affection I will bring you home again.
- 8 In sudden anger
 I hid my face from you for a moment ;
but now have I pitied you with a love which never fails, says the LORD who ransoms you.
- 9 These days recall for me the days of Noah :
 as I swore that the waters of Noah's flood should never again pour over the earth, so now I swear to you never again to be angry with you or reproach you.
- 10 Though the mountains move and the hills shake,
 my love shall be immovable and never fail,
 and my covenant of peace shall not be shaken.
 So says the LORD who takes pity on you.
- 11 O storm-battered city, distressed and disconsolate, now I will set your stones in the finest mortar and your foundations in lapis lazuli ;
- 12 I will make your battlements of red jasper ^a and your gates of garnet ; ^b all your boundary-stones shall be jewels.
- 13 Your masons shall all be instructed by the LORD,
 and your sons shall enjoy great prosperity ;
- 14 and in triumph ^c shall you be restored.
You shall be free from oppression and have no fears,
free from terror, and it shall not come near you ;
should any attack you, it will not be my doing,
the aggressor, whoever he be, shall perish for his attempt.
- 15 It was I who created the smith to fan the coals in the furnace and forge weapons each for its purpose, and I who created the destroyer to lay waste ;
- 16 but now no weapon made to harm you shall prevail,
 and you shall rebut every charge brought against you.
 Such is the fortune of the servants of the LORD ;
 their vindication comes from me.
 This is the very word of the LORD.
- 55 Come, all who are thirsty, come, fetch water ;
 come, you who have no food, buy corn and eat ;
 come and buy, not for money, not for a price. ^d

^a Or carbuncle. ^b Or firestone. ^c Or in righteousness.
^d Prob. rdg. ; Heb. adds wine and milk.

Why spend money and get what is not bread, 2
 why give the price of your labour and go unsatisfied?
Only listen to me and you will have good food to eat,
 and you will enjoy the fat of the land.
Come to me and listen to my words, 3 hear me, and you shall have life:
 I will make a covenant with you, this time for ever,
 to love you faithfully as I loved David.
I made him a witness to all races, 4
 a prince and instructor of peoples; and you in turn shall summon nations you do not know, 5 and nations that do not know you shall come running to you, because the LORD your God,
 the Holy One of Israel, has glorified you.

Inquire of the LORD while he is present, 6
 call upon him when he is close at hand.
Let the wicked abandon their ways 7
 and evil men their thoughts:
let them return to the LORD, who will have pity on them,
 return to our God, for he will freely forgive.
For my thoughts are not your thoughts, 8
 and your ways are not my ways.
 This is the very word of the LORD.
For as the heavens are higher than the earth, 9
so are my ways higher than your ways and my thoughts than your thoughts;
and as the rain and the snow come down from heaven 10
and do not return until they have watered the earth, making it blossom and bear fruit,
and give seed for sowing and bread to eat, so shall the word which comes from my mouth prevail; 11
 it shall not return to me fruitless without accomplishing my purpose or succeeding in the task I gave it.
 You shall indeed go out with joy 12
 and be led forth in peace.
Before you mountains and hills shall break into cries of joy, and all the trees of the wild shall clap their hands, pine-trees shall shoot up in place of camel-thorn, 13
 myrtles instead of briars;
 all this shall win the LORD a great name, imperishable, a sign for all time.

Warnings to keep the moral law

- 56 These are the words of the LORD:
 Maintain justice, do the right;
 for my deliverance is close at hand,
 and my righteousness will show itself victorious.
- 2 Happy is the man who follows these precepts,
 happy the mortal who holds them fast,
 who keeps the sabbath undefiled,
 who refrains from all wrong-doing!
- 3 The foreigner who has given his allegiance to the LORD must not say,
 'The LORD will keep me separate from his people for ever';
 and the eunuch must not say,
 'I am nothing but a barren tree.'
- 4 For these are the words of the LORD:
 The eunuchs who keep my sabbaths,
 who choose to do my will and hold fast to my covenant, 5 shall receive from me something better than sons and daughters, a memorial and a name in my own house and within my walls;
 I will give them an everlasting name,
 a name imperishable for all time.
- 6 So too with the foreigners who give their allegiance to me, the LORD, to minister to me and love my name
 and to become my servants,
 all who keep the sabbath undefiled
 and hold fast to my covenant:
 7 them will I bring to my holy hill and give them joy in my house of prayer.
 Their offerings and sacrifices shall be acceptable on my altar;
 for my house shall be called a house of prayer for all nations.
- 8 This is the very word of the Lord GOD,
 who brings home the outcasts of Israel:
 I will yet bring home all that remain to be brought in.
- 9 Come, beasts of the plain, beasts of the forest,
 come, eat your fill,
 10 for Israel's watchmen are blind, all of them unaware.
 They are all dumb dogs who cannot bark,
 stretched on the ground, dreaming, lovers of sleep,
 11 greedy dogs that can never have enough.
 They are shepherds who understand nothing,
 absent each of them on his own pursuits,
 each intent on his own gain wherever he can find it.
- 12 'Come,' says each of them, 'let me fetch wine, strong drink, and we will drain it down;
 let us make tomorrow like today,
 or greater far!'

The righteous perish, and no one takes it to heart; men of good faith are swept away, but no one cares, the righteous are swept away before the onset of evil, but they enter into peace; they have run a straight course and rest in their last beds.	57 2
Come, stand forth, you sons of a soothsayer. You spawn of an adulterer and a harlot, who is the target of your jests?	3 4
Against whom do you open your mouths and wag your tongues, children of sin that you are, spawn of a lie, burning with lust under the terebinths, under every spreading tree, and sacrificing children in the gorges, under the rocky clefts?	5
And you, woman, your place is with the creatures of the gorge; that is where you belong. To them you have dared to pour a libation and present an offering of grain. ^a	6
On a high mountain-top you have made your bed; there too you have gone up to offer sacrifice. In spite of all this am I to relent? ^b	7
Beside door and door-post you have put up your sign. Deserting me, you have stripped and lain down on the wide bed which you have made, and you drove bargains with men for the pleasure of sleeping together, and you have committed countless acts of fornication in the heat of your lust.	8
You drenched your tresses in oil blended with many perfumes; you sent out your procurers far and wide even down to the gates of Sheol.	9
Worn out by your unending excesses, even so you never said, 'I am past hope.' You earned a livelihood and so you had no anxiety.	10
Whom do you fear so much, that you should be false, that you never remembered me or gave me a thought? Did I not hold my peace and seem not to see while you showed no fear of me?	11

^a See note on verse 7.^b Line transposed from end of verse 6.

- 12 Now I will denounce your conduct that you think so righteous.
- 13 These idols of yours shall not help when you cry;
 no idol shall save you.
 The wind shall carry them off, one and all,
 a puff of air shall blow them away;
 but he who makes me his refuge shall possess the earth and inherit my holy hill.
- 14 Then a voice shall be heard:
 Build up a highway, build it and clear the track,
 sweep away all that blocks my people's path.
- 15 Thus speaks the high and exalted one,
 whose name is holy, who lives for ever:
 I dwell in a high and holy place with him who is broken and humble in spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble,
 to revive the courage of the broken.
- 16 I will not be always accusing,
 I will not continually nurse my wrath.
 For a breath of life passed out from me,
 and by my own act I created living creatures.
- 17 For a time I was angry at the guilt of Israel;
 I smote him in my anger and withdrew my favour.
 But he ran wild and went his wilful way.
- 18 Then I considered his ways,
 I cured him and gave him relief,
 and I brought him comfort in full measure,
- 19 brought peace to those who mourned for him,
 by the words that issue from my lips,
 peace for all men, both near and far,
 and so I cured him, says the LORD.
- 20 But the wicked are like a troubled sea,
 a sea that cannot rest,
 whose troubled waters cast up mud and filth.
- 21 There is no peace for the wicked,
 says the LORD.
- 58 Shout aloud without restraint;
 lift up your voice like a trumpet.
 Call my people to account for their transgression and the house of Jacob for their sins, although they ask counsel of me day by day and say they delight in knowing my ways, although, like nations which have acted rightly and not forsaken the just laws of their gods, they ask me for righteous laws and say they delight in approaching God.

Why do we fast, if thou dost not see it?	3
Why mortify ourselves, if thou payest no heed?
Since you serve your own interest only on your fast-day and make all your men work the harder, since your fasting leads only to wrangling and strife	4 and dealing vicious blows with the fist, on such a day you are keeping no fast that will carry your cry to heaven.
Is it a fast like this that I require,	5
a day of mortification such as this, that a man should bow his head like a bulrush and make his bed on sackcloth and ashes?
Is this what you call a fast, a day acceptable to the LORD?
Is not this what I require of you as a fast:	6
to loose the fetters of injustice, to untie the knots of the yoke, to snap every yoke and set free those who have been crushed?
Is it not sharing your food with the hungry, taking the homeless poor into your house, clothing the naked when you meet them and never evading a duty to your kinsfolk?	7
Then shall your light break forth like the dawn and soon you will grow healthy like a wound newly healed;	8 your own righteousness shall be your vanguard and the glory of the LORD your rearguard.
Then, if you call, the LORD will answer;	9
if you cry to him, he will say, 'Here I am.'
If you cease to pervert justice, to point the accusing finger and lay false charges, if you feed the hungry from your own plenty	10 and satisfy the needs of the wretched, then your light will rise like dawn out of darkness and your dusk be like noonday;
the LORD will be your guide continually	11
and will satisfy your needs in the shimmering heat; he will give you strength of limb; you will be like a well-watered garden, like a spring whose waters never fail.
The ancient ruins will be restored by your own kindred	12 and you will build once more on ancestral foundations; you shall be called Rebuilder of broken walls, Restorer of houses in ruins.
If you cease to tread the sabbath underfoot, and keep my holy day free from your own affairs, if you call the sabbath a day of joy	13

- and the LORD's holy day a day to be honoured,
 if you honour it by not plying your trade,
 not seeking your own interest or attending to your own affairs, 14 then you shall find your joy in the LORD, and I will set you riding on the heights of the earth,
 and your father Jacob's patrimony shall be yours to enjoy;
 the LORD himself has spoken it.
- 59 The LORD's arm is not so short that he cannot save nor his ear too dull to hear;
 2 it is your iniquities that raise a barrier between you and your God, because of your sins he has hidden his face
 so that he does not hear you.
 3 Your hands are stained with blood and your fingers with crime;
 your lips speak lies
 and your tongues utter injustice.
 4 No man sues with just cause,
 no man goes honestly to law;
 all trust in empty words, all tell lies,
 conceive mischief and give birth to trouble.
 5 They hatch snakes' eggs, they weave cobwebs;
 eat their eggs and you will die,
 for rotten eggs hatch only rottenness.
 6 As for their webs, they will never make cloth,
 no one can use them for clothing;
 their works breed trouble
 and their hands are busy with deeds of violence.
 7 They rush headlong into crime in furious haste to shed innocent blood;
 their schemes are schemes of mischief
 and leave a trail of ruin and devastation.
 8 They do not know the way to peace,
 no justice guides their steps;
 all the paths they follow are crooked;
 no one who walks in them enjoys true peace.
- 9 Therefore justice is far away from us,
 right does not reach us;
 we look for light but all is darkness,
 for the light of dawn, but we walk in deep gloom.
 10 We grope like blind men along a wall, feeling our way like men without eyes;
 we stumble at noonday as if it were twilight,
 like dead men in the ghostly underworld.
 11 We growl like bears,
 like doves we moan incessantly,

waiting for justice, and there is none;
for deliverance, but it is still far away.

Our acts of rebellion against thee are past counting 12
and our sins bear witness against us;
we remember our many rebellions, we know well our guilt:
we have rebelled and broken faith with the LORD, 13
we have relapsed and forsaken our God;
we have conceived lies in our hearts and repeated them
in slanderous and treacherous words.
Justice is rebuffed and flouted 14
while righteousness stands aloof;
truth stumbles in the market-place
and honesty is kept out of court, so truth is lost to sight, 15
and whoever shuns evil is thought a madman.

The LORD saw, and in his eyes it was an evil thing,
that there was no justice;
he saw that there was no man to help 16
and was outraged that no one intervened;
so his own arm brought him victory
and his own integrity upheld him.
He put on integrity as a coat of mail 17
and the helmet of salvation on his head;
he put on garments of vengeance
and wrapped himself in a cloak of jealous anger.
High God of retribution that he is, 18
he pays in full measure,
wreaking his anger on his foes, retribution on his enemies.
So from the west men shall fear his name, 19
fear his glory from the rising of the sun;
for it shall come like a shining river,
the spirit of the LORD hovering over it, come as the ransom of Zion 20
and of all in Jacob who repent of their rebellion.
This is the very word of the LORD.

This, says the LORD, is my covenant, which I make with them: My 21 spirit which rests on you and my words which I have put into your mouth shall never fail you from generation to generation of your descendants from now onward for ever. The LORD has said it.

Promise of the new Jerusalem

- 60 Arise, Jerusalem, rise clothed in light; your light has come and the glory of the LORD shines over you.
- 2 For, though darkness covers the earth and dark night the nations,
the LORD shall shine upon you and over you shall his glory appear;
3 and the nations shall march towards your light and their kings to your sunrise.
- 4 Lift up your eyes and look all around:
they flock together, all of them, and come to you;
your sons also shall come from afar,
your daughters walking beside them leading the way.
- 5 Then shall you see, and shine with joy,
then your heart shall thrill with pride:
the riches of the sea shall be lavished upon you and you shall possess the wealth of nations.
- 6 Camels in droves shall cover the land,
dromedaries of Midian and Ephah,
all coming from Sheba laden with golden spice^a and frankincense, heralds of the LORD's praise.
- 7 All Kedar's flocks shall be gathered for you,
rams of Nebaioth shall serve your need,
acceptable offerings on my altar,
and glory shall be added to glory in my temple.
- 8 Who are these that sail along like clouds, that fly like doves to their dovecotes?
- 9 They are vessels assembling from the coasts and islands, ships from Tarshish leading the convoy;
they bring your sons from afar,
their gold and their silver with them, to the honour of the LORD your God,
the Holy One of Israel;
for he has made you glorious.
- 10 Foreigners shall rebuild your walls and their kings shall be your servants;
for though in my wrath I struck you down,
now I have shown you pity and favour.
- 11 Your gates shall be open continually,
they shall never be shut day or night,
that through them may be brought the wealth of nations and their kings under escort.

^a golden spice: or gold.

For the nation or kingdom which refuses to serve you shall perish, and 12 wide regions shall be laid utterly waste.

The wealth of Lebanon shall come to you, 13 pine, fir,^a and boxwood,^b all together,
to bring glory to my holy sanctuary,
to honour the place where my feet rest.

The sons of your oppressors shall come forward to do homage, 14
all who reviled you shall bow low at your feet;
they shall call you the City of the LORD,
the Zion of the Holy One of Israel.

No longer will you be deserted, 15
a wife hated and unvisited;^c
I will make you an eternal pride and a never-ending joy.

You shall suck the milk of nations 16
and be suckled at the breasts of kings.
So you shall know that I the LORD am your deliverer, your ransomer the Mighty One of Jacob.

For bronze^d I will bring you gold 17
and for iron I will bring silver, bronze^d for timber and iron for stone;
and I will make your government be peace and righteousness rule over you.

The sound of violence shall be heard no longer in your land, 18 or ruin and devastation within your borders;
but you shall call your walls Deliverance and your gates Praise.

The sun shall no longer be your light by day, 19
nor the moon shine on you when evening falls;
the LORD shall be your everlasting light,
your God shall be your glory.

Never again shall your sun set 20
nor your moon withdraw her light;
but the LORD shall be your everlasting light and the days of your mourning shall be ended.

Your people shall all be righteous 21
and shall for ever possess the land,
a shoot of my own planting,
a work of my own hands to bring me glory.

The few shall become ten thousand, 22
the little nation great.
I am the LORD;

soon, in the fullness of time, I will bring this to pass.

- 61 The spirit of the Lord GOD is upon me because the LORD has anointed me;
he has sent me to bring good news to the humble,
to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to captives
and release to those in prison;
2 to proclaim a year of the LORD's favour and a day of the vengeance of our God;
to comfort all who mourn,^a 3 to give them garlands instead of ashes, oil of gladness instead of mourners' tears,
a garment of splendour for the heavy heart.
They shall be called Trees of Righteousness, planted by the LORD for his glory.
4 Ancient ruins shall be rebuilt and sites long desolate restored;
they shall repair the ruined cities
and restore what has long lain desolate.
5 Foreigners shall serve as shepherds of your flocks,
and aliens shall till your land and tend your vines;
6 but you shall be called priests of the LORD and be named ministers of our God;
you shall enjoy the wealth of other nations and be furnished^b with their riches.
7 And so, because shame in double measure and jeers and insults^c have been my people's lot, they shall receive in their own land a double measure of wealth,
and everlasting joy shall be theirs.
8 For I, the LORD, love justice and hate robbery and wrong-doing;
I will grant them a sure reward
and make an everlasting covenant with them; 9 their posterity will be renowned among the nations and their offspring among the peoples;
all who see them will acknowledge in them
a race whom the LORD has blessed.
- 10 Let me rejoice in the LORD with all my heart,
let me exult in my God;
for he has robed me in salvation as a garment and clothed me in integrity as a cloak,
like a bridegroom with his priestly garland,
or a bride decked in her jewels.
11 For, as the earth puts forth her blossom or bushes in the garden burst into flower,

Heb. unintelligible.

^b be furnished: prob. rdg.

so shall the Lord GOD make righteousness and praise blossom before all the nations.

For Zion's sake I will not keep silence,	62
for Jerusalem's sake I will speak out, until her right shines forth like the sunrise,
her deliverance like a blazing torch,
until the nations see the triumph of your right	2
and all kings see your glory.
Then you shall be called by a new name which the LORD shall pronounce with his own lips;
you will be a glorious crown in the LORD's hand,	3
a kingly diadem in the hand of your God.
No more shall men call you Forsaken,	4
no more shall your land be called Desolate, but you shall be named Hephzi-bah ^a and your land Beulah; ^b for the LORD delights in you and to him your land is wedded.
For, as a young man weds a maiden,	5
so you shall wed him who rebuilds you, and your God shall rejoice over you as a bridegroom rejoices over the bride.
I have posted watchmen on your walls, Jerusalem,	6
who shall not keep silence day or night:
'You who invoke the LORD's name,
take no rest, give him no rest	7
until he makes Jerusalem
a theme of endless praise on earth.'
The LORD has sworn with raised right hand and mighty arm:	8
Never again will I give your grain to feed your foes or let foreigners drink the new wine for which you have toiled;
but those who bring in the corn shall eat and praise the LORD,	9 and those who gather the grapes shall drink in my holy courts.
Go out of the gates, go out,	10
prepare a road for my people;
build a highway, build it up,
clear away the boulders;
raise a signal to the peoples.
This is the LORD's proclamation	11
to earth's farthest bounds:
Tell the daughter of Zion,
Behold, your deliverance has come.
His recompense comes with him;
he carries his reward before him;

^a That is My delight is in her.

^b That is Wedded.

- 12 and they shall be called a Holy People,
the Ransomed of the LORD,
a People long-sought, a City not forsaken.
- 63 'Who is this coming from Edom,
coming from Bozrah, his garments stained red?
Under his clothes his muscles stand out, and he strides, stooping in his might.'
It is I, who announce that right has won the day,
I, who am strong to save.
- 2 'Why is your clothing all red,
like the garments of one who treads grapes in the vat?'
3 I have trodden the winepress alone;
no man, no nation was with me.
I trod them down in my rage,
I trampled them in my fury;
and their life-blood spurted over my garments and stained all my clothing.
- 4 For I resolved on a day of vengeance;
the year for ransoming my own had come.
5 I looked for a helper but found no one,
I was amazed that there was no one to support me;
yet my own arm brought me victory,
alone my anger supported me.
- 6 I stamped on nations in my fury,
I pierced them in my rage
and let their life-blood run out upon the ground.
- 7 I will recount the LORD's acts of unfailing love and the LORD's praises as High God, all that the LORD has done for us and his great goodness to the house of Israel, all that he has done for them in his tenderness and by his many acts of love.
- 8 He said, 'Surely they are my people,
my sons who will not play me false';
9 and he became their deliverer in all their troubles.
It was no envoy, no angel, but he himself that delivered them;
he himself ransomed them by his love and pity, lifted them up and carried them through all the years gone by.
- 10 Yet they rebelled and grieved his holy spirit;
only then was he changed into their enemy and himself fought against them.
- 11 Then men remembered days long past and him who drew out^a his people:

^a That is Moses whose name resembles the Heb. verb meaning draw out, cp. Exod. 2. 10 and the note there.

Where is he who brought them up from the Nile with the shepherd ^a of his flock?
Where is he who put within him his holy spirit, who made his glorious power march	12
at the right hand of Moses, dividing the waters before them, to win for himself an everlasting name, causing them to go through the depths	13
sure-footed as horses in the wilderness, like cattle moving down into a valley without stumbling, guided by the spirit of the LORD?	14
So didst thou lead thy people to win thyself a glorious name.
Look down from heaven and behold	15
from the heights where thou dwellest holy and glorious. Where is thy zeal, thy valour, thy burning and tender love?
Stand not aloof; ^b for thou art our father, though Abraham does not know us nor Israel acknowledge us. Thou, LORD, art our father;	16
thy name is our Ransomer ^c from of old. Why, LORD, dost thou let us wander from thy ways and harden our hearts until we cease to fear thee? turn again for the sake of thy servants, the tribes of thy patrimony.	17
Why have wicked men trodden down thy sanctuary, ^d why have our enemies trampled on thy shrine?	18
We have long been reckoned as beyond thy sway, as if we had not been named thy own.	19
Why didst thou not rend the heavens and come down, and make the mountains shudder before thee as when fire blazes up in brushwood or fire makes water boil?	64 2
then would thy name be known to thy enemies and nations tremble at thy coming.
When thou didst terrible things that we did not look for, the mountains shuddered before thee.	3
Never has ear heard ^e or eye seen any other god taking the part of those who wait for him.	4
Thou dost welcome him who rejoices to do what is right, who remembers thee in thy ways.	5
Though thou wast angry, yet we sinned, in spite of it we have done evil from of old,

- 6 we all became like a man who is unclean
and all our righteous deeds like a filthy rag;
we have all withered^a like leaves and our iniquities sweep us away like the wind.
- 7 There is no one who invokes thee by name or rouses himself to cling to thee;
for thou hast hidden thy face from us and abandoned us to our iniquities.
- 8 But now, LORD, thou art our father;
we are the clay, thou the potter,
and all of us are thy handiwork.
- 9 Do not be angry beyond measure, O LORD,
and do not remember iniquity for ever;
look on us all, look on thy people.
- 10 Thy holy cities are a wilderness,
Zion a wilderness, Jerusalem desolate;
- 11 our sanctuary, holy and glorious,
where our fathers praised thee,
has been burnt to the ground and all that we cherish is a ruin.
- 12 After this, O LORD, wilt thou hold back,
wilt thou keep silence and punish us beyond measure?
- 65 I was there to be sought by a people who did not ask,
to be found by men who did not seek me.
I said, 'Here am I, here am I',
to a nation that did not invoke me by name.
- 2 I spread out my hands all day appealing to an unruly people who went their evil way,
following their own devices,
a people who provoked me continually to my face, offering sacrifice in gardens, burning incense on brick altars,
crouching among graves, keeping vigil all night long,
eating swine's flesh, their cauldrons full of a tainted brew.
- 5 'Stay where you are,' they cry,
'do not dare touch me; for I am too sacred for you.'
Such people are a smouldering fire, smoking in my nostrils all day long.
- 6 All is on record before me; I will not keep silence;
I will repay^b your iniquities,
yours and your fathers', all at once, says the LORD, because they burnt incense^c on the mountains and defied me on the hills;

^a have all withered: or are all carried away.

^b Prob. rdg., transposing and then

I will first measure out their reward and then pay them in full.

These are the words of the LORD:
As there is new wine in a cluster of grapes and men say, 'Do not destroy it; there is a blessing in it', so will I do for my servants' sake:
I will not destroy the whole nation.
I will give Jacob children to come after him and Judah heirs who shall possess my mountains;
my chosen shall inherit them
and my servants shall live there.
Flocks shall range over Sharon,
and the Vale of Achor be a pasture for cattle;
they shall belong to my people who seek me.
But you that forsake the LORD and forget my holy mountain,

who spread a table for the god of Fate,
and fill bowls of spiced wine in honour of Fortune,
I will deliver you to your fate, to execution,
and you shall all bend the neck to the sword,
because I called and you did not answer,
I spoke and you did not listen;
and you did what was wrong in my eyes and you chose what was against my will.
Therefore these are the words of the Lord GOD:
My servants shall eat but you shall starve;
my servants shall drink but you shall go thirsty;
my servants shall rejoice but you shall be put to shame;
my servants shall shout in triumph
in the gladness of their hearts, but you shall cry from sorrow
and wail from anguish of spirit;
your name shall be used as an oath by my chosen,
and the Lord GOD shall give you over to death;
but his servants he shall call by another name.
He who invokes a blessing on himself in the land shall do so by the God whose name is Amen,
and he who utters an oath in the land shall do so by the God of Amen;
the former troubles are forgotten
and they are hidden from my sight.
For behold, I create new heavens and a new earth.
Former things shall no more be remembered
nor shall they be called to mind.
Rejoice and be filled with delight,
you boundless realms which I create;

- for I create Jerusalem to be a delight
 and her people a joy;
 19 I will take delight in Jerusalem and rejoice in my people;
 weeping and cries for help
 shall never again be heard in her.
 20 There no child shall ever again die an infant,
 no old man fail to live out his life;
 every boy shall live his hundred years before he dies, whoever falls short of a hundred shall be despised. ^a 21 Men shall build houses and live to inhabit them, plant vineyards and eat their fruit;
 22 they shall not build for others to inhabit
 nor plant for others to eat.
 My people shall live the long life of a tree,
 and my chosen shall enjoy the fruit of their labour.
 23 They shall not toil in vain or raise children for misfortune.
 For they are the offspring of the blessed of the LORD and their issue after them;
 24 before they call to me, I will answer,
 and while they are still speaking I will listen.
 25 The wolf and the lamb shall feed together and the lion shall eat straw like cattle. ^b
 They shall not hurt or destroy in all my holy mountain,
 says the LORD.

- 66 These are the words of the LORD:
 Heaven is my throne and earth my footstool.
 Where will you build a house for me,
 where shall my resting-place be?
 2 All these are of my own making and all these are mine.
 This is the very word of the LORD.

- The man I look to is a man down-trodden and distressed,
 one who reveres my words.
 3 But to sacrifice an ox or to ^c kill a man, slaughter a sheep or break a dog's neck,
 offer grain or offer pigs' blood, burn incense as a token and worship an idol—
 all these are the chosen practices of men who ^d revel in their own loathsome rites.
 4 I too will practise those wanton rites of theirs and bring down on them the very things they dread;
 for I called and no one answered,
 I spoke and no one listened.

^a Or cursed.^b Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds and the food of the snake shall be due^c to sacrifice an ox or to: or those who sacrifice an ox and . . .^d are the chosen practices of men who: or have chosen their own devices and . . .

- They did what was wrong in my eyes and chose practices not to my liking.
- Hear the word of the LORD, you who revere his word: 5
Your fellow-countrymen who hate you, who spurn you because you bear my name, have said,
'Let the LORD show his glory,
then we shall see you rejoice';
but they shall be put to shame.
- That roar from the city, that uproar in the temple, 6 is the sound of the LORD dealing retribution to his foes.
- Shall a woman bear a child without pains? 7
give birth to a son before the onset of labour?
Who has heard of anything like this? 8
Who has seen any such thing?
Shall a country be born after one day's labour, shall a nation be brought to birth all in a moment?
But Zion, at the onset of her pangs, bore her sons.
Shall I bring to the point of birth and not deliver? 9
the LORD says;
shall I who deliver close the womb?
your God has spoken.
- Rejoice with Jerusalem and exult in her, 10
all you who love her;
share her joy with all your heart,
all you who mourn over her.
- Then you may suck and be fed from the breasts that give comfort, 11 delighting in her plentiful milk.
- For thus says the LORD: 12
I will send peace flowing over her like a river, and the wealth of nations like a stream in flood;
it shall suckle you,
and you shall be carried in their arms
and dandled on their knees.
- As a mother comforts her son, 13
so will I myself comfort you, and you shall find comfort in Jerusalem.
- This you shall see and be glad at heart, 14
your limbs shall be as fresh as grass in spring;
the LORD shall make his power known among his servants and his indignation felt among his foes.
- For see, the LORD is coming in fire, 15
with his chariots like a whirlwind, to strike home with his furious anger
and with the flaming fire of his reproof.
- The LORD will judge by fire, 16
with fire he will test all living men,

- and many will be slain by the LORD;
 17 those who hallow and purify themselves in garden-rites, one after another in a magic ring,
 those who eat the flesh of pigs and rats^a and all vile vermin, shall meet their end, one and all,
 says the LORD,
 18 for I know their deeds and their thoughts.

 Then I myself will come to gather all nations and races,
 and they shall come and see my glory;
 19 and I will perform a sign among them.
 I will spare some of them and send them to the nations, to Tarshish, Put, and Lud,^b to Meshek, Rosh,^c Tubal, and Javan,^d distant coasts and islands which have never yet heard of me and have not seen my glory;
 these shall announce that glory among the nations.
 20 From every nation they shall bring your countrymen on horses, in chariots and wagons, on mules and dromedaries,
 as an offering to the LORD,
 on my holy mountain Jerusalem,
 says the LORD,
 as the Israelites bring offerings
 in pure vessels to the LORD's house; 21 and some of them I will take for priests, for Levites,
 says the LORD.
 22 For, as the new heavens and the new earth which I am making shall endure in my sight,
 says the LORD,
 so shall your race and your name endure;
 23 and month by month at the new moon,
 week by week on the sabbath,
 all mankind shall come to bow down before me,
 says the LORD;
 24 and they shall come out and see the dead bodies of those who have rebelled against me;
 their worm shall not die nor their fire be quenched,
 and they shall be abhorred by all mankind.

THE BOOK OF THE PROPHET JEREMIAH

THE WORDS OF JEREMIAH son of Hilkiah, one of the priests 1 at Anathoth in Benjamin. The word of the LORD came to him in the 2 thirteenth year of the reign of Josiah son of Amon, king of Judah; 3 also during the reign of Jehoiakim son of Josiah, king of Judah, until the 3 eleventh year of Zedekiah son of Josiah, king of Judah, was completed.
In the fifth month the people of Jerusalem were carried away into exile.

Jeremiah's call and two visions

THE WORD OF THE LORD CAME TO ME: 'Before I formed you in the 4 5 womb I knew you for my own; before you were born I consecrated you, I appointed you a prophet to the nations.' 'Ah! Lord GOD,' I answered, 6
'I do not know how to speak; I am only a child.' But the LORD said, 'Do 7 not call yourself a child; for you shall go to whatever people I send you and say whatever I tell you to say. Fear none of them, for I am with you 8 and will keep you safe.' This was the very word of the LORD. Then the 9 LORD stretched out his hand and touched my mouth, and said to me, 'I put my words into your mouth. This day I give you authority over nations 10 and over kingdoms, to pull down and to uproot, to destroy and to demolish, to build and to plant.'

The word of the LORD came to me: 'What is it that you see, Jeremiah?' 11
'An almond in early bloom',^a I answered. 'You are right,' said the LORD to 12 me, 'for I am early on the watch^b to carry out my purpose.' The word of 13 the LORD came to me a second time: 'What is it that you see?' 'A cauldron',
I said, 'on a fire, fanned by the wind; it is tilted away from the north.'
The LORD said: 14

From the north disaster shall flare up against all who live in this land; for now I summon all peoples and kingdoms of the north, 15
says the LORD.

Their kings shall come and each shall set up his throne
before the gates of Jerusalem, against her walls on every side,
and against all the cities of Judah.
I will state my case against my people 16
for all the wrong they have done in forsaking me, in burning sacrifices to other gods,
worshipping the work of their own hands.

^a Heb. shaked. ^b Heb. shoked.

- 17 Brace yourself, Jeremiah;
 stand up and speak to them.
 Tell them everything I bid you, do not let your spirit break at sight of them,
 or I will break you before their eyes.
- 18 This day I make you a fortified city,
 a pillar of iron, a wall of bronze,
 to stand fast against the whole land,
 against the kings and princes of Judah,
 its priests and its people.
- 19 They will make war on you but shall not overcome you,
 for I am with you and will keep you safe.
 This is the very word of the LORD.

Exhortations to Israel and Judah

- 2 1 2 THE WORD OF THE LORD CAME TO ME: Go, make a proclamation that all Jerusalem shall hear: These are the words of the LORD:

- I remember the unfailing devotion of your youth,
 the love of your bridal days,
 when you followed me in the wilderness,
 through a land unsown.
- 3 Israel then was holy to the LORD,
 the firstfruits of his harvest;
 no one who devoured her went unpunished,
 evil always overtook them.
 This is the very word of the LORD.

- 4 Listen to the word of the LORD, people of Jacob, families of Israel, one 5 and all. These are the words of the LORD:

- What fault did your forefathers find in me,
 that they wandered far from me,
 pursuing empty phantoms and themselves becoming empty;
- 6 that they did not ask, 'Where is the LORD,
 who brought us up from Egypt,
 and led us through the wilderness,
 through a country of deserts and shifting sands,
 a country barren and ill-omened, where no man ever trod,
 no man made his home?'
- 7 I brought you into a fruitful land
 to enjoy its fruit and the goodness of it;
 but when you entered upon it you defiled it and made the home I gave you loathsome.
- 8 The priests no longer asked, 'Where is the LORD?'
 Those who handled the law had no thought of me,
 the shepherds of the people rebelled against me;

the prophets prophesied in the name of Baal
 and followed gods powerless to help.
 Therefore I will bring a charge against you once more, 9
 says the LORD,
 against you and against your descendants.
 Cross to the coasts and islands of Kittim and see, 10
 send to Kedar and consider well, see whether there has been anything like this:
 has a nation ever changed its gods, 11
 although they were no gods?
 But my people have exchanged their Glory
 for a god altogether powerless.
 Stand aghast at this, you heavens, 12
 tremble in utter despair,
 says the LORD.
 Two sins have my people committed: 13
 they have forsaken me,
 a spring of living water,
 and they have hewn out for themselves cisterns,
 cracked cisterns that can hold no water.

Is Israel a slave? Was he born in slavery? 14
 If not, why has he been despoiled?
 Why do lions roar and growl at him? 15
 Why has his land been laid waste,
 why are his cities razed to the ground and abandoned?
 Men of Noph and Tahpanhes 16
 will break your heads.
 Is it not your desertion of the LORD your God 17
 that brings all this upon you?
 And now, why should you make off to Egypt 18
 to drink the waters of the Shihor?
 Or why make off to Assyria to drink the waters of the River?
 It is your own wickedness that will punish you, 19
 your own apostasy that will condemn you.
 See for yourselves how bitter a thing it is and how evil, to forsake the LORD your God and revere me no longer.
 This is the very word of the Lord GOD of Hosts.
 Ages ago you broke your yoke and snapped your traces, 20 crying, 'I will not be your slave';
 and you sprawled in promiscuous vice
 on all the hill-tops, under every spreading tree.
 I planted you as a choice red vine, 21
 true stock all of you, yet now you are turned into a vine
 debased and worthless!
 The stain of your sin is still there and I see it, 22

- though you wash with soda and do not stint the soap.
 This is the very word of the Lord God.
- 23 How can you say, 'I am not polluted, not I!
 I have not followed the Baalim'?
 Look how you conducted yourself in the valley;
 remember what you have done.
 You have been like a she-camel,
 twisting and turning as she runs,
- 24 rushing alone into ^a the wilderness,
 snuffing the wind in her lust;
 who can restrain her in her heat?
 No one need tire himself out in pursuit of her;
 she is easily found at mating time.
- 25 Why not save your feet from stony ground and your throats from thirst?
 But you said, 'No; I am desperate.
 I love foreign gods and I must go after them.'
- 26 As a thief is ashamed when he is found out,
 so the people of Israel feel ashamed,
 they, their kings, their princes,
 their priests and their prophets;
- 27 they say 'You are our father' to a block of wood and cry 'Mother' to a stone.
 But on me they have turned their backs and averted their faces from me.
 And now on the day of disaster they say,
 'Rise up and save us.'
- 28 Where are they, those gods you made for yourselves?
 Let them come and save you in the day of disaster.
 For you, Judah, have as many gods as you have towns. ^b
- 29 The LORD answers,
 Why argue your case with me?
 You are rebels, every one of you.
- 30 In vain I struck down your sons,
 the lesson was not learnt;
 still your own sword devoured your prophets like a ravening lion.
- 31 ^c Have I shown myself inhospitable to Israel
 like some wilderness or waterless land?
 Why do my people say, 'We have broken away;
 we will never come back to thee'?
- 32 Will a girl forget her finery
 or a bride her ribbons?
 Yet my people have forgotten me
 over and over again.

^a rushing alone into: prob. rdg.; Heb. a wild-ass taught in. ^b towns: or blood-spattered altars. ^c Prob. rdg.; Heb. prefixes You, O generation, see the word of the LORD.

How well you pick your way in search of lovers! 33
 Why! even the worst of women can learn from you.
 Yes, and there is blood on the corners of your robe— 34
 the life-blood of the innocent poor.
 You did not get it by housebreaking
 but by your sacrifices under every oak.
 You say, 'I am innocent; 35
 surely his anger has passed away.'
 But I will challenge your claim to have done no sin.
 Why do you so lightly change your course? 36
 Egypt will fail you as Assyria did;
 you shall go out from here, 37
 each of you with his hands above his head, for the LORD repudiates those in whom you trusted,
 and from them you shall gain nothing.

 If a man puts away his wife 3
 and she leaves him,
 and if she then becomes another's,
 may he go back to her again?
 Is not that woman defiled,
 a forbidden thing?
 You have played the harlot with many lovers;
 can you come back to me?
 says the LORD.
 Look up to the high bare places and see: 2
 where have you not been ravished?
 You sat by the wayside to catch lovers,
 like an Arab lurking in the desert, and defiled the land
 with your fornication and your wickedness.
 Therefore the showers were withheld 3
 and the spring rain failed.
 But yours was a harlot's brow,
 and you were resolved to show no shame.
 Not so long since, you called me 'Father,
 dear friend of my youth', 4 thinking, 'Will he be angry for ever?' 5
 Will he rage eternally?'
 This is how you spoke; you have done evil and gone unchallenged.

In the reign of King Josiah, the LORD said to me, Do you see what 6 apostate Israel did? She went up to every hill-top and under every spreading tree, and there she played the whore. Even after she had done all this, 7
 I said to her, Come back to me, but she would not. That faithless woman, her sister Judah, saw it all; she saw too that I had put apostate Israel away 8 and given her a note of divorce because she had committed adultery. Yet

9 that faithless woman, her sister Judah, was not afraid; she too has gone and 10 played the whore. She defiled the land with her thoughtless harlotry and her adulterous worship of stone and wood. In spite of all this that faithless woman, her sister Judah, has not come back to me in good faith, but only in pretence. This is the very word of the LORD.

11 The LORD said to me, Apostate Israel is less to blame than that faithless 12 woman Judah. Go and proclaim this message to the north:

Come back to me, apostate Israel,
 says the LORD,
 I will no longer frown on you.
 For my love is unfailing, says the LORD,
 I will not be angry for ever.

13 Only you must acknowledge your wrongdoing, confess your rebellion against the LORD your God.
 Confess your promiscuous traffic with foreign gods
 under every spreading tree, confess that you have not obeyed me.
 This is the very word of the LORD.

14 Come back to me, apostate children, says the LORD, for I am patient with you, and I will take you, one from a city and two from a clan, and bring 15 you to Zion. There will I give you shepherds after my own heart, and they 16 shall lead you with knowledge and understanding. In those days, when you have increased and become fruitful in the land, says the LORD, men shall speak no more of the Ark of the Covenant of the LORD; they shall not 17 think of it nor remember it nor resort to it; it will be needed no more. At that time Jerusalem shall be called the Throne of the LORD. All nations shall gather in Jerusalem to honour the LORD's name; never again shall 18 they follow the promptings of their evil and stubborn hearts. In those days Judah shall join Israel, and together they shall come from a northern land into the land I gave their fathers as their patrimony.

19 I said, How gladly would I treat you as a son, giving you a pleasant land,
 a patrimony fairer than that of any nation!
 I said, You shall call me Father and never cease to follow me.
 20 But like a woman who is unfaithful to her lover,
 so you, Israel, were unfaithful to me.
 This is the very word of the LORD.
 21 Hark, a sound of weeping on the bare places,
 Israel's people pleading for mercy!
 For they have taken to crooked ways and ignored the LORD their God.
 22 Come back to me, wayward^a sons;
 I will heal your apostasy.

^a Or apostate.

- O LORD, we come! We come to thee;
 for thou art our God.
 There is no help in worship on the hill-tops, 23
 no help from clamour on the heights;
 truly in the LORD our God is Israel's only salvation.
 From our early days 24
 Baal, god of shame, has devoured
 the fruits of our fathers' labours, their flocks and herds, their sons and daughters.
 Let us lie down in shame, wrapped round by our dishonour, 25 for we have sinned against the LORD our God, both we and our fathers,
 from our early days till now,
 and we have not obeyed the LORD our God.
- If you will but come back, O Israel, 4
 if you will but come back to me, says the LORD,
 if you will banish your loathsome idols from my sight,
 and stray no more,
 if you swear by the life of the LORD, 2
 in truth, in justice and uprightness, then shall the nations pray to be blessed like you ^a
 and in you ^a shall they boast.
- These are the words of the LORD to the men of Judah and Jerusalem: 3 Break up your fallow ground,
 do not sow among thorns, circumcise yourselves to the service of the LORD, 4
 circumcise your hearts,
 men of Judah and dwellers in Jerusalem,
 lest the fire of my fury blaze up and burn unquenched,
 because of your evil doings.
 Tell this in Judah, 5
 proclaim it in Jerusalem,
 blow the trumpet throughout the land,
 sound the muster,
 give the command, Stand to!—and let us fall back on the fortified cities.
 Raise the signal—To Zion! 6
 make for safety, lose no time, for I bring disaster out of the north,
 and dire destruction.
 A lion has come out from his lair, 7
 the destroyer of nations;
 he has struck his tents, he has broken camp,
 to harry your land
 and lay your cities waste and unpeopled.

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. him.

- 8 Well may you put on sackcloth,
beat the breast and wail,
for the anger of the LORD
is not averted from us.
- 9 On that day, says the LORD,
the hearts of the king and his officers shall fail them, priests shall be struck with horror and prophets dumbfounded.
- 10 And I said, O Lord GOD, thou surely didst deceive this people and Jerusalem in saying, 'You shall have peace', while the sword is at our throats.
- 11 At that time this people and Jerusalem shall be told:
A scorching wind from the high bare places in the wilderness sweeps down upon my people, no breeze for winnowing or for cleansing; 12 a wind too strong for these will come at my bidding,
and now I will state my case against them.
- 13 Like clouds the enemy advances with a whirlwind of chariots;
his horses are swifter than eagles—
alas, we are overwhelmed!
- 14 O Jerusalem, wash the wrongdoing from your heart and you may yet be saved;
how long will you cherish
your evil schemes?
- 15 Hark, a runner from Dan,
tidings of evil from Mount Ephraim!
- 16 Tell all this to the nations,
proclaim the doom of Jerusalem:
hordes of invaders come from a distant land,
howling against the cities of Judah.
- 17 Their pickets are closing in all round her,
because she has rebelled against me.
This is the very word of the LORD.
- 18 Your own ways, your own deeds have brought all this upon you;
this is your punishment,
and all this comes of your rebellion.^a
- 19 Oh, the writhing of my bowels
and the throbbing of my heart!
I cannot keep silence.
I hear the sound of the trumpet,
the sound of the battle-cry.
- 20 Crash upon crash,
the land goes down in ruin,

^a your rebellion: prob. rdg.; Heb. obscure.

my tents are thrown down,
their coverings torn to shreds.
How long must I see the standard raised 21
and hear the trumpet call?
My people are fools, they know nothing of me; 22
silly children, with no understanding,
they are clever only in wrongdoing,
and of doing right they know nothing.

I saw the earth, and it was without form and void; 23
the heavens, and their light was gone.
I saw the mountains, and they reeled; 24
all the hills rocked to and fro.
I saw, and there was no man, 25
and the very birds had taken flight.
I saw, and the farm-land was wilderness, 26
and the towns all razed to the ground,
before the LORD in his anger.
These are the words of the LORD: 27
The whole land shall be desolate, though I will not make an end of it.
Therefore the earth will mourn 28
and the heavens above turn black.
For I have made known my purpose;
I will not relent or change my mind.

At the sound of the horsemen and archers 29
the whole country is in flight;
they creep into caves, they hide in thickets,
they scramble up the crags.
Every town is forsaken,
no one dwells there.

And you, what are you doing? 30
When you dress yourself in scarlet,
deck yourself out with golden ornaments,
and make your eyes big with antimony,
you are beautifying yourself to no purpose.
Your lovers spurn you and are out for your life.

I hear a sound as of a woman in labour, 31
the sharp cry of one bearing her first child.
It is Zion, gasping for breath, clenching her fists.
Ah me! I am weary,
weary of slaughter.

Go up and down the streets of Jerusalem 5
and see for yourselves;
search her wide squares:

can you find any man who acts justly,
who seeks the truth,
that I may forgive that city?
2 Men may swear by the life of the LORD,
but they only perjure themselves.
3 O LORD, are thine eyes not set upon the truth?
Thou didst strike them down,
but they took no heed;
didst pierce them to the heart,
but they refused to learn.
They set their faces harder than flint and refused to come back.
4 I said, 'After all, these are the poor,
these are stupid folk,
who do not know the way of the LORD,
the ordinances of their God.
5 I will go to the great and speak with them;
for they will know the way of the LORD,
the ordinances of their God.'
But they too have broken the yoke and snapped their traces.
6 Therefore a lion out of the scrub shall strike them down,
a wolf from the plains shall ravage them;
a leopard shall prowl about their cities
and maul any who venture out.
For their rebellious deeds are many,
their apostasies past counting.
7 How can I forgive you for all this?
Your sons have forsaken me and sworn by gods
that are no gods.
I gave them all they needed, yet they preferred adultery,
and haunted the brothels;
8 each neighs after another man's wife,
like a well-fed and lusty stallion.
9 Shall I not punish them for this?
the LORD asks.
Shall I not take vengeance
on such a people?
10 Go along her rows of vines and slash them,
yet do not make an end of them.
Hack away her green branches,
for they are not the LORD's.
11 Faithless are Israel and Judah, both faithless to me.
This is the very word of the LORD.
12 They have denied the LORD, saying, 'He does not exist.

No evil shall come upon us;
 we shall never see sword or famine.
 The prophets will prove mere wind,
 the word not in them.' 13

And so, because you talk in this way, these are the words of the LORD 14
 the God of Hosts to me:

I will make my words a fire in your mouth;
 and it shall burn up this people like brushwood.

I bring against you, Israel, a nation from afar,
 an ancient people established long ago,
 says the LORD. 15

A people whose language you do not know, whose speech you will not understand;
 they are all mighty warriors, 16

their jaws are a grave, wide open, to devour your harvest and your bread, 17
 to devour your sons and your daughters, to devour your flocks and your herds,
 to devour your vines and your fig-trees.

They shall batter down the cities in which you trust,^a walled though they are.

But in those days, the LORD declares, I will still not make an end of you. 18
 When you ask, 'Why has the LORD our God done all this to us?' I shall 19 answer, 'As you have forsaken me and served alien gods in your own land, so shall you serve foreigners^b in a land that is not yours.'

Tell this to the people of Jacob, proclaim it in Judah: 20

Listen, you foolish and senseless people, who have eyes and see nothing,
 ears and hear nothing. 21

Have you no fear of me? says the LORD;
 will you not shiver before me,
 before me, who made the shivering sand to bound the sea,
 a barrier it never can pass? 22

Its waves heave and toss but they are powerless;
 roar as they may, they cannot pass.
 But this people has a rebellious and defiant heart, 23
 rebels they have been and now they are clean gone.

They did not say to themselves,
 'Let us fear the LORD our God, who gives us the rains of autumn and spring showers in their turn, who brings us unfailingly
 fixed seasons of harvest.' 24

^a Prob. rdg. ; Heb. adds with the sword.

^b Or foreign gods.

- 25 But your wrongdoing has upset nature's order,
and your sins have kept from you her kindly gifts.
- 26 For among my people there are wicked men, who lay snares like a fowler's net ^a and set deadly traps to catch men.
- 27 Their houses are full of fraud,
as a cage is full of birds.
They grow rich and grand,
bloated and rancorous;
- 28 their thoughts are all of evil,
and they refuse to do justice,
the claims of the orphan they do not put right
nor do they grant justice to the poor.
- 29 Shall I not punish them for this?
says the LORD;
shall I not take vengeance
on such a people?
- 30 An appalling thing, an outrage,
has appeared in this land:
- 31 prophets prophesy lies and priests go hand in hand with them,
and my people love to have it so.
How will you fare at the end of it all?
- 6 Save yourselves, men of Benjamin,
come out of Jerusalem,
blow the trumpet in Tekoa,
fire the beacon on Beth-hakkerem, for calamity looms from the north and great disaster.
- 2 Zion, delightful and lovely:
her end is near—
- 3 she to whom the shepherds come and bring their flocks with them.
There they pitch their tents all round her,
each grazing his own strip of pasture.
- 4 Declare war solemnly against her;
come, let us attack her at noon.
Too late! the day declines and the shadows lengthen.
- 5 Come then, let us attack her by night and destroy her palaces.
- 6 These are the words of the LORD of Hosts:
Cut down the trees of Jerusalem and raise siege-ramps against her,
the city whose name is Licence, oppression is rampant in her.

^a who . . . net: prob. rdg.; Heb. unintelligible.

- As a well keeps its water fresh,
so she keeps her evil fresh. 7
Violence and outrage echo in her streets;
sickness and wounds stare me in the face.
Learn your lesson, Jerusalem, 8 lest my love for you be torn from my heart,
and I leave you desolate,
a land where no one can live.
These are the words of the LORD of Hosts: 9
Glean the remnant of Israel
like a vine,
pass your hand like a vintager one last time
over the branches.
To whom can I address myself, 10
to whom give solemn warning? Who will hear me?
Their ears are uncircumcised;
they cannot listen;
they treat the LORD's word as a reproach;
they show no concern with it.
But I am full of the anger of the LORD, 11
I cannot hold it in.
I must pour it out on the children in the street and on the young men in their gangs.
Man and wife alike shall be caught in it,
the greybeard and the very old.
Their houses shall be turned over to others, 12
their fields and their women alike.
For I will raise my hand, says the LORD,
against the people of the country.
For all, high and low, 13
are out for ill-gotten gain;
prophets and priests are frauds,
every one of them;
they dress my people's wound, but skin-deep only, 14
with their saying, 'All is well.'
All well? Nothing is well!
Are they ashamed when they practise their abominations? 15
Ashamed? Not they!
They can never be put out of countenance.
Therefore they shall fall with a great crash,^a
and be brought to the ground on the day of my reckoning.
The LORD has said it.
- These are the words of the LORD: Stop at the cross-roads; look for 16
the ancient paths; ask, 'Where is the way that leads to what is good?'
Then take that way, and you will find rest for yourselves. But they said,
'We will not.' Then I will appoint watchmen to direct you; listen for their 17

^a with a great crash: or where they fall or among the fallen.

18 trumpet-call. But they said, 'We will not.' Therefore hear, you nations, and 19 take note, all you who witness it, of the plight of this people. Listen, O earth, I bring ruin on them, the harvest of all their scheming; for they have 20 given no thought to my words and have spurned my instruction. What good is it to me if frankincense is brought from Sheba and fragrant spices from distant lands? I will not accept your whole-offerings, your sacrifices 21 do not please me. Therefore these are the words of the LORD:

I will set obstacles before this people which shall bring them to the ground; fathers and sons, friends and neighbours shall all perish together.

22 These are the words of the LORD:

See, a people is coming from a northern land,
 a great nation rouses itself from earth's farthest corners.
 23 They come with bow and sabre, cruel men and pitiless, bestriding their horses, they sound like the thunder of the sea,
 they are like men arrayed for battle against you, Zion.

We have heard tell of them and our hands hang limp,
 agony grips us, the anguish of a woman in labour.

Do not go out into the country,
 do not walk by the high road;
 for the foe, sword in hand,
 is a terror let loose.

Daughter of my people, wrap yourself in sackcloth,
 sprinkle ashes over yourself, wail bitterly,
 as one who mourns an only son;
 in an instant shall the marauder be upon us.

I have appointed you an assayer of my people;
 you will know how to test them and will assay their conduct; 28 arch-rebels all of them, mischief-makers, corrupt to a man.

The bellows puff and blow, the furnace glows;
 in vain does the refiner smelt the ore,
 lead, copper and iron^a are not separated out.

Call them spurious silver;
 for the LORD has spurned them.

False religion and its punishment

7 1 2 THIS WORD CAME FROM THE LORD to Jeremiah. Stand at the gate of the LORD's house and there make your proclamation: Listen to the words of the LORD, all you men of Judah who come in through these gates 3 to worship him. These are the words of the LORD of Hosts the God of ^a copper and iron: transposed from after mischief-makers in verse 28.

Israel: Mend your ways and your doings, that I may let you live in this place. You keep saying, 'This place^a is the temple of the LORD, the temple of the LORD, the temple of the LORD!' This catchword of yours is a lie; put no trust in it. Mend your ways and your doings, deal fairly with one another, do not oppress the alien, the orphan, and the widow, shed no innocent blood in this place, do not run after other gods to your own ruin. Then will I let you live in this place, in the land which I gave long ago to your forefathers for all time. You gain nothing by putting your trust in this lie. You steal, you murder, you commit adultery and perjury, you burn sacrifices to Baal, you run after other gods whom you have not known; then you come and stand before me in this house, which bears my name, and say, 'We are safe'; safe, you think, to indulge in all these abominations. Do you think that this house, this house which bears my name, is a robbers' cave? I myself have seen all this, says the LORD. Go to my shrine at Shiloh, which once I made a dwelling for my Name, and see what I did to it because of the wickedness of my people Israel. And now you have done all these things, says the LORD; though I took pains to speak to you, you did not listen, and though I called, you gave no answer. Therefore what I did to Shiloh I will do to this house which bears my name, the house in which you put your trust, the place I gave to you and your forefathers; I will fling you away out of my sight, as I flung away all your kinsfolk, the whole brood of Ephraim.

Offer up no prayer, Jeremiah, for this people, raise no plea or prayer on their behalf, and do not intercede with me; for I will not listen to you. Do you not see what is going on in the cities of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem? Children are gathering wood, fathers lighting fires, women kneading dough to make crescent-cakes in honour of the queen of heaven; and drink-offerings are poured out to other gods than me—all to provoke and hurt me. But is it I, says the LORD, whom they hurt? No; it is themselves, covering their own selves with shame. Therefore, says the Lord GOD, my anger and my fury shall fall on this place, on man and beast, on trees and crops, and it shall burn unquenched.

These are the words of the LORD of Hosts the God of Israel: Add whole-offerings to sacrifices and eat the flesh if you will. But when I brought your forefathers out of Egypt, I gave them no commands about whole-offering and sacrifice; I said not a word about them. What I did command them was this: If you obey me, I will be your God and you shall be my people. You must conform to all my commands, if you would prosper. But they did not listen; they paid no heed, and persisted in disobedience with evil and stubborn hearts; they looked backwards and not forwards, from the day when your forefathers left Egypt until now. I took pains to send to them all my servants the prophets; they did not listen to me, they paid no heed, but were obstinate and proved even more wicked than their forefathers. When you tell them this, they will not listen to you; if you call them, they will not answer. Then you shall say to them, This is the nation that did not obey the LORD its God nor accept correction; truth has perished, it is heard no more on their lips.

^a This place: prob. rdg.; Heb. Those.

29 O Jerusalem, cut off your hair,
the symbol of your dedication, and throw it away;
raise up a lament on the high bare places.

For the LORD has spurned the generation which has roused his wrath, and 30 has abandoned them. For the men of Judah have done what is wrong in my eyes, says the LORD. They have defiled with their loathsome idols the house 31 that bears my name, they have built a shrine of Topheth in the Valley of Ben-hinnom, at which to burn their sons and daughters; that was no 32 command of mine, nor did it ever enter my thought. Therefore a time is coming, says the LORD, when it shall no longer be called Topheth or the 33 Valley of Ben-hinnom, but the Valley of Slaughter; for the dead shall be buried in Topheth because there is no room elsewhere. So the bodies of 34 this people shall become food for the birds of the air and the wild beasts, and there will be no one to scare them away. From the cities of Judah and the streets of Jerusalem I will banish all sounds of joy and gladness, the voice of the bridegroom and the bride; for the land shall become desert.

8 At that time, says the LORD, men shall bring out from their graves the bones of the kings of Judah, of the officers, priests, and prophets, and of 2 all who lived in Jerusalem. They shall expose them to the sun, the moon, and all the host of heaven, whom they loved and served and adored, to whom they resorted and bowed in worship. Those bones shall not be 3 gathered up nor buried but shall become dung on the ground. All the survivors of this wicked race, wherever I have banished them, would rather die than live. This is the very word of the LORD of Hosts.

4 You shall say to them, These are the words of the LORD:

If men fall, can they not also rise?

If a man breaks away, can he not return?

5 Then why are this people so wayward, incurable in their waywardness?
Why have they clung to their treachery and refused to return to their obedience?

6 I have listened to them and heard not one word of truth, not one sinner crying remorsefully,
'Oh, what have I done?'
Each one breaks away^d in headlong career as a war-horse plunges in battle.

7 The stork in the sky knows the time to migrate,
the dove and the swift and the wryneck know the season of return;
but my people do not know the ordinances of the LORD.
8 How can you say, 'We are wise,
we have the law of the LORD', when scribes with their lying pens have falsified it?

^d breaks away: or is wayward.

- The wise are put to shame, they are dismayed and have lost their wits. 9
 They have spurned the word of the LORD,
 and what sort of wisdom is theirs?
- Therefore will I give their wives to other men 10
 and their lands to new owners.
 For all, high and low,
 are out for ill-gotten gain;
 prophets and priests are frauds,
 every one of them;
 they dress my people's wound, but skin-deep only,
 with their saying, 'All is well.' 11
 All well? Nothing is well!
 Are they ashamed when they practise their abominations? 12
 Ashamed? Not they!
 They can never be put out of countenance.
 Therefore they shall fall with a great crash,^a
 and be brought to the ground on the day of my reckoning.
 The LORD has said it.
- I would gather their harvest, says the LORD, 13
 but there are no grapes on the vine,
 no figs on the fig-tree;
 even their leaves are withered.
- Why do we sit idle? Up, all of you together, 14
 let us go into our walled cities and there meet our doom.
 For the LORD our God has struck us down,
 he has given us a draught of bitter poison;
 for we have sinned against the LORD.
- Can we hope to prosper when nothing goes well? 15
 Can we hope for respite when the terror falls suddenly?
 The snorting of his horses is heard from Dan; 16
 at the neighing of his stallions the whole land trembles.
 The enemy come; they devour the land and all its store,
 city and citizens alike.
- Beware, I am sending snakes against you, 17
 vipers, such as no man can charm,
 and they shall bite you.
 This is the very word of the LORD.
- How can I bear my sorrow? ^b 18
 I am sick at heart.
 Hark, the cry of my people 19
 from a distant land:
 'Is the LORD not in Zion?
 Is her King no longer there?'
 Why do they provoke me with their images and foreign gods?

^a with a great crash: or where they fall or among the fallen.
prob. rdg.; Heb. unintelligible.

^b How . . . sorrow? :

- 20 Harvest is past, summer is over,
and we are not saved.
- 21 I am wounded at the sight of my people's wound;
I go like a mourner, overcome with horror.
- 22 Is there no balm in Gilead,
no physician there?
Why has no new skin grown over their wound?
- 9 Would that my head were all water,
my eyes a fountain of tears,
that I might weep day and night for my people's dead!
- 2 Oh that I could find in the wilderness a shelter by the wayside, that I might leave my people and depart!
Adulterers are they all, a mob of traitors.
- 3 The tongue is their weapon, a bow ready bent.
Lying, not truth, is master in the land.
They run from one sin to another,
and for me they care nothing.
This is the very word of the LORD.
- 4 Be on your guard, each man against his friend;
put no trust even in a brother.
Brother supplants brother,^a and friend slanders friend.
- 5 They make game of their friends
but never speak the truth;
they have trained their tongues to lies;
deep in their sin, they cannot retrace their steps.
- 6 Wrong follows wrong, deceit follows deceit;
they refuse to acknowledge me.
This is the very word of the LORD.
- 7 Therefore these are the words of the LORD of Hosts:
I am their refiner and will assay them.
How can I disregard my people?
- 8 Their tongue is a cruel arrow,
their mouths speak lies.
One speaks amicably to another,
while inwardly he plans a trap for him.
- 9 Shall I not punish them for this?
says the LORD;
shall I not take vengeance
on such a people?
- 10 Over the mountains will I raise weeping and wailing, and over the desert pastures will I chant a dirge.

^a Brother supplants brother: or Every brother is a supplanter like Jacob (cp. Gen. 27. 35 and note).

They are scorched and untrodden,
 they hear no lowing of cattle;
 birds of the air and beasts have fled and are gone.

I will make Jerusalem a heap of ruins, a haunt of wolves, 11 and the cities of Judah an unpeopled waste.

What man is wise enough to understand this, to understand what the 12
 LORD has said and to proclaim it? Why has the land become a dead land, scorched like the desert and untrodden? The LORD said, It is because they 13 forsook my law which I set before them; they neither obeyed me nor conformed to it. They followed the promptings of their own stubborn hearts, 14 they followed the Baalim as their forefathers had taught them. Therefore 15 these are the words of the LORD of Hosts the God of Israel: I will feed this people with wormwood and give them bitter poison to drink. I will scatter 16 them among nations whom neither they nor their forefathers have known;
 I will carry them with the sword until I have made an end of them.

These are the words of the LORD of Hosts: 17

Summon the wailing women to come, send for the women skilled in keening to come quickly and raise a lament for us, 18 that our eyes may run with tears and our eyelids be wet with weeping.

Hark, hark, lamentation is heard in Zion: 19
 How fearful is our ruin! How great our shame!
 We have left our lands, our houses have been pulled down.

Listen, you women, to the words of the LORD, 20
 that your ears may catch what he says.
 Teach your daughters the lament,
 let them teach one another this dirge:
 Death has climbed in through our windows, 21
 it has entered our palaces,
 it sweeps off the children in the open air
 and drives young men from the streets.

This is the word of the LORD: 22

The corpses of men shall fall and lie like dung in the fields, like swathes behind the reaper, but no one shall gather them.

These are the words of the LORD: 23

Let not the wise man boast of his wisdom
 nor the valiant of his valour;
 let not the rich man boast of his riches;
 but if any man would boast, let him boast of this, 24
 that he understands and knows me.

For I am the LORD, I show unfailing love,
 I do justice and right upon the earth;
 for on these I have set my heart.
 This is the very word of the LORD.

25 The time is coming, says the LORD, when I will punish all the circum-26 cised, Egypt and Judah, Edom and Ammon, Moab, and all who haunt the fringes of the desert;^d for all alike, the nations and Israel, are uncircumcised in heart.

10 Listen, Israel, to this word that the LORD has spoken against you:

2 Do not fall into the ways of the nations,
 do not be awed by signs in the heavens;
 it is the nations who go in awe of these.

3 For the carved images of the nations are a sham,
 they are nothing but timber cut from the forest,
 worked with his chisel by a craftsman;

4 he adorns it with silver and gold, fastening them on with hammer and nails
 so that they do not fall apart.

5 They can no more speak than a scarecrow in a plot of cucumbers;
 they must be carried, for they cannot walk.

Do not be afraid of them: they can do no harm,
 and they have no power to do good.

6 Where can one be found like thee, O LORD?
 Great thou art and great the might of thy name.

7 Who shall not fear thee, king of the nations?
 for fear is thy fitting tribute.

Where among the wisest of the nations and all their royalty can one be found like thee?

8 They are fools and blockheads one and all,
 learning their nonsense from a log of wood.

9 The beaten silver is brought from Tarshish and the gold from Ophir;
 all are the work of craftsmen and goldsmiths.
 They are draped in violet and purple,
 all the work of skilled men.

10 But the LORD is God in truth,
 a living god, an eternal king.
 The earth quakes under his wrath, nations cannot endure his fury.

11 [You shall say this to them: The gods who did not make heaven and earth shall perish from the earth and from under these heavens.]

12^b God made the earth by his power, fixed the world in place by his wisdom,
 unfurled the skies by his understanding.

13 At the thunder of his voice the waters in heaven are amazed;^c he brings up the mist from the ends of the earth, he opens rifts^d for the rain and brings the wind out of his storehouses.

- All men are brutish and ignorant;
every goldsmith is discredited by his idol; 14
for the figures he casts are a sham,
there is no breath in them.
They are worth nothing, mere mockeries, 15
which perish when their day of reckoning comes.
God, Jacob's creator, is not like these; 16
for he is the maker of all.
Israel is the people he claims as his own;
the LORD of Hosts is his name.
- Put your goods together and carry them out of the country, 17 living as you are under siege.
For these are the words of the LORD: 18
This time I will uproot
the whole population of the land, and I will press them hard and squeeze them dry.
- O the pain of my wounds! 19
Cruel are the blows I suffer.
But this is my plight, I said, and I must endure it.
My home is ruined, my tent-ropes all severed, 20
my sons have left me and are gone,
there is no one to pitch my tent again,
no one to put up its curtains.
The shepherds of the people are mere brutes; 21
they never consult the LORD,
and so they do not prosper,
and all their flocks at pasture are scattered.
- Hark, a rumour comes flying, 22
then a mounting uproar from the land of the north, an army to make Judah's cities desolate, a haunt of wolves.
I know, O LORD, 23
that man's ways are not of his own choosing;
nor is it for a man to determine his course in life.
Correct us, O LORD, but with justice, not in anger, 24
lest thou bring us almost to nothing.
Pour out thy fury on nations 25
that have not acknowledged thee,
on tribes that have not invoked thee by name;
for they have devoured Jacob and made an end of him and have left his home a waste.

Warnings and punishment

- 11¹² THE WORD WHICH CAME TO JEREMIAH from the LORD: Listen to the terms of this covenant and repeat them to the men of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem. Tell them, These are the words of the LORD the God of Israel: A curse on the man who does not observe the terms of this covenant by which I bound your forefathers when I brought them out of Egypt, from the smelting-furnace. I said, If you obey me and do all that I tell you, you shall become my people and I will become your God. And I will thus make good the oath I swore to your forefathers, that I would give them a land flowing with milk and honey, the land you now possess.
- 6 I answered, 'Amen, LORD.' Then the LORD said: Proclaim all these terms in the cities of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem. Say, Listen to the terms of this covenant and carry them out. I have protested to your forefathers since I brought them out of Egypt, till this day; I took pains to warn them: Obey me, I said. But they did not obey; they paid no attention to me, but each followed the promptings of his own stubborn and wicked heart. So I brought on them all the penalties laid down in this covenant by which I had bound them, whose terms they did not observe.
- 9 The LORD said to me, The men of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem have entered into a conspiracy: they have gone back to the sins of their earliest forefathers and refused to listen to me. They have followed other gods and worshipped them; Israel and Judah have broken the covenant which I made with their fathers. Therefore these are the words of the LORD: I now bring on them disaster from which they cannot escape; though they cry to me for help I will not listen. The inhabitants of the cities of Judah and of Jerusalem may go and cry for help to the gods to whom they have burnt sacrifices; they will not save them in the hour of disaster.
- 13 For you, Judah, have as many gods as you have towns; you have set up as many altars to burn sacrifices to Baal as there are streets in Jerusalem. So offer up no prayer for this people; raise no cry or prayer on their behalf, for I will not listen when they call to me in the hour of disaster.
- 15 What right has my beloved in my house with her shameless ways?
 Can the flesh of fat offerings on the altar
 ward off the disaster that threatens you?
- 16 Once the LORD called you an olive-tree,
 leafy and fair;
 but now with a great roaring noise
 you will feel sharp anguish; ^a fire sets its leaves alight and consumes ^b its branches.
- 17 The LORD of Hosts who planted you has threatened you with disaster, because of the harm Israel and Judah brought on themselves when they provoked me to anger by burning sacrifices to Baal.

^a you will feel sharp anguish; transposed from end of verse 15. rdg.; Heb. they consume.

It was the LORD who showed me, and so I knew; he opened my eyes to 18 what they were doing. I had been like a sheep led obedient to the slaughter; 19
 I did not know that they were hatching plots against me and saying, 'Let us cut down the tree while the sap is in it; let us destroy him out of the living, so that his very name shall be forgotten.'

O LORD of Hosts who art a righteous judge, 20 testing the heart and mind,
 I have committed my cause to thee;
 let me see thy vengeance upon them.

Therefore these are the words of the LORD about the men of Anathoth who 21 seek to take my life, and say, 'Prophesy no more in the name of the LORD or we will kill you'—these are his words: I will punish them: their young 22 men shall die by the sword, their sons and daughters shall die by famine.
 Not one of them shall survive; for in the year of their reckoning I will 23 bring ruin on the men of Anathoth.

O LORD, I will dispute with thee, for thou art just; 12
 yes, I will plead my case before thee.

Why do the wicked prosper
 and traitors live at ease?

Thou hast planted them and their roots strike deep, 2
 they grow up and bear fruit.

Thou art ever on their lips,
 yet far from their hearts.

But thou knowest me, O LORD, thou seest me; 3
 thou dost test my devotion to thyself.

Drag them away like sheep to the shambles;
 set them apart for the day of slaughter.

How long must the country lie parched 4
 and its green grass wither?

No birds and beasts are left, because its people are so wicked, because they say, 'God will not see what we are doing.'

If you have raced with men and the runners have worn you down, 5
 how then can you hope to vie with horses?

If you fall headlong in easy country,
 how will you fare in Jordan's dense thickets?

All men, your brothers and kinsmen, are traitors to you, 6
 they are in full cry after you;
 trust them not, for all the fine words they give you.

I have forsaken the house of Israel, 7
 I have cast off my own people.

I have given my beloved into the power of her foes.
 My own people have turned on me like a lion from the scrub, 8
 roaring against me; therefore I hate them.

Is this land of mine a hyena's lair, 9
 with birds of prey hovering all around it?

Come, you wild beasts; come, all of you, flock to the feast.

- 10 Many shepherds have ravaged my vineyard and trampled down my field,
they have made my pleasant field a desolate wilderness, 11 made it a waste land, waste and waterless, to my sorrow.
The whole land is waste, and no one cares.
- 12 Plunderers have swarmed across the high bare places in the wilderness, a sword of the LORD devouring the land from end to end; no creature can find peace.
- 13 Men sow wheat and reap thistles;
they sift but get no grain.
They are disappointed of their ^a harvest
because of the anger of the LORD.

- 14 These are the words of the LORD about all those evil neighbours who are laying hands on the land which I gave to my people Israel as their patri-16^b mony: I will uproot them from that ^c soil. Yet, if they will learn the ways of my people, swearing by my name, 'By the life of the LORD', as they taught my people to swear by the Baal, they shall form families among my 17 people. But if they will not listen, I will uproot that people, uproot and 15 destroy them. Also I will uproot Judah from among them; but after I have uprooted them, I will have pity on them again and will bring each man back to his patrimony and his land. This is the very word of the LORD.
- 13 These were the words of the LORD to me: Go and buy yourself a linen
2 girdle and put it round your waist, but do not let it come near water. So
3 I bought it as the LORD had told me and put it round my waist. The LORD
4 spoke to me a second time: Take the girdle which you bought and put round your waist; go at once to Perath and hide it in a crevice among the rocks.
5 6 So I went and hid the girdle at ^d Perath, as the LORD had told me. After a long time the LORD said to me: Go at once to Perath and fetch back the 7 girdle which I told you to hide there. So I went to Perath and looked for the place where I had hidden it, but when I picked it up, I saw that it was 8 9 spoilt, and no good for anything. Again the LORD spoke to me and these were his words: Thus will I spoil the gross pride of Judah, the gross pride 10 of Jerusalem. This wicked nation has refused to listen to my words; they have followed other gods, serving them and bowing down to them. So it 11 shall be ^e like this girdle, no good for anything. For, just as a girdle is bound close to a man's waist, so I bound all Israel and all Judah to myself, says the LORD, so that they should become my people to win a name for me, and praise and glory; but they did not listen.

- 12 You shall say this to them: These are the words of the LORD the God of Israel: Wine-jars should be filled with wine. They will answer, 'We know 13 quite well that wine-jars should be filled with wine.' Then you shall say to them, These are the words of the LORD: I will fill all the inhabitants of this land with wine until they are drunk—kings of David's line who sit on 14 his throne, priests, prophets, and all who live in Jerusalem. I will dash them to pieces one against another, fathers and sons alike, says the LORD, I will show them no compassion or pity or tenderness; nor refrain from destroying them.^a

Hear and attend. Be not too proud to listen, for it is the LORD who speaks.	15
Ascribe glory to the LORD your God before the darkness falls, before your feet stumble on the twilit hill-sides, before he turns the light you look for to deep gloom and thick darkness.	16
If in those depths of gloom you will not listen, then for very anguish I can only weep and shed tears, ^b my eyes must stream with tears; for the LORD's flock is carried away into captivity.	17
Say to the king and the queen mother: ^c Down, take a humble seat, for your proud crowns are fallen from your heads.	18
Your cities in the Negeb are besieged, and no one can relieve them; all Judah has been swept into exile, swept clean away.	19
Lift up your eyes and see those who are coming from the north.	20
Where is the flock that was entrusted to you, the flock you were so proud of?
What will you say when you suffer because your leaders ^d cannot be found, though it was you who trained them to be your head?	21
Will not pangs seize you, like the pangs of a woman in labour, when you wonder,	22
'Why has this come upon me?'
For your many sins your skirts are torn off you, your limbs uncovered.
Can the Nubian change his skin, or the leopard its spots?	23
And you? Can you do good, you who are schooled in evil?
Therefore I will scatter you ^e like chaff driven by the desert wind.	24
This is your lot, the portion of the rebel, measured out by me, says the LORD,	25

- because you have forsaken me and trusted in false gods.
- 26 So I myself have stripped off your skirts and laid bare your shame.
- 27 Your adulteries, your lustful neighing,
your wanton lewdness, are an offence to me.^a
On the hills and in the open country
I have seen your foul deeds.
Alas, Jerusalem, unclean that you are!
How long, how long will you delay?^b
- 14 This came to Jeremiah as the word of the LORD concerning the drought:
- 2 Judah droops, her cities languish,
her men sink to the ground;
Jerusalem's cry goes up.
- 3 Their flock-masters send their boys for water;
they come to the pools but find no water there.
Back they go, with empty vessels;
4 the produce^c of the land has failed,
because there is no rain.
The farmers' hopes are wrecked,
they uncover their heads for grief.
- 5 The hind calves in the open country and forsakes her young because there is no grass;
6 for lack of herbage, wild asses stand on the high bare places and snuff the wind for moisture,
as wolves do, and their eyes begin to fail.
- 7 Though our sins testify against us,
yet act,^d O LORD, for thy own name's sake.
Our disloyalties indeed are many; we have sinned against thee.
- 8 O hope of Israel, their saviour in time of trouble,
must thou be a stranger in the land,
a traveller pitching his tent for a night?
9 Must thou be like a man suddenly overcome,
like a man powerless to save himself?
Thou art in our midst, O LORD,
and thou hast named us thine; do not forsake us.
- 10 The LORD speaks thus of this people: They love to stray from my ways, they wander where they will. Therefore he has no more pleasure in them;
11 he remembers their guilt now, and punishes their sins. Then the LORD 12 said to me, Do not pray for the well-being of this people. When they fast, I will not listen to their cry; when they sacrifice whole-offering and grain-offering, I will not accept them. I will make an end of them with sword, 13 with famine and pestilence. But I said, O Lord God, the prophets tell them that they shall see no sword and suffer no famine; for thou wilt give them lasting prosperity in this place. The LORD answered me, The prophets 14 are prophesying lies in my name. I have not sent them; I have given them no charge; I have not spoken to them. The prophets offer them false visions, worthless augury, and their own deluding fancies. Therefore these 15 are the words of the LORD about the prophets who, though not sent by me, prophesy in my name and say that neither sword nor famine shall touch this land: By sword and by famine shall those prophets meet their end.

 The people to whom they prophesy shall be flung out into the streets of 16 Jerusalem, victims of famine and sword; they, their wives, their sons, and their daughters, with no one to bury them: I will pour down upon them the evil they deserve.

So this is what you shall say to them: 17
 Let my eyes stream with tears, ceaselessly, day and night.
 For the virgin daughter of my people has been broken in pieces, struck by a cruel blow.
 If I go out into the country, 18
 I see men slain by the sword;
 if I enter the city, I see the ravages of famine;
 prophet and priest alike
 go begging round the land and are never at rest.
 Hast thou spurned Judah utterly? 19
 Dost thou loathe Zion?
 Why hast thou wounded us, and there is no remedy;
 why let us hope for better days, and we find nothing good,
 for a time of healing, and all is disaster?
 We acknowledge our wickedness, 20
 the guilt of our forefathers;
 O LORD, we have sinned against thee.
 Do not despise the place where thy name dwells 21
 nor bring contempt on the throne of thy glory.
 Remember thy covenant with us and do not make it void.
 Can any of the false gods of the nations give rain? 22
 Or do the heavens send showers of themselves?
 Art thou not God, O LORD,
 that we may hope in thee?
 It is thou only who doest^a all these things.

The LORD said to me, Even if Moses and Samuel stood before me, I 15 would not be moved to pity this people. Banish them from my presence; let them be gone. When they ask where they are to go, you shall say to them, 2
 These are the words of the LORD:

Those who are for death shall go to their death,
 and those for the sword to the sword;
 those who are for famine to famine,
 and those for captivity to captivity.

^a Or madest.

- 3 Four kinds of doom do I ordain for them, says the LORD: the sword to kill, dogs to tear, birds of prey from the skies and beasts from their lairs 4 to devour and destroy. I will make them repugnant to all the kingdoms of the earth, because of the crimes of Manasseh son of Hezekiah, king of Judah, in Jerusalem.
- 5 Who will take pity on you, Jerusalem,
who will offer you consolation?
Who will turn aside to wish you well?
- 6 You cast me off, says the LORD,
you turned your backs on me.
So I stretched out my hand and ruined you;
I was weary of relenting.
- 7 I winnowed them and scattered them through the cities of the land;
I brought bereavement on them, I destroyed my people,
for they would not abandon their ways.
- 8 I made widows among them more in number than the sands of the sea;
I brought upon them a horde of raiders ^a to plunder at high noon.
I made the terror of invasion fall upon them all in a moment.
- 9 The mother of seven sons grew faint,
she sank into a swoon;
her light was quenched while it was yet day;
she was left humbled and shamed.
All the remnant I gave to perish by the sword
at the hand of their enemies.
This is the very word of the LORD.

Confessions and addresses

- 10 Alas, alas, my mother, that you ever gave me birth!
a man doomed to strife, with the whole world against me.
I have borrowed from no one, I have lent to no one,
yet all men abuse me.
- 11 The LORD answered,
But I will greatly strengthen you;
in time of distress and in time of disaster
I will bring the enemy to your feet.
- 12 Can iron break steel from the north? ^b 15 LORD, thou knowest;
remember me, LORD, and come to visit me,
take vengeance for me on my persecutors.

^a I brought . . . raiders: prob. rdg.; Heb. obscure. ^b Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds and bronze. Heb. also adds (13) I will give away your wealth as spoil, and your treasure for no payment, because of your sin throughout your country. (14) I will make your enemies pass through a land you do not know; for my anger is a blazing fire and it shall burn for ever (cp. 17. 3, 4).

Be patient with me and take me not away,
 see what reproaches I endure for thy sake.
 I have to suffer those who despise thy words, 16
 but thy word is joy and happiness to me,
 for thou hast named me thine,
 O LORD, God of Hosts.
 I have never kept company with any gang of roisterers, 17
 or made merry with them;
 because I felt thy hand upon me I have sat alone;
 for thou hast filled me with indignation.
 Why then is my pain unending, 18
 my wound desperate and incurable?
 Thou art to me like a brook that is not to be trusted, whose waters fail.

This was the LORD's answer: 19
 If you will turn back to me, I will take you back and you shall stand before me.
 If you choose noble utterance and reject the base,
 you shall be my spokesman.
 This people will turn again to you,
 but you will not turn to them.
 To withstand them I will make you impregnable, 20
 a wall of bronze.
 They will attack you but they will not prevail, for I am with you to deliver you and save you, says the LORD;
 I will deliver you from the wicked, 21
 I will rescue you from the ruthless.

The word of the LORD came to me: You shall not marry a wife; you 16 1 2 shall have neither son nor daughter in this place. For these are the words 3 of the LORD concerning sons and daughters born in this place, the mothers 4 who bear them and the fathers who beget them in this land: When men 4 die, struck down by deadly ulcers, there shall be no wailing for them and no burial; they shall be like dung lying upon the ground. When men perish by sword or famine, their corpses shall become food for birds and for beasts.

For these are the words of the LORD: Enter no house where there is a 5 mourning-feast; do not go in to wail or to bring comfort, for I have withdrawn my peace from this people, says the LORD, my love and affection. 6 High and low shall die in this land, but there shall be no burial, no wailing 6 for them; no one shall gash himself, or shave his head. No one shall give 7 the mourner a portion of bread to console him for the dead, nor give him 7 the cup of consolation, even for his father or mother. Nor shall you enter 8 a house where there is feasting, to sit eating and drinking there. For these 9 are the words of the LORD of Hosts, the God of Israel: In your own days, in the sight of you all, and in this very place, I will silence all sounds of joy and gladness, and the voice of bridegroom and bride.

10 When you tell this people all these things they will ask you, 'Why has the LORD decreed that this great disaster is to come upon us? What wrong have we done? What sin have we committed against the LORD our God?'

11 You shall answer, Because your forefathers forsook me, says the LORD, and followed other gods, serving them and bowing down to them. They forsook me and did not keep my law. And you yourselves have done worse than your forefathers; for each of you follows the promptings of his wicked and stubborn heart instead of obeying me. So I will fling you headlong out of this land into a country unknown to you and to your forefathers; there you can serve other gods day and night, for I will show you no favour. Therefore, says the LORD, the time is coming when men shall no longer swear,

15 'By the life of the LORD who brought the Israelites up from Egypt', but, 'By the life of the LORD who brought the Israelites back from a northern land and from all the lands to which he had dispersed them'; and I will bring them back to the soil which I gave to their forefathers.

16 I will send for many fishermen, says the LORD, and they shall fish for them. After that I will send for many hunters, and they shall hunt them out from every mountain and hill and from the crevices in the rocks. For my eyes are on all their ways; they are not hidden from my sight, nor is their wrongdoing concealed from me. I will first make them pay in full^a for the wrong they have done and the sin they have committed by defiling with the dead lumber of their idols the land which belongs to me, and by filling it with their abominations.

19 O LORD, my strength and my stronghold, my refuge in time of trouble,
to thee shall the nations come from the ends of the earth and say,
Our forefathers inherited only a sham,
an idol vain and useless.

20 Can man make gods for himself?

They would be no gods.
Therefore I am teaching them, once for all will I teach them
my power and my might,
and they shall learn that my name is the LORD.

17 The sin of Judah is recorded with an iron tool, engraved on the tablet of their heart with a point of adamant and carved on the horns of their altars to bear witness against them.^b Their altars and their sacred poles stand by every spreading tree, on the heights and the hills in the mountain country. I will give away your wealth as spoil, and all your treasure for no payment,^c because of your^d sin throughout your country. You will lose possession^e of the patrimony which I gave you. I will make you serve your enemies as slaves in a land you do not know; for my anger is a blazing fire^f and it shall burn for ever.

These are the words of the LORD:

- 5
 A curse on the man who trusts in man and leans for support on human kind,
 while his heart is far from the LORD!
 He shall be like a juniper in the desert;
 6
 when good comes he shall not see it.
 He shall dwell among the rocks in the wilderness,
 in a salt land where no man can live.
 Blessed is the man who trusts in the LORD, 7
 and rests his confidence upon him.
 He shall be like a tree planted by the waterside, 8
 that stretches its roots along the stream.
 When the heat comes it has nothing to fear;
 its spreading foliage stays green.
 In a year of drought it feels no care,
 and does not cease to bear fruit.
- The heart is the most deceitful of all things, 9 desperately sick;^a who can fathom it?
 I, the LORD, search the mind 10 and test the heart,
 requiting man for his conduct,
 and as his deeds deserve.
 Like a partridge which gathers into its nest 11 eggs which it has not laid,
 so is the man who amasses wealth unjustly.
 Before his days are half done he must leave it,
 and prove but a fool at the last.
- O throne of glory, exalted from the beginning, 12
 the place of our sanctuary,
 O LORD on whom Israel's hope is fixed, 13
 all who reject thee shall be put to shame;
 all in this land who forsake thee shall be humbled,^b
 for they have rejected the fountain of living water.^c Heal me, O LORD, and I shall be healed, 14
 save me and I shall be saved;
 for thou art my praise.
 They say to me, 'Where is the word of the LORD?'
 15
 Let it come if it can!
 It is not the thought of disaster that makes me press after thee;
 16
 never did I desire this day of despair.
 Thou knowest all that has passed my lips;
 it was approved by thee.
 Do not become a terror to me;
 17
 thou art my only refuge on the day of disaster.

 Bring on them the day of disaster;
 destroy them, destroy them utterly.

19 These were the words of the LORD to me: Go and stand in the Benjamin ^a 20 Gate, through which the kings of Judah go in and out, and in all the gates 21 of Jerusalem. Say, Hear the words of the LORD, you princes of Judah, 22 all you men of Judah, and all you inhabitants of Jerusalem who come 23 in through these gates. These are the words of the LORD: Observe this with 24 care, that you do not carry any load on the sabbath or bring it through the 25 gates of Jerusalem. You shall not bring any load out of your houses or do 26 any work on the sabbath, but you shall keep the sabbath day holy as I 27 commanded your forefathers. Yet they did not obey or pay attention, but 28 obstinately refused to hear or learn their lesson. Now if you will obey me, 29 says the LORD, and refrain from bringing any load through the gates of 30 this city on the sabbath, and keep that day holy by doing no work on it, 31 then kings shall come through the gates of this city, kings ^b who shall sit 32 on David's throne. They shall come riding in chariots or on horseback, 33 escorted by their captains, by the men of Judah and the inhabitants of 34 Jerusalem; and this city shall be inhabited for ever. People shall come from 35 the cities of Judah, the country round Jerusalem, the land of Benjamin, 36 the Shephelah, the hill-country and the Negeb, bringing whole-offerings, 37 sacrifices, grain-offerings, and frankincense, bringing also thank-offerings
 38 to the house of the LORD. But if you do not obey me by keeping the sabbath 39 day holy and by not carrying any load as you come through the gates of 40 Jerusalem on the sabbath, then I will set fire to those gates; it shall consume 41 the palaces of Jerusalem and shall not be put out.

18 1 2 These are the words which came to Jeremiah from the LORD: Go down
 3 at once to the potter's house, and there I will tell you what I have to say.
 4 So I went down to the potter's house and found him working at the wheel.
 5 Now and then a vessel he was making out of the clay would be spoilt in his 6 hands, and then he would start again and mould it into another vessel to 7 his liking. Then the word of the LORD came to me: Can I not deal with you, 8 Israel, says the LORD, as the potter deals with his clay? You are clay in my 9 hands like the clay in his, O house of Israel. At any moment I may threaten 10 to uproot a nation or a kingdom, to pull it down and destroy it. But if the 11 nation which I have threatened turns back from its wicked ways, then I 12 shall think better of the evil I had in mind to bring on it. Or at any moment
 I may decide to build or to plant a nation or a kingdom. But if it does evil in my sight and does not obey me, I shall think better of the good I had in mind for it. Go now and tell the men of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem that these are the words of the LORD: I am the potter; I am preparing evil for you and perfecting my designs against you. Turn back, every one of you, from his evil course; mend your ways and your doings. But they answer, 'Things are past hope. We will do as we like, and each of us will officers.

^b Prob. rdg.; Hcb. adds and follow the promptings of his own wicked and stubborn heart.' Therefore 13

these are the words of the LORD:

Inquire among the nations: who ever heard the like of this?
The virgin Israel has done a thing most horrible.
Will the snow cease to fall on the rocky slopes of Lebanon? 14
Will the cool rain streaming in torrents ever fail?

No, but my people have forgotten me; 15
they burn sacrifices to a mere idol,
so they stumble in their paths, the ancient ways,
and they take to byways and unmade roads;
their own land they lay waste, 16
and men will jeer at it for ever in contempt.

All who go by will be horror-struck and shake their heads.
Like a wind from the east 17
I will scatter them before their enemies.
In the hour of their downfall
I will turn my back towards them and not my face.

'Come, let us decide what to do with Jeremiah', men say. 'There will 18 still be priests to guide us, still wise men to advise, still prophets to proclaim the word. Come, let us invent some charges against him; let us pay no attention to his message.'

But do thou, O LORD, pay attention, 19
and hear what my opponents are saying against me.
Is good to be repaid with evil? ^a 20
Remember how I stood before thee, pleading on their behalf to avert thy wrath from them.

Therefore give their sons over to famine, 21
leave them at the mercy of the sword.
Let their women be childless and widowed,
let death carry off their men,
let their young men be cut down in battle.

Bring raiders upon them without warning, 22
and let screams of terror ring out from their houses.
For they have dug a pit to catch me and have hidden snares for my feet.
Well thou knowest, O LORD, 23
all their murderous plots against me.

Do not blot out their wrongdoing or annul their sin;
when they are brought stumbling into thy presence,
deal with them on the day of thy anger.

These are the words of the LORD: Go and buy an earthenware jar. 19
Then take with you some of the elders of the people and of the priests, and go out to the Valley of Ben-hinnom, on which the Gate of the Pot- 2 sherds opens, and there proclaim what I tell you. Say, Hear the word of 3

^a Prob. rdg. ; Heb. adds they have dug a pit for me (cp. verse 22).

the LORD, you princes of Judah and inhabitants of Jerusalem. These are the words of the LORD of Hosts the God of Israel: I will bring on this place
 4 a disaster which shall ring in the ears of all who hear of it. For they have forsaken me, and treated this place as if it were not mine, burning sacrifices to other gods whom neither they nor their fathers nor the kings of Judah
 5 have known, and filling this place with the blood of the innocent. They have built shrines to Baal, where they burn their sons as whole-offerings to Baal. It was no command of mine; I never spoke of it; it never entered my 6 thought. Therefore, says the LORD, the time is coming when this place shall no longer be called Topheth or the Valley of Ben-hinnom, but the 7 Valley of Slaughter. In this place I will shatter the plans of Judah and Jerusalem as a jar is shattered; I will make the people fall by the sword before their enemies, at the hands of those who would kill them, and I will
 8 give their corpses to the birds and beasts to devour. I will make this city a scene of horror and contempt, so that every passer-by will be horror-
 9 struck and jeer in contempt at the sight of its wounds. I will compel men to eat the flesh of their sons and their daughters; they shall devour one another's flesh in the dire straits to which their enemies and those who
 10 would kill them will reduce them in the siege. Then you must shatter the jar before the eyes of the men who have come with you and say to them,
 11 These are the words of the LORD of Hosts: Thus will I shatter this people and this city as one shatters an earthen vessel so that it cannot be mended, and the dead shall be buried in Topheth because there is no room elsewhere
 12 to bury them. This is what I will do to this place, says the LORD, and to those who live there: I will make this city like Topheth. Because of their 13 defilement, the houses of Jerusalem and those of the kings of Judah shall be like Topheth, every one of the houses on whose roofs men have burnt sacrifices to the host of heaven and poured drink-offerings to other gods.
 14 Jeremiah came in from Topheth, where the LORD had sent him to prophesy, and stood in the court of the LORD's house. He said to all the people,
 15 These are the words of the LORD of Hosts the God of Israel: I am bringing on this city and on all its blood-spattered altars every disaster with which I have threatened it, for its people have remained obstinate and refused to listen to me.
 20 When Pashhur son of Immer the priest, the chief officer in the house
 2 of the LORD, heard Jeremiah prophesying these things, he had him flogged^a and put him into the stocks at the Upper Gate of Benjamin, in the house of 3 the LORD. The next morning he released him, and Jeremiah said to him,
 4 The LORD has called you not Pashhur but Magor-missabib.^b For these are the words of the LORD: I will make you a terror to yourself and to all your friends; they shall fall by the sword of the enemy before your very eyes. I will hand over all Judah to the king of Babylon, and he will deport
 5 them to Babylon and put them to the sword. I will give all this city's store of wealth and riches and all the treasures of the kings of Judah to their enemies; they shall seize them as spoil and carry them off to Babylon.
 6 You, Pashhur, and all your household shall go into captivity and come to Babylon. There shall you die and there shall you be buried, you and all your friends to whom you have been a false prophet.

^a had him flogged: or struck him.^b That is Terror let loose.

- O LORD, thou hast duped me, and I have been thy dupe ;
 thou hast outwitted me and hast prevailed. 7
 I have been made a laughing-stock all the day long,
 everyone mocks me.
- Whenever I speak I must needs cry out and proclaim violence and destruction. 8
 I am reproached and mocked all the time for uttering the word of the LORD.
- Whenever I said, 'I will call him to mind no more,
 nor speak in his name again', 9
 then his word was imprisoned in my body,
 like a fire blazing in my heart,
 and I was weary with holding it under,
 and could endure no more.
- For I heard many whispering, ^a 'Denounce him! we will denounce him.' 10
 All my friends were on the watch for a false step, saying, 'Perhaps he may be tricked, then we can catch him and take our revenge.'
- But the LORD is on my side, strong and ruthless, therefore my persecutors shall stumble and fall powerless. 11
 Bitter shall be their abasement when they fail, and their shame shall long be remembered.
- O LORD of Hosts, thou dost test the righteous 12
 and search the depths of the heart ;
 to thee have I committed my cause,
 let me see thee take vengeance on them.
- Sing to the LORD, praise the LORD ; 13
 for he rescues the poor from those who would do them wrong.
- A curse on the day when I was born!
 Be it for ever unblessed,
 the day when my mother bore me!
 A curse on the man who brought word to my father, 15
 'A child is born to you, a son', and gladdened his heart!
- That man shall fare like the cities 16
 which the LORD overthrew without mercy.
 He shall hear cries of alarm in the morning and uproar at noon,
 because death did not claim me before birth, 17
 and my mother did not become my grave, her womb great with me for ever.
- Why did I come forth from the womb 18
 to know only sorrow and toil,
 to end my days in shame?

^a Prob. rdg. ; Heb. adds Terror let loose.

Kings and prophets denounced

- 21 THE WORD WHICH CAME FROM THE LORD to Jeremiah when King Zedekiah sent to him Pashhur son of Malchiah and Zephaniah the priest, son of Maaseiah, with this request: 'Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon is making war on us; inquire of the LORD on our behalf. Perhaps the LORD will perform a miracle as he has done in past times, so that Nebuchadrezzar may raise the siege.' But Jeremiah answered them, Tell Zedekiah, these are the words of the LORD the God of Israel: I will turn back upon you your own weapons with which you are fighting the king of Babylon and the Chaldaeans besieging you outside the wall; and I will bring them into the heart of this city. I myself will fight against you in burning rage and great fury, with an outstretched hand and a strong arm. I will strike down those who live in this city, men and cattle alike; they shall die of a great pestilence. After that, says the LORD, I will take Zedekiah king of Judah, his courtiers and the people, all in this city who survive pestilence, sword, and famine, and hand them over to Nebuchadrezzar the king of Babylon, to their enemies and those who would kill them. He shall put them to the sword and shall show no pity, no mercy or compassion.
- 8 You shall say further to this people, These are the words of the LORD: I offer you now a choice between the way of life and the way of death. Whoever remains in this city shall die by sword, by famine, or by pestilence, but whoever goes out to surrender to the Chaldaeans, who are now besieging you, shall survive; he shall take home his life, and nothing more.
- 10 I have set my face against this city, meaning to do them harm, not good, says the LORD. It shall be handed over to the king of Babylon, and he shall burn it to the ground.
- 11 To the royal house of Judah.
Listen to the word of the LORD:
- 12 O house of David, these are the words of the LORD:
Administer justice betimes,
rescue the victim from his oppressor,
lest the fire of my fury blaze up and burn unquenched
because of your evil doings.
- 13 The LORD says,
I am against you who lie in the valley,
you, the rock in the plain,
you who say, 'Who can come down upon us?
Who can penetrate our lairs?'
- 14 I will punish you as you deserve,
says the LORD,
I will kindle fire on the heathland around you,
and it shall consume everything round about.
- 22 These were the words of the LORD: Go down to the house of the king of Judah and say this: Listen to the words of the LORD, O king of Judah, you who sit on David's throne, you and your courtiers and your people who come in at these gates. These are the words of the LORD: Deal justly and 3 fairly, rescue the victim from his oppressor, do not ill-treat or do violence to the alien, the orphan or the widow, do not shed innocent blood in this place. If you obey, and only if you obey, kings who sit on David's throne shall 4 yet come riding through these gates in chariots and on horses, with their retinue of courtiers and people. But if you do not listen to my words, then 5 by myself I swear, says the LORD, this house shall become a desolate ruin.

 For these are the words of the LORD about the royal house of Judah: 6

Though you are dear to me as Gilead or as the heights of Lebanon,
 I swear that I will make you a wilderness,
 a land of unpeopled cities.
 I will dedicate an armed host to fight against you, 7
 a ravaging horde;
 they shall cut your choicest cedars down
 and fling them on the fire.

Men of many nations shall pass by this city and say to one another, 8
 'Why has the LORD done this to such a great city?' The answer will be, 9
 'Because they forsook their covenant with the LORD their God; they worshipped other gods and served them.'

Weep not for the dead nor brood over his loss. 10
 Weep rather for him who has gone away,
 for he shall never return,
 never again see the land of his birth.

For these are the words of the LORD concerning Shallum son of Josiah, 11
 king of Judah, who succeeded his father on the throne and has gone away:
 He shall never return; he shall die in the place of his exile and never see 12 this land again.

Shame on the man who builds his house by unjust means 13
 and completes its roof-chambers by fraud, making his countrymen work without payment,
 giving them no wage for their labour!

Shame on the man who says, 'I will build a spacious house 14 with airy roof-chambers, set windows in it, panel it with cedar and paint it with vermilion'!
 If your cedar is more splendid, 15
 does that prove you a king?

Think of your father: he ate and drank,
 dealt justly and fairly; all went well with him.
 He dispensed justice to the lowly and poor; ^a 16 did not this show he knew me? says the LORD.
 But you have no eyes, no thought for anything but gain, 17 set only on the innocent blood you can shed,
 on cruel acts of tyranny.

18 Therefore these are the words of the LORD concerning Jehoiakim son of Josiah, king of Judah:

For him no mourner shall say, 'Alas, brother, dear brother!'
no one say, 'Alas, lord and master!'

19 He shall be buried like a dead ass, dragged along and flung out beyond the gates of Jerusalem.

20 Get up into Lebanon and cry aloud, make your voice heard in Bashan, cry aloud from Abarim, for all who befriend you are broken.

21 I spoke to you in your days of prosperous ease,
but you said, 'I will not listen.'

This is how you behaved since your youth;
never have you obeyed me.

22 The wind shall carry away all your friends,^a your lovers shall depart into exile.

Then you will be put to shame and abashed
for all your evil deeds.^b

23 You dwellers in Lebanon, who make your nests among the cedars,

how you will groan when the pains come upon you,
like the pangs of a woman in labour!

24 By my life, says the LORD, Coniah son of Jehoiakim, king of Judah, shall be the signet-ring on my right hand no longer. Yes, Coniah, I will 25 pull you off. I will hand you over to those who seek your life, to those you fear, to Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon and to the Chaldeans.
26 I will fling you headlong, you and the mother who gave you birth, into another land, a land where you were not born; and there shall you both 27 die. They shall never come back to their own land, the land for which they long.

28 This man, Coniah, then, is he a mere puppet, contemptible and broken, only a thing unwanted? Why else are he and his children flung out headlong and hurled into a country they do not know?

29 30 O land, land, land, hear the words of the LORD: These are the words of the LORD: Write this man down as stripped of all honour, one who in his own life shall not prosper, nor shall he leave descendants to sit in prosperity on David's throne or rule again in Judah.

23 Shame on the shepherds who let the sheep of my flock scatter and be 2 lost! says the LORD. Therefore these are the words of the LORD the God of Israel about the shepherds who tend my people: You have scattered and dispersed my flock. You have not watched over them; but I am 3 watching you to punish you for your evil doings, says the LORD. I will myself gather the remnant of my sheep from all the lands to which I have dispersed them. I will bring them back to their homes, and they 4 shall be fruitful and increase. I will appoint shepherds to tend them;

^a Or shepherds.

^b Or calamities.

they shall never again know fear or dismay or punishment. This is the very word of the LORD.

The days are now coming, says the LORD, 5 when I will make a righteous Branch spring from David's line,
a king who shall rule wisely,
maintaining law and justice in the land.

In his days Judah shall be kept safe, 6
and Israel shall live undisturbed.

This is the name to be given to him:

The LORD is our Righteousness.

Therefore the days are coming, says the LORD, when men shall no longer 7 swear, 'By the life of the LORD who brought Israel up from Egypt', but, 8
'By the life of the LORD who brought the descendants of the Israelites back from a northern land and from all the lands to which he had dispersed them, to live again on their own soil.'

On the prophets. 9

Deep within me my heart is broken,
there is no strength in my bones;
because of the LORD, because of his dread words
I have become like a drunken man, like a man overcome with wine.

For the land is full of adulterers, 10
and because of them the earth lies parched,
the wild pastures have dried up.

The course that they run is evil,
and their powers are misused.

For prophet and priest alike are godless; 11
I have come upon the evil they are doing even in my own house.

This is the very word of the LORD.

Therefore the path shall turn slippery beneath their feet; 12
they shall be dispersed in the dark and shall fall there.

For I will bring disaster on them when their day of reckoning comes.

This is the very word of the LORD.

I found the prophets of Samaria men of no sense: 13
they prophesied in Baal's name and led my people Israel astray.

In the prophets of Jerusalem I see a thing most horrible: 14 adulterers and hypocrites that they are,

they encourage evildoers,
so that no man turns back from his sin;
to me all her inhabitants are like Sodom and Gomorrah.

These then are the words of the LORD of Hosts concerning the prophets: 15

I will give them wormwood to eat and a bitter poison to drink;
for a godless spirit has spread over all the land from the prophets of Jerusalem.

- 16 These are the words of the LORD of Hosts:
 Do not listen to what the prophets say,
 who buoy you up with false hopes;
 the vision they report springs from their own imagination,
 it is not from the mouth of the LORD.
- 17 They say to those who spurn the word of the LORD,
 'Prosperity shall be yours';
 and to all who follow the promptings of their own stubborn heart they say,
 'No disaster shall befall you.'
- 18 But which of them has stood in the council of the LORD, seen him and heard his word?
 Which of them has listened to his word and obeyed?
- 19 See what a scorching wind has gone out from the LORD,
 a furious whirlwind;
 it whirls round the heads of the wicked.
- 20 The LORD's anger is not to be turned aside,
 until he has accomplished and fulfilled his deep designs.
 In days to come you will fully understand.
- 21 I did not send these prophets, yet they went in haste;
 I did not speak to them, yet they prophesied.
- 22 If they have stood in my council,
 let them proclaim my words to my people and turn them from their evil course and their evil doings.
- 23 Am I a god only near at hand, not far away?
 Can a man hide in any secret place and I not see him?
 Do I not fill heaven and earth?
 This is the very word of the LORD.
- 25 I have heard what the prophets say, the prophets who speak lies in my 26 name and cry, 'I have had a dream, a dream!' How long will it be till they change their tune, these prophets who prophesy lies and give voice to 27 their own inventions? By these dreams which they tell one another these men think they will make my people forget my name, as their fathers 28 forgot my name for the name of^a Baal. If a prophet has a dream, let him tell his dream; if he has my word, let him speak my word in truth. What 29 has chaff to do with grain? says the LORD. Do not my words scorch^b like 30 fire? says the LORD. Are they not like a hammer that splinters rock? I am against the prophets, says the LORD, who steal my words from one another 31 for their own use. I am against the prophets, says the LORD, who concoct 32 words of their own and then say, 'This is his very word.' I am against the prophets, says the LORD, who dream lies and retail them, misleading my people with wild and reckless falsehoods. It was not I who sent them or commissioned them, and they will do this people no good. This is the very word of the LORD.
- 33 When you are asked by this people or by a prophet or priest what the burden of the LORD's message is, you shall answer, You are his burden, 34 and I shall throw you down, says the LORD. If prophet or priest or layman uses the term 'the LORD's burden', I will punish that man and his family. The form of words you shall use in speaking amongst yourselves is: 'What answer has the LORD given?' or, 'What has the LORD said?' You shall never again mention 'the burden of the LORD'; that is reserved for the man to whom he entrusts his message. If you do, you will make nonsense of the words of the living God, the LORD of Hosts our God. This is the form you shall use in speaking to a prophet: 'What answer has the LORD given?' or, 'What has the LORD said?' But to any of you who do say, 'the burden of the LORD', the LORD speaks thus: Because you say, 'the burden of the LORD', though I sent to tell you not to say it, therefore I myself will carry you like a burden and throw you down, casting out of my sight both you and the city which I gave to you and to your forefathers. I will inflict on you endless reproach, endless shame which shall never be forgotten.

^a for the name of: or by their worship of.^b scorch: prob. rdg.; Heb. thus.

Two visions

THIS IS WHAT THE LORD SHOWED ME: I saw two baskets of figs set out in front of the sanctuary of the LORD. This was after Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon had deported from Jerusalem Jeconiah son of Jehoiakim, king of Judah, with the officers of Judah, the craftsmen and the smiths,^a and taken them to Babylon. In one basket the figs were very good, like the figs that are first ripe; in the other the figs were very bad, so bad that they were not fit to eat. The LORD said to me, 'What are you looking at, Jeremiah?' 'Figs,' I answered, 'the good very good, and the bad so bad that they are not fit to eat.' Then this word came to me from the LORD: These are the words of the LORD the God of Israel: I count the exiles of Judah whom I sent away from this place to the land of the Chaldaeans as good as these good figs. I will look upon them meaning to do them good, and I will restore them to their land; I will build them up and not pull them down, plant them and not uproot them. I will give them the wit to know me, for I am the LORD; they shall become my people and I will become their God, for they will come back to me with all their heart. But Zedekiah king of Judah, his officers and the survivors of Jerusalem, whether they remain in this land or live in Egypt—all these I will treat as bad figs, says the LORD, so bad that they are not fit to eat. I will make them repugnant to all the kingdoms of the earth, a reproach, a by-word, an object-lesson and a thing of ridicule wherever I drive them. I will send against them sword, famine, and pestilence until they have vanished from the land which I gave to them and to their forefathers.

This came to Jeremiah as the word concerning all the people of Judah in the fourth year of Jehoiakim son of Josiah, king of Judah (that is the first year of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon). This is what the prophet Jeremiah said to all Judah and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem: For twenty-three years, from the thirteenth year of Josiah son of Amon, king of Judah, to the present day, I have been receiving the words of the LORD and taking pains to speak to you, but you have not listened. The LORD has

^a the smiths: or the harem.

5 taken pains to send you his servants the prophets, but you have not listened
 6 or shown any inclination to listen. If each of you will turn from his wicked
 7 ways and evil courses, he has said, then you shall for ever live on the soil
 8 which the LORD gave to you and to your forefathers. You must not follow 9 other gods, serving and worshipping them, nor must you provoke me to 10 anger with the idols your hands have made; then I will not do you harm.
 11 But you did not listen to me, says the LORD; you provoked me to anger 12 with the idols your hands had made and so brought harm upon yourselves.

13 Therefore these are the words of the LORD of Hosts: Because you have 14 not listened to my words, I will summon all the tribes of the north, says 15 the LORD: I will send for my servant Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon.
 16 I will bring them against this land and all its inhabitants and all these 17 nations round it; I will exterminate them and make them a thing of horror
 18 and derision, a scandal for ever. I will silence all sounds of joy and glad-19 ness among them, the voices of bridegroom and bride, and the sound of 20 the handmill; I will quench the light of every lamp. For seventy years this 21 whole country shall be a scandal and a horror; these nations shall be in 22 subjection to the king of Babylon. When those seventy years are com-
 23 pleted, I will punish the king of Babylon and his people, says the LORD, 24 for all their misdeeds and make the land of the Chaldeans a waste for ever.
 25 I will bring upon that country all I have said, all that is written in this book, 26 all that Jeremiah has prophesied against these peoples. They will be the 27 victims^a of mighty nations and great kings, and thus I will repay them for their actions and their deeds.

15 These were the words of the LORD the God of Israel to me: Take from 16 my hand this cup of fiery wine and make all the nations to whom I send 17 you drink it. When they have drunk it they will vomit and go mad; such 18 is the sword which I am sending among them. Then I took the cup from 19 the LORD's hand, gave it to all the nations to whom he sent me and made 20 them drink it: to Jerusalem, the cities of Judah, its kings and officers, 21 making them a scandal, a thing of horror and derision and an object of 22 ridicule, as they still are: to Pharaoh king of Egypt, his courtiers, his 23 officers, all his people, and all his rabble of followers, all the kings of the 24 land of Uz, all the kings of the Philistines: to Ashkelon, Gaza, Ekron, and 25 the remnant of Ashdod: also to Edom, Moab, and the Ammonites, all the 26 kings of Tyre, all the kings of Sidon, and the kings of the coasts and islands:
 27 to Dedan, Tema, Buz, and all who roam the fringes of the desert,^b all the 28 kings of Arabia living in the wilderness, all the kings of Zamri, all the kings
 29 of Elam, and all the kings of the Medes, all the kings of the north, neigh-30 bours or far apart, and all the kingdoms on the face of the earth. Last of all 31 the king of Sheshak^c shall drink. You shall say to them, These are the 32 words of the LORD of Hosts the God of Israel: Drink this, get drunk and 33 be sick; fall, to rise no more, before the sword which I am sending among 34 you. If they refuse to take the cup from you and to drink, say to them, These 35 are the words of the LORD of Hosts: You must and shall drink. I will first 36 punish the city which bears my name; do you think that you can be exempt?

^a They . . . victims: prob. rdg.; Heb. They were the victims.

^b who roam . . .

desert: or who clip the hair on their temples.

^c A name for Babylon.

No, you cannot be exempt, for I am invoking the sword against all that inhabit the earth. This is the very word of the LORD of Hosts.

Prophecy to them and tell them all I have said: 30

The LORD roars from Zion on high and thunders from his holy dwelling-place.

Yes, he roars across the heavens, his home;
an echo comes back like the shout of men treading grapes. 31
The great noise reaches to the ends of the earth and all its inhabitants.

For the LORD brings a charge against the nations,
he goes to law with all mankind
and has handed the wicked over to the sword.

This is the very word of the LORD.

These are the words of the LORD of Hosts: 32

Ruin spreads from nation to nation, a mighty tempest is blowing up from the ends of the earth.

In that day those whom the LORD has slain shall lie like dung on the 33 ground from one end of the earth to the other; no one shall wail for them, they shall not be taken up and buried.

Howl, shepherds, cry aloud, 34
sprinkle yourselves with ashes, you masters of the flock.
It is your turn to go to the slaughter,
and you shall fall like fine rams.

The shepherds shall have nowhere to flee, 35
the flockmasters no way of escape.

Hark, the shepherds cry out, the flockmasters howl, 36
for the LORD is ravaging their pasture, and their peaceful homesteads lie in ruins beneath his anger. 37

They flee like a young lion abandoning his lair, 38
for their land has become a waste, wasted by the cruel sword and by his anger.

Jerusalem laid under a curse

AT THE BEGINNING OF THE REIGN of Jehoiakim son of Josiah, king 26 of Judah, this word came to Jeremiah from the LORD: These are the 2 words of the LORD: Stand in the court of the LORD's house and speak to the inhabitants of all the cities of Judah who come to worship there. You shall tell them everything that I command you to say to them, keeping 3 nothing back. Perhaps they may listen, and every man may turn back from his evil courses. Then I will relent, and give up my purpose to bring disaster on them for their evil deeds. You shall say to them, These are 4 the words of the LORD: If you do not obey me, if you do not follow the law I have set before you, and listen to the words of my servants the prophets, 5 the prophets whom I have taken pains to send to you, but you have never listened to them, then I will make this house like Shiloh and this city an 6 object of ridicule to all nations on earth.

7 The priests, the prophets, and all the people heard Jeremiah say this 8 in the LORD's house and, when he came to the end of what the LORD had commanded him to say to them, priests, prophets, and people seized him 9 and threatened him with death. 'Why', they demanded, 'have you prophesied in the LORD's name that this house shall become like Shiloh and this city waste and uninhabited?' The people all gathered against Jeremiah
10 in the LORD's house. The officers of Judah heard what was happening, and they went up from the royal palace to the LORD's house and took their 11 places there at the entrance of the new gate. Then the priests and the prophets said to the officers and all the people, 'Condemn this fellow to death. He has prophesied against this city: you have heard it with your own
12 ears.' Then Jeremiah said to the officers and the people, 'The LORD sent me to prophesy against this house and this city all that you have heard. If you 13 now mend your ways and your doings and obey the LORD your God, then he may relent and revoke the disaster with which he has threatened you.
14 But I am in your hands; do with me whatever you think right and proper.
15 Only you may be certain that, if you put me to death, you and this city and all who live in it will be guilty of murdering an innocent man; for in very truth the LORD has sent me to you to say all this in your hearing.'

16 Then the officers and all the people said to the priests and the prophets, 'This man ought not to be condemned to death, for he has spoken to us in the name of the LORD our God.' Some of the elders of the land also stood
17 up and said to the assembled people, 'In the time of Hezekiah king of Judah, Micah of Moresheth was prophesying and said to all the people 18 of Judah: "These are the words of the LORD of Hosts:

Zion shall become a ploughed field,
Jerusalem a heap of ruins,
and the temple-hill rough heath."

19 Did King Hezekiah and all Judah put him to death? Did not the king show reverence for the LORD and seek to placate him? Then the LORD relented and revoked the disaster with which he had threatened them. Are we to bring great disaster on ourselves?'

20 There was another man who prophesied in the name of the LORD, Uriah son of Shemaiah, from Kiriath-jearim. He also prophesied against this 21 city and this land, just as Jeremiah had done. King Jehoiakim with all his officers and his bodyguard heard what he said and sought to put him to 22 death. When Uriah heard of it, he was afraid and fled to Egypt. King Jehoiakim sent Elnathan son of Akbor with others to fetch Uriah from 23 Egypt, and they brought him to the king. He had him put to death by the sword, and his body flung into the burial-place of the common people. But 24 Ahikam son of Shaphan used his influence on Jeremiah's behalf to save him from death at the hands of the people.

A rising against Nebuchadrezzar checked

AT THE BEGINNING OF THE REIGN of Zedekiah son of Josiah, king of 27 Judah, this word came from the LORD to Jeremiah: These are the 2 words of the LORD to me: Take the cords and bars of a yoke and put them 3 on your neck. Then send to the kings of Edom, Moab, Ammon, Tyre, and 3 Sidon by the envoys who have come from them to Zedekiah king of Judah 4 in Jerusalem, and give them the following message for their masters: 4
 These are the words of the LORD of Hosts the God of Israel: Say to your 5 masters: I made the earth with my great strength and with outstretched 5 arm, I made man and beast on the face of the earth, and I give it to whom 6
 I see fit. I now give all these lands to my servant Nebuchadrezzar king 6 of Babylon, and I give him also all the beasts of the field to serve him. 7
 All nations shall serve him, and his son and his grandson, until the 7 destined hour of his own land comes, and then mighty nations and 8 great kings shall use him as they please. If any nation or kingdom will 8 not serve Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon or submit to his yoke, I will 9 punish them with sword, famine, and pestilence, says the LORD, until 9
 I leave them entirely in his power. Therefore do not listen to your pro- 9 phets, your diviners, your wise women, your soothsayers, and your 10 sorcerers when they tell you not to serve the king of Babylon. They are 10 prophesying falsely to you; and so you will be carried far from your 11 own land, and I shall banish you and you will perish. But if any nation 11 submits to the yoke of the king of Babylon and serves him, I will leave 11 them on their own soil, says the LORD; they shall cultivate it and live 12 there.

I have said all this to Zedekiah king of Judah: If you will submit to the 12 yoke of the king of Babylon and serve him and his people, then you shall 13 save your lives. Why should you and your people die by sword, famine, and 13 pestilence, the fate with which the LORD has threatened any nation which 14 does not serve the king of Babylon? Do not listen to the prophets who tell 14 you not to become subject to the king of Babylon; they are prophesying 15 falsely to you. I have not sent them, says the LORD; they are prophesying 15 falsely in my name, and so I shall banish you and you will perish, you and 16 these prophets who prophesy to you.

I said to the priests and all the people, These are the words of the 16
 LORD: Do not listen to your prophets who tell you that the vessels of 17
 the LORD's house will very soon be brought back from Babylon; they 17 are only prophesying falsely to you. Do not listen to them; serve the 18 king of Babylon, and save your lives. Why should this city become a 18 ruin? If they are prophets, and if they have the word of the LORD, let 18 them intercede with the LORD of Hosts to grant that the vessels still 19 left in the LORD's house, in the royal palace, and in Jerusalem, may not 19 be carried off to Babylon. For these are the words of the LORD of Hosts 19 concerning the pillars, the sea, the trolleys, and all the other vessels still 20 left in this city, which Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon did not take 20 when he deported Jeconiah son of Jehoiakim, king of Judah, from Jerusalem to Babylon, together with all the nobles of Judah and Jerusalem.

- 21 These indeed are the words of the LORD of Hosts the God of Israel concerning the vessels still left in the LORD's house, in the royal palace, and 22 in Jerusalem: They shall be taken to Babylon and stay there until I recall them, says the LORD; then I will bring them back and restore them to this place.
- 28 That same year,^a in the fifth month of the first^b year of the reign of Zedekiah king of Judah, Hananiah son of Azzur, the prophet from Gibeon, said to me in the house of the LORD, in the presence of the priests and all the people, 'These are the words of the LORD of Hosts the God of Israel: I have broken the yoke of the king of Babylon. Within two years I will bring back to this place all the vessels of the LORD's house which Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon took from here and carried off to Babylon. I will also bring back to this place, says the LORD, Jeconiah son of Jehoiakim, king of Judah, and all the exiles of Judah who went to Babylon; for I will break the yoke of the king of Babylon.' The prophet Jeremiah said to Hananiah the prophet in the presence of the priests and all the people standing in the LORD's house: 'May it be so! May the LORD indeed do this: may he fulfil all that you have prophesied, by bringing back the vessels of the LORD's house and all the exiles from Babylon to this place! Only hear what I have to say to you and to all the people: the prophets who preceded you and me from earliest times have foretold war, famine, and pestilence for many lands and for great kingdoms. If a prophet foretells prosperity, when his words come true it will be known that the LORD has sent him.'
- 10 Then the prophet Hananiah took the yoke from the neck of the prophet 11 Jeremiah and broke it, saying before all the people, 'These are the words of the LORD: Thus will I break the yoke of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon; I will break it off the necks of all nations within two years';^c and the prophet Jeremiah went his way. After Hananiah had broken the yoke which had been on Jeremiah's neck, the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah:
 13 Go and say to Hananiah, These are the words of the LORD: You have 14 broken bars of wood; in their place you shall get bars of iron. For these are the words of the LORD of Hosts the God of Israel: I have put a yoke of iron on the necks of all these nations, making them serve Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon. They shall serve him, and I have given him even the beasts of the field. Then Jeremiah said to Hananiah, 'Listen, Hananiah. The LORD has not sent you, and you have led this nation to trust in false prophecies. Therefore these are the words of the LORD: Beware, I will remove you from the face of the earth; you shall die within the year, because you have preached rebellion against the LORD.' The prophet Hananiah died that same year, in the seventh month.
- 29 Jeremiah sent a letter from Jerusalem to the remaining elders among the exiles, to the priests and prophets, and to all the people whom Nebuchadrezzar had deported from Jerusalem to Babylon, after King Jeconiah had left Jerusalem with the queen mother and the eunuchs, the officers of Judah and Jerusalem, the craftsmen and the smiths.^a The prophet entrusted the letter to Elasah son of Shaphan and Gemariah son of Hilkiyah, whom Zedekiah king of Judah had sent to Babylon to King Nebuchadrezzar. This is what he wrote: These are the words of the LORD of Hosts the God of Israel: To all the exiles whom I have carried off from Jerusalem to Babylon: Build houses and live in them; plant gardens and eat their produce. Marry wives and beget sons and daughters; take wives for your sons and give your daughters to husbands, so that they may bear sons and daughters and you may increase there and not dwindle away. Seek the welfare of any city to which I have carried you off, and pray to the LORD for it; on its welfare your welfare will depend. For these are the words of the LORD of Hosts the God of Israel: Do not be deceived by the prophets or the diviners among you, and do not listen to the wise women whom you set to dream dreams. They prophesy falsely to you in my name; I did not send them. This is the very word of the LORD.

These are the words of the LORD: When a full seventy years has passed over Babylon, I will take up your cause and fulfil the promise of good things I made you, by bringing you back to this place. I alone know my purpose for you, says the LORD: prosperity and not misfortune, and a long line of children after you. If you invoke me and pray to me, I will listen to you: when you seek me, you shall find me; if you search with all your heart, I will let you find me, says the LORD. I will restore your fortunes and gather you again from all the nations and all the places to which I have banished you, says the LORD, and bring you back to the place from which I have carried you into exile.

You say that the LORD has raised up prophets for you in Babylon. These are the words of the LORD concerning the king who sits on the throne of David and all the people who live in this city, your fellow-countrymen who have not gone into exile with you. These are the words of the LORD of Hosts: I bring upon them sword, famine, and pestilence, and make them like rotten figs, too bad to be eaten. I pursue them with sword, famine, and pestilence, and make them repugnant to all the kingdoms of the earth, an object of execration and horror, of derision and reproach, among all the nations to which I have banished them. Just as they did not listen to my words, says the LORD, when I took pains to send them my servants the prophets, so you did not listen, says the LORD. But now, you exiles whom I have sent from Jerusalem to Babylon, listen to the words of the LORD. These are the words of the LORD of Hosts the God of Israel concerning Ahab son of Kolaiah and Zedekiah son of Maaseiah, who prophesy falsely to you in my name. I will hand them over to Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and he will put them to death before your eyes. Their names shall be used by all the exiles of Judah in Babylon when they curse a man; they shall say, May the LORD treat you like Zedekiah and Ahab, whom the king of Babylon roasted in the fire! For their conduct in Israel was an outrage: they committed adultery with other men's wives, and without my authority prophesied in my name, and what they prophesied was false. I know; I can testify. This is the very word of the LORD.

24 25 To Shemaiah the Nehelamite.^a These are the words of the LORD of Hosts the God of Israel: You have sent a letter in your own name to 26 Zephaniah son of Maaseiah the priest, in which you say: 'The LORD has appointed you to be priest in place of Jehoiada the priest, and it is your duty, as officer in charge of the LORD's house, to put every madman who 27 sets up as a prophet into the stocks and the pillory. Why, then, have you not reprimanded Jeremiah of Anathoth, who poses as a prophet before 28 you? On the strength of this he has sent to us in Babylon and said, "Your exile will be long; build houses and live in them, plant gardens and eat 29 their produce.'" Zephaniah the priest read this letter to Jeremiah the 30 31 prophet, and the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah: Send and tell all the exiles that these are the words of the LORD concerning Shemaiah the Nehelamite: Because Shemaiah has prophesied to you, though I did not 32 send him, and has led you to trust in false prophecies, these are now the words of the LORD: I will punish Shemaiah and his children. He shall have no one to take his place in this nation and enjoy the prosperity which I will bestow on my people, says the LORD, because he has preached rebellion against me.

Hopes for the restoration of Jerusalem

30 1 2 THE WORD WHICH CAME TO JEREMIAH from the LORD. These are the words of the LORD the God of Israel: Write in a book all that I 3 have said to you, for this is the very word of the LORD: The time is coming when I will restore the fortunes of my people Israel and Judah, says the LORD, and bring them back to the land which I gave to their forefathers;
 and it shall be their possession.

4 5 This is what the LORD has said to Israel and Judah. These are the words of the LORD:

You shall hear a cry of terror, of fear without relief.

6 Ask and see: can a man bear a child?

Why then do I see every man gripping his sides like a woman in labour, every face changed, all turned pale?

7 Awful is that day:
 when has there been its like?

A time of anguish for Jacob,
 yet he shall come through it safely.

8 In that day, says the LORD of Hosts, I will break their yoke off their necks and snap their cords; foreigners shall no longer use them as they 9 please; they shall serve the LORD their God and David their king, whom I will raise up for them.

10 And you, Jacob my servant, have no fear;
 despair not, O Israel, says the LORD.

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds you shall say, saying.

For I will bring you back safe from afar
and your offspring from the land where they are captives;
and Jacob shall be at rest once more,
prosperous and unafraid.

For I am with you and will save you, says the LORD. 11

I will make an end of all the nations
amongst whom I have scattered you,
but I will not make an end of you;
though I punish you as you deserve,
I will not sweep you clean away.

For these are the words of the LORD to Zion: 12

Your injury is past healing, cruel was the blow you suffered.

There can be no^a remedy for your sore,
the new skin cannot grow. 13

All your lovers have forgotten you;
they look for you no longer. 14

I have struck you down
as an enemy strikes, and punished you cruelly;
for your wickedness is great and your sins are many.

Why complain of your injury, that your sore cannot be healed?^b 15

I have done this to you,
because your wickedness is great and your sins are many.

Yet all who devoured you shall themselves be devoured,
all your oppressors shall go into captivity. 16

Those who plunder you shall be plundered, and those who despoil you I will give up to be spoiled.

I will cause the new skin to grow and heal your wounds, says the LORD, 17

although men call you the Outcast, Zion, nobody's friend.

These are the words of the LORD: 18

Watch; I will restore the fortunes of Jacob's clans and show my love for all his dwellings.

Every city shall be rebuilt on its mound of ruins,
every mansion shall have its familiar household.

From them praise shall be heard and sounds of merrymaking. 19

I will increase them, they shall not diminish,
I will raise them to honour, they shall no longer be despised.

Their sons shall be what they once were,
and their community shall be established in my sight. 20

I will punish all their oppressors;

^a Prob. rdg.; Hcb. adds one judging your case.
for help in your injury. Your sore cannot be healed.

^b Why . . . healed?: or Cry not

- 21 a ruler shall appear, one of themselves,
a governor shall arise from their own number.
I will myself bring him^a near and so he^b shall approach me;
for no one ventures of himself to approach me,
says the LORD.
- 22 So you shall be my people,
and I will be your God.
- 23 See what a scorching wind has gone out from the LORD,
a sweeping whirlwind.
It whirls round the heads of the wicked;
24 the LORD's anger is not to be turned aside,
till he has finished and achieved his heart's desire.
In days to come you will understand.
- 31 At that time, says the LORD, I will become God of all the families of 2 Israel, and they shall become my people. These are the words of the LORD:
- A people that survived the sword found favour in the wilderness;
Israel journeyed to find rest;
3 long ago^c the LORD appeared to them:
I have dearly loved you from of old,
and still I maintain my unfailing care for you.
- 4 I will build you up again, O virgin Israel,
and you shall be rebuilt.
Again you shall adorn yourself with jingles,
and go forth with the merry throng of dancers.
- 5 Again you shall plant vineyards on the hills of Samaria, vineyards which those who planted them defiled;
6 for a day will come when the watchmen on Ephraim's hills cry out.
Come, let us go up to Zion, to the LORD our God.
- 7 For these are the words of the LORD:
Break into shouts of joy for Jacob's sake, lead the nations, crying loud and clear,
sing out your praises and say,
The LORD has saved his people, and preserved a remnant of Israel.
- 8 See how I bring them from the land of the north;
I will gather them from the ends of the earth,
their blind and lame among them,
women with child and women in labour,
a great company.
- 9 They come home, weeping as they come,
but I will comfort them and be their escort.
I will lead them to flowing streams;
they shall not stumble, their path will be so smooth.

^a Or them.^b Or they.^c long ago: or from afar.

For I have become a father to Israel,
and Ephraim is my eldest son.

Listen to the word of the LORD, you nations, announce it, make it known to coasts and islands far away: 10

He who scattered Israel shall gather them again and watch over them as a shepherd watches his flock.

For the LORD has ransomed Jacob
and redeemed him from a foe too strong for him. 11

They shall come with shouts of joy to Zion's height, shining with happiness at the bounty of the LORD,
the corn, the new wine, and the oil,
the young of flock and herd.

They shall become like a watered garden and they shall never want again.

Then shall the girl show her joy in the dance,
young men and old shall rejoice; 13

I will turn their mourning into gladness,
I will relent and give them joy to outdo their sorrow.

I will satisfy the priests with the fat of the land and fill my people with my bounty. 14

This is the very word of the LORD.

These are the words of the LORD: 15

Hark, lamentation is heard in Ramah, and bitter weeping, Rachel weeping for her sons.
She refuses to be comforted: they are no more.

These are the words of the LORD: 16

Cease your loud weeping, shed no more tears;

for there shall be a reward for your toil,
they shall return from the land of the enemy.

You shall leave descendants after you; ^a your sons shall return to their own land. 17

I listened; Ephraim was rocking in his grief: 18

'Thou hast trained me to the yoke like an unbroken calf, and now I am trained;

restore me, let me return,
for thou, LORD, art my God.

Though I broke loose I have repented:
now that I am tamed I beat my breast; 19

in shame and remorse
I reproach myself for the sins of my youth.'

Is Ephraim still my dear son,
a child in whom I delight? 20

As often as I turn my back on him
I still remember him;

^a You shall . . . you: or There shall be hope for your posterity.

and so my heart yearns for him,
 I am filled with tenderness towards him.
 This is the very word of the LORD.

- 21 Build cairns to mark your way,
 set up sign-posts;
 make sure of the road,
 the path which you will tread.
 Come back, virgin Israel,
 come back to your cities.
- 22 How long will you twist and turn, my wayward child?
 For the LORD has created a new thing in the earth:
 a woman turned into a man.

- 23 These are the words of the LORD of Hosts the God of Israel: Once more shall these words be heard in the land of Judah and in her cities, when I restore their fortunes:

- The LORD bless you,
 the LORD, your true goal,^a your holy mountain.
 24 Ploughmen and shepherds who wander with their flocks shall live together there.^b 25 For I have given deep draughts to the thirsty, and satisfied those who were faint with hunger.

- 26 Thereupon I woke and looked about me, and my dream^c had been pleasant.

- 27 The time is coming, says the LORD, when I will sow Israel and Judah 28 with the seed of man and the seed of cattle. As I watched over them with intent to pull down and to uproot, to demolish and destroy and harm, so now will I watch over them to build and to plant. This is the very word of the LORD.

- 29 In those days it shall no longer be said,
 'The fathers have eaten sour grapes
 and the children's teeth are set on edge';

- 30 for a man shall die for his own wrongdoing; the man who eats sour grapes shall have his own teeth set on edge.

- 31 The time is coming, says the LORD, when I will make a new covenant 32 with Israel and Judah. It will not be like the covenant I made with their forefathers when I took them by the hand and led them out of Egypt.
 Although they broke my covenant, I was patient with them, says the LORD.
 33 But this is the covenant which I will make with Israel after those days, says the LORD; I will set my law within them and write it on their hearts; I will 34 become their God and they shall become my people. No longer need they teach one another to know the LORD; all of them, high and low alike, shall know me, says the LORD, for I will forgive their wrongdoing and remember their sin no more.

- 35 These are the words of the LORD, who gave the sun for a light by day and the moon and stars for a light by night, who cleft the sea and its waves roared; the LORD of Hosts is his name:

If this fixed order could vanish out of my sight, 36
says the LORD,
then the race of Israel too could cease for evermore
to be a nation in my sight.

These are the words of the LORD: If any man could measure the heaven 37 above or fathom the depths of the earth beneath, then I could spurn the whole race of Israel because of all they have done. This is the very word of the LORD.

The time is coming, says the LORD, when the city shall be rebuilt in the 38 LORD's honour from the Tower of Hananel to the Corner Gate. The measuring line shall then be laid straight out over the hill of Gareb and 39 round Goath.^a All the valley and every field as far as the gorge of the 40 Kidron to the corner by the Horse Gate eastwards shall be holy to the LORD. It shall never again be pulled down or demolished.

The word which came to Jeremiah from the LORD in the tenth year of 32 Zedekiah king of Judah (the eighteenth year of Nebuchadrezzar). At that 2 time the forces of the Babylonian king were besieging Jerusalem, and the prophet Jeremiah was imprisoned in the court of the guard-house attached to the royal palace. Zedekiah king of Judah had imprisoned him 3 after demanding what he meant by this prophecy: 'These are the words of the LORD: I will deliver this city into the hands of the king of Babylon, and he shall take it. Zedekiah king of Judah will not escape from the Chal- 4 daeans but will be surrendered to the king of Babylon; he will speak with him face to face and see him with his own eyes. Zedekiah will be taken to 5 Babylon and will remain there until I turn my thoughts to him, says the LORD. However much you fight against the Chaldaeans you will have no success.'

Jeremiah said, The word of the LORD came to me: Hanamel son of your 6 7 uncle Shallum is coming to see you and will say, 'Buy my field at Anathoth; you have the right of redemption, as next of kin, to buy it.' As the LORD 8 had foretold, my cousin Hanamel came to the court of the guard-house and said, 'Buy my field at Anathoth in Benjamin. You have the right of redemption and possession as next of kin; buy it.' I knew that this was the LORD's message; so I bought the field at Anathoth from my cousin Hanamel and 9 weighed out the price, seventeen shekels of silver. I signed and sealed the deed and had it witnessed; then I weighed out the money on the scales. 10
I took my copies of the deed of purchase, both the sealed and the unsealed, 11 and gave them to Baruch son of Neriaah, son of Mahseiah, in the presence 12 of Hanamel my cousin, of the witnesses whose names were on the deed of purchase, and of the Judaeans sitting in the court of the guard-house. In 13 the presence of them all I gave my instructions to Baruch: These are the 14 words of the LORD of Hosts the God of Israel: Take these copies of the deed of purchase, the sealed and the unsealed, and deposit them in an earthenware jar so that they may be preserved for a long time. For these 15 are the words of the LORD of Hosts the God of Israel: The time will come when houses, fields, and vineyards will again be bought and sold in this land. After I had given the deed of purchase to Baruch son of Neriah, I prayed to the LORD: O Lord GOD, thou hast made the heavens and the earth by thy great strength and with thy outstretched arm; nothing is impossible for thee. Thou keepest faith with thousands and thou dost requite the sins of fathers on to the heads of their sons. O great and mighty God whose name is the LORD of Hosts, great are thy purposes and mighty thy actions. Thine eyes watch all the ways of men, and thou rewardest each according to his ways and as his deeds deserve. Thou didst work signs and portents in Egypt and hast continued them to this day, both in Israel and amongst all men, and hast won for thyself a name that lives on to this day. Thou didst bring thy people Israel out of Egypt with signs and portents, with a strong hand and an outstretched arm, and with terrible power. Thou didst give them this land which thou didst promise with an oath to their forefathers, a land flowing with milk and honey. They came and took possession of it, but they did not obey thee or follow thy law, they disobeyed all thy commands; and so thou hast brought this disaster upon them. Look at the siege-ramps, the men who are advancing to take the city, and the city given over to its assailants from Chaldaeae, the victim of sword, famine, and pestilence. The word thou hast spoken is fulfilled and thou dost see it. And yet thou hast bidden me buy the field, O Lord GOD, and have the deed witnessed, even though the city is given to the Chaldaeans.

These are the words of the LORD to Jeremiah: I am the LORD, the God of all flesh; is anything impossible for me? Therefore these are the words of the LORD: I will deliver this city into the hands of the Chaldaeans and of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and he shall take it. The Chaldaeans who are fighting against this city will enter it, set it on fire and burn it down, with the houses on whose roofs sacrifices have been burnt to Baal and drink-offerings poured out to other gods, by which I was provoked to anger.

From their earliest days Israel and Judah have been doing what is wrong in my eyes, provoking me to anger by their actions, says the LORD. For this city has so roused my anger and my fury, from the time it was built down to this day, that I would rid myself of it. Israel and Judah, their kings, officers, priests, prophets, and everyone living in Jerusalem and Judah have provoked me to anger by their wrongdoing. They have turned their backs on me and averted their faces; though I took pains to teach them, they would not hear or learn their lesson. They set up their loathsome idols in the house which bears my name and so defiled it. They built shrines to Baal in the Valley of Ben-hinnom, to surrender their sons and daughters to Molech. It was no command of mine, nor did it ever enter my thought to do this abominable thing and lead Judah into sin.

Now, therefore, these are the words of the LORD the God of Israel to this city of which you say, 'It is being given over to the king of Babylon, with sword, famine, and pestilence': I will gather them from all the lands to which I banished them in my anger, rage, and fury, and I will bring them back to this place and let them dwell there undisturbed. They shall become my people and I will become their God. I will give them one heart and one way of life so that they shall fear me at all times, for their own good and the good of their children after them. I will enter into an eternal covenant with them, to follow them unfailingly with my bounty; I will fill their hearts with fear of me, and so they will not turn away from me.

 I will rejoice over them, rejoice to do them good, and faithfully with all my heart and soul I will plant them in this land. For these are the words of the LORD: As I brought on this people such great disaster, so will I bring them all the prosperity which I now promise them. Fields shall again be bought and sold in this land of which you now say, 'It is desolate, without man or beast; it is given over to the Chaldaeans.' Fields shall be bought and sold, deeds signed, sealed, and witnessed, in Benjamin, in the neighbourhood of Jerusalem, in the cities of Judah, of the hill-country, of the Shephelah, and of the Negeb; for I will restore their fortunes. This is the very word of the LORD.

The word of the LORD came to Jeremiah a second time while he was still imprisoned in the court of the guard-house: These are the words of the LORD who made the earth, who formed it and established it; the LORD is his name: If you call to me I will answer you, and tell you great and mysterious things which you do not understand. These are the words of the LORD the God of Israel concerning the houses in this city and the royal palace, which are to be razed to the ground, concerning siege-ramp and sword, and attackers^a who fill the houses with the corpses of those whom he struck down in his furious rage: I hid my face from this city because of their wicked ways, but now I will bring her healing; I will heal and cure Judah and Israel, and will let my people see an age of peace and security.
 I will restore their fortunes and build them again as once they were. I will cleanse them of all the wickedness and sin that they have committed; I will forgive all the evil deeds they have done in rebellion against me. This city will win me a name^b and praise and glory before all the nations on earth, when they hear of all the blessings I bestow on her; and they shall be moved and filled with awe because of the blessings and the peace which I have brought upon her.

These are the words of the LORD: You say of this place, 'It is in ruins, and neither man nor beast lives in the cities of Judah or in the streets of Jerusalem. It is all a waste, inhabited by neither man nor beast.' Yet in this place shall be heard once again the sounds of joy and gladness, the voice of the bridegroom and the bride; here too shall be heard voices shouting, 'Praise the LORD of Hosts, for he is good, for his love endures for ever', as they offer praise and thanksgiving in the house of the LORD.
 For I will restore the fortunes of the land as once they were. This is the word of the LORD.

These are the words of the LORD of Hosts: In this place and in all its cities, now ruined and inhabited by neither man nor beast, there shall once more be a refuge where shepherds may fold their flocks. In the cities of the hill-country, of the Shephelah, of the Negeb, in Benjamin, in the neighbourhood of Jerusalem and the cities of Judah, flocks will once more pass under the shepherd's hand as he counts them. This is the word of the LORD.

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds the Chaldaeans.

^b Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds of joy.

14 Wait, says the LORD, the days are coming when I will bestow on Israel 15 and Judah all the blessings I have promised them. In those days, at that time, I will make a righteous Branch of David spring up; he shall maintain 16 law and justice in the land. In those days Judah shall be kept safe and Jerusalem shall live undisturbed; and this shall be her name: The LORD is our Righteousness.

17 For these are the words of the LORD: David will never lack a successor 18 on the throne of Israel, nor will the levitical priests lack a man who shall come before me continually to present whole-offerings, to burn grain-offerings and to make other offerings.

19 20 This word came from the LORD to Jeremiah: These are the words of the LORD: If the law that I made for the day and the night could be annulled 21 so that they fell out of their proper order, then my covenant with my servant David could be annulled so that none of his line should sit upon his throne; so also could my covenant with the levitical priests who minister 22 to me. Like the innumerable host of heaven or the countless sands of the sea, I will increase the descendants of my servant David and the Levites who minister to me.

23 24 The word of the LORD came to Jeremiah: Have you not observed how this people have said, 'It is the two families whom he chose that the LORD has spurned'? So others will despise my people and no longer regard them 25 as a nation. These are the words of the LORD: If I had not made my law
26 for day and night nor established a fixed order in heaven and earth, then I would spurn the descendants of Jacob and of my servant David, and would not take any of David's line to be rulers over the descendants of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. But now I will restore their fortunes and have compassion upon them.

Events under Jehoiakim and Zedekiah

34 THE WORD WHICH CAME TO JEREMIAH from the LORD when Nebu-chadrezzar king of Babylon and his army, with all his vassal kingdoms 2 and nations, were fighting against Jerusalem and all her towns: These are the words of the LORD the God of Israel: Go and say to Zedekiah king of Judah, These are the words of the LORD: I will give this city into the 3 hands of the king of Babylon and he will burn it down. You shall not escape, you will be captured and handed over to him. You will see him face to 4 face, and he will speak to you in person; and you shall go to Babylon. But listen to the LORD's word to you, Zedekiah king of Judah. This is his word:
5 You shall not die by the sword; you will die a peaceful death, and they will kindle fires in your honour like the fires kindled in former times for the kings your ancestors who preceded you. 'Alas, my lord!' they will say as they beat their breasts in mourning for you. This I have spoken. This 6 is the very word of the LORD. The prophet Jeremiah repeated all this to Zedekiah king of Judah in Jerusalem when the army of the king of Babylon was attacking Jerusalem and the remaining cities of Judah, namely Lachish and Azekah. These were the only fortified cities left in Judah. 7

The word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD after Zedekiah had made a covenant with all the people in Jerusalem to proclaim an act of freedom for the slaves. All who had Hebrew slaves, male or female, were to set them free; they were not to keep their fellow Judaeans in servitude. All the officers and people, having made this covenant to set free their slaves, both male and female, and not to keep them in servitude any longer, fulfilled its terms and let them go. Afterwards, however, they changed their minds and forced back again into slavery the men and women whom they had freed. Then this word came from the LORD to Jeremiah: These are the words of the LORD the God of Israel: I made a covenant with your forefathers on the day that I brought them out of Egypt, out of the land of slavery. These were its terms: 'Within seven years each of you shall set free any Hebrew who has sold himself to you as a slave and has served you for six years; you shall set him free.' Your forefathers did not listen to me or obey me. You, on the contrary, recently proclaimed an act of freedom for the slaves and made a covenant in my presence, in the house that bears my name, and so have done what is right in my eyes. But you too have profaned my name. You have all taken back the slaves you had set free and you have forced them, both male and female, to be your slaves again. Therefore these are the words of the LORD: After you had proclaimed an act of freedom, a deliverance for your kinsmen and your neighbours, you did not obey me; so I will proclaim a deliverance for you, says the LORD, a deliverance over to sword, to pestilence, and to famine, and I will make you repugnant to all the kingdoms of the earth. You have disregarded my covenant and have not fulfilled the terms to which you yourselves had agreed; so I will make you like the calf of the covenant when they cut it into two and passed between the pieces. Those who passed between the pieces of the calf were the officers of Judah and Jerusalem, the eunuchs and priests and all the people of the land. I will give them up to their enemies who seek their lives, and their bodies shall be food for birds of prey and wild beasts. I will deliver Zedekiah king of Judah and his officers to their enemies who seek their lives and to the army of the king of Babylon, which is now raising the siege. I will give the command, says the LORD, and will bring them back to this city. They shall attack it and take it and burn it down, and I will make the cities of Judah desolate and unpeopled. 8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22

The word which came to Jeremiah from the LORD in the days of Jehoiakim son of Josiah, king of Judah: Go and speak to the Rechabites, bring them to one of the rooms in the house of the LORD and offer them wine to drink. So I fetched Jaazaniah son of Jeremiah, son of Habaziniyah, with his brothers and all his sons and all the family of the Rechabites. I brought them into the house of the LORD to the room of the sons of Hanan son of Igdaliah, the man of God; this adjoins the officers' room above that of Maaseiah son of Shallum, the keeper of the threshold. I set bowls full of wine and drinking-cups before the Rechabites and invited them to drink wine; but they said, 'We will not drink wine, for our forefather Jonadab 35 2 3 4 5 6

- son of Rechab laid this command on us: "You shall never drink wine, neither you nor your children. You shall not build houses or sow seed or plant vineyards; you shall have none of these things. Instead, you shall remain tent-dwellers all your lives, so that you may live long in the land where you are sojourners." We have honoured all the commands of our forefather Jonadab son of Rechab and have drunk no wine all our lives, neither we nor our wives, nor our sons, nor our daughters. We have not built houses to live in, nor have we possessed vineyards or sown fields. We have lived in tents, obeying and observing all the commands of our forefather Jonadab. But when Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon invaded the land we said, "Come, let us go to Jerusalem before the advancing Chaldaean and Aramaean armies." And we have stayed in Jerusalem.'
- 12 13 Then the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah: These are the words of the LORD of Hosts the God of Israel: Go and say to the men of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, You must accept correction and obey my words, says the LORD. The command of Jonadab son of Rechab to his descendants not to drink wine has been honoured; they have not drunk wine to this day, for they have obeyed their ancestor's command. But I have taken especial pains to warn you and yet you have not obeyed me.
- 15 I sent my servants the prophets especially to say to you, 'Turn back every one of you from his evil course, mend your ways and cease to follow other gods and worship them; then you shall remain on the land that I have given to you and to your forefathers.' Yet you did not obey or listen to me.
- 16 The sons of Jonadab son of Rechab have honoured their ancestor's command laid on them, but this people have not listened to me. Therefore, these are the words of the LORD the God of Hosts, the God of Israel: Because they did not listen when I spoke to them, nor answer when I called them, I will bring upon Judah and upon all the inhabitants of Jerusalem the disaster with which I threatened them. To the Rechabites Jeremiah said, These are the words of the LORD of Hosts the God of Israel: Because you have kept the command of Jonadab your ancestor and obeyed all his instructions and carried out all that he told you to do, therefore these are the words of the LORD of Hosts the God of Israel: Jonadab son of Rechab shall not want a descendant to stand before me for all time.
- 36 IN THE FOURTH YEAR OF JEHOIAKIM son of Josiah, king of Judah, this word came to Jeremiah from the LORD: Take a scroll and write on it every word that I have spoken to you about Jerusalem and Judah and all the nations, from the day that I first spoke to you in the reign of Josiah down to the present day. Perhaps the house of Judah will be warned of the calamity that I am planning to bring on them, and every man will abandon his evil course; then I will forgive their wrongdoing and their sin. So Jeremiah called Baruch son of Neriah, and he wrote on the scroll at Jeremiah's dictation all the words which the LORD had spoken to him. He gave Baruch this instruction: 'I am prevented from going to the LORD's house. You must go there in my place on a fast-day and read the words of the LORD in the hearing of the people from the scroll you have written at my dictation. You shall read them in the hearing of all the men of Judah who come in from their cities. Then perhaps they will present a petition to the LORD 7 and every man will abandon his evil course; for the LORD has spoken 8 against this people in great anger and wrath.' Baruch son of Neriah did all 8 that the prophet Jeremiah had told him to do, and read the words of the LORD in the LORD's house out of the book.

In the ninth month of the fifth year of the reign of Jehoiakim son of 9
Josiah, king of Judah, all the people in Jerusalem and all who came there 10 from the cities of Judah proclaimed a fast before the LORD. Then Baruch 10 read Jeremiah's words in the house of the LORD out of the book in the hearing of all the people; he read them from the room of Gemariah son 11 of the adjutant-general Shaphan in the upper court at the entrance to the new gate of the LORD's house. Micaiah son of Gemariah, son of Shaphan, 11 heard all the words of the LORD out of the book and went down to the 12 palace, to the adjutant-general's room where all the officers were gathered —Elishama the adjutant-general, Delaiah son of Shemaiah, Elnathan son 13 of Akbor, Gemariah son of Shaphan, Zedekiah son of Hananiah and all the other officers. There Micaiah repeated all the words he had heard when 13 Baruch read out of the book in the people's hearing. Then the officers sent 14 Jehudi son of Nethaniah, son of Shelemiah, son of Cushi, to Baruch with this message: 'Come here and bring the scroll from which you read in the 15 people's hearing.' So Baruch son of Neriah brought the scroll to them, and 15 they said, 'Sit down and^a read it to us.' When they heard what he read, 16 they turned to each other trembling and said, 'We must report this to the king.' They asked Baruch to tell them how he had come to write all this. 17
He said to them, 'Jeremiah dictated every word of it to me, and I wrote it 18 down in ink in the book.' The officers said to Baruch, 'You and Jeremiah 19 must go into hiding so that no one may know where you are.' When they 20 had deposited the scroll in the room of Elishama the adjutant-general, they went to the court and reported everything to the king.

The king sent Jehudi to fetch the scroll. When he had fetched it from the 21 room of Elishama the adjutant-general, he read it to the king and to all the officers in attendance. It was the ninth month of the year, and the king was 22 sitting in his winter apartments with a fire burning in a brazier in front of him. When Jehudi had read three or four columns of the scroll, the king 23 cut them off with a penknife and threw them into the fire in the brazier.
He went on doing so until the whole scroll had been thrown on the fire. 24
Neither the king nor any of his courtiers who heard these words showed any fear or rent their clothes; and though Elnathan, Delaiah, and Gemariah 25 begged the king not to burn the scroll, he would not listen to them. The king then ordered Jerahmeel, a royal prince,^b Seraiah son of Azriel, and 26
Shelemiah son of Abdeel to fetch the scribe Baruch and the prophet Jeremiah; but the LORD had hidden them.

After the king had burnt the scroll with all that Baruch had written on 27
it at Jeremiah's dictation, the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah: Now 28 take another scroll and write on it all the words that were on the first scroll which Jehoiakim king of Judah burnt. You shall say to Jehoiakim king of 29 Judah, These are the words of the LORD: You burnt this scroll and said,

^a Sit down and: or This time.

^b a royal prince: or the king's deputy.

Why have you written here that the king of Babylon shall come and destroy 30 this land and exterminate both men and beasts? Therefore these are the words of the LORD about Jehoiakim king of Judah: He shall have no one to succeed him on the throne of David, and his dead body shall be exposed 31 to scorching heat by day and frost by night. I will punish him and also his offspring and his courtiers for their wickedness, and I will bring down on them and on the inhabitants of Jerusalem and on the men of Judah all the calamities with which I threatened them, and to which they turned a 32 deaf ear. Then Jeremiah took another scroll and gave it to the scribe Baruch son of Neriah, who wrote on it at Jeremiah's dictation all the words of the book which Jehoiakim king of Judah had burnt; and much else was added to the same effect.

37 King Zedekiah son of Josiah was set on the throne of Judah by Nebu-chadrezzar king of Babylon, in succession to Coniah son of Jehoiakim.
2 Neither he nor his courtiers nor the people of the land listened to the words which the LORD spoke through the prophet Jeremiah.

3 King Zedekiah sent Jehucal son of Shelemiah and the priest Zephaniah son of Maaseiah to the prophet Jeremiah to say to him, 'Pray for us to the 4 LORD our God.' At the time Jeremiah was free to come and go among the 5 people; he had not yet been thrown into prison. Meanwhile, Pharaoh's army had marched out of Egypt, and when the Chaldaeans who were 6 besieging Jerusalem heard of it they raised the siege. Then this word came 7 from the LORD to the prophet Jeremiah: These are the words of the LORD the God of Israel: Say to the king of Judah who sent you to consult me, Pharaoh's army which marched out to help you is on its way back to Egypt,
8 its own land, and the Chaldaeans will return to the attack. They will cap-
9 ture this city and burn it to the ground. These are the words of the LORD:
Do not deceive yourselves, do not imagine that the Chaldaeans will go away
10 and leave you alone. They will not go; for even if you defeated the whole Chaldaeian force with which you are now fighting, and only the wounded were left lying in their tents, they would rise and burn down the city.

11 When the Chaldaeian army had raised the siege of Jerusalem because of 12 the advance of Pharaoh's army, Jeremiah was on the point of leaving Jerusalem to go into Benjaminite territory and take possession of his patri-13 mony in the presence of the people there. Irijah son of Shelemiah, son of Hananiah, the officer of the guard, was in the Benjamin Gate when Jerem-14 iah reached it, and he arrested the prophet, accusing him of going over to the Chaldaeans. 'It is a lie,' said Jeremiah; 'I am not going over to the Chaldaeans.' Irijah would not listen to him but arrested him and brought 15 him before the officers. The officers were indignant with Jeremiah; they flogged him and imprisoned him in the house of Jonathan the scribe, which 16 they had converted into a prison; for Jeremiah had been put into a vaulted pit beneath the house, and here he remained for a long time.

17 King Zedekiah had Jeremiah brought to him and consulted him privately in the palace, asking him if there was a word from the LORD. 'Indeed there is,' said Jeremiah; 'you shall fall into the hands of the king of Babylon.' 18 Then Jeremiah said to King Zedekiah, 'What wrong have I done to you or your courtiers or this people? Why have you thrown me into prison?'

Where are your prophets who prophesied that the king of Babylon would not attack you or your country? I pray you now, my lord king, give me a hearing and let my petition be presented: do not send me back to the house of Jonathan the scribe, or I shall die there.' Then King Zedekiah gave the order and Jeremiah was committed to the court of the guard-house and was granted a daily ration of one loaf from the Street of the Bakers, until the bread in the city was all gone. So Jeremiah remained in the court of the guard-house.

Shephatiah son of Mattan, Gedaliah son of Pashhur, Jucal son of Shelemiah, and Pashhur son of Malchiah heard what Jeremiah was saying to all the people: These are the words of the LORD: Whoever remains in this city shall die by sword, by famine, or by pestilence, but whoever goes out to surrender to the Chaldeans shall survive; he shall survive, he shall take home his life and nothing more. These are the words of the LORD: This city will fall into the hands of the king of Babylon's army, and they will capture it. Then the officers said to the king, 'The man must be put to death. By talking in this way he is discouraging the soldiers and the rest of the people left in the city. He is pursuing not the people's welfare but their ruin.' King Zedekiah said, 'He is in your hands; the king is powerless against you.' So they took Jeremiah and threw him into the pit,^a in the court of the guard-house, letting him down with ropes. There was no water in the pit, only mud, and Jeremiah sank in the mud. Now Ebed-melech the Cushite, a eunuch, who was in the palace, heard that they had thrown Jeremiah into the pit and went to tell the king, who was seated in the Benjamin Gate. 'Your majesty,' he said, 'these men have shown great wickedness in their treatment of the prophet Jeremiah. They have thrown him into the pit, and when there is no more bread in the city he will die of hunger where he lies.' Thereupon the king told Ebed-melech the Cushite to take three men with him and hoist Jeremiah out of the pit before he died. So Ebed-melech went to the palace with the men and took some tattered, cast-off clothes from the wardrobe^b and let them down with ropes to Jeremiah in the pit. Ebed-melech the Cushite said to Jeremiah, 'Put these old clothes under your armpits to ease the ropes.' Jeremiah did this, and they pulled him up out of the pit with the ropes; and he remained in the court of the guard-house.

King Zedekiah had the prophet Jeremiah brought to him by the third entrance to the LORD's house and said to him, 'I want to ask you something; hide nothing from me.' Jeremiah answered, 'If I speak out, you will certainly put me to death; if I offer you any advice, you will not take it.' But King Zedekiah swore to Jeremiah privately, 'By the life of the LORD who gave us our lives, I will not put you to death, nor will I hand you over to these men who are seeking to take your life.' Jeremiah said to Zedekiah, 'These are the words of the LORD the God of Hosts, the God of Israel: If you go out and surrender to the officers of the king of Babylon, you shall live and this city shall not be burnt down; you and your family shall live. But if you do not surrender to the officers of the king of Babylon, the city shall fall into the hands of the Chaldaeans, and they shall burn it down, and you will not escape them.' King Zedekiah said to Jeremiah, 'I am afraid of the Judaeans who have gone over to the enemy. I fear the Chaldaeans will give me up to them and I shall be roughly handled.' Jeremiah answered, 'They will not give you up. If you obey the LORD in everything I tell you, all will be well with you and you shall live. But if you refuse to go out and surrender, this is what the LORD has shown me: all the women left in the king of Judah's palace will be led out to the officers of the king of Babylon and they will say:

Your own friends have misled you and have been too strong for you;
they have let your feet sink in the mud and have turned away and left you.

All your women and children will be led out to the Chaldaeans, and you will not escape; you will be seized by the king of Babylon and this city will be burnt down.' Zedekiah said to Jeremiah, 'Let no one know about this, and you shall not be put to death. If the officers hear that I have been speaking with you and they come to you and say, "Tell us what you said to the king and what he said to you; hide nothing from us, and we will not put you to death", then answer, "I was presenting a petition to the king not to send me back to the house of Jonathan to die there."' The officers all came to Jeremiah and questioned him, and he said to them just what the king had told him to say; so their talk came to an end and they were none the wiser. Jeremiah remained in the court of the guard-house till the day Jerusalem fell.

39 ^{1 a} IN THE TENTH MONTH OF THE NINTH YEAR of the reign of Zedekiah king of Judah, Nebuchadrezzar advanced with all his army against Jerusalem, and they laid siege to it. In the fourth month of the eleventh year of Zedekiah, on the ninth day of the month, the city was thrown open. All the officers of the king of Babylon came in and took their seats in the middle gate: Nergalsarezer of Simmagir, Nebusarsekim ^b the chief eunuch, ^c Nergalsarezer the commander of the frontier troops, ^d and all the other officers of the king of Babylon. When Zedekiah king of Judah saw them, he and all his armed escort left the city and fled by night by way of the king's garden through the gate called Between the Two Walls. They escaped towards the Arabah, but the Chaldaean army pursued them and overtook Zedekiah in the lowlands of Jericho. The king was seized and brought before Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon at Riblah in the land of Hamath, and he pleaded his case before him. The king of Babylon slew Zedekiah's sons before his eyes at Riblah; he also put to death the nobles of Judah. Then Zedekiah's eyes were put out, and he was bound in fetters of bronze to be brought to Babylon. The Chaldaeans burnt the royal palace and the house of the LORD and the houses ^e of the people, and pulled down the walls of Jerusalem. Nebuzaradan captain of the bodyguard deported to Babylon the rest of the people left in the city, those who had deserted to him and any remaining artisans.^a At the same time the captain of the guard left behind the weakest class of the people, those who owned nothing at all, and made them vine-dressers and labourers.

Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon sent orders about Jeremiah to Nebuzaradan captain of the guard. 'Take him,' he said; 'take special care of him, and do him no harm of any kind, but do for him whatever he says.' So Nebuzaradan captain of the guard sent Nebushazban the chief eunuch, Nergalsarezer the commander of the frontier troops, and all the chief officers of the king of Babylon, and they fetched Jeremiah from the court of the guard-house and handed him over to Gedaliah son of Ahikam, son of Shaphan, to take him out to the Residence. So he stayed with his own people.

The word of the LORD had come to Jeremiah while he was under arrest in the court of the guard-house: Go and say to Ebed-melech the Cushite, These are the words of the LORD of Hosts the God of Israel: I will make good the words I have spoken against this city, foretelling ruin and not prosperity, and when that day comes you will be there to see it. But I will preserve you on that day, says the LORD, and you shall not be handed over to the men you fear. I will keep you safe and you shall not fall a victim to the sword; because you trusted in me you shall escape, you shall take home your life and nothing more. This is the very word of the LORD.

Jeremiah after the capture of Jerusalem

THE WORD WHICH CAME FROM THE LORD concerning Jeremiah: Nebuzaradan captain of the guard had taken him in chains to Ramah along with the other exiles from Jerusalem and Judah who were being deported to Babylon; and there he set him free, and took it upon himself to say to Jeremiah, 'The LORD your God threatened this place with disaster, and has duly carried out his threat that this should happen to all of you because you have sinned against the LORD and not obeyed him. But as for you, Jeremiah, today I remove the fetters from your wrists. Come with me to Babylon if you wish, and I will take special care of you; but if you prefer not to come, well and good. The whole country lies before you; go wherever you think best.' Jeremiah had not yet answered when Nebuzaradan went on,^b 'Go back to Gedaliah son of Ahikam, son of Shaphan, whom the king of Babylon has appointed governor of the cities of Judah, and stay with him openly; or else go wherever you choose.' Then the captain of the guard granted him an allowance of food, and gave him a present, and so took leave of him. Jeremiah then came to Gedaliah son of Ahikam at Mizpah and stayed with him among the people left in the land.

When all the captains of the armed bands in the country-side and their men heard that the king of Babylon had appointed Gedaliah son of Ahikam governor of the land, and had put him in charge of the weakest class of the population, men, women, and children, who had not been deported to 8 Babylon, they came to him at Mizpah; Ishmael son of Nethaniah came, and Johanan and Jonathan sons of Kareah, Seraiah son of Tanhumeth, the sons of Ephai^a from Netophah, and Jezaniah of Beth-maacah, with their 9 men. Gedaliah son of Ahikam, son of Shaphan, gave them all this assurance:

'Have no fear of the Chaldaean officers. Settle down in the land and 10 serve the king of Babylon; and then all will be well with you. I am to stay in Mizpah and attend upon the Chaldaeans whenever they come, and you are to gather in the summer-fruits, wine, and oil, store them in jars, and 11 settle in the towns you have taken over.' The Judaeans also, in Moab, Ammon, Edom and other countries, heard that the king of Babylon had left a remnant in Judah and that he had set over them Gedaliah son of 12 Ahikam, son of Shaphan. The Judaeans, therefore, from all the places where they were scattered, came back to Judah and presented themselves before Gedaliah at Mizpah; and they gathered in a considerable store of fruit and wine.

13 Johanan son of Kareah and all the captains of the armed bands from the 14 country-side came to Gedaliah at Mizpah and said to him, 'Do you know that Baalis king of the Ammonites has sent Ishmael son of Nethaniah to 15 assassinate you?' But Gedaliah son of Ahikam did not believe them. Then Johanan son of Kareah said in private to Gedaliah, 'Let me go, unknown to anyone else, and kill Ishmael son of Nethaniah. Why allow him to assassinate you, and so let all the Judaeans who have rallied round you be 16 scattered and the remnant of Judah lost?' Gedaliah son of Ahikam answered him, 'Do no such thing. Your story about Ishmael is a lie.'

41 In the seventh month Ishmael son of Nethaniah, son of Elishama, who was a member of the royal house, came with ten men to Gedaliah son of 2 Ahikam at Mizpah. While they were at table with him there, Ishmael son of Nethaniah and the ten men with him rose to their feet and assassinated Gedaliah son of Ahikam, son of Shaphan, whom the king of Babylon had 3 appointed governor of the land. They also murdered the Judaeans with him in Mizpah and the Chaldaeans who happened to be there. The second 4 day after the murder of Gedaliah, while it was not yet common knowledge, 5 there came eighty men from Shechem, Shiloh, and Samaria. They had shaved off their beards, their clothes were rent and their bodies gashed, and they were carrying grain-offerings and frankincense to take to the 6 house of the LORD. Ishmael son of Nethaniah came out weeping from Mizpah to meet them and, when he met them, he said, 'Come to Gedaliah 7 son of Ahikam.' But as soon as they reached the centre of the town, Ishmael son of Nethaniah and his men murdered them and threw their bodies into 8 a pit, all except ten of them who said to Ishmael, 'Do not kill us, for we have a secret hoard in the country, wheat and barley, oil and honey.' So he held 9 his hand and did not kill them with the others. The pit into which he threw the bodies of those whose death he had caused by using Gedaliah's name was the pit which King Asa had made when threatened by Baasha king 10 of Israel; and the dead bodies filled it. He rounded up the rest of the people in Mizpah, that is the king's daughters and all who remained in Mizpah when Nebuzaradan captain of the guard appointed Gedaliah son of Ahikam governor; and with these he set out to cross over into Ammon. When Johanan son of Kareah and all the captains of the armed bands heard of the crimes committed by Ishmael son of Nethaniah, they took all the men they had and went to attack him. They found him by the great pool in Gibeon. The people with Ishmael were glad when they saw Johanan son of Kareah and the captains of the armed bands with him; and all whom Ishmael had taken prisoner at Mizpah turned and joined Johanan son of Kareah. But Ishmael son of Nethaniah escaped from Johanan with eight men, and they made their way to the Ammonites.

Johanan son of Kareah and all the captains of the armed bands took from Mizpah the survivors whom he had rescued from Ishmael son of Nethaniah after the murder of Gedaliah son of Ahikam—men, armed and unarmed, women, children, and eunuchs, whom he had brought back from Gibeon. They started out and broke their journey at Kimham's holding near Bethlehem, on their way into Egypt to escape the Chaldeans. They were afraid because Ishmael son of Nethaniah had assassinated Gedaliah son of Ahikam, whom the king of Babylon had appointed governor of the country.

All the captains of the armed bands, including Johanan son of Kareah and Azariah son of Hoshaiah, together with the people, high and low, came to the prophet Jeremiah and said to him, 'May our petition be acceptable to you: Pray to the LORD your God on our behalf and on behalf of this remnant; for, as you see for yourself, only a few of us remain out of many. Pray that the LORD your God may tell us which way we ought to go and what we ought to do.' Then the prophet Jeremiah said to them, 'I have heard your request and will pray to the LORD your God as you desire, and whatever answer the LORD gives I will tell you; I will keep nothing back.' They said to Jeremiah, 'May the LORD be a true and faithful witness against us if we do not keep our oath! We swear that we will do whatever the LORD your God sends you to tell us. Whether we like it or not, we will obey the LORD our God to whom we send you, in order that it may be well with us; we will obey the LORD our God.'

Within ten days the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah; so he summoned Johanan son of Kareah, all the captains of the armed bands with him, and all the people, both high and low. He said to them, These are the words of the LORD the God of Israel, to whom you sent me to present your petition: If you will stay in this land, then I will build you up and not pull you down, I will plant you and not uproot you; I grieve for the disaster which I have brought upon you. Do not be afraid of the king of Babylon whom you now fear. Do not be afraid of him, says the LORD; for I am with you, to save you and deliver you from his power. I will show you compassion, and he too will have compassion on you; he will let you stay on your own soil. But it may be that you will disobey the LORD your God and say, 'We will not stay in this land. No, we will go to Egypt, where we shall see no sign of war, never hear the sound of the trumpet, and not starve for want of bread; and there we will live.' Then hear the word of the LORD, you remnant of Judah.

16 These are the words of the LORD of Hosts the God of Israel: If you are bent on going to Egypt, if you do settle there, then the sword you fear will overtake you in Egypt, and the famine you dread will still be with you, even in Egypt, and there you will die. All the men who are bent on going to Egypt and settling there will die by sword, by famine, or by pestilence; not one shall escape or survive the calamity which I will bring upon them.

18 These are the words of the LORD of Hosts the God of Israel: As my anger and my wrath were poured out upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, so will my wrath be poured out upon you when you go to Egypt; you will become an object of execration and horror, of ridicule and reproach; you will never see this place again. To you, then, remnant of Judah, the LORD says, Do not go to Egypt. Make no mistake, I can bear witness against you this day. You deceived yourselves when you sent me to the LORD your God and said, 'Pray for us to the LORD our God; tell us all that the LORD our God says and we will do it.' I have told you everything today; but you have not obeyed the LORD your God in what he sent me to tell you. So now be sure of this: you will die by sword, by famine, and by pestilence in the place where you desire to go and make your home.

43 When Jeremiah had finished reciting to the people all that the LORD their God had sent him to say, Azariah son of Hoshaiah and Johanan son of Kareah and their party had the effrontery to say to^a Jeremiah, 'You are lying; the LORD our God has not sent you to forbid us to go and make our home in Egypt. Baruch son of Neriah has incited you against us in order to put us in the power of the Chaldaeans, so that they may kill us or deport us to Babylon.' Johanan son of Kareah and the captains of the armed bands and all the people refused to obey the LORD and stay in Judah. So Johanan son of Kareah and the captains collected the remnant of Judah, all who had returned from the countries among which they had been scattered to make their home in Judah—men, women and children, including the king's daughters, all the people whom Nebuzaradan captain of the guard had left with Gedaliah son of Ahikam, son of Shaphan, as well as the prophet Jeremiah and Baruch son of Neriah; these all went to Egypt and came to Tahpanhes, disobeying the LORD.

89 The word of the LORD came to Jeremiah at Tahpanhes: Take some large stones and set them in cement in the pavement at the entrance to Pharaoh's palace in Tahpanhes. Let the Judaeans see you do it and say to them, These are the words of the LORD of Hosts the God of Israel: I will send for my servant Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and he will place his throne on these stones that I have set there, and spread his canopy over them. He will then proceed to strike Egypt down, killing those doomed to death, taking captive those who are for captivity, and putting to the sword those who are for the sword. He will set fire to the temples of the Egyptian gods, burning the buildings and carrying the gods into captivity. He will scour the land of Egypt as a shepherd scours his clothes to rid them of lice. He will leave Egypt with his purpose achieved. He will smash the sacred pillars of Beth-shemesh in Egypt and burn down the temples of the Egyptian gods.

^a to say to: or to say: It is being said to.

The word that came to Jeremiah for all the Judaeans who were living in Egypt, in Migdol, Tahpanhes, Noph, and the district of Pathros: These are the words of the LORD of Hosts the God of Israel: You have seen the calamity that I brought upon Jerusalem and all the cities of Judah: today they are laid waste and left uninhabited, all because of the wickedness of those who provoked me to anger by going after other gods, gods unknown to them, by burning sacrifices to them. It was you and your fathers who did this. I took pains to send all my servants the prophets to you with this warning: 'Do not do this abominable thing which I hate.' But your fathers would not listen; they paid no heed. They did not give up their wickedness or cease to burn sacrifices to other gods; so my anger and wrath raged like a fire through the cities of Judah and the streets of Jerusalem, and they became the desolate ruin that they are today.

Now these are the words of the LORD the God of Hosts, the God of Israel: Why bring so great a disaster upon yourselves? Why bring destruction upon Judaeans, men and women, children and babes, and leave yourselves without a survivor? This is what comes of your provoking me by all your idolatry in burning sacrifices to other gods in Egypt where you have made your home. You will destroy yourselves and become an object of ridicule and reproach to all the nations of the earth. Have you forgotten all the wickedness committed by your forefathers, by the kings of Judah and their wives, by yourselves and your wives in the land of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem? To this day you have shown no remorse, no reverence; you have not conformed to the law and the statutes which I set before you and your forefathers. These, therefore, are the words of the LORD of Hosts the God of Israel: I have made up my mind to bring calamity upon you and exterminate the people of Judah. I will deal with the remnant of Judah who were bent on going to make their home in Egypt; in Egypt they shall all meet their end. Some shall fall by the sword, others will meet their end by famine. High and low alike will die by sword or by famine and will be an object of execration and horror, of ridicule and reproach. I will punish those who live in Egypt as I punished those in Jerusalem, by sword, famine, and pestilence. Those who had remained in Judah came to make their home in Egypt, confident that they would return and live once more in Judah. But they shall not return;^a not one of them shall survive, not one escape.

Then all the men who knew that their wives were burning sacrifices to other gods and the crowds of women standing by^b answered Jeremiah, 'We will not listen to what you tell us in the name of the LORD. We intend to fulfil all the promises by which we have bound ourselves: we will burn sacrifices to the queen of heaven and pour drink-offerings to her as we used to do, we and our fathers, our kings and our princes, in the cities of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem. We then had food in plenty and were content; no calamity touched us. But from the time we left off burning sacrifices to the queen of heaven and pouring drink-offerings to her, we have been in great want, and in the end we have fallen victims to sword and

- 19 famine.' And the women said, 'When we burnt sacrifices to the queen of heaven and poured drink-offerings to her, our husbands knew full well 20 that we were making crescent-cakes marked with her image and pouring drink-offerings to her.' When Jeremiah received this answer from these 21 men and women and all the people, he said, 'The LORD did not forget those sacrifices which you and your fathers, your kings and princes and the people of the land burnt in the cities of Judah and in the streets of Jeru-22 salem, and they mounted up in his mind until he could no longer tolerate them, so wicked were your deeds and so abominable the things you did.
Your land became a desolate waste, an object of horror and ridicule, with 23 no inhabitants, as it still is. This calamity has come upon you because you burnt these sacrifices and sinned against the LORD and did not obey the LORD or conform to his laws, statutes, and teachings.'
- 24 Jeremiah further said to all the people and to the women, Listen to the word of the LORD, all you from Judah who live in Egypt. These are the 25 words of the LORD of Hosts the God of Israel: You women have made your actions match your words. 'We will carry out our vows', you said, 'to burn sacrifices to the queen of heaven and to pour drink-offerings to her.' We'll 26 then, fulfil your vows by all means, and make your words good. But listen to the word of the LORD, all you from Judah who live in Egypt. I have sworn by my great name, says the LORD, that my name shall never again be on the lips of the men of Judah; they shall no longer swear in Egypt, 'By the life of 27 the Lord God.' I am on the watch to bring you evil and not good, and all the men of Judah who are in Egypt shall meet their end by sword and by 28 famine until not one is left.^a It is then that all the survivors of Judah who have made their home in Egypt shall know whose word prevails, theirs or mine.
- 29 This is the sign I give you, says the LORD, that I intend to punish you in this place, so that you may learn that my words against you will prevail 30 to bring evil upon you: These are the words of the LORD: I will hand over Pharaoh Hophra king of Egypt to his enemies and to those who seek his life, just as I handed over Zedekiah king of Judah to his enemy Nebu-chadrezzar king of Babylon who was seeking to take his life.
- 45 THE WORD WHICH THE PROPHET JEREMIAH SPOKE to Baruch son of Neriah when he wrote these words in a book at Jeremiah's dictation in 2 the fourth year of Jehoiakim son of Josiah, king of Judah: These are the 3 words of the LORD the God of Israel concerning you, Baruch: You said, 'Woe is me, for the LORD has added grief to all my trials. I have worn my-4 self out with my labours and have had no respite.' This is what you shall say to Baruch, These are the words of the LORD: What I have built, I demolish; what I have planted, I uproot. So it will be with the whole earth.
5 You seek great things for yourself. Leave off seeking them; for I will bring disaster upon all mankind, says the LORD, and I will let you live wherever you go, but you shall save your life and nothing more.

^a Prob. rdg. ; Heb. adds Few will escape the sword in Egypt to return to Judah.

Prophecies against the nations

THIS CAME TO THE PROPHET JEREMIAH as the word of the LORD 46 concerning the nations.

Of Egypt: concerning the army of Pharaoh Necho king of Egypt at 2 Carchemish on the river Euphrates, which Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon defeated in the fourth year of Jehoiakim son of Josiah, king of Judah.

Hold shield and buckler ready 3
and advance to battle;
harness the horses, let the riders mount; 4
form up, your helmets on, your lances burnished;
on with your coats of mail!
But now, what sight is this? 5
They are broken and routed,
their warriors beaten down;
they have turned to flight and do not look behind them.
Terror let loose!
This is the very word of the LORD.

Can the swift escape, can the warrior save himself? 6
In the north, by the river Euphrates, they stumble and fall.

Who is this rising like the Nile, 7
like its streams turbulent in flood?
Egypt is rising like the Nile, 8
like its streams turbulent in flood.

He^a says:

I will rise and cover the earth,
I will destroy both city and people.
Charge, horsemen! On, you flashing chariots, on! 9
Forward, the warriors,
Cushites and men of Put carrying shields,
Lydians grasping their bent bows!
This is the day of the Lord, the GOD of Hosts, 10
a day of vengeance, vengeance on his enemies;
the sword shall devour and be sated,
drunk with their blood.
For the GOD of Hosts, the Lord, holds sacrifice
in a northern land, by the river Euphrates.
Go up into Gilead and fetch balm, 11
O virgin people of Egypt.
You have tried many remedies, all in vain;
no skin shall grow over your wounds.

^a Or It.

- 12 The nations have heard your cry,
 and the earth echoes with your screams;
 warrior stumbles against warrior
 and both fall together.
- 13 The word which the LORD spoke to the prophet Jeremiah when Nebu-chadrezzar king of Babylon was coming to harry the land of Egypt:
- 14 Announce it in Egypt, proclaim it in Migdol, proclaim it in Noph and Tahpanhes.
 Say, Stand to! Be ready!
 for a sword devours all around you.
- 15 Why does Apis flee, why does your bull-god not ^a stand fast?
 The LORD has thrust him out.
- 16 The rabble of Egypt stumbles and falls,
 man against man;
 each says, 'Quick, back to our people, to the land of our birth, far from the cruel sword!'
- 17 Give Pharaoh of Egypt the title King Bombast,
 the man who missed his moment.
- 18 By my life, says the King
 whose name is the LORD of Hosts,
 one shall come mighty as Tabor among the hills,
 as Carmel by the sea.
- 19 Make ready your baggage for exile,
 you native people of Egypt;
 for Noph shall become a waste, ruined and unpeopled.
- 20 Egypt was a lovely heifer,
 but a gadfly from the north descended on her.
- 21 The mercenaries in her land were like stall-fed calves;
 but they too turned and fled,
 not one of them stood his ground.
 The hour of their downfall has come upon them,
 their day of reckoning.
- 22 Hark, she is hissing like a snake,
 for the enemy has come in all his force.
 They fall upon her with axes
 like woodcutters at their work.
- 23 They cut down her forest, says the LORD,
 and it flaunts itself no more;
 for they are many as locusts and past counting.
- 24 The Egyptians are put to shame, enslaved to a northern race.
- 25 The LORD of Hosts the God of Israel has spoken:
 I will punish Amon god of No, ^b
 Egypt with her gods and her princes,
 Pharaoh and all who trust in him.

^a Why does Apis . . . not; or Why is your bull-god routed, why does he not . . .

^b Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds and Pharaoh.

I will deliver them to those bent on their destruction, to Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon and his troops; 26
yet in after time the land shall be peopled as of old.
This is the very word of the LORD.

But you, Jacob my servant, have no fear, 27 despair not, O Israel;
for I will bring you back safe from afar
and your offspring from the land where they are captives;
and Jacob shall be at rest once more,
prosperous and unafraid.

O Jacob my servant, have no fear, 28
says the LORD; for I am with you.
I will make an end of all the nations
amongst whom I have banished you;
but I will not make an end of you;
though I punish you as you deserve,
I will not sweep you clean away.

This came to the prophet Jeremiah as the word of the LORD concerning 47
the Philistines before Pharaoh's harrying of Gaza: The LORD has spoken: 2

See how waters are rising from the north and swelling to a torrent in spate, flooding the land and all that is in it,
cities and all who live in them.
Men shall shriek in alarm
and all who live in the land shall howl.
Hark, the pounding of his chargers' hooves, 3
the rattle of his chariots and their rumbling wheels!
Fathers spare no thought for their children;
their hands hang powerless, because the day is upon them when Philistia will be despoiled, 4 and Tyre and Sidon destroyed to the last defender;
for the LORD will despoil the Philistines, that remnant of the isle of Caphtor.
Gaza is shorn bare, Ashkelon ruined. 5
Poor remnant of their strength,
how long will you gash yourselves and cry:
Ah, sword in the hand of the LORD, 6
how long will it be before you rest?
Sheathe yourself, rest and be quiet.
How can it rest? for the LORD has given it work to do 7 against Ashkelon and the plain by the sea;
there he has assigned the sword its task.

Of Moab. The LORD of Hosts the God of Israel has spoken: 48
Alas for Nebo! it is laid waste;
Kiriathaim is put to shame and captured,

- Misgab reduced to shame and dismay;
 Moab is renowned no longer.
 2 In Heshbon they plot evil against her:
 Come, destroy her, and leave her no longer a nation.
 And you who live in Madmen shall be struck down,
 your people pursued by the sword.
 3 Hark to the cries of anguish from Horonaim:
 great havoc and disaster!
 4 Moab is broken.
 Their cries are heard as far as Zoar.
 5 On the ascent of Luhith men go up weeping bitterly;
 on the descent of Horonaim cries of 'Disaster!' are heard.
 6 Flee, flee for your lives like a sand-grouse in the wilderness.
 7 Because you have trusted in your defences and your arsenals,
 you too will be captured,
 and Kemosh will go into exile,
 his priests and his captains with him;
 8 and a spoiler shall descend on every city.
 No city shall escape,
 valley and tableland will be laid waste and plundered;
 the LORD has spoken.
 9 Let a warning flash to Moab,^a for she shall be laid in ruins^b and her cities shall become waste places with no inhabitant.
 10 A curse on him who is slack in doing the LORD's work!
 A curse on him who withholds his sword from bloodshed!
 11 All his life long, Moab has lain undisturbed like wine settled on its lees, not emptied from vessel to vessel;
 he has not gone into exile.
 Therefore the taste of him is unaltered,
 and the flavour stays unchanged.
 12 Therefore the days are coming, says the LORD, when I will send men to tilt the jars; they shall tilt them and empty his vessels and smash his jars; 13 and Moab shall be betrayed by Kemosh, as Israel was betrayed by Bethel,
 a god in whom he trusted.
 14 How can you say, 'We are warriors and men valiant in battle'?

^a Let . . . Moab: or Doom Moab to become saltings.
Heb. obscure.

^b laid in ruins: prob. rdg.

- The spoiler of Moab and her cities has come up, and the flower of her army goes down to the slaughter. 15
- This is the very word of the King whose name is the LORD of Hosts.
- The downfall of Moab is near at hand, disaster rushes swiftly upon him. 16
- Grieve for him, all you his neighbours and all you who acknowledge him, 17
- and say, 'Alas! The commander's staff is broken, broken is the baton of honour.'
- Come down from your place of honour, 18
- sit on the thirsty ground, you natives of Dibon;
for the spoiler of Moab has come upon you and destroyed your citadels.
- You that live in Aroer, stand on the roadside and watch, 19
- ask the fugitives, the man running, the woman escaping, ask them, 'What has happened?'
- Moab is reduced to shame and dismay: 20
- howl and shriek,
proclaim by the Arnon that Moab is despoiled,
- and that judgement has come to the tableland, to Holon and Jahazah, 21
- Mephaath and Dibon, Nebo and Beth-diblathaim and Kiriathaim, Beth- 22 23
- gamul, Beth-meon, Kiriath and Bozrah, and to all the cities of Moab far 24
- and near.
- Moab's horn is hacked off 25
- and his strong arm is broken,
says the LORD.
- Make Moab drunk—he has defied the LORD— 26
- until he overflows with his vomit
and even he becomes a butt for derision.
- But was Israel ever your butt? 27
- Was he ever in company with thieves, that whenever you spoke of him you should shake your head?
- Leave your cities, you inhabitants of Moab, 28
- and find a home among the crags;
become like a dove which nests
in the rock-face at the mouth of a cavern.
- We have heard of Moab's pride, and proud indeed he is, 29
- proud, presumptuous, overbearing, insolent.
I know his arrogance, says the LORD; 30
- his boasting is false, false are his deeds.
- Therefore I will howl over Moab 31
- and cry in anguish at the fate of every soul in Moab;
I will moan over the men of Kir-heres.
- I will weep for you more than I wept for Jazer, 32
- O vine of Sibmah

whose branches spread out to the sea and stretch as far as Jazer.

The despoiler has fallen on your fruit and on your vintage, gladness and joy are taken away 33 from the meadows of Moab, and I have stopped the flow of wine from the vats;
nor shall shout follow shout from the harvesters—not one shout.

34 Heshbon and^a Elealeh utter cries of anguish which are heard in Jahaz; the sound carries from Zoar to Horonaim and Eglath-shelishiyah; for the 35 waters of Nimrim have become a desolate waste. In Moab I will stop their sacrificing at hill-shrines and burning of offerings to their gods, says the 36 LORD. Therefore my heart wails for Moab like a reed-pipe, wails like a pipe for the men of Kir-heres. Their hard-earned wealth has vanished.
37 Every man's head is shorn in mourning, every beard shaved, every hand 38 gashed, and every waist girded with sackcloth. On Moab's roofs and in her broad streets nothing is heard but lamentation; for I have broken Moab 39 like a useless thing.^b Moab in her dismay has shamefully turned to flight.
Moab has become a butt of derision and a cause of dismay to all her neighbours.

40 For the LORD has spoken:

A vulture shall swoop down and spread out his wings over Moab.

41 The towns are captured, the strongholds taken;
on that day the spirit of Moab's warriors shall fail like the spirit of a woman in childbirth.

42 Then Moab shall be destroyed, no more to be a nation;
for he defied the LORD.

43 The hunter's scare, the pit, and the trap threaten all who dwell in Moab,
says the LORD.

44 If a man runs from the scare
he will fall into the pit;
if he climbs out of the pit
he will be caught in the trap.

All this will I bring on Moab in the year of their reckoning.
This is the very word of the LORD.

45 In the shadow of Heshbon the fugitives stand helpless;
for fire has blazed out from Heshbon, flames have shot out from the palace of Sihon;
they devour the homeland of Moab
and the country of the sons of tumult.

46 Alas for you, Moab! the people of Kemosh have vanished, for your sons are taken into captivity and your daughters led away captive.

the LORD.

^b Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds says

Yet in days to come I will restore Moab's fortunes. 47

This is the very word of the LORD.

Here ends the sentence on Moab.

Of the people of Ammon. Thus says the LORD: 49

Has Israel no sons? Has he no heir?

Why has Milcom inherited the land of Gad, and why do his people live in the cities of Gad?

Look, therefore, a time is coming, 2

says the LORD,

when I will make Rabbath Ammon hear the battle-cry,
when it will become a desolate mound of ruins
and its villages will be burnt to ashes,
and Israel shall disinherit those who disinherited him,
says the LORD.

Howl, Heshbon, for Ai is despoiled. 3

Cry aloud, you villages round Rabbath Ammon, put on sackcloth and beat your breast,
and score your bodies with gashes.

For Milcom will go into exile,
and with him his priests and officers.

Why do you boast of your resources, 4
you whose resources are melting away,

you wayward people who trust in your arsenals,
and say, 'Who will dare attack me?'

Beware, I am bringing fear upon you from every side,^a 5 and every one of you shall be driven headlong with no man to round up the stragglers.

Yet after this I will restore the fortunes of Ammon. 6

This is the very word of the LORD.

Of Edom. The LORD of Hosts has said: 7

Is wisdom no longer to be found in Teman?

Have her sages no skill in counsel?

Has their wisdom decayed?

The people of Dedan have turned and fled 8
and taken refuge in remote places;

for I will bring Esau's calamity upon him
when his day of reckoning comes.

When the vintagers come to you 9^b
they will surely leave gleanings;

and if thieves raid your early crop in the night,
they will take only as much as they want.

But I have ransacked Esau's treasure, 10
I have uncovered his hiding-places,

and he has nowhere to conceal himself;

- 11 What! am I to save alive your fatherless children?
Are your widows to trust in me?
- 12 For the LORD has spoken: Those who were not doomed to drink the cup shall drink it none the less. Are you alone to go unpunished? You 13 shall not go unpunished; you shall drink it. For by my life, says the LORD, Bozrah shall become a horror and reproach, a byword and a thing of ridicule; and all her towns shall be a byword for ever.
- 14^a When a herald was sent among the nations, crying,
'Gather together and march against her,
rouse yourselves for battle',
I heard this message from the LORD:
- 15 Look, I make you the least of all nations,
an object of all men's contempt.
- 16 Your overbearing arrogance and your insolent heart
have led you astray,
you who haunt the crannies among the rocks
and keep your hold on the heights of the hills.
Though you build your nest high as a vulture,
thence I will bring you down.
This is the very word of the LORD.
- 17 Edom shall become a scene of horror,
all who pass that way shall be horror-struck and shall jeer in derision at the blows she has borne,

No man shall live there,

and their pasture shall be horrified at their fate.

34 This came to the prophet Jeremiah as the word of the LORD concerning 35 Elam, at the beginning of the reign of Zedekiah king of Judah: Thus says
the LORD of Hosts:

Listen, I will break the bow of Elam,
the chief weapon of their might;
36 I will bring four winds against Elam
from the four quarters of heaven;
I will scatter them before these four winds, and there shall be no nation
to which the exiles from Elam shall not come.
37 I will break Elam before their foes,
before those who are bent on their destruction;
I will vent my anger upon them in disaster;
I will harry them with the sword
until I make an end of them.
38 Then I will set my throne in Elam,
and there I will destroy the king and his officers.
This is the very word of the LORD.
39 Yet in days to come I will restore the fortunes of Elam.
This is the very word of the LORD.

50 The word which the LORD spoke concerning Babylon, concerning the land of the Chaldaeans, through the prophet Jeremiah:

2 Declare and proclaim among the nations,
keep nothing back, spread the news:
Babylon is taken,
Bel is put to shame, Marduk is in despair;
the idols of Babylon are put to shame,
her false gods are in despair.
3 For a nation out of the north has fallen upon her;
they will make her land a desolate waste
where neither man nor beast shall live.

4 In those days, at that time, says the LORD, the people of Israel and the people of Judah shall come together and go in tears to seek the LORD their 5 God; they shall ask after Zion, turning their faces towards her, and they shall come and join themselves to the LORD in an everlasting covenant which shall not be forgotten.

6 My people were lost sheep, whose shepherds let them stray and run wild on the mountains; they went from mountain to hill and forgot their 7 fold. Whoever found them devoured them, and their enemies said, 'We incur no guilt, because they have sinned against the LORD, the LORD who is the true goal and the hope of all their fathers.'

8 Flee from Babylon, from the land of the Chaldaeans;
go forth, and be like he-goats leading the flock.
9 For I will stir up a host of mighty nations and bring them against Babylon, marshalled against her from a northern land;

- and from the north she shall be captured.
 Their arrows shall be like a practised warrior who never comes back empty-handed;
 the Chaldeans shall be plundered, 10
 and all who plunder them shall take their fill.
 This is the very word of the LORD.
 You ravaged my patrimony; but though you rejoice and exult, 11 though you run free like a heifer after threshing, though you neigh like a stallion,
 your mother shall be cruelly disgraced, 12
 she who bore you shall be put to shame.
 Look at her, the mere rump of the nations,
 a wilderness, parched and desert, unpeopled through the wrath of the LORD, 13
 nothing but a desolate waste;
 all who pass by Babylon shall be horror-struck and jeer in derision at the sight of her wounds.
- Marshal your forces against Babylon, on every side, 14
 you whose bows are ready strung;
 shoot at her, spare no arrows.
 Shout in triumph over her, she has thrown up her hands, 15 her bastions are down, her walls demolished;
 this is the vengeance of the LORD.
 Take vengeance on her;
 as she has done, so do to her.
 Destroy every sower in Babylon, 16
 every reaper with his sickle at harvest-time.
 Before the cruel sword every man will go back to his people, every man flee to his own land.
- Israel is a scattered flock 17
 harried and chased by lions:
 as the king of Assyria was the first to feed on him,
 so the king of Babylon was the last to gnaw his bones.
- Therefore the LORD of Hosts the God of Israel says this: 18
 I will punish the king of Babylon and his country
 as I have punished the king of Assyria.
 I will bring Israel back to his pasture, 19
 and he shall graze on Carmel and Bashan;
 in the hills of Ephraim and Gilead he shall eat his fill.
- In those days, says the LORD, when that time comes, search shall be 20 made for the iniquity of Israel but there shall be none, and for the sin of Judah but it shall not be found; for those whom I leave as a remnant I will forgive.
- Attack the land of Merathaim; 21
 attack it and the inhabitants of Pekod;

put all to the sword and destroy them,
and do whatever I bid you.

This is the very word of the LORD.

- 22 Hark, the sound of war in the land and great destruction!
- 23 See how the hammer of all the earth
is hacked and broken in pieces, how Babylon has become a horror among the nations.
- 24 O Babylon, you have laid a snare to be your own undoing;
you have been trapped, all unawares;
there you are, you are caught,
because you have challenged the LORD.
- 25 The LORD has opened his arsenal and brought out the weapons of his wrath;
for this is work for the Lord the GOD of Hosts
in the land of the Chaldaeans.
- 26 Her harvest-time has come:
throw open her granaries,^a pile her in heaps;
destroy her, let no survivor be left.
- 27 Put all her warriors to the sword;
let them be led to the slaughter.
- Woe upon them! for their time has come,
their day of reckoning.
- 28 I hear the fugitives escaping from the land of Babylon to proclaim in Zion the vengeance of the LORD our God.
- 29 Let your arrows be heard whistling against Babylon,
all you whose bows are ready strung.
Pitch your tents all around her
so that no one escapes.
Pay her back for all her misdeeds;
as she has done, so do to her,
for she has insulted the LORD the Holy One of Israel.
- 30 Therefore her young men shall fall in her streets,
and all her warriors shall lie still in death that day.
This is the very word of the LORD.
- 31 I am against you, insolent city;
for your time has come, your day of reckoning.
This is the very word of the Lord GOD of Hosts.
- 32 Insolence shall stumble and fall
and no one shall lift her up, and I will kindle fire in the heath around her
and it shall consume everything round about.

The peoples of Israel and Judah together are oppressed;
their captors hold them firmly and refuse to release them.

But they have a powerful advocate, 34
whose name is the LORD of Hosts;
he himself will plead their cause,
bringing distress on Babylon and turmoil on its people.

A sword hangs over the Chaldeans, 35 over the people of Babylon, her officers and her wise men,
says the LORD.

A sword over the false prophets, and they are made fools, 36
a sword over her warriors, and they despair,

a sword over her horses and her chariots 37
and over all the rabble within her,
and they shall become like women;

a sword over her treasures, and they shall be plundered, 38
a sword over her waters, and they shall dry up;
for it is a land of idols

that glories in its dreaded gods.^a

Therefore marmots and jackals shall skulk in it, desert-owls shall haunt 39
it, nevermore shall it be inhabited by men and no one shall dwell in it

Sharpen the arrows, fill the quivers.
 The LORD has roused the spirit of the king of the Medes;

the LORD that in the end he banished them from his sight; and Zedekiah rebelled against the king of Babylon.

In the ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month, on the tenth day of the month, Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon advanced with all his army against Jerusalem, invested it and erected watch-towers against it on every side; the siege lasted till the eleventh year of King Zedekiah. In the fourth month of that year, on the ninth day of the month, when famine was severe in the city and there was no food for the common people, the city was thrown open. When Zedekiah king of Judah saw this, he and ^a all his armed escort left the city and fled by night through the gate called Between the Two Walls, near the king's garden. They escaped towards the Arabah, although the Chaldeans were surrounding the city. But the Chaldaean army pursued the king and overtook him in the lowlands of Jericho; and all his company was dispersed. The king was seized and brought before the king of Babylon at Riblah in the land of Hamath, where he pleaded his case before him. The king of Babylon slew Zedekiah's sons before his eyes; he also put to death all the princes of Judah in Riblah. Then the king of Babylon put Zedekiah's eyes out, bound him with fetters of bronze, brought him to Babylon and committed him to prison till the day of his death.

In the fifth month, on the tenth day of the month, in the nineteenth year of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, Nebuzaradan, captain of the king's bodyguard, ^b came to Jerusalem and set fire to the house of the LORD and the royal palace; all the houses in the city, including the mansion of Gedaliah, ^c were burnt down. The Chaldaean forces with the captain of the guard pulled down the walls all round Jerusalem. ^d Nebuzaradan captain of the guard deported the rest of the people left in the city, those who had deserted to the king of Babylon and any remaining artisans. The captain of the guard left only the weakest class of people to be vine-dressers and labourers.

The Chaldeans broke up the pillars of bronze in the house of the LORD, the trolleys, and the sea of bronze, and took the metal to Babylon. They took also the pots, shovels, snuffers, tossing-bowls, saucers, and all the vessels of bronze used in the service of the temple. The captain of the guard took away the precious metal, whether gold or silver, of which the cups, firepans, tossing-bowls, pots, lamp-stands, saucers, and flagons were made. The bronze of the two pillars, of the one sea and of the twelve oxen supporting it, which King Solomon had made for the house of the LORD, was beyond weighing. The one pillar was eighteen cubits high and twelve cubits in circumference; it was hollow and the metal was four fingers thick. It had a capital of bronze, five cubits high, and a decoration of network and pomegranates ran all round it, wholly of bronze. The other pillar, with its pomegranates, was exactly like it. Ninety-six pomegranates were exposed to view and there were a hundred in all on the network all round.

- 24 The captain of the guard took Seraiah the chief priest and Zephaniah 25 the deputy chief priest and the three on duty at the entrance; he took also from the city a eunuch who was in charge of the fighting men, seven of those with right of access to the king who were still in the city, the adjutant-26 general^a whose duty was to muster the people for war, and sixty men of the people who were still there. These Nebuzaradan captain of the guard 27 brought to the king of Babylon at Riblah. There, in the land of Hamath, the king of Babylon had them flogged and put to death. So Judah went into exile from their own land.
- 28 These were the people deported by Nebuchadrezzar in the seventeenth ^b 29 year: three thousand and twenty-three Judaeans. In his eighteenth year, 30 eight hundred and thirty-two people from Jerusalem; in his twenty-third year, seven hundred and forty-five Judaeans were deported by Nebuzaradan the captain of the bodyguard: all together four thousand six hundred people.
- 31^c In the thirty-seventh year of the exile of Jehoiachin king of Judah, on the twenty-fifth day of the twelfth month, Evil-merodach king of Babylon in the year of his accession showed favour to Jehoiachin king of Judah. He 32 brought him out of prison, treated him kindly and gave him a seat at table
 33 above the kings with him in Babylon. So Jehoiachin discarded his prison 34 clothes and lived as a pensioner of the king for the rest of his life. For his maintenance a regular daily allowance was given him by the king of Babylon as long as he lived, to the day of his death.

LAMENTATIONS

Sorrows of captive Zion

- 1 How solitary lies the city, once so full of people!
 Once great among nations, now become a widow;
 once queen among provinces, now put to forced labour!
- 2 Bitterly she weeps in the night,
 tears run down her cheeks;
 she has no one to bring her comfort
 among all that love her;
 all her friends turned traitor
 and became her enemies.
- 3 Judah went into the misery of exile
 and endless servitude.
 Settled among the nations,
 she found no resting-place;
 all her persecutors fell upon her in her sore straits.

^b Prob. rdg.; Heb. seventh.

^c Verses 31-34: cp. 2 Kgs. 25. 27-30.

The paths to Zion mourn,
 for none attend her sacred feasts;
 all her gates are desolate.
 Her priests groan and sigh,
 her virgins are cruelly treated.
 How bitter is her fate!
 Her adversaries have become her masters,
 her enemies take their ease,
 for the LORD has cruelly punished her because of misdeeds without number;
 her young children have gone,
 driven away captive by the enemy.
 All majesty has vanished
 from the daughter of Zion.
 Her princes have become like deer that can find no pasture and run on, their strength all spent, pursued by the hunter.
 Jerusalem has remembered her days of misery and wandering,^a when her people fell into the power of the adversary and there was no one to help her.
 The adversary saw and mocked
 at her fallen state.
 Jerusalem had sinned greatly,
 and so she was treated like a filthy rag;
 all those who had honoured her held her cheap,
 for they had seen her nakedness.
 What could she do but sigh and turn away?
 Uncleaness clung to her skirts,
 and she gave no thought to her fate.
 Her fall was beyond belief and there was no one to comfort her.
 Look, LORD, upon her misery,
 see how the enemy has triumphed.
 The adversary stretched out his hand to seize all her treasures;
 then it was that she saw Gentiles
 entering her sanctuary, Gentiles forbidden by thee to enter the assembly, for it was thine.
 All her people groaned,
 they begged for bread;
 they sold their treasures for food
 to give them strength again.

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds all her treasures which have been from days of old.

Look, O LORD, and see how cheap I am accounted.
 Is it of no concern to you who pass by?
 If only you would look and see:
 is there any agony like mine,
 like these my torments with which the LORD has cruelly punished me in the day of his anger?
 He sent down fire from heaven,
 it ran through my bones;
 he spread out a net to catch my feet,
 and turned me back;
 he made me an example of desolation,
 racked with sickness all day long.
 My transgressions were bound^a upon me,
 his own hand knotted them round me;
 his yoke was lifted on to my neck,
 my strength failed beneath its weight;
 the Lord abandoned me to its hold,^b and I could not stand.

The Lord treated with scorn
 all the mighty men within my walls;
 he marshalled rank on rank against me
 to crush my young warriors.
 The Lord trod down, like grapes in the press,
 the virgin daughter of Judah.
 For these things I weep over my plight,^c
 my eyes run with tears;
 for any to comfort me and renew my strength are far to seek;
 my sons are an example of desolation,
 for the enemy is victorious.

Zion lifted her hands in prayer,
 but there was no one to comfort her;
 the LORD gave Jacob's enemies the order to beset him on every side.
 Jerusalem became a filthy rag in their midst.

The LORD was in the right;
 it was I who rebelled against his commands.
 Listen, O listen, all you nations,
 and look on my agony:
 my virgins and my young men are gone into captivity.
 I called to my lovers, they broke faith with me;
 my priests and my elders in the city went hungry and could find nothing,

^a bound: prob. rdg.; Heb. word unknown.

although they sought food for themselves to renew their strength.
 See, LORD, how sorely I am distressed. 20
 My bowels writhe in anguish
 and my stomach turns within me, because I wantonly rebelled.
 The sword makes orphans in the streets,
 as plague does within doors.
 Hear me when I groan 21
 with no one to comfort me.
 All my enemies, when they heard of my calamity, rejoiced at what thou hadst done;
 but hasten the day thou hast promised when they shall become like me.
 Let all their evil deeds come before thee; 22 torment them in their turn,
 as thou hast tormented me
 for all my transgressions;
 for my sighs are many and my heart is faint.

Zion's hope of relief after punishment

What darkness the Lord in his anger 2 has brought upon the daughter of Zion!
 He hurled down from heaven to earth
 the glory of Israel, and did not remember in the day of his anger
 that Zion was his footstool.
 The Lord overwhelmed without pity 2
 all the dwellings of Jacob.
 In his wrath he tore down
 the strongholds of the daughter of Judah;
 he levelled with the ground and desecrated
 the kingdom and its rulers.
 In his anger he hacked down 3
 the horn of Israel's pride, he withdrew his helping hand
 when the enemy came on;
 and he blazed in Jacob like flaming fire
 that rages far and wide.
 In enmity he strung his bow; 4
 he took his stand like an adversary and with his strong arm he slew
 all those who had been his delight;
 he poured his fury out like fire
 on the tent of the daughter of Zion.
 The Lord played an enemy's part 5
 and overwhelmed Israel.

- He overwhelmed all their towered mansions and brought down their strongholds in ruins; sorrow upon sorrow he brought to the daughter of Judah.
- 6 He stripped his tabernacle as a vine is stripped,
and made the place of assembly a ruin.
In Zion the LORD blotted out all memory of festal assembly^a and of sabbath;
king and priest alike he scorned
in the grimness of his anger.
- 7 The Lord spurned his own altar and laid a curse upon his sanctuary.
He delivered the walls of her mansions into the power of the enemy;
in the LORD's very house they raised shouts of victory
as on a day of festival.
- 8 The LORD was minded to bring down in ruins
the walls of the daughter of Zion;
he took their measure with his line
and did not scruple to demolish her;
he made rampart and wall lament,
and both together lay dejected.
- 9 Her gates are sunk into the earth,
he has shattered and broken their bars;
her king and her rulers are among the Gentiles, and there is no law;
her prophets too have received no vision from the LORD.
- 10 The elders of the daughter of Zion sit on the ground and sigh;
they have cast dust on their heads and clothed themselves in sackcloth;
the virgins of Jerusalem
bow their heads to the ground.
- 11 My eyes are blinded with tears,
my bowels writhe in anguish.
In my bitterness my bile is spilt on the earth
because of my people's wound,
when children and infants faint
in the streets of the town and cry to their mothers,
- 12 'Where can we get corn and wine?'—
when they faint like wounded things in the streets of the city, gasping out their lives
in their mothers' bosom.

^a festal assembly: or appointed seasons.

- How can I cheer you? Whose plight is like yours,
daughter of Jerusalem? 13
To what can I compare you for your comfort, virgin daughter of Zion?
For your wound gapes wide as the ocean;
who can heal you?
The visions that your prophets saw for you 14
were false and painted shams;
they did not bring home to you your guilt
and so reverse your fortunes.
The visions that they saw for you were delusions, false and fraudulent.^a All those who pass by 15
snap their fingers at you;
they hiss and wag their heads at you,
daughter of Jerusalem:
'Is this the city once called Perfect in beauty,
Joy of the whole earth?'
All your enemies 16
make mouths and jeer at you;
they hiss and grind their teeth, saying, 'Here we are,
this is the day we have waited for;
we have lived to see it.'
- The LORD has done what he planned to do, 17
he has fulfilled his threat,
all that he ordained from days of old.
He has demolished without pity and let the enemy rejoice over you, filling your adversaries with pride.
Cry with a full heart^b to the Lord, 18
O wall of the daughter of Zion;
let your tears run down like a torrent
by day and by night.
Give yourself not a moment's rest,
let your tears never cease.
Arise and cry aloud in the night; 19
at the beginning of every watch pour out your heart like water in the Lord's very presence.
Lift up your hands to him for the lives of your children.^c

who is it that thou hast thus tormented?

- Must women eat the fruit of their wombs,
the children they have brought safely to birth?
Shall priest and prophet be slain
in the sanctuary of the Lord?
21 There in the streets young men and old lie on the ground.
My virgins and my young men have fallen
by sword and by famine;
thou hast slain them in the day of thy anger, slaughtered them without pity.
22 Thou didst summon my enemies against me from every side,
like men assembling for a festival;
not a man escaped, not one survived
in the day of the LORD's anger.
All whom I brought safely to birth and reared were destroyed by my enemies.
- 3 I am the man who has known affliction,
I have felt the rod of his wrath.
2 It was I whom he led away and left to walk in darkness, where no light is.
3 Against me alone he has turned his hand,
and so it is all day long.
4 He has wasted away my flesh and my skin and broken all my bones;
5 he has built up walls around me,
behind and before,
6 and has cast me into a place of darkness
like a man long dead.
7 He has walled me in so that I cannot escape,
and weighed me down with fetters;
8 even when I cry out and call for help,
he rejects my prayer.
9 He has barred my road with blocks of stone and tangled up my way.
10 He lies in wait for me like a bear or a lion lurking in a covert.
11 He has made my way refractory and lamed me and left me desolate.
12 He has strung his bow
and made me the target for his arrows; 13 he has pierced my kidneys with shafts drawn from his quiver.
14 I have become a laughing-stock to all nations,
the target of their mocking songs all day.
15 He has given me my fill of bitter herbs and made me drunk with wormwood.

He has broken my teeth on gravel; fed on ashes, I am racked with pain; peace has gone out of my life, and I have forgotten what prosperity means.	16 17
Then I cry out that my strength has gone and so has my hope in the LORD.	18
The memory of my distress and my wanderings is ^a wormwood and gall. Remember, O remember, and stoop down to me. ^{b c}	19 20
All this I take to heart and therefore I will wait patiently: the LORD's true love is surely not spent, ^d nor has his compassion failed; they are new every morning, so great is his constancy.	21 22 23
The LORD, I say, is all that I have; therefore I will wait for him patiently.	24
The LORD is good to those who look for him, to all who seek him; it is good to wait in patience and sigh for deliverance by the LORD.	25 26
It is good, too, for a man to carry the yoke in his youth. Let him sit alone and sigh if it is heavy upon him; let him lay his face in the dust, and there may yet be hope.	27 28 29
Let him turn his cheek to the smiter and endure full measure of abuse; for the Lord will not cast off his servants ^e for ever.	30 31
He may punish cruelly, yet he will have compassion in the fullness of his love; he does not willingly afflict or punish any mortal man.	32 33
To trample underfoot any prisoner in the land, to deprive a man of his rights in defiance of the Most High, to pervert justice in the courts— such things the Lord has never approved.	34 35 36

- 37 Who can command and it is done,
if the Lord has forbidden it?
- 38 Do not both bad and good proceed
from the mouth of the Most High?
- 39 Why should any man living complain,
any mortal who has sinned?
- 40 Let us examine our ways and put them to the test and turn back to the LORD;
- 41 let us lift up our hearts, not our hands,
to God in heaven.
- 42 We ourselves have sinned and rebelled,
and thou hast not forgiven.
- 43 In anger thou hast turned^a and pursued us
and slain without pity;
- 44 thou hast hidden thyself behind the clouds
beyond reach of our prayers;
- 45 thou hast treated us as offscouring and refuse among the nations.
- 46 All our enemies make mouths
and jeer at us.
- 47 Before us lie hunter's scare and pit, devastation and ruin.
- 48 My eyes run with streams of water
because of my people's wound.
- 49 My eyes stream with unceasing tears
and refuse all comfort,
- 50 while the LORD in heaven looks down and watches my affliction,^b
- 51 while the LORD torments^c me with the fate of all the daughters of my city.
- 52 Those who for no reason were my enemies drove me cruelly like a bird;
- 53 they thrust me alive into the silent pit,
and they closed it over me with a stone;
- 54 the waters rose high above my head,
and I said, 'My end has come.'
- 55 But I called on thy name, O LORD,
from the depths of the pit;
- 56 thou heardest my voice; do not turn a deaf ear
when I cry, 'Come to my relief.'
- 57 Thou wast near when I called to thee;
thou didst say, 'Have no fear.'
- 58 Lord, thou didst plead my cause
and ransom my life;

thou sawest, LORD, the injustice done to me and gavest judgement in my favour ;	59
thou sawest their vengeance, all their plots against me.	60
Thou didst hear their bitter taunts, O LORD, their many plots against me,	61
the whispering, the murmurs of my enemies all the day long.	62
See how, whether they sit or stand, they taunt me bitterly.	63
Pay them back for their deeds, O LORD, pay them back what they deserve.	64
Show them how hard thy heart can be, how little concern thou hast for them.	65
Pursue them in anger and exterminate them from beneath thy heavens. O LORD.	66
How dulled is the gold, how tarnished the fine gold!	4
The stones of the sanctuary ^a lie strewn at every street-corner.
See Zion's precious sons, once worth their weight in finest gold, now counted as pitchers of earthenware made by any potter's hand.	2
Even whales ^b uncover the teat and suckle their young ;	3
but the daughters of my people are cruel as ostriches in the desert.
The sucking infant's tongue cleaves to its palate from thirst ; young children beg for bread but no one offers them a crumb.	4
Those who once fed delicately are desolate in the streets, and those nurtured in purple now grovel on dunghills.	5
The punishment ^c of my people is worse than the penalty ^d of Sodom, which was overthrown in a moment and no one wrung his hands.	6
Her crowned princes ^e were once purer than snow, whiter than milk ; they were ruddier than branching coral, ^f and their limbs were lapis lazuli.	7

- 8 But their faces turned blacker than soot,
and no one knew them in the streets;
the skin was drawn tight over their bones,
dry as touchwood.
- 9 Those who died by the sword were more fortunate than those who died of hunger;
these wasted away, deprived of the produce of the field.
- 10 Tender-hearted women with their own hands
boiled their own children;
their children became their food
in the day of my people's wounding.
- 11 The LORD glutted his rage
and poured forth his anger;
he kindled a fire in Zion,
and it consumed her foundations.
- 12 This no one believed, neither the kings of the earth
nor anyone that dwelt in the world:
that enemy or invader would enter the gates of Jerusalem.
- 13 It was for the sins of her prophets and for the iniquities of her priests, who shed within her walls
the blood of the righteous.
- 14 They wandered blindly in the streets,
so stained with blood
that men would not touch
even their garments.
- 15 'Away, away; unclean!' men cried to them.
'Away, do not come near.'
They hastened away, they wandered among the nations,^a unable to find any resting-place.
- 16 The LORD himself scattered them,
he thought of them no more;
he showed no favour to priests,
no pity for elders.
- 17 Still we strain our eyes,
looking in vain for help.
We have watched and watched for a nation powerless to save us.
- 18 When we go out, we take to by-ways to avoid the public streets;
our days are all but finished,^b
our end has come.

has drawn near, our days are complete.

^b our . . . finished: prob. rdg.; Heb. our end

Our pursuers have shown themselves swifter 19
 than vultures in the sky;
 they are hot on our trail over the hills,
 they lurk to catch us in the wilderness.
 The LORD's anointed, the breath of life to us, 20
 was caught in their machinations;
 although we had thought to live
 among the nations, safe under his protection.

Rejoice and be glad, daughter of Edom, 21
 you who live in the land of Uz.
 Yet the cup shall pass to you in your turn,
 and when you are drunk you will expose yourself to shame.
 The punishment for your sin, daughter of Zion, is now complete, 22 and never again shall you be carried into exile.
 But you, daughter of Edom, your sin shall be punished,
 and your guilt revealed.

A prayer for remembrance and restoration

Remember, O LORD, what has befallen us; 5 look, and see how we are scorned.
 Our patrimony is turned over to strangers 2
 and our homes to foreigners.
 We are like orphans, without a father; 3
 our mothers are like widows.
 We must buy our own water to drink, 4
 our own wood can only be had at a price.
 The yoke is on our necks, we are overdriven; 5
 we are weary and are given no rest.
 We came to terms, now with the Egyptians, 6
 now with the Assyrians, to provide us with food.
 Our fathers sinned and are no more, 7
 and we bear the burden of their guilt.
 Slaves have become our rulers, 8
 and there is no one to rescue us from them.
 We must bring in our food from the wilderness, 9 risking our lives in the scorching heat.^a Our skins are blackened as in a furnace 10
 by the ravages of starvation.
 Women were raped in Zion, 11
 virgins raped in the cities of Judah.
 Princes were hung up by their hands, 12
 and elders received no honour.
 Young men toil to grind corn, 13
 and boys stumble under loads of wood.

^a in the scorching heat: or by the sword.

- 14 Elders have left off their sessions in the gate,
and young men no longer pluck the strings.
- 15 Joy has fled from our hearts,
and our dances are turned to mourning.
- 16 The garlands have fallen from our heads;
woe betide us, sinners that we are.
- 17 For this we are sick at heart,
for all this our eyes grow dim:
- 18 because Mount Zion is desolate
and over it the jackals run wild.
- 19 O LORD, thou art enthroned for ever,
thy throne endures from one generation to another.
- 20 Why wilt thou quite forget us and forsake us these many days?
- 21 O LORD, turn us back to thyself, and we will come back;
renew our days as in times long past.
- 22 For if thou hast utterly rejected us,
then great indeed has been thy anger against us.

THE BOOK OF THE PROPHET EZEKIEL

Ezekiel's call to be a prophet

ON THE FIFTH DAY OF THE FOURTH MONTH in 1 the thirtieth year, while I was among the exiles by the river Kebar, ^a the heavens were opened and I saw a vision of God. On the fifth 2 day of the month in the fifth year of the exile of King Jehoiachin, the word 3 of the LORD came to Ezekiel son of Buzi the priest, in Chaldaea, by the river Kebar, and there the hand of the LORD came upon him.

I saw a storm wind coming from the north, a vast cloud with flashes of 4 fire and brilliant light about it; and within was a radiance like brass, glowing in the heart of the flames. In the fire was the semblance of four living 5 creatures in human form. Each had four faces and each four wings; their 6 7 legs were straight, and their hooves were like the hooves of a calf, glittering like a disc of bronze. Under the wings on each of the four sides were human 8 hands; all four creatures had faces and wings, and their wings touched one 9 another. They did not turn as they moved; each creature went straight forward. Their faces were like this: all four had the face of a man and the 10 face of a lion on the right, on the left the face of an ox and the face of an eagle. Their wings were spread; each living creature had one pair touching 11 its neighbours', ^b while one pair covered its body. They moved straight 12 forward in whatever direction the spirit ^c would go; they never swerved in their course. The appearance of the creatures was as if fire from burning 13 coals or torches were darting to and fro among them; the fire was radiant, and out of the fire came lightning. ^d

As I looked at the living creatures, I saw wheels on the ground, one 15 beside each of the four. ^e The wheels sparkled like topaz, and they were 16 all alike: in form and working they were like a wheel inside a wheel, and 17 when they moved in any of the four directions they never swerved in their course. All four had hubs and each hub had a projection which had the 18 power of sight, ^f and the rims of the wheels were full of eyes all round.
When the living creatures moved, the wheels moved beside them; when 19
the creatures rose from the ground, the wheels rose; they moved in what- 20 ever direction the spirit ^c would go; and the wheels rose together with them, for the spirit of the living creatures was in the wheels. When the one moved, 21 the other moved; when the one halted, the other halted; when the creatures

rose from the ground, the wheels rose together with them, for the spirit of the creatures was in the wheels.

22 Above the heads of the living creatures was, as it were, a vault glittering like a sheet of ice, awe-inspiring, stretched over their heads above them.
 23 Under the vault their wings were spread straight out, touching one another, while one pair covered the body of each. I heard, too, the noise of 24 their wings; when they moved it was like the noise of a great torrent or of a cloud-burst,^a like the noise of a crowd or of an armed camp; when they 25 halted their wings dropped. A sound was heard above the vault over their heads, as they halted with drooping wings. Above the vault over their heads
 26 there appeared, as it were, a sapphire^b in the shape of a throne, and high 27 above all, upon the throne, a form in human likeness. I saw what might have been brass glowing like fire in a furnace from the waist upwards; and from the waist downwards I saw what looked like fire with encircling
 28 radiance. Like a rainbow in the clouds on a rainy day was the sight of that encircling radiance; it was like the appearance of the glory of the LORD.

2 12 When I saw this I threw myself on my face, and heard a voice speaking to me: Man, he said, stand up, and let me talk with you. As he spoke, a spirit came into me and stood me on my feet, and I listened to him speaking. He said to me, Man, I am sending you to the Israelites, a nation of rebels who have rebelled against me. Past generations of them have been
 4 in revolt against me to this very day, and this generation to which I am sending you is stubborn and obstinate. When you say to them, 'These are the words of the Lord GOD', they will know that they have a prophet among them, whether they listen or whether they refuse to listen, because 6 they are rebels. But you, man, must not be afraid of them or of what they say, though they are rebels against you and renegades, and you find yourself sitting on scorpions. There is nothing to fear in what they say, and
 7 nothing in their looks to terrify you, rebels though they are. You must speak my words to them, whether they listen or whether they refuse to 8 listen, rebels that they are. But you, man, must listen to what I say and not be rebellious like them. Open your mouth and eat what I give you.

9 10 Then I saw a hand stretched out to me, holding a scroll. He unrolled it before me, and it was written all over on both sides with dirges and laments
 3 and words of woe. Then he said to me, 'Man, eat what is in front of you, eat this scroll; then go and speak to the Israelites.' So I opened my mouth
 3 and he gave me the scroll to eat. Then he said, 'Man, swallow this scroll I give you, and fill yourself full.' So I ate it, and it tasted as sweet as honey.

4 Man, he said to me, go and tell the Israelites what I have to say to them. You are sent not to people whose speech is thick and difficult, but to 5 Israelites. No; I am not sending you to great nations whose speech is so thick and so difficult that you cannot make out what they say; if however I
 7 had sent you to them they would have listened to you. But the Israelites will refuse to listen to you, for they refuse to listen to me, so brazen are 8 they all and stubborn. But I will make you a match for them. I will make 9 you as brazen as they are and as stubborn as they are. I will make your brow like adamant, harder than flint. Never fear them, never be terrified by them, rebels though they are. And he said to me, Listen carefully, man, to all that I have to say to you, and take it to heart. Go to your fellow-countrymen in exile and speak to them. Whether they listen or refuse to listen, say, 'These are the words of the Lord GOD.'

Then a spirit^a lifted me up, and I heard behind me a fierce rushing sound as the glory of the LORD rose^b from his place. I heard the sound of the living creatures' wings brushing against one another, the sound of the wheels beside them, and a fierce rushing sound. A spirit^a lifted me and carried me along, and I went full of exaltation, the hand of the LORD strong upon me. So I came to the exiles at Tel-abib who were settled by the river Kebar. For seven days I stayed with them, dumbfounded.

At the end of seven days the word of the LORD came to me: Man, I made you a watchman for the Israelites; you will take messages from me and carry my warnings to them. It may be that I pronounce sentence of death on a wicked man:^c if you do not warn him to give up his wicked ways and so save his life, the guilt is his; because of his wickedness he shall die, but I will hold you answerable for his death. But if you have warned him and he still continues in his wicked and evil ways, he shall die because of his wickedness, but you will have saved yourself. Or it may be that a righteous man turns away and does wrong, and I let that be the cause of his downfall; he will die because you have not warned him. He will die for his sin; the righteous deeds he has done will not be taken into account, and I will hold you answerable for his death. But if you have warned the righteous man not to sin and he has not sinned, then he will have saved his life because he has been warned, and you will have saved yourself.

The impending ruin of Jerusalem

THE HAND OF THE LORD CAME UPON ME there, and he said to me, Rise up; go out into the plain, and there I will speak to you. So I rose and went out into the plain; the glory of the LORD was there, like the glory which I had seen by the river Kebar, and I threw myself down on my face. Then a spirit came into me and stood me on my feet, and spoke to me: Go, he said, and shut yourself up in your house. You shall be tied and bound with ropes, man, so that you cannot go out among the people. I will fasten your tongue to the roof of your mouth and you will be unable to speak; you will not be the one to rebuke them, rebels though they are. But when I have something to say to you, I will give you back the power of speech. Then you will say to them, 'These are the words of the Lord GOD.' If anyone will listen, he may listen, and, if he refuses to listen, he may refuse; for they are rebels.

Man, take a tile and set it before you. Draw a city on it, the city of Jerusalem: lay siege to it, erect watch-towers against it, raise a siege-ramp, put mantelets in position, and bring battering-rams against it all round.

if you do not warn him.

3 Then take an iron griddle, and put it as a wall of iron between you and the city. Keep your face turned towards the city; it will be the besieged and you the besieger. This will be a sign to the Israelites.

4 Now lie on your left side, and I will lay Israel's iniquity on you; you shall
5 bear their iniquity for as many days as you lie on that side. Allowing one day for every year of their iniquity, I ordain that you bear it for one hundred
6 and ninety days; thus you shall bear Israel's iniquity. When you have completed all this, lie down a second time on your right side, and bear
7 Judah's iniquity for forty days; I count one day for every year. Then turn your face towards the siege of Jerusalem and bare your arm, and prophesy
8 against it. See how I tie you with ropes so that you cannot turn over from one side to the other until you complete the days of your distress.

9 Then take wheat and barley, beans and lentils, millet and spelt. Mix them all in one bowl and make your bread out of them. You are to eat it during 10 the one hundred and ninety days you spend lying on your side. And you must weigh out your food; you may eat twenty shekels' weight a day,
11 taking it from time to time. Measure out your drinking water too; you may drink a sixth of a hin a day, taking it from time to time. You are to eat
12 your bread baked like barley cakes, using human dung as fuel, and you must bake it where people can see you. Then the LORD said, 'This is the 13 kind of bread, unclean bread, that the Israelites will eat in the foreign lands into which I shall drive them.' But I said, 'O LORD GOD, I have never been 14 made unclean, never in my life have I eaten what has died naturally or been killed by wild beasts; no tainted meat has ever passed my lips.' So he 15 allowed me to use cow-dung instead of human dung to bake my bread.

16 Then he said to me, Man, I am cutting short their daily bread in Jerusalem; people will weigh out anxiously the bread they eat, and measure 17 with dismay the water they drink. So their food and their water will run short until they are dismayed at the sight of one another; they will waste away because of their iniquity.

5 Man, take a sharp sword, take it like a barber's razor and run it over your
2 head and your chin. Then take scales and divide the hair into three. When the siege comes to an end, burn one third of the hair in a fire in the centre
3 of the city; cut up one third with the sword all round the city; scatter one 4 third to the wind, and I will follow it with drawn sword. Take a few of these hairs and tie them up in a fold of your robe. Then take others of them, throw 5 them into the fire and burn them, and out of them fire will come upon all Israel.

5 These are the words of the Lord GOD: This city of Jerusalem I have set 6 among the nations, with other countries around her, and she has rebelled against my laws and my statutes more wickedly than those nations and 7 countries; for her people have rejected my laws and refused to conform to my statutes.

7 Therefore the Lord GOD says: Since you have been more ungrateful than 8 the nations around you and have not conformed to my statutes and have not kept my laws or even the laws of the nations around you, therefore,
8 says the Lord GOD, I, in my turn, will be against you; I will execute judgements in your midst for the nations to see, such judgements as I have never executed before nor ever will again, so abominable have your offences been. Therefore, O Jerusalem, fathers will eat their children and children their fathers in your midst; I will execute judgements on you, and any who are left in you I will scatter to the four winds. As I live, says the Lord GOD, because you have defiled my holy place with all your vile and abominable rites, I in my turn will consume you without pity; I in my turn will not spare you. One third of your people shall die by pestilence and perish by famine in your midst; one third shall fall by the sword in the country round about; and one third I will scatter to the four winds and follow with drawn sword. Then my anger will be spent, I will abate my fury against them and be calm; when my fury is spent they will know that it is I, the LORD, who spoke in jealous passion. I have made you a scandal^a and a reproach to the nations around you, and all who pass by will see it. You will be an object of reproach and abuse, a terrible lesson to the nations around you, when I pass sentence on you and do judgement in anger and fury. I, the LORD, have spoken. When I shoot the deadly arrows of famine against you,^b arrows of destruction, I will shoot to destroy you. I will bring famine upon you and cut short your daily bread; I will unleash famine and beasts of prey upon you, and they will leave you childless.

 Pestilence and slaughter will sweep through you, and I will bring the sword upon you. I, the LORD, have spoken.

These were the words of the LORD to me: Man, look towards the mountains of Israel, and prophesy to them: Mountains of Israel, hear the word of the Lord GOD. This is his word to mountains and hills, watercourses and valleys: I am bringing a sword against you, and I will destroy your hill-shrines. Your altars will be made desolate, your incense-altars shattered, and I will fling down your slain before your idols. I will strew the corpses of the Israelites before their idols, and I will scatter your bones about your altars. In all your settlements the blood-spattered altars^c shall be laid waste and the hill-shrines made desolate. Your altars will be waste and desolate and your idols shattered and useless, your incense-altars hewn down, and all your works wiped out; with the slain falling about you, you shall know that I am the LORD. But when they fall,^d I will leave you, among the nations, some who survive the sword. When you are scattered in foreign lands, these survivors, in captivity among the nations, will remember how I was grieved because their hearts had turned wantonly from me and their eyes had gone roving wantonly after idols. Then they will loathe themselves for all the evil they have done with their abominations. So they will know that I am the LORD, that I was uttering no vain threat when I said that I would bring this evil upon them.

These are the words of the Lord GOD: Beat your hands together, stamp with your foot, bemoan your vile abominations, people of Israel. Men will fall by sword, famine, and pestilence. Far away they will die by pestilence; at home they will fall by the sword; any who survive or are spared will die by famine, and so at last my anger will be spent. You will know that I am the LORD when their slain fall among the idols round their altars, on every high hill, on all mountain-tops, under every spreading tree, under every leafy terebinth, wherever they have brought offerings of soothing odour 14 for their idols one and all. So I will stretch out my hand over them and make the land a desolate waste in all their settlements, more desolate than the desert of Riblah.^a They shall know that I am the LORD.

7 12 The word of the LORD came to me: Man, the Lord GOD says this to the land of Israel: An end is coming, the end is coming upon the four corners
 3 of the land.^b The end is now upon you; I will unleash my anger against you; I will call you to account for your doings and bring your abominations
 4 upon your own heads. I will neither pity nor spare you: I will make you suffer for your doings and the abominations that continue in your midst. So you shall know that I am the LORD.

5 These are the words of the Lord GOD: Behold, it comes, disasters one
 6 7 upon another; the end, the end, it comes, it comes.^c Doom is coming upon you, dweller in the land; the time is coming, the day is near, with confusion
 8 and the crash of thunder.^d Now, in an instant, I will vent my rage upon you and let my anger spend itself. I will call you to account for your doings
 9 and bring your abominations upon your own heads. I will neither pity nor spare; I will make you suffer for your doings and the abominations that continue in your midst. So you shall know that it is I, the LORD, who strike the blow.

10 Behold, the day! the doom is here, it has burst upon them. Injustice 11 buds, insolence blossoms, violence shoots up into injustice and wickedness. And it is all their fault, the fault of their turmoil and tumult and 12 all their restless ways. The time has come, the day has arrived; the buyer has no reason to be glad, and the seller none for regret, for I am angry
 13 at all their turmoil. The seller will never go back on his bargain while either of them lives; for the bargain will never be reversed because of the turmoil, and no man will exert himself, even in his iniquity, as long 14 as he lives. The trumpet has sounded and all is ready, but no one goes out to war.

15 Outside is the sword, inside are pestilence and famine; in the country men will die by the sword, in the city famine and pestilence will carry
 16 them off. If any escape and take to the mountains, like moaning doves, there will I slay them, each for his iniquity, while their hands hang limp
 17 and their knees run with urine. They will go in sackcloth, shuddering from head to foot, with faces downcast and heads close shaved. They shall fling
 18 their silver into the streets and cast aside their gold like filth; their silver and their gold will be powerless to save them on the day of the LORD's 19 fury. Their hunger will not be satisfied nor their bellies filled; for their iniquity will be the cause of their downfall. They have fed their pride on 20 their beautiful jewels, which they made into vile and abominable images. Therefore I will treat their jewels like filth, I will hand them over as plunder 21 to foreigners and as booty to the most evil people on earth, and these will defile them. I will turn my face from them and let my treasured land be 22 profaned; brigands will come in and defile it.

Clench your fists, for the land is full of bloodshed^a and the city full of violence. I will let in the scum of nations to take possession of their houses; I will quell the pride of the strong, and their sanctuaries shall be profaned. Shuddering will come over them, and they will look in vain for peace. Tempest shall follow upon tempest and rumour upon rumour. Men will go seeking a vision from a prophet; there will be no more guidance from a priest, no counsel from elders. The king will mourn, the prince will be clothed with horror, the hands of the common people will shake with fright. I will deal with them as they deserve, and call them to account for their doings; and so they shall know that I am the LORD.

Jerusalem's guilt and punishment

ON THE FIFTH DAY OF THE SIXTH MONTH in the sixth year, I was sitting at home and the elders of Judah were with me. Suddenly the hand of the Lord God came upon me, and I saw what looked like a man. He seemed to be all fire from the waist down and to shine and glitter like brass from the waist up. He stretched out what seemed a hand and seized me by the forelock. A spirit^b lifted me up between heaven and earth, carried me to Jerusalem in a vision of God and put me down at the entrance to the inner gate facing north, where stands the image of Lust to rouse lustful passion. The glory of the God of Israel was there, like the vision I had seen in the plain. The LORD said to me, 'Man, look northwards.' I did so, and there to the north of the altar gate, at the entrance, was that image of Lust. 'Man,' he said, 'do you see what they are doing? The monstrous abominations which the Israelites practise here are driving me far from my sanctuary, and you will see even more such abominations.'

Then he brought me to the entrance of the court, and I looked and found a hole in the wall. 'Man,' he said to me, 'dig through the wall.' I did so, and it became an opening. 'Go in,' he said, 'and see the vile abominations they practise here.' So I went in and saw figures of reptiles, beasts, and vermin, and all the idols of the Israelites, carved round the walls. Seventy elders of Israel were standing in front of them, with Jaazaniah son of Shaphan in the middle, and each held a censer from which rose the fragrant smoke of incense. 'Man,' he said to me, 'do you see what the elders of Israel are doing in darkness, each at the shrine of his own carved image? They think that the LORD does not see them, or that he has forsaken the country. You will see', he said, 'yet more monstrous abominations which they practise.'

Then he brought me to that gateway of the LORD's house which faces north; and there I saw women sitting and wailing for Tammuz. 'Man, do you see that?' he asked me. 'But you will see abominations more monstrous than these.' So he took me to the inner court of the LORD's house, and there, by the entrance to the sanctuary of the LORD, between porch and altar, were some twenty-five men with their backs to the sanctuary and their faces to the east, prostrating themselves to the rising

17 sun. He said to me, 'Man, do you see that? Is it because they think these abominations a trifle, that the Jews have filled the country with violence? They provoke me further to anger, even while they seek to appease me; 18 I will turn upon them in my rage; I will neither pity nor spare. Loudly as they may cry to me, I will not listen.'

9 A loud voice rang in my ears: 'Here they come, those appointed to 2 punish the city, each carrying his weapon of destruction.' Then I saw six men approaching from the road that leads to the upper northern gate, each carrying a battle-axe, one man among them dressed in linen, with pen 3 and ink at his waist; and they halted by the altar of bronze. Then the glory of the God of Israel rose from above the cherubim. He came to the terrace of the temple and called to the man dressed in linen with pen and ink at 4 his waist. 'Go through the city, through Jerusalem,' said the LORD, 'and put a mark on the foreheads of those who groan and lament over the 5 abominations practised there.' Then I heard him say to the others, 'Follow 6 him through the city and kill without pity; spare no one. Kill and destroy them all, old men and young, girls, little children and women, but touch no one who bears the mark. Begin at my sanctuary.' So they began with 7 the elders in front of the temple. 'Defile the temple,' he said, 'and fill the courts with dead bodies; then go out into the city and kill.'

8 While they did their work, I was left alone; and I threw myself upon my face, crying out, 'O LORD GOD, must thou destroy all the Israelites who are 9 left, pouring out thy anger on Jerusalem?' He answered, 'The iniquity of Israel and Judah is great indeed; the land is full of murder, the city is filled with injustice. They think the LORD has forsaken this country; they think 10 he sees nothing. But I will neither pity nor spare them; I will make them 11 answer for all they have done.' Then the man dressed in linen with pen and ink at his waist came and made his report: 'I have done what thou hast commanded.'

10 Then I saw, above the vault over the heads of the cherubim, as it were a 2 throne of sapphire^a visible above them. The LORD said to the man dressed in linen, 'Come in between the circling wheels under the cherubim, and take a handful of the burning embers lying among the cherubim; then 3 toss them over the city.' So he went in before my eyes.

4 The cherubim stood on the right side of the temple as a man enters, and a cloud filled the inner court. The glory of the LORD rose high from above the cherubim and moved on to the terrace; and the temple was filled with 5 the cloud, while the radiance of the glory of the LORD filled the court. The sound of the wings of the cherubim could be heard as far as the outer 6 court, as loud as if God Almighty were speaking. Then he told the man dressed in linen to take fire from between the circling wheels and among 7 the cherubim; the man came and stood by a wheel, and a cherub from among the cherubim put its hand into the fire that lay among them, and, taking some fire, gave it to the man dressed in linen; and he received it and went out.

8 Under the wings of the cherubim there appeared what seemed a human 9 hand. And I saw four wheels beside the cherubim, one wheel beside each cherub. They had the sparkle of topaz, and all four were alike, like a wheel inside a wheel. When the cherubim moved in any of the four directions, they never swerved in their course; they went straight on in the direction in which their heads were turned, never swerving in their course. Their whole bodies, their backs and hands and wings, as well as the wheels, were full of eyes all round the four of them.^a The whirring of the wheels sounded in my ears. Each had four faces: the first was that of a cherub, the second that of a man, the third that of a lion, and the fourth that of an eagle.

Then the cherubim raised themselves up, those same living creatures I had seen by the river Kebar. When the cherubim moved, the wheels moved beside them; when the cherubim lifted their wings and rose from the ground, the wheels did not turn away from them. When the one halted, the other halted; when the one rose, the other rose; for the spirit of the creatures was in the wheels. Then the glory of the LORD left the temple terrace and halted above the cherubim. The cherubim lifted their wings and raised themselves from the ground; I watched them go with the wheels beside them. They halted at the eastern gateway of the LORD's house, and the glory of the God of Israel was over them.

These were the living creatures I had seen beneath the God of Israel at the river Kebar; I knew that they were cherubim. Each had four faces and four wings and the semblance of human hands under their wings. Their faces were like those I had seen in vision by the river Kebar;^b they moved, each one of them, straight forward.

A spirit^c lifted me up and brought me to the eastern gate of the LORD's house, the gate that faces east. By the doorway were twenty-five men, and I saw among them two of high office, Jaazaniah son of Azzur and Pelatiah son of Benaiah. The LORD said to me, Man, it is these who are planning mischief and plotting trouble in this city, saying to themselves, 'There will be no building of houses yet awhile; the city is a stewpot and we are the meat in it.' Therefore, said he, prophesy against them, prophesy, O man. Then the spirit of the LORD came suddenly upon me, and he told me to say, These are the words of the LORD: This is what you are saying to yourselves, you men of Israel; well do I know the thoughts that rise in your mind. You have killed and killed in this city and heaped the streets with the slain. These, therefore, are the words of the Lord GOD: The bodies of the slain that you have put there, it is they that are the meat. The city is indeed the stewpot, but I will take you out of it. It is a sword that you fear, and a sword I will bring upon you, says the Lord GOD. I will take you out of it; I will give you over to a foreign power; I will bring you to justice. You too shall fall by the sword when I judge you on the frontier of Israel; thus you shall know that I am the LORD. So the city will not be your stewpot, nor you the meat in it. On the frontier of Israel I will judge you; thus you shall know that I am the LORD. You have not conformed to my statutes nor kept my laws, but you have followed the laws of the nations around you.

13 While I was prophesying, Pelatiah son of Benaiah fell dead; and I threw myself upon my face, crying aloud, 'O Lord GOD, must thou make an end of all the Israelites who are left?'

14 15 The word of the LORD came to me: Man, they are your brothers, your brothers and your kinsmen, this whole people of Israel, to whom the men who now live in Jerusalem have said, 'Keep your distance from the LORD; the land has been made over to us as our property.' Say therefore, These are the words of the Lord GOD: When I sent them far away among the nations and scattered them in many lands, for a while I became their sanctuary in the countries to which they had gone. Say therefore, These are the words of the Lord GOD: I will gather them from among the nations and assemble them from the countries over which I have scattered them, and I will give them the soil of Israel. When they come into it, they will do away with all their vile and abominable practices. I will give them a different heart and put a new spirit into them; I will take the heart of stone out of their bodies and give them a heart of flesh. Then they will conform to my statutes and keep my laws. They will become my people, and I will become their God. But as for those whose heart is set upon^a their vile and abominable practices, I will make them answer for all they have done. This is the very word of the Lord GOD.

22 Then the cherubim lifted their wings, with the wheels beside them and the glory of the God of Israel above them. The glory of the LORD rose up and left the city, and halted on the mountain to the east of it. And a spirit^b lifted me up and brought me to the exiles in Chaldaea. All this came in a vision sent by the spirit of God, and then the vision that I had seen left me. I told the exiles all that the LORD had revealed to me.

Jerusalem's downfall certain

12 1 2 THE WORD OF THE LORD CAME TO ME: Man, you live among a rebellious people. Though they have eyes they will not see, though they have ears they will not hear, because they are a rebellious people. Therefore, man, pack up what you need for a journey into exile, by day before their eyes; then set off on your journey. When you leave home and go off into exile before their eyes, it may be they will see that they are rebels.

4 Bring out your belongings, packed as for exile; do it by day, before their eyes, and then at evening, still before their eyes, leave home, as if you were going into exile. Next, before their eyes, break a hole through the wall, and carry your belongings out through it. When dusk falls, take your pack on your shoulder, before their eyes, and carry it out, with your face covered so that you cannot see the ground. I am making you a warning sign for the Israelites.

7 I did exactly as I had been told. By day I brought out my belongings, packed as for exile, and at evening I broke through the wall with my hands. When dusk fell, I shouldered my pack and carried it out before their eyes.

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds the heart of.

^b Or wind.

Next morning, the word of the LORD came to me: Man, he said, have not the Israelites, that rebellious people, asked you what you are doing? 8 9 Tell them that these are the words of the Lord GOD: This oracle concerns 10 the prince in Jerusalem, and all the Israelites therein.^a Tell them that you 11 are a sign to warn them; what you have done will be done to them; they will go into exile and captivity. Their prince will shoulder his pack in the 12 dusk and go through a hole made to let him out, with his face covered so that he cannot be seen nor himself see the ground. But I will cast my net 13 over him, and he will be caught in the meshes. I will bring him to Babylon, the land of the Chaldaeans, though he will not see it; and there he will die.
 I will scatter his bodyguard and drive all his squadrons to the four winds; 14
 I will follow them with drawn sword. Then they shall know that I am the 15
 LORD, when I disperse them among the nations and scatter them through many lands. But I will leave a few of them who will escape sword, famine, 16 and pestilence, to tell the whole story of their abominations to the peoples among whom they go; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

And the word of the LORD came to me: Man, he said, as you eat you must 17 18 tremble, and as you drink you must shudder with dread. Say to the com- 19 mon people, These are the words of the Lord GOD about those who live in Jerusalem and about the land of Israel: They will eat with dread and be filled with horror as they drink; the land shall be filled with horror because it is sated with the violence of all who live there. Inhabited cities shall be 20 deserted, and the land shall become a waste. Thus you shall know that I am the LORD.

The word of the LORD came to me: Man, he said, what is this proverb 21 22 current in the land of Israel: 'Time runs on, visions die away'? Say to 23 them, These are the words of the Lord GOD: I have put an end to this proverb; it shall never be heard in Israel again. Say rather to them, The time, with all the vision means, is near. There will be no more false visions, 24 no specious divination among the Israelites, for I, the LORD, will say what 25
 I will, and it shall be done. It shall be put off no longer: in your lifetime, you rebellious people, I will speak, I will act. This is the very word of the Lord GOD.

The word of the LORD came to me: Man, he said, the Israelites say that 26 27
 the vision you now see is not to be fulfilled for many years: you are pro- 28 phesying of a time far off. Say to them, These are the words of the Lord GOD: No word of mine shall be delayed; even as I speak it shall be done.
 This is the very word of the Lord GOD.

The LORD said to me, Man, prophesy of the prophets of Israel; prophesy, 13 1 2 and say to those who prophesy out of their own hearts, Hear what the LORD says: These are the words of the Lord GOD: Oh, the wicked folly of the 3 prophets! Their inspiration comes from themselves; they have seen no vision. Your prophets, Israel, have been like jackals among ruins. They have 4 5 not gone up into the breach to repair the broken wall round the Israelites, that they may stand firm in battle on the day of the LORD. Oh, false vision 6 and lying divination! Oh, those prophets who say, 'It is the very word of the LORD', when it is not the LORD who has sent them; yet they expect their

^a therein: prob. rdg.; Heb. among them.

7 words to control the event. Is it not a false vision that you prophets have seen? Is not your divination a lie? You call it the very word of the LORD, but it is not I who have spoken.

8 These, then, are the words of the Lord GOD: Because your words are 9 false and your visions a lie, I am against you, says the Lord GOD. I will raise my hand against the prophets whose visions are false, whose divinations are a lie. They shall have no place in the counsels of my people; they shall not be entered in the roll of Israel nor set foot upon its soil. Thus 10 you shall know that I am the Lord GOD. Rightly, for they have misled my people by saying that all is well when all is not well. It is as if they were 11 building a wall and used whitewash for the daubing. Tell these daubers that it will fall; rain will pour down in torrents, and I will send hailstones hard as rock streaming down and I will unleash a stormy wind. When the 12 building falls, men will ask, 'Where is the plaster you should have used?' So these are the words of the Lord GOD: In my rage I will unleash a stormy 13 wind; rain will come in torrents in my anger, hailstones hard as rock in my fury, until all is destroyed. I will demolish the building which you have
14 daubed with whitewash and level it to the ground, so that its foundations are laid bare. It shall fall, and you shall be destroyed within it; thus you
15 shall know that I am the LORD. I will spend my rage on the building and on those who daubed it with wash; and people^a will say, 'The building is 16 gone and the men who daubed it are gone, those prophets of Israel who prophesied to Jerusalem, who saw visions of prosperity when there was no prosperity.' This is the very word of the Lord GOD.

17 Now turn, man, to the women of your people who prophesy out of their 18 own hearts, and prophesy to them. Say to them, These are the words of the Lord GOD: I loathe you, you women who hunt men's lives by sewing magic bands upon the wrists and putting veils over the heads of persons of every age; are you to hunt the lives of my people and keep your own lives 19 safe? You have violated my sanctity before my people with handfuls of barley and scraps of bread. You bring death to those who should not die, and life to those who should not live, by lying to this people of mine who 20 listen to lies. So these are the words of the Lord GOD: I am against your magic bands with which you hunt men's lives for the excitement of it. I will tear them from your arms and set those lives at liberty, lives that you
21 hunt for the excitement of it. I will tear up your long veils and save my people from you; you shall no longer have power to hunt them. Thus you
22 shall know that I am the LORD. You discouraged the righteous man with lies, when I meant him no hurt; you so strengthened the wicked that he 23 would not abandon his evil ways and be saved; and therefore you shall never see your false visions again nor practise your divination any more. I will rescue my people from your power; and thus you shall know that I am the LORD.

14 Some of the elders of Israel came to visit me, and while they sat with me
2 3 the LORD said to me, Man, these people have set their hearts on their idols and keep their eyes fixed on the sinful things that cause their downfall.
4 Am I to let such men consult me? Speak to them and tell them that these are the words of the Lord GOD: If any Israelite, with his heart set on his idols and his eyes fixed on the sinful things that cause his downfall, comes to a prophet, I, the LORD, in my own person, shall be constrained to answer him, despite his many idols. My answer will grip the hearts of the Israelites, estranged from me as they are, one and all, through their idols. So tell the Israelites that these are the words of the Lord GOD: Turn away, turn away from your idols; turn your backs on all your abominations. If any man, Israelite or alien, renounces me, sets his heart upon idols and fixes his eyes upon the vile thing that is his downfall—if such a man comes to consult me through a prophet, I, the LORD, in my own person, shall be constrained to answer him. I will set my face against that man; I will make him an example and a byword; I will rid my people of him. Thus you shall know that I am the LORD. If a prophet is seduced into making a prophecy, it is I the LORD who have seduced him; I will stretch out my hand and rid my people Israel of him. Both shall be punished; the prophet and the man who consults him alike are guilty. And never again will the Israelites stray from their allegiance, never again defy my will and bring pollution upon themselves; they will become my people, and I will become their God. This is the very word of the Lord GOD.

These were the words of the Lord to me: Man, when a country sins by breaking faith with me, I will stretch out my hand and cut short its daily bread. I will send famine upon it and destroy both men and cattle. Even if those three men were living there, Noah, Danel^a and Job, they would save none but themselves by their righteousness. This is the very word of the Lord GOD. If I should turn wild beasts loose in a country to destroy its inhabitants, until it became a waste through which no man would pass for fear of the beasts, then, if those three men were living there, as I live, says the Lord GOD, they would not save even their own sons and daughters; they would save themselves alone, and the country would become a waste. Or if I should bring the sword upon that country and command it to go through the land and should destroy men and cattle, then, if those three men were living there, as I live, says the Lord GOD, they could save neither son nor daughter; they would save themselves alone. Or if I should send pestilence on that land and pour out my fury upon it in blood, to destroy men and cattle, then, if Noah, Danel and Job were living there, as I live, says the Lord GOD, they would save neither son nor daughter; they would save themselves alone by their righteousness.

These were the words of the Lord GOD: How much less hope is there for Jerusalem when I inflict on her these four punishments of mine, sword and famine, wild beasts and pestilence, to destroy both men and cattle! Some will be left in her, some survivors to be brought out, both sons and daughters. Look at them as they come out to you, and see how they have behaved and what they have done. This will be some comfort to you for all the harm I have done to Jerusalem and all I have inflicted upon her. It will bring you comfort when you see how they have behaved and what they have done; for you will know that it was not without reason that I dealt thus with her. This is the very word of the Lord GOD.

^a Or, as otherwise read, Daniel.

15 These were the words of the LORD to me:
 2 Man, how is the vine better than any other tree,
 than a branch from a tree in the forest?
 3 Is wood got from it fit to make anything useful?
 Can men make it into a peg
 and hang things on it?
 4 If it is put on the fire for fuel,
 if its two ends are burnt by the fire and the middle is charred, is it fit for anything useful?
 5 Nothing useful could be made of it even when whole;
 how much less, when it is burnt by the fire and charred,
 can it be made into anything useful!

6 So these are the words of the Lord GOD:
 I treat the vine, as against forest-trees,
 only as fuel for the fire,
 even so I treat the people of Jerusalem;
 7 I set my face against them.
 Though they escape from the fire, fire shall burn them up.
 Thus you shall know that I am the LORD
 when I set my face against them, 8 making the land a waste
 because they have broken faith.
 This is the very word of the Lord GOD.

16 1 2 The word of the LORD came to me: Man, he said, make Jerusalem see 3 her abominable conduct. Tell her that these are the words of the Lord GOD to her: Canaan is the land of your ancestry and there you were born; an 4 Amorite was your father and a Hittite your mother. This is how you were treated at birth: when you were born, your navel-string was not tied, you were not bathed in water ready for the rubbing, you were not salted as you 5 should have been nor wrapped in swaddling clothes. No one cared for you enough to do any of these things or, indeed, to have any pity for you;
 you were thrown out on the bare ground in your own filth on the day of 6 your birth. Then I came by and saw you kicking helplessly in your own 7 blood; I spoke to you, there in your blood, and bade you live. I tended you like an evergreen plant, like something growing in the fields; you thrive and grew. You came to full womanhood; your breasts became firm and your hair grew, but still you were naked and exposed.
 8 Again I came by and saw that you were ripe for love. I spread the skirt of my robe over you and covered your naked body. Then I plighted my troth and entered into a covenant with you, says the Lord GOD, and you 9 became mine. Then I bathed you in water and washed off the blood and 10 anointed you with oil. I gave you robes of brocade and sandals of stout 11 hide; I fastened a linen girdle round you and dressed you in lawn. For 12 jewellery I put bracelets on your arms and a chain round your neck; I gave you a nose-ring, I put pendants in your ears and a beautiful coronet on your head. You had ornaments of gold and silver, your dresses were of linen, lawn, and brocade. You had flour and honey and olive oil for food, and you grew very beautiful, you grew into a queen. The fame of your beauty went all over the world, for the splendour with which I decked you made it perfect. This is the very word of the Lord GOD.

But you trusted to your beauty and prostituted your fame; you committed fornication, offering yourself freely to any passer-by for your beauty to become his. You took some of your clothes and decked a platform for yourself in gay colours and there you committed fornication; you had intercourse with him for your beauty to become his.^a You took the splendid ornaments of gold and silver which I had given you, and made for yourself male images with which you committed fornication. You covered them with your robes of brocade and offered up my oil and my incense before them. You took the food I had given you, the flour, the oil, and the honey, with which I had fed you, and set it before them as an offering of soothing odour. This is the very word of the Lord GOD.

You took the sons and daughters whom you had borne to me, and sacrificed them to these images for their food. Was this of less account than your fornication? No! you slaughtered my children and handed them over, you surrendered them to your images. With all your abominable fornication you forgot those early days when you lay naked and exposed, kicking helplessly in your own blood.

After all the evil you had done (Oh! the pity of it, says the Lord GOD), you built yourself a couch and constructed a high-stool in every open place. You built up your high-stools at the top of every street and disgraced your beauty, offering your body to any passer-by in countless acts of fornication. You committed fornication with your gross neighbours, the Egyptians, and you provoked me to anger by your countless acts of fornication.

I stretched out my hand against you and cut down your portion. Then I gave you up to women who hated you, Philistine women, who were so disgusted by your lewd ways. Not content with this, you committed fornication with the Assyrians, led them into fornication and still were not content. You committed countless acts of fornication in Chaldaea, the land of commerce, and even with this you were not content.

How you anger me! says the Lord GOD. You have done all this like the imperious whore you are. You have built your couch at the top of every street and constructed your stool in every open place, but, unlike the common prostitute, you have scorned a fee. An adulterous wife who owes obedience to her husband takes a fee from^b strangers. The prostitute also takes her fee; but you give presents to all your lovers, you bribe them to come from all quarters to commit fornication with you. You are the very opposite of other women in your fornication: no one runs after you, you do not receive a fee, you give it. You are the very opposite.

Listen to the words of the LORD, whore that you are. These are the words of the Lord GOD: You have been prodigal in your excesses, you have exposed your naked body in fornication with your lovers. In return for ^a you had intercourse . . . his: prob. rdg.; Heb. obscure.

37 your abominable idols and for the slaughter of the children you have given them, I will gather all those lovers to whom you made advances,^a all whom you loved and all whom you hated. I will gather them in from all 38 quarters against you; I will strip you naked before them, and they shall see your whole body naked. I will put you on trial for adultery and murder, 39 and I will charge you with^b blood shed in jealousy and fury. Then I will hand you over to them. They will demolish your couch and pull down your high-stool; they will strip your clothes off, take away your splendid 40 ornaments, and leave you naked and exposed. They will bring up the mob against you and stone you, they will hack you to pieces with their swords.
 41 They will burn down your houses and execute judgement on you, and many women shall see it. I will put an end to your fornication, and you 42 shall never again give a fee to your lovers. Then I will abate my fury, and my jealousy will turn away from you. I will be calm and will no longer be 43 provoked to anger. For you had forgotten the days of your youth and exasperated me with all your doings: so I in my turn brought retribution upon you for your deeds. This is the very word of the Lord GOD.

44 Did you not commit these obscenities, as well as all your other abominations? Dealers in proverbs will say of you, 'Like mother, like daughter.'
 45 You are a true daughter of a mother who loathed her husband and children.
 You are a true sister of your sisters who loathed their husbands and chil-46 dren. You are all daughters of a Hittite mother and an Amorite father.
 Your elder sister was Samaria, who lived with her daughters to the north 47 of you; your younger sister, who lived with her daughters to the south of you, was Sodom. Did you not behave as they did and commit the same 48 abominations? You came very near to doing even worse than they. As I live, says the Lord GOD, your sister Sodom and her daughters never be-49 haved as you and your daughters have done. This was the iniquity of your sister Sodom: she and her daughters had pride of wealth and food in 50 plenty, comfort and ease, and yet she never helped the poor and wretched.
 They grew haughty and did deeds abominable in my sight, and I made 51 away with them, as you have seen. Samaria was never half the sinner you have been; you have committed more abominations than she, abominations 52 which have made your sister seem innocent. You must bear the humiliation which you thought your sisters deserved. Your sins are so much more abominable than theirs that they appear innocent in comparison with you;
 and now you must bear your shame and humiliation and make your sisters seem innocent.

53 But I will restore the fortunes of Sodom and her daughters and of 54 Samaria and her daughters, and I will restore yours at the same time. Even though you bring them comfort, you will bear your shame, you will be 55 disgraced for all you have done; but when your sister Sodom and her daughters become what they were of old, and when your sister Samaria and her daughters become what they were of old, then you and your 56 daughters will be restored. Did you not hear and talk much of your sister 57 Sodom in the days of your pride, before your wickedness was exposed, in the days when the daughters of Aram with those about her were disgraced, and the daughters of the Philistines round about, who so despised you?

Now you too must bear the consequences of your lewd and abominable conduct. This is the very word of the LORD. 58

These are the words of the Lord GOD: I will treat you as you have deserved, because you violated a covenant and made light of a solemn oath. 59
But I will remember the covenant I made with you when you were young, 60 and I will establish with you a covenant which shall last for ever. And you 61 will remember your past ways and feel ashamed when you receive your sisters, the elder and the younger. For I will give them to you as daughters, and they shall not be outside your covenant.^a Thus I will establish my 62 covenant with you, and you shall know that I am the LORD. You will 63 remember, and will be so ashamed and humiliated that you will never open your mouth again once I have accepted expiation for all you have done. This is the very word of the Lord GOD.

These were the words of the LORD to me: Man, speak to the Israelites 17 1 2 in allegory and parable. Tell them that these are the words of the Lord 3 GOD:

A great eagle
with broad wings and long pinions, in full plumage, richly patterned,
came to Lebanon.
He took the very top of a cedar-tree,
he plucked its highest twig; 4
he carried it off to a land of commerce, and planted it in a city of merchants.
Then he took a native seed 5
and put it in nursery-ground;
he set it like a willow,
a shoot beside abundant water.
It sprouted and became a vine, 6 sprawling low along the ground and bending its trailing boughs towards him^b with its roots growing beneath him.
So it became a vine, it branched out and put forth shoots.
But there was another great eagle 7
with broad wings and thick plumage;
and this vine gave its roots
a twist towards him;^b it pushed out its trailing boughs towards him, seeking drink from the bed where it was planted, though it had been set 8
in good ground beside abundant water that it might bear shoots and be fruitful and become a noble vine.

^a and they . . . covenant: or though not on the ground of your covenant. ^b Or inwards.

- 9 Tell them that these are the words of the Lord GOD:

Can such a vine flourish?
 Will not its roots be broken off
 and its fruit be stripped,
 and all its fresh sprouting leaves wither,
 until it is uprooted and carried away
 with little effort and few hands?
 10 If it is transplanted, can it flourish?
 Will it not be utterly shrivelled,
 as though by the touch of the east wind,
 on the bed where it ought to sprout?

- 11 12 These were the words of the LORD to me: Say to that rebellious people,
 Do you not know what this means? The king of Babylon came to Jeru-13 salem, took its king and its officers and had them brought to him at Bab-14 ylon. He took a prince of the royal line and made a treaty with him, putting 15 him on his oath. He took away the chief men of the country, so that it should become a humble kingdom unable to raise itself but ready to observe the treaty and keep it in force. But the prince rebelled against him and sent messengers to Egypt, asking for horses and men in plenty. Can such a man prosper? Can he escape destruction if he acts in this way? Can 16 he violate a covenant and escape? As I live, says the Lord GOD, I swear that he shall die in the land of the king who put him on the throne; he made light of his oath and violated the covenant he made with him. He shall die 17 in Babylon. Pharaoh will send no large army, no great host, to protect him in battle; no siege-ramp will be raised, no watch-tower put up, nor will 18 the lives of many men be lost. He has violated a covenant and has made light of his oath. He had submitted, and yet he did all these things; he shall not escape.

- 19 These then are the words of the Lord GOD: As I live, he has made light of the oath he took by me and has violated the covenant I made with him. I will 20 bring retribution upon him; I will cast my net over him, and he shall be caught in its meshes. I will carry him to Babylon and bring him to judge-21 ment there, because he has broken faith with me. In all his squadrons every commander shall fall by the sword; those who are left will be scattered to the four winds. Thus you shall know that it is I, the LORD, who have spoken.

- 22 These are the words of the Lord GOD:

I, too, will take a slip from the lofty crown of the cedar and set it in the soil;
 I will pluck a tender shoot from the topmost branch and plant it.

- 23 I will plant it high on a lofty mountain,
 the highest mountain in Israel.
 It will put out branches, bear its fruit,
 and become a noble cedar.
 Winged birds of every kind will roost under it,
 they will roost in the shelter of its sweeping boughs.

All the trees of the country-side will know 24
 that it is I, the LORD, who bring low the tall tree
 and raise the low tree high,
 who dry up the green tree
 and make the dry tree put forth buds.
 I, the LORD, have spoken and will do it.

THESE WERE THE WORDS OF THE LORD TO ME: What do you all mean 18 1 2
 by repeating this proverb in the land of Israel:

'The fathers have eaten sour grapes,
 and the children's teeth are set on edge?'

As I live, says the Lord GOD, this proverb shall never again be used in 3 Israel. Every living soul belongs to me; father and son alike are mine. The 4 soul that sins shall die.

Consider the man who is righteous and does what is just and right. He 5 6 never feasts at mountain-shrines, never lifts his eyes to the idols of Israel, never dishonours another man's wife, never approaches a woman during her periods. He oppresses no man, he returns the debtor's pledge, he never 7 robs. He gives bread to the hungry and clothes to those who have none.
 He never lends either at discount or at interest. He shuns injustice 8 and deals fairly between man and man. He conforms to my statutes and 9 loyally observes my laws. Such a man is righteous: he shall live, says the Lord God.

He may have a son who is a man of violence and a cut-throat who turns 10 his back on these rules.^a He obeys none of them, he feasts at mountain-shrines, he dishonours another man's wife, he oppresses the unfortunate 11 and the poor, he is a robber, he does not return the debtor's pledge, he lifts his eyes to idols and joins in abominable rites; he lends both at 12 discount and at interest. Such a man shall not live. Because he has com- 13 mitted all these abominations he shall die, and his blood will be on his own head.

This man in turn may have a son who sees all his father's sins; he sees, 14 but he commits none of them. He never feasts at mountain-shrines, never lifts his eyes to the idols of Israel, never dishonours another man's wife. 15
 He oppresses no man, takes no pledge, does not rob. He gives bread to the 16 hungry and clothes to those who have none. He shuns injustice, he never 17 lends either at discount or at interest. He keeps my laws and conforms to my statutes. Such a man shall not die for his father's wrongdoing; he shall live.

His father may have been guilty of oppression and robbery and may have 18 lived an evil life among his kinsfolk, and so has died because of his iniquity.
 You may ask, 'Why is the son not punished for his father's iniquity?' 19
 Because he has always done what is just and right and has been careful to obey all my laws, therefore he shall live. It is the soul that sins, and no 20 other, that shall die; a son shall not share a father's guilt, nor a father his son's. The righteous man shall reap the fruit of his own righteousness, and the wicked man the fruit of his own wickedness.

21 It may be that a wicked man gives up his sinful ways and keeps all my laws, doing what is just and right. That man shall live; he shall not die.
 22 None of the offences he has committed shall be remembered against him; he shall live because of his righteous deeds. Have I any desire, says the Lord GOD, for the death of a wicked man? Would I not rather that he should mend his ways and live?

24 It may be that a righteous man turns back from his righteous ways and commits every kind of abomination that the wicked practise; shall he do this and live? No, none of his former righteousness will be remembered in his favour; he has broken his faith, he has sinned, and he shall die. You say that the Lord acts without principle? Listen, you Israelites, it is you who
 26 act without principle, not I. If a righteous man turns from his righteousness, takes to evil ways and dies,^a it is because of these evil ways that he dies.
 27 Again, if a wicked man turns from his wicked ways and does what is just and right, he will save his life. If he sees his offences as they are and turns his back on them all, then he shall live; he shall not die.

29 'The Lord acts without principle', say the Israelites. No, Israelites, it is you who act without principle, not I. Therefore, Israelites, says the Lord GOD, I will judge every man of you on his deeds. Turn, turn from 31 your offences, or your iniquity will be your downfall. Throw off the load of your past misdeeds; get yourselves a new heart and a new spirit. Why 32 should you die, you men of Israel? I have no desire for any man's death. This is the very word of the Lord GOD.

19 1 2 Raise a lament over the princes of Israel and say:

Your mother was a lioness
 among the lions!
 She made her lair among the young lions and many were the cubs she bore.
 3 One of her cubs she raised,
 and he grew into a young lion.
 He learnt to tear his prey,
 he devoured men.
 4 Then the nations shouted at^b him
 and he was caught in their pit,
 and they dragged him with hooks to the land of Egypt.
 5 His case, she saw, was desperate, her hope was lost;
 so she took another of her cubs
 and made him a young lion.
 6 He prowled among the lions and acted like a young lion.
 He learnt to tear his prey,
 he devoured men;
 7 he broke down their palaces, laid their cities in ruins.

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds because of them.

^b shouted at: or heard a report about.

The land and all that was in it was aghast at the noise of his roaring.
 From the provinces all round 8
 the nations raised the hue and cry;
 they cast their net over him
 and he was caught in their pit.
 With hooks they drew him into a cage 9
 and brought him to the king of Babylon, who flung him into prison,
 that his voice might never again be heard on the mountains of Israel.

Your mother was a vine in a vineyard^a 10 planted by the waterside.
 It grew fruitful and luxuriant,
 for there was water in plenty.
 It had stout branches, 11
 fit to make sceptres for those who bear rule.
 It grew tall, finding its way through the foliage,
 and conspicuous for its height and many trailing boughs.
 But it was torn up in anger and^d thrown to the ground; 12
 the east wind blighted it,
 its fruit was blown off,
 its strong branches were blighted,
 and fire burnt it.

Now it is replanted in the wilderness, 13
 in a dry and thirsty land;
 and fire bursts forth from its own branches 14
 and burns up its shoots.^b
 It has no strong branch any more to make a sceptre for those who bear rule.

This is the lament and as a lament it passed into use.

ON THE TENTH DAY OF THE FIFTH MONTH in the seventh year, some 20 of the elders of Israel came to consult the LORD and were sitting with me.
 Then this word came to me from the LORD: Man, say to the elders of 2 3 Israel, This is the word of the Lord GOD: Do you come to consult me? As I live, I will not be consulted by you. This is the very word of the Lord GOD.

Will you judge them? Will you judge them, O man? Then tell them of 4 the abominations of their forefathers and say to them, These are the words 5 of the Lord GOD: When I chose Israel, with uplifted hand I bound myself by oath to the race of Jacob and revealed myself to them in Egypt; I lifted 6 up my hand and declared: I am the LORD your God. On that day I swore 6 with hand uplifted that I would bring them out of Egypt into the land I had sought out for them, a land flowing with milk and honey, fairest of all 7 lands. I told them, every one, to cast away the loathsome things on which they feasted their eyes and not to defile themselves with the idols of Egypt. I am the LORD your God, I said.

- 8 But they rebelled against me, they refused to listen to me, and not one of them cast away the loathsome things on which he feasted his eyes or forsook the idols of Egypt. I had thought to pour out my wrath and exhaust
9 my anger on them in Egypt. I acted for the honour of my name, that it might not be profaned in the sight of the nations among whom Israel was 10 living: I revealed myself to them by bringing Israel out of Egypt. I brought them out of Egypt and led them into the wilderness. There I gave my 11 statutes to them and taught them my laws, so that by keeping them men might have life. Further, I gave them my sabbaths as a sign between us,
12 so that they should know that I, the LORD, was hallowing them for myself. But the Israelites rebelled against me in the wilderness; they did not conform
13 to my statutes, they rejected my laws, though by keeping them men might have life, and they utterly desecrated my sabbaths. So again I 14 thought to pour out my wrath on them in the wilderness to destroy them. I acted for the honour of my name, that it might not be profaned in the sight of the nations who had seen me bring them out.

- 15 Further, I swore to them in the wilderness with uplifted hand that I would not bring them into the land I had given them, that land flowing 16 with milk and honey, fairest of all lands. For they had rejected my laws, they would not conform to my statutes and they desecrated my sabbaths,
17 because they loved to follow idols of their own. Yet I pitied them too much to destroy them and did not make an end of them in the wilderness. I com-
18 manded their sons in the wilderness not to conform to their fathers' statutes, nor observe their laws, nor defile themselves with their idols.
19 I said, I am the LORD your God, you must conform to my statutes; you must observe my laws and act according to them. You must keep my 20 sabbaths holy, and they will become a sign between us; so you will know that I am the LORD your God.

- 21 But the sons too rebelled against me. They did not conform to my statutes or observe my laws, though any who had done so would have had life through them, and they desecrated my sabbaths. Again I thought to pour out my wrath and exhaust my anger on them in the wilderness.
22 I acted for the honour of my name, that it might not be profaned in the sight of the nations who had seen me bring them out. Yes, and in the 23 wilderness I swore to them with uplifted hand that I would disperse them among the nations and scatter them abroad, because they had disobeyed
24 my laws, rejected my statutes, desecrated my sabbaths, and turned longing eyes toward the idols of their forefathers. I did more; I imposed on them
25 statutes that were not good statutes, and laws by which they could not win life. I let them defile themselves with gifts to idols; I made them surrender 26 their eldest sons to them so that I might fill them with horror. Thus they would know that I am the LORD.

- 27 Speak then, O man, to the Israelites and say to them, These are the words of the Lord GOD: Once again your forefathers insulted me and broke faith 28 with me: when I brought them into the land which I had sworn with uplifted hand to give them, they marked down every hill-top and every leafy tree, and there they offered their sacrifices, they made the gifts which roused my anger, they set out their offerings of soothing odour and poured out their drink-offerings. I asked them, What is this hill-shrine to which you are going up? And 'hill-shrine' has been its name ever since. 29

So tell the Israelites, These are the words of the Lord GOD: Are you defiling yourselves as your forefathers did? Are you wantonly giving yourselves to their loathsome gods? When you bring your gifts, when you pass your sons through the fire, you are still defiling yourselves in the service of your crowd of idols. How can I let you consult me, men of Israel? As I live, says the Lord GOD, I will not be consulted by you. When you say to yourselves, 'Let us become like the nations and tribes of other lands and worship wood and stone', you are thinking of something that can never be. As I live, says the Lord GOD, I will reign over you with a strong hand, with arm outstretched and wrath outpoured. I will bring you out from the peoples and gather you from the lands over which you have been scattered by my strong hand, my outstretched arm and outpoured wrath. I will bring you into the wilderness of the peoples; there will I confront you, and there will I state my case against you. Even as I did in the wilderness of Egypt against your forefathers, so will I state my case against you. This is the very word of the Lord GOD. 30 31 32 33 34 35 36

I will pass you under the rod and bring you within the bond^a of the covenant. I will rid you of those who revolt and rebel against me. I will take them out of the land where they are now living, but they shall not set foot on the soil of Israel. Thus shall you know that I am the LORD. 37 38

Now, men of Israel, these are the words of the Lord GOD: Go, sweep away your idols, every man of you. So in days to come you will never be disobedient to me or desecrate my holy name with your gifts and your idolatries. But on my holy hill, the lofty hill of Israel, says the Lord GOD, there shall the Israelites serve me in the land, every one of them. There will I receive them with favour; there will I demand your contribution and the best of your offerings, with all your consecrated gifts. I will receive your offerings of soothing odour, when I have brought you out from the peoples and gathered you from the lands where you have been scattered. I, and only I, will have your worship, for all the nations to see. 39 40 41

You will know that I am the LORD, when I bring you home to the soil of Israel, to the land which I swore with uplifted hand to give your forefathers. There you will remember your past ways and all the wanton deeds with which you have defiled yourselves, and will loathe yourselves for all the evils you have done. You will know that I am the LORD, when I have dealt with you, O men of Israel, not as your wicked ways and your vicious deeds deserve but for the honour of my name. This is the very word of the Lord GOD. 42 43 44

These were the words of the LORD to me: Man, turn and face towards Teman^b and pour out your words to the south; prophesy to the rough country of the Negeb. Say it, Listen to the words of the LORD. These are the words of the Lord GOD: I will set fire to you, and the fire will consume all the wood, green and dry alike. Its fiery flame shall not be put out, but 45 46

^a Or muster.

^b Or face southward.

- 48 from the Negeb northwards every face will be scorched by it. All men will see that it is I, the LORD, who have set it ablaze; it shall not be put out.
- 49 'Ah no! O Lord GOD,' I cried; 'they say of me, "He deals only in parables."'
- 21 1 2 These were the words of the LORD to me: Man, turn and face towards Jerusalem, and pour out your words against her sanctuary;^a prophesy against the land of Israel. Say to the land of Israel, These are the words of the LORD: I am against you; I will draw my sword from the scabbard and cut off from you both righteous and wicked. It is because I would cut off your righteous and your wicked equally that my sword will be drawn from the scabbard against all men, from the Negeb northwards. All men shall know that I the LORD have drawn my sword; it shall never again be sheathed.
- 6 Groan in their presence, man, groan bitterly until your lungs are bursting.
- 7 When they ask you why you are groaning, say to them, 'I groan at the thing I have heard; when it comes, all hearts melt, all courage fails, all hands fall limp, all men's knees run with urine. It is coming. It is here.' This is the very word of the Lord GOD.
- 8 9 These were the words of the LORD to me: Prophecy, man, and say, This is the word of the Lord:

- A sword, a sword is sharpened and burnished, 10 sharpened to kill and kill again,
burnished to flash^b like lightning.
Ah! the club is brandished, my son,
to defy all wooden idols!
- 11 The sword is given to be burnished ready for the hand to grasp.
The sword—it is sharpened,
it is burnished,
ready to be put into the slayer's hand.
- 12 Cry, man, and howl; for all this falls on my people, it falls on Israel's princes who are delivered over to the sword and are slain with my people.
- 13 Therefore beat your breast in remorse, for it is the test—and what if it is not in truth the club of defiance? This is the very word of the Lord GOD.
- 14 But you, man, prophesy and clap your hands together;
swing the sword twice, thrice:
it is the sword of slaughter,
the great whorl of slaughter whirling about them.
- 15 That their hearts may be troubled and many stumble and fall,
I have set the threat of the sword at all their gates,
the threat of the sword^c made to flash like lightning and drawn to kill.
- 16 Be sharpened, turn right; be unsheathed, turn left, wherever your point is aimed.
- 17 I, too, will clap my hands together and abate my anger. I, the LORD, have spoken.

These were the words of the LORD to me: Man, trace out two roads by which the sword of the king of Babylon may come, starting both of them from the same land. Then carve a signpost, carve it at the point where the highway forks. Mark out a road for the sword to come to the Ammonite city of Rabbah, to Judah, and to Jerusalem at the heart of it. For the king of Babylon halts to take the omens at the parting of the ways, where the road divides. He casts lots with arrows, consults teraphim^a and inspects the livers of beasts. The augur's arrow marked 'Jerusalem' falls at his right hand: here, then,^b he must raise a shout and sound the battle-cry, set battering-rams against the gates, pile siege-ramps and build watch-towers. It may well seem to the people that the auguries are false, whereas they will put me in mind of their wrongdoing, and they will fall into the enemies' hand. These therefore are the words of the Lord GOD: Because you have kept me mindful of your wrongdoing by your open rebellion, and your sins have been revealed in all your acts, because you have kept yourselves in my mind, you will fall into the enemies' hand by force.

You, too, you impious and wicked prince of Israel, your fate has come upon you in the hour of final punishment. These are the words of the Lord GOD: Put off your diadem, lay aside your crown. All is changed; raise the low and bring down the high. Ruin! Ruin! I will bring about such ruin as never was before, until the rightful sovereign comes. Then I will give him all.

Man, prophesy and say, These are the words of the Lord GOD to the Ammonites and to their shameful god:

A sword, a sword drawn for slaughter, burnished for destruction,^c
 to flash like lightning!
 Your visions are false, your auguries a lie, which bid you bring it^d down upon the necks of impious and wicked men, whose fate has come upon them in the hour of final punishment.
 Sheathe it again.
 I will judge you in the place where you were born,
 the land of your origin.
 I will pour out my rage upon you;
 I will breathe out my blazing wrath over you.
 I will hand you over to brutal men,
 skilled in destruction.
 You shall become fuel for fire,
 your blood shall be shed within the land and you shall leave no memory behind.

For I, the LORD, have spoken.

These were the words of the LORD to me: Man, will you judge her, will you judge the murderous city and bring home to her all her abominable

3 deeds? Say to her, These are the words of the Lord GOD: Alas for the city
 4 that sheds blood within her walls and brings her fate upon herself, the city that makes herself idols and is defiled thereby! The guilt is yours for the blood you have shed, the pollution is on you for the idols you have made.
 You have shortened your days by this and brought the end of your years nearer. This is why I exposed you to the contempt of the nations and the 5 mockery of every country. Lands far and near will taunt you with your 6 infamy and gross disorder. In you the princes of Israel, one and all, have 7 used their power to shed blood; men have treated their fathers and mothers with contempt, they have oppressed the alien and ill-treated the orphan 8 and the widow. You have disdained what is sacred to me and desecrated 9 my sabbaths. In you, Jerusalem, informers have worked to procure bloodshed; in you are men who have feasted at mountain-shrines and have 10 committed lewdness. In you men have exposed their fathers' nakedness; 11 they have violated women during their periods; they have committed an outrage with their neighbours' wives and have lewdly defiled their daughters-in-law; they have ravished their sisters, their own fathers' 12 daughters. In you men have accepted bribes to shed blood, and they have exacted discount and interest on their loans. You have oppressed your fellows for gain, and you have forgotten me. This is the very word of the Lord GOD.

13 See, I strike with my clenched fist in anger at your ill-gotten gains and 14 at the bloodshed within your walls. Will your strength or courage stand 15 when I deal with you? I, the LORD, have spoken and I will act. I will disperse you among the nations and scatter you abroad; thus will I rid you 16 altogether of your defilement. I will sift you^a in the sight of the nations, and you will know that I am the LORD.

17 18 These were the words of the LORD to me: Man, to me all Israelites are 19 an alloy, their silver alloyed with copper, tin, iron, and lead.^b Therefore, these are the words of the Lord GOD: Because you have all become alloyed, 20 I will gather you together into Jerusalem, as a mass of silver, copper, iron, lead, and tin is gathered into a crucible for the fire to be blown to full heat to melt them. So will I gather you in my anger and wrath, set you there and 21 melt you; I will collect you and blow up the fire of my anger until you are 22 melted within it. You will be melted as silver is melted in a crucible, and you will know that I, the LORD, have poured out my anger upon you.

23 24 These were the words of the LORD to me: Man, say to Jerusalem, You are like a land on which no rain has fallen; no shower has come down upon 25 you^c in the days of indignation. The princes within her are like lions growling as they tear their prey. They have devoured men, and seized their treasure and all their wealth; they have widowed many women within her 26 walls. Her priests have done violence to my law^d and profaned what is sacred to me. They make no distinction between sacred and common, and lead men to see no difference between clean and unclean. They have dis-27 regarded my sabbaths, and I am dishonoured among them. Her officers within her are like wolves tearing their prey, shedding blood and destroy- 28 ing men's lives to acquire ill-gotten gain. Her prophets use whitewash instead of plaster;^a their vision is false and their divination a lie. They say, 29

 'This is the word of the Lord GOD', when the LORD has not spoken. The common people are bullies and robbers; they ill-treat the unfortunate and the poor, they are unjust and cruel to the alien. I looked for a man among 30 them who could build up a barricade, who could stand before me in the breach to defend the land from ruin; but I found no such man. I poured 31 out my indignation upon them and utterly destroyed them in the fire of my wrath. Thus I brought on them the punishment they had deserved. This is the very word of the Lord GOD.

The word of the LORD came to me: Man, he said, there were once two 23 1 2 women, daughters of the same mother. They played the whore in Egypt, 3 played the whore while they were still girls; for there they let their breasts be fondled and their virgin bosoms pressed. The elder was named Oholah, 4 her sister Oholibah. They became mine and bore me sons and daughters.
 'Oholah' is Samaria, 'Oholibah' Jerusalem. While she owed me obedience 5 Oholah played the whore and was infatuated with her Assyrian lovers, staff officers in blue,^b viceroys and governors, handsome young cavaliers 6 all of them, riding on horseback. She played the whore with all of them, 7 the flower of the Assyrian youth; and she let herself be defiled with all their idols, wherever her lust led her. She never gave up the whorish ways she 8 had learnt in Egypt, where men had lain with her when young, had pressed her virgin bosom and overwhelmed her with their fornication. So I 9 abandoned her to her lovers, the Assyrians, with whom she was infatuated.
 They ravished her, they took her sons and daughters, and they killed her 10 with the sword. She became a byword among women, and judgement was passed upon her.

Oholibah, her sister, had watched her, and she gave herself up to lust 11 and played the whore worse than her sister. She, too, was infatuated with 12 Assyrians, viceroys, governors and staff officers, all handsome young cavaliers, in full dress, riding on horseback. I found that she too had let 13 herself be defiled; both had gone the same way; but she carried her fornication to greater lengths: she saw male figures carved on the wall, sculptured 14 forms of Chaldaeans, picked out in vermilion. Belts were round their waists, and on their heads turbans with dangling ends. All seemed to be 15 high officers and looked like Babylonians, natives of Chaldea. As she looked she was infatuated with them, so she sent messengers to Chaldea 16 for them. And the Babylonians came to her to share her bed, and defiled her with fornication; she was defiled by them until she was filled with revul- 17 sion. She made no secret that she was a whore but let herself be ravished 18 until I was filled with revulsion against her as I was against her sister. She 19 played the whore again and again, remembering how in her youth she had played the whore in Egypt. She was infatuated with their male prostitutes, 20 whose members were like those of asses and whose seed came in floods like that of horses. So, Oholibah, you relived the lewdness of your girlhood in 21
 Egypt when you let your bosom be pressed and your breasts fondled.^c

^a Cp. 13. 8-16.^b Or violet.^c fondled: prob. rdg.; Heb. unintelligible.

22 Therefore these are the words of the Lord GOD: I will rouse them against you, Oholibah, those lovers of yours who have filled you with revulsion, 23 and bring them upon you from every side, the Babylonians and all those Chaldeans, men of Pekod, Shoa, and Koa, and all the Assyrians with them.
 Handsome young men they are, viceroys and governors, commanders and 24 staff officers,^a riding on horseback. They will come against you with war-horses, with chariots and wagons, with a host drawn from the nations, armed with shield, buckler, and helmet; they will beset you on every side.
 I will give them authority to judge, and they will use that authority to judge 25 you. I will turn my jealous wrath loose on you, and they will make you feel their fury. They will cut off your nose and your ears, and in the end you^b 26 will fall by the sword.^c They will strip you of your clothes and take away 27 all your finery. So I will put a stop to your lewdness and the way in which you learnt to play the whore in Egypt. You will never cast longing eyes on such things again, never remember Egypt any more.

28 These are the words of the Lord GOD: I am handing you over to those 29 whom you hate, those who have filled you with revulsion; and they will make you feel their hatred. They will take all you have earned and leave you naked and exposed; that body with which you have played the whore 30 will be ravished. It is your lewdness and your fornication that have brought this upon you, it is because you have followed alien peoples and played 31 the whore and have allowed yourself to be defiled with their idols. You have followed in your sister's footsteps, and I will put her cup into your hand.

32 These are the words of the Lord GOD:

You shall drink from your sister's cup,
 a cup deep and wide,
 charged with mockery and scorn,
 more than ever cup can hold.

33 It^d will be full of drunkenness and grief,
 a cup of ruin and desolation,
 the cup of your sister Samaria;
 34 and you shall drink it to the dregs.

Then you will chew^e it in pieces and tear out your breasts.

This is my verdict, says the Lord GOD.

35 Therefore, these are the words of the Lord GOD: Because you have forgotten me and flung me behind your back, you must bear the guilt of your lewdness and your fornication.

36 The LORD said to me, Man, will you judge Oholah and Oholibah? Then 37 tax them with their vile offences. They have committed adultery, and there is blood on their hands. They have committed adultery with their idols and offered my children to them for food, the children they had borne 38 me. This too they have done to me: they have polluted my sanctuary and your successors. ^c Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds They will take your sons and daughters, and in the end you will be burnt. ^d Prob. rdg.; Heb. You. ^e Or dash.

desecrated my sabbaths. They came into my sanctuary and desecrated it by slaughtering their sons as an offering to their idols; this they did in my own house. They would send for men from a far-off country; and the men came at the messenger's bidding. You bathed your body for these men, you painted your eyes, decked yourself in your finery, you sat yourself upon a bed of state and had a table put ready before it and laid my own incense and my own oil on it. Loud were the voices of the light-hearted crowd; and besides ordinary folk Sabaeans were there, brought from the wilderness; they put bracelets on the women's hands and beautiful garlands on their heads. I thought: Ah that woman, grown old in adultery! Now they will commit fornication with her—with her of all women! They resorted to her as a prostitute; they resorted to Oholah and Oholibah, those lewd women. Upright men will condemn them for their adultery and bloodshed; for adulterous they are, and blood is on their hands.

These are the words of the Lord GOD: Summon the invading host; abandon them to terror and rapine. Let the host stone them and hack them to pieces with their swords, kill their sons and daughters and burn down their houses. Thus I will put an end to lewdness in the land, and other women shall be taught not to be as lewd as they. You shall pay the penalty for your lewd conduct and be punished for your idolatries, and you will know that I am the Lord GOD.

These were the words of the LORD, spoken to me on the tenth day of the tenth month in the ninth year: Man, write down a name for this day, this very day: This is the day the king of Babylon invested Jerusalem. Sing a song of derision to this people of rebels; say to them, These are the words of the Lord GOD:

Set a cauldron on the fire,
 set it on and pour water into it.
 Into it collect the pieces,
 all the choice pieces,
 cram it with leg and shoulder and the best of the bones;
 take the best of the flock.
 Pack the logs^a round it underneath;
 seethe the stew
 and boil the bones in it.
 O city running with blood,
 O pot green with corrosion,
 corrosion that will never be clean!

Therefore these are the words of the Lord GOD:

Empty it, piece after piece,
 though no lot is cast for any of them.
 The city had blood in her midst and she poured it out on the gleaming rock, not on the ground: she did not pour it there for the dust to cover it.

^a Prob. rdg., cp. verse 10; Heb. bones.

- 8 But I too have spilt blood on the gleaming white rock
so that it cannot be covered,
to make anger flare up and to call down vengeance.
- 9 Therefore these are the words of the Lord GOD:
- O city running with blood,
I too will make a great fire-pit.
10 Fill it with logs, light the fire;
make an end of the meat,
pour out all the broth^a and the bones with it.^b
- 11 Then set the pot empty on the coals
so that its copper may be heated red-hot,
and then the impurities in it may be melted
and its corrosion burnt off.
- 12 Try as you may,^c
the corrosion is so deep that it will not come off;
only fire will rid it of corrosion for you.
- 13 Even so, when I cleansed you in your filthy lewdness,
you did not become clean from it, and therefore you shall never again be clean until I have satisfied my anger against you.
- 14 I, the LORD, have spoken; the time is coming, I will act. I will not refrain nor pity nor relent; I will judge you for your conduct and for all that you have done. This is the very word of the Lord GOD.
- 16 These were the words of the LORD to me: Man, I am taking from you at one blow the dearest thing you have, but you must not wail or weep 17 or give way to tears. Keep in good heart; be quiet, and make no mourning for the dead; cover your head as usual and put sandals on your feet. You shall not cover your upper lip in mourning nor eat the bread of despair.
- 18 I spoke to the people in the morning; and that very evening my wife 19 died. Next morning I did as I was told. The people asked me to say what 20 meaning my behaviour had for them. I answered, These were the words 21 of the LORD to me: Tell the Israelites, This is the word of the Lord GOD:
I will desecrate my sanctuary, which has been the pride of your strength, the delight of your eyes and your heart's desire; and the sons and daughters 22 whom you have left behind shall fall by the sword. But, I said, you shall do as I have done: you shall not cover your upper lip in mourning nor eat 23 the bread of despair. You shall cover your head and put sandals on your feet; you shall not wail nor weep. Because of your wickedness you will 24 pine away and will lament to^d one another. The LORD says, Ezekiel will be a sign to warn you, and when it happens you will do as he has done, and you will know that I am the Lord GOD.
- 25 And now, man, a word for you: I am taking from them that fortress whose beauty so gladdened them, the delight of their eyes, their heart's 26 desire; I am taking their sons and their daughters. Soon fugitives will come and tell you their news by word of mouth. At once you will recover the 27 power of speech and speak with the fugitives; you will no longer be dumb. So will you be a portent to them, and they shall know that I am the LORD.

Prophecies against foreign nations

THESE WERE THE WORDS OF THE LORD TO ME: Man, look towards 25 1 2
the Ammonites and prophesy against them. Say to the Ammonites, Listen to the word of the Lord GOD. These are his words: Because you 3 cried 'Aha!' when you saw my holy place desecrated, the soil of Israel laid waste and the people of Judah sent into exile, I will hand you over as a 4 possession to the tribes of the east. They shall pitch their camps and put up their dwellings among you; they shall eat your crops; they shall drink your milk. I will make Rabbah a camel-pasture and Ammon a sheep-walk. 5 Thus you shall know that I am the LORD. These are the words of the Lord 6
GOD: Because you clapped your hands and stamped your feet, and exulted over the land of Israel with single-minded scorn, I will stretch out my hand 7 over you and make you the prey of the nations and cut you off from all other peoples; in every land I will exterminate you and bring you to utter ruin. Thus you shall know that I am the LORD.

These are the words of the Lord GOD: Because Moab said, 'Judah is 8 like all the rest', I will expose the flank of Moab and lay open its cities,^a 9 from one end to the other—the fairest of its cities: Beth-jeshimoth, Baal-meon and Kiriathaim. I will hand over Moab and Ammon together to the 10 tribes of the east to be their possession, so that the Ammonites shall not be remembered among the nations, and so that I may execute judgement 11 upon Moab. Thus they shall know that I am the LORD.

These are the words of the Lord GOD: Because Edom took deliberate 12 revenge on Judah and by so doing incurred lasting guilt, I will stretch 13 my hand out over Edom, says the Lord GOD, and destroy both man and beast in it, laying waste the land from Teman as far as Dedan; they shall fall by the sword. I will wreak my vengeance upon Edom through 14 my people Israel. They will deal with Edom as my anger and fury demand, and it shall feel my vengeance. This is the very word of the Lord God.

These are the words of the Lord GOD: Because the Philistines have 15 taken deliberate revenge and have avenged themselves with single-minded 16 scorn, giving vent to their age-long enmity in destruction, I will stretch out my hand over the Philistines, says the Lord GOD, I will wipe out the Kerethites and destroy all the rest of the dwellers by the sea. I will take 17 fearful vengeance upon them and punish them in my fury. When I take my vengeance, they shall know that I am the LORD.

^a and lay . . . cities: prob. rdg.; Heb. from the cities, from its cities.

- 26 These were the words of the LORD to me on the first day of the first
2 month in the eleventh year: Man, Tyre has said of Jerusalem, Aha! she that was the gateway of the nations is broken,
her gates swing open to me;
I grow rich, she lies in ruins.
- 3 Therefore these are the words of the Lord God:
I am against you, Tyre,
and will bring up many nations against you
as the sea brings up its waves;
4 they will destroy the walls of Tyre and pull down her towers.
I will scrape the soil off her and make her a gleaming rock,
5 she shall be an islet where men spread their nets;
I have spoken, says the Lord God.
She shall become the prey of nations,
6 and her daughters^a shall be slain by the sword in the open country.
- Thus they shall know that I am the LORD.
- 7 These are the words of the Lord GOD: I am bringing against Tyre from the north Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, king of kings. He will come with horses and chariots, with cavalry and a great army.
- 8 Your daughters in the open country
he will put to the sword.
He will set up watch-towers against you, pile up siege-ramps against you and raise against you a screen of shields.
9 He will launch his battering-rams on your walls and break down your towers with his axes.
10 He will cover you with dust from the thousands of his cavalry;
at the thunder of his horses and of his chariot-wheels
your walls will quake when he enters your gates as men enter a city that is breached.
- 11 He will trample all your streets with the hooves of his horses and put your people to the sword, and your strong pillars will fall to the ground.
- 12 Your wealth will become spoil,
your merchandise will be plundered,
your walls levelled,
your pleasant houses pulled down,
your stones, your timber and your rubble
will be dumped into the sea.
- 13 So I will silence the clamour of your songs, and the sound of your harps shall be heard no more.

^a Or daughter-towns.

I will make you a gleaming rock, 14
 a place for fishermen to spread their nets, and you shall never be rebuilt.
 I, the LORD, have spoken.
 This is the very word of the Lord GOD.

These are the words of the Lord GOD to Tyre: How the coasts and 15 islands will shake at the sound of your downfall, while the wounded groan, and the slaughter goes on in your midst! Then all the sea-kings will come 16 down from their thrones, and lay aside their cloaks, and strip off their brocaded robes. They will wear coarse loin-cloths; they will sit on the ground, shuddering at every moment, horror-struck at your fate. Then 17 they will raise this dirge over you:

How you are undone, swept from the sea,
 O famous city!
 You whose strength lay in the sea,
 you and your inhabitants,
 who spread their terror throughout the mainland.^a Now the coast-lands tremble on the day of your downfall, 18 and the isles of the sea are appalled at your passing.

For these are the words of the Lord GOD: When I make you a desolate 19 city, like a city where no man can live, when I bring up the primeval ocean against you and the great waters cover you, I will thrust you down with 20 those that descend to the abyss, to the dead of all the ages. I will make you dwell in the underworld as in places long desolate, with those that go down to the abyss. So you will never again be inhabited or take your place in the land of the living. I will bring you to a fearful end, and you shall be no more; 21 men may look for you but will never find you again. This is the very word of the Lord GOD.

These were the words of the LORD to me: Man, raise a dirge over Tyre 27 1 2 and say, Tyre, throned above your harbours, you who carry the trade of the nations to many coasts and islands, these are the words of the Lord GOD: 3

O Tyre, you said,
 'I am perfect in beauty.'
 Your frontiers are on the high seas, your builders made your beauty perfect; 4
 they fashioned all your timbers of pine from Senir; 5
 they took a cedar from Lebanon
 to raise up a mast over you.
 They made your oars of oaks from Bashan; 6 they made your deck strong^b with box-wood from the coasts of Kittim.
 Your canvas was linen, 7 patterned linen from Egypt
 to make your sails;

^a the mainland: prob. rdg.; Heb. her inhabitants.

^b strong: prob. rdg.; Heb. ivory.

- your awnings were violet and purple
from the coasts of Elishah.
- 8 Men of Sidon and Arvad became your oarsmen;
you had skilled men within you, O Tyre,
who served as your helmsmen.
- 9 You had skilled veterans from Gebal
caulking your seams.
You had all sea-going ships and their sailors to market your wares;
- 10 men of Pharas,^a Lud,^b and Put, served as warriors in your army;
they hung shield and helmet around you,
and it was they who gave you your glory.
- 11 Men of Arvad and Cilicia manned all your walls, men of Gammad were posted on your towers and hung their shields around your battlements;
it was they who made your beauty perfect.
- 12 Tarshish was a source of your commerce, from its abundant resources 13 offering silver and iron, tin and lead, as your staple wares. Javan,^c Tubal, and Meshech dealt with you, offering slaves and vessels of bronze as your 14 imports. Men from Togarmah offered horses, mares, and mules as 15 your staple wares. Rhodians dealt with you, great islands were a source of your commerce, paying what was due to you in ivory and ebony.
- 16 Edom was a source of your commerce, so many were your undertakings, and offered purple garnets, brocade and fine linen, black coral and 17 red jasper,^d for your staple wares. Judah and Israel dealt with you, offering wheat from Minnith, and meal, syrup, oil, and balsam, as your 18 imports. Damascus was a source of your commerce, so many were your undertakings, from its abundant resources offering wine of Helbon and 19 wool of Suhar, and casks of wine from Izalla,^e for your staple wares;
20 wrought iron, cassia, and sweet cane were among your imports. Dedan 21 dealt with you in coarse woollens for saddle-cloths. Arabia and all the chiefs of Kedar were the source of your commerce in lambs, rams, 22 and he-goats; this was your trade with them. Dealers from Sheba and Raamah dealt with you, offering the choicest spices, every kind of precious 23 stone and gold, as your staple wares. Harran, Kanneh, and Eden, dealers 24 from Asshur and all Media, dealt with you; they were your dealers in gorgeous stuffs, violet cloths and brocades, in stores of coloured fabric rolled up and tied with cords; your dealings with them were in these.
- 25 Ships of Tarshish were the caravans for your imports;
you were deeply laden with full cargoes on the high seas.
- 26 Your oarsmen brought you into many waters,
but on the high seas an east wind wrecked you.

Your wealth, your staple wares, your imports, 27
 your sailors and your helmsmen, your caulkers, your merchants, and your warriors,
 all your ship's company,
 all who were with you,
 were flung into the sea on the day of your disaster;
 at the cries of your helmsmen the troubled waters tossed. 28

When all the rowers disembark from their ships, 29
 when the sailors, the helmsmen all together, go ashore, they exclaim over your fate, 30
 they cry out bitterly;
 they throw dust on their heads and sprinkle themselves with ashes.
 They tear out their hair at your plight 31
 and put on sackcloth;
 they weep bitterly over you,
 bitterly wailing.

In their lamentation they raise a dirge over you, 32
 and this is their dirge:
 Who was like Tyre,
 with her buildings piled^a off shore?
 When your wares were unloaded off the sea 33
 you met the needs of many nations;
 with your vast resources and your imports
 you enriched the kings of the earth.
 Now you are broken by the sea 34
 in deep water;
 your wares and all your company are gone overboard.
 All who dwell on the coasts and islands 35
 are aghast at your fate;
 horror is written on the faces of their kings
 and their hair stands on end.
 Among the nations the merchants jeer in derision at you; 36 you have come to a fearful end and shall be no more for ever.

These were the words of the LORD to me: Man, say to the prince of Tyre, This is the word of the Lord God: 28 1 2

In your arrogance you say,
 'I am a god;
 I sit throned like a god on the high seas.'
 Though you are a man and no god,
 you try to think the thoughts of a god.
 What? are you wiser than Daniel^b? 3
 Is no secret too dark for you?

4 Clever and shrewd as you are,
 you have amassed wealth for yourself,
 you have amassed gold and silver in your treasuries;
 5 by great cleverness in your trading you have heaped up riches,
 and with your riches your arrogance has grown.

6 Therefore these are the words of the Lord God:

 Because you try to think the thoughts of a god
 7 I will bring strangers against you,
 the most ruthless of nations,
 who will draw their swords against your fine wisdom
 and lay your pride in the dust, 8 sending you down to the pit^a to die
 a death of disgrace on the high seas.
 9 Will you dare to say that you are a god
 when you face your assailants,
 though you are a man and no god
 in the hands of those who lay you low?
 10 You will die strengthless
 at the hands of strangers.

For I have spoken. This is the very word of the Lord God.

11 12 These were the words of the LORD to me: Man, raise this dirge over the king of Tyre, and say to him, This is the word of the Lord God:

 You set the seal on perfection;
 full of wisdom you were and altogether beautiful.
 13 You were in an Eden, a garden of God, adorned with gems of every kind:
 sardin and chrysolite and jade,
 topaz, cornelian and green jasper,
 lapis lazuli,^b purple garnet and green felspar.
 Your jingling beads were of gold, and the spangles you wore were made for you on the day of your birth.
 14 I set you with a towering cherub^c as guardian;
 you were on God's holy hill
 and you walked proudly among stones that flashed with fire.
 15 You were blameless in all your ways from the day of your birth until your iniquity came to light.
 16 Your commerce grew so great, lawlessness filled your heart and you went wrong,
 so I brought you down in disgrace from the mountain of God, and the guardian cherub banished you^d
 from among the stones that flashed like fire.

you misused your wisdom to increase your dignity. 17

I flung you to the ground,
I left you there, a sight for kings to see.
So great was your sin in your wicked trading · 18
that you desecrated your sanctuaries.

So I kindled a fire within you,
and it devoured you.

I left you as ashes on the ground for all to see.

All among the nations who knew you were aghast: 19
you came to a fearful end and shall be no more for ever.

These were the words of the LORD to me: Man, look towards Sidon and 20 21 prophecy against her. These are the words of the Lord GOD: 22

Sidon, I am against you and I will show my glory in your midst.

Men will know that I am the LORD when I execute judgement upon her and thereby prove my holiness.

I will let loose pestilence upon her 23
and bloodshed in her streets;
the slain will fall in her streets,
beset on all sides by the sword;
then men will know that I am the LORD.

No longer shall the Israelites suffer from the scorn of their neighbours, 24
the pricking of briars and scratching of thorns, and they shall know that I am the Lord God.

These are the words of the Lord GOD: When I gather the Israelites from 25
the peoples among whom they are scattered, I shall thereby prove my holiness in the sight of all nations. They shall live on their native soil, which I gave to my servant Jacob. They shall live there in peace of mind, 26 build houses and plant vineyards; they shall live there in peace of mind when I execute judgement on all their scornful neighbours. Thus they shall know that I am the LORD their God.

These were the words of the LORD to me on the twelfth day of the tenth 29 month in the tenth year: Man, look towards Pharaoh king of Egypt and 2 prophecy against him and all his country. Say, These are the words of the 3
Lord GOD:

I am against you,
Pharaoh king of Egypt,
you great monster,
lurking in the streams of the Nile.
You have said, 'My Nile is my own;
it was I who made it.'

4 I will put hooks in your jaws and make them cling ^a to your scales.

I will hoist you out of its streams with all its fish clinging to your scales.

5 I will fling you into the wilderness,
you and all the fish in your streams;
you will fall on the bare ground
with none to pick you up and bury you;

I will make you food
for beasts and for birds.

6 So all who live in Egypt will know that I am the LORD,

for the support that you gave to the Israelites was no better than a reed,

7 which splintered in the hand when they grasped you,
and tore their armpits;
when they leaned upon you, you snapped and their limbs gave way.

8 This therefore is the word of the Lord GOD: I am bringing a sword upon 9 you to destroy both man and beast. The land of Egypt shall become a desolate waste, and they shall know that I am the LORD, because you said, 10 'The Nile is mine; it was I who made it.' I am against you therefore, you and your Nile, and I will make Egypt desolate, wasted by drought, from 11 Migdol to Syene and up to the very frontier of Cush. No foot of man shall pass through it, no foot of beast; it shall lie uninhabited for forty years.
12 I will make the land of Egypt the most desolate of desolate lands; her cities shall lie derelict among the ruined cities. For forty years shall they lie derelict, and I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations and disperse them among the lands.

13 These are the words of the Lord GOD: At the end of forty years I will gather the Egyptians from the peoples among whom they are scattered.
14 I will turn the fortunes of Egypt and bring them back to Pathros, the 15 land of their origin, where they shall become a petty kingdom. She shall be the most paltry of kingdoms and never again exalt herself over the 16 nations, for I will make the Egyptians too few to rule over them. The Israelites will never trust Egypt again; this will be a reminder to them of their sin in turning to Egypt for help. They shall know that I am the Lord GOD.

17 These were the words of the LORD to me on the first day of the first 18 month in the twenty-seventh year: Man, long did Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon keep his army in the field against Tyre, until every head was rubbed bare and every shoulder chafed. But neither he nor his army gained 19 anything from Tyre for their long service against her. This, therefore, is the word of the Lord GOD: I am giving the land of Egypt to Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon. He shall carry off its wealth, he shall spoil and plunder 20 it, and so his army will be paid. I have given him the land of Egypt as the wages for his service because they have disregarded me. This is the very word of the Lord GOD.

^a make them cling: prob. rdg.; Heb. make the fish of your streams cling.

At that time I will make Israel put out fresh shoots, and give you back the power to speak among them, and they will know that I am the LORD. 21

These were the words of the LORD to me: Man, prophesy and say, These are the words of the Lord GOD: 30 1 2

Woe, woe for the day!

for a day is near, 3

a day of the LORD is near,
a day of cloud, a day of reckoning for the nations.

Then a sword will come upon Egypt, 4 and there will be anguish in Cush,

when the slain fall in Egypt,

when its wealth is taken and its foundations are torn up.

Cush and Put and Lud,^a 5

all the Arabs and Libyans and the peoples of allied lands, shall fall with them by the sword.

These are the words of the LORD: 6

All who support Egypt shall fall and her boasted might be brought low;

from Migdol to Syene men shall fall by the sword.

This is the very word of the Lord GOD.

They shall be the most desolate of desolate lands, and their cities shall 7 lie derelict among the ruined cities. When I set Egypt on fire and all her 8 helpers are broken, they will know that I am the LORD. When that time 9 comes messengers shall go out in haste from my presence to alarm Cush, still without a care, and anguish shall come upon her in Egypt's hour. Even now it is on the way.

These are the words of the Lord GOD: 10

I will make an end of Egypt's hordes

by the hands of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon.

He and his people with him, the most ruthless of nations, 11 will be brought to ravage the land.

They will draw their swords against Egypt and fill the land with the slain.

I will make the streams of the Nile dry land 12

and sell Egypt to evil men;

I will lay waste the land and everything in it by foreign hands.

I, the LORD, have spoken.

These are the words of the Lord GOD: 13

I will make an end of the lordlings^b and wipe out the princelings^c of Noph;

and never again shall a prince arise in Egypt.

- 14 Then I will put fear in that land,
 I will lay Pathros waste and set fire to Zoan
 and execute judgement on No.
 15 I will pour out my rage upon Sin,
 the bastion of Egypt,
 and destroy the horde of Noph.
 16 I will set Egypt on fire, and Syene shall writhe in anguish;
 the walls of No shall be breached and flood-waters shall burst into it.
 17 The young men of On and Pi-beseth^a shall fall by the sword and the cities themselves go into captivity.
 18 Daylight shall fail in Tahpanhes when I break the yoke of Egypt there;
 then her boasted might shall be subdued;
 a cloud shall cover her,
 and her daughters^b shall go into captivity.
 19 Thus I will execute judgement on Egypt, and they shall know that I am the LORD.
 20 This was the word of the LORD to me on the seventh day of the first 21 month in the eleventh year: Man, I have broken the arm of Pharaoh king of Egypt. See, it has not been bound up with dressings and bandage to 22 give it strength to wield a sword. These, therefore, are the words of the Lord GOD: I am against Pharaoh king of Egypt; I will break both his arms.
 23 the sound and the broken, and make the sword drop from his hand. I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations and disperse them over many 24 lands. Then I will strengthen the arms of the king of Babylon and put my sword in his hand; but I will break Pharaoh's arms, and he shall lie wounded 25 and groaning before him. I will give strength to the arms of the king of Babylon, but the arms of Pharaoh will fall. Men will know that I am the LORD, when I put my sword in the hand of the king of Babylon, and he 26 stretches it out over the land of Egypt. I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations and disperse them over many lands, and they shall know that I am the LORD.
 31 On the first day of the third month in the eleventh year this word came 2 to me from the LORD: Man, say to Pharaoh king of Egypt and all his horde:

What are you like in your greatness?

- 3 Look at Assyria: it was a cedar in Lebanon,
 whose fair branches overshadowed the forest, towering high with its crown finding a way through the foliage.
 4 Springs nourished it, underground waters gave it height, their streams washed the soil all round it and sent forth their rills to every tree in the country.
 5 So it grew taller than every other tree.

^a Or Bubastis.

^b Or daughter-towns.

Its boughs were many, its branches spread far;
 for water was abundant in the channels.
 In its boughs all the birds of the air had their nests, 6
 under its branches all wild creatures bore their young,
 and in its shadow all great nations made their home.
 A splendid great tree it was, with its long spreading boughs, 7 for its roots were beside abundant waters.
 No cedar in God's garden overshadowed it, 8
 no fir could compare with its boughs,
 and no plane-tree had such branches;
 not a tree in God's garden could rival its beauty.
 I, the LORD, gave it beauty 9
 with its mass of spreading boughs,
 the envy of all the trees in Eden,
 the garden of God.

Therefore these are the words of the Lord GOD: Because it grew so high 10 and pushed its crown up through the foliage, and its pride mounted as it grew, therefore I handed it over to a prince of the nations to deal with it; 11
 I made an example of it as its wickedness deserved. Strangers from the 12 most ruthless of nations hewed it down and flung it away. Its sweeping boughs fell on the mountains and in all the valleys, and its branches lay broken beside all the streams in the land. All nations of the earth came out from under its shade and left it. All the birds of the air settled on its fallen 13 trunk; the wild creatures all stood by its branches. Never again, therefore, 14 shall the well-watered trees grow so high or push their crowns up through the foliage. Nor shall the strongest of them, well watered though they be, stand erect in their full height; for all have been given over to death, to the world below, to share the common doom and go down to the abyss.

These are the words of the Lord GOD: When he went down to Sheol, 15
 I closed the deep over him as a gate, I dammed its rivers, the great waters were held back. I put Lebanon in mourning for him, and all the trees of the country-side wilted. I made nations shake with the crash of his fall, 16 when I brought him down to Sheol with those who go down to the abyss.
 From this all the trees of Eden, all the choicest and best of Lebanon, all the well-watered trees, drew comfort in the world below. They too like him 17 had gone down to Sheol, to those slain with the sword; and those who had lived in his shadow were scattered among the nations. Which among the 18 trees of Eden was like you in glory and greatness? Yet you will be brought down with the trees of Eden to the world below; you will lie with those who have been slain by the sword, in the company of the strengthless dead. This stands for Pharaoh and all his horde. This is the very word of the Lord GOD.

On the first day of the twelfth month in the twelfth year the word of the 32
 LORD came to me: Man, raise a dirge over Pharaoh king of Egypt and say 2 to him:

Young lion of the nations, you are undone.
 You were like a monster in the waters of the Nile scattering the water with its snout, ^{a b} churning the water with its feet and fouling the streams.

3 These are the words of the Lord GOD: When many nations are gathered together I will spread my net over you, and you will be dragged up in its 4 meshes. I will fling you on land, dashing you down on the bare ground.
 I will let all the birds of the air settle upon you and all the wild beasts gorge
 5 themselves on your flesh. Your flesh I will lay on the mountains, and fill 6 the valleys with the worms that feed on it. I will drench the land with your discharge, drench it with your blood to the very mountain-tops, and the 7 watercourses shall be full of you. When I put out your light I will veil the sky and blacken its stars; I will veil the sun with a cloud, and the 8 moon shall not give its light. I will darken all the shining lights of the sky above you and bring darkness over your land. This is the very word of the Lord GOD.

9 I will disquiet many peoples when I bring your broken army among the 10 nations into lands you have never known. I will appal many peoples with your fate; when I brandish my sword in the faces of their kings, their hair shall stand on end. In the day of your downfall each shall tremble for his 11 own fate from moment to moment. For these are the words of the Lord 12 GOD: The sword of the king of Babylon shall come upon you. I will make the whole horde of you fall by the sword of warriors who are of all men the most ruthless. They shall make havoc of the pride of Egypt, and all its 13 horde shall be wiped out. I will destroy all their cattle beside many waters.
 14 No foot of man, no hoof of beast, shall ever churn them up again. Then will I let their waters settle and their streams run smooth as oil. This is 15 the very word of the Lord GOD. When I have laid Egypt waste, and the whole land is devastated, when I strike down all who dwell there, they shall know that I am the LORD.

16 This is a dirge, and the women of the nations shall sing it as a dirge. They shall sing it as a dirge, as a dirge over Egypt and all its horde. This is the very word of the Lord GOD.

17 On the fifteenth day of the first month in the twelfth year, the word of the LORD came to me:

18 Man, raise a lament, you and the daughters of the nations, over the hordes of Egypt and her nobles, whom I will bring down ^c to the world below
 with those that go down to the abyss.

19 Are you better favoured than others?
 Go down and be laid to rest with the strengthless dead.

20 A sword stands ready. Those who marched with her, and all her horde, 21 shall fall into the midst of those slain by the sword. Warrior chieftains in Sheol speak to Pharaoh and those who aided him:

The strengthless dead, slain by the sword, have come down and are laid to rest. There is Assyria with all her company, her buried around her, 22 all of them slain and fallen by the sword. Her graves are set in the recesses 23 of the abyss, with her company buried around her, all of them slain, fallen 24 by the sword, men who once filled the land of the living with terror. There 25 is Elam, with all her hordes buried around her, all of them slain, fallen by 26

 the sword; they have gone down strengthless to the world below, men who 27 struck terror into the land of the living but now share the disgrace of those 28 that go down to the abyss. In the midst of the slain a resting-place has been 29 made for her, with all her hordes buried around her; all of them strength- 30 less, slain by the sword. For they who once struck terror into the land of 31 the living now share the disgrace of those that go down to the abyss; they 32 are assigned a place in the midst of the slain. There are Meshech and Tubal 33 with all their hordes, with their buried around them, all of them strength-less and slain by the sword, men who once struck terror into the land of the living. Do they not rest with warriors fallen strengthless,^a who have gone down to Sheol with their weapons, their swords under their heads and their shields over their bones,^b though the terror of their prowess once lay on the land of the living? You also, Pharaoh, shall lie broken in the company of the strengthless dead, resting with those slain by the sword. There is Edom, her kings and all her princes, who, for all their prowess, have been lodged with those slain by the sword; they shall rest with the strengthless dead and with those that go down to the abyss. There are all the princes of the North and all the Sidonians, who have gone down in shame with the slain, for all the terror they inspired by their prowess. They rest strength-less with those slain by the sword, and they share the disgrace of those that go down to the abyss.

Pharaoh will see them and will take comfort for his lost hordes—Pharaoh 31 who, with all his army, is slain by the sword, says the Lord GOD; though 32 he spread^c terror throughout the land of the living, yet he with all his horde is laid to rest with those that are slain by the sword, in the company of the strengthless dead. This is the very word of the Lord GOD.

The remnant of Israel in the land

THESE WERE THE WORDS OF THE LORD TO ME: Man, say to your 33 1 2 fellow-countrymen, When I set armies in motion against a land, its people choose one of themselves to be a watchman. When he sees the 3 enemy approaching and blows his trumpet to warn the people, then if 4 anyone does not heed the warning and is overtaken by the enemy, he is 5 responsible for his own fate. He is responsible because, when he heard the alarm, he paid no heed to it; if he had heeded it, he would have escaped. 6
 But if the watchman does not blow his trumpet or warn the people when he sees the enemy approaching, then any man who is killed is caught with all his sins upon him; but I will hold the watchman answerable for his death.

unintelligible.

^b and . . . bones: prob. rdg.; Heb.

^c Prob. rdg.; Heb. I have spread.

7 Man, I have appointed you a watchman for the Israelites. You will take 8 messages from me and carry my warnings to them. It may be that I pronounce sentence of death on a man because he is wicked; if you do not warn him to give up his ways, the guilt is his and because of his wickedness he 9 shall die, but I will hold you answerable for his death. But if you have warned him to give up his ways, and he has not given them up, he will die because of his wickedness, but you will have saved yourself.

10 Man, say to the Israelites, You complain, 'We are burdened by our sins 11 and offences; we are pining away because of them; we despair of life.' So tell them: As I live, says the Lord GOD, I have no desire for the death of the wicked. I would rather that a wicked man should mend his ways and live. Give up your evil ways, give them up; O Israelites, why should you die?

12 Man, say to your fellow-countrymen, When a righteous man goes wrong, his righteousness shall not save him. When a wicked man mends his ways, his former wickedness shall not bring him down. When a righteous man 13 sins, all his righteousness cannot save his life. It may be that, when I tell the righteous man that he will save his life, he presumes on his righteousness and does wrong; then none of his righteous acts will be remembered:
 14 he will die for the wrong he has done. It may be that when I pronounce sentence of death on the wicked, he mends his ways and does what is just 15 and right: if he then restores the pledges he has taken, repays what he has stolen, and, doing no more wrong, follows the rules that ensure life, he 16 shall live and not die. None of the sins he has committed shall be remembered against him; he shall live, because he does what is just and right.

17 Your fellow-countrymen are saying, 'The Lord acts without principle', 18 but it is their ways that are unprincipled. When a righteous man gives up 19 his righteousness and does wrong, he shall die because of it; and when a wicked man gives up his wickedness and does what is just and right, he 20 shall live. How, Israel, can you say that the Lord acts without principle, when I judge every man of you on his deeds?

21 On the fifth day of the tenth month in the twelfth year of our captivity, fugitives came to me from Jerusalem and told me that the city had fallen.
 22 The evening before they arrived, the hand of the LORD had come upon me, and by the time they reached me in the morning the LORD had given me back my speech. My speech was restored and I was no longer dumb.

23 24 These were the words of the LORD to me: Man, the inhabitants of these wastes on the soil of Israel say, 'When Abraham took possession of the land he was but one; now we are many, and the land has been granted to 25 us in possession.' Tell them, therefore, that these are the words of the Lord GOD: You eat meat with the blood in it, you lift up your eyes to idols, 26 you shed^a blood; and yet you expect to possess the land! You trust to the sword, you commit abominations, you defile one another's wives; and you 27 expect to possess the land! Tell them that these are the words of the Lord GOD: As I live, among the ruins they shall fall by the sword; in the open country I will give them for food to beasts; in dens and caves they shall die 28 by pestilence. I will make the land a desolate waste; her boasted might

^a Or pour out.

shall be brought to nothing, and the mountains of Israel shall be an un-trodden desert. When I make the land a desolate waste because of all the abominations they have committed, they will know that I am the LORD. 29

Man, your fellow-countrymen gather in groups and talk of you under walls and in doorways and say to one another, 'Let us go and see what message there is from the LORD.' So my people will come crowding in, as people do, and sit down in front of you. They will hear what you have to say, but they will not do it. 'Fine words^a!' they will say, but their hearts are set on selfish gain. You are no more to them than a singer of fine songs^b with a lovely voice, or a clever harpist; they will listen to what you say but will certainly not do it. But when it comes, as come it will, they will know that there has been a prophet in their midst. 30 31
32
33

These were the words of the LORD to me: Prophecy, man, against the shepherds of Israel; prophecy and say to them, You shepherds, these are the words of the Lord GOD: How I hate the shepherds of Israel who care only for themselves! Should not the shepherd care for the sheep? You consume the milk, wear the wool, and slaughter the fat beasts, but you do not feed the sheep. You have not encouraged the weary, tended the sick, bandaged the hurt, recovered the straggler, or searched for the lost; and even the strong you have driven with ruthless severity. They are scattered, they have no shepherd, they have become the prey of wild beasts. My sheep go straying over the mountains and on every high hill, my flock is dispersed over the whole country, with no one to ask after them or search for them. 34 1 2 3
4
5
6

Therefore, you shepherds, hear the words of the LORD. As surely as I live, says the Lord GOD, because my sheep are ravaged by wild beasts and have become their prey for lack of a shepherd, because my shepherds have not asked after the sheep but have cared only for themselves and not for the sheep—therefore, you shepherds, hear the words of the LORD. These are the words of the Lord GOD: I am against the shepherds and will demand my sheep from them. I will dismiss those shepherds: they shall care only for themselves no longer; I will rescue my sheep from their jaws, and they shall feed on them no more. 7 8 9 10

For these are the words of the Lord GOD: Now I myself will ask after my sheep and go in search of them. As a shepherd goes in search of his sheep when his flock is dispersed all around him, so I will go in search of my sheep and rescue them, no matter where they were scattered in dark and cloudy days. I will bring them out from every nation, gather them in from other lands, and lead them home to their own soil. I will graze them on the mountains of Israel, by her streams and in all her green fields. I will feed them on good grazing-ground, and their pasture shall be the high mountains of Israel. There they will rest, there in good pasture, and find rich grazing on the mountains of Israel. I myself will tend my flock, I myself pen them in their fold, says the Lord GOD. I will search for the lost, recover the straggler, bandage the hurt, strengthen the sick, leave the healthy and strong to play, and give them their proper food. 11

As for you, my flock, these are the words of the Lord GOD: I will judge 17

^a Fine words: or Love songs.

^b fine songs: or love songs.

18 between one sheep and another. You rams and he-goats! Are you not satisfied with grazing on good herbage, that you must trample down the rest with your feet? Or with drinking clear water, that you must churn up 19 the rest with your feet? My flock has to eat what you have trampled and 20 drink what you have churned up. These, therefore, are the words of the Lord GOD to them: Now I myself will judge between the fat sheep and the 21 lean. You hustle the weary with flank and shoulder, you butt them with your horns until you have driven them away and scattered them abroad.
 22 Therefore I will save my flock, and they shall be ravaged no more; I will 23 judge between one sheep and another. Then I will set over them one shepherd to take care of them, my servant David; he shall care for them 24 and become their shepherd. I, the LORD, will become their God, and my servant David shall be a prince among them. I, the LORD, have spoken.
 25 I will make a covenant with them to ensure prosperity; I will rid the land of wild beasts, and men shall live in peace of mind on the open pastures and 26 sleep in the woods. I will settle them in the neighbourhood of my hill and 27 send them rain in due season, blessed rain. Trees in the country-side shall bear their fruit, the land shall yield its produce, and men shall live in peace of mind on their own soil. They shall know that I am the LORD when I break the bars of their yokes and rescue them from those who have en-28 slaved them. They shall never be ravaged by the nations again nor shall wild beasts devour them; they shall live in peace of mind, with no one to 29 alarm them. I will give prosperity to their plantations; they shall never again be victims of famine in the land nor any longer bear the taunts of the 30 nations. They shall know that I, the LORD their God, am with them, and 31 that they are my people Israel, says the Lord GOD. You are my flock, my people, the flock I feed, and I am your God. This is the very word of the Lord GOD.

35 1 2 These were the words of the LORD to me: Man, look towards the hill-3 country of Seir and prophesy against it. Say, These are the words of the Lord GOD:

O hill-country of Seir, I am against you:

I will stretch out my hand over you and make you a desolate waste.

4 I will lay your cities in ruins and you shall be made desolate;
 thus you shall know that I am the LORD.

5 For you have maintained an immemorial feud and handed over the Israelites to the sword
 in the hour of their doom,
 at the time of their final punishment.

6 Therefore, as I live, says the Lord GOD,
 I make blood your destiny, and blood shall pursue you;
 you are most surely guilty of blood,
 and blood shall pursue you.

7 I will make the hill-country of Seir a desolate waste and put an end to all in it who pass to and fro;

I will fill your hills and your valleys with its slain, and those slain by the sword shall fall into your streams. 8

I will make you desolate for ever,
and your cities shall not be inhabited;
thus you shall know that I am the LORD. 9

You say, The two nations and the two countries shall be mine and I will take possession of them, though the LORD is ^a there. Therefore, as I live, says the Lord GOD, your anger and jealousy shall be requited, for I will do to you what you have done in your hatred against them. I shall be known among you when I judge you; you shall know that I am the LORD.
I have heard all your blasphemies; you have said, 'The mountains of Israel are desolate and have been given to us to devour.' You have set yourselves up against me and spoken recklessly against me. I myself have heard you. These are the words of the Lord GOD: I will make you so desolate that the whole world will gloat over you. I will do to you as you did to Israel my own possession when you gloated over its desolation.
O hill-country of Seir, you will be desolate, and it will be the end of all Edom. Thus men will know that I am the LORD. 10

And do you, man, prophesy to the mountains of Israel and say, Moun- 36 tains of Israel, hear the words of the LORD. These are the words of the Lord GOD: The enemy has said, 'Aha! now the everlasting highlands are ours.'
Therefore prophesy and say, These are the words of the Lord GOD: You mountains of Israel, all round you men gloated over you and trampled you down when you were seized and occupied by the rest of the nations; your name was bandied about in the common talk of men. Therefore, listen to the words of the Lord GOD when he speaks to the mountains and hills, to the streams and valleys, to the desolate palaces and deserted cities, all plundered and despised by the rest of the nations round you. These are the words of the Lord GOD: In the fire of my jealousy I have spoken plainly against the rest of the nations, and against Edom above all. For Edom, swollen with triumphant scorn, seized on my land to hold it up to public contempt. Therefore prophesy over the soil of Israel and say to the moun- 6 tains and hills, the streams and valleys, These are the words of the Lord GOD: I have spoken my mind in jealousy and anger because you have had to endure the taunts of all nations. Therefore, says the Lord GOD, I have sworn with uplifted hand that the nations round about shall be punished for ^b their taunts. But you, mountains of Israel, you shall put forth your branches and yield your fruit for my people Israel, for their home-coming is near. See now, I am for you, I will turn to you, and you shall be tilled and sown. I will plant many men upon you—the whole house of Israel. The cities shall again be inhabited and the palaces rebuilt. I will plant many men and beasts upon you; they shall increase and be fruitful. I will make you populous as in days of old and more prosperous than you were at first.
Thus you will know that I am the LORD. I will make men—my people Israel—tread your paths again. They shall settle in you, and you shall be their possession; but you shall never again rob them of their children. 7

^a Or has been.^b be punished for: or bear.

13 These are the words of the Lord GOD: People say that you are a land that 14 devours men and robs your tribes of their children. But you shall never devour men any more nor rob your tribes of their children, says the Lord 15 GOD. I will never let you hear the taunts of the nations again nor shall you have to endure the reproaches of the peoples. This is the very word of the Lord GOD.

16 17 These were the words of the LORD to me: Man, when the Israelites lived on their own soil they defiled it with their ways and deeds; their ways were 18 foul and disgusting in my sight. I poured out my fury upon them because of the blood they had poured out upon the land, and the idols with which 19 they had defiled it. I scattered them among the nations, and they were dispersed among different countries; I passed on them the sentence which 20 their ways and deeds deserved. When they came among those nations, they caused my holy name to be profaned wherever they came: men said of them, 'These are the people of the LORD, and it is from his land that they 21 have come.' And I spared them for the sake of my holy name which the Israelites had profaned among the nations to whom they had gone.

22 Therefore tell the Israelites that these are the words of the Lord GOD:
It is not for your sake, you Israelites, that I am acting, but for the sake of my holy name, which you have profaned among the peoples where you 23 have gone. I will hallow my great name, which has been profaned among those nations. When they see that I reveal my holiness through you, the 24 nations will know that I am the LORD, says the Lord GOD. I will take you out of the nations and gather you from every land and bring you to your 25 own soil. I will sprinkle clean water over you, and you shall be cleansed from all that defiles you; I will cleanse you from the taint of all your idols.
26 I will give you a new heart and put a new spirit within you; I will take the heart of stone from your body and give you a heart of flesh. I will put my 27 spirit into you and make you conform to my statutes, keep my laws and live by them. You shall live in the land which I gave to your ancestors; you 28 shall become my people, and I will become your God. I will save you from all that defiles you; I will call to the corn and make it plentiful; I will bring 29 no more famine upon you. I will make the trees bear abundant fruit and the ground yield heavy crops, so that you will never again have to bear the 30 reproach of famine among the nations. You will recall your wicked ways and evil deeds, and you will loathe yourselves because of your wickedness 31 and your abominations. It is not for your sake that I am acting; be sure of that, says the Lord GOD. Feel, then, the shame and disgrace of your ways, men of Israel.

33 These are the words of the Lord GOD: When I cleanse you of all your wickedness, I will re-people the cities, and the palaces shall be rebuilt.
34 The land now desolate shall be tilled, instead of lying waste for every 35 passer-by to see. Men will say that this same land which was waste has become like a garden of Eden, and people will make their homes in the 36 cities once ruined, wasted, and shattered, but now well fortified. The nations still left around you will know that it is I, the LORD, who have rebuilt the shattered cities and planted anew the waste land; I, the LORD, have spoken and will do it.

These are the words of the Lord GOD: Yet again will I let the Israelites 37 ask me to act in their behalf. I will make their men numerous as sheep, 38 like the sheep offered as holy-gifts, like the sheep in Jerusalem at times of festival. So shall their ruined cities be filled with human flocks, and they shall know that I am the LORD.

The hand of the LORD came upon me, and he carried me out by his 37 spirit and put me down in a plain full of bones. He made me go to and fro 2 across them until I had been round them all;^a they covered the plain, countless numbers of them, and they were very dry. He said to me, 'Man, 3 can these bones live again?' I answered, 'Only thou knowest that, Lord 4 GOD.' He said to me, 'Prophesy over these bones and say to them, O dry 5 bones, hear the word of the LORD. This is the word of the Lord GOD to 6 these bones: I will put breath^b into you, and you shall live. I will fasten sinews on you, bring flesh upon you, overlay you with skin, and put breath in you, and you shall live; and you shall know that I am the LORD.' I began 7 to prophesy as he had bidden me, and as I prophesied there was a rustling sound and the bones fitted themselves together. As I looked, sinews 8 appeared upon them, flesh covered them, and they were overlaid with skin, but there was no breath in them. Then he said to me, 'Prophesy to 9 the wind, prophesy, man, and say to it, These are the words of the Lord GOD: Come, O wind, come from every quarter and breathe into these slain, that they may come to life.' I began to prophesy as he had bidden me: 10 breath came into them; they came to life and rose to their feet, a mighty host. He said to me, 'Man, these bones are the whole people of Israel. They 11 say, "Our bones are dry, our thread of life is snapped, our web is severed from the loom."^c Prophesy, therefore, and say to them, These are the 12 words of the Lord GOD: O my people, I will open your graves and bring you up from them, and restore you to the land of Israel. You shall know 13 that I am the LORD when I open your graves and bring you up from them, O my people. Then I will put my spirit^d into you and you shall live, and I 14 will settle you on your own soil, and you shall know that I the LORD have spoken and will act. This is the very word of the LORD.'

These were the words of the LORD to me: Man, take one leaf of a wooden 15 16 tablet and write on it, 'Judah and his associates of Israel.' Then take another leaf and write on it, 'Joseph, the leaf of Ephraim and all his associates of Israel.' Now bring the two together to form one tablet; then they will be a 17 folding tablet in your hand. When your fellow-countrymen ask you to tell 18 them what you mean by this, say to them, These are the words of the Lord 19 GOD: I am taking the leaf of Joseph, which belongs to Ephraim and his associate tribes of Israel, and joining^e to it the leaf of Judah. Thus I shall make them one tablet, and they shall be one in my hand. The leaves on 20 which you write shall be visible in your hand for all to see.

Then say to them, These are the words of the Lord GOD: I am gathering 21 up the Israelites from their places of exile among the nations; I will assemble them from every quarter and restore them to their own soil.

Thus they shall become my people, and I will become their God. My servant David shall become king over them, and they shall have one shepherd. They shall conform to my laws, and they shall observe and carry out my statutes. They shall live in the land which I gave my servant Jacob, the land where your fathers lived. They and their descendants shall live there for ever, and my servant David shall 26 for ever be their prince. I will make a covenant with them to bring them prosperity; this covenant shall be theirs for ever.^a I will greatly increase 27 their numbers, and I will put my sanctuary for ever in their midst. They shall live under the shelter of my dwelling; I will become their God and they shall become my people. The nations shall know that I the LORD am 28 keeping Israel sacred to myself, because my sanctuary is in the midst of them for ever.

God's triumph over the world

- 38 1 2 THESSE WERE THE WORDS OF THE LORD TO ME: Man, look towards 3 Gog, the prince of Rosh, Meshech, and Tubal, in the land of Magog, 4 and prophesy against him. Say, These are the words of the Lord GOD:
 4 I am against you, Gog, prince of Rosh, Meshech, and Tubal. I will turn you about, I will put hooks in your jaws. I will lead you out, you and your whole army, horses and horsemen, all fully equipped, a great host with 5 shield and buckler, every man wielding a sword, and with them the men 6 of Pharas, Cush, and Put, all with shield and helmet; Gomer and all its squadrons, Beth-togarmah with its squadrons from the far recesses of the 7 north—a great concourse of peoples with you. Be prepared; make ready, you and all the host which has gathered to join you, and hold yourselves 8 in reserve for me.^b After many days you will be summoned; in years to come you will enter a land restored from ruin, whose people are gathered from many nations upon the mountains of Israel that have been desolate so long. The Israelites, brought out from the nations, will all be living 9 undisturbed; and you will come up, driving in like a hurricane; you will cover the land like a cloud, you and all your squadrons, a great concourse of peoples.
- 10 This is the word of the Lord GOD: At that time a thought will enter 11 your head and you will plan evil. You will say, 'I will attack a land of open villages, I will fall upon a people living quiet and undisturbed, 12 undefended by walls, with neither gates nor bars.' You will expect to come plundering, spoiling, and stripping bare the ruins where men now live again, a people gathered out of the nations, a people acquiring cattle 13 and goods, and making their home at the very centre of the world. Sheba

^b and hold . . . me: or and you and Dedan, the traders of Tarshish and her leading merchants, will say to you, 'Is it for plunder that you have come? Have you gathered your host to get spoil, to carry off silver and gold, to seize cattle and goods, to collect rich spoil?'

Therefore, prophesy, man, and say to Gog, These are the words of the Lord GOD: In that day when my people Israel is living undisturbed, will you not awake and come with many nations from your home in the far recesses of the north, all riding on horses, a great host, a mighty army? You will come up against my people Israel; and in those future days you will be like a cloud covering the earth. I will bring you against my land, that the nations may know me, when they see me prove my holiness at your expense, O Gog.

This is the word of the Lord GOD: When I spoke in days of old through my servants the prophets, who prophesied in those days unceasingly, it was you whom I threatened to bring against Israel. On that day, when at length Gog comes against the land of Israel, says the Lord GOD, my wrath will boil over. In my jealousy and in the heat of my anger I swear that on that day there shall be a great earthquake throughout the land of Israel. The fish in the sea and the birds in the air, the wild animals and all reptiles that move on the ground, all mankind on the face of the earth, all shall be shaken before me. Mountains shall be torn up, the terraced hills collapse, and every wall crash to the ground. I will summon universal terror against Gog, says the Lord GOD, and his men shall turn their swords against one another. I will bring him to judgement with pestilence and bloodshed; I will pour down teeming rain, hailstones hard as rock, and fire and brimstone, upon him, upon his squadrons, upon the whole concourse of peoples with him. Thus will I prove myself great and holy and make myself known to many nations; they shall know that I am the LORD.

And you, man, prophesy against Gog and say, These are the words of the Lord GOD: I am against you, Gog, prince of Rosh, Meshech, and Tubal. I will turn you about and drive you, I will fetch you up from the far recesses of the north and bring you to the mountains of Israel. I will strike the bow from your left hand and dash the arrows from your right hand. There on the mountains of Israel you shall fall, you, all your squadrons, and your allies; I will give you as food to the birds of prey and the wild beasts. You shall fall on the bare ground, for it is I who have spoken. This is the very word of the Lord GOD. I will send fire on Magog and on those who live undisturbed in the coasts and islands, and they shall know that I am the LORD. My holy name I will make known in the midst of my people Israel and will no longer let it be profaned; the nations shall know that in Israel I, the LORD, am holy.

Behold, it comes; it shall be, says the Lord GOD, the day of which I have spoken. The dwellers in the cities of Israel shall come out and gather weapons to light their fires, buckler and shield, bow and arrows, throwing-stick and lance, and they shall kindle fires with them for seven years. They shall take no wood from the fields nor cut it from the forests but shall light their fires with the weapons. Thus they will plunder their plunderers and spoil their spoilers. This is the very word of the Lord GOD.

11 In that day I will give to Gog, instead of ^a a burial-ground in Israel, the valley of Abarim east of the Sea. ^b There they shall bury Gog and all his horde, and all Abarim will be blocked; and they shall call it the Valley of 12 Gog's Horde. For seven months the Israelites shall bury them and purify the land; all the people shall take their share in the burying. The day that 13 I win myself honour shall be a memorable day for them. This is the very word of the Lord GOD. Men shall be picked for the regular duty of going 14 through the country and searching for ^c any left above ground, to purify the land; they shall begin their search at the end of the seven months. They 15 shall go through the country, and whenever one of them sees a human bone he shall put a marker beside it, until it has been buried in the Valley of 16 Gog's Horde. So no more shall be heard of that great horde, ^d and the land will be purified.

17 Man, these are the words of the Lord GOD: Cry to every bird that flies and to all the wild beasts: Come, assemble, gather from every side to my sacrifice, the great sacrifice I am making for you on the mountains of 18 Israel; eat flesh and drink blood, eat the flesh of warriors and drink the blood of princes of the earth; all these are your rams and sheep, he-goats 19 and bulls, and buffaloes of Bashan. You shall cram yourselves with fat and drink yourselves drunk on blood at the sacrifice which I am preparing for 20 you. At my table you shall eat your fill of horses and riders, of warriors and all manner of fighting men. This is the very word of the Lord GOD.

21 I will show my glory among the nations; all shall see the judgement that 22 I execute and the heavy hand that I lay upon them. From that day forwards the Israelites shall know that I am the LORD their God. The nations 23 shall know that the Israelites went into exile for their iniquity, because they were faithless to me. So I hid my face from them and handed them over 24 to their enemies, and they fell, every one of them, by the sword. I dealt with them as they deserved, defiled and rebellious as they were, and hid my face from them.

25 These, therefore, are the words of the Lord GOD: Now I will restore the fortunes of Jacob and show my affection for all Israel, and I will be jealous 26 for my holy name. They shall forget their shame and all their unfaithfulness to me, when they are at home again on their own soil, undisturbed, with 27 no one to alarm them. When I bring them home out of the nations and gather them from the lands of their enemies, I will make them an example 28 of my holiness, for many nations to see. They will know that I am the LORD their God, because I who sent them into exile among the nations will bring them together again on the soil of their own land and leave none of them 29 behind. No longer will I hide my face from them, I who have poured out my spirit upon Israel. This is the very word of the Lord GOD.

The restored theocracy

AT THE BEGINNING OF THE YEAR, on the tenth day of the month, in 40 the twenty-fifth year of our exile, that is fourteen years after the destruction of the city, on that very day, the hand of the LORD came upon me and he brought me there. In a vision God brought me to the land of 2 Israel and set me on a very high mountain, where I saw what seemed the buildings of a city facing me. He led me towards it, and I saw a man like 3 a figure of bronze holding a cord of linen thread and a measuring-rod, and standing at the gate. 'Man,' he said to me, 'look closely and listen care- 4 fully; mark well all that I show you, for this is why you have been brought here. Tell the Israelites all that you see.'

Round the outside of the temple ran a wall. The length of the rod which 5 the man was holding was six cubits, reckoning by the long cubit which was one cubit and a hand's breadth. He measured the thickness and the height of the wall; each was one rod. He came to a gate which faced eastwards, 6 went up its steps and measured the threshold of the gateway; its depth was one rod. Each cell was one rod long and one rod wide; the space between 7 the cells five cubits, and the threshold of the gateway at the end of the vestibule on the side facing the temple one rod. He measured the vestibule 8 of the gate and found it eight cubits, with pilasters two cubits thick; the vestibule of the gateway lay at the end near the temple. Now the cells of 9 the gateway, looking back eastwards, were three in number on each side;
 all three of the same size, and their pilasters on each side of the same size also. He measured the entrance into the gateway; it was ten cubits wide, 11 and the gateway itself throughout its length thirteen cubits wide. In front of the cells on each side lay a kerb, one cubit wide; each cell was six cubits 12 by six. He measured the width of the gateway through the cell doors which faced one another, from the back of one cell to the back of the opposite 13 cell; he made it twenty-five cubits, and the vestibule twenty cubits, across; the gateway on every side projected into^a the court. From the front of the 14 entrance-gate to the outer face of the vestibule of the inner gate the dis- 15 tance was fifty cubits. Both cells and pilasters had loopholes all round 16 inside the gateway, and the vestibule had windows all round within and palms carved on each pilaster.

He brought me to the outer court, and I saw rooms and a pavement all 17 round the court: in all, thirty rooms on the pavement. The pavement ran 18 up to the side of the gateways, as wide as they were long; this was the lower pavement. He measured the width of the court from the front of the lower 19 gateway to the outside of the inner gateway; it was a hundred cubits. He led me round to the north and I saw a gateway facing northwards, belong- 20 ing to the outer court, and he measured its length and its breadth. Its cells, 21 three on each side, together with its pilasters and its vestibule, were the same size as those of the first gateway, fifty cubits long by twenty-five wide.
 So too its windows, and those of^b its vestibule, and its palms were the same 22 size as those of the gateway which faced east; it was approached by seven

^a Prob. rdg., Heb. adds pilaster.^b those of: prob. rdg.; Heb. om.

23 steps with its vestibule facing them. A gate like that on the east side led to 24 the inner court opposite the northern gateway; he measured from gateway 25 to gateway, and it was a hundred cubits. Then he led me round to the south, 26 and I found a gateway facing southwards. He measured its cells, its pilas-
27 ters, and its vestibule, and found it the same size as the others, fifty cubits 28 long by twenty-five wide. Both gateway and vestibule had windows all 29 round like the others. It was approached by seven steps with a vestibule 30 facing them and palms carved on each pilaster. The inner court had a gate-31 way facing southwards, and he measured from gateway to gateway; it was 32 a hundred cubits.

33 He brought me into the inner court through the southern gateway, 34 measured it and found it the same size as the others. So were its cells, 35 pilasters, and vestibule, fifty cubits long by twenty-five wide. It and its 36 vestibule had windows all round.^a Its vestibule faced the outer court; it 37 had palms carved on its pilasters, and eight steps led up to it.

38 Then he brought me into the inner court, towards the east, and measured 39 the gateway and found it the same size as the others. So too were its cells, 40 pilasters, and vestibule; it and its vestibule had windows all round, and it
41 was fifty cubits long by twenty-five wide. Its vestibule faced the outer 42 court and had a palm carved on each pilaster; eight steps led up to it.
43 Then he brought me to the north gateway and measured it and found it 44 the same size as the others. So were its cells, pilasters, and vestibule, and 45 it had windows all round; it was fifty cubits long by twenty-five wide. Its 46 vestibule faced the outer court and had palms carved on the pilaster at 47 each side; eight steps led up to it.

48 There was a room opening out from the vestibule of the gateway; ^b here
49 the whole-offerings were washed. In the vestibule of the gateway were two 50 tables on each side, at which to slaughter the whole-offering, the sin-51 offering, and the guilt-offering. At the corner on the outside, as one goes 52 up to the opening of the northern gateway, stood two tables, and two more 53 at the other corner of the vestibule of the gateway. Another four stood on 54 each side at the corner of the gateway, eight tables in all at which slaughter-
55 ing was done. Four tables used for the whole-offering were of hewn stone, 56 each a cubit and a half long by a cubit and a half wide and a cubit high; and 57 on them they put the instruments used for the whole-offering and other 58 sacrifices. The flesh of the offerings was on the tables, and ledges a hand's 59 breadth in width were fixed all round facing inwards.

60 Then he brought me right into the inner court, and I saw two rooms in 61 the inner court, one at the corner of the northern gateway, facing south, 62 and one at the corner of the southern gateway, facing north. This room 63 facing south, he told me, is for the priests who have charge of the temple.
64 The room facing north is for the priests who have charge of the altar;
65 these are the sons of Zadok, who alone of the Levites may come near to 66 serve the LORD. He measured the court; it was square, a hundred cubits 67 each way, and the altar lay in front of the temple.

^a So some M.S.S.; others add (30) It had vestibules all round, and it was twenty-five cubits long by five wide.

^b the vestibule of the gateway: prob. rdg.; Heb. pilasters, the gates.

Then he brought me into the vestibule of the temple, and measured a pilaster of the vestibule; it was five cubits on each side, the width of the gateway fourteen cubits and that of the corners of the gateway three cubits in each direction. The vestibule was twenty cubits long by twelve wide; ten steps led up to it, and by the pilasters rose pillars, one on each side.

Then he brought me into the sanctuary and measured the pilasters; they were six cubits wide on each side. The opening was ten cubits wide and its corners five cubits wide in each direction. He measured its length; it was forty cubits, and its width twenty. He went inside and measured the pilasters at the opening; they were two cubits; the opening itself was six cubits, and the corners of the opening were seven cubits in each direction. Then he measured the room at the far end of the sanctuary; its length and its breadth were each twenty cubits. He said to me, 'This is the Holy of Holies.'

He measured the wall of the temple; it was six cubits high, and each arcade all round the house was four cubits wide. The arcades were arranged in three tiers, each tier in thirty sections. In the wall all round the temple there were intakes for the arcades, so that they could be supported without being fastened into the wall of the temple. The higher up the arcades were, the broader they were all round by the addition of the intakes, one above the other all round the temple; the temple itself had a ramp running upwards on a base, and in this way one went up from the lowest to the highest tier by way of the middle tier.

Then I saw a raised pavement all round the temple, and the foundations of the arcades were flush with it and measured a full rod, six cubits high. The outer wall of the arcades was five cubits thick. There was an unoccupied area beside the terrace^a which was adjacent to the temple, and the arcades opened on to this area, one opening facing northwards and one southwards; the unoccupied area was five cubits wide on all sides. There was a free space^c twenty cubits wide all round the temple. On the western side, at the far end of the free space, stood a building seventy cubits wide; its wall was five cubits thick all round, and its length ninety cubits.

He measured the temple; it was a hundred cubits long; and the free space, the building, and its walls, a hundred cubits in all. The eastern front of the temple and the free space was a hundred cubits wide. He measured the length of the building at the far end of the free space to the west of the temple, and its corridors on each side: a hundred cubits.

The sanctuary, the inner shrine and the outer vestibule were panelled; the embrasures all round the three of them were framed with wood all round. From the ground up to the windows and above the door, both in the inner and outer chambers, round all the walls, inside and out, were carved figures,^d cherubim and palm-trees, a palm between every pair of cherubim. Each cherub had two faces: one the face of a man, looking towards one palm-tree, and the other the face of a lion, looking towards another palm-tree. Such was the carving round the whole of the temple.

20 The cherubim and the palm-trees were carved from the ground up to the 21 top of the doorway and on the wall of the sanctuary. The door-posts of the sanctuary were square.^a

22 In front of^b the Holy Place was what seemed an altar of wood, three cubits high and two cubits long; it was fitted with corner-posts, and its base and sides also were of wood. He told me that this was the table which 23 stood before the LORD. The sanctuary had a double door, and the Holy 24 Place also had a double door: the double doors had swinging leaves, a pair 25 for each door. Cherubim and palm-trees like those on the walls were carved on them.^c Outside there was a wooden cornice over the vestibule; 26 on both sides of the vestibule were loopholes, with palm-trees carved at the corners.^d

42 Then he took me to the outer court round by the north and brought me to the rooms facing the free space and facing the buildings to the north.
2 The length along the northern side was a hundred cubits, and the breadth 3 fifty. Facing the free space measuring twenty cubits, which adjoined the inner court, and facing the pavement of the outer court, were corridors at 4 three levels corresponding to each other. In front of the rooms a passage, ten cubits wide and a hundred cubits long, ran towards the inner court; their 5 entrances faced northwards. The upper rooms were shorter than the lower and middle rooms, because the corridors took building space from them.
6 For they were all at three levels and had no pillars as the courts had, so that 7 the lower and middle levels were recessed from the ground upwards. An outside wall, fifty cubits long, ran parallel to the rooms and in front of them, 8 on the side of the outer court. The rooms adjacent to the outer court were 9 fifty cubits long, and those facing the sanctuary a hundred cubits. Below these rooms was an entry from the east as one entered them from the outer 10 court where the wall of the court began.^e On the south side, passing by the 11 free space and the building, were other rooms with a passage in front of them. These rooms corresponded, in length and breadth and in general 12 character, to those facing north, whose exits and entrances were the same as those of the rooms on the south. As one^f went eastwards, where the 13 passages began, there was an entrance in the face of the inner^g wall. Then he said to me, 'The northern and southern rooms facing the free space are the consecrated rooms where the priests who approach the LORD may eat the most sacred offerings. There they shall put these offerings as well as the grain-offering, the sin-offering, and the guilt-offering; for the place 14 is holy. When the priests have entered the Holy Place they shall not go into the outer court again without leaving here the garments they have worn while performing their duties, for these are holy. They shall put on other garments when they approach the place assigned to the people.'

15 When he had finished measuring the inner temple, he brought me out towards the gateway which faces eastwards and measured the whole area. He measured the east side with the measuring-rod, and it was five hundred cubits. He turned and measured the north side with his rod, and it was five hundred cubits. He turned to the south side and measured it with his rod; it was five hundred cubits. He turned to the west and measured it with his rod; it was five hundred cubits. So he measured all four sides; in each direction the surrounding wall measured five hundred cubits. This marked off the sacred area from the profane.

He led me to the gate, the gate facing eastwards, and I beheld the glory of the God of Israel coming from the east. His voice was like the sound of a mighty torrent, and the earth shone with his glory. The form that I saw was the same as that which I had seen when he came to destroy the city, and as that which I had seen by the river Kebar,^a and I fell on my face. The glory of the LORD came up to the temple towards the gate which faced eastwards. A spirit^b lifted me up and brought me into the inner court, and the glory of the LORD filled the temple. Then I heard one speaking to me from the temple, and the man was standing at my side. He said, Man, do you see the place of my throne, the place where I set my feet, where I will dwell among the Israelites for ever? Neither they nor their kings shall ever defile my holy name again with their wanton disloyalty, and with the corpses^c of their kings when they die. They set their threshold by mine and their door-post beside mine, with a wall between me and them, and they defiled my holy name with the abominations they committed, and I destroyed them in my anger. But now they shall abandon their wanton disloyalty and remove the corpses^c of their kings far from me, and I will dwell among them for ever. So tell the Israelites, man, about this temple, its appearance and proportions, that they may be ashamed of their iniquities. If they are ashamed of all they have done, you shall describe to them the temple and its fittings, its exits and entrances, all the details and particulars of its elevation and plan; explain them and draw them before their eyes, so that they may keep them in mind and carry them out. This is the plan of the temple to be built on the top of the mountain; all its precincts on every side shall be most holy.

These were the dimensions of the altar in cubits (the cubit that is a cubit and a hand's breadth). This was the height of the altar: the base was a cubit high^d and projected a cubit; on its edge was a rim one span deep. From the base to the cubit-wide ridge of the lower pedestal-block was two cubits, and from this shorter pedestal-block to the cubit-wide ridge of the taller pedestal-block was four cubits. The altar-hearth was four cubits high and was surmounted by four horns a cubit high. The hearth was twelve cubits long and twelve cubits wide, being a perfect square. The upper pedestal-block was fourteen cubits long and fourteen cubits wide along its four sides, and the rim round it was half a cubit deep. The base of the altar projected a cubit, and there were steps facing eastwards.

He said to me, Man, these are the words of the Lord GOD: These are the regulations for the altar when it has been made, for sacrificing whole-offerings on it and flinging the blood against it. The levitical priests of the the Lord GOD. You shall assign them a young bull for a sin-offering; you shall take some of the blood and put it on the four horns of the altar, on the 21 four corners of the upper pedestal and all round the rim, and so purify it and make expiation for it. Then take the bull assigned as the sin-offering, and they shall destroy it by fire in the proper place within the precincts 22 but outside the Holy Place. On the second day you shall present a he-goat without blemish as a sin-offering, and with it they shall purify the altar 23 as they did with the bull. When you have completely purified the altar, you shall present a young bull without blemish and a ram without blemish 24 from the flock. You shall present them before the LORD; the priests shall throw salt on them and sacrifice them as a whole-offering to the LORD. For 25 seven days you shall provide as a daily sin-offering a goat, a young bull, and a ram from the flock; all of them shall be provided free from blemish.

26 For seven days they shall make expiation for the altar, and pronounce it 27 ritually clean, and consecrate it. At the end of that time, on the eighth day and onwards, the priests shall sacrifice on the altar your whole-offerings and your shared-offerings, and I will accept you. This is the very word of the Lord GOD.

44 He again brought me round to the outer gate of the sanctuary facing 2 eastwards, and it was shut. The LORD said to me, This gate shall be kept shut; it must not be opened. No man may enter by it, for the LORD the God 3 of Israel has entered by it. It shall be kept shut. The prince, however, when he is here as prince, may sit there to eat food in the presence of the LORD;
he shall come in and go out by the vestibule of the gate.

4 He brought me round to the northern gate facing the temple, and I saw 5 the glory of the LORD filling the LORD's house, and I fell on my face. The LORD said to me, Mark well, man, look closely, and listen carefully to all that I say to you, to all the rules and regulations for the house of the LORD.
Mark well the entrance to the house of the LORD and all the exits from the 6 sanctuary. Say to that rebel people of Israel, These are the words of the 7 Lord GOD: Enough of all these abominations of yours, you Israelites! You have added to them by bringing foreigners, uncircumcised in mind and body, to stand in my sanctuary and defile my house when you present my food to me, both fat and blood, and they have made my covenant void.
8 Instead of keeping charge of my holy things yourselves, you have chosen to put these men in charge of my sanctuary.

9 These are the words of the Lord GOD: No foreigner, uncircumcised in mind and body, shall enter my sanctuary, not even a foreigner living among 10 the Israelites. But the Levites, though they deserted me when the Israelites went astray after their idols and had to bear the punishment of their in-11 iquity, shall yet do service in my sanctuary. They shall take charge of the gates of the temple and do service there. They shall slaughter the whole-offering and the sacrifice for the people and shall be in attendance to serve 12 them. Because they served them in the presence of their idols and brought Israel to the ground by their iniquity, says the Lord GOD, I have sworn with uplifted hand that they shall bear the punishment of their iniquity.
13 They shall not have access to me, to serve me as priests; they shall not come near to my holy things or to the Holy of Holies; they shall bear the shame of the abominable deeds they have done. I will put them in charge of the temple with all the service which must be performed there. 14

But the levitical priests of the family of Zadok remained in charge of my sanctuary when the Israelites went astray from me; these shall approach me to serve me. They shall be in attendance on me, presenting the fat and the blood, says the Lord GOD. It is they who shall enter my sanctuary and approach my table to serve me and observe my charge. When they come to the gates of the inner court they shall dress in linen; they shall wear no wool when they serve me at the gates of the inner court and within. They shall wear linen turbans, and linen drawers on their loins; they shall not fasten their clothes with a belt so that they sweat. When they go out to the people in the outer court, they shall take off the clothes they have worn while serving, leave them in the sacred rooms and put on other clothes; otherwise they will transmit the sacred influence to the people through their clothing. 15

They shall neither shave their heads nor let their hair grow long; they shall only clip their hair. No priest shall drink wine when he is to enter the inner court. He may not marry a widow or a divorced woman; he may marry a virgin of Israelite birth. He may, however, marry the widow of a priest. 16 17 18 19

They shall teach my people to distinguish the sacred from the profane, and show them the difference between clean and unclean. When disputes break out, they shall take their place in court, and settle the case according to my rules. At all my appointed seasons they shall observe my laws and statutes. They shall keep my sabbaths holy. 20 21 22

They shall not defile themselves by contact with any dead person, except^a father or mother, son or daughter, brother or unmarried sister. After purification, they shall count seven days and then be clean. When they enter the inner court to serve in the Holy Place, they shall present their sin-offering, says the Lord GOD. 23 24 25 26 27

They shall own no patrimony in Israel; I am their patrimony. You shall grant them no holding in Israel; I am their holding. The grain-offering, the sin-offering, and the guilt-offering shall be eaten by them, and everything in Israel devoted to God shall be theirs. The first of all the first-fruits and all your contributions of every kind shall belong wholly to the priests. You shall give the first lump of your dough to the priests, that a blessing may rest upon your home. The priests shall eat no carrion, bird or beast, whether it has died naturally or been killed by a wild animal. 28 29 30 31

When you divide the land by lot among the tribes for their possession, you shall set apart from it a sacred reserve for the LORD, twenty-five thousand cubits in length and twenty thousand in width; the whole enclosure shall be sacred. Of this a square plot, five hundred cubits each way, shall be devoted to the sanctuary, with fifty cubits of open land round it. From this area you shall measure out a space twenty-five thousand by ten thousand cubits, in which the sanctuary, the holiest place of all, shall stand. This space is for the priests who serve in the sanctuary and who come nearest in serving the LORD. It shall include space for their houses and a sacred plot for the sanctuary. An area of twenty-five thousand by ten 45 2 3 4 5

^a any . . . except: or anyone else's dead, but only their own . . .

6 thousand cubits shall belong to the Levites, the temple servants; on this 7 shall stand the towns in which they live. You shall give to each town an area of five thousand by twenty-five thousand cubits alongside the sacred reserve; this shall belong to all Israel. On either side of the sacred reserve and of the city's holding the prince shall have a holding facing the sacred reserve and the city's holding, running westwards on the west and eastwards 8 on the east. It shall run alongside one of the tribal portions, and stretch to the western limit of the land and to the eastern. It shall be his holding in Israel; the princes of Israel shall never oppress my people again but shall give the land to Israel, tribe by tribe.

9 THESE ARE THE WORDS OF THE LORD GOD: Enough, princes of Israel!
 Put an end to lawlessness and robbery; maintain law and justice; relieve 10 my people and stop your evictions, says the Lord GOD. Your scales shall 11 be honest, your bushel and your gallon shall be honest. There shall be one standard for each, taking each as the tenth of a homer, and the homer shall 12 have its fixed standard. Your shekel weight shall contain twenty gerahs; your mina shall contain weights of ten^a and twenty-five and fifteen shekels.

13 These are the contributions you shall set aside: out of every homer of 14 wheat or of barley, one sixth of an ephah. For oil the rule is^b one tenth of a 15 bath from every kor (at ten bath to the kor); one sheep in every flock of two hundred is to be reserved by every Israelite clan. For a grain-offering, a whole-offering, and a shared-offering, to make expiation for them, says 16 the Lord GOD, all the people of the land shall bring^c this contribution to 17 the prince in Israel; and the prince shall be responsible for the whole-offering, the grain-offering, and the drink-offering, at pilgrim-feasts, new moons, sabbaths, and every sacred season observed by Israel. He himself is to provide the sin-offering and the grain-offering, the whole-offering and the shared-offering, needed to make expiation for Israel.

18 These are the words of the Lord GOD: On the first day of the first month you shall take a young bull without blemish, and purify the sanctuary.
 19 The priest shall take some of the blood from the sin-offering and put it on the door-posts of the temple, on the four corners of the altar pedestal and 20 on the gate-posts of the inner court. You shall do the same on the seventh day of the month;^d in this way you shall make expiation for the temple.

21 On the fourteenth day of the first month you shall hold the Passover, 22 and the pilgrim-feast of seven days; bread must be eaten unleavened. On that day the prince shall provide a bull as a sin-offering for himself and for all 23 the people. During the seven days of the feast he shall offer daily as a whole-offering to the LORD seven bulls and seven rams without blemish, 24 and a he-goat as a daily sin-offering. With every bull and ram he shall provide a grain-offering of one ephah, together with a hin of oil for each ephah.
 25 He shall do the same thing also on the fifteenth day of the seventh month at the pilgrim-feast; this also shall last seven days, and he shall provide the same sin-offering and whole-offering and the same quantity of grain and oil.

These are the words of the Lord GOD: The eastern gate of the inner court shall remain closed for the six working days; it may be opened only on the sabbath and at new moon. When the prince comes through the porch of the gate from the outside, he shall halt at the door-post, and the priests shall sacrifice his whole-offering and shared-offerings. On the terrace he shall bow down at the gate and then go out, but the gate shall not be shut till the evening. On sabbaths and at new moons the people also shall bow down before the LORD at the entrance to that gate.

The whole-offering which the prince sacrifices to the LORD shall be as follows: on the sabbath, six sheep without blemish and a ram without blemish; the grain-offering shall be an ephah with the ram and as much as he likes with the sheep, together with a hin of oil for every ephah. At the new moon it shall be a young bull without blemish, six sheep and a ram, all without blemish. He shall provide as the grain-offering to go with the bull one ephah and with the ram one ephah, with the sheep as much as he can afford, adding a hin of oil for every ephah.

When the prince comes in, he shall enter through the porch of the gate and come out by the same way. But on festal days when the people come before the LORD, a man who enters by the northern gate to bow down shall leave by the southern gate, and a man who enters by the southern gate shall leave by the northern gate. He shall not turn back and go out through the gate by which he came in but shall go straight on. The prince shall then be among them, going in when they go in and coming out when they come out.

At pilgrim-feasts and on festal days the grain-offering shall be an ephah with a bull, an ephah with a ram and as much as he likes with a sheep, together with a hin of oil for every ephah.

When the prince provides a whole-offering or shared-offerings as a voluntary sacrifice to the LORD, the eastern gate shall be opened for him,^a and he shall make his whole-offering and his shared-offerings as he does on the sabbath; when he goes out the gate shall be closed^b behind him.

You shall provide a yearling sheep without blemish daily as a whole-offering to the LORD; you shall provide it morning by morning. With it every morning you shall provide as a grain-offering one sixth of an ephah with a third of a hin of oil to moisten the flour; the LORD's grain-offering is an observance prescribed for all time. Morning by morning, as a regular whole-offering, they shall offer a sheep with the grain-offering and the oil.

These are the words of the Lord GOD: When the prince makes a gift out of his property to any of his sons, it shall belong to his sons, since it is part of the family property. But when he makes such a gift to one of his slaves, it shall be his only till the year of manumission, when it shall revert to the prince; it is the property of his sons and shall belong to them.

The prince shall not oppress the people by taking part of their holdings; he shall give his sons an inheritance from his own holding of land, so that my people may not be scattered and separated from their holdings.

Then he brought me through the entrance by the side of the gate to the rooms which face north (the sacred rooms reserved for the priests), and,

^a the eastern . . . him: or he shall open the gate facing east.

or he shall close the gate.

^b the gate . . . closed:

20 pointing to a place on their western side, he said to me, 'This is the place where the priests shall boil the guilt-offering and the sin-offering and bake the grain-offering; they shall not take it into the outer court for fear they 21 transmit the sacred influence to the people.' Then he brought me into the outer court and took me across to the four corners of the court, at each of 22 which there was a further court. These four courts were vaulted and were 23 the same size, forty cubits long by thirty cubits wide. Round each of the four was a row of stones, with fire-places constructed close up against the 24 rows. He said to me, 'These are the kitchens where the attendants shall boil the people's sacrifices.'

47 He brought me back to the gate of the temple, and I saw a spring of water issuing from under the terrace of the temple towards the east; for the temple faced east. The water was running down along the right side, 2 to the south of the altar. He took me out through the northern gate and brought me round by an outside path to the eastern gate of the court, and 3 water was trickling from the right side. When the man went out eastwards he had a line in his hand. He measured a thousand cubits and made me 4 walk through the water; it came up to my ankles. He measured another thousand and made me walk through the water; it came up to my knees.
He measured another thousand and made me walk through the water;
5 it was up to my waist. Another thousand, and it was a torrent I could not cross, for the water had risen and was now deep enough to swim in; it 6 had become a torrent that could not be crossed. 'Mark this, man', he said,
7 and led me back to the bank of the torrent. When we came back to the bank 8 I saw a great number of trees on each side. He said to me, 'This water flows out to the region lying east, and down to the Arabah; at last it will reach 9 that sea whose waters are foul, and they will be sweetened. When any one of the living creatures that swarm upon the earth comes where the torrent flows, it shall draw life from it. The fish shall be innumerable; for these waters come here so that the others may be sweetened, and where the tor-10 rent flows everything shall live. From En-ge-di as far as En-eglaim fishermen shall stand on its shores, for nets shall be spread there. Every kind 11 of fish shall be there in shoals, like the fish of the Great Sea; but its swamps and pools shall not have their waters sweetened but shall be left as salt-12 pans. Beside the torrent on either bank all trees good for food shall spring up. Their leaves shall not wither, their fruit shall not cease; they shall bear early every month. For their water comes from the sanctuary; their fruit is for food and their foliage for enjoyment.'

13 These are the words of the Lord GOD: These are the boundary lines within which the twelve tribes of Israel shall enter into possession of the 14 land, Joseph receiving two portions. The land which I swore with hand uplifted to give to your fathers you shall divide with each other; it shall be 15 assigned to you by lot as your patrimony. This is the frontier: on its northern side, from the Great Sea through Hethlon, Lebo-hamath, 16 Zedad, Berutha, and Sibraim, which are between the frontiers of Damascus and Hamath, to Hazar-enan, near the frontier of Hauran. So the frontier 17 shall run from the sea to Hazar-enan on the frontier of Damascus and 18 northwards; this is its northern side. The eastern side runs alongside the territories of Hauran, Damascus, and Gilcad, and alongside the territory of Israel; Jordan sets the boundary to the eastern sea, to Tamar. This is the eastern side. The southern side runs from Tamar to the waters of Meribah-by-Kadesh; the region assigned to you reaches the Great Sea. This is the southern side towards the Negeb. The western side is the Great Sea, which forms a boundary as far as a point opposite Lebo-hamath. This is the western side. You shall distribute this land among the tribes of Israel and assign it by lot as a patrimony for yourselves and for any aliens living in your midst who leave sons among you. They shall be treated as native-born in Israel and with you shall receive a patrimony by lot among the tribes of Israel. You shall give the alien his patrimony with the tribe in which he is living. This is the very word of the Lord GOD.

These are the names of the tribes: In the extreme north, in the direction of Hethlon, to Lebo-hamath and Hazar-enan, with Damascus on the northern frontier in the direction of Hamath, and so from the eastern side to the western, shall be Dan: one portion.

Bordering on Dan, from the eastern side to the western, shall be Asher: one portion.

Bordering on Asher, from the eastern side to the western, shall be Naphtali: one portion.

Bordering on Naphtali, from the eastern side to the western, shall be Manasseh: one portion.

Bordering on Manasseh, from the eastern side to the western, shall be Ephraim: one portion.

Bordering on Ephraim, from the eastern side to the western, shall be Reuben: one portion.

Bordering on Reuben, from the eastern side to the western, shall be Judah: one portion.

Bordering on Judah, from the eastern side to the western, shall be the reserve which you shall set apart. Its breadth shall be twenty-five thousand cubits and its length the same as that of the other portions, from the eastern side to the western, and the sanctuary shall be in the middle of it.

The reserve which you shall set apart for the LORD shall measure twenty-five thousand cubits by twenty^a thousand. The reserve shall be apportioned thus: the priests shall have an area measuring twenty-five thousand cubits on the north side, ten thousand on the west, ten thousand on the east, and twenty-five thousand on the south side; the sanctuary of the LORD shall be in the middle of it. It shall be for the consecrated priests, the sons of Zadok, who kept my charge and did not follow the Israelites when they went astray, as the Levites did. The area set apart for the priests from the reserved territory shall be most sacred, reaching the frontier of the Levites.

The Levites shall have a portion running parallel to the border of the priests. It shall be twenty-five thousand cubits long by ten thousand wide; altogether, the length shall be twenty-five thousand cubits and the breadth ten thousand. They shall neither sell nor exchange any part of it, nor shall the best of the land be alienated; for it is holy to the LORD.

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. ten.

15 The strip which is left, five thousand cubits in width by twenty-five 16 thousand, is the city's secular land for dwellings and common land, and the city shall be in the middle of it. These shall be its dimensions: on the northern side four thousand five hundred cubits, on the southern side four thousand five hundred cubits, on the eastern side four thousand five hundred cubits, on the western side four thousand five hundred cubits.

17 The common land belonging to the city shall be two hundred and fifty cubits to the north, two hundred and fifty to the south, two hundred and 18 fifty to the east, and two hundred and fifty to the west. What is left parallel to the reserve, ten thousand cubits to the east and ten thousand to the west,^d 19 shall provide food for those who work in the city. Those who work in the city shall cultivate it; they may be drawn from any of the tribes of Israel.

20 You shall set apart the whole reserve, twenty-five thousand cubits 21 square, as sacred, as far as the holding of the city. What is left over on each side of the sacred reserve and the holding of the city shall be assigned to the prince. Eastwards, what lies over against the reserved twenty-five thousand cubits, as far as the eastern side, and westwards, what lies over against the twenty-five thousand cubits to the western side, parallel to the 22 tribal portions, shall be assigned to the prince; the sacred reserve and the sanctuary itself shall be in the centre. The^b holding of the Levites and the^b holding of the city shall be in the middle of that which is assigned to the prince; it shall be between the frontiers of Judah and Benjamin.

23 The rest of the tribes: from the eastern side to the western shall be Benjamin: one portion.

 Zebulun: one portion.

27 Bordering on Zebulun, from the eastern side to the western, shall be Gad: one portion.

 stretches from Tamar to the waters of Meribah-by-Kadesh, to the Brook
 as far as the Great Sea.

29 This is the land which you shall allot as a patrimony to the tribes of Israel, and these shall be their lots. This is the very word of the Lord GOD.

30-31 These are to be the ways out of the city, and they are to be named after the tribes of Israel. The northern side, four thousand five hundred cubits 32 long, shall have three gates, those of Reuben, Judah, and Levi; the eastern side, four thousand five hundred cubits long, three gates, those of Joseph,

 34 long, three gates, those of Simeon, Issachar, and Zebulun; the western side, four thousand five hundred cubits long, three gates, those of Gad,

THE BOOK OF DANIEL

Jews at the court of Nebuchadnezzar

IN THE THIRD YEAR OF THE REIGN OF JEHOIAKIM 1 king of Judah, Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came to Jerusalem 2 and laid siege to it. The Lord delivered Jehoiakim king of Judah into 2 his power, together with all that was left of the vessels of the house of God; 2 and he carried them off to the land of Shinar, to the temple of his god, 2 where he deposited the vessels in the treasury. Then the king ordered 3 Ashpenaz, his chief eunuch, to take certain of the Israelite exiles, of the 3 blood royal and of the nobility, who were to be young men of good looks 4 and bodily without fault, at home in all branches of knowledge, well- 4 informed, intelligent, and fit for service in the royal court; and he was to 4 instruct them in the literature and language of the Chaldeans. The king 5 assigned them a daily allowance of food and wine from the royal table. 5
Their training was to last for three years, and at the end of that time they 5 would^a enter the royal service.

Among them there were certain young men from Judah called Daniel, 6 Hananiah, Mishael and Azariah; but the master of the eunuchs gave them 7
new names: Daniel he called Belteshazzar, Hananiah Shadrach, Mishael 7 Meshach and Azariah Abed-nego. Now Daniel determined not to con- 8 taminatc himself by touching the food and wine assigned to him by the 8 king, and he begged the master of the eunuchs not to make him do so. 8
God made the master show kindness and goodwill to Daniel, and he said 9 10 to him, 'I am afraid of my lord the king: he has assigned you your food and 9 10 drink, and if he sees you looking dejected, unlike the other young men of 9 10 your own age, it will cost me my head.' Then Daniel said to the guard 11 whom the master of the eunuchs had put in charge of Hananiah, Mishael, 11 Azariah and himself, 'Submit us to this test for ten days. Give us only 12 vegetables to eat and water to drink; then compare our looks with those of 13
the young men who have lived on the food assigned by the king, and be 13 guided in your treatment of us by what you see.'^b The guard listened to 14 what they said and tested them for ten days. At the end of ten days they 15 looked healthier and were better nourished than all the young men who 15 had lived on the food assigned them by the king. So the guard took away 16 the assignment of food and the wine they were to drink, and gave them only 16 the vegetables.

To all four of these young men God had given knowledge and under- 17 standing of books and learning of every kind, while Daniel had a gift for 18 interpreting visions and dreams of every kind. The time came which the 19 king had fixed for introducing the young men to court, and the master of the eunuchs brought them into the presence of Nebuchadnezzar. The 20 king talked with them and found none of them to compare with Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael and Azariah; so they entered the royal service. Whenever the king consulted them on any matter calling for insight and judge-21 ment, he found them ten times better than all the magicians and exorcists in his whole kingdom. Now Daniel was there till the first year of King Cyrus.

2 In the second year of his reign Nebuchadnezzar had dreams, and his 2 mind was so troubled that he could not sleep. Then the king gave orders to summon the magicians, exorcists, sorcerers, and Chaldaeans to tell him 3 what he had dreamt. They came in and stood in the royal presence, and the king said to them, 'I have had a dream and my mind has been troubled 4 to know what my dream was.' The Chaldaeans, speaking in Aramaic, said, ^a 'Long live the king! Tell us what you dreamt and we will tell you the 5 interpretation.' The king answered, 'This is my declared intention. If you do not tell me both dream and interpretation, you shall be torn in pieces 6 and your houses shall be forfeit.^b But if you can tell me the dream and the interpretation, you will be richly rewarded and loaded with honours. Tell 7 me, therefore, the dream and its interpretation.' They answered a second time, 'Let the king tell his servants the dream, and we will tell him the 8 interpretation.' The king answered, 'It is clear to me that you are trying to 9 gain time, because you see that my intention has been declared. If you do not make known to me the dream, there is one law that applies to you, and one only. What is more, you have agreed among yourselves to tell me a pack of lies to my face in the hope that with time things may alter. Tell me 10 the dream, therefore, and I shall know that you can give me the interpretation.' The Chaldaeans answered in the presence of the king, 'Nobody on 11 earth can tell your majesty what you wish to know; no great king or prince has ever made such a demand of magician, exorcist, or Chaldaean. What your majesty requires of us is too hard; there is no one but the gods, who 12 dwell remote from mortal men, who can give you the answer.' At this the king lost his temper and in a great rage ordered the death of all the wise men 13 of Babylon. A decree was issued that the wise men were to be executed, and accordingly men were sent to fetch Daniel and his companions for execution.

14 When Arioch, the captain of the king's bodyguard, was setting out to execute the wise men of Babylon, Daniel approached him cautiously and 15 with discretion and said, 'Sir, you represent the king; why has his majesty 16 issued such a peremptory decree?' Arioch explained everything; so Daniel went in to the king's presence and begged for a certain time by which he 17 would give the king the interpretation. Then Daniel went home and told 18 the whole story to his companions, Hananiah, Mishael and Azariah. They should ask the God of heaven in his mercy, he said, to disclose this secret, so that they and he with the rest of the wise men of Babylon should not be put to death. Then in a vision by night the secret was revealed to Daniel, 19 and he blessed the God of heaven in these words: 20

Blessed be God's name from age to age, for all wisdom and power are his.
He changes seasons and times; 21
he deposes kings and sets them up;
he gives wisdom to the wise
and all their store of knowledge to the men who know;
he reveals deep mysteries; 22
he knows what lies in darkness,
and light has its dwelling with him.
To thee, God of my fathers, I give thanks and praise, 23
for thou hast given me wisdom and power;
thou hast now revealed to me what we asked,
and told us what the king is concerned to know.

Daniel therefore went to Arioch who had been charged by the king to 24 put to death the wise men of Babylon and said to him, 'Do not put the wise men of Babylon to death. Take me into the king's presence, and I will now tell him the interpretation of the dream.' Arioch in great trepidation brought 25 Daniel before the king and said to him, 'I have found among the Jewish exiles a man who will make known to your majesty the interpretation of your dream.' Thereupon the king said to Daniel (who was also called Belteshaz- 26 zar), 'Can you tell me what I saw in my dream and interpret it?' Daniel 27 answered in the king's presence, 'The secret about which your majesty inquires no wise man, exorcist, magician, or diviner can disclose to you.
But there is in heaven a god who reveals secrets, and he has told King 28 Nebuchadnezzar what is to be at the end of this age. This is the dream and these the visions that came into your head: the thoughts that came to 29 you, O king, as you lay on your bed, were thoughts of things to come, and the revealer of secrets has made known to you what is to be. This secret 30 has been revealed to me not because I am wise beyond all living men, but because your majesty is to know the interpretation and understand the thoughts which have entered your mind.

'As you watched, O king, you saw a great image. This image, huge and 31 dazzling, towered before you, fearful to behold. The head of the image was 32 of fine gold, its breast and arms of silver, its belly and thighs of bronze,^a its legs of iron, its feet part iron and part clay. While you looked, a stone 33 34 was hewn from a mountain, not by human hands; it struck the image on its feet of iron and clay and shattered them. Then the iron, the clay, the 35 bronze, the silver, and the gold, were all shattered to fragments and were swept away like chaff before the wind from a threshing-floor in summer, until no trace of them remained. But the stone which struck the image grew into a great mountain filling the whole earth. That was the dream. 36
We shall now tell your majesty the interpretation. You, O king, king of 37 kings, to whom the God of heaven has given the kingdom with all its power, authority, and honour; in whose hands he has placed men and beasts and 38

^a Or copper.

birds of the air, wherever they dwell, granting you sovereignty over them 39 all—you are that head of gold. After you there shall arise another kingdom, inferior to yours, and yet a third kingdom, of bronze, which shall have 40 sovereignty over the whole world. And there shall be a fourth kingdom, strong as iron; as iron shatters and destroys all things, it shall break and 41 shatter the whole earth.^a As, in your vision, the feet and toes were part potter's clay and part iron, it shall be a divided kingdom. Its core shall be 42 partly of iron just as you saw iron mixed with the common clay; as the toes were part iron and part clay, the kingdom shall be partly strong and partly 43 brittle. As, in your vision, the iron was mixed with common clay, so shall men mix with each other by intermarriage, but such alliances shall not be 44 stable: iron does not mix with clay. In the period of those kings the God of heaven will establish a kingdom which shall never be destroyed; that kingdom shall never pass to another people; it shall shatter and make an 45 end of all these kingdoms, while it shall itself endure for ever. This is the meaning of your vision of the stone being hewn from a mountain, not by human hands, and then shattering the iron, the bronze, the clay, the silver, and the gold. The mighty God has made known to your majesty what is to be hereafter. The dream is sure and the interpretation to be trusted.'

46 Then King Nebuchadnezzar prostrated himself and worshipped Daniel, and gave orders that sacrifices and soothing offerings should be made to 47 him. 'Truly,' he said, 'your god is indeed God of gods and Lord over kings, 48 a revealer of secrets, since you have been able to reveal this secret.' Then the king promoted Daniel, bestowed on him many rich gifts, and made him regent over the whole province of Babylon and chief prefect over all the 49 wise men of Babylon. Moreover at Daniel's request the king put Shadrach, Meshach and Abed-nego in charge of the administration of the province of Babylon. Daniel himself, however, remained at court.

3 KING NEBUCHADNEZZAR MADE AN IMAGE OF GOLD, ninety feet high and nine feet broad. He had it set up in the plain of Dura in the province of 2 Babylon. Then he sent out a summons to assemble the satraps, prefects, viceroys, counsellors, treasurers, judges, chief constables, and all govern-3 up. So they assembled—the satraps, prefects, viceroys, counsellors, treasurers, judges, chief constables, and all governors of provinces—for the dedication of the image which King Nebuchadnezzar had set up; and 4 they stood before the image which Nebuchadnezzar had set up. Then the herald loudly proclaimed, 'O peoples and nations of every language, you 5 are commanded, when you hear the sound of horn, pipe, zither, triangle, dulcimer, music, and singing of every kind, to prostrate yourselves and 6 worship the golden image which King Nebuchadnezzar has set up. Whoever does not prostrate himself and worship shall forthwith be thrown into a 7 blazing furnace.' Accordingly, no sooner did all the peoples hear the sound of horn, pipe, zither, triangle, dulcimer, music, and singing of every kind, than all the peoples and nations of every language prostrated themselves and worshipped the golden image which King Nebuchadnezzar had set up.

^a the whole earth: prob. rdg.; Aram. and like iron which shatters all these.

It was then that certain Chaldaeans came forward and brought a charge 8 against the Jews. They said to King Nebuchadnezzar, 'Long live the king! 9 Your majesty has issued an order that every man who hears the sound of 10 horn, pipe, zither, triangle, dulcimer, music, and singing of every kind 11 shall fall down and worship the image of gold. Whoever does not do so shall 12 be thrown into a blazing furnace. There are certain Jews, Shadrach, Meshach 13 and Abed-nego, whom you have put in charge of the administration of the province of Babylon. These men, your majesty, have taken 14 no notice of your command; they do not serve your god, nor do they worship 15 the golden image which you have set up.' Then in rage and fury 16 Nebuchadnezzar ordered Shadrach, Meshach and Abed-nego to be fetched, 17 and they were brought into the king's presence. Nebuchadnezzar said to 18 them, 'Is it true, Shadrach, Meshach and Abed-nego, that you do not 19 serve my god or worship the golden image which I have set up? If you are 20 ready at once to prostrate yourselves when you hear the sound of horn, 21 pipe, zither, triangle, dulcimer, music, and singing of every kind, and to 22 worship the image that I have set up, well and good. But if you do not 23 worship it, you shall forthwith be thrown into the blazing furnace; and 24 what god is there that can save you from my power?' Shadrach, Meshach 25 and Abed-nego said to King Nebuchadnezzar, 'We have no need to answer 26 you on this matter. If there is a god who is able to save us from the blazing 27 furnace, it is our God whom we serve, and he will save us from your power, 28
O king; but if not, be it known to your majesty that we will neither serve 29 our god nor worship the golden image that you have set up.'

Then Nebuchadnezzar flew into a rage with Shadrach, Meshach and 19
Abed-nego, and his face was distorted with anger. He gave orders that the 20 furnace should be heated up to seven times its usual heat, and commanded 21 some of the strongest men in his army to bind Shadrach, Meshach and 22 Abed-nego and throw them into the blazing furnace. Then those men in 23 their trousers, their shirts, and their hats and all their other clothes, were 24 bound and thrown into the blazing furnace. Because the king's order was 25 urgent and the furnace exceedingly hot, the men who were carrying 26 Shadrach, Meshach and Abed-nego were killed by the flames that leapt out; 27 and those three men, Shadrach, Meshach and Abed-nego, fell bound into 28
the blazing furnace.

Then King Nebuchadnezzar was amazed and sprang to his feet in great 24 trepidation. He said to his courtiers, 'Was it not three men whom we threw 25 bound into the fire?' They answered the king, 'Assuredly, your majesty.' 26
He answered, 'Yet I see four men walking about in the fire free and un- 27 harméd; and the fourth looks like a god.' Nebuchadnezzar approached the 28 door of the blazing furnace and said to the men, 'Shadrach, Meshach and 29 Abed-nego, servants of the Most High God, come out, come here.' Then 30 Shadrach, Meshach and Abed-nego came out from the fire. And the satraps, 31 prefects, viceroys, and the king's courtiers gathered round and saw how 32
the fire had had no power to harm the bodies of these men; the hair of their 33 heads had not been singed, their trousers were untouched, and no smell of 34 fire lingered about them.

Then Nebuchadnezzar spoke out, 'Blessed is the God of Shadrach, 28

Meshach and Abed-nego. He has sent his angel to save his servants who put their trust in him, who disobeyed the royal command and were willing to yield themselves to the fire rather than to serve or worship any god other than their own God. I therefore issue a decree that any man, to whatever people or nation he belongs, whatever his language, if he speaks blasphemy against the God of Shadrach, Meshach and Abed-nego, shall be torn to pieces and his house shall be forfeit;^a for there is no other god who can save men in this way.' Then the king advanced the fortunes of Shadrach, Meshach and Abed-nego in the province of Babylon.

4 KING NEBUCHADNEZZAR TO ALL PEOPLES AND NATIONS of every language living in the whole world: May all prosperity be yours! It is my pleasure to recount the signs and marvels which the Most High God has worked for me:

3 How great are his signs, and his marvels overwhelming!
 His kingdom is an everlasting kingdom,
 his sovereignty stands to all generations.

4 I, Nebuchadnezzar, was living peacefully at home in the luxury of my palace. As I lay on my bed, I saw a dream which terrified me; and fantasies and visions which came into my head dismayed me. So I issued an order summoning into my presence all the wise men of Babylon to make known to me the interpretation of the dream. Then the magicians, exorcists, Chaldeans, and diviners came in, and in their presence I related my dream. But they could not interpret it. And yet another came into my presence, Daniel, who is called Belteshazzar after the name of my god, a man possessed by the spirit of the holy gods. To him, too, I related the dream: 'Belteshazzar, chief of the magicians, whom I myself know to be possessed by the spirit of the holy gods, and whom no secret baffles, listen to the vision I saw in a dream, and tell me its interpretation.

10 'Here is the vision which came into my head as I was lying upon my bed:

 As I was looking,
11 I saw a tree of great height at the centre of the earth;
 the tree grew and became strong,
 reaching with its top to the sky and visible to earth's farthest bounds.
12 Its foliage was lovely,
 and its fruit abundant;
 and it yielded food for all.
 Beneath it the wild beasts found shelter,
 the birds lodged in its branches,
 and from it all living creatures fed.

13 'Here is another vision which came into my head as I was lying upon my bed:

 As I was watching, there was a Watcher,
 a Holy One coming down from heaven.

^a Or made into a dunghill (mng. of Aram. word uncertain).

He cried aloud and said,
"Hew down the tree, lop off the branches,
strip away the foliage, scatter the fruit. 14
Let the wild beasts flee from its shelter and the birds from its branches, but leave the stump with its roots in the ground. 15
So, tethered with an iron ring, let him eat his fill of the lush grass;
let him be drenched with the dew of heaven and share the lot of the beasts in their pasture;
let his mind cease to be a man's mind, 16
and let him be given the mind of a beast.
Let seven times pass over him.
The issue has been determined by the Watchers 17
and the sentence pronounced by the Holy Ones.

Thereby the living will know that the Most High is sovereign in the kingdom of men: he gives the kingdom to whom he will and he may set over it the humblest of mankind."

'This is the dream which I, King Nebuchadnezzar, have dreamed; now, 18 Belteshazzar, tell me its interpretation; for, though all the wise men of my kingdom are unable to tell me what it means, you can tell me, since the spirit of the holy gods is in you.'

Daniel, who was called Belteshazzar, was dumbfounded for a moment, 19 dismayed by his thoughts; but the king said, 'Do not let the dream and its interpretation dismay you.' Belteshazzar answered, 'My lord, if only the dream were for those who hate you and its interpretation for your enemies!
The tree which you saw grow and become strong, reaching with its top to 20
the sky and visible to earth's farthest bounds, its foliage lovely and its fruit 21 abundant, a tree which yielded food for all, beneath which the wild beasts dwelt and in whose branches the birds lodged, that tree, O king, is you. 22
You have grown and become strong. Your power has grown and reaches the sky; your sovereignty stretches to the ends of the earth. Also, O king, 23 you saw a Watcher, a Holy One, coming down from heaven and saying,
"Hew down the tree and destroy it, but leave its stump with its roots in the ground. So, tethered with an iron ring, let him eat his fill of the lush grass; let him be drenched with the dew of heaven and share the lot of the beasts until seven times pass over him." This is the interpretation, 24
O king—it is a decree of the Most High which touches my lord the king.
You will be banished from the society of men; you will have to live with the wild beasts; you will feed on grass like oxen and you will be drenched with the dew of heaven. Seven times will pass over you until you have learnt that the Most High is sovereign over the kingdom of men and gives it to whom he will. The command was given to leave the stump of the tree with its roots. By this you may know that from the time you acknowledge the sovereignty of heaven your rule will endure. Be advised by me, O king: 25 redeem your sins by charity and your iniquities by generosity to the wretched. So may you long enjoy peace of mind.' 27

- 28 29 All this befell King Nebuchadnezzar. At the end of twelve months 30 the king was walking on the roof of the royal palace at Babylon, and he exclaimed, 'Is not this Babylon the great which I have built as a royal residence by my own mighty power and for the honour of my majesty?' 31 The words were still on his lips, when a voice came down from heaven: 'To you, King Nebuchadnezzar, the word is spoken: the kingdom has passed 32 from you. You are banished from the society of men and you shall live with the wild beasts; you shall feed on grass like oxen, and seven times will pass over you until you have learnt that the Most High is sovereign over 33 the kingdom of men and gives it to whom he will.' At that very moment this judgement came upon Nebuchadnezzar. He was banished from the society of men and ate grass like oxen; his body was drenched by the dew of heaven, until his hair grew long like goats' hair and his nails like eagles' talons.^a
- 34 At the end of the appointed time, I, Nebuchadnezzar, raised my eyes to heaven and I returned to my right mind. I blessed the Most High, praising and glorifying the Ever-living One:

His sovereignty is never-ending and his rule endures through all generations; 35 all dwellers upon earth count for nothing and he deals as he wishes with the host of heaven;^b no one may lay hand upon him and ask him what he does.

- 36 At that very time I returned to my right mind and my majesty and royal splendour were restored to me for the glory of my kingdom. My courtiers and my nobles sought audience of me. I was established in my kingdom 37 and my power was greatly increased. Now I, Nebuchadnezzar, praise and exalt and glorify the King of heaven; for all his acts are right and his ways are just and those whose conduct is arrogant he can bring low.

Belshazzar's feast

- 5 BELSHAZZAR THE KING GAVE A BANQUET for a thousand of his 2 nobles and was drinking wine in the presence of the thousand. Warmed by the wine, he gave orders to fetch the vessels of gold and silver which his father Nebuchadnezzar had taken from the sanctuary at Jerusalem, that he and his nobles, his concubines and his courtesans, might drink from 3 them. So the vessels of gold and silver from the sanctuary in the house of God at Jerusalem were brought in, and the king and his nobles, his con-4 cubines and his courtesans, drank from them. They drank wine and praised the gods of gold and silver, of bronze and iron, and of wood and stone.
 5 Suddenly there appeared the fingers of a human hand writing on the plaster of the palace wall opposite the lamp, and the king could see the back of 6 the hand as it wrote. At this the king's mind was filled with dismay and he turned pale, he became limp in every limb and his knees knocked together.

^a goats' hair . . . eagles' talons; prob. rdg.; Aram. eagles' and his nails like birds'.

He called loudly for the exorcists, Chaldaeans, and diviners to be brought 7 in; then, addressing the wise men of Babylon, he said, 'Whoever can read this writing and tell me its interpretation shall be robed in purple and honoured with a chain of gold round his neck and shall rank as third in the kingdom.' Then all the king's wise men came in, but they could not read 8 the writing or interpret it to the king. King Belshazzar sat there pale and 9 utterly dismayed, while his nobles were perplexed.

The king and his nobles were talking when the queen entered the 10 banqueting-hall: 'Long live the king!' she said. 'Why this dismay, and why do you look so pale? There is a man in your kingdom who has in him 11 the spirit of the holy gods, a man who was known in your father's time to have a clear understanding and godlike wisdom. King Nebuchadnezzar, your father, appointed him chief of the magicians, exorcists, Chaldaeans, and diviners. This same Daniel, whom the king named Beltshazzar, is 12 known to have a notable spirit, with knowledge and understanding, and the gift of interpreting dreams, explaining riddles and unbinding spells;^a let him be summoned now and he will give the interpretation.' Daniel was 13 then brought into the king's presence and the king said to him, 'So you are Daniel, one of the Jewish exiles whom the king my father brought from Judah. I have heard that you possess the spirit of the holy gods and that 14 you are a man of clear understanding and peculiar wisdom. The wise men, 15 the exorcists, have just been brought into my presence to read this writing and tell me its interpretation, and they have been unable to interpret it.
But I have heard it said of you that you are able to give interpretations and 16 to unbind spells.^b So now, if you are able to read the words and tell me what they mean, you shall be robed in purple and honoured with a chain of gold round your neck and shall rank as third in the kingdom.' Then Daniel 17 answered in the king's presence, 'Your gifts you may keep for yourself; or else give your rewards to another. Nevertheless I will read the writing to your majesty and tell you its interpretation. My lord king, the Most 18 High God gave your father Nebuchadnezzar a kingdom and power and glory and majesty; and, because of this power which he gave him, all 19 peoples and nations of every language trembled before him and were afraid.
He put to death whom he would and spared whom he would, he promoted them at will and at will degraded them. But, when he became haughty, 20 stubborn and presumptuous, he was deposed from his royal throne and his glory was taken from him. He was banished from the society of men, 21 his mind became like that of a beast, he had to live with the wild asses and to eat grass like oxen, and his body was drenched with the dew of heaven, until he came to know that the Most High God is sovereign over the kingdom of men and sets up over it whom he will. But you, his son Belshazzar, 22 did not humble your heart, although you knew all this. You have set yourself up against the Lord of heaven. The vessels of his temple have been 23 brought to your table; and you, your nobles, your concubines, and your courtesans have drunk from them. You have praised the gods of silver and gold, of bronze and iron, of wood and stone, which neither see nor hear nor know, and you have not given glory to God, in whose charge is your

- 24 very breath and in whose hands are all your ways. This is why that hand 25 was sent from his very presence and why it wrote this inscription. And these are the words of the writing which was inscribed: Mene mene tekel 26 u-pharsin. Here is the interpretation: mene:^a God has numbered the days 27 of your kingdom and brought it to an end; tekel:^b you have been weighed 28 in the balance and found wanting; u-pharsin:^c and your kingdom has 29 been divided and given to the Medes and Persians.' Then Belshazzar gave the order and Daniel was robed in purple and honoured with a chain of gold round his neck, and proclamation was made that he should rank as third in the kingdom.
- 30 31 That very night Belshazzar king of the Chaldaeans was slain, and Darius
 the Mede took the kingdom, being then sixty-two years old.

Daniel in the lions' pit

- 6 IT PLEASED DARIUS TO APPOINT SATRAPS over the kingdom, a 2 hundred and twenty in number in charge of the whole kingdom, and over them three chief ministers, to whom the satraps should send reports so that the king's interests might not suffer; of these three, Daniel was one.
 3 In the event Daniel outshone the other ministers and the satraps because of his ability, and the king had it in mind to appoint him over the whole 4 kingdom. Then the chief ministers and the satraps began to look round for some pretext to attack Daniel's administration of the kingdom, but they failed to find any malpractice on his part; for he was faithful to his trust.
 5 Since they could discover no neglect of duty or malpractice, they said,
 'There will be no charge to bring against this Daniel unless we find one 6 in his religion.' These chief ministers and satraps watched for an oppor-
 7 tunity to approach the king, and said to him, 'Long live King Darius! All we, the ministers of the kingdom, prefects, satraps, courtiers, and viceroys, have taken counsel and agree that the king should issue a decree and bring an ordinance into force, that whoever within the next thirty days shall present a petition to any god or man other than the king shall be thrown 8 into the lions' pit. Now, O king, issue the ordinance and have it put in writing, so that it may be unalterable, for the law of the Medes and Persians 9 stands for ever.' Accordingly King Darius issued the ordinance in written form.
- 10 When Daniel learnt that this decree had been issued, he went into his house. He had had windows made in his roof-chamber looking towards Jerusalem; and there he knelt down three times a day and offered prayers 11 and praises to his God as his custom had always been. His enemies watched for an opportunity to catch Daniel and found him at his prayers making 12 supplication to his God. Then they came into the king's presence and reminded him of the ordinance. 'Your majesty,' they said, 'have you not issued an ordinance that any person who, within the next thirty days, shall present a petition to any god or man other than your majesty shall be thrown into the lions' pit?' The king answered, 'Yes, it is fixed. The law of the Medes and Persians stands for ever.' So in the king's presence they said, 'Daniel, one of the Jewish exiles, has ignored the ordinance issued by your majesty, and is making petition to his god three times a day.' When the king heard this, he was greatly distressed. He tried to think of a way to save Daniel, and continued his efforts till sunset; then those same men watched for an opportunity to approach the king, and said to him, 'Your majesty must know that by the law of the Medes and Persians no ordinance or decree issued by the king may be altered.' So the king gave orders and Daniel was brought and thrown into the lions' pit; but he said to Daniel, 'Your own God, whom you serve continually, will save you.' A stone was brought and put over the mouth of the pit, and the king sealed it with his signet and with the signets of his nobles, so that no one might intervene to rescue Daniel.

The king went back to his palace and spent the night fasting; no woman was brought to him and sleep eluded him. At dawn, as soon as it was light, he rose and went in fear and trembling to the pit. When the king reached it, he called anxiously to Daniel, 'Daniel, servant of the living God, has your God whom you serve continually been able to save you from the lions?' Then Daniel answered, 'Long live the king! My God sent his angel to shut the lions' mouths so that they have done me no injury, because in his judgement I was found innocent;^a and moreover, O king, I had done you no injury.' The king was overjoyed and gave orders that Daniel should be lifted out of the pit. So Daniel was lifted out and no trace of injury was found on him, because he had put his faith in his God. By order of the king Daniel's accusers were brought and thrown into the lions' pit with their wives and children, and before they reached the floor of the pit the lions were upon them and crunched them up, bones and all.

Then King Darius wrote to all peoples and nations of every language throughout the whole world: 'May your prosperity increase! I have issued a decree that in all my royal domains men shall fear and reverence the God of Daniel;

for he is the living God, the everlasting, whose kingly power shall not be weakened;
 whose sovereignty shall have no end—
 a saviour, a deliverer, a worker of signs and wonders in heaven and on earth,
 who has delivered Daniel from the power of the lions.'

So this Daniel prospered during the reigns of Darius and Cyrus the Persian.

Daniel's visions

IN THE FIRST YEAR OF BELSHAZZAR king of Babylon, as Daniel lay on his bed, dreams and visions came into his head. Then he wrote down the dream, and here his account begins:

^a in his judgement . . . innocent: or before him success was granted me.

2 In my visions of the night I, Daniel, was gazing intently and I saw a
 3 great sea churned up by the four winds of heaven, and four huge beasts 4 coming up out of the sea, each one different from the others. The first was like a lion but had an eagle's wings. I watched until its wings were plucked off and it was lifted from the ground and made to stand on two feet like 5 a man; it was also given the mind of a man. Then I saw another, a second beast, like a bear. It was half crouching and had three ribs in its mouth, between its teeth. The command was given: 'Up, gorge yourself with 6 flesh.' After this as I gazed I saw another, a beast like a leopard with four bird's wings on its back; this creature had four heads, and it was invested 7 with sovereign power. Next in my visions of the night I saw a fourth beast, dreadful and grisly, exceedingly strong, with great iron teeth and bronze claws.^a It crunched and devoured, and trampled underfoot all that was left. It differed from all the beasts which preceded it in having ten horns.
 8 While I was considering the horns I saw another horn, a little one, springing up among them, and three of the first horns were uprooted to make room for it. And in that horn were eyes like the eyes of a man, and a mouth 9 that spoke proud words. I kept looking, and then thrones were set in place and one ancient in years took his seat, his robe was white as snow and the hair of his head like cleanest wool.

10 Flames of fire were his throne and its wheels blazing fire;
 a flowing river of fire streamed out before him.^b Thousands upon thousands served him and myriads upon myriads attended his presence.
 The court sat, and the books were opened.

11 Then because of the proud words that the horn was speaking, I went on watching until the beast was killed and its carcass destroyed: it was given 12 to the flames. The rest of the beasts, though deprived of their sovereignty, 13 were allowed to remain alive for a time and a season. I was still watching in visions of the night and I saw one like a man coming with the clouds of heaven; he approached the Ancient in Years and was presented to him.
 14 Sovereignty and glory and kingly power were given to him, so that all people and nations of every language should serve him; his sovereignty was to be an everlasting sovereignty which should not pass away, and his kingly power such as should never be impaired.

15 My spirit within me was troubled, and, dismayed by the visions which 16 came into my head, I, Daniel, approached one of those who stood there and inquired from him what all this meant; and he told me the interpreta-17 tion. 'These great beasts, four in number,' he said, 'are four kingdoms 18 which shall rise from the ground. But the saints^c of the Most High shall receive the kingly power and shall retain it for ever, for ever and ever.' 19 Then I desired to know what the fourth beast meant, the beast that was different from all the others, very dreadful with its iron teeth and bronze claws, crunching and devouring and trampling underfoot all that was left.
 20 I desired also to know about the ten horns on its head and the other horn

^a and bronze claws: prob. rag., cp. verse 19; Aram. om. ^b Or it. ^c Or holy one which sprang up and at whose coming three of them fell—the horn that had eyes and a mouth speaking proud words and appeared larger than the others. As I still watched, that horn was waging war with the saints and overcoming them until the Ancient in Years came. Then judgement was given in favour of the saints of the Most High, and the time came when the saints gained possession of the kingly power. He gave me this answer: 'The fourth beast signifies a fourth kingdom which shall appear upon earth. It shall differ from the other kingdoms and shall devour the whole earth, tread it down and crush it. The ten horns signify the appearance of ten kings in this kingdom, after whom another king shall arise, differing from his predecessors; and he shall bring low three kings. He shall hurl defiance at the Most High and shall wear down the saints of the Most High. He shall plan to alter the customary times and law; and the saints shall be delivered into his power for a time and times and half a time. Then the court shall sit, and he shall be deprived of his sovereignty, so that in the end it may be destroyed and abolished. The kingly power, sovereignty, and greatness of all the kingdoms under heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High. Their kingly power is an everlasting power and all sovereignties shall serve them and obey them.'

Here the account ends. As for me, Daniel, my thoughts dismayed me greatly and I turned pale; and I kept these things in my mind.

^a In the third year of the reign of King Belshazzar, while I was in Susa the capital city of the province of Elam, a vision appeared to me, Daniel, similar to my former vision. In this vision I was watching beside the stream of the Ulai. I raised my eyes and there I saw a ram with two horns standing between me and the stream. The two horns were long, the one longer than the other, growing up behind. I watched the ram butting west and north and south. No beasts could stand before it, no one could rescue from its power. It did what it liked, making a display of its strength. While I pondered this, suddenly a he-goat came from the west skimming over the whole earth without touching the ground; it had a prominent horn between its eyes. It approached the two-horned ram which I had seen standing between me and the stream and rushed at it with impetuous force. I saw it advance on the ram, working itself into a fury against it, then strike the ram and break its two horns; the ram had no strength to resist. The he-goat flung it to the ground and trampled on it, and there was no one to save the ram.

Then the he-goat made a great display of its strength. Powerful as it was, its great horn snapped and in its place there sprang out towards the four quarters of heaven four prominent horns. Out of one of them there issued one small horn, which made a prodigious show of strength south and east and towards the fairest of all lands. It aspired to be as great as the host of heaven, and it cast down to the earth some of the host and some of the stars and trod them underfoot. It aspired to be as great as the Prince of the host, suppressed his regular offering and even threw down his sanctuary. The heavenly hosts were delivered up, and it raised itself ^b

^b and it raised itself: prob.

13 impiously against the regular offering and threw true religion to the ground ;
 13 in all that it did it succeeded. I heard a holy one speaking and another holy one answering him, whoever he was. The one said, 'For how long will the period of this vision last? How long will the regular offering be suppressed, how long will impiety cause desolation,^a and both the Holy 14 Place and the fairest of all lands^b be given over to be trodden down?' The answer came, 'For two thousand three hundred evenings and mornings ;
 then the Holy Place shall emerge victorious.'

15 All the while that I, Daniel, was seeing the vision, I was trying to understand it. Suddenly I saw standing before me one with the semblance of a 16 man ; at the same time I heard a human voice calling to him across the bend 17 of the Ulai, 'Gabriel, explain the vision to this man.' He came up to where I was standing ; I was seized with terror at his approach and threw myself on my face. But he said to me, 'Understand, O man : the vision points to 18 the time of the end.' When he spoke to me, I fell to the ground in a trance ;
 19 but he grasped me and made me stand up where I was. And he said, 'I shall make known to you what is to happen at the end of the wrath ; for 20 there is an end to the appointed time. The two-horned ram which you saw 21 signifies the kings of Media and Persia, the he-goat is the kingdom^c of 22 the Greeks and the great horn on his forehead is the first king. As for the horn which was snapped off and replaced by four horns : four kingdoms shall rise out of that nation, but not with power comparable to his.

23 In the last days of those kingdoms,
 when their sin is at its height,
 a king shall appear, harsh and grim, a master of stratagem.
 24 His power shall be great, he shall work havoc untold ;
 he shall succeed in whatever he does.
 He shall work havoc among great nations and upon a holy people.
 25 His mind shall be ever active,
 and he shall succeed in his crafty designs ;
 he shall conjure up great plans and, when they least expect it, work havoc on many.
 He shall challenge even the Prince of princes and be broken, but not by human hands.
 26 This revelation which has been given of the evenings and the mornings is true ;
 but you must keep the vision secret,
 for it points to days far ahead.'

27 As for me, Daniel, my strength failed me and I lay sick for a while. Then I rose and attended to the king's business. But I was perplexed by the revelation and no one could explain it.

9 IN THE FIRST YEAR OF THE REIGN OF DARIUS son of Ahasuerus (a Mede by birth, who was appointed king over the kingdom of the Chal-
 2 daeans) I, Daniel, was reading the scriptures and reflecting on the seventy years which, according to the word of the LORD to the prophet Jeremiah, were to pass while Jerusalem lay in ruins. Then I turned to the Lord God in earnest prayer and supplication with fasting and sackcloth and ashes. I prayed to the LORD my God, making confession thus:

'Lord, thou great and terrible God who faithfully keepest the covenant with those who love thee and observe thy commandments, we have sinned, we have done what was wrong and wicked; we have rebelled, we have turned our backs on thy commandments and thy decrees. We have not listened to thy servants the prophets, who spoke in thy name to our kings and princes, to our forefathers and to all the people of the land. O Lord, the right is on thy side; the shame, now as ever, belongs to us, the men of Judah and the citizens of Jerusalem, and to all the Israelites near and far in every land to which thou hast banished them for their treachery towards thee. O LORD, the shame falls on us as on our kings, our princes and our forefathers; we have all sinned against thee. Compassion and forgiveness belong to the Lord our God, though we have rebelled against him. We have not obeyed the LORD our God, we have not conformed to the laws which he laid down for us through his servants the prophets. All Israel has broken thy law and not obeyed thee, so that the curses set out in the law of Moses thy servant in the adjuration and the oath have rained down upon us; for we have sinned against him. He has fulfilled all that he said about us and about our rulers, by bringing upon us and upon Jerusalem a calamity greater than has ever happened in all the world. It was all fore-shadowed in the law of Moses, this calamity which has come upon us; yet we have done nothing to propitiate the LORD our God; we have neither repented of our wrongful deeds nor remembered that thou art true to thy word. The LORD has been biding his time and has now brought this calamity upon us. In all that he has done the LORD our God has been right; yet we have not obeyed him.

'And now, O Lord our God who didst bring thy people out of Egypt by a strong hand, winning for thyself a name that lives on to this day, we have sinned, we have done wrong. O Lord, by all thy saving deeds we beg that thy wrath and anger may depart from Jerusalem, thy city, thy holy hill; through our own sins and our fathers' guilty deeds Jerusalem and thy people have become a byword among all our neighbours. And now, our God, listen to thy servant's prayer and supplication; for thy own sake, O Lord, make thy face shine upon thy desolate sanctuary. Lend thy ear, O God, and hear, open thine eyes and look upon our desolation and upon the city that bears thy name; it is not by virtue of our own saving acts but by thy great mercy that we present our supplications before thee. O Lord, hear; O Lord, forgive; O Lord, listen and act; for thy own sake do not delay, O God, for thy city and thy people bear thy name.'

Thus I was speaking and praying, confessing my own sin and my people Israel's sin, and presenting my supplication before the LORD my God on behalf of his holy hill. While I was praying, the man Gabriel, whom I had already seen in the vision, came close to^a me at the hour of the evening sacrifice, flying swiftly.^b He spoke clearly to me and said, 'Daniel, I have

23 now come to enlighten your understanding. As you were beginning your supplications a word went forth; this I have come to pass on to you, for you are a man greatly beloved. Consider well the word, consider the vision:
 24 Seventy weeks are marked out for your people and your holy city; then rebellion shall be stopped,^a sin brought to an end,^b iniquity expiated, everlasting right ushered in, vision and prophecy sealed, and the Most
 25 Holy Place anointed. Know then and understand: from the time that the word went forth that Jerusalem should be restored and rebuilt, seven weeks shall pass till the appearance of one anointed, a prince; then for sixty-two weeks it shall remain restored, rebuilt with streets and conduits.
 26 At the critical time, after the sixty-two weeks, one who is anointed shall be removed with no one to take his part; and the horde of an invading prince shall work havoc on city and sanctuary. The end of it shall be a deluge, inevitable war with all its horrors. He shall make a firm league with 27 the mighty^c for one week; and, the week half spent, he shall put a stop to sacrifice and offering. And in the train of these abominations shall come an author of desolation; then, in the end, what has been decreed concerning the desolation will be poured out.⁷

10 IN THE THIRD YEAR OF CYRUS king of Persia a word was revealed to Daniel who had been given the name Belteshazzar. Though this word was true, it cost him^d much toil to understand it; nevertheless understanding came to him in the course of the vision.

23 In those days I, Daniel, mourned for three whole weeks. I refrained from all choice food; no meat or wine passed my lips, and I did not anoint myself
 4 until the three weeks had gone by. On the twenty-fourth day of the first month, I found myself on the bank of the great river, that is the Tigris;
 5 I looked up and saw a man clothed in linen with a belt of gold from Ophir
 6 round his waist. His body gleamed like topaz, his face shone like lightning, his eyes flamed like torches, his arms and feet sparkled like a disc of bronze;
 7 and when he spoke his voice sounded like the voice of a multitude. I, Daniel, alone saw the vision, while those who were near me did not see it,
 8 but great fear fell upon them and they stole away, and I was left alone gazing at this great vision. But my strength left me; I became a sorry figure 9 of a man, and retained no strength. I heard the sound of his words and,
 10 when I did so, I fell prone on the ground in a trance. Suddenly a hand grasped me and pulled me up on to my hands and knees. He said to me, 'Daniel, man greatly beloved, attend to the words I am speaking to you and stand up where you are, for I am now sent to you.' When he addressed
 12 me, I stood up trembling and he said, 'Do not be afraid, Daniel, for from the very first day that you applied your mind to understand and to mortify yourself before your God, your prayers have been heard, and I have come 13 in answer to them. But the angel prince of the kingdom of Persia resisted me for twenty-one days, and then, seeing that I had held out there, Michael, one of the chief princes, came to help me against the prince of the kingdom
 14 of Persia. And I have come to explain to you what will happen to your people in days to come; for this too is a vision for those days.'

^a Or restrained.^b Or sealed.^c Or many.^d him; prob. rdg.; Heb. om.

While he spoke to me I hung my head and was struck dumb. Suddenly one like a man touched my lips. Then I opened my mouth to speak and addressed him as he stood before me: 'Sir, this has pierced me to the heart, and I retain no strength. How can my lord's servant presume to talk with such as my lord, since my strength has failed me and no breath is left in me?' Then the figure touched me again and restored my strength. He said,
 'Do not be afraid, man greatly beloved; all will be well with you. Be strong, be strong.' When he had spoken to me, I recovered strength and said, 'Speak, sir, for you have given me strength.' He said, 'Do you know why I have come to you? I am first going back to fight with the prince of Persia, and, as soon as I have left, the prince of Greece will appear: I have no ally on my side to help and support me, except Michael your prince.^a However I will tell you what is written in the Book of Truth. Here and now I will tell you what is true:

'Three more kings will appear in Persia, and the fourth will far surpass all the others in wealth; and when he has extended his power through his wealth, he will rouse the whole world against the kingdom of Greece. Then there will appear a warrior king. He will rule a vast kingdom and will do what he chooses. But as soon as he is established, his kingdom will be shattered and split up north, south, east and west. It will not pass to his descendants, nor will any of his successors have an empire like his; his kingdom will be torn up by the roots and given to others as well as to them.
 Then the king of the south will become strong; but another of the captains will surpass him in strength and win a greater kingdom. In due course the two will enter into a friendly alliance; to redress the balance the daughter of the king of the south will be given in marriage to the king of the north, but she will not maintain her influence and their line will not last. She and her escort, her child, and also her lord and master, will all be the victims of foul play. Then another shoot from the same stock as hers will appear in his father's place, will penetrate the defences of the king of the north and enter his fortress, and will win a decisive victory over his people. He will take back as booty to Egypt even the images of their gods cast in metal and their precious vessels of silver and gold. Then for some years he will refrain from attacking the king of the north. After that the king of the north will overrun the southern kingdom but will retreat to his own land.

'His sons will press on to assemble a great armed horde. One of them will sweep on and on like an irresistible flood. And after that he will press on as far as his enemy's stronghold. The king of the south, his anger roused, will march out to do battle with the king of the north who, in turn, will raise a great horde, but it will be delivered into the hands of his enemy. When this horde has been captured, the victor will be elated and he will slaughter tens of thousands, yet he will not maintain his advantage. Then the king of the north will once more raise a horde even greater than the last and, when the years come round, will advance with a great army and a large baggage-train. During these times many will resist the king of the south, but some hotheads among your own people will rashly attempt to give substance to a vision and will come to disaster. Then the king of the north will come and throw up siege-ramps and capture a fortified town, and the forces of the south will not stand up to him; even the flower of their army will not be able to hold their ground. And so his adversary will do as he pleases and meet with no opposition. He will establish himself in the fairest of all lands and it will come wholly into his power. He will resolve to subjugate all the dominions of the king of the south; and he will come to fair terms with him,^a and he will give him a young woman in marriage, for the destruction of the kingdom; but she will not persist nor serve his purpose. Then he will turn to the coasts and islands and take many prisoners, but a foreign commander^b will put an end to his challenge by wearing him down;^c thus he will throw back his challenge on to him. He will fall back upon his own strongholds; there he will come to disaster and be overthrown and be seen no more.

‘He will be succeeded by one who will send out an officer with a royal escort to extort tribute; after a short time this king too will meet his end, yet neither openly nor in battle.

‘A contemptible creature will succeed but will not be given recognition as king; yet he will seize the kingdom by dissimulation and intrigue in time of peace. He will sweep away all forces of opposition as he advances, and even the Prince of the Covenant will be broken. He will enter into fraudulent alliances and, although the people behind him are but few, he will rise to power and establish himself in time of peace. He will overrun the richest districts of the province and succeed in doing what his fathers and forefathers failed to do, distributing spoil, booty, and property to his followers. He will lay his plans against fortresses, but only for a time.

‘He will rouse himself in all his strength and courage and lead a great army against the king of the south, but the king of the south will press the campaign against him with a very great and numerous army; yet the king of the south will not persist, for traitors will lay their plots. Those who eat at his board will be his undoing; his army will be swept away, and many will fall on the field of battle. The two kings will be bent on mischief and, sitting at the same table, they will lie to each other with advantage to neither. Yet there will still be an end to the appointed time. Then one will return home with a long baggage-train, and with anger in his heart against the Holy Covenant; he will work his will and return to his own land.

‘At the appointed time he will once more overrun the south, but he will not succeed as he did before. Ships from the west will sail against him, and he will receive a rebuff. He will turn and vent his fury against the Holy Covenant; on his way back he will take due note of those who have forsaken it. Armed forces dispatched by him will desecrate the sanctuary and the citadel and do away with the regular offering. And there they will set up “the abominable thing that causes desolation”. He will win over by plausible promises those who are ready to condemn the covenant, but the people who are faithful to their God will hold firm and fight back. Wise leaders of the nation will give guidance to the common people; yet for a while they will fall victims to fire and sword, to captivity and pillage. But these victims will not want for help, though small, even if many who join them are insincere. Some of these leaders will themselves fall victims for a time so that they may be tested, refined and made shining white. Yet there will still be an end^a to the appointed time. The king will do what he chooses; he will exalt and magnify himself above every god and against the God of gods he will utter monstrous blasphemies. All will go well for him until the time of wrath ends, for what is determined must be done. He will ignore his ancestral gods, and the god beloved of women; to no god will he pay heed but will exalt himself above them all. Instead he will honour the god of the citadel, a god unknown to his ancestors, with gold and silver, gems and costly gifts. He will garrison his strongest fortresses with aliens, the people of a foreign god. Those whom he favours he will load with honour, putting them in office over the common people and distributing land at a price.

'At the time of the end, he and the king of the south will make feints at one another, and the king of the north will come storming against him with chariots and cavalry and many ships. He will overrun land after land, sweeping over them like a flood, amongst them the fairest of all lands, and tens of thousands shall fall victims. Yet all these lands [including Edom and Moab and the remnant of the Ammonites] will survive his attack. He will reach out to land after land, and Egypt will not escape. He will gain control of her hidden stores of gold and silver and of all her treasures; Libyans and Cushites will follow in his train. Then rumours from east and north will alarm him, and he will depart in a great rage to destroy and to exterminate many. He will pitch his royal pavilion between the sea and the holy hill, the fairest of all hills; and he will meet his end with no one to help him.

At that moment Michael shall appear,
 Michael the great captain,
 who stands guard over your fellow-countrymen;
 and there will be a time of distress such as has never been since they became a nation till that moment.

But at that moment your people will be delivered,^b
 every one who is written in the book:
 many of those who sleep in the dust of the earth will wake,
 some to everlasting life
 and some to the reproach of eternal abhorrence.

The wise leaders shall shine like the bright vault of heaven, and those who have guided the people in the true path
 shall be like the stars for ever and ever.

But you, Daniel, keep the words secret and seal the book till the time of the end. Many will be at their wits' end, and punishment will be heavy.'

And I, Daniel, looked and saw two others standing, one on this bank of the river and the other on the opposite bank. And I said to the man clothed in linen who was above the waters of the river, 'How long will it be before

^b Or will escape.

7 these portents cease?' The man clothed in linen above the waters lifted to heaven his right hand and his left, and I heard him swear by him who lives for ever: 'It shall be for a time, times, and a half. When the power of the holy people ceases to be dispersed, all these things shall come to an end.'
8 I heard but I did not understand, and so I said, 'Sir, what will the issue of 9 these things be?' He replied, 'Go your way, Daniel, for the words are kept 10 secret and sealed till the time of the end. Many shall purify themselves and be refined, making themselves shining white, but the wicked shall continue in wickedness and none of them shall understand; only the wise 11 leaders shall understand. From the time when the regular offering is abolished and "the abomination of desolation" is set up, there shall be 12 an interval of one thousand two hundred and ninety days. Happy the man who waits and lives to see the completion of one thousand three hundred 13 and thirty-five days! But go your way to the end and rest, and you shall arise to your destiny at the end of the age.'

HOSEA

THE WORD OF THE LORD which came to Hosea son of Beeri 1 during the reigns of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah, and during the reign of Jeroboam son of Jehoash king of Israel.

Hosea's unfaithful wife

THIS IS THE BEGINNING of the LORD's message by Hosea. He said, 2 Go, take a wanton for your wife and get children of her wantonness; for like a wanton this land is unfaithful to the LORD. So he went and took 3 Gomer, a worthless woman;^a and she conceived and bore him a son. And 4
 the LORD said to him,

Call him Jezreel;^b for in a little while I will punish the line of Jehu for the blood shed in Jezreel and put an end to the kingdom of Israel.
 On that day 5
 I will break Israel's bow in the Vale of Jezreel.

She conceived again and bore a daughter, and the LORD said to him, 6
 Call her Lo-ruhamah;^c
 for I will never again show love to Israel, never again forgive them.^d

After weaning Lo-ruhamah, she conceived and bore a son; and the LORD 8 9 said,

Call him Lo-ammi;^e
 for you are not my people,
 and I will not be your God.
 The Israelites shall become countless as the sands of the sea 10 which can neither be measured nor numbered;
 it shall no longer be said, 'They are not my people',
 they shall be called Sons of the Living God.
 Then the people of Judah and of Israel shall be reunited 11 and shall choose for themselves a single head,
 and they shall become masters of the earth;
 for great shall be the day of Jezreel.

^a a worthless woman: or daughter of Diblaim.

^b That is God shall sow.

^c That is Not loved.

^d Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds (7) Then I will love Judah and will save them. I will save them not by bow or sword or weapon of war, by horses or by horsemen, but by the LORD their God.

^e That is Not my people.

- 2 Then you will say to your brothers, 'You are my people', and to your sisters, 'You are loved.'
- 2 Plead my cause with your mother;
is she not my wife and I her husband? ^a Plead with her to forswear those wanton looks,
to banish the lovers from her bosom.
- 3 Or I will strip her and expose her naked as the day she was born;
I will make her bare as the wilderness,
parched as the desert,
and leave her to die of thirst.
- 4 I will show no love for her children;
they are the offspring of wantonness,
and their mother is a wanton.
- 5 She who conceived them is shameless;
she says, 'I will go after my lovers;
they give me my food and drink,
my wool and flax, my oil and my perfumes.'
- 6 Therefore I will block her road with thorn-bushes and obstruct her path with a wall,
so that she can no longer follow her old ways.
- 7 When she pursues her lovers she will not overtake them,
when she looks for them she will not find them;
then she will say,
'I will go back to my husband again;
I was better off with him than I am now.'
- 8 For she does not know that it is I who gave her corn, new wine, and oil,
I who lavished upon her silver and gold which they spent on the Baal.
- 9 Therefore I will take back
my corn at the harvest and my new wine at the vintage, and I will take away the wool and the flax which I gave her to cover her naked body;
so I will show her up for the lewd thing she is,
and no lover will want to steal her from me.
- 10 I will ravage the vines and the fig-trees,
which she says are the fee
with which her lovers have hired her,
and turn them into jungle where wild beasts shall feed.
- 11 I will put a stop to her merrymaking,
her pilgrimages and new moons, her sabbaths ^c and festivals.
- 13 I will punish her for the holy days
when she burnt sacrifices to the Baalim,

^a is she . . . husband?: or for she is no longer my wife nor I her husband.

^b Verses 11 and 12 transposed.

^c Or her full moons.

when she decked herself with earrings and necklaces,
ran after her lovers and forgot me.

This is the very word of the LORD.

But now listen, 14
I will woo her, I will go with her into the wilderness and comfort her:

there I will restore her vineyards, 15 turning the Vale of Trouble into the Gate of Hope,^a and there she will answer as in her youth,
when she came up out of Egypt.

On that day she shall call me 'My husband' and shall no more call me 'My Baal';^b 16 and I will wipe from her lips the very names of the Baalim;
never again shall their names be heard. 17

This is the very word of the LORD.^c

Then I will make a covenant on behalf of Israel with the wild beasts, 18
the birds of the air, and the things that creep on the earth, and I will break bow and sword and weapon of war and sweep them off the earth, so that all living creatures may lie down without fear. I will betroth you to myself 19 for ever, betroth you in lawful wedlock with unfailing devotion and love;
I will betroth you to myself to have and to hold, and you shall know the 20
LORD. At that time I will give answer, says the LORD, I will answer for the 21 heavens and they will answer for the earth, and the earth will answer for 22
the corn, the new wine, and the oil, and they will answer for Jezreel.
Israel shall be my new sowing in the land, and I will show love to Lo- 23 ruhamah and say to Lo-ammi, 'You are my people', and he will say, 'Thou art my God.'

The LORD said to me, 3

Go again and love a woman
loved by another man, an adulteress, and love her as I, the LORD, love the Israelites although they resort to other gods and love the raisin-cakes offered to their idols.

So I got her back^d for fifteen pieces of silver, a homer of barley and a 2 measure of wine; and I said to her, 3

Many a long day you shall live in my house
and not play the wanton,
and have no intercourse with a man, nor I with you.

For the Israelites shall live many a long day 4
without king or prince,
without sacrifice or sacred pillar,
without image or household gods;

^a turning . . . Hope: or Emek-achor to Pethah-tikvah. ^b Also means My husband.

^c This . . . LORD: transposed from after On that day in verse 16. ^d got her back:
or bought her.

- 5 but after that they will again seek the LORD their God and David their king, and turn anxiously to the LORD for his bounty in days to come.

God's case against Israel

- 4 Hear the word of the LORD, O Israel;
for the LORD has a charge to bring against the people of the land:
There is no good faith or mutual trust,
no knowledge of God in the land,
2 oaths are imposed and broken, they kill and rob;
there is nothing but adultery and licence,^a one deed of blood after another.
3 Therefore the land shall be dried up,
and all who live in it shall pine away,
and with them the wild beasts and the birds of the air;
even the fish shall be swept from the sea.
4 But it is not for any man to bring a charge,
it is not for him to prove a case;
the quarrel with you, false priest, is mine.
5 Priest?^b By day and by night you blunder on,
you and the prophet with you.
6 My people are ruined for lack of knowledge;
your own countrymen are brought to ruin.^c
You have rejected knowledge, and I will reject you from serving me as priest.
You have forgotten the teaching of God,
and I, your God, will forget your sons.
7 The more priests there are, the more they sin against me;
their dignity I will turn into dishonour.
8 They feed on the sin of my people and batten on their iniquity.
9 But people and priest shall be treated alike.
I will punish them for their conduct and repay them for their deeds:
10 they shall eat but never be satisfied, behave wantonly but their lust will never be overtaxed,
for they have forsaken the LORD to give themselves to sacred prostitution.
11 New wine and old steal my people's wits:^d 12 they ask advice from a block of wood and take their orders from a fetish;

^a and licence: prob. rdg.; Heb. they exceed.

^d steal . . . wits: or embolden my people.

- for a spirit of wantonness has led them astray
and in their lusts they are unfaithful to their God.
Your men sacrifice on mountain-tops 13
and burn offerings on the hills, under oak and poplar
and the terebinth's pleasant shade.
Therefore your daughters play the wanton and your sons' brides commit adultery.
I will not punish your daughters for playing the wanton 14
nor your sons' brides for their adultery, because your men resort to wanton women and sacrifice with temple-prostitutes.
A people without understanding comes to grief;
they are a mother turned wanton. 15
Bring no guilt-offering,^a Israel;
do not come to Gilgal, Judah,
do not go up to Beth-aven to swear by the life of the LORD, since Israel has run wild, wild as a heifer; 16
and will the LORD now feed this people like lambs in a broad meadow?
Ephraim, keeping company with idols, 17 has held a drunken orgy,^b 18
they have practised sacred prostitution,
they have preferred dishonour to glory.
The wind shall sweep them away, wrapped in its wings, 19
and they will find their sacrifices a delusion.
- Hear this, you priests, 5
and listen, all Israel; let the royal house mark my words.
Sentence is passed on you;
for you have been a snare at Mizpah,
and a net spread out on Tabor.
The rebels! they have shown base ingratitude, 2
but I will punish them all.
I have cared for Ephraim 3
and I have not neglected Israel;
but now Ephraim has played the wanton and Israel has defiled himself.
Their misdeeds have barred their way back to their God; 4
for a wanton spirit is in them, and they care nothing for the LORD.
Israel's arrogance cries out against him; 5
^c Ephraim's guilt is his undoing, and Judah no less is undone.
They go with sacrifices of sheep and cattle 6 to seek the LORD, but do not find him.

^a Bring no guilt-offering: prob. rdg.; Heb. Let him not be guilty. ^b a drunken

- 7 He has withdrawn himself from them;
for they have been unfaithful to him,
and their sons are bastards.
Now an invader shall devour their fields.
- 8 Blow the trumpet in Gibeah,
the horn in Ramah,
raise the battle-cry in Beth-aven:
'Benjamin, we are with you!'
- 9 On the tribes of Israel I have proclaimed this unalterable doom:
on the day of punishment Ephraim shall be laid waste.
- 10 The rulers of Judah act like men who move their neighbour's boundary;
on them will I pour out my wrath like a flood.
- 11 Ephraim is an oppressor trampling on justice, doggedly pursuing what is worthless.
- 12 But I am a festering sore to Ephraim,
a canker to the house of Judah.
- 13 So when Ephraim found that he was sick,
Judah that he was covered with sores,
Ephraim went to Assyria,
he went in haste to the Great King;
but he has no power to cure you or to heal your sores.
- 14 Yes indeed, I will be fierce as a panther to Ephraim, fierce as a lion to Judah—
I will maul the prey and go, carry it off beyond hope of rescue—I, the LORD.
- 15 I will go away and return to my place until in their horror they seek me, and look earnestly for me in their distress.
- 6 Come, let us return to the LORD;
for he has torn us and will heal us,
he has struck us and he will bind up our wounds;
after two days he will revive us,
on the third day he will restore us,
that in his presence we may live.
- 3 Let us humble ourselves, let us strive to know the LORD, whose justice dawns like morning light,^a
and its dawning is as sure as the sunrise.
It will come to us like a shower,
like spring rains that water the earth.
- 4 O Ephraim, how shall I deal with you?
How shall I deal with you, Judah?
Your loyalty to me is like the morning mist,
like dew that vanishes early.
- 5 Therefore have I lashed you through the prophets and torn you^b to shreds with my words;

^a Line transposed from end of verse 5.^b Prob. rdg.; Heb. them.

loyalty is my desire, not sacrifice, not whole-offerings but the knowledge of God.	6
At Admah ^a they have broken my covenant, there they have played me false.	7
Gilead is a haunt of evildoers, marked by a trail of blood;	8
like robbers lying in wait for a man, priests are banded together to do murder on the road to Shechem; their deeds are outrageous.	9
At Israel's sanctuary I have seen a horrible thing: there Ephraim played the wanton and Israel defiled himself.	10
And for you, too, Judah, comes a harvest of reckoning.	11
When I would reverse the fortunes of my people, when I would heal Israel,	7
then the guilt of Ephraim stands revealed, and all the wickedness of Samaria; they have not kept faith.
They are thieves, they break into houses; ^b they are robbers, they strip people in the street, little thinking that I have their wickedness ever in mind.	2
Now their misdeeds beset them and stare me in the face.
They win over the king with their wickedness and princes with their treachery,	3
lecherous all of them, hot as an oven over the fire which the baker does not stir after kneading the dough until it is proved.	4
On their king's festal day the officers begin to be inflamed with wine, and he joins in the orgies of arrogant men;	5
for their hearts are heated by it ^c like an oven.	6
While they are relaxed all night long their passion slumbers, but in the morning it flares up like a blazing fire;
they all grow feverish, hot as an oven, and devour their rulers.	7
King after king falls from power, but not one of them calls upon me.
Ephraim and his aliens make a sorry mixture;	8
Ephraim has become a cake half-baked. Foreigners fed on his strength,	9
but he was unaware;

^a At Admah: prob. rdg.; Heb. Like Adam.^b houses: prob. rdg.; Heb. om.^c are heated by it: prob. rdg.; Heb. draw near.

- even his grey hairs turned white,
but he was unaware.
- 10 So Israel's arrogance cries out against them;
but they do not return to the LORD their God nor seek him, in spite of it all.
- 11 Ephraim is a silly senseless pigeon,
now calling upon Egypt, now turning to Assyria for help.
- 12 Wherever they turn, I will cast my net over them
and will bring them down like birds on the wing;
I will take them captive as soon as I hear them flocking.
- 13 Woe betide them, for they have strayed from me!
May disaster befall them for rebelling against me!
I long to deliver them,
but they tell lies about me.
- 14 There is no sincerity in their cry to me;
for all their howling on their pallets
and gashing of themselves over corn and new wine, they are turning away from me.
- 15 Though I support them, though I give them strength of arm,
they plot evil against me.
- 16 Like a bow gone slack,
they relapse into the worship of their high god;^a their talk is all lies,^b and so their princes shall fall by the sword.
- 8 Put the trumpet to your lips!
A^c vulture hovers over the sanctuary of the LORD:
they have broken my covenant and rebelled against my instruction.
- 2 They cry to me for help:
'We know thee, God of Israel.'^d
- 3 But Israel is utterly loathsome;
and therefore he shall run before the enemy.
- 4 They make kings, but not by my will;
they set up officers, but without my knowledge;
they have made themselves idols of their silver and gold.^e
- 5 Your calf-gods stink, O Samaria;
my anger flares up against them.
Long will it be before they prove innocent.
- 6 For what sort of a god is this bull?
It is no god,
a craftsman made it;
the calf of Samaria will be broken in fragments.

Israel sows the wind and reaps the whirlwind; there are no heads on the standing corn, it yields no grain; and, if it yielded any, strangers would swallow it up.	7
Israel is now swallowed up, lost among the nations, a worthless nothing.	8
For, like a wild ass that has left the herd, they have run to Assyria.	9
Ephraim has bargained for lovers; and, because they have bargained among the nations,	10
I will now round them up, and then they will soon abandon this setting up of kings and princes.
For Ephraim in his sin has multiplied altars, altars have become his sin.	11
Though I give him countless rules in writing, they are treated as invalid.	12
Though they sacrifice flesh as offerings to me and eat them, I, ^a the LORD, will not accept them.	13
Their guilt will be remembered and their sins punished.
They shall go back to Egypt, or in Assyria they shall eat unclean food.
Israel has forgotten his Maker and built palaces,	14
Judah has multiplied walled cities; but I will set fire to his cities, and it shall devour his castles.
Do not rejoice, Israel, do not exult like other peoples; for like a wanton you have forsaken your God, you have loved an idol ^b	9
on every threshing-floor heaped with corn. Threshing-floor and winepress shall know them no more, new wine shall disown ^c them.	2
They shall not dwell in the LORD's land; Ephraim shall go back to Egypt, or in Assyria they shall eat unclean food.	3
They shall pour out no wine to the LORD, they shall not bring their sacrifices to him; that would be mourners' fare for them, and all who ate it would be polluted.	4
For their food shall only stay their hunger; it shall not be offered in the house of the LORD.
What will you do for the festal day, the day of the LORD's pilgrim-feast?	5

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. he.^b an idol: or a harlot's fee.^c Or fail.

- 6 For look, they have fled from a scene of devastation:
Egypt shall receive them,
Memphis shall be their grave;
the sands of Syrtes shall wreck them,
weeds shall inherit their land,
thorns shall grow in their dwellings.
- 7 The days of punishment are come,
the days of vengeance are come when Israel shall be humbled.
Then the prophet shall be made a fool and the inspired seer a madman
by your great guilt.
- 8 With great enmity Ephraim lies in wait for God's people while the prophet is a fowler's trap by all their paths, a snare in the very temple of God.
- 9 They lead them deep into sin as at the time of Gibeah.
Their guilt will be remembered and their sins punished.
- 10 I came upon Israel like grapes in the wilderness,
I looked on their forefathers with joy like the first ripe figs;
but they resorted to Baal-peor
and consecrated themselves to a thing of shame, 11 and Ephraim became as loathsome as the thing he loved.
Their honour shall fly away like a bird:
no childbirth, no fruitful womb, no conceiving;
12 even if they rear their children,
I will make them childless, without posterity.
Woe to them indeed when I turn away from them!
- 13 As lion-cubs emerge only to be hunted,^a so must Ephraim bring out his children for slaughter.
- 14 Give them, O LORD—what wilt thou give them?
Give them a womb that miscarries and dry breasts.
- 15 All their wickedness was seen at Gilgal; there did I hate them.
For their evil deeds I will drive them from my house,
I will love them no more: all their princes are in revolt.
- 16 Ephraim is struck down:
their root is withered, and they yield no fruit;
if ever they give birth,
I will slay the dearest offspring of their womb.
- 17 My God shall reject them, because they have not listened to him,
and they shall become wanderers among the nations.

God's judgement on Israel

Israel is like a rank vine ripening its fruit:	10
his fruit grows more and more, and more and more his altars; the fairer his land becomes, the fairer he makes his sacred pillars.
They are crazy now, they are mad.	2
God himself will hack down their altars and wreck their sacred pillars.
Well may they say, 'We have no king, for we do not fear the LORD; and what can the king do for us?'	3
There is nothing but talk, imposing of oaths and making of treaties, all to no purpose; and litigation spreads like a poisonous weed along the furrows of the fields.	4
The inhabitants of Samaria tremble for the calf-god of Beth-aven; the people mourn over it ^a and its priestlings howl, distressed for their image, their glory, which is carried away into exile.	5
It shall be carried to Assyria as tribute to the Great King; disgrace shall overtake Ephraim and Israel shall feel the shame of their disobedience.	6
Samaria and her king are swept away like flotsam on the water; the hill-shrines of Aven are wiped out, the shrines where Israel sinned;	7 8 thorns and thistles grow over her altars. So they will say to the mountains, 'Cover us', and to the hills, 'Fall on us.'
Since the day of Gibeah Israel has sinned; there they took their stand in rebellion. Shall not war overtake them in Gibeah? I have come against the rebels to chastise them, and the peoples shall mass against them in hordes for their two deeds of shame.	9 10
Ephraim is like a heifer broken in, which loves to thresh corn, across whose fair neck I have laid a yoke; ^b I have harnessed Ephraim to the pole that he ^c may plough, that Jacob may harrow his land. Sow for yourselves in justice, and you will reap what loyalty deserves. Break up your fallow;	11 12

^a the people mourn over it: or the high god and his people mourn.

^b a yoke:

for it is time to seek the LORD, seeking him till he comes and gives you just measure of rain.

13 You have ploughed wickedness into your soil,
and the crop is mischief;
you have eaten the fruit of treachery.

Because you have trusted in your chariots,
in the number of your warriors, 14 the tumult of war shall arise against your people, and all your fortresses shall be razed
as Shalman razed Beth-arbel in the day of battle, dashing the mother to the ground with her babes.
15 So it shall be done to you, Bethel, because of your evil scheming;
as sure as day dawns, the king of Israel shall be swept away.

11 When Israel was a boy, I loved him;
I called my son out of Egypt;
2 but the more I called, the further they went from me;
they must needs sacrifice to the Baalim
and burn offerings before carved images.
3 It was I who taught Ephraim to walk,
I who had taken them in my arms;
4 but they did not know that I harnessed them in leading-strings^a and led them with bonds of love^b—that I had lifted them like a little child^c to my cheek, that I had bent down to feed them.
5 Back they shall go to Egypt,
the Assyrian shall be their king;
for they have refused to return to me.
6 The sword shall be swung over their blood-spattered altars and put an end to their prattling priests 7 and devour my people in return for all their schemings, bent on rebellion as they are.
Though they call on their high god,
even then he will not reinstate them.
8 How can I give you up, Ephraim, how surrender you, Israel?
How can I make you like Admah or treat you as Zeboyim?
My heart is changed within me,
my remorse kindles already.
9 I will not let loose my fury,
I will not turn round and destroy Ephraim;
for I am God and not a man,
the Holy One in your midst;

^a leading-strings: or cords of leather.

No; when I roar, I who am God, my sons shall come with speed out of the west.
They will come speedily, flying like birds out of Egypt, like pigeons from Assyria, and I will settle them in their own homes.	11
This is the very word of the LORD.
Ephraim besets me with treachery, the house of Israel besets me with deceit; and Judah is still restive under God, still loyal to the idols he counts holy.	12
Ephraim is a shepherd whose flock is but ^b wind, a hunter chasing the east wind all day; ^c he makes a treaty with Assyria and carries tribute of oil to Egypt.	12
The LORD has a charge to bring against Judah and is resolved to punish Jacob for his conduct; he will requite him for his misdeeds.	2
Even in the womb Jacob overreached his brother, and in manhood he strove with God.	3
The divine angel stood firm and held his own; ^d Jacob wept and begged favour for himself.	4
Then God met him at Bethel and there spoke with him.
The LORD the God of Hosts, the LORD is his name.	5
Turn back all of you by God's help; practise loyalty and justice and wait always upon your God.	6
False scales are in merchants' hands, and they love to cheat; so Ephraim says,	7
'Surely I have become a rich man, I have made my fortune'; but all his gains will not pay for the guilt ^e of his sins.	8
Yet I have been the LORD your God since your days in Egypt; I will make you live in tents yet again, as in the old days.	9
I spoke to the prophets, it was I who gave vision after vision; I spoke through the prophets in parables. Was there idolatry in Gilead?	10
Yes: they were worthless and sacrificed to bull-gods in Gilgal; their altars were common as heaps of stones beside a ploughed field.	11

- 12 Jacob fled to the land of Aram;
 Israel did service to win a wife,
 to win a wife he tended sheep.
- 13 By a prophet the LORD brought up Israel out of Egypt and by a prophet he was tended.
- 14 Ephraim has given bitter provocation;
 therefore his Lord will make him answerable for his own death
 and bring down upon his own head the blame for all that he has done.
- 13 When the Ephraimites mumbled their prayers,
 God himself denounced Israel;
 they were guilty of Baal-worship and died.
 Yet now they sin more and more;
 they have made themselves an image of cast metal,
 they have fashioned their silver into idols,
 nothing but the work of craftsmen;
 men say of them,
 ‘Those who kiss calf-images offer human sacrifice.’
- 3 Therefore they shall be like the morning mist or like dew that vanishes early,
 like chaff blown from the threshing-floor or smoke from a chimney.
- 4 But I have been the LORD your God since your days in Egypt,
 when you knew no other saviour than me,
 no god but me.
- 5 I cared for you in the wilderness,
6 in a land of burning heat, as if you were in pasture.
 So they were filled,
 and, being filled, grew proud;
 and so they forgot me.
- 7 So now I will be like a panther to them,
 I will prowl like a leopard by the wayside;
- 8 I will meet them like a she-bear robbed of her cubs
 and tear their ribs apart,
 like a lioness I will devour them on the spot,
 I will rip them up like a wild beast.
- 9 I have destroyed you, O Israel; who is there to help you?
10 Where now is your king that he may save you, or the rulers in all your cities
 for whom you asked me,
 begging for king and princes?
- 11 I gave you a king in my anger,
 and in my fury took him away.

- Ephraim's guilt is tied up in a scroll, 12
 his sins are kept on record.
- When the pangs of his birth came over his mother, 13
 he showed himself a senseless child;
 for at the proper time he could not present himself at the mouth of the womb.
- Shall I redeem him from Sheol? 14 Shall I ransom him from death?
- Oh, for your plagues, O death! Oh, for your sting, Sheol!
 I will put compassion out of my sight.
- Though he flourishes among the reeds,^a 15
 an east wind shall come, a blast from the LORD, rising over the desert;
- Ephraim's spring will fail and his fountain run dry.
 It will carry away as spoil his whole store of costly treasures.
- Samaria will become desolate because she has rebelled against her God; 16 her babes will fall by the sword and be dashed to the ground, her women with child shall be ripped up.

Repentance, forgiveness, and restoration

- Return, O Israel, to the LORD your God; 14
 for you have stumbled in your evil courses.
- Come with your words ready, 2
 come back to the LORD;
- say to him, 'Thou dost not endure iniquity.^b Accept our plea,
 and we will pay our vows with cattle from our pens.
- Assyria shall not save us, nor will we seek horses to ride; 3
 what we have made with our own hands
 we will never again call gods;
 for in thee the fatherless find a father's love.'
- I will heal their apostasy; of my own bounty will I love them; 4 for my anger is turned away from them.
- I will be as dew to Israel 5
 that he may flower like the lily, strike root like the poplar^c and put out fresh shoots, 6 that he may be as fair as the olive and fragrant as Lebanon.
- Israel shall again dwell in my^d shadow 7
 and grow corn in abundance;

- they shall flourish like a vine
and be famous as the wine of Lebanon.
- 8 What has Ephraim any more to do with idols?
I have spoken and I affirm it:
I am the pine-tree that shelters you;
to me you owe your fruit.
- 9 Let the wise consider these things and let him who considers take note;
for the LORD's ways are straight and the righteous walk in them, while sinners stumble.

JOEL

- 1 The word of the LORD which came to Joel son of Pethuel.

The day of the LORD

- 2 Listen, you elders;
hear me, all you who live in the land:
has the like of this happened in all your days or in your fathers' days?
- 3 Tell it to your sons and they may tell theirs;
let them pass it on from generation to generation.
- 4 What the locust has left the swarm eats,
what the swarm has left the hopper eats,
and what the hopper has left the grub eats.
- 5 Wake up, you drunkards, and lament your fate;
mourn for the fresh wine, all you wine-drinkers,
because it is lost to you.
- 6 For a horde has overrun my land, mighty and past counting;
their teeth are a lion's teeth;
they have the fangs of a lioness.
- 7 They have ruined my vines
and left my fig-trees broken and leafless, they have plucked them bare and stripped them of their bark;
they have left the branches white.
- 8 Wail like a virgin wife in sackcloth,
wailing over the bridegroom of her youth:
- 9 the drink-offering and grain-offering are lost to the house of the LORD.
- 10 Mourn, you priests, ministers of the LORD,
the fields are ruined, the parched earth mourns;

for the corn is ruined, the new wine is desperate,
the oil has failed.

Despair, you husbandmen; you vinedressers, lament, 11
because the wheat and the barley,
the harvest of the field, is lost.

The vintage is desperate, and the fig-tree has failed; 12
pomegranate, palm, and apple,
all the trees of the country-side are parched,
and none make merry over harvest.

Priests, put on sackcloth and beat your breasts; 13 lament, you ministers of the altar;
come, lie in sackcloth all night long, you ministers of my God;
for grain-offering and drink-offering are withheld from the house of your God.

Proclaim a solemn fast, appoint a day of abstinence. 14
You elders, summon all that live in the land to come together in the house of your God, and cry to the LORD.

Alas! the day is near, 15
the day of the LORD: it comes,
a mighty destruction from the Almighty.

Look! it stares us in the face; 16
the house of our God has lost its food, lost all its joy and gladness.

The soil is parched, 17
the dykes are dry,
the granaries are deserted,
the barns ruinous;
for the rains have failed.

The cattle are exhausted, 18
the herds of oxen distressed because they have no pasture;
the flocks of sheep waste away.

To thee I cry, O LORD; 19
for fire has devoured the open pastures and the flames have burnt up all the trees of the country-side.

The very cattle in the field look up to thee; 20
for the water-channels are dried up, and fire has devoured the open pastures.

Blow the trumpet in Zion, 2
sound the alarm upon my holy hill;
let all that live in the land tremble,
for the day of the LORD has come, surely a day of darkness and gloom is upon us, 2
a day of cloud and dense fog;
like a blackness spread over the mountains
a mighty, countless host appears;

- 3 their like has never been known,
 nor ever shall be in ages to come;
 their vanguard a devouring fire,
 their rearguard leaping flame;
 before them the land is a garden of Eden,
 behind them a wasted wilderness;
 nothing survives their march.
- 4 On they come, like squadrons of horse,
 like war-horses they charge;
5 bounding over the peaks they advance with the rattle of chariots, like flames of fire burning up the stubble,
 like a countless host in battle array.
- 6 Before them nations tremble,
 every face turns pale.
- 7 Like warriors they charge,
 they mount the walls like men at arms,
 each marching in line,
 no confusion in the ranks,
8 none jostling his neighbour,
 none breaking line.
- 9 They plunge through streams without halting their advance;
10 they burst into the city, leap on to the wall,
 climb into the houses,
 entering like thieves through the windows.
- 11 Before them the earth shakes,
 the heavens shudder,
 sun and moon are darkened,
 and the stars forbear to shine.
- 12 The LORD thunders before his host;
 his is a mighty army,
 countless are those who do his bidding.
- 13 Great is the day of the LORD and terrible,
 who can endure it?
- 14 And yet, the LORD says, even now turn back to me with your whole heart, fast, and weep, and beat your breasts.
 Rend your hearts and not your garments;
 turn back to the LORD your God;
 for he is gracious and compassionate,
 long-suffering and ever constant,
 always ready to repent of the threatened evil.
- 15 It may be he will turn back and repent and leave a blessing behind him, blessing enough for grain-offering and drink-offering for the LORD your God.
- 16 Blow the trumpet in Zion,
 proclaim a solemn fast, appoint a day of abstinence;

gather the people together, proclaim a solemn assembly; 16 summon the elders,
 gather the children, yes, babes at the breast;
 bid the bridegroom leave his chamber and the bride her bower.
 Let the priests, the ministers of the LORD, 17 stand weeping between the porch and the altar and say, 'Spare thy people, O LORD, thy own people, expose them not to reproach, lest other nations make them a byword
 and everywhere men ask,
 "Where is their God?"'

Israel forgiven and restored

Then the LORD's love burned with zeal for his land, 18
 and he was moved with compassion for his people.
 He answered their appeal and said, 19
 I will send you corn, and new wine, and oil,
 and you shall have your fill;
 I will expose you no longer to the reproach of other nations.
 I will remove the northern peril far away from you 20
 and banish them into a land parched and waste, their vanguard into the eastern sea
 and their rear into the western,
 and the stench shall rise from their rotting corpses
 because of their proud deeds!
 Earth, be not afraid, rejoice and be glad; 21
 for the LORD himself has done a proud deed.
 Be not afraid, you cattle in the field; 22
 for the pastures shall be green,
 the trees shall bear fruit,
 the fig and the vine yield their harvest.
 O people of Zion, 23
 rejoice and be glad in the LORD your God, who gives you good food in due measure^a
 and sends down rain^b as of old.
 The threshing-floors shall be heaped with grain, 24
 the vats shall overflow with new wine and oil.
 So I will make good the years 25
 that the swarm has eaten,
 hopper and grub and locust,
 my great army which I sent against you;

^a Or gives you a sign pointing to prosperity.
 rain and autumn rain.

^b Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds spring

26 and you shall eat, you shall eat your fill and praise the name of the LORD your God who has done wonders for you,^a

27 and you shall know that I am present in Israel, that I and no other am the LORD your God;
and my people shall not again be brought to shame.

28 Thereafter the day shall come when I will pour out my spirit on all mankind;
your sons and your daughters shall prophesy,
your old men shall dream dreams
and your young men see visions;

29 I will pour out my spirit in those days
even upon slaves and slave-girls.

30 I will show portents in the sky and on earth,
blood and fire and columns of smoke;

31 the sun shall be turned into darkness and the moon into blood
before the great and terrible day of the LORD comes.

32 Then everyone who invokes the LORD by name shall be saved:
for when the LORD gives the word
there shall yet be survivors on Mount Zion and in Jerusalem a remnant^b whom the LORD will call.^c

3 When that time comes, on that day
when I reverse the fortunes of Judah and Jerusalem,

2 I will gather all the nations together and lead them down to the Valley of the LORD's Judgement and there bring them to judgement on behalf of Israel, my own possession;
for they have scattered my people throughout their own countries, have taken each their portion of my land

3 and shared out my people by lot, bartered a boy for a whore,
and sold a girl for wine and drunk it down.

4 What are you to me, Tyre and Sidon and all the districts of Philistia?
Can you pay me back for anything I have done? Is there anything that you can do to me? Swiftly and speedily I will make your deeds recoil upon 5 your own heads; for you have taken my silver and my gold and carried off
6 my costly treasures into your temples; you have sold the people of Judah and Jerusalem to the Greeks, and removed them far beyond their own 7 frontiers. But I will rouse them to leave the places to which you have sold 8 them. I will make your deeds recoil upon your own heads: I will sell your sons and your daughters to the people of Judah, and they shall sell them to the Sabaeans, a nation far away. The LORD has spoken.

Proclaim this amongst the nations: 9-12^a Declare a holy war, call your troops to arms!
 Beat your mattocks into swords and your pruning-hooks into spears.^b Rally to each other's help, all you nations round about.
 Let the weakling say, 'I am strong',
 and let the coward show himself brave.^c
 Let all the nations hear the call to arms and come to the Valley of the LORD's Judgement;
 let all the warriors come and draw near
 and muster there;
 for there I will take my seat and judge all the nations round about.

Ply the sickle, for the harvest is ripe; 13
 come, tread the grapes,
 for the press is full and the vats overflow;
 great is the wickedness of the nations.
 The roar of multitudes, multitudes, in the Valley of Decision! 14
 The day of the LORD is at hand in the Valley of Decision;
 sun and moon are darkened 15
 and the stars forbear to shine.
 The LORD roars from Zion 16
 and thunders from Jerusalem;
 heaven and earth shudder,
 but the LORD is a refuge for his people and the defence of Israel.

Thus you shall know that I am the LORD your God, 17 dwelling in Zion my holy mountain; Jerusalem shall be holy,
 and no one without the right shall pass through her again.
 When that day comes, 18
 the mountains shall run with fresh wine
 and the hills flow with milk.

All the streams of Judah shall be full of water, and a fountain shall spring from the LORD's house and water the gorge of Shittim, but Egypt shall become a desert 19
 and Edom a deserted waste, because of the violence done to Judah
 and the innocent blood shed in her land;

^a The order of lines in verses 9-12 has been re-arranged in several places. ^b Beat . . . spears: cp. Isa. 2. 4; Mic. 4. 3.

and I will spill their blood,
 the blood I have not yet spilt.
 Then there shall be people living in Judah for ever,
 in Jerusalem generation after generation;
 and the LORD will dwell in Zion.

AMOS

- 1 THE WORDS OF AMOS, one of the sheep-farmers of Tekoa, which he received in visions concerning Israel during the reigns of Uzziah king of Judah and Jeroboam son of Jehoash king of Israel,
 2 two years before the earthquake. He said,
 The LORD roars from Zion
 and thunders from Jerusalem;
 the shepherds' pastures are scorched and the top of Carmel^a is dried up.

The sins of Israel and her neighbours

- 3 These are the words of the LORD:
 For crime after crime of Damascus
 I will grant them no reprieve,
 because they threshed Gilead under threshing-sledges spiked with iron.
 4 Therefore will I send fire upon the house of Hazael, fire that shall eat up Ben-hadad's palaces;
 5 I will crush the great men of Damascus and wipe out those who live in the Vale of Aven and the sceptred ruler of Beth-eden;
 the people of Aram shall be exiled to Kir.
 It is the word of the LORD.
- 6 These are the words of the LORD:
 For crime after crime of Gaza
 I will grant them no reprieve,
 because they deported a whole band of exiles and delivered them up to Edom.
 7 Therefore will I send fire upon the walls of Gaza,
 fire that shall consume its palaces.
 8 I will wipe out those who live in Ashdod and the sceptred ruler of Ashkelon;
 I will turn my hand against Ekron, and the remnant of the Philistines shall perish.
 It is the word of the Lord GOD.

^a top of Carmel: or choicest farmland.

These are the words of the LORD:

For crime after crime of Tyre
I will grant them no reprieve,
because, forgetting the ties of kinship,
they delivered a whole band of exiles to Edom.
Therefore will I send fire upon the walls of Tyre,
fire that shall consume its palaces.

These are the words of the LORD:

For crime after crime of Edom
I will grant them no reprieve,
because, sword in hand, they hunted their kinsmen down,
stifling their natural affections.
Their anger raged unceasing,
their fury stormed unchecked.
Therefore will I send fire upon Teman, fire that shall consume the palaces of Bozrah.

These are the words of the LORD:

For crime after crime of the Ammonites
I will grant them no reprieve,
because in their greed for land
they invaded the ploughlands of Gilead.
Therefore will I set fire to the walls of Rabbah,
fire that shall consume its palaces
amid war-cries on the day of battle, with a whirlwind on the day of tempest;
then their king shall be carried into exile,
he and his officers with him.
It is the word of the LORD.

These are the words of the LORD:

For crime after crime of Moab
I will grant them no reprieve, because they burnt the bones of the king of Edom to ash.^a Therefore will I send fire upon Moab, fire that shall consume the palaces in their towns;
Moab shall perish in uproar,
with war-cries and the sound of trumpets,
and I will cut off the ruler from among them
and kill all their officers with him.
It is the word of the LORD.

These are the words of the LORD:

For crime after crime of Judah
I will grant them no reprieve,
because they have spurned the law of the LORD and have not observed his decrees,

^a to ash: or for lime.

and have been led astray by the false gods that their fathers followed.

5 Therefore will I send fire upon Judah, fire that shall consume the palaces of Jerusalem.

6 These are the words of the LORD:

For crime after crime of Israel
I will grant them no reprieve,
because they sell the innocent for silver and the destitute for a pair of shoes.

7 They grind the heads of the poor into the earth and thrust the humble out of their way.

Father and son resort to the same girl,
to the profanation of my holy name.

8 Men lie down beside every altar on garments seized in pledge, and in the house of their God^a they drink liquor got by way of fines.

9 Yet it was I who destroyed the Amorites before them, though they were tall as cedars,
though they were sturdy as oaks,
I who destroyed their fruit above and their roots below.

10 It was I who brought you up from the land of Egypt,
I who led you in the wilderness forty years,
to take possession of the land of the Amorites;

11 I raised up prophets from your sons,
Nazirites from your young men.
Was it not so indeed, you men of Israel?
says the LORD.

12 But you made the Nazirites drink wine, and said to the prophets, 'You shall not prophesy.'

13 Listen, I groan under the burden of you,
as a wagon creaks under a full load.

14 Flight shall not save the swift,
the strong man shall not rally his strength.

15 The warrior shall not save himself,
the archer shall not stand his ground;
the swift of foot shall not be saved,
nor the horseman escape;

16 on that day the bravest of warriors shall be stripped of his arms and run away.

This is the very word of the LORD.

^a Or gods.

Israel's sins and threatened punishment

- LISTEN, ISRAELITES, to these words that the LORD addresses to you, 3 to the whole nation which he brought up from Egypt:
- For you alone have I cared 2
among all the nations of the world;
therefore will I punish you for all your iniquities.
- Do two men travel together 3
unless they have agreed?
- Does a lion roar in the forest 4
if he has no prey?
- Does a young lion growl in his den
if he has caught nothing?
- Does a bird fall into a trap on the ground 5
if the striker is not set for it?
- Does a trap spring from the ground and take nothing?
- If a trumpet sounds the alarm, 6
are not the people scared?
- If disaster falls on a city,
has not the LORD been at work? ^a
- For the Lord GOD does nothing 7 without giving to his servants the prophets knowledge of his plans.
- The lion has roared; who is not terrified? 8
The Lord GOD has spoken; who will not prophesy?
- Stand upon the palaces in Ashdod 9
and upon the palaces of Egypt,
and proclaim aloud:
'Assemble on the hills of Samaria,
look at the tumult seething among her people and at the oppression in her midst;
what do they care for honesty 10
who hoard in their palaces the gains of crime and violence?'
This is the very word of the LORD.
- Therefore these are the words of the Lord GOD: 11
An enemy shall surround ^b the land;
your stronghold shall be thrown down and your palaces sacked.
- These are the words of the LORD: 12
As a shepherd rescues out of the jaws of a lion
two shin bones or the tip of an ear, so shall the Israelites who live in Samaria be rescued like a corner of a couch or a chip from the leg of a bed. ^c

^a If disaster . . . work?: or If there is evil in a city, will not the LORD act? ^b shall surround: prob. rdg.; Heb. and round. ^c or a chip . . . bed: prob. rdg.; Heb. obscure.

- 13 Listen and testify against the family of Jacob.
This is the very word of the Lord GOD, the God of Hosts.
- 14 On the day when I deal with Israel
for all their crimes,
I will most surely deal with the altars of Bethel:
the horns of the altar shall be hacked off and shall fall to the ground.
- 15 I will break down both winter-house and summer-house;
houses of ivory shall perish,
and great houses be demolished.
This is the very word of the LORD.
- 4 Listen to this,
you cows of Bashan who live on the hill of Samaria,
you who oppress the poor and crush the destitute,
who say to your lords, 'Bring us drink':
2 the Lord GOD has sworn by his holiness that your time is coming when men shall carry you away on their shields^a and your children in fish-baskets.
- 3 You shall each be carried straight out through the breaches in the walls and pitched on a dunghill.^b
This is the very word of the LORD.
- 4 Come to Bethel—and rebel!
Come to Gilgal—and rebel the more!
Bring your sacrifices for the morning,
your tithes within three days.
- 5 Burn your thank-offering without leaven;
announce, proclaim your freewill offerings;
for you love to do what is proper, you men of Israel!
This is the very word of the Lord GOD.
- 6 It was I who kept teeth idle
in all your cities,
who brought famine on all your settlements;
yet you did not come back to me.
This is the very word of the LORD.
- 7 It was I who withheld the showers from you while there were still three months to harvest.
I would send rain on one city
and no rain on another;
rain would fall on one field,
and another would be parched for lack of it.
- 8 From this city and that, men would stagger to another for water to drink, but would not find enough;

^a Or baskets.^b a dunghill: prob. rdg.; Heb. the Harmon.

- yet you did not come back to me.
This is the very word of the LORD.
- I blasted you with black blight and red; 9
I laid waste^a your gardens and vineyards;
the locust devoured your fig-trees and your olives;
yet you did not come back to me.
This is the very word of the LORD.
- I sent plague upon you like the plagues of Egypt; 10
I killed with the sword
your young men and your troops of horses.
I made your camps stink in your nostrils;
yet you did not come back to me.
This is the very word of the LORD.
- I brought destruction amongst you 11
as God destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah;
you were like a brand snatched from the fire;
yet you did not come back to me.
This is the very word of the LORD.
- Therefore, Israel, this is what I will do to you; 12
and, because this is what I will do to you, Israel, prepare to meet your God.
- It is he who forges the thunder and creates the wind, 13 who showers abundant rain on the earth,^b who darkens the dawn with thick clouds and marches over the heights of the earth—
his name is the LORD the God of Hosts.
- Listen to these words; I raise a dirge over you, O Israel: 5
She has fallen to rise no more,
the virgin Israel,
prostrate on her own soil, with no one to lift her up.
- These are the words of the Lord GOD: 3
The city that marched out to war a thousand strong shall have but a hundred left,
that which marched out a hundred strong shall have but ten men of Israel left.
- These are the words of the LORD to the people of Israel: 4 Resort to me, if you would live, not to Bethel; 5 go not to Gilgal, nor pass on to Beersheba;
for Gilgal shall be swept away and Bethel brought to nothing.
- If you would live, resort to the LORD, 6 or he will break out against Joseph like fire, fire which will devour Israel with no one to quench it;

^a I laid waste: prob. rdg.; Heb. to increase.

^b who showers . . . earth: prob. rdg.;

- 8^a he who made the Pleiades and Orion,
 who turned darkness into morning
 and darkened day into night, who summoned the waters of the sea
 and poured them over the earth, 9 who makes Taurus rise after Capella and Taurus set hard on the rising of the Vintager ^b—he who does this, his name is the LORD. ^c
- 7 You that turn justice upside down ^d
 and bring righteousness to the ground, 10 you that hate a man who brings the wrongdoer to court and loathe him who speaks the whole truth:
 11 for all this, because you levy taxes on the poor and extort a tribute of grain from them, though you have built houses of hewn stone,
 you shall not live in them,
 though you have planted pleasant vineyards,
 you shall not drink wine from them.
- 12 For I know how many your crimes are and how countless your sins,
 you who persecute the guiltless, hold men to ransom
 and thrust the destitute out of court.
- 13 At that time, therefore, a prudent man will stay quiet,
 for it will be an evil time.
- 14 Seek good and not evil,
 that you may live,
 that the LORD the God of Hosts may be firmly on your side,
 as you say he is.
- 15 Hate evil and love good;
 enthrone justice in the courts;
 it may be that the LORD the God of Hosts will be gracious to the survivors of Joseph.
- 16 Therefore these are the words of the LORD the God of Hosts:
 There shall be wailing in every street,
 and in all open places cries of woe.
 The farmer shall be called to mourning,
 and those skilled in the dirge to ^e wailing;
 17 there shall be lamentation in every vineyard;
 for I will pass through the midst of you,
 says the LORD.
- 18 Fools who long for the day of the LORD,
 what will the day of the LORD mean to you?
 It will be darkness, not light.

- It will be as when a man runs from a lion, and a bear meets him, 19
or turns into a house and leans his hand on the wall,
and a snake bites him.
The day of the LORD is indeed darkness, not light, 20
a day of gloom with no dawn.
- I hate, I spurn your pilgrim-feasts; 21
I will not delight in your sacred ceremonies.
When you present your sacrifices and offerings 22
I will not accept them,
nor look on the buffaloes of your shared-offerings.
Spare me the sound of your songs; 23
I cannot endure the music of your lutes.
Let justice roll on like a river 24
and righteousness like an ever-flowing stream.
Did you bring me sacrifices and gifts, 25
you people of Israel, those forty years in the wilderness?
No! but now you shall take up 26
the shrine of your idol king and the pedestals of your images,^a which you have made for yourselves, and I will drive you into exile beyond Damascus. 27
- So says the LORD; the God of Hosts is his name.

- Shame on you who live at ease in Zion, 6
and you, untroubled on the hill of Samaria, men of mark in the first of nations,
you to whom the people of Israel resort!
Go, look at Calneh, 2 travel on to Hamath the great,
then go down to Gath of the Philistines—are you better than these kingdoms?
Or is your^b territory greater than theirs^c?
You who thrust the evil day aside 3
and make haste to establish violence.^d
You who loll on beds inlaid with ivory 4
and sprawl over your couches, feasting on lambs from the flock
and fatted calves,
you who pluck the strings of the lute 5
and invent musical instruments like David,
you who drink wine by the bowlful 6
and lard yourselves with the richest of oils, but are not grieved at the ruin of Joseph—

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds the star of your gods. ^b Prob. rdg.; Heb. their. ^c Prob. rdg.; Heb. yours. ^d You . . . violence: or You who invoke the day of wrongdoing and bring near the sabbath of violence.

- 7 now, therefore,
you shall head the column of exiles;
that will be the end of sprawling and revelry.
- 8 The Lord GOD has sworn by himself:
I loathe the arrogance of Jacob,
I loathe his palaces;
city and all in it I will abandon to their fate.
- 9 If ten men are left in one house,
they shall die,
10 and a man's uncle and the embalmer shall take him up to carry his body out of the house for burial, and they shall call to someone in a corner of the house,
'Any more there?', and he shall answer, 'No.'
Then he will add, 'Hush!'— for the name of the LORD must not be mentioned.
- 11 For the LORD will command, and at the shock the great house will be rubble
and the cottage matchwood.
- 12 Can horses gallop over rocks?
Can the sea be ploughed with oxen?
Yet you have turned into venom the process of law and justice itself into poison, 13 you who are jubilant over a nothing^a and boast,
'Have we not won power^a by our own strength?'
- 14 O Israel, I am raising a nation against you,
and they shall harry your land
from Lebo-hamath to the gorge of the Arabah.
This is the very word of the LORD the God of Hosts.

Visions foretelling doom upon Israel

- 7 THIS WAS WHAT THE LORD GOD SHOWED ME: a swarm of locusts hatched out when the late corn, which comes after the king's early 2 crop, was beginning to sprout. As they were devouring the last of the herbage in the land, I said, 'O Lord GOD, forgive; what will Jacob be after 3 this? He is so small.' Then the LORD relented and said, 'This shall not happen.'
- 4 This was what the Lord GOD showed me: the Lord GOD was summoning a flame of fire^b to devour the great abyss, and to devour all creation.
5 I said, 'O Lord GOD, I pray thee, cease; what will Jacob be after this? He
6 is so small.' The LORD relented and said, 'This also shall not happen.'

^a a nothing and power: Heb. Lo-debar and Karnaim, making a word-play on the two place-names. ^b a flame of fire: prob. rdg.; Heb. to contend with fire.

This was what the LORD showed me: there was a man standing by a wall^a with a plumb-line in his hand. The LORD said to me, 'What do you see, Amos?' 'A plumb-line', I answered, and the Lord said, 'I am setting a plumb-line to the heart of my people Israel; never again will I pass them by. The hill-shrines of Isaac shall be desolated and the sanctuaries of Israel laid waste; I will rise, sword in hand, against the house of Jeroboam.'

Amaziah, the priest of Bethel, reported to Jeroboam king of Israel: 'Amos is conspiring against you in Israel; the country cannot tolerate what he is saying. He says, "Jeroboam shall die by the sword, and Israel shall be deported far from their native land."' To Amos himself Amaziah said, 'Be off, you seer! Off with you to Judah! You can earn your living and do your prophesying there. But never prophesy again at Bethel, for this is the king's sanctuary, a royal palace.' 'I am^b no prophet,' Amos replied to Amaziah, 'nor am I a prophet's son; I am^b a herdsman and a dresser of sycomore-figs. But the LORD took me as I followed the flock and said to me, "Go and prophesy to my people Israel." So now listen to the word of the LORD. You tell me I am not to prophesy against Israel or go drivelling on against the people of Isaac. Now these are the words of the LORD: Your wife shall become a city strumpet^c and your sons and daughters shall fall by the sword. Your land shall be divided up with a measuring-line, you yourself shall die in a heathen country, and Israel shall be deported far from their native land and go into exile.'

This was what the Lord GOD showed me: there was a basket of summer fruit, and he said, 'What are you looking at, Amos?' I answered, 'A basket of ripe summer^d fruit.' Then the LORD said to me, 'The time is ripe^d for my people Israel. Never again will I pass them by. In that day, says the Lord GOD, the singing women in the palace shall howl, "So many dead men, flung out everywhere! Silence!"'

Listen to this, you who grind the destitute and plunder^e the humble, you who say, 'When will the new moon be over so that we may sell corn? When will the sabbath be past so that we may open our wheat again, giving short measure in the bushel and taking overweight in the silver, tilting the scales fraudulently, and selling the dust of the wheat; that we may buy the poor for silver and the destitute for a pair of shoes?' The LORD has sworn by the pride of Jacob: I will never forget any of their doings.

Shall not the earth shake for this?
Shall not all who live on it grieve?
All earth shall surge and seethe like the Nile and subside like the river of Egypt.

On that day, says the Lord GOD,
I will make the sun go down at noon and darken the earth in broad daylight.
I will turn your pilgrim-feasts into mourning and all your songs into lamentation.

^a Prob. rdg. ; Heb. adds of a plumb-line. ^b Or was. ^c become . . . strumpet: or be carried off as a prostitute in a raid. ^d ripe summer and ripe: a play on the Heb. qais (summer) and qes (end). ^e and plunder: prob. rdg. ; Heb. to destroy.

I will make you all put sackcloth round your waists and have all your heads shaved.
I will make it like mourning for an only son and the end of it a bitter day.

- 11 The time is coming, says the Lord GOD,
when I will send famine on the land,
not hunger for bread or thirst for water,
but for hearing the word of the LORD.
12 Men shall stagger from north to south,^a they shall range from east to west, seeking the word of the LORD,
but they shall not find it.
13 On that day fair maidens and young men shall faint from thirst;
14 all who take their oath by Ashimah, goddess of Samaria, all who swear, 'By the life of your god, O Dan',
and, 'By the sacred way to Beersheba', shall fall to rise no more.

- 9 I saw the LORD standing by the altar, and he said:
Strike the capitals so that the whole porch is shaken;
I will smash them all into pieces^b and I will kill them to the last man^c with the sword.
No fugitive shall escape,
no survivor find safety;
2 if they dig down to Sheol, thence shall my hand take them;
if they climb up to heaven,
thence will I bring them down.
3 If they hide on the top of Carmel,
there will I search out and take them;
if they conceal themselves from me in the depths of the sea,
there will I bid the sea-serpent bite them.
4 If they are herded into captivity by their enemies,
there will I bid the sword slay them,
and I will fix my eye on them
for evil and not for good.
5 The Lord the GOD of Hosts, at whose touch the earth heaves, and all who dwell on it wither,^d
it surges like the Nile,
and subsides like the river of Egypt,
6 who builds his stair up to the heavens and arches his ceiling over the earth,

who summons the waters of the sea and pours them over the land—
his name is the LORD.

Are not you Israelites like Cushites to me? 7
says the LORD.

Did I not bring Israel up from Egypt, the Philistines from Caphtor, the Aramaeans from Kir? 8 Behold, I, the Lord GOD,
have my eyes on this sinful kingdom,
and I will wipe it off the face of the earth.

A remnant spared and restored

Yet I will not wipe out the family of Jacob root and branch,
says the LORD.

No; I will give my orders, 9
I will shake Israel to and fro through all the nations as a sieve is shaken to and fro and not one pebble falls to the ground.

They shall die by the sword, all the sinners of my people, 10 who say, 'Thou wilt not let disaster come near us or overtake us.'

On that day I will restore 11
David's fallen house;

I will repair its gaping walls and restore its ruins;
I will rebuild it as it was long ago,
that they may possess what is left of Edom 12
and all the nations who were once named mine.

This is the very word of the LORD, who will do this.

A time is coming, says the LORD, 13
when the ploughman shall follow hard on the vintager,^a and he who treads the grapes after him who sows the seed.

The mountains shall run with fresh wine,
and every hill shall wave with corn.

I will restore the fortunes of my people Israel; 14
they shall rebuild deserted cities and live in them,
they shall plant vineyards and drink their wine,
make gardens and eat the fruit.

Once more I will plant them on their own soil, 15
and they shall never again be uprooted from the soil I have given them.
It is the word of the LORD your God.

OBADIAH

Edom's pride and downfall

1^a The vision of Obadiah: what the Lord GOD has said concerning Edom.

When a herald was sent out among the nations, crying,
'Rouse yourselves;
let us rouse ourselves to battle against Edom',
I heard this message from the LORD:

2 Look, I make you the least of all nations,
an object of contempt.
3 Your proud, insolent heart has led you astray;
you who haunt the crannies among the rocks,
making your home on the heights,
4 you say to yourself, 'Who can bring me to the ground?'
Though you soar as high as a vulture and your nest is set among the stars,
thence I will bring you down.
This is the very word of the LORD.

5^b If thieves or robbers come to you by night,
though your loss be heavy,
they will steal only what they want;
if vintagers come to you,
will they not leave gleanings?
6 But see how Esau's treasure is ransacked,
his secret wealth hunted out!
7 All your former allies march you to the frontier,
your confederates mislead you and bring you low,
your own kith and kin lay a snare for your feet,
a snare that works blindly, without wisdom.
8 And on that very day
I will destroy all the sages of Edom
and leave no wisdom on the mount of Esau.
This is the very word of the LORD.
9 Then shall your warriors, O Teman, be so enfeebled, that every man shall be cut down on the mount of Esau.
10 For the murderous violence done to your brother Jacob you shall be covered with shame and cut off for ever.

^a Verses 1-4: cp. Jer. 49. 14-16.

^b Verses 5 and 6: cp. Jer. 49. 9, 10.

On the day when you stood aloof,
 on the day when strangers carried off his wealth, 11
 when foreigners trooped in by his gates and parcelled out Jerusalem by lot,
 you yourselves were of one mind with them.
 Do not rejoice over your brother on the day of his misfortune, 12
 nor rejoice over Judah on his day of ruin;
 do not boast on the day of distress,
 nor enter my people's gates on the day of his downfall. 13
 Do not gloat over his fall on the day of his downfall nor seize his treasure on the day of his downfall.
 Do not wait at the cross-roads to cut off his fugitives 14 nor betray the survivors on the day of distress.
 For soon the day of the LORD will come on all the nations: 15
 you shall be treated as you have treated others,
 and your deeds will recoil on your own head.
 The draught that you have drunk on my holy mountain 16
 all the nations shall drink continually;
 they shall drink and gulp down and shall be as though they had never been;
 but on Mount Zion there shall be those that escape, 17
 and it shall be holy,
 and Jacob shall dispossess those that dispossessed them.
 Then shall the house of Jacob be fire, 18
 the house of Joseph flame,
 and the house of Esau shall be chaff;
 they shall blaze through it and consume it,
 and the house of Esau shall have no survivor.
 The LORD has spoken.
 Then they shall possess the Negeb, the mount of Esau, 19
 and the Shephelah of the Philistines;
 they shall possess the country-side of Ephraim and Samaria, and Benjamin shall possess Gilead.
 Exiles of Israel^a shall possess^b Canaan as far as Zarephath, 20 exiles of Jerusalem^c shall possess the cities of the Negeb.
 Those who find safety on Mount Zion shall go up 21
 to hold sway over the mount of Esau,
 and dominion shall belong to the LORD.

^a Prob. rdg. ; Heb. adds this army.

JONAH

Jonah's mission to Nineveh

1 THE WORD OF THE LORD CAME TO JONAH son of
2 Amittai: 'Go to the great city of Nineveh, go now and denounce it,
3 for its wickedness stares me in the face.' But Jonah set out for Tarshish to escape from the LORD. He went down to Joppa, where he found a ship bound for Tarshish. He paid his fare and went on board, meaning
4 to travel by it to Tarshish out of reach of the LORD. But the LORD let loose a hurricane, and the sea ran so high in the storm that the ship threatened
5 to break up. The sailors were afraid, and each cried out to his god for help. Then they threw things overboard to lighten the ship. Jonah had gone
6 down into a corner of the ship and was lying sound asleep when the captain came upon him. 'What, sound asleep?' he said. 'Get up, and call on your god; perhaps he will spare us a thought and we shall not perish.'

7 At last the sailors said to each other, 'Come and let us cast lots to find out who is to blame for this bad luck.' So they cast lots, and the lot fell on 8 Jonah. 'Now then,' they said to him, 'what is your business? Where do 9 you come from? What is your country? Of what nation are you?' 'I am a Hebrew,' he answered, 'and I worship the LORD the God of heaven, who 10 made both sea and land.' At this the sailors were even more afraid. 'What can you have done wrong?' they asked. They already knew that he was 11 trying to escape from the LORD, for he had told them so. 'What shall we do with you', they asked, 'to make the sea go down?' For the storm grew 12 worse and worse. 'Take me and throw me overboard,' he said, 'and the sea will go down. I know it is my fault that this great storm has struck
13 you.' The crew rowed hard to put back to land but in vain, for the sea ran 14 higher and higher. At last they called on the LORD and said, 'O LORD, do not let us perish at the price of this man's life; do not charge us with the 15 death of an innocent man. All this, O LORD, is thy set purpose.' Then they took Jonah and threw him overboard, and the sea stopped raging.
16 So the crew were filled with the fear of the LORD and offered sacrifice and made vows to him. But the LORD ordained that a great fish should 17 swallow Jonah, and for three days and three nights he remained in its belly.

2 Jonah prayed to the LORD his God from the belly of the fish:

2 I called to the LORD in my distress,
and he answered me;
out of the belly of Sheol I cried for help,
and thou hast heard my cry.
3 Thou didst cast me into the depths, far out at sea,
and the flood closed round me;
all thy waves, all thy billows, passed over me.

I thought I was banished from thy sight and should never see thy holy temple again. 4
 The water about me rose up to my neck;
 the ocean was closing over me. 5 Weeds twined about my head in the troughs of the mountains;
 I was sinking into a world 6
 whose bars would hold me fast for ever.
 But thou didst bring me up alive from the pit, O LORD my God.
 As my senses failed me I remembered the LORD, and my prayer reached thee in thy holy temple. 7
 Men who worship false gods may abandon their loyalty, but I will offer thee sacrifice with words of praise; 8
 I will pay my vows; victory is the LORD's. 9

Then the LORD spoke to the fish and it spewed Jonah out on to the dry land. 10
 The word of the LORD came to Jonah a second time: 'Go to the great 3 1 2 city of Nineveh, go now and denounce it in the words I give you.' Jonah 3-4 obeyed at once and went to Nineveh. He began by going a day's journey into the city, a vast city, three days' journey across, and then proclaimed:
 'In forty days Nineveh shall be overthrown!' The people of Nineveh 5 believed God's word. They ordered a public fast and put on sackcloth, high and low alike. When the news reached the king of Nineveh he rose 6 from his throne, stripped off his robes of state, put on sackcloth and sat in ashes. Then he had a proclamation made in Nineveh: 'This is a decree 7 of the king and his nobles. No man or beast, herd or flock, is to taste food, to graze or to drink water. They are to clothe themselves in sackcloth and 8 call on God with all their might. Let every man abandon his wicked ways and his habitual violence. It may be that God will repent and turn away 9 from his anger: and so we shall not perish.' God saw what they did, and 10 how they abandoned their wicked ways, and he repented and did not bring upon them the disaster he had threatened.

Jonah was greatly displeased and angry, and he prayed to the LORD: 4 1 2
 'This, O LORD, is what I feared when I was in my own country, and to forestall it I tried to escape to Tarshish; I knew that thou art "a god gracious and compassionate, long-suffering and ever constant, and always willing to repent of the disaster".^a And now, LORD, take my life: I should 3 be better dead than alive.' 'Are you so angry?' said the LORD. Jonah went 4 5 out and sat down on the east of the city. There he made himself a shelter and sat in its shade, waiting to see what would happen in the city. Then 6 the LORD God ordained that a climbing gourd^b should grow up over his head to throw its shade over him and relieve his distress, and Jonah was grateful for the gourd. But at dawn the next day God ordained that a worm should 7 attack the gourd, and it withered; and at sunrise God ordained that a scorch- 8 ing wind should blow up from the east. The sun beat down on Jonah's head till he grew faint. Then he prayed for death and said, 'I should be better 9 dead than alive.' At this God said to Jonah, 'Are you so angry over the

^a a god . . . disaster: cp. Exod. 34. 6.

^b a climbing gourd: or a castor-oil plant.

- 10 gourd?' 'Yes,' he answered, 'mortally angry.' The LORD said, 'You are sorry for the gourd, though you did not have the trouble of growing it, a plant 11 which came up in a night and withered in a night. And should not I be sorry for the great city of Nineveh, with its hundred and twenty thousand who cannot tell their right hand from their left, and cattle without number?'

MICAH

1 THIS IS THE WORD OF THE LORD which came to Micah of Moresheth during the reigns of Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah; which he received in visions concerning Samaria and Jerusalem.

The rulers of Israel and Judah denounced

- 2 Listen, you peoples, all together;
attend, O earth and all who are in it,
that the Lord GOD, the Lord from his holy temple,
may bear witness against you.
- 3 For look, the LORD is leaving his dwelling-place;
down he comes and walks on the heights of the earth.
4 Beneath him mountains dissolve
like wax before the fire, valleys are torn open,
as when torrents pour down the hill-side—
5 and all for the crime of Jacob and the sin of Israel.
What is the crime of Jacob? Is it not Samaria?
What is the hill-shrine of Judah? Is it not Jerusalem?
- 6 So I will make Samaria
a heap of ruins in open country,
a place for planting vines;
I will pour her stones down into the valley and lay her foundations bare.
- 7 All her carved figures shall be shattered,
her images burnt one and all;
I will make a waste heap of all her idols.
She amassed them out of fees for harlotry,
and a harlot's fee shall they become once more.
- 8 Therefore I must howl and wail,
go naked and distraught;
I must howl like a wolf, mourn like a desert-owl.
- 9 Her wound cannot be healed;
for the stroke has bitten deep into Judah,
it has fallen on the gate of my people,
upon Jerusalem itself.

Will you not weep your fill, weep your eyes out in Gath?	10
In Beth-aphrah sprinkle yourselves with dust;
take the road, you that dwell in Shaphir;	11
have not the people of Zaanan gone out in shame from their city?
Beth-ezel is a place of lamentation,
she can lend you support no longer.
The people of Maroth are greatly alarmed,	12
for disaster has come down from the LORD to the very gate of Jerusalem.
Harness the steeds to the chariot, O people of Lachish,	13
for you first led the daughter of Zion into sin;
to you must the crimes of Israel be traced.
Let Moresheth-gath be given her dismissal.	14
Beth-achzib has ^a disappointed ^b the kings of Israel.
And you too, O people of Mareshah,	15
I will send others to take your place;
and the glory of Israel shall hide in the cave of Adullam.
Shave the hair from your head in mourning	16
for the children of your delight;
make yourself bald as a vulture,
for they have left you and gone into exile.
Shame on those who lie in bed planning evil and wicked deeds	2 and rise at daybreak to do them, knowing that they have the power!
They covet land and take it by force;	2
if they want a house they seize it;
they rob a man of his home
and steal every man's inheritance.
Therefore these are the words of the LORD:	3
Listen, for this whole brood I am planning disaster, whose yoke you cannot shake from your necks
and walk upright; it shall be your hour of disaster.
On that day	4
they shall take up a poem about you and raise a lament thrice told, saying, 'We are utterly despoiled:
the land of the LORD's ^c people changes hands.
How shall a man have power ^d
to restore our fields, now parcelled out ^e ?'
Therefore there shall be no one to assign to you	5
any portion by lot in the LORD's assembly.

^a Beth-achzib has: prob. rdg.; Heb. The houses of Achzib have.^b Heb. achzab.^c the LORD's: prob. rdg.; Heb. my.^d have power: prob. rdg.; Heb. remove from me.^e now parcelled out: prob. rdg.; Heb. he will parcel out.

- 6 How they rant! They may say, 'Do not rant';
but this ranting is all their own,
these insults are their ^a own invention.
- 7 Can one ask, O house of Jacob,
'Is the LORD's patience truly at an end?
Are these his deeds?
Does not good come of the LORD's words?
He is the upright man's best friend.'
- 8 But you are no ^b people for me, rising up as my enemy to my ^c face,
to strip the cloak from him that was safe ^d
and take away the confidence of returning warriors,
- 9 to drive the women of my people from their pleasant homes and rob the children of my glory for ever.
- 10 Up and be gone; this is no resting-place for you,
you that to defile yourselves would commit any mischief, mischief however cruel.
- 11 If anyone had gone about in a spirit of falsehood and lies, saying, 'I will rant to you of wine and strong drink', his ranting would be what this people like.
- 12 I will assemble you, the whole house of Jacob;
I will gather together those that are left in Israel.
I will herd them like sheep in a fold,
like a grazing flock which stampedes at the sight of a man.
- 13 So their leader breaks out before them,
and they all break through the gate and escape,
and their king goes before them,
and the LORD leads the way.
- 3 And I said:
- Listen, you leaders of Jacob, rulers of Israel,
should you not know what is right?
2 You hate good and love evil,
you flay men alive and tear the very flesh from their bones;
3 you devour the flesh of my people, strip off their skin,
splinter their bones;
you shred them like flesh into a pot,
like meat into a cauldron.
- 4 Then they will call to the LORD, and he will give them no answer;
when that time comes he will hide his face from them,
so wicked are their deeds.
- 5 These are the words of the LORD concerning the prophets who lead

my people astray, who promise prosperity in return for a morsel of food, who proclaim a holy war against them if they put nothing into their mouths:

Therefore night shall bring you no vision, darkness no divination; the sun shall go down on the prophets, the day itself shall be black above them.	6
Seers and diviners alike shall blush for shame; they shall all put their hands over their mouths, because there is no answer from God.	7
But I am full of strength, ^a of justice and power, to denounce his crime to Jacob and his sin to Israel.	8
Listen to this, leaders of Jacob, rulers of Israel, you who make justice hateful and wrest it from its straight course, building Zion in bloodshed and Jerusalem in iniquity.	9 10
Her rulers sell justice, her priests give direction in return for a bribe, her prophets take money for their divination, and yet men rely on the LORD.	11
'Is not the LORD among us?' they say; 'then no disaster can befall us.'
Therefore, on your account Zion shall become a ploughed field, Jerusalem a heap of ruins, and the temple hill rough heath.	12

A remnant restored in an age of peace

In days to come the mountain of the LORD's house shall be set over all other mountains, lifted high above the hills.	4 ¹ ^b
Peoples shall come streaming to it, and many nations shall come and say, 'Come, let us climb up on to the mountain of the LORD, to the house of the God of Jacob, that he may teach us his ways and we may walk in his paths.'	2
For instruction issues from Zion, and out of Jerusalem comes the word of the LORD;

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds the spirit of the LORD.

^b Verses 1-3: cp. Isa. 2. 2-4.

- 3 he will be judge between many peoples and arbiter among mighty nations afar.
They shall beat their swords into mattocks
and their spears into pruning-knives;
nation shall not lift sword against nation
nor ever again be trained for war,
4 and each man shall dwell under his own vine,
under his own fig-tree, undisturbed.
For the LORD of Hosts himself has spoken.
- 5 All peoples may walk, each in the name of his god, but we will walk in the name of the LORD our God
for ever and ever.
- 6 On that day, says the LORD,
I will gather those who are lost;
I will assemble the exiles and I will strengthen the weaklings.
7 I will preserve the lost as a remnant and turn the derelict into a mighty nation.
The LORD shall be their king on Mount Zion
now and for ever.
- 8 And you, rocky bastion, hill of Zion's daughter,
the promises to you shall be fulfilled;
and your former sovereignty shall come again,
the dominion of the daughter of Jerusalem.
- 9 Why are you now filled with alarm?
Have you no king?
Have you no counsellor left,
that you are seized with writhing like a woman in labour?
10 Lie writhing on the ground like a woman in childbirth, O daughter of Zion;
for now you must leave the city
and camp in the open country;
and so you will come to Babylon.
There you shall be saved,
there the LORD will deliver you from your enemies.
- 11 But now many nations are massed against you;
they say, 'Let her suffer outrage,
let us gloat over Zion.'
- 12 But they do not know the LORD's thoughts
nor understand his purpose;
for he has gathered them like sheaves to the threshing-floor.
- 13 Start your threshing, daughter of Zion;
for I will make your horns of iron,
your hooves will I make of bronze,
and you shall crush many peoples.
You shall devote their ill-gotten gain to the LORD,
their wealth to the Lord of all the earth.

Get you behind your walls, you people of a walled city; the siege is pressed home against you: Israel's ruler shall be struck on the cheek with a rod.	5
But you, Bethlehem in Ephrathah, small as you are to be among Judah's clans, out of you shall come forth a governor for Israel, one whose roots are far back in the past, in days gone by.	2
Therefore only so long as a woman is in labour shall he give up Israel; and then those that survive of his race shall rejoin their brethren.	3
He shall appear and be their shepherd in the strength of the LORD, in the majesty of the name of the LORD his God.	4
And they shall continue, for now his greatness shall reach to the ends of the earth; and he shall be a man of peace.	5
When the Assyrian comes into our land, when he tramples our castles, we will raise against him seven men or eight to be shepherds and princes.
They shall shepherd Assyria with the sword and the land of Nimrod with bare blades; they shall deliver us from the Assyrians when they come into our land, when they trample our frontiers.	6
All that are left of Jacob, surrounded by many peoples, shall be like dew from the LORD, like copious showers on the grass, which do not wait for man's command or linger for any man's bidding.	7
All that are left of Jacob among the nations, surrounded by many peoples, shall be like a lion among the beasts of the forest, like a young lion loose in a flock of sheep; as he prowls he will trample and tear them, with no rescuer in sight.	8
Your hand shall be raised high over your foes, and all who hate you shall be destroyed.	9
On that day, says the LORD, I will destroy all your horses among you and make away with your chariots.	10
I will destroy the cities of your land and raze your fortresses.	11
I will destroy all your sorcerers, and there shall be no more soothsayers among you.	12

- 13 I will destroy your images and all the sacred pillars in your land;
you shall no longer bow in reverence before things your own hands made.
- 14 I will pull down the sacred poles in your land,
and demolish your blood-spattered altars.
- 15 In anger and fury will I take vengeance
on all nations who disobey me.

Israel denounced for her people's sins

6 Hear now what the LORD is saying:

- Up, state your case to the mountains;
let the hills hear your plea.
- 2 Hear the LORD's case, you mountains,
you everlasting pillars that bear up the earth;
for the LORD has a case against his people,
and will argue it with Israel.
- 3 O my people, what have I done to you?
Tell me how I have wearied you; answer me this.
- 4 I brought you up from Egypt,
I ransomed you from the land of slavery,
I sent Moses and Aaron and Miriam to lead you.
- 5 Remember, my people,
what Balak king of Moab schemed against you,
and how Balaam son of Beor answered him;
consider the journey^a from Shittim to Gilgal,
in order that you may know the triumph of the LORD.
- 6 What shall I bring when I approach the LORD?
How shall I stoop before God on high?
Am I to approach him with whole-offerings or yearling calves?
- 7 Will the LORD accept thousands of rams or ten thousand rivers of oil?
Shall I offer my eldest son for my own wrongdoing,
my children for my own sin?
- 8 God^b has told you what is good;
and what is it that the LORD asks of you?
Only to act justly, to love loyalty,
to walk wisely before your God.
- 9 Hark, the LORD, the fear of whose name brings success,
the LORD calls to the city.
- 10 Listen, O tribe of Judah and citizens in assembly,^c can I overlook^d the infamous false measure,^e
the accursed short bushel?

^a consider the journey: prob. rdg.; Heb. om.^b God: prob. rdg.; Heb. obscure.^c citizens in assembly: prob. rdg.; Heb. unintelligible.^d can I overlook: prob.rdg.; Heb. obscure.^e Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds infamous treasures.

Can I connive at false scales or a bag of light weights? 11
 Your rich men are steeped in violence, 12
 your townsmen are all liars,
 and their tongues frame deceit.
 But now I will inflict a signal punishment on you 13
 to lay you waste for your sins:
 you shall eat but not be satisfied, 14
 your food shall lie heavy on your stomach;
 you shall come to labour but not bring forth,
 and even if you bear a child
 I will give it to the sword;
 you shall sow but not reap, 15
 you shall press the olives but not use the oil,
 you shall tread the grapes but not drink the wine.
 You have kept the precepts of Omri; 16
 what the house of Ahab did, you have done;
 you have followed all their ways.
 So I will lay you utterly waste;
 the nations shall jeer at your citizens,
 and their insults you shall bear.

Disappointment turned to hope

Alas! I am now like the last gatherings of summer fruit, 7 the last gleanings of the vintage,
 when there are no grapes left to eat,
 none of those early figs that I love.
 Loyal men have vanished from the earth, 2
 there is not one upright man.
 All lie in wait to do murder,
 each man drives his own kinsman like a hunter into the net.
 They are bent eagerly on wrongdoing, 3
 the officer who presents the requests,^a
 the judge who gives judgement^b for reward,
 and the nobleman who harps on his desires.
 Thus their goodness is twisted^c like rank weeds 4
 and their honesty like briars.^d
 As soon as thine eye sees, thy punishment falls;
 at that moment bewilderment seizes them.
 Trust no neighbour, put no confidence in your closest friend; 5 seal your lips even from the wife of your bosom.
 For son maligns father, 6
 daughter rebels against mother, daughter-in-law against mother-in-law,
 and a man's enemies are his own household.

^a the requests: prob. rdg.; Heb. om.

^b who gives judgement: prob. rdg.; Heb. om.

Heb. obscure.

- 7 But I will look for the LORD,
I will wait for God my saviour; my God will hear me.
- 8 O my enemies, do not exult over me;
I have fallen, but shall rise again;
though I dwell in darkness, the LORD is my light.
- 9 I will bear the anger of the LORD, for I have sinned against him, until he takes up my cause and gives judgement for me, until he brings me out into light, and I see his justice.
- 10 Then may my enemies see and be abashed, those who said to me, 'Where is he, the LORD your God?'
Then shall they be trampled like mud in the streets;
I shall gloat over them;
- 11 that will be a day for rebuilding your walls,
a day when your frontiers will be extended, 12 a day when men will come seeking you from Assyria to Egypt and from Egypt to the Euphrates,
from every sea and every mountain;
- 13 and the earth with its inhabitants shall be waste.
This shall be the fruit of their deeds.
- 14 Shepherd thy people with thy crook,
the flock that is thy very own,
that dwells by itself on the heath and in the meadows;
let them graze in Bashan and Gilead, as in days gone by.
- 15 Show us^a miracles as in the days when thou camest out of Egypt;
- 16 let the nations see and be taken aback for all their might,
let them keep their mouths shut,
make their ears deaf,
- 17 let them lick the dust like snakes,
like creatures that crawl upon the ground.
Let them come trembling and fearful from their strongholds, let them fear thee, O LORD our God.
- 18 Who is a god like thee? Thou takest away guilt, thou passest over the sin of the remnant of thy own people, thou dost not let thy anger rage for ever but delightest in love that will not change.
- 19 Once more thou wilt show us tender affection
and wash out our guilt,
casting all our sins into the depths of the sea.
- 20 Thou wilt show good faith to Jacob,
unchanging love to Abraham, as thou didst swear to our fathers in days gone by.

NAHUM

An oracle about Nineveh: the book of the vision of Nahum the Elkoshite. 1

The vengeance of the LORD on his enemies

The LORD is a jealous god, a god of vengeance; 2^a the LORD takes vengeance and is quick to anger. ^b ^c In whirlwind and storm he goes on his way, 3 and the clouds are the dust beneath his feet.
He rebukes the sea and dries it up 4
and makes all the streams fail.
Bashan and Carmel languish,
and on Lebanon the young shoots wither.
The mountains quake before him, 5
the hills heave and swell,
and the earth, the world and all that lives in it,
are in tumult at his presence.
Who can stand before his wrath? 6
Who can resist his fury?
His anger pours out ^d like a stream of fire,
and the rocks melt ^e before him.
The LORD is a sure refuge 7
for those who look to him in time of distress;
he cares for all who seek his protection and brings them safely ^f through the sweeping flood; 8
he makes a final end of all who oppose him and pursues his enemies into darkness.
No adversaries dare oppose him twice; 9-11
all are burnt up ^g like tangled briars.
Why do you make plots against the LORD?
He himself will make an end of you all.
From you has come forth a wicked counsellor,
plotting evil against the LORD.
The LORD takes vengeance on his adversaries, against his enemies he directs his wrath;
with skin scorched black, they are consumed like stubble that is parched and dry.

^a Verses 2-14 are an incomplete alphabetic acrostic poem; some parts have been re-arranged accordingly. ^b The rest of verse 2, The LORD takes . . . wrath, transposed to verse 11.

^c Prob. rdg.; Heb. inserts two lines The LORD is long-suffering and of great might, but the LORD does not sweep clean away. ^d pours out; or fuses or melts. ^e Prob. rdg.; Heb. are torn down. ^f brings them safely: prob. rdg.; Heb. om. ^g all are burnt up: prob. rdg.; Heb. for until.

Israel and Judah rid of the invaders

These are the words of the LORD:

- 13 Now I will break his yoke from your necks
 and snap the cords that bind you.
- 14 Image and idol will I hew down in the house of your God.
 This is what the LORD has ordained for you:
 never again shall your offspring be scattered;
 and I will grant you burial, fickle though you have been.
- 12 Has the punishment been so great?
 Yes, but it has passed away and is gone.
 I have afflicted you, but I will not afflict you again.
- 15 See on the mountains the feet of the herald
 who brings good news.
 Make your pilgrimages, O Judah,
 and pay your vows.
 For wicked men shall never again overrun you;
 they are totally destroyed.
- 2 2^a The LORD will restore the pride of Jacob and Israel alike, although plundering hordes have stripped them bare and pillaged their vines.

Nineveh's enemies triumphant

- 1 The battering-ram is mounted against your bastions,
 the siege is closing in.
 Watch the road and brace yourselves;
 put forth all your strength.
- 3 The shields of their warriors are gleaming red,
 their soldiers are all in scarlet;
 their chariots, when the line is formed,
 are like flickering^b fire;
- 4 squadrons of horse advance on the city in mad frenzy;^c they jostle one another in the outskirts, like waving torches;
- 5 the leaders display their prowess^d
 as they dash to and fro like lightning, rushing^e in headlong career;
 they hasten to the wall, and mantelets are set in position.
- 6 The sluices of the rivers are opened, the palace topples down;
- 7 the train of captives goes into exile,
 their slave-girls are carried off,
 moaning like doves and beating their breasts;

^a Verses 1 and 2 transposed.

^c Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds chariots.

^e Prob. rdg.; Heb. stumbling.

^b flickering; prob. rdg.; Heb. obscure.

^d display their prowess: or shout their own names.

- and Nineveh has become like a pool of water,
like the waters round her, which are ebbing away.
'Stop! Stop!' they cry; but none turns back. 8
- Spoil is taken, spoil of silver and gold;
there is no end to the store,
treasure beyond the costliest that man can desire.
Plundered, pillaged, stripped bare! 9
- Courage melting and knees giving way,
writhing limbs, and faces drained of colour!
Where now is the lions' den, 10
the cave ^a where the lion cubs lurked, where the lion and ^b lioness and young cubs went unafraid,
the lion which killed to satisfy its whelps 11
and for its mate broke the neck of the kill, mauling its prey to fill its lair, filling its den with the mauled prey? 12
- I am against you, says the LORD of Hosts, 13
I will smoke out your pride, ^c and a sword shall devour your cubs.
I will leave you no more prey on the earth, and the sound of your feeding ^d shall no more be heard.
- Ah! blood-stained city, steeped in deceit, 3
full of pillage, never empty of prey!
Hark to the crack of the whip, 2
the rattle of wheels and stamping of horses, bounding chariots, chargers rearing, 3 swords gleaming, flash of spears!
The dead are past counting, their bodies lie in heaps, corpses innumerable, men stumbling over corpses—
all for a wanton's monstrous wantonness, 4 fair-seeming, a mistress of sorcery, who beguiled nations and tribes
by her wantonness and her sorceries.
- I am against you, says the LORD of Hosts, 5
I will uncover your breasts to your disgrace and expose your naked body to every nation,
to every kingdom your shame.
I will cast loathsome filth over you, 6
I will count you obscene and treat you like excrement.
- Then all who see you will shrink from you and say, 7
'Nineveh is laid waste; who will console her?'
Where shall I look for anyone to comfort you?

- 8 Will you fare better than No-amon?—
 she that lay by the streams of the Nile, surrounded by water,
 whose rampart was the Nile, waters her wall;
 9 Cush and Egypt were her strength, and it was boundless,
 Put and the Libyans brought her help.
 10 She too became an exile and went into captivity, her infants too were dashed to the ground at every street-corner,
 her nobles were shared out by lot,
 all her great men were thrown into chains.
 11 You too shall hire yourself out, flaunting your sex;
 you too shall seek refuge from the enemy.
 12 Your fortifications are like figs when they ripen:
 if they are shaken, they fall into the mouth of the eater.
 13 The troops^a in your midst are a pack of women,
 the gates of your country stand open to the enemy,
 and fire consumes their bars.
 14 Draw yourselves water for the siege, strengthen your fortifications;
 down into the clay, trample the mortar,
 repair the brickwork.
 15 Even then the fire will consume you, and the sword will cut you down.^b
 Make yourselves many as the locusts, make yourselves many as the hoppers,
 16 a swarm which spreads out and then flies away.
 You have spies as numerous as the stars in the sky;
 17 your secret agents are like locusts, your commanders like the hoppers which lie dormant in the walls on a cold day;
 but when the sun rises, they scurry off,
 and no one knows where they have gone.
 18 Your shepherds slumber, O king of Assyria, your flock-masters lie down to rest;
 your troops^a are scattered over the hills,
 and no one rounds them up.
 19 Your wounds cannot be assuaged, your injury is mortal;
 all who have heard of your fate clap their hands in joy.
 Are there any whom your ceaseless cruelty has not borne down?

^a Or people. ^b Prob. rdg.; Heb. adds and consume you like the locust (or hopper).

HABAKKUK

An oracle which the prophet Habakkuk received in a vision.

1

Divine justice

How long, O LORD, have I cried to thee, unanswered?	2
I cry, 'Violence!'; but thou dost not save.
Why dost thou let me see such misery,	3
why countenance ^a wrongdoing?
Devastation and violence confront me;
strife breaks out, discord raises its head,
and so law grows effete;	4
justice does not come forth victorious;
for the wicked outwit the righteous,
and so justice comes out perverted.
Look, you treacherous people, look:	5
here is what will astonish you and stun you, for there is work afoot in your days which you will not believe when it is told you.
It is this: I am raising up the Chaldaeans,	6
that savage and impetuous nation, who cross the wide tracts of the earth
to take possession of homes not theirs.
Terror and awe go with them;	7
their justice and judgement are of their own making.
Their horses are swifter than hunting-leopards,	8
keener than wolves of the plain; ^b their cavalry wait ready, they spring forward, they come flying from afar
like vultures swooping to devour the prey.
Their whole army advances, violence in their hearts;	9
a sea of faces rolls on;
they bring in captives countless as the sand.
Kings they hold in derision,	10 rulers they despise;
they despise every fortress,
they raise siege-works and capture it.
Then they pass on like the wind and are gone;	11
and dismayed are all those whose strength was their god.

^a Or dost thou let me see.

^b Or evening.

- 12 Art thou not from of old, O LORD?—
my God, the holy, the immortal.^a O LORD, it is thou who hast appointed them to execute judgement;
O mighty God, thou who hast destined them to chastise, 13 thou whose eyes are too pure to look upon evil,
and who canst not countenance wrongdoing,
why dost thou countenance the treachery of the wicked?
Why keep silent when they devour men more righteous than they?
14 Why dost thou make men like the fish of the sea,
like gliding creatures that obey no ruler?
15 They haul them up with hooks, one and all,
they catch them in nets
and drag them in their trawls;
then they make merry and rejoice, 16 sacrificing to their nets and burning offerings^b to their trawls;
for by these they live sumptuously and enjoy rich fare.
17 Are they then to unsheathe the sword every day,
to slaughter the nations without pity?

- 2 I will stand at my post,
I will take up my position on the watch-tower,
I will watch to learn what he will say through me,
and what I shall reply when I am challenged.^c 2 Then the LORD made answer:
Write down the vision, inscribe it on tablets,
ready for a herald to carry it with speed;^d
3 for there is still a vision for the appointed time.
At the destined hour it will come in breathless haste,
it will not fail.
If it delays, wait for it;
for when it comes will be no time to linger.
4 The reckless will be unsure of himself,
while the righteous man will live by being faithful;^e 5 as for the traitor in his over-confidence, still less will he ride out the storm, for all his bragging.
Though he opens his mouth as wide as Sheol
and is insatiable as Death, gathering in all the nations,
making all peoples his own harvest, 6 surely they will all turn upon him with insults and abuse, and say,

^a the immortal: prob. original rdg., altered in Heb. to we shall not die. ^b Or incense.
^c when I am challenged: or concerning my complaint. ^d ready . . . speed: or so that a man may read it easily. ^e Or by his faithfulness (cp. Romans 1. 17; Galatians 3. 11).

- 'Woe betide you who heap up wealth that is not yours ^a and enrich yourself with goods taken in pledge!
 Will not your creditors suddenly start up, 7 will not all awake who would shake you till you are empty, and will you not fall a victim to them?
 Because you yourself have plundered mighty ^b nations, 8
 all the rest of the world will plunder you,
 because of bloodshed and violence done in the land,
 to the city and all its inhabitants.
- Woe betide you who seek unjust gain for your house, 9
 to build your nest on a height,
 to save yourself from the grasp of wicked men!
 Your schemes to overthrow mighty ^b nations 10 will bring dishonour to your house and put your own life in jeopardy.
 The very stones will cry out from the wall, 11
 and from the timbers a beam will answer them.
- Woe betide you who have built a town with bloodshed 12
 and founded a city on fraud, so that nations toil for a pittance, 13
 and peoples weary themselves for a mere nothing!
 Is not all this the doing of the LORD of Hosts?
 For the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the glory of the LORD 14 as the waters fill the sea.
- Woe betide you who make your ^c companions drink the outpouring of 15 your wrath,
 making them drunk, that you may watch their naked orgies!
 Drink deep draughts of shame, not of glory; 16
 you too shall drink until you stagger.
 The cup in the LORD's right hand is passed to you, and your shame will exceed ^d your glory. 17
 The violence done to Lebanon shall sweep over you,
 the havoc done to its beasts shall break your own spirit,
 because of bloodshed and violence done in the land,
 to the city and all its inhabitants.
- What use is an idol when its maker has shaped it?— 18
 it is only an image, a source of lies;
 or when the maker trusts what he has made?—
 he is only making dumb idols.
 Woe betide him who says to the wood, 'Wake up', 19 to the dead stone, 'Bestir yourself'!^e

A prayer for mercy

3 A prayer of the prophet Habakkuk.

2 O LORD, I have heard tell of thy deeds;
I have seen, O LORD, thy work.^a

In the midst of the years thou didst make thyself known,
and in thy wrath thou didst remember mercy.

3 God comes from Teman,
the Holy One from Mount Paran;
his radiance overspreads the skies,
and his splendour fills the earth.

4 He rises like the dawn,
with twin rays starting forth at his side;
the skies are^b the hiding-place of his majesty,
and the everlasting^c ways are for^d his swift flight.^e 5 Pestilence stalks before him, and plague comes forth behind.

6 He stands still and shakes the earth,
he looks and makes the nations tremble;
the eternal mountains are riven,
the everlasting^c hills subside,
7 the tents of Cushan are snatched away,^f
the tent-curtains of Midian flutter.

8 Art thou angry with the streams?
Is thy wrath against the sea, O LORD?
When thou dost mount thy horses,
thy riding is to victory.

9 Thou dost draw thy bow from its case^g and charge thy quiver with shafts.
10-11 Thou cleavest the earth with rivers;
the mountains see thee and writhe with fear.
The torrent of water rushes by,
and the deep sea thunders aloud.

The sun forgets to turn in his course,^h and the moon stands still at her zenith, at the gleam of thy speeding arrows
and the glance of thy flashing spear.

Thou goest forth to save thy people, thou comest to save thy anointed;	13
thou dost shatter the wicked man's house from the roof down, ^a uncovering its foundations to the bare rock. ^b
Thou piercest their ^c chiefs with thy ^d shafts, and their leaders are torn from them by the whirlwind, as they open ^e their jaws	14 to devour their wretched victims in secret.
When thou dost tread the sea with thy horses the mighty waters boil.	15
I hear, and my belly quakes; my lips quiver at the sound; trembling comes over my bones, and my feet totter in their tracks;	16
I sigh for the day of distress to dawn over my assailants.
Although the fig-tree does not burgeon, the vines bear no fruit, the olive-crop fails,	17
the orchards yield no food, the fold is bereft of its flock and there are no cattle in the stalls, yet I will exult in the LORD	18 and rejoice in the God of my deliverance.
The LORD God is my strength, who makes my feet nimble as a hind's and sets me to range the heights.	19

ZEPHANIAH

THIS IS THE WORD OF THE LORD which came to 1 Zephaniah son of Cushi, son of Gedaliah, son of Amariah, son of Hezekiah, in the time of Josiah son of Amon king of Judah.

Doom on Judah and her neighbours

I will sweep the earth clean of all that is on it, says the LORD.	2
I will sweep away both man and beast, I will sweep the birds from the air and the fish from the sea,	3

and I will bring the wicked to their knees ^a and wipe out mankind from the earth.
This is the very word of the LORD.

4 I will stretch my hand over Judah and all who live in Jerusalem;
I will wipe out from this place the last remnant of Baal
and the very name of the heathen priests, 5 those who bow down upon the house-tops to worship the host of heaven and who swear by Milcom, 6 those who have turned their backs on the LORD, who have not sought the LORD or consulted him.

7 Silence before the Lord GOD!
for the day of the LORD is near.
The LORD has prepared a sacrifice and has hallowed his guests.
8 On the day of the LORD's sacrifice
I will punish the royal house and its chief officers and all who ape outlandish fashions.
9 On that day
I will punish all who dance on the temple terrace, who fill their master's ^b house with crimes of violence and fraud.

10 On that day, says the LORD,
an outcry shall be heard from the Fish Gate, wailing from the second quarter of the city,
a loud crash from the hills;
11 and ^c those who live in the Lower Town shall wail.
For it is all over with the merchants,
and all the dealers in silver are wiped out.

12 At that time
I will search Jerusalem with a lantern and punish all who sit in stupor over the dregs of their wine, who say to themselves,
'The LORD will do nothing, good or bad.'
13 Their wealth shall be plundered, their houses laid waste;
they shall build houses but not live in them,
they shall plant vineyards but not drink the wine from them.
14 The great day of the LORD is near,
it comes with speed;
no runner so fast as that day,
no raiding band so swift. ^d

^a I will bring . . . knees: prob. rdg.; Heb. the ruins with the wicked. ^b Or their Lord's.
^c and: prob. rdg.; Heb. om. ^d no runner . . . swift: prob. rdg.; Heb. hark, the day of the LORD is bitter, there the warrior cries aloud.

That day is a day of wrath, 15
 a day of anguish and affliction,
 a day of destruction and devastation,
 a day of murk and gloom,
 a day of cloud and dense fog,
 a day of trumpet and battle-cry 16
 over fortified cities and lofty battlements.
 I will bring dire distress upon men; 17
 they shall walk like blind men for their sin against the LORD.
 Their blood shall be spilt like dust
 and their bowels like dung;
 neither their silver nor their gold 18
 shall avail to save them.
 On the day of the LORD's wrath, by the fire of his jealousy
 the whole land shall be consumed;
 for he will make an end, a swift end,
 of all who live in the land.

Gather together, you unruly nation, gather together, 2 before you are sent far away and vanish^a like chaff, 2
 before the burning anger of the LORD comes upon you, before the day of the LORD's anger comes upon you.

Seek the LORD, 3
 all in the land who live humbly by his laws, seek righteousness, seek a humble heart;
 it may be that you will find shelter
 in the day of the LORD's anger.

For Gaza shall be deserted, 4
 Ashkelon left desolate,
 the people of Ashdod shall be driven out^b at noonday and Ekron uprooted.

Listen, you who live by the coast, you Kerethite settlers. 5
 The word of the LORD is spoken against you;
 I will subdue you,^c land of the Philistines,
 I will lay you waste and leave you without inhabitants, and you, Kereth, shall be all shepherds' huts^d and sheepfolds; 6 and the coastland shall belong to the survivors of Judah. 7
 They shall pasture their flocks by the sea^e and lie down at evening in the houses of Ashkelon, for the LORD their God will turn to them and restore their fortunes.

I have heard the insults of Moab, the taunts of Ammon, 8
 how they have insulted my people and encroached on their frontiers.

^a you are . . . vanish: prob. rdg.; Heb. obscure. ^b the people . . . out: or Ashdod shall be made an example. ^c I . . . you: prob. rdg.; Heb. Canaan. ^d you . . . huts: Heb. has these words in a different order. ^e by the sea: prob. rdg.; Heb. upon them.

- 9 Therefore, by my life,
says the LORD of Hosts, the God of Israel, Moab shall be like Sodom, Ammon like Gomorrah,
a pile of weeds, a rotting heap of saltwort,
waste land for evermore.
The survivors of my people shall plunder them,
the remnant of my nation shall possess their land.
- 10 This will be retribution for their pride, because they have insulted the 11 people of the LORD of Hosts and encroached upon their rights. The LORD will appear against them with all his terrors; for he will reduce to beggary all the gods of the earth, and all the coasts and islands of the nations will worship him, every man in his own home.
- 12 You Cushites also shall be killed by the sword of the LORD.^a
- 13 So let him stretch out his hand over the north and destroy Assyria, make Nineveh desolate,
arid as the wilderness.
- 14 Flocks shall couch there,
and all the beasts of the wild.
Horned owl and ruffed bustard shall roost on her capitals;
the tawny owl shall hoot in the window, and the bustard stand in the porch.^b
- 15 This is the city that exulted in fancied security, saying to herself, 'I am, and I alone.'
And what is she now? A waste, a haunt for wild beasts, at which every passer-by shall hiss and shake his fist.
- 3 Shame on the tyrant city, filthy and foul!
2 No warning voice did she heed, she took no rebuke to heart, she did not trust in the LORD or come near to her God.
3 Her officers were lions roaring in her midst, her rulers wolves of the plain^c
that did not wait^d till morning,
4 her prophets were reckless, no true prophets.
Her priests profaned the sanctuary and did violence to the law.
- 5 But the LORD in her midst is just;
he does no wrong;
morning by morning he gives judgement,
without fail at daybreak.^e
- 6 I have wiped out the proud;
their battlements are laid in ruin.

adds but the wrongdoer knows no shame.

I have made their streets a desert where no one passes.
 Their cities are laid waste, deserted, unpeopled.
 In the hope that she would remember all my instructions, 7
 I said, 'Do but fear me
 and take my rebuke to heart';
 but they were up betimes and went about their evil deeds.

Wait for me, therefore, says the LORD, 8
 wait for the day when I stand up to accuse you;
 for mine it is to gather nations and assemble kingdoms,
 to pour out on them my indignation,
 all the heat of my anger;
 the whole earth shall be consumed by the fire of my jealousy.

I will give all peoples once again pure lips, 9 that they may invoke the LORD by name and serve him with one consent.

From beyond the rivers of Cush 10
 my suppliants of the Dispersion shall bring me tribute.

A remnant preserved

On that day, Jerusalem, 11
 you shall not be put to shame for all your deeds
 by which you have rebelled against me;
 for then I will rid you
 of your proud and arrogant citizens, and never again shall you flaunt your pride
 on my holy hill.

But I will leave in you a people 12 afflicted and poor.

The survivors in Israel shall find refuge in the name of the LORD; 13 they shall no longer do wrong or speak lies,
 no words of deceit shall pass their lips;
 for they shall feed and lie down with no one to terrify them.

Zion, cry out for joy; 14
 raise the shout of triumph, Israel;
 be glad, rejoice with all your heart,
 daughter of Jerusalem.

The LORD has rid you of your adversaries, 15
 he has swept away your foes;
 the LORD is among you as king, O Israel;
 never again shall you fear disaster.

On that day this shall be the message to Jerusalem: 16
 Fear not, O Zion; let not your hands fall slack.

- 17 The LORD your God is in your midst,
like a warrior, to keep you safe;
he will rejoice over you and be glad;
he will show you his love once more;
he will exult over you with a shout of joy
- 18 as in days long ago.^a
- I will take your cries of woe^b away from you;
and you shall no longer endure reproach for her.
- 19 When that time comes, see,
I will deal with all your oppressors.
I will rescue the lost and gather the dispersed;
I will win my people praise and renown
in all the world where once they were despised.
- 20 When the time comes for me to gather you,^c
I will bring you home.
I will win you renown and praise
among all the peoples of the earth, when I bring back your prosperity; and you shall see it.
It is the LORD who speaks.

HAGGAI

Zerubbabel restorer of the temple

- 1 IN THE SECOND YEAR OF KING DARIUS, on the first day of the sixth month, the word of the LORD came through the prophet Haggai to Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel, governor of Judah, and to 2 Joshua son of Jehozadak, the high priest: These are the words of the LORD of Hosts: This nation says to itself that it is not yet time for the house of 3 the LORD to be rebuilt. Then this word came through Haggai the prophet:
4 Is it a time for you to live in your own well-roofed houses, while this house
5 lies in ruins? Now these are the words of the LORD of Hosts: Consider your 6 way of life. You have sown much but reaped little; you eat but never as much as you wish, you drink but never more than you need, you are clothed but never warm, and the labourer puts his wages into a purse with a hole in 7 it. These are the words of the LORD of Hosts: Consider your way of life.
8 Go up into the hills, fetch timber, and build a house acceptable to me, 9 where I can show my glory,^d says the LORD. You look for much and get little. At the moment when you would bring home the harvest, I blast it.
10 Why? says the LORD of Hosts. Because my house lies in ruins, while each of you has a house that he can run to. It is your fault that the heavens withhold their dew and the earth its produce. So I have proclaimed a drought against land and mountain, against corn, new wine, and oil, and all that the ground yields, against man and cattle and all the products of man's labour.

Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel, Joshua son of Jehozadak, the high priest, and the rest of the people listened to what the LORD their God had said and what the prophet Haggai said when the LORD their God sent him, and they were filled with fear because of the LORD. So Haggai the LORD's messenger, as the LORD had commissioned him, said to the people: I am with you, says the LORD. Then the LORD stirred up the spirit of Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel, governor of Judah, of Joshua son of Jehozadak, the high priest, and of the rest of the people; they came and began work on the house of the LORD of Hosts their God on the twenty-fourth day of the sixth month.

In the second year of King Darius, on the twenty-first day of the seventh month, these words came from the LORD through the prophet Haggai: Say to Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel, governor of Judah, to Joshua son of Jehozadak, the high priest, and to the rest of the people: Is there anyone still among you who saw this house in its former glory? How does it appear to you now? Does it not seem to you as if it were not there? But now, Zerubbabel, take heart, says the LORD; take heart, Joshua son of Jehozadak, high priest. Take heart, all you people, says the LORD. Begin the work, for I am with you, says the LORD of Hosts, and my spirit is present among you. Have no fear. For these are the words of the LORD of Hosts: One thing more: I will shake heaven and earth, sea and land, I will shake all nations; the treasure of all nations shall come hither, and I will fill this house with glory;^a so says the LORD of Hosts. Mine is the silver and mine the gold, says the LORD of Hosts, and the glory^a of this latter house shall surpass the glory^a of the former, says the LORD of Hosts. In this place will I grant prosperity and peace. This is the very word of the LORD of Hosts.

In the second year of Darius, on the twenty-fourth day of the ninth month, this word came from the LORD to the prophet Haggai: These are the words of the LORD of Hosts: Ask the priests to give their ruling: If a man is carrying consecrated flesh in a fold of his robe, and he lets the fold touch bread or broth or wine or oil or any other kind of food, will that also become consecrated? And the priests answered, 'No.' Haggai went on, But if a person defiled by contact with a corpse touches any one of these things, will that also become defiled? 'It will', answered the priests. Haggai replied, So it is with this people and nation and all that they do, says the LORD; whatever offering they make here is defiled in my sight. And now look back over recent times down to this day: before one stone was laid on another in the LORD's temple, what was your plight? If a man came to a heap of corn expecting twenty measures, he found but ten; if he came to a wine-vat to draw fifty measures, he found but twenty. I blasted you and all your harvest with black blight and red and with hail, and yet you had no mind to return to me, says the LORD. Consider, from this day onwards, from this twenty-fourth day of the ninth month, the day when the

^a Or wealth.

- 19 foundations of the temple of the LORD are laid, consider: will the seed still be diminished^a in the barn? Will the vine and the fig, the pomegranate and the olive, still bear no fruit? Not so, from this day I will bless you.
- 20 On that day, the twenty-fourth day of the month, the word of the LORD
- 21 came to Haggai a second time: Tell Zerubbabel, governor of Judah, I will
- 22 shake heaven and earth; I will overthrow the thrones of kings, break the power of heathen realms, overturn chariots and their riders; horses and
- 23 riders shall fall by the sword of their comrades. On that day, says the LORD of Hosts, I will take you, Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel, my servant, and will wear you as a signet-ring; for you it is that I have chosen. This is the very word of the LORD of Hosts.

ZECHARIAH

Zechariah's commission

- 1 IN THE EIGHTH MONTH of the second year of Darius, the
- 2 word of the LORD came to the prophet Zechariah son of Berechiah,
- 3 son of Iddo: The LORD was very angry with your forefathers. Say to the people, These are the words of the LORD of Hosts: Come back to me,
- 4 and I will come back to you, says the LORD of Hosts. Do not be like your forefathers. They heard the prophets of old proclaim, 'These are the words of the LORD of Hosts: Turn back from your evil ways and your evil deeds.'
- 5 But they did not listen or pay heed to me, says the LORD. And where are your forefathers now? And the prophets, do they live for ever? But the warnings and the decrees with which I charged my servants the prophets
- 6 —did not these overtake your forefathers? Did they not then repent and say, 'The LORD of Hosts has treated us as he purposed; as our lives and as our deeds deserved, so has he treated us'?

Eight visions with their interpretations

- 7 ON THE TWENTY-FOURTH DAY of the eleventh month, the month
- 8 Shebat, in the second year of Darius, the word of the LORD came to the prophet Zechariah son of Berechiah, son of Iddo.
- 9 Last night I had a vision. I saw a man on a bay horse standing among the myrtles in a hollow; and behind him were other horses, black, dappled,
- 10 and white. 'What are these, sir?' I asked, and the angel who talked with me answered, 'I will show you what they are.' Then the man standing among the myrtles said, 'They are those whom the LORD has sent to range through
- 11 the world.' They reported to the angel of the LORD as he stood among the myrtles: 'We have ranged through the world; the whole world is still and at peace.' Thereupon the angel of the LORD said, 'How long, O LORD of Hosts, wilt thou withhold thy compassion from Jerusalem and the cities of Judah, upon whom thou hast vented thy wrath these seventy years?' Then the LORD spoke kind and comforting words to the angel who talked with me, and the angel said to me, Proclaim, These are the words of the LORD of Hosts: I am very jealous for Jerusalem and Zion. I am full of anger against the nations that enjoy their ease, because, while my anger was but mild, they heaped evil on evil. Therefore these are the words of the LORD: I have come back to Jerusalem with compassion, and my house shall be rebuilt in her, says the LORD of Hosts, and the measuring-line shall be stretched over Jerusalem. Proclaim once more, These are the words of the LORD of Hosts: My cities shall again overflow with good things; once again the LORD will comfort Zion, once again he will make Jerusalem the city of his choice.

I lifted my eyes and there I saw four horns. I asked the angel who talked with me what they were, and he answered, 'These are the horns which scattered Judah^a and Jerusalem.' Then the LORD showed me four smiths. I asked what they were coming to do, and he said, 'Those horns scattered Judah and Jerusalem so completely that no man could lift his head. But these smiths have come to reunite them and to throw down the horns of the nations which had raised them against the land of Judah and scattered its people.'

I lifted my eyes and there I saw a man carrying a measuring-line. I asked him where he was going, and he said, 'To measure Jerusalem and see what should be its breadth and length.' Then, as the angel who talked with me was going away, another angel came out to meet him and said to him, Run to the young man there and tell him that Jerusalem shall be a city without walls, so numerous shall be the men and cattle within it. I will be a wall of fire round her, says the LORD, and a glory in the midst of her.

Away, away; flee from the land of the north, says the LORD, for I will make you spread your wings like the four winds of heaven, says the LORD. Away, escape, you people of Zion who live in Babylon.

For these are the words of the LORD of Hosts, spoken when he sent me on a glorious mission^b to the nations who have plundered you, for whoever touches you touches the apple of his eye: I raise^c my hand against them; they shall be plunder for their own slaves. So you shall know that the LORD of Hosts has sent me. Shout aloud and rejoice, daughter of Zion; I am coming, I will make my dwelling among you, says the LORD. Many nations shall come over to the LORD on that day and become his people, and he will make his dwelling with you. Then you shall know that the LORD of Hosts has sent me to you. The LORD will once again claim Judah as his own possession in the holy land, and make Jerusalem the city of his choice.

Silence, all mankind, in the presence of the LORD! For he has bestirred himself out of his holy dwelling-place.

The angel who talked with me came back and roused me as a man is roused from sleep. He asked me what I saw, and I answered, 'A lamp-stand all of gold with a bowl on it; it holds seven lamps, and there are seven

3 pipes for the lamps on top of it, with two olive-trees standing by it, one on 11^a the right of the bowl and another on the left.' I asked him, 'What are these 12 two olive-trees, the one on the right and the other on the left of the lamp-stand?' I asked also another question, 'What are the two sprays of olive 13 14 He said, 'Do you not know what these mean?' 'No, sir', I answered. 'These two', he said, 'are the two consecrated with oil who attend the Lord of all the earth.'

3 1 Then he showed me Joshua the high priest standing before the angel of the LORD, with the Adversary ^b standing at his right hand to accuse him.
 2 The LORD said to the Adversary, 'The LORD rebuke you, Satan, the LORD rebuke you who are venting your spite on Jerusalem. ^c Is not this man a 3 brand snatched from the fire?' Now Joshua was wearing filthy clothes as 4 he stood before the angel; and the angel turned and said to those in attendance on him, 'Take off his filthy clothes.' Then he turned to him and said,
 'See how I have taken away your guilt from you; I will clothe you in fine 5 vestments'; and he added, 'Let a clean turban be put on his head.' So they put a clean turban on his head and clothed him in clean garments, while 6 the angel of the LORD stood by. Then the angel of the LORD gave Joshua 7 this solemn charge: These are the words of the LORD of Hosts: If you will conform to my ways and carry out your duties, you shall administer my house and be in control of my courts, and I grant you the right to come and 8 go amongst these in attendance here. Listen, Joshua the high priest, you and your colleagues seated here before you, all you who are an omen of 9-10 things to come: I will now bring my servant, the Branch. In one day I will wipe away the guilt of the land. On that day, says the LORD of Hosts, you shall all of you invite one another to come and sit each under his vine and his fig-tree.

Here is the stone that I set before Joshua, a stone in which are seven 4 4^d eyes. I will reveal its meaning to you, says the LORD of Hosts. Then I asked the angel of the LORD who talked with me, 'Sir, what are these?'
 5 And he answered, 'Do you not know what these mean?' 'No, sir', I answered. 'These seven', he said, 'are the eyes of the LORD ranging over the whole earth.'^e

6 Then he turned and said to me, This is the word of the LORD concerning Zerubbabel: Neither by force of arms nor by brute strength, but by my 7 spirit! says the LORD of Hosts. How does a mountain, the greatest mountain, compare with Zerubbabel? It is no higher than a plain. He shall bring 8 out the stone called Possession ^f while men acclaim its beauty. This word 9 came to me from the LORD: Zerubbabel with his own hands laid the foundation of this house and with his own hands he shall finish it. So shall you 10 know that the LORD of Hosts has sent me to you. Who has despised the day of small things? He shall rejoice when he sees Zerubbabel holding the stone called Separation. ^f

I looked up again and saw a flying scroll. He asked me what I saw, and I answered, 'A flying scroll, twenty cubits long and ten cubits wide.' This, he told me, is the curse which goes out over the whole land; for by the writing on one side every thief shall be swept clean away, and by the writing on the other every perjurer shall be swept clean away. I have sent it out, the LORD of Hosts has said, and it shall enter the house of the thief and the house of the man who has perjured himself in my name; it shall stay inside that house and demolish it, timbers and stones and all.

The angel who talked with me came out and said to me, 'Raise your eyes and look at this thing that comes forth.' I asked what it was, and he said, 'It is a great barrel coming forth,' and he added, 'so great is their guilt in all the land.' Then a round slab of lead was lifted, and a woman was sitting there inside the barrel. He said, 'This is Wickedness', and he thrust her down into the barrel and rammed the leaden weight upon its mouth. I looked up again and saw two women coming forth with the wind in their wings (for they had wings like a stork's), and they carried the barrel between earth and sky. I asked the angel who talked with me where they were taking the barrel, and he answered, 'To build a house for it ^a in the land of Shinar; when the house is ready, it ^b shall be set on the place prepared for it ^a there.'

I looked up again and saw four chariots coming out between two mountains, and the mountains were made of copper. ^c The first chariot had bay horses, the second black, the third white, and the fourth dappled. I asked the angel who talked with me, 'Sir, what are these?' He answered, 'These are the four winds of heaven which have been attending the Lord of the whole earth, and they are now going forth. The chariot with the black horses is going to the land of the north, that with the white to the far west, ^d that with the dappled to the south, and that with the roan to the land of the east.' ^e They were eager to go and range over the whole earth; so he said, 'Go and range over the earth', and the chariots did so. Then he called me to look and said, 'Those going to the land of the north have given my spirit rest in the land of the north.'

The word of the LORD came to me: Take silver and gold from the exiles, from Heldai, Tobiah, Jedaiah, and ^f Josiah son of Zephaniah, who have come back from Babylon. Take it and make a crown; put the crown on the head of Joshua son of Jehozadak, the high priest, ^g and say to him, These are the words of the LORD of Hosts: Here is a man named the Branch; he will shoot up from the ground where he is and will build the temple of the LORD. It is he who will build the temple of the LORD, he who will assume royal dignity, will be seated on his throne and govern, with a priest at his right side, and concord shall prevail between them. The crown shall be in the charge of Heldai, Tobiah, Jedaiah, and Josiah son of Zephaniah, as a memorial in the temple of the LORD.

Joy and gladness in the coming age

7 THE WORD OF THE LORD CAME TO ZECHARIAH in the fourth year of the reign of King Darius, on the fourth day of Kislev, the ninth month.
 2 Bethel-sharezer sent Regem-melech with his men to seek the favour of 3 the LORD. They were to say to the priests in the house of the LORD of Hosts and to the prophets, 'Am I to lament and abstain in the fifth month as I have done for so many years?' Then the word of the LORD of Hosts came
 4 to me: Say to all the people of the land and to the priests, When you fasted and lamented in the fifth and seventh months these seventy years, was it
 5 indeed in my honour that you fasted? And when you ate and drank, was 6 it not to please yourselves? Was it not this that the LORD proclaimed through the prophets of old, while Jerusalem was populous and peaceful, as were the cities round her, and the Negeb and the Shephelah?

8 9 The word of the LORD came to Zechariah: These are the words of the LORD of Hosts: Administer true justice, show loyalty and compassion to one another, do not oppress the orphan and the widow, the alien and the poor, do not contrive any evil one against another. But they refused to listen, they turned their backs on me in defiance, they stopped their ears and would not hear. Their hearts were adamant; they refused to accept instruction and all that the LORD of Hosts had taught them by his spirit through the prophets of old; and they suffered under the anger of the LORD
 13 of Hosts. As they did not listen when I ^a called, so I did not listen when 14 they called, says the LORD of Hosts, and I drove them out among all the nations to whom they were strangers, leaving their land a waste behind them, so that no one came and went. Thus they made their pleasant land a waste.

8 1 2 The word of the LORD of Hosts came to me: These are the words of the LORD of Hosts: I have been very jealous for Zion, fiercely jealous for her.
 3 Now, says the LORD, I have come back to Zion and I will dwell in Jerusalem. Jerusalem shall be called the City of Truth, and the mountain of the LORD of Hosts shall be called the Holy Mountain. These are the words of the LORD of Hosts: Once again shall old men and old women sit in the streets of Jerusalem, each leaning on a stick because of their great age; and the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls, playing in the streets.
 6 These are the words of the LORD of Hosts: Even if it may seem impossible ^b to the survivors of this nation on that day, will it also seem impossible ^c to me? ^c This is the very word of the LORD of Hosts. These are the words of the LORD of Hosts: See, I will rescue my people from the countries of the east and the west, and bring them back to live in Jerusalem. They shall be my people, and I will be their God, in truth and justice.

^a Prob. rdg.; Heb. he.
 wonderful also to me.

^b Or wonderful.

^c will . . . me?: or it will seem

These are the words of the LORD of Hosts: Take courage, you who in these days hear, from the prophets who were present when the foundations were laid for the house of the LORD of Hosts, their promise that the temple is to be rebuilt. Till that time there was no hiring either of man or of beast, no one could safely go about his business because of his enemies, and I set all men one against another. But now I am not the same towards the survivors of this people as I was in former days, says the LORD of Hosts. For they shall sow in safety; the vine shall yield its fruit and the soil its produce, the heavens shall give their dew; with all these things I will endow the survivors of this people. You, house of Judah and house of Israel, have been the very symbol of a curse to all the nations; and now I will save you, and you shall become the symbol of a blessing. Courage! Do not be afraid.

For these are the words of the LORD of Hosts: Whereas I resolved to ruin you because your ancestors roused me to anger, says the LORD of Hosts, and I did not relent, so in these days I have once more ^a resolved to do good to Jerusalem and to the house of Judah; do not be afraid. This is what you shall do: speak the truth to each other, administer true and sound justice in the city gate. Do not contrive any evil one against another, and do not love perjury, for all this I hate. This is the very word of the LORD.

The word of the LORD of Hosts came to me: These are the words of the LORD of Hosts: The fasts of the fourth month and of the fifth, the seventh, and the tenth, shall become festivals of joy and gladness for the house of Judah. Love truth and peace.

These are the words of the LORD of Hosts: Nations and dwellers in great cities shall yet come; people of one city shall come to those of another and say, 'Let us go and entreat the favour of the LORD, and resort to the LORD of Hosts; and I will come too.' So great nations and mighty peoples shall resort to the LORD of Hosts in Jerusalem and entreat his favour. These are the words of the LORD of Hosts: In those days, when ten men from nations of every language pluck up courage, they shall pluck the robe of a Jew and say, 'We will go with you because we have heard that God is with you.'

Judah's triumph over her enemies and ^b established himself in Damascus;

for the capital city ^c of Aram is the LORD's,
as are all the tribes of Israel.

and strike down the power of her ships,
and the city itself will be destroyed by fire.

Gaza shall writhe in terror,
and Ekron's hope shall be extinguished;
kings shall vanish from Gaza,
and Ashkelon shall be unpeopled;

and I will uproot the pride of the Philistine.

 and they will fight because the LORD is with them;
 they will put horsemen shamefully to rout.
- And I will give strength to the house of Judah 6
 and grant victory to^c the house of Joseph;
 I will restore them, for I have pitied them, and they shall be as though I had never cast them off;
 for I am the LORD their God and I will answer them.
- So Ephraim shall be like warriors, 7 glad like men cheerful with wine, and their sons shall see and be glad;
 so let their hearts exult in the LORD.
- I will whistle to call them in, for I have redeemed them; 8 and they shall be as many as once they were.

- 9 If I disperse them^a among the nations,
in far-off lands they will remember me
and will rear their sons and then return.
- 10 Then will I fetch them home from Egypt and gather them in from Assyria;
I will lead them into Gilead and Lebanon until there is no more room for them.
- 11 Dire distress^b shall come upon the Euphrates
and shall beat down its turbulent waters;
all the depths of the Nile shall run dry.
The pride of Assyria shall be brought down,
and the sceptre of Egypt shall pass away;
12 but Israel's strength shall be in the LORD,
and they shall march proudly in his name.
This is the very word of the LORD.
- 11 Throw open your gates, O Lebanon, that fire may feed on your cedars.
- 2 Howl, every pine-tree; for the cedars have fallen,
mighty trees are ravaged.
Howl, every oak of Bashan;
for the impenetrable forest is laid low.
- 3 Hark to the howling of the shepherds,
for their rich pastures are ravaged.
Hark to the roar of the young lions,
for Jordan's dense thickets are ravaged.
- 4 These were the words of the LORD my God: Fatten the flock for slaughter.
5 Those who buy will slaughter it and incur no guilt; those who sell will say,
'Blessed be the LORD, I am rich!' Its shepherds will have no pity for it.
- 6 For I will never again pity the inhabitants of the earth, says the LORD.
I will put every man in the power of his neighbour and his king, and as each country is crushed I will not rescue him from their hands.
- 7 So I fattened the flock for slaughter for the dealers. I took two staves: one 8 I called Favour and the other Union, and so I fattened the flock. In one month I got rid of the three shepherds, for I had lost patience with them 9 and they had come to abhor me. Then I said to the flock, 'I will not fatten you any more. Any that are to die, let them die; any that stray, let them 10 stray; and the rest can devour one another.' I took my staff called Favour and snapped it in two, annulling the covenant which the LORD^c had made 11 with all nations. So it was annulled that day, and the dealers who were 12 watching me knew that all this was the word of the LORD. I said to 13 them, 'If it suits you, give me my wages; otherwise keep them.' Then they weighed out my wages, thirty pieces of silver. The LORD said to me, 'Throw it into the treasury.' I took the thirty pieces of silver—that noble 14 sum at which I was valued and rejected by them!—and threw them into the house of the LORD, into the treasury. Then I snapped in two my second staff called Union, annulling the brotherhood between Judah and Israel.

Then the LORD said to me, Equip yourself again as a shepherd, a worthless one; for I am about to install a shepherd in the land who will neither miss any that are lost nor search for those that have gone astray nor heal the injured nor nurse the sickly, but will eat the flesh of the fat beasts and throw away their broken bones.

Alas for the worthless shepherd who abandons the sheep! 17
A sword shall fall on his arm and on his right eye;
his arm shall be shrivelled
and his right eye blinded.

This is the very word of the LORD of Hosts: 13 7^a O sword, awake against my shepherd and against him who works with me.
Strike the shepherd, and the sheep will be scattered,
and I will turn my hand against the shepherd boys.

This also is the very word of the LORD: 8
It shall happen throughout the land that two thirds of the people shall be struck down and die, while one third of them shall be left there.
Then I will pass this third through the fire 9
and I will refine them as silver is refined,
and assay them as gold is assayed.
Then they will invoke me by my name,
and I myself will answer them;
I will say, 'They are my people', and they shall say, 'The LORD is our God.'

Jerusalem a centre of worship for all men

AN ORACLE. This is the word of the LORD concerning Israel, the very 12 word of the LORD who stretched out the heavens and founded the earth, and who formed the spirit of man within him: I am making the 2 steep approaches to Jerusalem slippery for all the nations pressing round her; and Judah will be caught up in the siege of Jerusalem. On that day, 3 when all the nations of the earth will be gathered against her, I will make Jerusalem a rock too heavy for any people to remove, and all who try to lift it shall injure themselves. On that day, says the LORD, I will strike 4 every horse with panic and its rider with madness; I will keep watch over Judah, but I will strike all the horses of the other nations with blindness.
Then the clans of Judah shall say to themselves, 'The inhabitants of 5
Jerusalem find their strength^b in the LORD of Hosts their God.'

On that day I will make the clans of Judah like a brazier in woodland, 6 like a torch blazing among sheaves of corn. They shall devour all the nations round them, right and left, while the people of Jerusalem remain safe in ^a 13. 7-9 transposed to this point.

^b The . . . strength: prob. rdg.; Heb. O inhabitants of Jerusalem, I am strong.

7 their city. The LORD will first set free all the families ^a of Judah, so that the glory of David's line and of the inhabitants of Jerusalem may not surpass that of Judah.

8 On that day the LORD will shield the inhabitants of Jerusalem; on that day the very weakest of them shall be like David, and the line of David like God, like the angel of the LORD going before them.

9 On that day I will set about destroying all the nations that come against 10 Jerusalem, but I will pour a spirit of pity and compassion into the line of David and the inhabitants of Jerusalem. Then

They shall look on me, on him whom they have pierced, and shall wail over him as over an only child, and shall grieve for him bitterly as for a first-born son.

11 On that day the mourning in Jerusalem shall be as great as the mourning
12 over Hadad-rimmon in the vale of Megiddo. The land shall wail, each family by itself: the family of David by itself and its women by themselves;
13 the family of Nathan by itself and its women by themselves; the family of Levi by itself and its women by themselves; the family of Shimei by itself
14 and its women by themselves; all the remaining families by themselves and their women by themselves.

13 On that day a fountain shall be opened for the line of David and for the inhabitants of Jerusalem, to remove all sin and impurity.

2 On that day, says the LORD of Hosts, I will erase the names of the idols from the land, and they shall be remembered no longer; I will also remove
3 the prophets and the spirit of uncleanness from the land. Thereafter, if a man continues to prophesy, his parents, his own father and mother, will say to him, 'You shall live no longer, for you have spoken falsely in the name of the LORD.' His own father and mother will pierce him through 4 because he has prophesied. On that day every prophet shall be ashamed of his vision when he prophesies, nor shall he wear a robe of coarse hair in order to deceive. He will say, 'I am no prophet, I am a tiller of the soil who 5 has been schooled in lust from boyhood.' 'What', someone will ask, 'are these scars on your chest?' And he will answer, 'I got them in the house of my lovers.'^b

14 A day is coming for the LORD to act, and the plunder taken from you
2 shall be shared out while you stand by. I will gather all the peoples to fight against Jerusalem; the city shall be taken, the houses plundered and the women raped. Half the city shall go into exile, but the rest of the nation in 3 the city shall not be wiped out. The LORD will come out and fight against those peoples, as in the days of his prowess on the field of battle. On that
4 day his feet will stand on the Mount of Olives, which is opposite Jerusalem to the east, and the mountain shall be cleft in two by an immense valley running east and west; half the mountain shall move northwards
5 and half southwards. The valley between the hills ^c shall be blocked, for the new valley between them will reach as far as Asal. Blocked it shall be as it was blocked by the earthquake in the time of Uzziah king of Judah, and the LORD my God will appear with all the holy ones.

^a Or tents.

^b Verses 7-9 transposed to follow 11. 17.

^c Prob. rdg.; Heb. my hills.

On that day there shall be neither heat nor cold nor frost. It shall be all one day, whose coming is known only to the LORD, without distinction of day or night, and at evening-time there shall be light. 6 7

On that day living water shall issue from Jerusalem, half flowing to the eastern sea and half to the western, in summer and winter alike. Then the LORD shall become king over all the earth; on that day the LORD shall be one LORD and his name the one name. The whole land shall be levelled, flat as the Arabah from Geba to Rimmon southwards; but Jerusalem shall stand high in her place, and shall be full of people from the Benjamin Gate [to the point where the former gate stood,] to the Corner Gate, and from the Tower of Hananel to the king's wine-vats. Men shall live in Jerusalem, and never again shall a solemn ban be laid upon her; men shall live there in peace. The LORD will strike down all the nations who warred against Jerusalem, and the plague shall be this: their flesh shall rot while they stand on their feet, their eyes shall rot in their sockets, and their tongues shall rot in their mouths. 8 9 10 11 12

On that day a great panic, sent by the LORD, shall fall on them. At the very moment when a man would encourage his comrade his hand shall be raised to strike him down. Judah too shall join in the fray in Jerusalem, and the wealth of the surrounding nations will be swept away—gold and silver and apparel in great abundance. And slaughter shall be the fate of horse and mule, camel and ass, the fate of every beast in those armies. 13 14 15

All who survive of the nations which attacked Jerusalem shall come up year by year to worship the King, the LORD of Hosts, and to keep the pilgrim-feast of Tabernacles. If any of the families of the earth do not go up to Jerusalem to worship the King, the LORD of Hosts, no rain shall fall upon them. If any family of Egypt does not go up and enter the city, then the same disaster shall overtake it as that which the LORD will inflict on any nation which does not go up to keep the feast. This shall be the punishment of Egypt and of any nation which does not go up to keep the feast of Tabernacles. 16 17 18 19

On that day, not a bell on a war-horse but shall be inscribed 'Holy to the LORD', and the pots in the house of the LORD shall be like the bowls before the altar. Every pot in Jerusalem and Judah shall be holy to the LORD of Hosts, and all who sacrifice shall come and shall take some of them and boil the flesh in them. So when that time comes, no trader shall again be seen in the house of the LORD of Hosts. 20 21

MALACHI

1 An oracle. The word of the LORD to Israel through Malachi.^a Religious decline and hope of recovery

2 I LOVE YOU, says the LORD. You ask, 'How hast thou shown love to us?'
3 Is not Esau Jacob's brother? the LORD answers. I love Jacob, but I
4 hate Esau; I have turned his mountains into a waste and his ancestral home
5 into a lodging in the wilderness. When Edom says, 'We are beaten down;
6 let us rebuild our ruined homes', these are the words of the LORD of Hosts:
7 If they rebuild, I will pull down. They shall be called a realm of wicked-8 ness, a people whom the LORD has cursed for ever. You yourselves will 9 see it with your own eyes; you yourselves will say, 'The LORD's greatness
10 reaches beyond the realm of Israel.'

6 A son honours his father, and a slave goes in fear of his master. If I am
7 a father, where is the honour due to me? If I am a master, where is the fear 8 due to me? So says the LORD of Hosts to you, you priests who despise my 9 name. You ask, 'How have we despised thy name?' Because you have 10 offered defiled food on my altar. You ask, 'How have we defiled thee?'
11 Because you have thought that the table of the LORD may be despised, 12 that if you offer a blind victim, there is nothing wrong, and if you offer a 13 victim lame or diseased, there is nothing wrong. If you brought such a 14 gift to the governor, would he receive you or show you favour? says the 15 LORD of Hosts. But now, if you placate God, he may show you mercy; if 16 you do this, will he withhold his favour from you? So the LORD of Hosts 17 has spoken. Better far that one of you should close the great door altogether, 18 so that the light might not fall thus all in vain upon my altar! I have no
19 pleasure in you, says the LORD of Hosts; I will accept no offering from you.
20 From furthest east to furthest west my name is great among the nations.
21 Everywhere fragrant sacrifice and pure gifts are offered in my name; for 22 my name is great among the nations, says the LORD of Hosts. But you 23 profane it by thinking that the table of the LORD may be defiled, and that 24 you can offer on it food you yourselves despise. You sniff at it, says the LORD 25 of Hosts, and say, 'How irksome!' If you bring as your offering victims that 26 are mutilated, lame, or diseased, shall I accept them from you? says the 27 LORD. A curse on the cheat who pays his vows by sacrificing a damaged 28 victim to the Lord, though he has a sound ram in his flock! I am the great 29 king, says the LORD of Hosts, and my name is held in awe among the 30 nations.

2 1 2 And now, you priests, this decree is for you: if you will not listen to me and pay heed to the honouring of my name, says the LORD of Hosts, then I will lay a curse upon you. I will turn your blessings into a curse; yes, into ^a Malachi: or my messenger.

a curse, because you pay no heed. I will cut off your arm,^a fling offal in your faces, the offal of your pilgrim-feasts, and I will banish you from my presence. Then you will know that I have issued this decree against you: my covenant with Levi falls to the ground, says the LORD of Hosts. My covenant was with him: I bestowed life and prosperity on him; I laid on him the duty of reverence, he revered me and lived in awe of my name.
 The instruction he gave was true, and no word of injustice fell from his lips; he walked in harmony with me and in uprightness, and he turned many back from sin. For men hang upon the words of the priest and seek knowledge and instruction from him, because he is the messenger of the LORD of Hosts. But you have turned away from that course; you have made many stumble with your instruction; you have set at nought the covenant with the Levites, says the LORD of Hosts. So I, in my turn, have made you despicable and mean in the eyes of the people, in so far as you disregard my ways and show partiality in your instruction.

Have we not all one father? Did not one God create us? Why do we violate the covenant of our forefathers by being faithless to one another?
 Judah is faithless, and abominable things are done in Israel and in Jerusalem; Judah has violated the holiness of the LORD by loving and marrying daughters of a foreign god. May the LORD banish any who do this from the dwellings of Jacob, nomads or settlers, even though they bring offerings to the LORD of Hosts.

Here is another thing that you do: you weep and moan, and you drown the altar of the LORD with tears, but he still refuses to look at the offering or receive an acceptable gift from you. You ask why. It is because the LORD has borne witness against you on behalf of the wife of your youth. You have been unfaithful to her, though she is your partner and your wife by solemn covenant. Did not the one God make her, both flesh and spirit? And what does the one God require but godly children? Keep watch on your spirit, and do not be unfaithful to the wife of your youth. If a man divorces or puts away his spouse, he overwhelms her with cruelty, says the LORD of Hosts the God of Israel. Keep watch on your spirit, and do not be unfaithful.

You have wearied the LORD with your talk. You ask, 'How have we wearied him?' By saying that all evildoers are good in the eyes of the LORD, that he is pleased with them, or by asking, 'Where is the God of justice?'
 Look, I am sending my messenger^b who will clear a path before me.
 Suddenly the Lord whom you seek will come to his temple; the messenger of the covenant in whom you delight is here, here already, says the LORD of Hosts. Who can endure the day of his coming? Who can stand firm when he appears? He is like a refiner's fire, like fuller's soap; he will take his seat, refining and purifying;^c he will purify the Levites and cleanse them like gold and silver, and so they shall be fit to bring offerings to the LORD. Thus the offerings of Judah and Jerusalem shall be pleasing to the LORD as they were in days of old, in years long past. I will appear before you in court, prompt to testify against sorcerers, adulterers, and perjurers, against those silver.

who wrong^a the hired labourer, the widow, and the orphan, who thrust the alien aside and have no fear of me, says the LORD of Hosts.

- 6 I am the LORD, unchanging; and you, too, have not ceased to be sons of 7 Jacob. From the days of your forefathers you have been wayward and have 8 not kept my laws. If you will return to me, I will return to you, says the 9 LORD of Hosts. You ask, 'How can we return?' May man defraud God, 10 that you defraud me? You ask, 'How have we defrauded thee?' Why, in 11 tithes and contributions. There is a curse, a curse on you all, the whole 12 nation of you, because you defraud me. Bring the tithes into the treasury, all of them; let there be food in my house. Put me to the proof, says the LORD of Hosts, and see if I do not open windows in the sky and pour a blessing on you as long as there is need. I will forbid pests to destroy the produce of your soil or make your vines barren, says the LORD of Hosts.
All nations shall count you happy, for yours shall be a favoured land, says
the LORD of Hosts.

Murmurers warned, the righteous triumphant

- 13 YOU HAVE USED HARD WORDS ABOUT ME, says the LORD, and then 14 you ask, 'How have we spoken against thee?' You have said, 'It is useless to serve God; what do we gain from the LORD of Hosts by observing 15 his rules and behaving with deference? We ourselves count the arrogant happy; it is evildoers who are successful; they have put God to the proof and come to no harm.'

- 16 Then those who feared the LORD talked together, and the LORD paid 17 heed and listened. A record was written before him of those who feared 18 him and kept his name in mind. They shall be mine, says the LORD of Hosts, my own possession against the day that I appoint, and I will spare them as a man spares the son who serves him. You will again tell good men from bad, the servant of God from the man who does not serve him.

- 4 The day comes, glowing like a furnace; all the arrogant and the evil-doers shall be chaff, and that day when it comes shall set them ablaze, says 2 the LORD of Hosts, it shall leave them neither root nor branch. But for you who fear my name, the sun of righteousness shall rise with healing in 3 his wings, and you shall break loose like calves released from the stall. On the day that I act, you shall trample down the wicked, for they will be ashes under the soles of your feet, says the LORD of Hosts.

- 4 Remember the law of Moses my servant, the rules and precepts which I bade him deliver to all Israel at Horeb.

- 5 Look, I will send you the prophet Elijah before the great and terrible 6 day of the LORD comes. He will reconcile fathers to sons and sons to fathers, lest I come and put the land under a ban to destroy it.

MEASURES OF LENGTH

	span	cubit	rod ^a
span	1
cubit	2	1	..
rod ^a	12	6	1

The 'short cubit' was traditionally the measure from the elbow to the knuckles of the closed fist; and what seems to be intended as a 'long cubit' measured a 'cubit and a hand-breadth', i.e. 7 instead of 6 hand-breadths (Ezek. 40. 5). What is meant by cubits 'according to the old standard of measurement' (2 Chr. 3. 3) is presumably this pre-exilic cubit of 7 hand-breadths. Modern estimates of the Hebrew cubit range from 12 to 25.2 inches, without allowing for varying local standards.

According to ancient authorities the Hebrew 'log' was of the same capacity as the Roman sextarius; this according to the best available evidence was equivalent to 0.99 pint of the English standard.

The 'gerah' was 1/20 of the sacred or heavy shekel and probably 1/24 of the light shekel.

The 'sacred shekel' according to tradition was identical with the heavy shekel;

while the 'shekel of the standard recognized by merchants' (Gen. 23. 16) was perhaps a weight stamped with its value as distinct from one not so stamped and requiring to be weighed on the spot.

The weight and value of the shekel varied so greatly according to the district and with the passing centuries that its evaluation in modern terms is impossible. Recent discoveries suggest that it may have weighed approximately 11.5 grammes.

Coins are not mentioned before the Exile. Only the 'daric' (1 Chr. 29. 7) and the 'drachma' (Ezra 2. 69; Neh. 7. 70-72), if this is a distinct coin, are found in the Old Testament; the former is said to have been a month's pay for a soldier in the Persian army, while the latter will have been the Greek silver drachma, estimated at approximately 4.4 grammes. The 'shekel' of this period (Neh. 5. 15) as a coin was probably the Graeco-Persian siglos weighing 5.6 grammes.

INTRODUCTION

TO THE APOCRYPHA

THE TERM 'APOCRYPHA', a Greek word meaning 'hidden (things)', was early used in different senses. It was applied to writings which were regarded as so important and precious that they must be hidden from the general public and reserved for the initiates, the inner circle of believers. It came to be applied to writings which were hidden not because they were too good but because they were not good enough, because, that is, they were secondary or questionable or heretical. A third usage may be traced to Jerome. He was familiar with the Scriptures in their Hebrew as well as their Greek form, and for him apocryphal books were those outside the Hebrew canon.

The generally accepted modern usage is based on that of Jerome. The Apocrypha as here translated consists of fifteen books or parts of books. They are:

- (1) The First Book of Esdras
- (2) The Second Book of Esdras
- (3) Tobit
- (4) Judith
- (5) The Rest of the Chapters of the Book of Esther
- (6) The Wisdom of Solomon
- (7) Ecclesiasticus or the Wisdom of Jesus son of Sirach
- (8) Baruch
- (9) A Letter of Jeremiah
- (10) The Song of the Three
- (11) Daniel and Susanna
- (12) Daniel, Bel, and the Snake
- (13) The Prayer of Manassch
- (14) The First Book of the Maccabees
- (15) The Second Book of the Maccabees

These works are outside the Palestinian canon; that is, they form no part of the Hebrew Scriptures, although the original language of some of them was Hebrew. With the exception, however, of the Second Book of Esdras, they are all in the Greek version of the Old Testament made for the Greek-speaking Jews in Egypt. As such they were accepted as biblical by the early Church and were quoted as Scripture by many early Christian writers, for their Bible was the Greek Bible.

In Greek and Latin manuscripts of the Old Testament these books are dispersed throughout the Old Testament, generally in the places most in accord with their contents. The practice of collecting them into a separate unit, a practice which dates back no farther than A.D. 1520, explains why certain of the items are but fragments; they are passages not found in the Hebrew Bible, and so have been removed from the books in which they occur in the Greek version. To help the reader over this disunity and lack of context the present translators have resorted to various devices. We have added the name Daniel to the titles of the stories of Susanna and of Bel and the Snake as a reminder that these tales are to be read with the Book of Daniel. A note we have inserted after the title, The Song of the Three, indicates that this item is to be found in the third chapter of the Greek form of Daniel. And the six additions to the Book of Esther are so disjointed and unintelligible as they stand in most editions of the Apocrypha that we have provided them with a context by rendering the whole of the Greek version of Esther.

The text used in this translation of the Apocrypha is that edited by H. B. Swete in The Old Testament in Greek according to the Septuagint. In places Swete includes two texts, and we have chosen to translate the Codex Sinaiticus text of Tobit and Theodotion's version of the additions to the Book of Daniel, namely, The Song of the Three, Daniel and Susanna, and Daniel, Bel, and the Snake. For Ecclesiasticus we have used, in addition to Codex Vaticanus as printed in Swete's edition, the text edited by J. H. A. Hart in Ecclesiasticus: the Greek Text of Codex 248, and constant reference has been made to the various forms of the Hebrew text. For the Second Book of Esdras, which apart from a few verses is not extant in a Greek form, we have based our translation on the Latin text of R. L. Bensly's The Fourth Book of Ezra. Throughout we have consulted the variant readings given in critical editions of the Greek, the texts of the versions, and the suggestions of editors and commentators.

Alternative readings cited from Greek manuscripts (referred to as witnesses) and the evidence of early translations (Vss., that is Versions) are given, as footnotes, only when they are significant either for text or for meaning. In a few places where the text seems to have suffered in the course of transmission and in its present form is obscure or unintelligible we have made a slight change in the text and marked our rendering of it probable reading, and we have indicated any evidence other than the evidence afforded by the context. Where an alternative interpretation seemed to deserve serious consideration it has been recorded as a footnote with Or as indicator.

In order to preserve the verse numbering of the Authorized (King James) Version of 1611 we have, when necessary, added at the foot of the page those passages which are found in the manuscripts on which the Authorized Version ultimately rests but which are absent from the earlier manuscripts now available.

We have not sought to achieve consistency in the treatment of proper names any more than did our predecessors. We have continued to use familiar English forms, especially when the reference is to well-known Old Testament characters or places. Sometimes as an aid to the correct pronunciation we have had recourse to such expedients as the affixing of an acute accent to the word Sidé or the introduction of a diphthong, as in our Soud for Sud. In general it may be said that Greek spellings have been

Latinized, but the Greek forms of place-names have not been brought into line with the Hebrew.

We have not aimed at consistency in our treatment of weights and measures. We have rendered terms into the nearest English equivalents only when these seemed suitable and natural in the context.

In the text of the First and Second Books of the Maccabees the dates given are reckoned according to the Greek or Seleucid era. As a help to the reader we have added at the foot of the page the nearest dates according to the Christian era.

This translation of the Apocrypha shares with other parts of The New English Bible the aim of providing a rendering which will be both faithful to the text translated and genuinely English in idiom. The translators have endeavoured to convey the meaning of the original in language which will be the closest natural equivalent. They have tried to avoid free paraphrase on the one hand and, on the other, formal fidelity resulting in a translation which would read like a translation. It is their hope that by their labours these documents, valuable in themselves and indispensable for the study of the background of the New Testament, have been made more intelligible and more readily accessible.

MARGINAL NUMBERS

THE conventional verse divisions in the Apocrypha date only from editions printed in the sixteenth century and have no basis in the manuscripts. Any system of division into numbered verses is foreign to the spirit of this translation, which is intended to convey the meaning in continuous natural English.

For purposes of reference, verse numbers are placed in the margin opposite the line in which the first word belonging to the verse in question appears. Sometimes, however, successive verses are combined in a continuous translation, so that the precise point where a new verse begins cannot be fixed; in these cases the verse numbers, joined by a hyphen, are placed at the point where the passage begins.

THE FIRST BOOK OF ESDRAS

Exile and return

JOSIAH KEPT the Passover at Jerusalem in honour of his Lord 1 and sacrificed the Passover victims on the fourteenth day of the first 2 month. The priests, duly robed in their vestments, he stationed in the 3 temple of the Lord according to the order of daily service. He commanded 4 the Levites, who served the temple in Israel, to purify themselves for the 5
Lord, in order to place the holy Ark of the Lord in the house which was 6 built by King Solomon, son of David. Josiah said to them, 'You are no 7 longer to carry it on your shoulders. Make yourselves ready now, family 8 by family and clan by clan, to do service to the Lord your God and to 9 minister to his people Israel in the manner prescribed by King David and 10 provided for so magnificently by his son Solomon. Take your places in the 11 temple as Levites in the prescribed order of your families in the presence 12 of your brother Israelites; sacrifice the Passover victims, and prepare the 13 sacrifices for your brothers. Observe the Passover according to the ordi- 14
nance of the Lord which was given to Moses.'

To those who were present Josiah made a gift of thirty thousand lambs 7 and kids and three thousand calves. These he gave from the royal estates in 8 fulfilment of his promise to the people and to the priests and Levites. The 9 temple-wardens, Chelkias, Zacharias, and Eyselus, gave the priests two 10 thousand six hundred sheep and three hundred calves for the Passover. 11 Jechonias, Samaeas, his brother Nathanael, Sabias, Ozielus, and Joram, 12 army officers of high rank, gave the Levites five thousand sheep and seven 13 hundred calves for the Passover. 14

This was the procedure. The priests and the Levites, bearing the un- 10 leavened bread, stood in all their splendour before the people, in the order 11 of their clans and families, to make offerings to the Lord as is laid down in 12 the book of Moses. This took place in the morning. They roasted the Pass- 13 over victims over the fire in the prescribed way and boiled the sacrifices in 14
the vessels and cauldrons, and a pleasant smell went up; then they carried 15-16 portions round to the whole assembly. After this they made preparations both for themselves and for their brothers the priests, the sons of Aaron.
The priests went on offering the fat until nightfall, while the Levites made the preparations both for themselves and for their brothers the priests, the sons of Aaron. The sons of Asaph, the temple singers, with Asaph, Zacharias, and Eddinous of the royal court, and the door-keepers at each gateway remained at their station according to the ordinances of David, which prescribe that no one may lawfully default in his daily duty; their brothers

17 the Levites made the preparations for them. All that pertained to the Lord's 18 sacrifice was completed that day: the keeping of the Passover and the offering of the sacrifices on the altar of the Lord according to the command of 19 King Josiah. The Israelites who were present on this occasion kept the 20 Passover and the Feast of Unleavened Bread for seven days. Such a Passover had not been kept in Israel since the time of the prophet Samuel; 21 none of the kings of Israel had kept such a Passover as was kept by Josiah, the priests and the Levites, the men of Judah, and those Israelites who 22 happened to be resident in Jerusalem. It was in the eighteenth year of Josiah's reign that this Passover was celebrated.

23 All that Josiah did he did rightly and in whole-hearted devotion to his 24 Lord. The events of his reign are to be found in ancient records which tell a story of sin and rebellion against the Lord graver than that of any other nation or kingdom, and of offences against him which brought down his judgement upon Israel.

25 After all these doings of Josiah's it happened that Pharaoh king of Egypt was advancing to attack Carchemish on the Euphrates, and Josiah took 26 the field against him. The king of Egypt sent him this message: 'What is 27 your business with me, king of Judah? It is not against you that the Lord God has sent me to fight; my campaign is on the Euphrates. The Lord is with me, the Lord, I say, is with me, driving me on. Withdraw, and do not 28 oppose the Lord.' Josiah did not turn his chariot but went forward to the attack. He disregarded what the Lord had said through the prophet Jere-29 miah and joined battle with Pharaoh in the plain of Megiddo. Pharaoh's 30 captains swept down upon King Josiah. The king said to his servants, 'Take me out of the battle, for I am badly hurt.' At once his servants took him out 31 of the line and lifted him into his second chariot. He was brought back to Jerusalem, and there he died and was buried in his ancestral tomb.

32 All Judah mourned Josiah, and the prophet Jeremiah lamented him.
The lamentation for Josiah has been observed by the chief men and their wives from that day to this; it was proclaimed that it should be a custom 33 for ever for the whole people of Israel. These things are recorded in the book of the histories of the kings of Judah; every deed that Josiah did which won him fame and showed his understanding of the law of the Lord, both what he did earlier and what is told of him here, is related in the book of the kings of Israel and Judah.

34 His compatriots took Joachaz the son of Josiah and made him king in 35 succession to his father. He was twenty-three years old, and he reigned over Judah and Jerusalem for three months. Then the king of Egypt deposed 36 37 him, fined the nation a hundred talents of silver and one talent of gold, and 38 appointed his brother Joakim king of Judah and Jerusalem. Joakim imprisoned the leading men and had his brother Zarius arrested and brought back from Egypt.

39 Joakim was twenty-five years old when he became king of Judah and 40 Jerusalem; he did what was wrong in the eyes of the Lord. Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon marched against him; he put him in chains of bronze and 41 took him to Babylon. Nebuchadnezzar also took some of the sacred vessels 42 of the Lord, carried them off, and put them in his temple in Babylon. The stories about Joakim, his sacrilegious and godless conduct, are recorded in the chronicles of the kings.

Joakim was succeeded on the throne by his eighteen-year-old son Joakim. He reigned in Jerusalem for three months and ten days, and did what was wrong in the eyes of the Lord.

A year later Nebuchadnezzar had him deported to Babylon together with the sacred vessels of the Lord. He made Zedekiah king of Judah and Jerusalem. Zedekiah was twenty-one years old and reigned eleven years. He did what was wrong in the eyes of the Lord and disregarded what the Lord had said through the prophet Jeremiah. King Nebuchadnezzar had made him take an oath of allegiance by the Lord, but he broke it and revolted. He was stubborn and defiant, and transgressed the commandments of the Lord, the God of Israel.

The leaders of the people and the chief priests committed many wicked and lawless acts, outdoing even the heathen in sacrilege, and they defiled the holy temple of the Lord in Jerusalem. The God of their fathers sent his messenger to reclaim them, because he wished to spare them and his dwelling-place. But they derided his messengers, and on the very day when the Lord spoke they were scoffing at his prophets. At last he was roused to fury against his people for their impieties, and ordained that the kings of the Chaldaeans should attack them. These put their young men to the sword all round the holy temple, sparing neither old nor young, neither boy nor girl; the Lord handed them all over to their enemies. All the sacred vessels of the Lord, large and small, the furnishings of the Ark of the Lord, and the royal treasures were carried off to Babylon. The house of the Lord was set on fire, the walls of Jerusalem destroyed, its towers burnt, and all its splendours ruined. Nebuchadnezzar carried off to Babylon the survivors from the slaughter, and they remained slaves to him and his sons until the Persians took his empire. This fulfilled the word of the Lord spoken by Jeremiah: 'Until the land has run the full term of its sabbaths, it shall keep sabbath all the time of its desolation till the end of the seventy years.'

DURING THE FIRST YEAR of Cyrus king of Persia, the Lord, in order to fulfil his word spoken through Jeremiah, moved Cyrus king of Persia to make a proclamation throughout his empire, which he also put in writing: 'This is the decree of Cyrus king of Persia: The Lord of Israel, the most high Lord, has made me king of the world and has directed me to build him a house at Jerusalem in Judaea. Whoever among you belongs to his people, may his Lord be with him; let him go up to Jerusalem in Judaea and build the house of the Lord of Israel, the Lord who dwells in Jerusalem. Wherever each man lives let his neighbours help him with gold and silver and other gifts, with horses and pack-animals, together with other things set aside as votive offerings for the Lord's temple in Jerusalem.'

Then the chiefs of the clans of the tribe of Judah and of Benjamin, the priests, the Levites, came forward, and all whose spirit the Lord had moved to go up to build the Lord's temple in Jerusalem. Their neighbours helped with everything, with silver and gold, horses and pack-animals; and many were also moved to help with votive offerings in great quantity. King Cyrus brought out the sacred vessels of the Lord which Nebuchadnezzar had 11 taken away from Jerusalem and set up in his idolatrous temple. Cyrus 12 king of Persia brought them out and delivered them to Mithradates his 13 treasurer, by whom they were delivered to Sanabassar, the governor of 14 Judaea. This is the inventory: a thousand gold cups, a thousand silver cups, 15 twenty-nine silver censers, thirty gold bowls, two thousand four hundred 16 and ten silver bowls, and a thousand other articles. In all, five thousand four hundred and sixty-nine gold and silver vessels were returned, and taken from Babylon to Jerusalem by Sanabassar together with the exiles.

16 In the time of Artaxerxes king of Persia, Belemus, Mithradates, Tabellius, Rathymus, Beeltethmus, Semellius the secretary, and their colleagues in office in Samaria and other places, wrote him a letter denouncing the inhabitants of Judaea and Jerusalem in the following terms:

17 To our Sovereign Lord Artaxerxes your servants Rathymus the recorder, Semellius the secretary, the other members of their council, and the magistrates in Coele-syria and Phoenicia:

18 This is to inform Your Majesty that the Jews who left you to come here have arrived in Jerusalem and are rebuilding that wicked and rebellious 19 city. They are repairing its streets and walls and laying the foundation of the temple. If this city is rebuilt and the walls completed, they will cease 20 paying tribute and will rebel against the royal house. Since work on the temple is in hand, we have thought it well not to neglect this important 21 matter but to bring it to Your Majesty's notice, in order that, if it is Your Majesty's pleasure, search may be made in the records left by your prede-22 cessors. You will find in the archives evidence about these matters and will learn that this is a city that has resisted authority and given trouble to 23 kings and to other states, and has been a centre of armed rebellion by the 24 Jews from the earliest times. That is why it was laid in ruins. Now we submit to Your Majesty that, if this city be rebuilt and its walls rise again, you will no longer have access to Coele-syria and Phoenicia.

25 Then the king wrote to Rathymus the recorder, Beeltethmus, Semellius the secretary, and their colleagues in office in Samaria, Syria, and Phoenicia this reply:

26 I have read your letter. I ordered search to be made and it was dis-27 covered that this city has always been opposed to its overlords, and its inhabitants have raised rebellions and made wars. There were kings in Jerusalem, powerful and ruthless men, who in their time controlled 28 Coele-syria and Phoenicia and exacted tribute from them. I therefore command that the men you mention be prevented from rebuilding the 29 city, and that measures be taken to enforce this order and to check the spread of an evil likely to be a nuisance to the royal house.

30 When the letter from King Artaxerxes had been read, Rathymus, Semellius the secretary, and their colleagues set out at once for Jerusalem with cavalry and a large body of other troops and stopped the builders.
The building of the temple was broken off until the second year of the reign of Darius king of Persia.

A debate at the Persian court

KING DARIUS held a great feast for all those under him, his household, 3 the chief men of Media and Persia, and the satraps and commanders 2 and governors of his empire in the hundred and twenty-seven satrapies 3 from India to Ethiopia. When they had eaten and drunk their fill, they 3 went away, and King Darius withdrew to his bedchamber; he went to 4 sleep but woke up again. Then the three young men of the king's personal 4 bodyguard said to each other: 'Let each one of us name the thing which he 5 judges the strongest; and to the one whose opinion seems wisest King 5 Darius will give rich gifts and prizes: he shall be clothed in purple, drink 6 from gold vessels, and sleep on a golden bed; and he shall have a chariot 6 with gold-studded bridles, and a fine linen turban, and a chain about his 7 neck. His wisdom shall give him the right to sit next to Darius and to be 7 given the title Kinsman of Darius.' Then each wrote down his own state- 8 ment, sealed it, and put it under the king's pillow. 'When the king wakes 9 again,' they said, 'the writing will be given him. The king and the three 9 chief men of Persia shall judge whose statement is wisest, and the award 10 will be made on the merits of the written statement.'

One wrote 'Wine is strongest', the second wrote 'The king is strongest', 10 11 and the third wrote 'Women are strongest, but truth conquers all'. When 12 13 the king got up he was presented with what they had written. He read it, 14 and summoned all the chief men of Persia and Media, satraps, commanders, 15 governors, and chief officers. Then he took his seat in the council chamber, 16 and what they had written was read out before them. He said, 'Call the 16 young men and let them expound their statements.' They were called and 17 came in. They were asked, 'Tell us about what you have written.'

The first, who spoke about the strength of wine, began. 'Sirs,' he said, 18
 'how true it is that wine is strongest! It sends astray the wits of all who 19 drink it; king and orphan, slave and free, rich and poor, it has the same 20 effect on them all. It turns all thoughts to revelry and mirth; it brings for- 21 getfulness of grief and debt. It makes all feel rich, cares nothing for king or 22 satrap, and makes men always talk in millions. When they are in their 23 cups, they forget to be friendly to friends and relations, and are quick to 24 draw their swords; when they have recovered from their wine, they cannot 25 remember what they have done. Sirs, is not wine the strongest, seeing that 26 it forces men to behave in this way?' With this he ended.

Then the second, the one who spoke of the strength of the king, began 4 his speech: 'Sirs, is not man the strongest, man who masters the earth and 2 the sea and all that is in them? But the strongest of men is the king; he is 3 their lord and master, and they obey all his commands. If he bids them 4 make war upon one another they do it; if he dispatches them against his 5 enemies, they march and level mountains and walls and towers. They kill 5 and are killed; they do not disobey the king's order. If they are victorious 6 they bring everything to the king, their spoils and everything else. Or take 6 those who do not serve as soldiers or go to war, but work the land: they 7 sow and reap, and bring their produce to the king. They compel each other 7 to bring him their tribute. Though he is no more than one man, if he orders

8 them to kill, they kill; if he orders them to release, they release; he orders
9 them to attack and they attack, to lay waste and they lay waste, to build 10 and they build, to cut down and they cut down, to plant and they plant.
11 So all his people and his troops obey him. Besides this, while he himself 12 sits at table, eats and drinks, and goes to sleep, they stand in attendance round about him and none can leave and see to his own affairs; they never 13 disobey him in anything. Sirs, of course the king must be strongest when he commands such obedience!' So he stopped speaking.

13 The third, who spoke about women and truth—and this was Zerub-14 babel—said: 'Sirs, it is true the king is great, men are many, and wine is 15 strong, but who rules over them? Who is the sovereign power? Women, 16 surely! The king and all his people who rule land and sea were born of 17 women, and from them they came. Women brought up the men who 18 planted the vineyards which yield the wine. They make clothes for men and they bring honour to men; men cannot do without women. If they 19 have amassed gold and silver and all kinds of beautiful things, and then see a woman with a lovely face and figure, they leave all these things to gape 20 and stare at her with open mouth, and all choose her in preference to gold or silver or beautiful things. A man will desert his father who brought him 21 up, desert even his country, and become one with his wife. He forgets father, mother, and country, and stays with his wife to the end of his days.
22 Here is the proof that women are your masters: do you not toil and sweat 23 and then bring all you earn and give it to your wives? A man will take his 24 sword and sally forth to plunder and rob, to sail on sea and river; he faces lions, he travels in the dark; and when he has robbed and plundered he brings the spoil home to his beloved.

25 26 'A man loves his wife more than his father or mother. For women's sakes many men have been driven out of their minds, many have been sold into 27 28 slavery, many have died or come to grief or ruined their lives. Do you believe me now? Certainly the king wields great authority; no country 29 dare lift a finger against him. Yet I watched him with Apame, his favourite concubine, daughter of the famous Bartacus. She was sitting on the king's 30 right; she took the diadem off his head and put it on her own, and slapped 31 his face with her left hand; and the king only gazed at her open-mouthed.
When she laughed at him he laughed; when she was cross with him he 32 coaxed her to make it up. Sirs, if women do as well as this, how can their 33 strength be denied?' The king and the chief men looked at one another.

34 He then went on to speak about truth: 'Sirs, we have seen that women are strong. The earth is vast, the sky is lofty, the sun swift in his course, for he moves through the circle of the sky and speeds home in a single day.
35 How great is he who does all this! But truth too is great and stronger than 36 all else. The whole earth calls on truth; the sky praises her. All created 37 things shake and tremble; with her there is no injustice. There is injustice in wine, in kings, in women, in all men, and in all their works, and so forth.
38 There is no truth in them; they shall perish in their injustice. But truth 39 abides and is strong for ever; she lives and rules for ever and ever. With her there is no favouritism or partiality; she chooses to do justice rather than 40 what is unjust and evil. All approve her works; in her judgements there is no injustice. Hers are strength and royalty, the authority and majesty of all ages. Praise be to the God of truth!

So he ended his speech, and all the people shouted and said, 'Great is truth: truth is strongest!' Then the king said to him, 'Ask what you will, even beyond what is in the writing, and I will grant it you. For you have been proved the wisest; and you shall sit by me and be called my Kinsman.'

Then he said to the king: 'Remember the vow you made on the day when you came to the throne. You promised to rebuild Jerusalem and to send back all the vessels taken from it which Cyrus set aside. When he vowed to destroy Babylon he also vowed to restore these vessels; and you too made a vow to rebuild the temple which the Edomites burnt when Judaea was ravaged by the Chaldaeans. This is the favour that I now beg of you, my lord king, this is the magnanimity I request: that you should perform the vow which you made to the King of heaven.'

King Darius stood up and kissed him, and wrote letters for him to all the treasurers, governors, commanders, and satraps instructing them to give safe conduct to him and to all those who were going up with him to rebuild Jerusalem. To all the governors in Coele-syria and Phoenicia and in Lebanon he wrote letters ordering them to transport cedar-wood from Lebanon to Jerusalem and join with Zerubbabel in building the city. He gave all Jews going up from the kingdom to Judaea letters assuring their liberties: that no officer, satrap, governor, or treasurer should interfere with them, that all land which they should acquire should be immune from taxation, and that the Edomites should surrender the villages they had seized from the Jews. Each year twenty talents were to be contributed to the building of the temple until it was finished, and a further ten talents annually for^a burnt-offerings to be sacrificed daily upon the altar in accordance with their law. All those who were going from Babylonia to build the city were to enjoy freedom, and their descendants after them. He gave written orders that all the priests going there should also receive maintenance and the vestments in which they would officiate; that the Levites too should receive maintenance, until the day when the building of the temple and Jerusalem was completed; and that all who guarded the city should be given land and pay. He sent back all the vessels from Babylon which Cyrus had set aside. All that Cyrus had commanded, he reaffirmed, ordering everything to be restored to Jerusalem.

When the young man, Zerubbabel, went out, he turned his face toward Jerusalem, looked up to heaven, and praised the King of heaven. 'From thee comes victory,' he said, 'from thee comes wisdom; thine is the glory and I am thy servant. All praise to thee who hast given me wisdom; to thee I give thanks, O Lord of our fathers.'

He took the letters and set off for Babylon, where he told his fellow-Jews. They praised the God of their fathers because he had given them full freedom to go and rebuild Jerusalem and the temple called by his name, and they feasted for a week with music and rejoicing.

The temple rebuilt

5 AFTER THIS the heads of families, tribe by tribe, were chosen to go to 6 Jerusalem, with their wives, their sons and daughters, their male and 7 female slaves, and their pack-animals. Darius sent a thousand horsemen
 8 to accompany them until they had brought them safely back to Jerusalem, 9 with a band of drums and flutes, and all their brothers dancing. So he sent 10 them off with their escort.

11 These are the names of the men who went to Jerusalem, according to their 12 families, tribes, and allotted duties. The priests, the sons of Phineas son of 13 Aaron, with Jeshua son of Josedek son of Saraeas, and Joakim his son; and ^a 14 Zerubbabel son of Salathiel of the house of David of the line of Phares 15 of the tribe of Judah, who spoke wise words before Darius king of Persia.
 16 They went in the second year of his reign, in Nisan the first month.

17 Now these are the men of Judah who came up from amongst the captive 18 exiles, those whom Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon had transported to 19 Babylon. They returned to Jerusalem and the rest of Judaea, each to his own 20 city: they came with Zerubbabel and Jeshua, Nehemiah, Zaraeas, Resaeas, thousand and fifty-two. The line of Phassurus one thousand two hundred and forty-seven. The line of Charme one thousand and seventeen. 25

The Levites: the line of Jesue, Cadmielus, Bannus, and Sudius seventy-four. The temple singers: the line of Asaph one hundred and twenty-eight. 26 27

The door-keepers: the line of Salum, of Atar, of Tolman, of Dacubi, of Ateta, of Sabi, in all one hundred and thirty-nine. 28

The temple-servitors: the line of Esau, of Asipha, of Taboth, of Keras, of Susa, of Phaleas, of Labana, of Aggaba, of Acud, of Uta, of Ketab, of Gaba, of Subai, of Anan, of Cathua, of Geddur, of Jairus, of Desan, of Noeba, of Chaseba, of Gazera, of Ozius, of Phinoe, of Asara, of Basthae, of Asana, of Maani, of Naphisi, of Acum, of Achipha, of Asur, of Pharakim, of Baaloth, of Meedda, of Coutha, of Charea, of Barchue, of Serar, of Thomi, of Nasith, of Atepha. All the temple-servitors and the descendants of Solomon's servants numbered three hundred and seventy-two. 29 30 31 32 33 34 35

The following came from Thermeleth and Thelsas with their leaders Charaathalar and Alar, and could not prove by their families and genealogies that they were Israelites: the line of Dalan, the line of Ban, and the line of Necodan six hundred and fifty-two. 36 37

From among the priests the claimants to the priesthood whose record could not be traced: the line of Obdia, of Accos, of Joddus, who married Augia one of the daughters of Zorzelleas, and took his name; when search was made for their family record in the register it could not be traced, and so they were excluded from priestly service. Nehemiah the governor ^a told them that they should not participate in the sacred offerings until a high priest arose wearing the breast-piece of Revelation and Truth. 38 39 40

They were in all: Israelites from twelve years old, not counting slaves male and female, forty-two thousand three hundred and sixty; their slaves seven thousand three hundred and thirty-seven; musicians and singers two hundred and forty-five; camels four hundred and thirty-five, horses seven thousand and thirty-six, mules two hundred and forty-five, donkeys five thousand five hundred and twenty-five. 41 42 43

Some of the heads of families, when they arrived at the temple of God in Jerusalem, made a vow to erect the house again on its site as best they could, and to give to the sacred treasury for the fabric fund one thousand minas of gold and five thousand minas of silver and one hundred vestments. 44 45

The priests, the Levites, and some of the people settled in Jerusalem and the neighbourhood, with the temple musicians and the door-keepers; and all Israel settled in their villages. 46

WHEN THE SEVENTH MONTH came and the Israelites were in their homes they gathered as one man in the broad square of the first gateway 47

48 toward the east. Jeshua son of Josedek and his brother priests and Zerub-
 49 babel son of Salathiel and his colleagues came forward and made ready 50 the altar of the God of Israel, to offer on it whole burnt-offerings according to the directions in the book of Moses the man of God. They were joined^a by men from the other peoples of the land and they set up the altar on its site (for the peoples in the land as a whole were hostile to them and were too strong for them); and they offered sacrifices to the Lord at the proper 51 time, and whole burnt-offerings morning and evening. They observed the Feast of Tabernacles as enjoined in the law, and the proper sacrifices day 52 by day; and thereafter the continual offerings, and sacrifices on sabbaths, 53 at new moons, and on all solemn feasts. All who had made a vow to God offered sacrifices to God from the new moon of the seventh month, 54-55 although the temple of God was not yet built. Money was paid to the stonemasons and carpenters; the Sidonians and Tyrians were supplied with food and drink, and with carts to bring cedar-trees from Lebanon, floating them down as rafts to the anchorage at Joppa, as decreed by Cyrus king of Persia.

56 In the second month of the second year, Zerubbabel son of Salathiel came to the temple of God in Jerusalem and started the work. There were with him Jeshua son of Josedek, their kinsmen, the levitical priests, and all 57 who had come to Jerusalem from the exile; and they laid the foundation of the temple of God. This was at the new moon, in the second month of 58 the second year after they had returned to Judaea and Jerusalem. The Levites from the age of twenty and upwards were set over the works of the Lord. Jeshua, his sons, his brothers, his brother Cadoel, the sons of Jeshua Emadabun, and the sons of Joda son of Iliadun with their sons and brothers, all the Levites, supervisors of the work, were active as one man on the works in the house of God. While the builders built the temple of the Lord, 59 the priests in their vestments with musical instruments and trumpets, and 60 the Levites the sons of Asaph with their cymbals, stood singing to the Lord 61 and praising him as David king of Israel had appointed. They sang psalms praising the Lord, 'for his goodness and glory is for ever toward all Israel'.
 62 All the people blew their trumpets and gave a loud shout, singing to the Lord as the building rose.

63 The priests, the Levites, and heads of families, the older men who had seen the former house, came to the building of this one with cries of 64 lamentation; and so, while many were sounding the trumpets loudly for 65 joy—so loudly as to be heard far away—the people could not hear the trumpets for the noise of lamentation.

66 The enemies of Judah and Benjamin heard the noise of the trumpets 67 and came to see what it meant. They found the returned exiles building the 68 temple for the Lord God of Israel; they came to Zerubbabel and Jeshua 69 and the leaders of the families, and said: 'We will build with you; for like you we obey your Lord and have sacrificed to him from the time of Asba-70 sareth king of Assyria who transported us here.' But Zerubbabel and Jeshua and the leaders of the families of Israel replied: 'You can have no share in 71 building the house for the Lord our God; we alone will build for the Lord

of Israel, as Cyrus king of Persia decreed.' But the peoples of the land harassed^a the men of Judaea, blockaded them, and interrupted the building. Their plots, agitations, and riots held up the completion of the building all the lifetime of King Cyrus. They were prevented from building for two years until Darius became king.

In the second year of the reign of Darius, the prophets Haggai and Zechariah son of Addo prophesied to the Jews in Judaea and Jerusalem in the name of the Lord the God of Israel. Then Zerubbabel son of Salathiel and Jeshua son of Josedek began to rebuild the house of the Lord in Jerusalem. The prophets of the Lord were at their side to help them. At that time Sisinnes, the governor-general of Syria and Phoenicia, with Sathrabuzanes and their colleagues, came to them and said: 'Who has authorized you to put up this building, complete with roof and everything else? Who are the builders carrying out this work?' But, thanks to the Lord who protected the returned exiles, the elders of the Jews were not prevented from building during the time that Darius was being informed and directions issued.

Here is a copy of the letter written to Darius, and sent by Sisinnes, the governor-general of Syria and Phoenicia, with Sathrabuzanes and their colleagues the authorities in Syria and Phoenicia:

To King Darius our humble duty. Be it known to our lord the king: we visited the district of Judaea and entered the city of Jerusalem, and there we found the elders of the Jews returned from exile building a great new house for the Lord with costly hewn stone and with beams set in the walls. This work was being done with all speed and the undertaking was making good progress; it was being executed in great splendour and with the utmost care. We then inquired of these elders by whose authority they were building this house and laying such foundations. We questioned them so that we could inform you in writing who their leaders were, and asked for a list of their names. They answered as follows: 'We are servants of the Lord who made heaven and earth. This house was built and completed many years ago by a great and powerful king of Israel. When our fathers sinned against the heavenly Lord of Israel and provoked him, he delivered them over to Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, king of the Chaldaeans; and they pulled down the house, set it on fire, and took the people into exile in Babylon. In the first year of the reign of King Cyrus over Babylonia, the king decreed that this house should be rebuilt. The sacred vessels of gold and silver which Nebuchadnezzar had taken from the house in Jerusalem, and set up in his own temple, he brought back out of the temple in Babylon and delivered to Zerubbabel and Sanabassar the governor, with orders to take all these vessels and to put them in the temple at Jerusalem, and to rebuild this temple of the Lord on the same site as before. Then Sanabassar came and laid the foundations of the house of the Lord in Jerusalem. From then till now the building has continued and is still unfinished.' Therefore, if it is Your Majesty's pleasure, let search be made in the royal archives in Babylon, and if it is found that the building of the house of the Lord in Jerusalem took place with the approval of King Cyrus, and if our lord the king so decide, let directions be issued to us on this subject.

23 Then King Darius ordered the archives in Babylon to be searched, and a scroll was found in the castle at Ecbatana in the province of Media which contained the following record:

24 In the first year of his reign King Cyrus ordered that the house of the 25 Lord in Jerusalem, where they sacrifice with fire continually, should be rebuilt. Its height should be sixty cubits and its breadth sixty cubits, 26 with three courses of hewn stone to one of new local timber; the expenses to be met from the royal treasury. The sacred gold and silver vessels of the house of the Lord which Nebuchadnezzar removed from the house in Jerusalem, and took to Babylon, should be restored to the house in Jerusalem and replaced where they formerly were.

27 Darius therefore instructed Sisinnes, the governor-general of Syria and Phoenicia, with Sathrabuzanes, their colleagues, and the governors in office in Syria and Phoenicia, to be careful not to interfere with the place, 28 but to allow the servant of the Lord, Zerubbabel, governor of Judaea, and the elders of the Jews to build the house of the Lord on its old site. 'I have also given instructions', he continued, 'that it should be completely rebuilt, and that they should not fail to co-operate with the returned exiles in 29 Judaea until the house of the Lord is finished. From the tribute of Coele-syria and Phoenicia let a contribution be duly given to these men for sacrifices to the Lord, payable to Zerubbabel the governor, for bulls, rams, 30 and lambs; and similarly wheat, salt, wine, and oil are to be provided regularly each year without question, as the priests in Jerusalem may 31 require day by day. Let all this be expended in order that sacrifices and libations may be offered to the Most High God for the king and his children, 32 and that intercession may be made on their behalf.' He also gave these orders: 'If anyone disobeys or neglects any of these orders written above or here set down, let a beam be taken from his own house and let him be 33 hanged on it and his estate forfeited to the king. May the Lord himself, therefore, to whom this temple is dedicated, destroy any king or people who shall lift a finger to delay or damage the Lord's house in Jerusalem.
34 I, Darius the king, decree that these orders be obeyed to the letter.'

7 Then, in accordance with the orders of King Darius, Sisinnes, governor-general of Coele-syria and Phoenicia, with Sathrabuzanes and their col-2 leagues, carefully supervised the sacred works, co-operating with the 3 elders of the Jews and the temple officers. With the encouragement of the prophets Haggai and Zechariah, good progress was made with the sacred 4 works, and they were finished by the ordinance of the Lord God of Israel and with the approval of Cyrus, Darius, and Artaxerxes, kings of Persia.
5 It was on the twenty-third of Adar in the sixth year of King Darius that 6 the house was completed. The Israelites, the priests, the Levites, and the rest of the former exiles who had joined them carried out the directions 7 in the book of Moses. For the dedication of the temple of the Lord they 8 offered a hundred bulls, two hundred rams, four hundred lambs, and twelve goats for the sin of all Israel corresponding to the twelve patriarchs of Israel. The priests and the Levites in their vestments stood family by family to preside over the services of the Lord God of Israel according to the book of Moses. The door-keepers took their stand at every gateway.

The Israelites who had returned from exile kept the Passover on the fourteenth day of the first month. The priests and the Levites were purified together; not all the returned exiles were purified with the priests, but the Levites were. They slaughtered the Passover victims for all the returned exiles and for their brother priests and for themselves. All those Israelites participated who had returned from exile and had segregated themselves from the abominations of the peoples of the land to seek the Lord. They kept the Feast of Unleavened Bread for seven days, rejoicing before the Lord; for he had changed the policy of the Assyrian king towards them and strengthened them for the service of the Lord the God of Israel.

Ezra in Jerusalem

AFTER THESE EVENTS, in the reign of Artaxerxes king of Persia, came Ezra, son of Saraeas, son of Ezerias, son of Chelkias, son of Salemus, son of Zadok, son of Ahitub, son of Amarias, son of Ezias, son of Mareroth, son of Zaraeas, son of Savia, son of Bocca, son of Abishua, son of Phineas, son of Eleazar, son of Aaron the chief priest. This Ezra came from Babylon as a talented scholar in the law of Moses which had been given by the God of Israel. The king held him in high regard and looked with favour upon all the requests he made. He was accompanied to Jerusalem by some Israelites, priests, Levites, temple singers, door-keepers, and temple-servitors, in the fifth month of the seventh year of Artaxerxes' reign. They left Babylon at the new moon in the first month and reached Jerusalem at the new moon in the fifth month; for the Lord gave them a safe journey. Ezra's knowledge of the law of the Lord and the commandments was exact in every detail, so that he could teach all Israel the ordinances and judgements.

The following is a copy of the mandate from King Artaxerxes to Ezra the priest, doctor of the law of the Lord:

King Artaxerxes to Ezra the priest, doctor of the law of the Lord, greeting.

I have graciously decided, and now command, that those of the Jewish nation and of the priests and Levites, in our kingdom, who so choose, shall go with you to Jerusalem. I and my council of seven Friends have decided that all who so desire may accompany you. Let them look to the affairs of Judaea and Jerusalem in pursuance of the law of the Lord, and bring to Jerusalem for the Lord of Israel the gifts which I and my Friends have vowed, all the gold and silver in Babylonia that may be found to belong to the Lord in Jerusalem, together with what has been given by the nation for the temple of the Lord their God in

15 Jerusalem. Let the gold and silver be expended upon ^a bulls, rams, lambs, 16 and so forth, so that sacrifices may be offered upon the altar of the Lord
17 their God in Jerusalem. Make use of the gold and silver in whatever 18 ways you and your colleagues desire, according to the will of your God, 19 and deliver the sacred vessels of the Lord which have been given you 20 for the use of the temple of your God in Jerusalem.

21 Any other expenses that you may incur for the needs of the temple of 22 your God you shall defray from the royal treasury. I, Artaxerxes the 23 king, direct the treasurers of Syria and Phoenicia to give without fail 24 to Ezra the priest, doctor of the law of the Most High God, whatever he 25 may request up to a hundred talents of silver, and similarly up to a 26 hundred sacks of wheat and a hundred casks of wine, and salt without 27 limit. Let him diligently fulfil in honour of the Most High God all the 28 requirements of God's law, so that divine displeasure may not befall the 29 kingdom of the king and of his descendants. You are also informed that 30 no tax or other impost is to be laid on the priests, the Levites, the temple 31 singers, the door-keepers, the temple-servitors, and the lay officers of this 32 temple; no one is permitted to impose any burden on them. You, Ezra, 33 under God's guidance, are to appoint judges and magistrates to judge all 34 who know the law of your God in all Syria and Phoenicia; you yourself
35 shall see to the instruction of those who do not know it. All who trans-36 gress the law of your God and of the king shall be duly punished with 37 death, degradation, fine, or exile.

38 Then Ezra said: All praise to the Lord alone, who put this into the king's 39 mind, to glorify his house in Jerusalem. He singled me out for honour 40 before the king, his counsellors, and all his Friends and dignitaries. I took 41 courage from the help of the Lord my God and gathered men of Israel to 42 go up with me.

43 These are the leaders according to clans and divisions who went with me
44 from Babylon to Jerusalem in the reign of King Artaxerxes: from the line 45 of Phineas, Gershom; from the line of Ithamar, Gamael; from the line of 46 David, Attus son of Sechenias; from the line of Phoros, Zacharias and a 47 hundred and fifty men with him according to the register; from the line of 48 Phaath-moab, Eliaonias son of Zaraeas and with him two hundred men;
49 from the line of Zathoe, Sechenias son of Jezelus and with him three 50 hundred men; from the line of Adin, Obeth son of Jonathan and with him
51 two hundred and fifty men; from the line of Elam, Jessias son of Gotholias 52 and with him seventy men; from the line of Sophotias, Zaraeas son of 53 Michael and with him seventy men; from the line of Joab, Abadiah son of 54 Jezelus and with him two hundred and twelve men; from the line of Bani, 55 Assalimoth son of Josaphias and with him a hundred and sixty men; from 56 the line of Babi, Zacharias son of Bebae and with him twenty-eight men;
57 from the line of Astath, Joannes son of Hacatan and with him a hundred 58 and ten men; last came those from the line of Adonikam, by name Eli-59 phalatus, Jeuel, and Samaeas, and with them seventy men; from the line
60 of Bago, Uthi son of Istalcurus and with him seventy men.

^a Or collected for.

I assembled them at the river called Theras, where we encamped for three days, and I inspected them. As I found no one there who was of priestly or levitical descent, I sent to Eleazar, Idueus, Maasmas, Elnathan, Samaeas, Joribus, Nathan, Ennatas, Zacharias, and Mosollamus, who were prominent and discerning men. I told them to go to Doldaeus the chief man at the treasury. I instructed them to speak with Doldaeus, his colleagues, and the treasurers there, and ask them to send us priests to officiate in the house of our Lord. Under the providence of God they brought us discerning men from the line of Mooli son of Levi son of Israel, Asebebias and his sons and brothers, eighteen men in all, also Asebias and Annunus and Hosaeas his brother. Those of the line of Chanunaeus and their sons amounted to twenty men; and those of the temple-servitors whom David and the leading men appointed for the service of the Levites amounted to two hundred and twenty. A register of all these names was compiled.

There I made a vow that the young men should fast before our Lord to beg him to give us a safe journey for ourselves, our children who accompanied us, and our pack-animals. I was ashamed to ask the king for an escort of infantry and cavalry against our enemies; for we had told the king that the strength of our Lord would ensure success for those who looked to him. So once more we laid all these things before our Lord in prayer and found him gracious.

I set apart twelve men from among the heads of the priestly families, and with them Sarabias and Asamias and ten of their brother priests. I weighed out for them the silver, the gold, and the sacred vessels of the house of our Lord; these had been presented by the king himself, his counsellors, the chief men, and all Israel. When I had weighed it all I handed over to them six hundred and fifty talents of silver, and vessels of silver weighing a hundred talents, a hundred talents of gold, and twenty pieces of gold plate, and twelve vessels of brass so fine that it gleamed like gold. I said to them: 'You are consecrated to the Lord, and so are the vessels; the silver and the gold are vowed to the Lord, the Lord of our fathers. Be vigilant and keep guard until you hand them over at Jerusalem, in the priests' rooms in the house of our Lord, to the heads of the priestly and levitical families and to the leaders of the clans of Israel.' The priests and the Levites who received the silver, the gold, and the vessels in Jerusalem brought them to the temple of the Lord.

We left the river Theras on the twelfth day of the first month, and under the powerful protection which our Lord gave us we reached Jerusalem. He guarded us against every enemy on our journey, and so we arrived at Jerusalem. Three days passed, and on the fourth the silver and gold were weighed and handed over in the house of our Lord to the priest Marmathi son of Uri, with whom was Eleazar son of Phineas. With them also were the Levites Josabdus son of Jeshua and Moeth son of Sabannus. Everything was numbered and weighed and every weight recorded there and then. The returned exiles offered sacrifices to the Lord the God of Israel, twelve bulls for all Israel, with ninety-six rams and seventy-two lambs, and also twelve goats for a peace-offering, the whole as a sacrifice to the Lord.

67 They delivered the king's orders to the royal treasurers and the governors of Coele-syria and Phoenicia, and so added lustre to the nation and the temple of the Lord.

68 WHEN THESE MATTERS had been settled the leaders came to me and 69 said: 'The nation of Israel, the rulers, the priests, and the Levites, have not kept themselves apart from the alien population of the land with all their pollutions, that is to say the Canaanites, Hittites, Perizzites, Jebusites,
70 Moabites, Egyptians, and Edomites. For they and their sons have intermarried with the daughters of these peoples, and the holy race has been mingled with the alien population of the land; and the leaders and principal men have shared in this violation of the law from the very beginning.'

71 As soon as I heard of this I tore my clothes and sacred vestment, plucked out the hair of my head and my beard, and sat down perplexed and miserable. Those who at that time were moved by the word of the Lord of Israel gathered round me, while I grieved over this disregard of the law, and sat 72 in my misery until the evening sacrifice. Then I rose from my fast with my clothes and sacred vestment torn, and knelt down and, stretching out my 73 hands to the Lord, said:

74 'O Lord, I am covered with shame and confusion in thy presence. Our 75-76 sins tower above our heads; from the time of our fathers our offences have reached the sky, and today we are as deep in sin as ever. Because of our sins and the sins of our fathers, we and our brothers, our kings and our priests, were given over to the kings of the earth to be killed, taken prisoner,
77 plundered, and humiliated down to this very day. And now, Lord, how great is the mercy thou hast shown us! We still have a root and a name in the place of thy sanctuary, and thou hast rekindled our light in the house of 78 our Lord, and given us food in the time of our servitude. Even when we were slaves we were not deserted by our Lord; for he secured for us the 79 favour of the kings of Persia, who have provided our food and added lustre to the temple of our Lord and restored the ruins of Zion, giving us a firm
80 foothold in Judaea and Jerusalem. And now, Lord, what are we to say, we who have received all this? For we have broken thy commandments given 81 us through thy servants the prophets. Thou didst say: "The land which you are to occupy is a land defiled with the pollution of its heathen peoples;
82 they have filled it with their impurities. Do not marry your daughters to their sons nor take their daughters for your sons; never try to make peace with them if you want to be strong and enjoy the good things of the land
83 and take possession of it for your children for ever." All our misfortunes have come upon us through our evil deeds and our great sins. Although 84 thou, Lord, hast lightened the burden of our sins and given us so firm a root, yet we have fallen away again and broken thy law by sharing in the 85 impurities of the heathen peoples of this land. But thou wast not so angry with us, Lord, as to destroy us, root, seed, and name; thou keepest faith, 86 O Lord of Israel; the root is left, we are here today. Behold us, now before thee in our sins; because of all we have done we can no longer hold up our 87 heads before thee.'

While Ezra prayed and made confession, weeping prostrate on the ground before the temple, a very large crowd gathered, men, women, and youths of Jerusalem, and there was widespread lamentation among the people. Jechonias son of Jeel, one of the Israelites, called out to Ezra: 'We have sinned against the Lord in taking alien wives from the heathen population of this land; and yet there is still hope for Israel. Let us take an oath to the Lord to expel all our wives of alien race with their children, in accordance with your judgement and the judgement of all who are obedient to the law of the Lord. Come now, set about it, it is in your hands; take strong action and we are with you.' Ezra got up and laid an oath upon the principal priests and Levites of all Israel that they would act in this way, and they swore to it.

Ezra left the court of the temple and entered the room of the priest Joanan son of Eliasibus. There he stayed, eating no food and drinking no water, while he mourned over the serious violations of the law by the community. A proclamation was made throughout Judaea and in Jerusalem to all the returned exiles that they should assemble at Jerusalem; those who failed to arrive within two or three days, according to the decision of the elders in office, were to have their cattle confiscated for temple use and would themselves be excluded from the community of the returned exiles.

Three days later all Judah and Benjamin had assembled in Jerusalem; the date was the twentieth of the ninth month. They all sat together in the open space before the temple, shivering because winter had set in. Ezra stood up and said to them: 'You have broken the law and married alien wives, bringing a fresh burden of guilt on Israel. Now make confession to the Lord God of our fathers; do his will and separate yourselves from the heathen population of this land and from your alien wives.'

The whole company answered with a shout: 'We will do as you have said!' 'But', they said, 'our numbers are great, and we cannot stay here in the open in this wintry weather. Nor is this the work of a day or two only; the offence is widespread among us. Let the leaders of the community stay here, and let all members of our settlements who have alien wives attend at an appointed time along with the elders and judges of each place, until we turn away the Lord's anger at what has been done.'

Jonathan son of Azael and Hezekias son of Thocanus took charge on these terms, and Mosollamus, Levi, and Sabbataeus were their assessors. The returned exiles duly carried all this out.

Ezra the priest selected men by name, all chiefs of their clans, and on the new moon of the tenth month they sat to investigate the matter. This affair of the men who had alien wives was settled by the new moon of the first month.

Among the priests some of those who had come together were found to have alien wives; these were Mathelas, Eleazar, Joribus, and Joadanus of the line of Jeshua son of Josedek and his brothers, who undertook to send away their wives and to offer rams in expiation of their error. Of the line of Emmer: Ananias, Zabdaeus, Manes, Samaeus, Jereel, and Azarias; of the line of Phaesus: Elionas, Massias, Ishmael, Nathanael, Okidelus, and

23 Saloas. Of the Levites: Jozabadus, Semis, Colius (this is Calitas), Phthaeus, 24 25 Judah, and Jonas. Of the temple singers: Eliasibus, Bacchurus. Of the door-keepers: Sallumus and Tolbanes.

26 Of the people of Israel there were, of the line of Phoros: Jermas, Jeddias, 27 Melchias, Maelus, Eleazar, Asibias, and Bannaes. Of the line of Ela:
 28 Matthanias, Zacharias, Jezrielus, Oabdius, Jeremoth, and Aedias. Of the line of Zamoth: Eliadas, Eliasimus, Othonias, Jarimoth, Sabathus, and 29 Zardaeas. Of the line of Bebae: Joannes, Ananias, Ozabadus, and Emathis.
 30 Of the line of Mani: Olamus, Mamuchus, Jedaes, Jasubus, Asaelus, and 31 Jeremoth. Of the line of Addi: Naathus, Moossias, Laccunus, Naidus, 32 Matthanias, Sesthel, Balnuus, and Manasseas. Of the line of Annas:
 33 Elionas, Asaeas, Melchias, Sabbaeas, and Simon Chosomaeus. Of the line of Asom: Altannaes, Mattathias, Bannaes, Eliphalat, Manasses, and 34 Semi. Of the line of Baani: Jeremias, Momdis, Ismaerus, Juel, Mandae, Paedias, Anos, Carabasion, Enasibus, Mamritanaemus, Eliasis, Bannus, Eliali, Somis, Selemias, and Nathanias. Of the line of Ezora: Sessis, Ezril, 35 Azael, Samatus, Zambris, and Josephus. Of the line of Nooma: Mazitias, 36 Zabadaeas, Edaes, Juel, and Banaeas. All these had married alien wives;
 they sent them away with their children.

37 THE PRIESTS, the Levites, and such Israelites as were in Jerusalem and its vicinity, settled down there on the new moon of the seventh month; 38 the other Israelites remained in their settlements. The entire body assembled as one in the open space before the east gateway of the temple 39 and asked Ezra the high priest and doctor of the law to bring the law of 40 Moses given by the Lord God of Israel. On the new moon of the seventh month he brought the law to all the multitude of men and women alike, and 41 to the priests, for them to hear. He read it in the open space before the temple gateway from daybreak until noon, in the presence of both men and 42 women, and the whole body listened intently. Ezra the priest and doctor of the law stood upon the wooden platform which had been prepared.
 43 There stood with him, on his right, Mattathias, Sammus, Ananias, 44 Azarias, Urias, Hezekias, and Baalsamus, and on his left, Phaldaeus, 45 Misael, Melchias, Lothasubus, Nabarias, and Zacharias. Ezra took up the book of the law; everyone could see him, for he was seated in a con-46 spicuous place in front of them all, and when he opened it they all stood up.
 Ezra praised the Lord God the Most High God of hosts, the Almighty.
 47 All the multitude cried 'Amen, Amen', and lifting up their hands fell to 48 the ground and worshipped the Lord. Jeshua, Annus, Sarabias, Jadinus, Jacobus, Sabbataeas, Autaeas, Maeannas, Calitas, Azarias, Jozabdu, Ananias, and Phiathas, the Levites, taught the law of the Lord; they read the law of the Lord to the whole company, at the same time instilling into their minds what was read.

49 Then the governor^a said to Ezra the high priest and doctor of the law
 50 and to each of the Levites who taught the multitude: 'This day is holy to 51 the Lord.' All were weeping as they heard the law. 'Go then, refresh yourselves with rich food and sweet wine, and send shares to those who have none; for the day is holy to the Lord. Let there be no sadness; for the Lord will give you glory.' The Levites issued the command to all the people: 'This day is holy, do not be sad.' So they all departed to eat and drink and make merry, and to send shares to those who had none, and to hold a great celebration; because the teaching given them had been instilled into their minds.

They gathered together. ^a

THE SECOND BOOK OF ESDRAS

Israel's rejection and glory to come

THE SECOND BOOK of the prophet Ezra, son of Seraiah, son of Azariah, son of Hilkiah, son of Shallum, son of Zadok, son of Ahitub, son of Ahijah, son of Phinehas, son of Eli, son of Amariah, son of Aziah, son of Marimoth, son of Arna, son of Uzzi, son of Borith, son of Abishua, son of Phinehas, son of Eleazar, son of Aaron, of the tribe of Levi.

I, EZRA, was a captive in Media in the reign of Artaxerxes, king of Persia, when the word of the Lord came to me: 'Go to my people and proclaim their crimes; tell their children how they have sinned against me, and let them tell their children's children. They have sinned even more than their fathers; they have forgotten me and sacrificed to alien gods. Was it not I who rescued them from Egypt, the country where they were slaves? And yet they have provoked me to anger and ignored my warnings.

'Now, Ezra, pluck out your hair and let calamities loose upon these people who have disobeyed my law. They are beyond correction. How much longer shall I endure them, I who have lavished on them such benefits? Many are the kings I have overthrown for their sake; I struck down Pharaoh with his court and all his army. I destroyed every nation that stood in their way, and in the east I routed the peoples of two provinces, Tyre and Sidon, and killed all the enemies of Israel.

'Say to them, "These are the words of the Lord: Was it not I who brought you through the sea, and made safe roads for you where no road had been? I gave you Moses as your leader, and Aaron as your priest; I gave you light from a pillar of fire, and performed great miracles among you. And yet you have forgotten me, says the Lord.

"These are the words of the Lord Almighty: I gave you the quails as a sign; I gave you a camp for your protection. But all you did there was to grumble and complain—instead of celebrating the victory I had given you

^a Probably the text originally carried on from this point; compare Nehemiah 8. 13.

when I destroyed your enemies. From that day to this you have never 17 stopped complaining. Have you forgotten what benefits I conferred on you? When you were hungry and thirsty in your journey through the 18 desert, you cried out to me, 'Why have you brought us into this desert to kill us? Better to have remained in Egypt as slaves than to die here in the 19 desert!' I was grieved by your complaints, and gave you manna for food;
20 you ate the bread of angels. When you were thirsty, I split open the rock, and out flowed water in plenty. Against the summer heat I gave you the 21 shelter of leafy trees. I gave you fertile lands to divide among your tribes, expelling the Canaanites, Perizzites, and Philistines who opposed you.
What more could I do for you? says the Lord.

22 '“These are the words of the Lord Almighty: When you were in the 23 desert, suffering thirst by the stream of bitter water and cursing me, I did not bring down fire upon you for your blasphemy; I cast a tree into the 24 stream and made the water sweet. What am I to do with you, Jacob?
Judah, you have refused to obey me. I will turn to other nations; I will 25 give them my name, and they will keep my statutes. Because you have deserted me, I will desert you; when you cry for mercy, I will show you 26 none; when you pray to me, I will not listen. You have stained your hands 27 with blood; you run hot-foot to commit murder. It is not I whom you have deserted, but yourselves, says the Lord.

28 '“These are the words of the Lord Almighty: Have I not pleaded with you as a father with his sons, as a mother with her daughters or a nurse with 29 her children? Have I not said, 'Be my people, and I will be your God; be my sons, and I will be your father'? I gathered you as a hen gathers her 30 chickens under her wings. But now what am I to do with you? I will toss you away. When you offer me sacrifice, I will turn from you; I have rejected 31 your feasts, your new moons, and your circumcisions. I sent you my servants the prophets, but you took them and killed them, and mutilated 32 their dead bodies. For their murder I will call you to account, says the Lord.

33 '“These are the words of the Lord Almighty: Your house is abandoned.
34 I will toss you away like straw before the wind. Your children shall have no posterity, because like you they have ignored my commandments and 35 done what I have condemned. I will hand over your home to a people soon to come; a people who will trust me, though they have not known me; 36 who will do my bidding, though I gave them no signs; who never saw the 37 prophets, and yet will keep in mind what the prophets taught of old. I vow that this people yet to come shall have my favour. Their little ones shall jump for joy. They have not seen me with their eyes, but they shall perceive by the spirit and believe all that I have said.”

38 'Now, father Ezra, look with triumph at the nation coming from the east.
39 The leaders I shall give them are Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, Hosea and 40 Amos, Micah and Joel, Obadiah and Jonah, Nahum, Habakkuk, and Zephaniah, Haggai and Zechariah, and Malachi, who is also called the Lord's Messenger.

2 'These are the words of the Lord: I freed this people from slavery, and gave them commandments through my servants the prophets; but they shut their ears to the prophets, and let my precepts become a dead letter. The mother who bore them says to them: "Go, my sons; I am widowed and deserted. Joyfully I brought you up; I have lost you with grief and sorrow, because you have sinned against the Lord God and done what I know to be wrong. What can I do for you now, widowed and deserted as I am? Go, my sons, ask the Lord for mercy." Now I call upon you, father Ezra, to add your testimony to hers, that her children have refused to keep my covenant; and let your words bring confusion on them. May their mother be despoiled, and may they themselves have no posterity. Condemn them to be scattered among the nations, and their name to vanish from the earth, because they have spurned my covenant.

'Woe to you, Assyria, for harbouring sinners! Remember, you wicked nation, what I did to Sodom and Gomorrah: their land lies buried under lumps of pitch and heaps of ashes. That is how I will deal with those who have disobeyed me, says the Lord Almighty.

'These are the words of the Lord to Ezra: Tell my people that I will give to them the kingdom of Jerusalem which once I offered to Israel. I will withdraw the splendour of my presence from Israel, and the home that was to be theirs for ever I will give to my own people. The tree of life shall spread its fragrance over them; they shall not toil or grow weary. Ask, and you shall receive; so pray that your short time of waiting may be made shorter still. The kingdom is ready for you now; be on the watch! Call heaven, call earth, to witness: I have cancelled the evil and brought the good into being; for I am the Living One, says the Lord.

'Mother, cherish your sons. Rear them joyfully as a dove rears her nestlings; teach them to walk without stumbling. You are my chosen one, says the Lord. I will raise up the dead from their resting-places, and bring them out of their tombs, for I have acknowledged that they bear my name. Have no fear, mother of many sons; I have chosen you, says the Lord.

'I will send my servants Isaiah and Jeremiah to help you. As they prophesied, I have set you apart to be my people. I have made ready for you twelve trees laden with different kinds of fruit, twelve fountains flowing with milk and honey, and seven great mountains covered with roses and lilies. There will I fill your sons with joy. Champion the widow, defend the cause of the fatherless, give to the poor, protect the orphan, clothe the naked. Care for the weak and the helpless, and do not mock at the cripple; watch over the disabled, and bring the blind to the vision of my brightness. Keep safe within your walls both old and young.

'When you find the dead unburied, mark them with the sign and commit them to the tomb; and then, when I cause the dead to rise, I will give you the chief place. Be calm, my people; for your time of rest shall come. Care for your children like a good nurse, and train them to walk without falling. Of my servants whom I have given you not one shall be lost; I will demand them back from among your number. Do not be anxious when the time of trouble and hardship comes; others shall lament and be sad, but you shall have happiness and plenty. All nations shall envy you, but shall be powerless against you, says the Lord.

'My power shall protect you, and save your sons from hell. Be joyful,

31 mother, you and your sons, for I will come to your rescue. Remember your children who sleep in the grave; I will bring them up from the depths of the earth, and show mercy to them; for I am merciful, says the Lord
 32 Almighty. Cherish your children until I come, and proclaim my mercy to them; for my favour flows abundantly from springs that will never run dry.'

33 I, EZRA, received on Mount Horeb a commission from the Lord to go to Israel; but when I came, they scorned me and rejected the Lord's commandment. Therefore I say to you Gentiles, you who hear and understand: 'Look forward to the coming of your shepherd, and he will give you everlasting rest; for he who is to come at the end of the world is close at 34 hand. Be ready to receive the rewards of the kingdom; for light perpetual will shine upon you for ever and ever. Flee from the shadow of this world, 35 and receive the joy and splendour that await you. I bear witness openly to my Saviour. It is he whom the Lord has appointed; receive him and be 36 joyful, giving thanks to the One who has summoned you to the heavenly realms. Rise, stand up, and see the whole company of those who bear the 37 Lord's mark and sit at his table. They have moved out of the shadow of this world and have received shining robes from the Lord. Receive, O Zion, your full number, and close the roll of those arrayed in white who have 38 faithfully kept the law of the Lord. The number of your sons whom you so long desired is now complete. Pray that the Lord's kingdom may come, so that your people, whom he summoned when the world began, may be set 39 apart as his own.'

42 I, Ezra, saw on Mount Zion a crowd too large to count, all singing hymns of praise to the Lord. In the middle stood a very tall young man, taller than 43 all the rest, who was setting a crown on the head of each one of them; he stood out above them all. I was enthralled at the sight, and asked the angel,
 44 'Sir, who are these?' He replied, 'They are those who have laid aside their mortal dress and put on the immortal, those who acknowledged the name
 45 of God. Now they are being given crowns and palms.' And I asked again, 'Who is the young man setting crowns on their heads and giving them
 46 palms?', and the angel replied, 'He is the Son of God, whom they acknowledged in this mortal life.' I began to praise those who had stood so valiantly 47 for the Lord's name. Then the angel said to me: 'Go and tell my people all the great and wonderful acts of the Lord God that you have seen.'

The mystery of human destiny

3 IN THE THIRTIETH YEAR after the fall of Jerusalem, I, Salathiel (who 2 am also Ezra), was in Babylon. As I lay on my bed I was troubled; my
 3 mind was filled with perplexity, as I considered the desolation of Zion and the prosperity of those who lived in Babylon. My spirit was deeply dis-
 4 turbed; and I uttered my fears to the Most High. 'My Lord, my Master,' I said, 'was it not you, and you alone, who in the beginning spoke the word
 5 that formed the world? You commanded the dust, and Adam appeared. His body was lifeless; but yours were the hands that had moulded it, and into it you breathed the breath of life. So you made him a living person. You led him into paradise, which you yourself had planted before the earth came into being. You gave him your one commandment to obey; he disobeyed it, and thereupon you made him subject to death, him and his descendants.

'From him were born nations and tribes, peoples and families, too numerous to count. Each nation went its own way, sinning against you and scorning you; and you did not stop them. But then again, in due time, you brought the flood upon the inhabitants of the earth and destroyed them. The same doom came upon all: death upon Adam, and the flood upon that generation. One man you spared—Noah, with his household, and all his righteous descendants.

'The population of the earth increased; families and peoples multiplied, nation upon nation. But then once again they began to sin, more wickedly than those before them. When they sinned, you chose for yourself one of them, whose name was Abraham; him you loved, and to him alone, secretly, at dead of night, you showed how the world would end. You made an everlasting covenant with him and promised never to abandon his descendants. You gave him Isaac, and to Isaac you gave Jacob and Esau; of these you chose Jacob for yourself and rejected Esau; and Jacob grew to be a great nation.

'You rescued his descendants from Egypt and brought them to Mount Sinai. There you bent the sky, shook ^a the earth, moved the round world, made the depths shudder, and turned creation upside down. Your glory passed through the four gates of fire and earthquake, wind and frost; and you gave the commandments of the law to the Israelites, the race of Jacob. But you did not take away their wicked heart and enable your law to bear fruit in them. For the first man, Adam, was burdened with a wicked heart; he sinned and was overcome, and not only he but all his descendants. So the weakness became inveterate. Although your law was in your people's hearts, a rooted wickedness was there too; so that the good came to nothing, and what was bad persisted.

'Years went by, and when the time came you raised up a servant for yourself, whose name was David. You told him to build the city that bears your name and there offer to you in sacrifice what was already your own. This was done for many years; until the inhabitants of the city went astray, behaving just like Adam and all his line; for they had the same wicked heart. And so you gave your own city over to your enemies.

'I said to myself: "Perhaps those in Babylon lead better lives, and that is why they have conquered Zion." But when I arrived here, I saw more wickedness than I could reckon, and these thirty years I have seen many evil-doers with my own eyes. My heart sank, because I saw how you tolerate sinners and spare the godless; how you have destroyed your own people, but protected your enemies. You have given no hint whatever to anyone how to understand your ways. ^b Is Babylon more virtuous than Zion? Has any nation except Israel ever known you? What tribes have put their trust in your covenants as the tribes of Jacob have? But they have seen

^a So some Vss.; Lat. fixed.

^b how . . . ways: so some Vss.; Lat. obscure.

no reward, no fruit for their pains. I have travelled up and down among the nations, and have seen how they prosper, heedless though they are of your commandments. So weigh our sins in the balance against the sins of the rest of the world; and it will be clear which way the scale tips. Has there ever been a time when the inhabitants of the earth did not sin against you? Has any nation ever kept your commandments like Israel? You may find one man here, one there; but nowhere a whole nation.'

The angel who was sent to me, whose name was Uriel, replied: 'You are at a loss to explain this world; do you then expect to understand the ways of the Most High?' 'Yes, my lord,' I replied.

'I have been sent to propound to you three of the ways of this world,' he continued, 'to give you three illustrations. If you can explain to me any one of them, then I will answer your question about the way of the Most High, and teach you why the heart is wicked.'

I said, 'Speak, my lord.' 'Come then,' he said, 'weigh me a pound of fire, measure me a bushel^a of wind, or call back a day that has passed.'

'How can you ask me to do that?' I replied; 'no man on earth can do it.' He said: 'Suppose I had asked you, "How many dwellings are there in the heart of the sea? or how many streams to feed the deep? or how many watercourses above the vault of heaven? Where are the paths out of the grave, and the roads into^b paradise?"', you might then have replied, "I have never been down into the deep, I have not yet gone down into the grave, I have never gone up into heaven." But, as it is, I have only asked you about fire, about wind, and about yesterday, things you are bound to have met; and yet you have failed to tell me the answers.

'If then', he went on, 'you cannot understand things you have grown up with, how can your small capacity comprehend the ways of the Most High? A man corrupted by the corrupt world can never know the way of the incorruptible.'^c

When I heard that, I fell^d prostrate and exclaimed: 'Better never to have come into existence than be born into a world of wickedness and suffering which we cannot explain!' He replied, 'I went out into a wood, and the trees of the forest were making a plan. They said, "Come, let us make war on the sea, force it to retreat, and win ground for more woods." The waves of the sea made a similar plan: they said, "Come, let us attack the trees of the forest, conquer them, and annex their territory." The plan made by the trees came to nothing, for fire came and burnt them down. The plan made by the waves failed just as badly, for the sand stood its ground and blocked their way. If you had to judge between the two, which would you pronounce right, and which wrong?'

I answered, 'Both were wrong; their plans were impossible, for the land is assigned to the trees, and to the sea is allotted a place for its waves.'

'Yes,' he replied, 'you have judged rightly. Why then have you failed to do so with your own question? Just as the land belongs to the trees and the sea to the waves, so men on earth can understand earthly things and nothing else; only those who live ^a above the skies can understand the things above the skies.'

'But tell me, my lord,' I said, 'why then have I been given the faculty of understanding? My question is not about the distant heavens, but about the things which happen every day before our eyes. Why has Israel been made a byword among the Gentiles; why has the people you loved been put at the mercy of godless nations? Why has the law of our fathers been brought to nothing, and the written covenants made a dead letter? We pass like a flight of locusts, our life is but a vapour, and we are not worth the Lord's pity, though we bear his name; what then will he do for us? These are my questions.'

He answered: 'If you survive, you will see; if you live long enough, you will marvel. ^b For this present age is quickly passing away; it is full of sorrow and frailties, too full to enjoy what is promised in due time for the godly. The evil about which you ask me has been sown, but its reaping has not yet come. Until the crop of evil has been reaped as well as sown, until the ground where it was sown has vanished, there will be no room for the field which has been sown with the good. A grain of the evil seed was sown in the heart of Adam from the first; how much godlessness has it produced already! How much more will it produce before the harvest! Reckon this up: if one grain of evil seed has produced so great a crop of godlessness, how vast a harvest will there be when good seeds beyond number have been sown!'

I asked, 'But when? How long have we to wait? Why are our lives so short and so miserable?' He replied, 'Do not be in a greater hurry than the Most High himself. You are in a hurry for yourself alone; the Most High for many. Are not these the very questions which were asked by the righteous in the storehouse of souls: "How long must we stay here? When will the harvest begin, the time when we get our reward?" And the archangel Jeremiel gave them this answer: "As soon as the number of those like yourselves is complete. For the Lord has weighed the world in a balance, he has measured and numbered the ages; he will move nothing, alter nothing, until the appointed number is achieved."'

'But, my lord, my master,' I replied, 'we are all of us sinners through and through. Can it be that because of us, because of the sins of mankind, the harvest and the reward of the just are delayed?' 'Go,' he said, 'ask a pregnant woman whether she can keep the child in her womb any longer after the nine months are complete.' 'No, my lord,' I said, 'she cannot.' He went on: 'The storehouses of souls in the world below are like the womb. As a woman in travail is impatient to see the end of her labour, so they are impatient to give back all the souls committed to them since time began. Then all your questions will be answered.'

I said, 'If it is possible for you to tell and for me to understand, will you be gracious enough to disclose one thing more: which is the longer—the future still to come, or the past that has gone by? What is past I know, but not what is still to be.' 'Come and stand on my right,' he said; 'you shall see a vision, and I will explain what it means.'

^a Or he who lives.

^b So one Vs.; Lat. live, you will often marvel.

48 So I stood and watched, and there passed before my eyes a blazing fire;
 49 when the flames had disappeared from sight, there was still some smoke
 50 left. After that a dark rain-cloud passed before me; there was a heavy storm, and when it had gone over, there were still some raindrops left. 'Reflect on this', said the angel. 'The shower of rain filled a far greater space than the drops of water, and the fire more than the smoke. In the same way, the past far exceeds the future in length; what remains is but raindrops and smoke.'

51 'Pray tell me,' I said, 'do you think that I shall live to see those days?
 52 Or in whose lifetime will they come?' 'If you ask me what signs will herald them,' he said, 'I can tell you in part. But the length of your own life I am not commissioned to tell you; of that I know nothing.'

5 'But now to speak of the signs: there will come a time when the inhabi-
 2 tants of the earth will be seized with panic. ^a The way of truth will be hidden 3 from sight, and the land will be barren of faith. There will be a great
 4 increase in wickedness, worse than anything you now see or have ever
 5 heard of. The country you now see governing the world will become a 6 trackless desert, laid waste for all to see. After the third period (if the Most 7 High grants you a long enough life) you will see confusion everywhere.
 8 The sun will suddenly begin to shine in the middle of the night, and the 9 moon in the day-time. Trees will drip blood, stones will speak, nations
 10 will be in confusion, and the courses of the stars will be changed. A king 11 unwelcome to the inhabitants of earth will succeed to the throne; even the 12 birds will all fly away. The Dead Sea will cast up fish, and at night a voice will sound, unknown to the many but heard by all. ^b Chasms ^c will open in many places and spurt out flames incessantly. Wild beasts will range far 9 afield, women will give birth to monsters, fresh springs will run with salt water, and everywhere friends will become enemies. Then understanding 10 will be hidden, and reason withdraw to her secret chamber. Many will seek her, but not find her; the earth will overflow with vice and wickedness.
 11 One country will ask another, "Has justice passed your way, or any just 12 man?"; and it will answer, "No." In those days men will hope, but hope in vain; they will strive, but never succeed.

13 'These are the signs I am allowed to tell you. But turn again to prayer, continue to weep and fast for seven days; and then you shall hear further signs, even greater than these.'

14 I awoke with a start, shuddering; my spirit faltered, and I was near to 15 fainting. But the angel who had come and talked to me gave me support and strength, and set me on my feet.

16 The next night Phaltiel, the leader of the people, came to me. 'Where 17 have you been?' he asked, 'and why that sad look? Have you forgotten that 18 Israel in exile has been entrusted to your care? Rouse yourself, take nourishment. Do not abandon us like a shepherd abandoning his flock to 19 savage wolves.' I replied: 'Leave me; for seven days do not come near me, then you may come again.' When he heard this, he left me.

^c So one V.; Lat. Chaos.

FOR SEVEN DAYS I fasted, with tears and lamentations, as the angel Uriel had told me to do. By the end of the seven days my mind was again deeply disturbed, but I recovered the power of thought and spoke once more to the Most High.

'My Lord, my Master,' I said, 'out of all the forests of the earth, and all their trees, you have chosen one vine; from all the lands in the whole world you have chosen one plot; and out of all the flowers in the whole world you have chosen one lily. From all the depths of the sea you have filled one stream for yourself, and of all the cities ever built you have set Zion apart as your own. From all the birds that were created you have named one dove, and from all the animals that were fashioned you have taken one sheep. Out of all the countless nations, you have adopted one for your own, and to this chosen people you have given the law which all men have approved. Why then, Lord, have you put this one people at the mercy of so many? Why have you humiliated^a this one stock more than all others, and scattered your own people among the hordes of heathen? Those who reject your promises have trampled on the people who trust your covenants. If you so hate your people, they should be punished by your own hand.'

When I had finished speaking, the angel who had visited me that previous night was sent to me again. 'Listen to me,' he said, 'and I will give you instruction. Attend carefully, and I will tell you more.' 'Speak on, my lord', I replied.

He said to me, 'You are in great sorrow of heart for Israel's sake. Do you love Israel more than Israel's Maker does?' 'No, my lord,' I said, 'but sorrow has forced me to speak; my heart is tortured every hour as I try to understand the ways of the Most High and to fathom some part of his judgements.'

He said to me, 'You cannot.' 'Why not, my lord?' I asked. 'Why then was I born? Why could not my mother's womb have been my grave? Then I should never have seen Jacob's trials and the weariness of the race of Israel.'

He said to me, 'Count me those who are not yet born, collect the scattered drops of rain, and make the withered flowers bloom again; unlock me the storehouses and let loose the winds shut up there; or make visible the shape of a voice. Then I will answer your question about Israel's trials.'

'My lord, my master,' I said, 'how can there be anyone with such knowledge except the One whose home is not among men? I am only a fool; how then can I answer your questions?'

He said to me, 'Just as you cannot do any of the things I have put to you, so you will not be able to find out my judgements or the ultimate purpose of the love I have promised to my people.'

I said, 'But surely, lord, your promise^b is to those who are alive at the end. What is to be the fate of those who lived before us, or of ourselves, or of those who come after us?'

He said to me, 'I will compare the judgement to a circle: the latest will not be too late, nor the earliest too early.'

To this I replied, 'Could you not have made all men, past, present, and ^a So some Vss.; Lat. prepared.

^b So one Vs.; Lat. obscure.

future, at one and the same time? Then you could have held your assize 44 with less delay.' But he answered, 'The creation may not go faster than the Creator, nor could the world support at the same time all those created to live on it.'

45 'But, my lord,' I said, 'you have told me that you will at one and the same time restore to life every creature you have made; how can that be?
If it is going to be possible for all of them to be alive at the same time and for the world to support them all, then it could support all of them together 46 now.' 'Put your question in terms of a woman's womb', he replied. 'Say to a woman, "If you give birth to ten children, why do you do so at intervals?
47 Why not give birth to ten at one and the same time?"' 'No, my lord, she 48 cannot do that,' I said; 'the births must take place at intervals.' 'True,' he answered; 'and I have made the earth's womb to bring forth at intervals 49 those conceived in it. An infant cannot give birth, nor can a woman who is too old; and I have made the same rule for the world I have created.'

50 I continued my questions. 'Since you have opened the way,' I said, 'may
I now ask: is our mother that you speak of still young, or is she already 51 52 growing old?' He replied, 'Ask any mother why the children she has lately 53 borne are not like those born earlier, but smaller. And she will tell you,
"Those who were born in the vigour of my youth are very different from 54 those born in my old age, when my womb is beginning to fail." Think of it 55 then like this: if you are smaller than those born before you, and those who follow you are smaller still, the reason is that creation is growing old and losing the strength of youth.'

56 I said to him, 'If I have won your favour, my lord, show me through 6 whom you will visit your creation.' He said to me, 'Think of the beginning of this earth: the gates of the world had not yet been set up; no winds 2 gathered and blew, no thunder pealed, no lightning flashed; the founda-3 tions of paradise were not yet laid, nor were its fair flowers there to see; the powers that move the stars were not established, nor the countless hosts of 4 angels assembled, nor the vast tracts of air set up on high; the divisions of the firmaments had not received their names. Zion had not yet been chosen 5 as God's own footstool; the present age had not been planned; and the schemes of its sinners had not yet been outlawed, nor had God's seal yet been set on 6 those who have stored up a treasure of fidelity. Then did I think my thought; and the whole world was created through me and through me alone. In the same way, through me and through me alone the end shall come.'

7 'Tell me', I went on, 'about the interval that divides the ages. When will 8 the first age end and the next age begin?' He said, 'The interval will be no bigger than that between Abraham and Abraham; for Jacob and Esau were his descendants, and Jacob's hand was grasping Esau's heel at the 9 moment of their birth. Esau represents the end of the first age, and Jacob 10 the beginning of the next age. The beginning of a man is his hand, and the end of a man is his heel.^a Between the heel and the hand, Ezra, do not look for any interval.'

11 12 'My lord, my master,' I said, 'if I have won your favour, make known to me the last of your signs, of which you showed me a part that former night.'

^a The beginning of a man . . . heel: reading based on other Vss.; Lat. defective.

'Rise to your feet,' he replied, 'and you will hear a loud resounding voice. When it speaks, do not be frightened if the place where you stand trembles and shakes; it speaks of the end, and the earth's foundations will understand that it is speaking of them. They will tremble and shake; for they know that at the end they must be transformed.' On hearing this I rose to my feet and listened; and a voice began to speak. Its sound was like the sound of rushing waters. The voice said:

'The time draws near when I shall come to judge those who live on the earth, the time when I shall inquire into the wickedness of wrong-doers, the time when Zion's humiliation will be over, the time when a seal will be set on the age about to pass away. Then I will perform these signs: the books shall be opened in the sight of heaven, and all shall see them at the same moment. Children only one year old shall be able to talk, and pregnant women shall give birth to premature babes of three and four months, who shall live and leap about. Fields that were sown shall suddenly prove unsown, and barns that were full shall suddenly be found empty. There shall be a loud trumpet-blast and it shall strike terror into all who hear it. At that time friends shall make war on friends as though they were enemies, and the earth and all its inhabitants shall be terrified. Running streams shall stand still; for three hours they shall cease to flow.

'Whoever is left after all that I have foretold, he shall be preserved, and shall see the deliverance that I bring and the end of this world of mine. They shall all see the men who were taken up into heaven without ever knowing death. Then shall men on earth feel a change of heart and come to a better mind. Wickedness shall be blotted out and deceit destroyed, but fidelity shall flourish, corruption be overcome, and truth, so long unfruitful, be brought to light.'

While the voice was speaking to me, the ground under me began to quake.^a Then the angel said to me, 'These, then, are the revelations I have brought you this night.^b If once again you pray and fast for seven days, then I will return to tell you even greater things.^c For be sure your voice has been heard by the Most High. The Mighty God has seen your integrity and the chastity you have observed all your life. That is why he has sent me to you with all these revelations, and with this message: "Be confident, and have no fear. Do not rush too quickly into unprofitable thoughts now in the present age; then you will not act hastily when the last age comes."'

THEREUPON I WEPT and fasted again for seven days in the same way as before, thus completing the three weeks enjoined on me. On the eighth night I was again disturbed at heart, and spoke to the Most High. With spirit aflame and in great agony of mind I said:

'O Lord, at the beginning of creation you spoke the word. On the first day you said, "Let heaven and earth be made!"; and your word carried out its work. At that time the hovering spirit was there, and darkness

^a the ground . . . quake: reading based on other Vss.; Lat. obscure. ^b So one Vs.; Lat. this coming night. ^c So other Vss.; Lat. adds in the day-time.

40 circled round; there was silence, no sound as yet of human voice. ^a Then you commanded a ray of light to be brought out of your store-chambers, 41 to make your works visible from that time onwards. On the second day you created the angel ^b of the firmament, and commanded him to make a dividing barrier between the waters, one part withdrawing upwards and the other 42 remaining below. On the third day you ordered the waters to collect in a seventh part of the earth; the other six parts you made into dry land, and 43 from it kept some to be sown and tilled for your service. Your word went 44 forth, and at once the work was done. A vast profusion of fruits appeared instantly, of every kind and taste that can be desired, with flowers of the most subtle colours and mysterious scents. These were made on the third 45 day. On the fourth day by your command you created the splendour of the 46 sun, the light of the moon, and the stars in their appointed places; and you ordered them to be at the service of man, whose creation was about to take 47 place. On the fifth day you commanded the seventh part, where the water 48 was collected, to bring forth living things, birds and fishes. And so, at your command, dumb lifeless water brought forth living creatures, and gave the 49 nations cause to tell of your wonders. Then you set apart two creatures:
 50 one you called Behemoth and the other Leviathan. You put them in separate places, for the seventh part where the water was collected was not 51 big enough to hold them both. A part of the land which was made dry on the third day you gave to Behemoth as his territory, a country of a thousand 52 hills. To Leviathan you gave the seventh part, the water. You have kept 53 them to be food for whom you will and when you will. On the sixth day you ordered the earth to produce for you cattle, wild beasts, and creeping 54 things. To crown your work you created Adam, and gave him sovereignty over everything you had made. It is from Adam that we, your chosen people, are all descended.

55 'I have recited the whole story of the creation, O Lord, because you have 56 said that you made this first world for our sake, and that all the rest of the nations descended from Adam are nothing, that they are no better than 57 spittle, and, for all their numbers, no more than a drop from a bucket. And yet, O Lord, those nations which count for nothing are today ruling over 58 us and devouring us; and we, your people, have been put into their power —your people, whom you have called your first-born, your only son, your 59 champion, and your best beloved. Was the world really made for us? Why, then, may we not take possession of our world? How much longer shall it be so?'

7 When I had finished speaking, the same angel was sent to me as on the 2 previous nights. He said to me, 'Rise to your feet, Ezra, and listen to the 3 message I have come to give you.' 'Speak, my lord', I said.

4 He said to me: 'Imagine a sea set in a vast open space, spreading far 4 5 and wide, but the entrance to it narrow like the gorge of a river. If anyone is determined to reach this sea, whether to set eyes on it or to gain command of it, he cannot arrive at its open waters except through the narrow gorge.
 6 Or again, imagine a city built in a plain, a city full of everything you can

^a So some Vss.; Lat. adds from you.

desire, but the entrance to it narrow and steep, with fire to the right and deep water to the left. There is only the one path, between the fire and the water; and that is only wide enough for one man at a time. If some man has been given this city as a legacy, how can he take possession of his inheritance except by passing through these dangerous approaches?' 'That is the only way, my lord', I agreed.

He said to me: 'Such is the lot of Israel. It was for Israel that I made the world, and when Adam transgressed my decrees the creation came under judgement. The entrances to this world were made narrow, painful, and arduous, few and evil, full of perils and grinding hardship. But the entrances to the greater world are broad and safe, and lead to immortality. All men must therefore enter this narrow and futile existence; otherwise they can never attain the blessings in store. Why then, Ezra, are you so deeply disturbed at the thought that you are mortal and must die? Why have you not turned your mind to the future instead of the present?'

'My lord, my master,' I replied, 'in your law you have laid it down that the just shall come to enjoy these blessings but the ungodly shall be lost. The just, therefore, can endure this narrow life and look for the spacious life hereafter; but those who have lived a wicked life will have gone through the narrows without ever reaching the open spaces.'

He said to me: 'You are not a better judge than God, nor wiser than the Most High. Better that many now living should be lost, than that the law God has set before them should be despised! God has given clear instructions for all men when they come into this world, telling them how to attain life and how to escape punishment. But the ungodly have refused to obey him; they have set up their own empty ideas, and planned deceit and wickedness; they have even denied the existence of the Most High and have not acknowledged his ways. They have rejected his law and refused his promises, have neither put faith in his decrees nor done what he commands. Therefore, Ezra, emptiness for the empty, fullness for the full!

'Listen! The time shall come when the signs I have foretold will be seen; the city which is now invisible^a shall appear and the country now concealed be made visible. Everyone who has been delivered from the evils I have foretold shall see for himself my marvellous acts. My son the Messiah^b shall appear with his companions and bring four hundred years of happiness to all who survive. At the end of that time, my son the Messiah shall die, and so shall all mankind who draw breath. Then the world shall return to its original silence for seven days as at the beginning of creation, and no one shall be left alive. After seven days the age which is not yet awake shall be roused and the age which is corruptible shall die. The earth shall give up those who sleep in it, and the dust those who rest there in silence; and the storehouses shall give back the souls entrusted to them. Then the Most High shall be seen on the judgement-seat, and there shall be an end of all pity and patience. Judgement alone shall remain; truth shall stand firm and faithfulness be strong; requital^c shall at once

[36] begin and open payment be made; good deeds shall awake and wicked deeds shall not be allowed to sleep.^a Then the place of torment shall appear, and over against it the place of rest; the furnace of hell shall be displayed, and on the opposite side the paradise of delight.

[37] 'Then the Most High shall say to the nations that have been raised from the dead: "Look and understand who it is you have denied and refused to [38] serve, and whose commandment you have despised. Look on this side, then on that: here are rest and delight, there fire and torments." That is what he will say to them on the day of judgement.

[39] [40] 'That day will be a day without sun, moon, or stars; without cloud, thunder, or lightning; wind, water, or air; darkness, evening, or morning; [41] without summer, spring, or winter; without heat, frost, or cold; without hail, rain, or dew; without noonday, night, or dawn; without brightness, [42] glow, or light. There shall be only the radiant glory of the Most High, by [43] which all men will see everything that lies before them. It shall last as it [44] were for a week of years. Such is the order that I have appointed for the Judgement. I have given this revelation to you alone.'

[45] I replied: 'My lord, I repeat what I said before: "How blest are the [46] living who obey the decrees you have laid down!" But as for those for whom I have been praying, is there any man alive who has never sinned, [47] any man who has never transgressed your covenant? I see now that there are few to whom the world to come will bring happiness, and many to [48] whom it will bring torment. For the wicked heart has grown up in us, which has estranged us from God's ways,^b brought us into corruption and the way of death, opened out to us the paths of ruin, and carried us far away from life. It has done this, not merely to a few, but to almost all who have been created.'

[49] The angel replied: 'Listen to me and I will give you further instruction [50] and correction. It is for this reason that the Most High has created not one [51] world but two. There are, you say, not many who are just, but only a few, [52] whereas the wicked are very numerous; well then, hear the answer. Suppose you had a very few precious stones; would you add to their number [53] by putting common lead and clay among them^c? 'No,' I said, 'no one [54] would do that.' 'Look at it also in this way,' he continued; 'speak to the earth and humbly ask her; she will give you the answer. Say to her: "You [55] produce gold, silver, and copper, iron, lead, and clay. There is more silver than gold, more copper than silver, more iron than copper, more lead than [56] iron, more clay than lead." Then judge for yourself which things are valuable and desirable—those that are common, or those that are rare.' [57] 'My lord, my master,' I said, 'the common things are cheaper, and the rarer are more valuable.' He replied, 'Consider then what follows from [58] that: the owner of something hard to get has more cause to be pleased than [59] the owner of what is common. In the same way, at my promised judgement,^d I shall have joy in the few who are saved, because it is they who have [60]

made my glory prevail, and through them that my name has been made known. But I shall not grieve for the many who are lost; for they are no more than a vapour, they are like flame or smoke; they catch fire, blaze up, and then die out.' [61]

Then I said: 'Mother Earth, what have you brought forth! Is the mind of man, like the rest of creation, a product of the dust? Far better then if the very dust had never been created, and so had never produced man's mind! But, as it is, we grow up with the power of thought and are tortured by it; we are doomed to die and we know it. What sorrow for mankind; what happiness for the wild beasts! What sorrow for every mother's son; what gladness for the cattle and flocks! How much better their lot than ours! They have no judgement to expect, no knowledge of torment or salvation after death. What good to us is the promise of a future life if it is going to be one of torment? For every man alive is burdened and defiled with wickedness, a sinner through and through. Would it not have been better for us if there had been no judgement awaiting us after death?' [62] [63] [64] [65] [66] [67] [68] [69]

The angel replied: 'When the Most High was creating the world and Adam and his descendants, he first of all planned the judgement and what goes with it. Your own words, when you said that man grows up with the power of thought, will give you the answer. It was with conscious knowledge that the people of this world sinned, and that is why torment awaits them; they received the commandments but did not keep them, they accepted the law but violated it. What defence will they be able to make at the judgement, what answer at the last day? How patient the Most High has been with the men of this world, and for how long!—not for their own sake, but for the sake of the destined age to be.' [70] [71] [72] [73] [74]

Then I said: 'If I have won your favour, my lord, make this plain to me: at death, when every one of us gives back his soul, shall we be kept at rest until the time when you begin to create your new world, or does our torment begin at once?' 'I will tell you that also', he replied. 'But do not include yourself among those who have despised my law; do not count yourself with those who are to be tormented. For you have a treasure of good works stored up with the Most High, though you will not be shown it until the last days. But now to speak of death: when the Most High has given final sentence for a man to die, the spirit leaves the body to return to the One who gave it, and first of all to adore the glory of the Most High. But as for those who have rejected the ways of the Most High and despised his law, and who hate all that fear God, their spirits enter no settled abode, but roam thenceforward in torment, grief, and sorrow. And this for seven reasons. First, they have despised the law of the Most High. Secondly, they have lost their last chance of making a good repentance and so gaining life. Thirdly, they can see the reward in store for those who have trusted the covenants of the Most High. Fourthly, they begin to think of the torment that awaits them at the end. Fifthly, they see that angels are guarding the abode of the other souls in deep silence. Sixthly, they see that they are soon^a to enter into torment. The seventh cause for grief, the strongest [75] [76] [77] [78] [79] [80] [81] [82] [83] [84] [85] [86] [87]

^a So some Vss.; Lat. obscure.

cause of all, is this: at the sight of the Most High in his glory, they break down in shame, waste away in remorse, and shrivel with fear remembering how they sinned against him in their lifetime, and how they are soon to be brought before him for judgement on the last day.

- [88] 'As for those who have kept to the way laid down by the Most High, this [89] is what is appointed for them when their time comes to leave their mortal [90] [91] bodies. During their stay on earth they served the Most High in spite of [92] constant hardship and danger, and kept to the last letter the law given [93] them by the lawgiver. Their reward is this: first they shall exult to see the [94] glory of God who will receive them as his own, and then they shall enter [95] into rest in seven appointed stages of joy. Their first joy is their victory in [96] the long fight against their inborn impulses to evil, which have failed to [97] lead them astray from life into death. Their second joy is to see the souls [98] of the wicked wandering ceaselessly, and the punishment in store for [99] them. Their third joy is the good report given of them by their Maker, that throughout their life they kept the law with which they were entrusted.
 [95] Their fourth joy is to understand the rest which they are now to share in the storehouses, guarded by angels in deep silence, and the glory waiting for [96] them in the next age. Their fifth joy is the contrast between the corruptible world they have escaped and the future life that is to be their possession, and the cramped laborious ^a life from which they have been set free and the spacious life which will soon be theirs to enjoy for ever and ever.
 [97] Their sixth joy will be the revelation that they are to shine like stars, never [98] to fade or die, with faces radiant as the sun. Their seventh joy, the greatest joy of all, will be the confident and exultant assurance which will be theirs, free from all fear and shame, as they press forward to see face to face the One whom they served in their lifetime, and from whom they are now to receive their reward in glory.

[99] 'The joys I have been declaring are the appointed destiny for the souls of the just; the torments I described before are the sufferings appointed for the rebellious.'

[100] Then I asked: 'When souls are separated from their bodies, will they [101] be given the opportunity to see what you have described to me?' 'They will be allowed seven days,' he replied; 'for seven days they will be permitted to see the things I have told you, and after that they will join the other souls in their abodes.'

[102] Then I asked: 'If I have won your favour, my lord, tell me more. On [103] the day of judgement will the just be able to win pardon for the wicked, or pray for them to the Most High? Can fathers do so for their sons, or sons for their parents? Can brothers pray for brothers, relatives and friends ^b for their nearest and dearest?'

[104] 'You have won my favour,' he replied, 'and I will tell you. The day of judgement is decisive, ^c and sets its seal on the truth for all to see. In the present age a father cannot send his son in his place, nor a son his father, a master his slave, nor a man his best friend, to be ill ^d for him, or sleep, or [105] eat, or be cured for him. In the same way no one shall ever ask pardon for another; when that day comes, every individual will be held responsible for his own wickedness or goodness.'

To this I replied: 'But how is it, then, that we read of intercessions in scripture? First, there is Abraham, who prayed for the people of Sodom; then Moses, who prayed for our ancestors when they sinned in the desert. Next, there is Joshua, who prayed for the Israelites in the time of Achan, then Samuel in the time of Saul,^a David during the plague,^b and Solomon at the dedication of the temple. Elijah prayed for rain for the people, and for a dead man that he might be brought back to life. Hezekiah prayed for the nation in the time of Sennacherib; and there are many more besides. If, then, in the time when corruption grew and wickedness increased, the just asked pardon for the wicked, why cannot it be the same on the day of judgement?'

The angel gave me this answer: 'The present world is not the end, and the glory of God does not stay in it continually.^c That is why the strong have prayed for the weak. But the day of judgement will be the end of the present world and the beginning of the eternal world to come, a world in which corruption will be over, all excess abolished, and unbelief uprooted, in which justice will be full-grown, and truth will have risen like the sun. On the day of judgement, therefore, there can be no mercy for the man who has lost his case, no reversal for the man who has won it.'

I replied, 'But this is my point, my first point and my last: how much better it would have been if the earth had never produced Adam at all, or, since it has done so, if he had been restrained from sinning! For what good does it do us all to live in misery now and have nothing but punishment to expect after death? O Adam, what have you done? Your sin was not your fall alone; it was ours also, the fall of all your descendants. What good is the promise of immortality to us, when we have committed mortal sins; or the hope of eternity, in the wretched and futile state to which we have come; or the prospect of dwelling in health and safety, when we have lived such evil lives? The glory of the Most High will guard those who have led a life of purity; but what help is that to us whose conduct has been so wicked? What good is the revelation of paradise and its imperishable fruit, the source of perfect satisfaction and healing? For we shall never enter it, since we have made depravity our home. Those who have practised self-discipline shall shine with faces brighter than the stars; but what good is that to us whose faces are darker than the night? For during a lifetime of wickedness we have never given a thought to the sufferings awaiting us after death.'

The angel replied, 'This is the thought for every man to keep in mind during his earthly contest: if he loses, he must accept the sufferings you have mentioned, but if he wins, the rewards I have been describing will be his. For that was the way which Moses in his time urged the people to take, when he said, "Choose life and live!" But they did not believe him, nor the prophets after him, nor me when I spoke to them. damnation there will be no sorrow; there will only be joy for the salvation of those who have believed.’^a

[132] 62 ‘My lord,’ I replied, ‘I know that the Most High is called “compassionate”, because he has compassion on those yet unborn; and called [133] 63 “merciful”, because he shows mercy to those who repent and live by his [134] 64 law; and “patient”, because he shows patience to those who have sinned, [135] 65 his own creatures as they are; and “benefactor”, because he prefers giving [136] 66 to taking; and “rich in forgiveness”, because again and again he forgives
[137] 67 sinners, past, present, and to come. For without his continued forgiveness [138] 68 there could be no hope of life for the world and its inhabitants. And he is called “generous”, because without his generosity in releasing sinners from their sins, not one ten-thousandth part of mankind could hope to be [139] 69 given life; and he is also called “judge”, for unless he grants pardon to those who have been created by his word, and blots out their countless [140] 70 offences, I suppose that of the entire human race only very few would be spared.’

8 The angel said to me in reply: ‘The Most High has made this world for 2 many, but the next world for only a few. Let me give you an illustration, Ezra. Ask the earth, and it will tell you that it can produce plenty of clay for making earthenware, but very little gold-dust. The same holds good 3 for the present world: many have been created, but only a few will be saved.’

4 I SAID: ‘My soul, drink deep of understanding and eat your fill of wisdom!
5 Without your consent^b you came here, and unwillingly you go away; only 6 a brief span of life is given you. O Lord above, if I may be allowed to approach you in prayer, plant a seed in our hearts and minds, and make it 7 grow until it bears fruit, so that fallen man may obtain life. For you alone are God, and we are all shaped by you in one mould, as your word declares.
8 The body moulded in the womb receives from you both life and limbs; that which you create is kept safe amid fire and water; for nine months the 9 body moulded by you bears what you have created in it. Both the womb which holds safely and that which is safely held will be safe only because you keep them so. And after the womb has delivered up what has been 10 created in it, then from the human body itself, that is from the breasts, 11 milk, the fruit of the breasts, is supplied by your command. For a certain time what has been made is nourished in that way; and afterwards it is still 12 cared for by your mercy. You bring it up to know your justice, train it in 13 your law, and correct it by your wisdom. It is your creature and you made 14 it; you can put it to death or give it life, as you please. But if you should lightly destroy one who was fashioned by your command with so much labour, what was the purpose of creating him?’

15 ‘And now let me say this: about mankind at large, you know best; but 16 it is for your own people that I grieve, for your inheritance that I mourn; 17 my sorrow is for Israel and my distress for the race of Jacob. For them and for myself, therefore, I will address my prayer to you, since I perceive how consent: so one Vss.; Lat. To obey.

^a So some Vss.; Lat. for those who are convinced of salvation.

low we have fallen, we dwellers on earth; and I know well how quickly 18 your judgement will follow. Hear my words then, and consider the prayer 19 which I make to you.'

Here begins the prayer which Ezra made, before he was taken up to heaven.

'O Lord, who dost inhabit eternity, to whom the sky and the highest 20 heavens belong; whose throne is beyond imagining, and whose glory is 21 past conceiving; who art attended by the host of angels trembling as they 22 turn themselves into wind and fire at thy bidding; whose word is true and 23 constant; whose commands are mighty and terrible; whose glance dries 24 up the deeps, whose anger melts the mountains, and whose truth stands 25 for ever:^a hear thy servant's prayer, O Lord, listen to my petition, for thou hast fashioned me, and consider my words. While I live I will speak;
while understanding lasts, I will answer.

'Do not look upon thy people's offences, look on those who have served 26 thee faithfully; pay no heed to the godless and their pursuits, but to those 27 who have observed thy covenant and suffered for it. Do not think of those 28 who all their life have been untrue to thee, but remember those who have 29 acknowledged and feared thee from the heart. Do not destroy those who 30 have lived like animals, but take account of those who have borne shining 31 witness to thy law. Do not be angry with those judged to be worse than 32 beasts; but show love to those who have put unflinching trust in thy glory.
For we and our fathers have lived in mortal sin,^b yet it is on our account that thou art called merciful; for if it is thy desire to have mercy on us sinners, who have no just deeds to our credit, then indeed thou shalt be called merciful. For the reward which will be given to the just, who have many good works stored up with thee, will be no more than their own deeds have earned.

'What is man, that thou shouldst be angry with him? or the race of 34 mortals, that thou shouldst treat them so harshly? The truth is, no man 35 was ever born who did not sin; no man alive is innocent of offence. It is 36 through thy mercy towards those with no store of good deeds to their name that thy justice and kindness, O Lord, will be made known.'

The angel said to me in reply: 'Much of what you have said is just, and 37 it will be as you say. Be sure that I shall not give any thought to sinners, to 38 their creation, death, judgement, or damnation; but I shall take delight 39 in the just, in their creation, their departure from this world, their salvation, and their final reward. So I have said, and so it is. The farmer sows 40 41 many seeds in the ground and plants many plants, but not all the seeds sown come up safely in season, nor do all the plants strike root. So too in the world of men: not all who are sown will be preserved.'

To that I replied: 'If I have won your favour, let me speak. The farmer's 42 43 seed may never come up because it is given no rain at the right time, or it may rot because of too much rain. But man, who was formed by your hands and made in your image, and for whose sake you made everything—will you 44 compare him with seed sown by a farmer? Surely not, O Lord above! Spare 45 your own people and pity them, for you will be pitying your own creation.'

^a So some Vss.; Lat. bears witness.

^b in mortal sin: so some Vss.; Lat. obscure.

46 He answered: 'The present is for those now alive, the future for those 47 yet to come. You cannot love my creation with a love greater than mine—far from it! But never again rank yourself among the unjust, as you have 48 49 so often done. Yet the Most High approves of the modesty you have rightly shown; you have not sought great glory by including yourself among the 50 godly. In the last days, then, the inhabitants of the world will be punished 51 for their arrogant lives by bitter sufferings. But you, Ezra, should direct 52 your thoughts to yourself and the glory awaiting those like you. For all of you, paradise lies open, the tree of life is planted, the age to come is made ready, and rich abundance is in store; the city is already built, rest from 53 toil is assured, goodness and wisdom are brought to perfection. The root of evil has been sealed off from you; for you there is no more illness, death^a 54 is abolished, hell has fled, and decay is quite forgotten. All sorrows are at 55 an end, and the treasure of immortality has been finally revealed. Ask no 56 more questions, therefore, about the many who are lost. For they were given freedom and used it to despise the Most High, to treat his law with 57 contempt and abandon his ways. Yes, and they trampled on his just ser-58 vants; they said to themselves, "There is no God", though well aware that 59 they must die. Yours, then, will be the joys I have predicted; theirs the thirst and torments which are prepared. It is not that the Most High has 60 wanted any man to be lost, but that those he created have themselves brought dishonour on their Creator's name, and shown ingratitude to the 61 One who had put life within their reach. My day of judgement is now 62 close at hand, but I have not made this known to all; only to you and a few like you.'

63 'My lord,' I replied, 'you have now revealed to me the many signs which you are going to perform in the last days; but you have not told me when that will be.'

9 The angel answered: 'Keep a careful count yourself; when you see that 2 some of the signs predicted have already happened, then you will understand that the time has come when the Most High will judge the world he 3 has created. When the world becomes the scene of earthquakes, insurrections, plots among the nations, unstable government, and panic among 4 rulers, then you will recognize these as the events which the Most High 5 has foretold since first the world began. Just as everything that is done on 6 earth has its beginning and end clearly marked,^b so it is with the times which the Most High has determined: their beginning is marked by portents and miracles, their end by manifestations of power.

7 'Whoever comes safely through and escapes destruction, thanks to his 8 good deeds or the faith he has shown, will survive all the dangers I have foretold and witness the salvation that I shall bring to my land, the country 9 I have marked out from all eternity as my own. Then those who have misused my law will be taken by surprise; their contempt for it will bring 10 them continual torment. All who in their lifetime failed to acknowledge me 11 in spite of all the good things I had given them, all who disdained my law while freedom still was theirs, who scornfully dismissed the thought of 12 penitence while the way was still open—all these will have to learn the truth through torments after death. Do not be curious any more, Ezra, to know how the godless will be tormented, but only how and when the just will be saved; the world is theirs and it exists for their sake.' 13

I answered, 'I repeat what I have said again and again: the lost out-number the saved as a wave exceeds a drop of water.' 14 15 16

The angel replied: 'The seed to be sown depends on the soil, the colour on the flower, the product on the workman, and the harvest on the farmer. There was once a time before the world had been created for men to dwell in; at that time I was planning it for the sake of those who now exist. No one then disputed my plan, for no one existed. I supplied this world with unending food and a mysterious law; but those whom I created turned to a life of corruption. I looked at my world, and there it lay spoilt, at my earth in danger from men's wicked thoughts; and at the sight I could scarcely bring myself to spare them. One grape I saved out of a cluster, one tree out of a forest.^a So then let it be: destruction for the many who were born in vain, and salvation for my grape and my tree, which have cost me such labour to bring to perfection. 17 18 19 20 21 22

'You, Ezra, must wait one more week. Do not fast this time, but go to a flowery field where no house stands, and eat only what grows there—no meat or wine—and pray unceasingly to the Most High. Then I will come and talk to you again.' 23 24 25

Visions of the last days

SO I WENT OUT, as the angel told me, to a field called Ardat. There I sat among the flowers; my food was what grew in the field, and I ate to my heart's content. The week ended, and I was lying on the grass, troubled again in mind with all the same perplexities. I broke my silence and addressed the Most High. 'O Lord,' I said, 'you showed yourself to our fathers in the desert at the time of the exodus from Egypt, when they were travelling through the barren and untrodden waste. You said, "Hear me, Israel; listen to my words, race of Jacob. This is my law, which I sow among you to bear fruit and bring you glory for ever." But our fathers who received your law did not keep it; they did not observe your commandments. Not that the fruit of the law perished; that was impossible, for it was yours. Those who received it perished, because they failed to keep safe the good seed that had been sown in them. Now the usual way of things is that when seed is put into the earth, or a ship on the sea, or food or drink into a jar, then if the seed, or the ship, or the contents of the jar should be destroyed, what held or contained them does not perish with them. But with us sinners it is different. Destruction will come upon us, the recipients of the law, and upon our hearts, the vessel that held the law. The law itself is not destroyed, but survives in all its glory.' 26 27 28 29 30 31 32 33 34 35 36 37

While these thoughts were in my mind, I looked round, and on my right I saw a woman in great distress, mourning and loudly lamenting; her dress was torn, and she had ashes on her head. Abandoning my meditations, I 38 39

^a So some Vss.; Lat. tribe.

40 turned to her, and said: 'Why are you weeping? What is troubling you?'
41 'Sir,' she replied, 'please leave me to my tears and my grief; great is my 42 bitterness of heart, great my distress.' 'Tell me,' I asked, 'what has hap-43 pened to you?' 'Sir,' she replied, 'I was barren and childless through thirty 44 years of marriage. Every hour of every day during those thirty years, day 45 and night alike, I prayed to the Most High. Then after thirty years, my God answered my prayer and had mercy on my distress; he took note of my sorrow and granted me a son. What happiness he brought to my husband and myself and to all our neighbours! What praise we gave to the 46 47 Mighty God! I took great pains over his upbringing. When he came of age,
I chose a wife for him, and fixed the date of the wedding.

10 'But when my son entered his wedding-chamber, he fell down dead.
2 So we all put out our lamps, and all my neighbours came to comfort me;
3 I controlled my grief till the evening of the following day. When they had all ceased urging me to take comfort and control my grief, I rose and 4 stole away in the night, and came here, as you can see, to this field. I have made up my mind never to go back to the town, but to stay here eating nothing and drinking nothing, and to continue my mourning and fasting unbroken till I die.'

5 At that I interrupted the train of my thoughts, and I spoke sternly to 6 the woman: 'You are the most foolish woman in the world,' I said; 'are 7 you blind to the grief and sufferings of our nation? It is for the sorrow and humiliation of Zion, the mother of us all, that you should mourn so deeply;
8 you should share in our common mourning and sorrow. But you are deep 9 in sorrow for your one son. Ask the earth and she will tell you; she must mourn for the thousands and thousands who come to birth upon her.
10 From her we all originally sprang, and there are more to come. Almost all 11 her children go to perdition, and their vast numbers are wiped out. Who then has the better right to be in mourning—the earth, who has lost such 12 vast numbers, or you, whose sorrow is for one alone? You may say to me,
"But my grief is very different from the earth's grief; I have lost the fruit 13 of my own womb, which I brought to birth with pain and travail, but it is only in the course of nature that the vast numbers now alive on earth should 14 depart in the same way as they have come." My answer to that is: at the cost of pain you have been a mother, but in the same way the earth has always been the mother of mankind, bearing fruit to earth's creator.

15 'Keep your sorrow to yourself, therefore, and bear your misfortunes 16 bravely. If you will accept God's decree as just, then in due time you will receive your son back again, and win an honoured name among women.
17 So go back to the town and to your husband.'

18 'No, I will not,' she replied; 'I will not go back to the town; I will stay here to die.'

19 20 But I continued to argue with her. 'Do not do what you say,' I urged;
'be persuaded because of Zion's misfortunes, and take comfort to yourself 21 from the sorrow of Jerusalem. You see how our sanctuary has been laid waste, our altar demolished, and our temple destroyed. Our harps are un-22 strung, our hymns silenced, our shouts of joy cut short; the light of the sacred lamp is out, and the ark of our covenant has been taken as spoil;

the holy vessels are defiled, and the name which God has conferred on us is disgraced; our leading men^a have been treated shamefully, our priests burnt alive, and the Levites taken off into captivity; our virgins have been raped and our wives ravished, our godfearing men carried off, and our children abandoned; our youths have been enslaved, and our strong warriors reduced to weakness. Worst of all, Zion, once sealed with God's own seal, has forfeited its glory and is in the hands of our enemies. Then throw off your own heavy grief, and lay all your sorrows aside; may the Mighty God restore you to his favour, may the Most High give you rest and peace after your troubles!

Suddenly, while I was still speaking to the woman, I saw her face begin to shine; her countenance flashed like lightning, and I shrank from her in terror. While I wondered what this meant, she suddenly uttered a loud and terrible cry, which shook the earth. I looked up and saw no longer a woman but a complete city, built^b on massive foundations. I cried aloud in terror, 'Where is the angel Uriel, who visited me before? It is his doing that I have fallen into this bewilderment, that all my hopes are shattered,^c and all my prayers in vain.'

I was still speaking when the angel appeared who had visited me before. When he saw me lying in a dead faint, unconscious on the ground, he grasped me by my right hand, put strength into me, and raised me to my feet. 'What is the matter?' he asked. 'Why are you overcome? What was it that disturbed your mind and made you faint?' 'It was because you deserted me', I replied. 'I did what you told me: I came out to the field; and what I have seen here and can still see is beyond my power to relate.'

'Stand up like a man,' he said, 'and I will explain it to you.'

'Speak, my lord,' I replied; 'only do not abandon me and leave me to die unsatisfied. For I have seen and I hear things beyond my understanding—unless this is all an illusion and a dream. I beg you to tell me, my lord, the meaning of my vision.'

'Listen to me,' replied the angel, 'while I explain to you the meaning of the things that terrify you; for the Most High has revealed many secrets to you. He has seen your blameless life, your unceasing grief for your people, and your deep mourning over Zion. Here then is the meaning of the vision. A little while ago you saw a woman in mourning, and tried to give her comfort; now you no longer see that woman, but a whole city. She told you she had lost her son, and this is the explanation. The woman you saw is Zion, which you now see as a city with all its buildings. She told you she was childless for thirty years; that was because there were three thousand years in which sacrifices were not yet offered in Zion. But then, after the three thousand years, Solomon built the city and offered the sacrifices; that was the time when the barren woman bore her son. She took great pains, she said, over his upbringing; that was the period when Jerusalem was inhabited. Then she told you of the great loss she suffered, how her son died on the day he entered his wedding-chamber; that was the destruction which overtook Jerusalem. Such then was the vision that you

50 saw—the woman mourning for her son—and you tried to comfort her in her sufferings; this was the revelation you had to receive. Seeing your 51 sincere grief and heartfelt sympathy for the woman, the Most High is now showing you her radiant glory and her beauty. That was why I told you to 52 stay in a field where no house stood, for I knew that the Most High intended 53 to send you this revelation. I told you to come to this field, where no 54 foundation had been laid for any building; for in the place where the city of the Most High was to be revealed, no building made by man could stand.

55 'Have no fear then, Ezra, and set your trembling heart at rest; go into the city, and see the magnificence of the buildings, so far as your eyes have 56 power to see it all. Then, after that, you shall hear as much as your ears 57 have power to hear. You are more blessed than most other men, and few 58 have such a name with the Most High as you have. Stay here till tomorrow 59 night, when the Most High will show you in dreams and visions what he intends to do to the inhabitants of earth in the last days.' I did as I was told and slept there that night and the next.

11 ON THE SECOND NIGHT I had a vision in a dream; I saw, rising from 2 the sea, an eagle with twelve wings and three heads. I saw it spread its wings over the whole earth; and all the winds blew on it, and the clouds^a 3 gathered. Out of its wings I saw rival wings sprout, which proved to be 4 only small and stunted. Its heads lay still; even the middle head, which was 5 bigger than the others, lay still between them. As I watched, the eagle rose 6 on its wings to set itself up as ruler over the earth and its inhabitants. I saw it bring into subjection everything under heaven; it met with no 7 opposition at all from any creature on earth. I saw the eagle stand erect on 8 its talons, and it spoke aloud to its wings: 'Do not all wake at once,' it said;
 9 'sleep in your places, and each wake up in turn; the heads are to be kept till 10 the last.' I saw that the sound was not coming from its heads, but from the 11 middle of its body. I counted its rival wings, and saw that there were eight of them.

12 As I watched, one of the wings on its right side rose and became ruler 13 over the whole earth. After a time, its reign came to an end, and it disappeared from sight completely. Then the next one arose and established 14 its rule, which it held for a long time. When its reign was coming to an 15 end and it was about to disappear like the first one, a voice could be heard 16 saying to it: 'You have ruled the world for so long; now listen to my mes-17 sage before your time comes to disappear. None of your successors will 18 achieve a reign as long as yours, nor even half as long.' Then the third wing 19 arose, ruled the world for a time like its predecessors, and like them disappeared. In the same way all the wings came to power in succession, and in turn disappeared from sight.

20 As time went on, I saw the wings on the left^b side also raise themselves up to seize power. Some of them did so, and passed immediately from 21 22 sight, while others arose but never came to power. At this point I noticed that two of the little wings were, like the twelve, no longer to be seen.

^a the clouds: so some Vss.; Lat. omits.

^b So one Vss.; Lat. right.

Nothing was now left of the eagle's body except the three motionless heads 23 and six little wings. As I watched, two of the six little wings separated from 24 the rest and took up a place under the head on the right. The other four remained where they were; and I saw them planning to rise up and seize 25 power. One rose, but disappeared immediately; so too did the second, 26 27 vanishing even more quickly than the first. I saw the last two planning to 28 seize the kingship for themselves. But while they were still plotting, 29 suddenly one of the heads woke from sleep, the one in the middle, the biggest of the three. I saw how it joined with the other two heads, and along 30 31 with them turned and devoured the two little wings which were planning to seize power. This head got the whole earth into its grasp, establishing an 32 oppressive rule over all its inhabitants and a world-wide kingdom mightier than any of the wings had ruled. But after that I saw the middle head vanish 33 just as suddenly as the wings had done. There were two heads left, and they 34 also seized power over the earth and its inhabitants, but as I watched, the 35 head on the right devoured the head on the left.

Then I heard a voice which said to me: 'Look carefully at what you see 36 before you.' I looked, and saw what seemed to be a lion roused from the 37 forest; it roared as it came, and I heard it address the eagle in a human voice. 'Listen to what I tell you', it said. 'The Most High says to you: Are 38 39 you not the only survivor of the four beasts to which I gave the rule over 40-41 my world, intending through them to bring my ages to their end? You are the fourth beast, and you have conquered all who went before, ruling over the whole world and holding it in the grip of fear and harsh oppression.
 You have lived^a long in the world, governing it with deceit and with no 42 regard for truth. You have oppressed the gentle and injured the peaceful, hating the truthful and loving liars; you have destroyed the homes of the prosperous, and razed to the ground the walls of those who had done you no harm. Your insolence is known to the Most High, and your pride to the 43 Mighty One. The Most High has surveyed the periods he has fixed: they 44 are now at an end, and his ages have reached their completion. So you, 45 eagle, must now disappear and be seen no more, you and your terrible great wings, your evil small wings, your cruel heads, your grim talons, and your whole worthless body. Then all the earth will feel relief at its deliver- 46 ance from your violence, and look forward hopefully to the judgement and mercy of its Creator.'

While the lion was still addressing the eagle, I looked and saw the one 12 1 2 remaining head disappear. Then the two^b wings which had gone over to him arose and set themselves up as rulers. Their reign was short and troubled, and when I looked at them they were already vanishing. Then 3 the eagle's entire body burst into flames, and the earth was struck with terror.

So great was my alarm and fear that I awoke, and said to myself: 'See 4 the result of your attempt to discover the ways of the Most High! My mind 5 is weary; I am utterly exhausted. The terrors of this night have completely drained my strength. So I will now pray to the Most High for strength to 6

^a You are the fourth . . . lived: so some Vss.; Lat. The fourth beast came and conquered . . . It has lived . . . ^b So other Vss.; Lat. corrupt.

7 hold out to the end.' Then I said: 'My Master and Lord, if I have won your 8 favour and stand higher in your approval than most men, if it is true that 9 my prayers have reached your presence, then give me strength; reveal to 10 me, my Lord, the exact interpretation of this terrifying vision, and so 11 bring full consolation to my soul. For you have already judged me worthy to be shown the end of the present age.'

10 11 He said to me: 'Here is the interpretation of your vision. The eagle you saw rising from the sea represents the fourth kingdom in the vision seen 12 by your brother Daniel. But he was not given the interpretation which I am 13 now giving you or have already given you. The days are coming when the 14 earth will be under an empire more terrible than any before. It will be ruled 15 by twelve kings, one after another. The second to come to the throne will 16 have the longest reign of all the twelve. That is the meaning of the twelve wings you saw.

17 'As for the voice which you heard speaking from the middle of the 18 eagle's body, and not from its heads, this is what it means: After this second king's reign, great conflicts will arise, which will bring the empire into danger of falling; and yet it will not fall then, but will be restored to its original strength.

19 'As for the eight lesser wings which you saw growing from the eagle's
 20 wings, this is what they mean: The empire will come under eight kings 21 whose reigns will be trivial and short-lived; two of them will come and go just before the middle of the period, four will be kept back until shortly before its end, and two will be left until the end itself.

22 'As for the three heads which you saw sleeping, this is what they mean:
 23 In the last years of the empire, the Most High will bring to the throne three 24 kings, who will restore much of its strength, and rule ^a over the earth and its inhabitants more oppressively than anyone before. They are called the 25 eagle's heads, because they will complete and bring to a head its long series
 26 of wicked deeds. As for the greatest head, which you saw disappear, it 27 signifies one of the kings, who will die in his bed, but in great agony. The 28 two that survived will be destroyed by the sword; one of them will fall by the sword of the other, who will himself fall by the sword in the last days.

29 'As for the two little wings that went over to the head on the right side, 30 this is what they mean: They are the ones whom the Most High has reserved until the last days, and their reign, as you saw, was short and troubled.

31 'As for the lion which you saw coming from the forest, roused from sleep and roaring, which you heard addressing the eagle, taxing it with its 32 wicked deeds and words, this is the Messiah whom the Most High has kept back until the end. He will address ^b those rulers, taxing them openly 33 with their sins, their crimes, and their defiance. He will bring them alive 34 to judgement; he will convict them and then destroy them. But he will be merciful to those of my people that remain, all who have been kept safe in my land; he will set them free and give them gladness, until the final day of judgement comes, about which I told you at the beginning.

^a who . . . rule: so some Vss.; Lat. and he will restore . . . and they will rule . . .

^b He will address: probable reading; Lat. defective.

'That, then, is the vision which you saw, and its meaning. It is the secret of the Most High, which no one except yourself has proved worthy to be told. What you have seen you must therefore write in a book and deposit it in a hiding-place. You must also disclose these secrets to those of your people whom you know to be wise enough to understand them and to keep them safe. But stay here yourself for seven more days, to receive whatever revelation the Most High thinks fit to send you.' Then the angel left me.

When all the people heard that seven days had passed without my returning to the town, they assembled and came to me. 'What wrong or injury have we done you,' they asked me, 'that you have deserted us and settled here? Out of all the prophets you are the only one left to us. You are like the last cluster in a vineyard, like a lamp in the darkness, or a safe harbour for a ship in a storm. Have we not suffered enough? If you desert us, we had far better have been destroyed in the fire that burnt up Zion. We are no better than those who perished there.' Then they raised a loud lamentation.

I replied: 'Take courage, Israel; house of Jacob, lay aside your grief. The Most High bears you in mind, and the Mighty One has not for ever forgotten you. I have not left you, nor abandoned you; I came here to pray for Zion in her distress, and to beg for mercy for your sanctuary that has fallen so low. Go to your homes now, every one of you; and in a few days' time I will come back to you.'

So the people returned to the town as I told them, while I remained in the field. I stayed there for seven days in obedience to the angel, eating nothing but what grew in the field, and living on that for the whole of the time.

THE SEVEN DAYS PASSED; and the next night I had a dream. In my dream, a wind came up out of the sea and set the waves in turmoil. And this wind brought a human figure rising from the depths,^b and as I watched, this man came flying^c with the clouds of heaven. Wherever he turned his eyes, everything that they fell on was seized with terror; and wherever the sound of his voice reached, all who heard it melted like wax at the touch of fire.

Next I saw an innumerable host of men gathering from the four winds of heaven to wage war on the man who had risen from the sea. I saw that the man hewed out a vast mountain for himself, and flew up on to it. I tried to see from what quarter or place the mountain had been taken, but I could not. Then I saw that all who had gathered to wage war against the man were filled with fear, and yet they dared to fight against him. When he saw the hordes advancing to attack, he did not so much as lift a finger against them. He had no spear in his hand, no weapon at all; only, as I watched, he poured what seemed like a stream of fire out of his mouth, a breath of flame from his lips, and a storm of sparks from his tongue. All of them combined into one mass—the stream of fire, the breath of flame, and the great storm. It fell on the host advancing to join battle, and burnt up every man of them; suddenly all that enormous multitude had disappeared, leaving nothing but dust and ashes and a reek of smoke. I was dumbfounded at the sight.

12 After that, I saw the man coming down from the mountain and calling 13 to himself a different company, a peaceful one. He was joined by great numbers of men, some with joy on their faces, others with sorrow. Some came from captivity; some brought others to him as an offering. I woke up 14 in terror, and prayed to the Most High. I said, 'You have revealed these marvels to me, your servant, all the way through; you have judged me 15 worthy to have my prayers answered. Now show me the meaning of this 16 dream also. How terrible, to my thinking, it will be for all who survive to 17 those days! But how much worse for those who do not survive! Those who 18 do not survive will have the sorrow of knowing what is in store in the last 19 days and yet missing it. Those who do survive are to be pitied for the terrible 20 dangers and trials which, as these visions show, they will have to face. But perhaps after all it is better to endure the dangers and reach the goal than to vanish out of the world like a cloud and never see the events of the last days.'

21 'Yes,' he replied, 'I will explain the meaning of this vision, and tell you 22 all that you ask. As for your question about those who survive, this is the 23 answer: the very person from whom the danger will then come will protect in danger those who have works and fidelity laid up to their credit with 24 the Most High. You may be assured that those who survive are more highly blessed than those who die.

25 'This is what the vision means: The man you saw rising from the depths 26 of the sea is he whom the Most High has held in readiness through many ages; he will himself deliver the world he has made, and determine the lot 27 of those who survive. As for the breath, fire, and storm which you saw 28 pouring from the mouth of the man, so that without a spear or any weapon in his hand he destroyed the hordes advancing to wage war against him, 29 this is the meaning: The day is near when the Most High will begin to bring deliverance to those on earth. Then men will all be filled with great 30 alarm; they will plot to make war on one another, city on city, region on 31 region, nation on nation, kingdom on kingdom. When this happens, and 32 all the signs that I have shown you come to pass, then my son will be revealed, whom you saw as a man rising from the sea. On hearing his voice, 33 all the nations will leave their own territories and their separate wars, and 34 unite in a countless host, as you saw in your vision, with a common intent to go and wage war against him. He will take his stand on the summit of 35 Mount Zion, and Zion will come into sight before all men, complete and fully built. This corresponds to the mountain which you saw hewn out, 36 not by the hand of man. Then my son will convict of their godless deeds the nations that confront him. This will correspond to the storm you saw.
37 He will taunt them with their evil plottings and the tortures they are soon to endure. This corresponds to the flame. And he will destroy them without 38 effort by means of ^a the law—and that is like the fire.

39 40 'Then you saw him collecting a different company, a peaceful one. They are the ten tribes which were taken off into exile in the time of King Hoshea, whom Shalmaneser king of Assyria took prisoner. He deported them beyond the River, and they were taken away into a strange country. But then they resolved to leave the country populated by the Gentiles and go to a distant land never yet inhabited by man, and there at last to be obedient to their laws, which in their own country they had failed to keep. As they passed through the narrow passages of the Euphrates, the Most High performed miracles for them, stopping up the channels of the river until they had crossed over. Their journey through that region, which is called Arzaeth, was long, and took a year and a half. They have lived there ever since, until this final age. Now they are on their way back, and once more the Most High will stop the channels of the river to let them cross.

^a by means of: so one Vs.; Lat. and.

‘That is the meaning of the peaceful assembly that you saw. With them too are the survivors of your own people, all who are found inside my sacred boundary. So then, when the time comes for him to destroy the nations assembled against him, he will protect his people who are left, and show them many prodigies.’

‘My lord, my master,’ I asked, ‘explain to me why the man that I saw rose up out of the depths of the sea.’ He replied: ‘It is beyond the power of any man to explore the deep sea and discover what is in it; in the same way no one on earth can see my son and his company until the appointed day. Such then is the meaning of your vision. The revelation has been given to you, and to you alone, because you have given up your own affairs, and devoted yourself entirely to mine, and to the study of my law. You have taken wisdom as your guide in everything, and called understanding your mother. That is why I have given this revelation to you; there is a reward in store for you with the Most High. In three days’ time I will speak with you again, and tell you some momentous and wonderful things.’

So I went away to the field, giving worship and praise to the Most High for the wonders he performed from time to time and for his providential control of the passing ages and what happens in them. There I remained for three days.

The writing of the sacred books

ON THE THIRD DAY I was sitting under an oak-tree, when a voice came to me from a bush, saying, ‘Ezra, Ezra!’ ‘Here I am, Lord’, I answered, and rose to my feet. The voice went on: ‘I revealed myself in the bush, and spoke to Moses, when my people Israel was in slavery in Egypt, and sent him to lead my people out of Egypt. I brought him up on to Mount Sinai, and kept him with me for many days. I told him of many wonders, showing him the secrets of the ages and the end of time, and instructed him what to make known and what to conceal. So too I now give this order to you: commit to memory the signs I have shown you, the visions you have seen, and the explanations you have been given. You yourself are about to be taken away from the world of men, and thereafter you will remain with my son and with those like you, until the end of time. The world has lost its youth, and time is growing old. For the whole of time is in twelve

12 divisions; nine^a divisions and half the tenth have already passed, and only 13 two and a half still remain. Set your house in order, therefore; give warn-14 ings to your nation, and comfort to those in need of it; and take your leave 15 of mortal life. Put away your earthly cares, and lay down your human 16 burdens; strip off your weak nature, set aside the anxieties that vex you, 17 and be ready to depart quickly from this life. However great the evils you 18 have witnessed, there are worse to come. As this ageing world grows weaker and weaker, so will evils increase for its inhabitants. Truth will move farther away, and falsehood come nearer. The eagle that you saw in your vision is already on the wing.'

19 20 'May I speak^b in your presence, Lord?' I replied. 'I am to depart, by your command, after giving warning to those of my people who are now alive. But who will give warning to those born hereafter? The world is 21 shrouded in darkness, and its inhabitants are without light. For your law was destroyed in the fire, and so no one can know about the deeds you have 22 done or intend to do. If I have won your favour, fill me with your holy spirit, so that I may write down the whole story of the world from the very beginning, everything that is contained in your law; then men will have the chance to find the right path, and, if they choose, gain life in the last days.'

23 'Go,' he replied, 'call the people together, and tell them not to look for 24 you for forty days. Have a large number of writing-tablets ready, and take with you Seraiah and Dibri, Shelemiah, Ethan, and Asiel, five men all 25 trained to write quickly. Then return here, and I will light a lamp of understanding in your mind, which will not go out until you have finished all 26 that you are to write. When your work is complete, some of it you must make public; the rest you must give to wise men to keep secret. Tomorrow at this time you shall begin to write.'

27 28 I went as I was ordered and summoned all the people, and said: 'Israel, 29 listen to what I say. Our ancestors lived originally in Egypt as foreigners.
 30 They were rescued from that land, and were given the law which offers life.
 31 But they disobeyed it, and you have followed their example. Then you were given a land of your own, the land of Zion; but you, like your ancestors, sinned and abandoned the way laid down for you by the Most High.
 32 Because he is a just judge he took away from you in due time what he had 33 given. And so you are now here in exile, and your fellow-countrymen are 34 still farther away. If then you will direct your understanding and instruct your minds, you shall be kept safe in life and meet with mercy after you 35 die. For after death will come the judgement; we shall be restored to life, and then the names of the just will be known and the deeds of the godless 36 exposed. From this moment no one must come to talk to me, nor look for me for the next forty days.'

37 I took with me the five men as I had been told, and we went away to the 38 field, and there we stayed. On the next day I heard a voice calling me, which 39 said: 'Ezra, open your mouth and drink what I give you.' So I opened my mouth, and was handed a cup full of what seemed like water, except that 40 its colour was the colour of fire. I took it and drank, and as soon as I had done so my mind began to pour forth a flood of understanding, and wisdom grew greater and greater within me, for I retained my memory unimpaired. I opened my mouth to speak, and I continued to speak unceasingly. The Most High gave understanding to the five men, who took turns at writing down what was said, using characters^a which they had not known before. They remained at work through the forty days, writing all day, and taking food only at night. But as for me, I spoke all through the day; even at night I was not silent. In the forty days, ninety-four^b books were written. At the end of the forty days the Most High spoke to me. 'Make public the books you wrote first,' he said, 'to be read by good and bad alike. But the last seventy books are to be kept back, and given to none but the wise among your people. They contain a stream of understanding, a fountain of wisdom, a flood of knowledge.'^c And I did so.

Prophecies of doom

PROCLAIM TO MY PEOPLE the words of prophecy which I give you to speak, says the Lord; and have them written down, because they are trustworthy and true. Have no fear of plots against you, and do not be troubled by the unbelief of those who oppose you. For everyone who does not believe will die because of his unbelief.^c

Beware, says the Lord, I am letting loose terrible evils on the world, sword and famine, death and destruction, because wickedness has spread over the whole earth and there is no room for further deeds of violence. Therefore the Lord says, I will not keep silence about their godless sins; I will not tolerate their wicked deeds. See how the blood of innocent victims cries to me for vengeance, and the souls of the just never cease to plead with me! I will most surely avenge them, says the Lord, and will hear the plea of all the innocent blood that has been shed. My people are being led to the slaughter like sheep. I will no longer allow them to remain in Egypt, but will use all my power to rescue them; I will strike the Egyptians with plagues, as I did before, and destroy their whole land. How Egypt will mourn, shaken to its very foundations, when it is scourged and chastised by the Lord! How the tillers of the soil will mourn, when the seed fails to grow, and when their trees are devastated by blight and hail and terrible storm!^d Alas for the world and its inhabitants! The sword that will destroy them is not far away. Nation will draw sword against nation and go to war. Stable government will be at an end; one faction will prevail over another, caring nothing in their day of power for king or leading man of rank. A man may want to visit a city, but will not be able to do so; for ambition and rivalry will have reduced cities to chaos, destroyed houses, and filled men with panic. A man will violently assault his neighbour's house and plunder his goods; no pity will restrain him, when he is in the grip of famine and grinding misery.

See how I summon before me all the kings of the earth, says God, from 21 sunrise and south wind, from east and south,^a to turn back and repay what they have been given. I will do to them as they are doing to my chosen people even to this day; I will pay them back in their own coin.

22 These are the words of the Lord God: I will show sinners no pity; the sword will not spare those murderers who stain the ground with innocent blood. The Lord's anger has overflowed in fire to scorch the earth to its foundations and consume sinners like burning straw. Alas for sinners who flout my commands! says the Lord; I will show them no mercy. Away from me, you rebels! Do not bring your pollution near my holiness. The Lord well knows all who sin against him, and has consigned them to death and destruction. Already disaster has fallen upon the world, and you will never escape it; God will refuse to rescue you, because you have sinned against him.

28 29 How terrible the sight of what is coming from the east! Hordes of dragons from Arabia will sally forth with countless chariots, and from the first day of their advance their hissing will spread across the land, to fill all who hear them with fear and consternation. The Carmanians, mad with rage, will rush like wild boars out of the forest, advancing in full force to join battle with them, and will devastate whole tracts of Assyria with their tusks. But then the dragons will summon up their native fury, and will prove the stronger. They will rally and join forces, and fall on them with overwhelming might until they are routed, until their power is silenced, and every one of them turns to flight. Then their way will be blocked by a lurking enemy from Assyria, who will destroy one of them. Fear and panic will spread in their army, and wavering among their kings.

34 See the clouds stretching from east and north to south! Their appearance is hideous, full of fury and tempest. They will clash together, they will pour over the land a vast storm;^b blood, shed by the sword, will reach as high as a horse's belly, a man's thigh, or a camel's hock. Terror and trembling will cover the earth; all who see the raging fury will shudder and be stricken with panic. Then vast storm-clouds will approach from north and south, and others from the west. But the winds from the east will be stronger still, and will hold in check the raging cloud and its leader; and the storm^b which was bent on destruction will be fiercely driven back to the south and west by the winds from the east. Huge mighty clouds, full of fury, will mount up and ravage the whole land and its inhabitants; a terrible storm^b will sweep over the great and the powerful, with fire and hail and flying swords; and a deluge of water will flood all the fields and rivers. They will flatten to the ground cities and walls, mountains and hills, trees in the woods and crops in the fields. They will advance all the way to Babylon, and blot it out. When they reach it, they will surround it, and let loose a storm^b in all its fury. The dust and smoke will reach the sky, and all her neighbours will mourn for Babylon. Any of her survivors will be enslaved by her destroyers.

46 And you, Asia, who have shared the beauty and the splendour of

lusted for you. You have copied all the schemes and practices of that vile harlot. Therefore God says, I will bring upon you terrible evils: widowhood and poverty, famine, sword, and plague, bringing ruin to your homes, bringing violence and death. Your strength and splendour will wither like a flower, when that scorching heat bears down upon you. Then you will be a poor weak woman, bruised, beaten, and wounded, unable to receive your wealthy lovers any more. Should I be so fierce with you, says the Lord, if you had not killed my chosen ones continually, gloating over the blows you struck them, and hurling your drunken taunts at their corpses?

Paint your face; make yourself beautiful! The harlot's pay shall be yours; you will get what you have earned. What you do to my chosen people, God will do to you, says the Lord; he will consign you to a terrible fate. Your children will die of hunger; you will fall by the sword, your cities will be blotted out, and all your people will fall on the field of battle. Those who are up on the mountains will be dying of hunger, and their hunger and thirst will force them to gnaw their own flesh and drink their own blood. You will be foremost in misery, and still there will be more to come. As the victors go past on their way home from the sack of Babylon, they will smash your peaceful city, destroy a great part of your territory, and bring much of your splendour to an end. They will destroy you—you will be stubble, and they the fire. They will completely devour you and your cities, your land and your mountains, and will burn all your forests and your fruit-trees. They will make your children prisoners and plunder your property; and not a trace will be left of your splendid beauty.

Alas for you, Babylon and Asia! Alas for you, Egypt and Syria! Put on sackcloth and hair-shirt, and raise a howl of lamentation for your sons; your doom is close at hand. The sword is let loose against you, and who will turn it aside? Fire is let loose upon you, and who will put it out? Calamities have been let loose against you, and who is there to stop them? Can any man stop a hungry lion in a forest, or put out a fire among the stubble once it has begun to blaze? Can any man stop an arrow shot by a strong archer? When the Lord God sends calamities, who can stop them? When his anger overflows in fire, who can put it out? When the lightning flashes, who will not tremble? When it thunders, who will not shake with dread? When it is the Lord who utters his threats, is there any man who will not be crushed to the ground at his approach? The earth is shaken to its very foundations, and the sea is churned up from its depths; the waves and all the fish with them are in turmoil before the presence of the Lord and the majesty of his strength. For strong is his arm which bends the bow, and sharp the arrows which he shoots; once they are on their way, they will not stop before they reach the ends of the earth. Calamities are let loose, and will not turn back before they strike the earth. The fire is alight and will not be put out until it has burnt up earth's foundations. An arrow shot by a powerful archer does not turn back; no more will the calamities be recalled which are let loose against the earth.

Alas, alas for me! Who will rescue me on that day? When troubles come, many will groan; when famine strikes, many will die; when wars break out, empires will tremble; when the calamities come, all will be filled with 19 terror. What will men do then, in the face of calamity? Famine and plague, 20 suffering and hardship, are scourges sent to teach men better ways. But even so they will not abandon their crimes, nor keep in mind their scourging.

21 A time will come when food grows cheap, so cheap that they will imagine they have been sent peace and prosperity. But at that very moment the earth will become a hotbed of disasters—sword, famine, and anarchy.
22 Most of its inhabitants will die in the famine; and those who survive the 23 famine will be destroyed by the sword. The dead will be tossed out like dung, and there will be no one to offer any comfort. For the earth will be 24 left empty, and its cities a ruin. None will be left to till the ground and sow 25 26 it. The trees will bear their fruits, but who will pick them? The grapes will ripen, but who will tread them? There will be vast desolation everywhere.
27 28 A man will long to see a human face or hear a human voice. For out of a whole city, only ten will survive; in the country-side, only two will be left, 29 hiding in the forest or in holes in the rocks. Just as in an olive-grove three 30 or four olives might be left on each tree, or as a few grapes in a vineyard 31 might be overlooked by the sharp-eyed pickers, so also in those days three 32 or four will be overlooked by those who search the houses to kill. The earth will be left a desert, and the fields will be overrun with briars; thorns will grow over all the roads and paths, because there will be no sheep to 33 tread them. Girls will live in mourning with none to marry them, women will mourn because they have no husbands, their daughters will mourn 34 because they have no one to support them. The young men who should have married them will be killed in the war, and the husbands wiped out by the famine.

35 BUT LISTEN TO ME, you who are the Lord's servants, and take my 36 words to heart. This is the word of the Lord. Receive it, and do not disbelieve what he says. Calamities are here, close at hand, and will not delay.
37 When a pregnant woman is in the ninth month, and the moment of her 38 child's birth is drawing near, there will be two or three hours in which her womb will suffer pangs of agony, and then the child will come from the womb without a moment's delay; in the same way calamities will come on 39 the earth without delay, and the world will groan under the pangs that grip it.

40 Listen to my words, my people; get ready for battle, and when the 41 calamities surround you, be as though you were strangers on earth. The seller must expect to have to run for his life, the buyer to lose what he buys; 42 the merchant must expect to make no profit, the builder never to live in 43 the house he builds. The sower must not expect to reap, nor the pruner to 44 gather his grapes. Those who marry must expect no children; the un-45 married must think of themselves as widowed. For all labour is labour in 46 vain. Their fruits will be gathered by foreigners, who will plunder their goods, pull down their houses, and take their children captive. If they 47 have children, they will have been bred only for captivity and famine; any who make money do so only to have it plundered. The more care they 48 lavish on their cities, houses, and property, and on their own persons, the 49 fiercer will be my indignation against their sins, says the Lord. Like the indignation of a virtuous woman towards a prostitute, so will be the indignation of justice towards wickedness with all her finery; she will accuse her to her face, when the champion arrives to expose all sin upon earth. Do not imitate wickedness, therefore, and her actions. For in a very short time she will be swept from the earth, and the reign of justice over us will begin. 50 51 52

The sinner must not deny that he has sinned; he will only bring burning coals on to his own head if he says, 'I have committed no sin against the majesty of God.' For the Lord knows all that men do; he knows their plans, their schemes, and their inmost thoughts. He said, 'Let the earth be made', and it was made; and 'Let the heavens be made', and they were made. It was by the Lord's word that the stars were fixed in their places; the number of the stars is known to him. He looks into the depths with their treasures; he has measured the sea and everything it contains. By his word he confined the sea within the bounds of the waters, and above the water he suspended the land. He spread out the sky like a vault, and made it secure upon the waters. He provided springs in the desert, and pools on the mountain-tops as the source of rivers flowing down to water the earth. He created man, and placed a heart in the middle of his body; he gave him spirit, life, and understanding, the very breath of Almighty God who created the whole world and searches out secret things in secret places. He knows well your plans and all your inward thoughts. Alas for sinners who try to hide their sins! The Lord will scrutinize all their deeds; he will call you all to account. You will be covered with confusion, when your sins are brought into the open, and your wicked deeds stand up to accuse you on that day. What can you do? How can you hide your sins from God and his angels? God is your judge: fear him! Abandon your sins, and have done with your wicked deeds for ever! Then God will set you free from all distress. 53 54 55 56 57 58 59 60 61 62 63 64 65 66 67

Fierce flames are being kindled to burn you. A great horde will descend on you; they will seize some of you and make you eat pagan sacrifices. Those who give in to them will be derided, taunted, and trampled on. In place after place^a and in all the neighbourhood there will be a violent attack on those who fear the Lord. Their enemies will be like madmen, plundering and destroying without mercy all who still fear the Lord. They will destroy and plunder their property, and throw them out of their homes. Then it will be seen that my chosen people have stood the test like gold in the assayer's fire. 68 69 70 71 72 73

Listen, you whom I have chosen, says the Lord; the days of harsh suffering are close at hand, but I will rescue you from them. Away with your fears and doubts! For God is your leader. You who follow my commandments and instructions, says the Lord God, must not let your sins weigh you down, nor your wicked deeds get the better of you. Alas for those who are entangled in their sins, and overrun with their wicked deeds! They are like a field overrun by bushes, with brambles across the path and no way through, completely shut off and doomed to destruction by fire. 74 75 76 77 78

The troubles of Tobit

1 THIS IS THE STORY of Tobit, son of Tobiel, son of Hananiel, 2 son of Aduel, son of Gabael, son of Raphael, son of Raguel, of the family of Asiel, of the tribe of Naphtali. He was taken captive in the time of Shalmaneser^a king of Assyria, from Thisbe which is south of Kedesh Naphtali in Upper Galilee above Hazor, behind the road to the west, north of Peor.

3 I, TOBIT, made truth and righteousness my lifelong guide; I did many 4 acts of charity for my kinsmen, those of my nation who had gone into captivity with me at Nineveh in Assyria. When I was quite young in my own country, Israel, the whole tribe of Naphtali my ancestor broke away from the dynasty of David,^b and from Jerusalem, the city chosen out of all the tribes of Israel as the one place of sacrifice. It was there that God's dwelling-place, the temple, had been consecrated, built to last for all 5 generations. All my kinsmen, the whole house of Naphtali my ancestor, sacrificed on the mountains of Galilee to the calf which Jeroboam, king of 6 Israel, had made in Dan; at the festivals I was the only one to make the frequent journey to Jerusalem prescribed for all Israel as an eternal commandment. I used to hurry off to Jerusalem with the firstfruits of crops and herds, the tithes of the cattle, and the first shearings of the sheep; and 7 I gave them to the priests of Aaron's line for the altar, and the tithe of wine, corn, olive oil, pomegranates and other fruits to the Levites ministering in Jerusalem. The second tithe for the six years I converted into money, 8 and I went and distributed it in Jerusalem year by year among the orphans and widows, and the converts who had attached themselves to Israel.
Every third year when I brought it and gave it to them, we held a feast according to the rule laid down in the law of Moses and the instructions given by Deborah the mother of Hananiel our grandfather; for my father had died leaving me an orphan.

9 When I came of age I took a wife from our kindred, and had a son by her 10 whom I called Tobias. After the deportation to Assyria when I was taken captive and came to Nineveh, everyone of my kindred and nation ate 11 12 gentile food; but I myself scrupulously avoided doing so. Since I was 13 whole-heartedly mindful of my God, the Most High endowed me with a presence which won me the favour of Shalmaneser, and I became his 14 buyer of supplies. As long as he lived I used to travel to Media and buy for him there. I deposited bags of money to the value of ten talents of 15 silver with my kinsman Gabael son of Gabri in Media. When Shalmaneser died and was succeeded by his son Sennacherib, the roads to Media passed out of Assyrian control and I could no longer make the journey.

In the time of Shalmaneser, I did many acts of charity for my fellow-countrymen: I shared my food with the hungry and provided clothes for the naked. If I saw the dead body of any man of my race lying outside the wall of Nineveh, I buried it. I buried all those who fell victim to Sennacherib after his flight from Judaea, when the King of heaven executed judgement on him for all his blasphemies, and in his rage he killed many of the Israelites. I stole their bodies away and buried them, and Sennacherib looked for them but could not find them. One of the Ninevites informed the king that I was giving burial to his victims; so I went into hiding. When I learnt that the king knew about me and that I was wanted for execution, I took fright and ran away. All my property was seized and put into the royal treasury; I was left with nothing but Anna my wife and my son Tobias. However, less than forty days afterwards, the king was murdered by two of his sons. They took refuge in the mountains of Ararat, and his son Esarhaddon succeeded him. He appointed Ahikar son of my brother Anael to supervise all the finances of his kingdom; he had control of the entire administration. Then Ahikar interceded on my behalf and I came back to Nineveh. For he had been chief cupbearer, keeper of the privy seal, comptroller, and treasurer when Sennacherib was king of Assyria; and Esarhaddon renewed the appointments. Ahikar was my nephew and so one of my kinsmen.

DURING THE REIGN of Esarhaddon, I returned to my house, and my wife Anna and my son Tobias were restored to me. At our festival of Pentecost, that is the Feast of Weeks, a good dinner was prepared for me and I sat down to eat. The table was laid and a lavish meal was put before me. I said to my son Tobias: 'Go, my boy, and if you can find any poor man of our captive people in Nineveh who is whole-heartedly mindful of God, bring him and he shall share my dinner. I will wait for you until you return.' Tobias went to look for a poor man of our people, but he came back and said, 'Father!' 'Yes, my son?' I replied. He answered, 'Father, one of our nation has been murdered and his body is lying in the market-place. He was strangled only a moment ago.' I jumped up and left my dinner untasted. I took the body from the square and put it in one of the outbuildings until sunset when I could bury it; then I went home, duly bathed myself, and ate my food in sorrow. I recalled the saying of the prophet Amos in the passage about Bethel:

'Your feasts shall be turned into mourning, and all your songs^a into lamentation', and I wept. After sunset I went and dug a grave and buried the body. The neighbours jeered at me and said: 'Is he no longer afraid? He ran away last time, when they were hunting for him to put him to death for this very offence; and here he is burying the dead again!' That night I bathed myself and went into my courtyard. I lay down to sleep by the courtyard wall,

^a So one V^s. (compare Amos 8. 10); Gk. ways.

10 leaving my face uncovered because of the heat. I did not know that there were sparrows in the wall above me; and their droppings fell, still warm, right into my eyes and produced white patches. I went to the doctors to be cured, but the more they treated me with their ointments, the more my eyes were blinded by the white patches, until I lost my sight. For four years I was blind. All my kinsmen grieved for me, and Ahikar looked after me for two years until he moved to Elymais.

11 During that time my wife Anna used to earn money by women's work.
12 When she took what she had done to her employers they would pay her wages. One day, the seventh of Dystrus, when she had cut off the piece she had woven and delivered it, the owners not only paid her in full, but also 13 gave her a kid from their herd of goats to take home. When my wife came in to me the kid began to bleat. I called out to her: 'Where does that kid come from? I hope it was not stolen? Give it back to its owners; we have no right
14 to eat anything stolen.' She assured me: 'It was given me as a present, over and above my wages.' I did not believe her and insisted that she should give it back to its owners, and I blushed with shame for what she had done. She retorted: 'So much for all your good works and acts of charity! Now we can see what you are!'

3 1 2 In deep distress I groaned and wept, and as I groaned I prayed: 'Thou art just, O Lord, and all thy acts are just; in all thy ways thou art merciful and true; thou art judge of the world. Remember me now, Lord, and look upon me. Do not punish me for the sins and errors which I and my fathers have committed. We have sinned against thee and disobeyed thy commandments, and thou hast given us up to plunder, captivity, and death, until we have become a byword, a proverb, and a taunt to all the nations among 5 whom thou hast scattered us. I acknowledge the justice of thy many judgements, the due penalty for my sins, for we have not obeyed thy 6 commandments and have not lived in loyal obedience before thee. And now deal with me at thy pleasure, and command that my life be taken away, so that I may be removed from the face of the earth and turned to earth. I should be better dead than alive, for I have had to hear undeserved reproaches and am in deep grief. Lord, command that I may be released from this misery; let me go to my long home; do not turn thy face from me, O Lord. It is better for me to die than to live in such misery and to hear such reproaches.'

7 On that same day it happened that Sarah, the daughter of Raguel who lived at Ecbatana in Media, also had to listen to reproaches from one of her
8 father's maidservants, because she had been given in marriage to seven husbands, and before the marriage could be regularly consummated they had all been killed by the wicked demon Asmodaeus. The maidservant said to her: 'It is you who kill your husbands! You have already been given in marriage to seven, and you have not borne the name of any one of them.
9 Why punish us because they are dead? Go and join your husbands! I hope we never see son or daughter of yours!'

10 She was sad at heart that day, and went in tears up to the attic in her father's house meaning to hang herself. But she had second thoughts and said to herself: 'Perhaps they will reproach my father and say to him, "You had one dear daughter and she hanged herself because of her troubles", and so I shall bring my aged father in sorrow to the grave. No, I will not hang myself; it would be better to beg the Lord to let me die and not live on to hear such reproaches.' Then at once she spread out her hands towards the window in prayer and said: 'Praise to thee, merciful God, praise to thy name for ever; let all thy works praise thee for evermore. Now I lift up my eyes and look to thee. Command me to be removed from this earth so that I may no longer hear such reproaches. Thou knowest, Lord, that I am a virgin, guiltless of intercourse with any man; I have not disgraced my name nor my father's name in the land of my exile. I am my father's only child; he has no other to be his heir, nor has he any near kinsman or relative who might marry me, and for whom I should stay alive. Already seven husbands of mine have died. What have I to live for any longer? If it is not thy will, O Lord, to let me die, listen now to my complaint.'

At that very time the prayers of both of them were heard in the glorious presence of God. His angel Raphael was sent to cure them both of their troubles: Tobit, by removing the white patches from his eyes so that he might see God's light again, and Sarah daughter of Raguel by giving her in marriage to Tobias son of Tobit and by setting her free from the wicked demon Asmodaeus; for it was the destiny of Tobias and not of any other suitor to possess her. At the moment when Tobit went back from the courtyard into his house, Sarah daughter of Raguel came down from the attic.

The adventures of Tobias

THAT SAME DAY Tobit remembered the silver that he had deposited with Gabael at Rages in Media, and he said to himself, 'I have asked for death; before I die ought I not to send for my son Tobias and explain to him about this money?' So he sent for Tobias, and when he came he said to him: 'Give me decent burial. Show proper respect to your mother, and do not leave her in the lurch as long as she lives; do what will please her, and never grieve her heart in any way. Remember, my son, all the dangers she faced for your sake while you were in her womb. When she dies, bury her beside me in the same grave. And remember the Lord every day of your life. Never deliberately do what is wrong or break his commandments. As long as you live do what is right. Do not fall into evil ways; for an honest life leads to prosperity. To all who keep the law, the Lord gives good guidance, and as he chooses he humbles men to the grave below.^a

^a To all . . . below: in place of these words some witnesses have To all who keep the law (7) give alms from what you possess and never give with a grudging eye. If you have little, do not be ashamed to give the little you can afford; (9) you will be laying up a sound insurance against the day of adversity. (12) 'Beware, my son, of fornication; above all choose your wife from the race of your ancestors. Do not take a foreign wife who is not of your father's tribe, because we are Now, my son, remember these commands; let them never be effaced from your mind.

20 'Well now, my boy, let me tell you that I have ten talents of silver on 21 deposit with Gabael son of Gabri, at Rages in Media. Do not be anxious because we have become poor; there is great wealth waiting for you, if only you fear God and avoid all wickedness and do what is good in the sight of the Lord your God.'

5 1 2 Then Tobias said: 'I will do all that you have told me, father. But how shall I be able to get this money from him, since he does not know me and I do not know him? What proof of identity shall I give him to make him believe me and give me this money? Also I do not know the roads to Media or how to get there.' To this Tobit replied: 'He gave me his note of hand, 3 and I gave him mine, which I divided in two. We took one part each, and I put mine with the money. It is twenty years since I made this deposit. And now, my boy, find someone reliable to go with you, and we will pay him up to the time of your return; then go and recover the money from Gabael.'

4 Tobias went out to find a man who knew the way and would accompany
5 him to Media, and found himself face to face with the angel Raphael. Not knowing he was an angel of God, he questioned him: 'Where do you come from, young man?' 'I am an Israelite,' he replied, 'one of your fellow-countrymen, and I have come here to find work.' Tobias asked, 'Do you 6 know the road to Media?' 'Yes,' he said, 'I have often been there; I am familiar with all the routes and know them well. I have often travelled into Media and used to lodge with Gabael our fellow-countryman who lives there in Rages.^a It is two full days' journey from Ecbatana to Rages; for 7 Rages is in the hills, and Ecbatana is in the middle of the plain.' Tobias said: 'Wait for me, young man, while I go in and tell my father. I need you 8 to go with me and will pay you your wages.' 'All right, I will wait,' he said: 'only do not be too long.'

Tobias went in and told his father. 'I have found a fellow-Israelite to accompany me', he said. His father replied, 'Call the man in, my son. I descendants of the prophets. Remember, my son, that Noah, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, our ancestors, back to the earliest days, all chose wives from their kindred. They were blessed in their children, and their descendants shall possess the earth. (13) And you like them, my son, must love your kindred. Do not be too proud to take a wife from among the women of your own nation. Pride breeds ruin and anarchy, and the waster declines into poverty; waste is the mother of starvation.

(14) Pay your workmen their wages the same day; do not make any man wait for his money. If you serve God you will be repaid. Be circumspect, my son, in all that you do, and show yourself well-bred in all your behaviour. (15) Do not do to anyone what you yourself would hate. Do not drink to excess and so let drunkenness become a habit. (16) Give food to the hungry and clothes to the naked. Whatever you have beyond your own needs, give away to the poor, and do not give grudgingly. (17) Pour out your wine and offer your bread on the tombs of the righteous; but give nothing to sinners. (18) Ask any sensible man for his advice; do not despise any advice that may help you. (19) Praise the Lord God at all times and ask him to guide your course. Then all you do and all you plan will turn out well. The heathen all lack such guidance; it is the Lord himself who gives all good things, or humbles men at will, as he chooses.

want to find out his family and tribe and make sure that he will be a trustworthy companion for you.'

Tobias went out and called him: 'Young man, my father is asking for you.' He went in, and Tobit greeted him first. To Raphael's reply, 'May all be well with you!', Tobit retorted: 'How can anything be well with me now? I am a blind man; I cannot see the light of heaven, but lie in darkness like the dead who cannot see the light. Though still alive, I am as good as dead. I hear men's voices, but the men I do not see.' Raphael answered: 'Take heart; in God's design your cure is at hand. Take heart.' Tobit went on: 'My son Tobias wishes to travel to Media. Can you go with him as his guide? I will pay you, my friend.' 'Yes,' he said, 'I can go with him; I know all the roads. I have often been to Media; I have travelled over all the plains and mountains there, and am familiar with all its roads.' Tobit said to him, 'Tell me, my friend, what family and tribe you belong to.' He asked, 'Why need you know my tribe?' Tobit said, 'I do indeed wish to know whose son you are, my friend, and what your name is.' 'I am Azarias,' he replied, 'son of the older Ananias, one of your kinsmen.'

Tobit said to him: 'Good luck and a safe journey to you! Do not be angry with me, my friend, because I wished to know the facts of your descent. It turns out that you are a kinsman, and a man of good family. I knew Ananias and Nathan the two sons of the older Semelias. They used to go with me to Jerusalem and worship with me there; they never went astray. Your kinsmen are worthy men; you come of a sound stock. Good luck go with you.' Tobit added: 'I will pay you a drachma a day and allow you the same expenses as my son. Keep him company on his travels, and I will add something to your wages.' Raphael answered: 'I will go with him. Never fear; we shall travel there and back without mishap, because the road is safe.' Tobit replied, 'God bless you, my friend.' He called his son and said to him: 'My boy, get ready what you need for the journey, and set off with your kinsman. May God in heaven keep both of you safe on your journey there and restore you to me unharmed. May his angel safely escort you both.' Before setting out Tobias kissed his father and mother, and Tobit said to him, 'Goodbye, and a safe journey!'

Then his mother burst into tears. 'Why have you sent my boy away?' she said to Tobit. 'Is he not our prop and stay? Has he not always been at home with us? Why send money after money? Write it off for the sake of our boy! Let us be content to live the life the Lord has appointed for us.' Tobit said to her: 'Do not worry; our son will go safely and come back safely, and you will see him with your own eyes on the day of his safe return. Do not worry or be anxious about them, my dear. A good angel will go with him, and his journey will prosper, and he will come back safe and sound.' At that she stopped crying.

THE BOY AND THE ANGEL left the house together, and the dog came out with him and accompanied them. They travelled until night overtook them, and then camped by the river Tigris. Tobias went down to bathe his feet in the river, and a huge fish leapt out of the water and tried to swallow the boy's foot. He cried out, and the angel said to him, 'Seize the fish and

4 hold it fast.' So Tobias seized it and hauled it on to the bank. The angel said to him: 'Split the fish open and take out its gall, heart, and liver; keep them by you, but throw the guts away; the gall, heart, and liver can be
5 used as medicine.' Tobias split the fish open, and put together its gall, heart, and liver. He cooked and ate part of the fish; the rest he salted and kept.

They continued the journey together until they came near Media.
6 Then the boy asked the angel: 'Azarias, my friend, what medicine is there
7 in the fish's heart, liver, and gall?' He said: 'You can use the heart and liver as a fumigation for any man or woman attacked by a demon or evil
8 spirit; the attack will cease, and it will give no further trouble. The gall is for anointing a man's eyes when white patches have spread over them, or for blowing on the white patches in the eyes; the eyes will then recover.'

9 When he had entered Media and was now approaching Ecbatana, 10 Raphael said to the boy, 'Tobias, my friend.' 'Yes?' he replied. Raphael said: 'We must stay the night with Raguel. He is your kinsman and he has a daughter named Sarah. Apart from Sarah he has neither son nor daughter.
11 You are her next of kin and have the right to marry her and inherit her 12 father's property. The girl is sensible, brave, and very beautiful, and her father is an honourable man.' He went on: 'It is right that you should marry her. Be guided by me, my friend; I will speak to her father about the girl this very night and ask for her hand as your bride, and on our return from Rages we will celebrate her marriage. I know that Raguel cannot withhold her from you or betroth her to another man without incurring the death penalty according to the ordinance in the book of Moses; and he is aware that his daughter belongs by right to you rather than to any other man. Now be guided by me, my friend; we will talk about the girl tonight and will betroth her to you, and when we return from Rages we shall take her back with us to your home.'

13 Then Tobias answered Raphael: 'Azarias, my friend, I have heard that she has already been given to seven husbands and they died the very night
14 they went into the bridal chamber to her. I have been told that it is a demon who kills them. And now it is my turn to be afraid; he does her no harm, but kills any man who tries to come near her. I am my father's only child; I am afraid that if I die I shall bring my father and mother to the grave
15 with grief for me. They have no other son to bury them.' Raphael said to him: 'Have you forgotten the orders your father gave you? He told you to take a wife from your father's kindred. Now be guided by me, my friend: do not worry about the demon, but marry her. I am sure that this night she 16 shall be given you as your wife. When you enter the bridal chamber, take some of the fish's liver and its heart, and put them on the smoking incense.
17 The smell will spread, and when the demon smells it he will make off and never be seen near her any more. When you are about to go to bed with her, both of you must first stand up and pray, beseeching the Lord of heaven to grant you mercy and deliverance. Have no fear; she was destined for you before the world was made. You shall rescue her and she shall go with you. No doubt you will have children by her and they will be very dear to you. ^a

^a Literally be like brothers to you.

So do not worry!' When Tobias heard what Raphael said, and learnt that she was his kinswoman and of his father's house, he was filled with love for her and set his heart on her.

WHEN THEY REACHED ECBATANA, Tobias said, 'Azarias, my friend, 7 take me straight to our kinsman Raguel.' So Azarias brought him to Raguel's house, and they found him sitting by the courtyard door. They greeted him first, and he replied, 'A hearty welcome to you, friends. I am glad to see you well after your journey.' He took them into his house and 2 said to Edna his wife, 'Is not this young man like my kinsman Tobit?'
Edna asked them, 'Where do you come from, friends?' 'We belong to the 3 tribe of Naphtali,' they answered, 'now in captivity at Nineveh.' 'Do you 4 know our kinsman Tobit?' she asked, and they replied, 'Yes, we do.' 'Is he well?' she said. 'He is alive and well', they answered, and Tobias added, 5
'He is my father.' Raguel jumped up and, with tears in his eyes, he kissed 6 him and said, 'God bless you, my boy, son of a good and noble father. But 7 what grievous news that so good and charitable a man has gone blind!'
He embraced Tobias his kinsman and wept; and Edna his wife and their 8 daughter Sarah also wept for Tobit. Then Raguel slaughtered a ram from the flock and made them warmly welcome.

After they had taken a bath and washed their hands, and had sat down to dinner, Tobias said to Raphael, 'Azarias, my friend, ask Raguel to give me Sarah my kinswoman.' Raguel overheard and said to the young man: 9 'Eat, drink, and be happy tonight. There is no one but yourself who should 10 have my daughter Sarah; indeed I have no right to give her to anyone else, since you are my nearest kinsman. But I must tell you the truth, my son:
I have given her in marriage to seven of our kinsmen, and they all died on 11 their wedding night. My son, eat now and drink, and may the Lord deal kindly with you both.' Tobias answered, 'I will not eat or drink anything here until you have disposed of this business of mine.' Raguel said to him, 12
'I will do so: I give her to you as the ordinance in the book of Moses prescribes. Heaven has ordained that she shall be yours. Take your kinswoman. From now on, you belong to her and she to you; she is yours for ever from this day. The Lord of heaven prosper you both this night, my son, and grant you mercy and peace.'

Raguel sent for his daughter Sarah, and when she came he took her hand 13 and gave her to Tobias, saying: 'Take her to be your wedded wife in accordance with the law and the ordinance written in the book of Moses.
Keep her and take her home to your father; and may the God of heaven keep you safe and give you peace and prosperity.' Then he sent for her 14 mother and told her to bring paper, and he wrote out a marriage contract granting Sarah to Tobias as his wife, as the law of Moses ordains. After 15 that they began to eat and drink.

Raguel called his wife and said, 'My dear, get the spare room ready and 16 take her in there.' Edna went and prepared the room as he had told her, 17 and took Sarah into it. Edna cried over her, then dried her tears and said:
'Courage, dear daughter; the Lord of heaven give you joy instead of sorrow. 18
Courage, daughter!' Then she went out.

8 When they had finished eating and drinking and were ready for bed,
2 they escorted the young man to the bridal chamber. Tobias recalled what Raphael had told him; he took the fish's liver and heart out of the bag in 3 which he kept them, and put them on the smoking incense. The smell from the fish held the demon off, and he took flight into Upper Egypt; and Raphael instantly followed him there and bound him hand and foot.

4 When they were left alone and the door was shut, Tobias rose from the bed and said to Sarah, 'Get up, my love; let us pray and beseech our Lord 5 to show us mercy and keep us safe.' She got up and they began to pray that they might be kept safe. Tobias said: 'We praise thee, O God of our 6 fathers, we praise thy name for ever and ever. Let the heavens and all thy creation praise thee for ever. Thou madest Adam, and Eve his wife to be his helper and support; and those two were the parents of the human race.
7 This was thy word: "It is not good for the man to be alone; let us make him a helper like him." I now take this my beloved to wife, not out of lust but in true marriage. Grant that she and I may find mercy and grow old 8 9 together.' They both said 'Amen', and slept through the night.

Raguel got up and summoned his servants, and they went out and dug 10 a grave. For he said, 'He may have been killed, and then we shall have to face scorn and disgrace.' When they had finished digging the grave, Raguel 11 went into the house and called his wife: 'Send one of the maidservants', he said, 'to go in and see if he is alive. If he is dead, let us bury 12 him so that no one may know.' They lit a lamp, opened the door, and sent a maidservant in; and she found them sound asleep together. She came 13 out and told them: 'He is alive and has come to no harm.'

14 Then they praised the God of heaven: 'We praise thee, O God, we praise thee with all our heart. Let men praise thee throughout all ages.
15 Praise to thee for the joy thou hast given me; the thing I feared has not happened, but thou hast shown us thy great mercy. Praise to thee for the 16 mercy thou hast shown to these two, these only children. Lord, show them mercy, keep them safe, and grant them a long life of happiness and affec-17 tion.' Then he ordered his servants to fill in the grave before dawn came.

18 He told his wife to bake a great batch of bread; he went to the herd and brought two oxen and four rams and told his servants to get them ready; 19 so they set about the preparations. He then called Tobias and said: 'You shall not stir from here for two weeks. Stay with us; let us eat and drink 20 together and cheer my daughter's heart after all her suffering. Here and now take half of all I have, and go home to your father safe and sound; and the other half will come to you both when my wife and I die. Be reassured, 21 my son, I am your father and Edna is your mother; we are as close to you as to your wife, now and always. You have nothing to fear, my son.'

9 1 2 Tobias called Raphael and said to him: 'Azarias, my friend, take four servants with you, and two camels, and make your way to Rages. Go to Gabael's house, give him the bond and collect the money, and bring him 4 with you to the wedding-feast. You know that my father will be counting the days and, if I am even one day late, it will distress him. You see what 5 Raguel has sworn, and I cannot go against his oath.' Raphael went with the four servants and the two camels to Rages in Media and lodged there with Gabael. He gave him his bond and informed him that Tobit's son Tobias had taken a wife and was inviting him to the wedding-feast. At once Gabael counted out the bags to him with their seals intact, and they put them together. They all made an early start and came to the wedding. 6 When they entered Raguel's house and found Tobias at the feast, he jumped up and greeted Gabael. With tears in his eyes Gabael blessed him and said: 'Good sir, worthy son of a worthy father, that upright and charitable man, may the Lord give Heaven's blessing to you and your wife, your father and your mother-in-law. Praise be to God that I have seen my cousin Tobias, so like his father.'

Tobias's homecoming

NOW DAY BY DAY Tobit was keeping count of the time Tobias would 10 take for his journey there and back. When the days had passed and his son had not returned, Tobit said: 'Perhaps he has been detained there. 2 Or perhaps Gabael is dead and there is no one to give him the money.' And he grew anxious. Anna his wife said: 'My child has perished. He is 3 4 no longer in the land of the living.' She began to weep and lament for her son: 'O my child, the light of my eyes, why did I let you go?' Tobit said to 5 6 her: 'Hush, do not worry, my dear; he is all right. Something has happened there to distract them. The man who went with him is one of our kinsmen and can be trusted. Do not grieve for him, my dear; he will soon be back.' But she answered: 'Be quiet! Leave me alone! Do not try to deceive me. 7 My boy is dead.' Each day she would rush out and look down the road her son had taken, and would listen to no one; and when she came indoors at sunset she could never sleep, but wept and lamented the whole night long.

The two weeks of wedding celebrations which Raguel had sworn to hold for his daughter came to an end, and Tobias went up to him and said: 'Let me be off on my journey; for I am sure that my parents are thinking they will never see me again. I beg you, father, let me go home now to my father Tobit. I have already told you how I left him.' Raguel said to Tobias: 8 'Stay, my son. Stay with me, and I will send news of you to your father.' But Tobias answered: 'No; please let me go home to my father.' Then 9 10 without further delay Raguel handed over to Tobias Sarah his bride and half of all that he possessed, male and female slaves, sheep and cattle, donkeys and camels, clothes, money, and furniture. He saw them safely 11 off and embraced Tobias, saying: 'Goodbye, my son; a safe journey to you! May the Lord of heaven give prosperity to you and Sarah your wife; and may I live to see your children.' To his daughter Sarah he said: 12 'Go to your father-in-law's house; they are now your parents as much as if you were their own daughter. Go in peace, my child; I hope to hear good news of you as long as I live.' He bade them both goodbye and sent them on their way. Edna said to Tobias: 'Child and beloved cousin, may the Lord bring you safely home, you and my daughter Sarah, and may I live long enough to see your children. In the sight of the Lord I entrust my daughter to you; do nothing to hurt her as long as you live. Go in peace, my son. From now on I am your mother and Sarah is your beloved wife. May we all be blessed with prosperity to the end of our days!' She kissed them both and 11 saw them safely off. Tobias parted from Raguel in good health and spirits, thankful to the Lord of heaven and earth, the king of all, for the success of his journey. Raguel's last words to him were: 'May the Lord give you the means to honour your parents all their lives.'

2 When they reached Caserin close to Nineveh, Raphael said: 'You know
3 how your father was when we left him; let us hurry on ahead of your wife
4 and see that the house is ready before the others arrive.' As the two of them went on together Raphael said: 'Take the fish-gall in your hand.' The dog went with the angel and Tobias, following at their heels.

5 6 Anna sat watching the road by which her son would return. She saw him coming and exclaimed to his father, 'Here he comes, your son and the man who went with him!' Before Tobias reached his father's house
7 Raphael said: 'I know for certain that his eyes will be opened. Spread the fish-gall on his eyes, and the medicine will make the white patches shrink and peel off. Your father will get his sight back and see the light of day.'
8 Anna ran forward and flung her arms round her son. 'Here you are, my boy; now I can die happy!' she cried out with tears in her eyes.

10 Tobit rose to his feet and came stumbling out through the courtyard door.
11 Tobias went up to him with the fish-gall in his hand and blew it into his father's eyes, and took him by the arm and said: 'It will be all right, father.'
12 13 Then when he had put the medicine on and applied it, using both hands he peeled off the patches from the corners of Tobit's eyes. Tobit flung his arms
14 round him and burst into tears. 'I can see you, my son, the light of my eyes!' he cried. 'Praise be to God, and praise to his great name, and to all his holy angels. May his great name rest upon us. Praised be all the angels for ever.
15 He laid his scourge on me, and now, look, I see my son Tobias!'

Tobias went in, rejoicing and praising God with all his strength. He told his father about the success of his journey, how he had brought the money with him and had married Sarah daughter of Raguel. 'She is on her 16 way,' he said, 'quite close to the city gate.' Tobit went out joyfully to meet his daughter-in-law at the gate, praising God as he went. At the sight of him passing through the city in full vigour and walking without a guide, 17 the people of Nineveh were astonished; and Tobit gave thanks to God before them all for his mercy in opening his eyes. When he met Sarah, the wife of his son Tobias, he blessed her and said to her: 'Come in, my daughter, and welcome. Praise be to your God who has brought you to us, my daughter. Blessings on your father, and on my son Tobias, and blessings on you, my daughter. Come into your home, and may health, blessings, and joy be yours; come in, my daughter.' It was a day of joy for all the Jews 18 in Nineveh; and Ahikar and Nadab, Tobit's cousins, came to share his happiness.

12 When the marriage-feast was over, Tobit called Tobias and said, 'My son, see that you pay the man who went with you, and give him something extra, over and above his wages.' Tobias said: 'Father, how much shall I pay him? It would not hurt me to give him half the money he and 3 I brought back. He has kept me safe, cured my wife, helped me bring the money, and healed you. How much extra shall I pay him?' Tobit replied, 4

 'It is right, my son, for him to be given half of all that he has brought with 4 him.' So Tobias sent for him and said, 'Half of all that you have brought 5 with you is yours for your wages; take it, and fare you well.'

Then Raphael called them both aside and said to them: 'Praise God and 6 thank him before all men living for the good he has done you, so that they 6 may sing hymns of praise to his name. Proclaim to all the world what God 7 has done, and pay him honour; do not be slow to give him thanks. A 7 king's secret ought to be kept, but the works of God should be acknow- 7 ledged publicly. Acknowledge them, therefore, and pay him honour. Do 8 good, and evil shall not touch you. Better prayer with sincerity, and alms- 8 giving with righteousness, than wealth with wickedness. Better give alms 8 than hoard up gold. Almsgiving preserves a man from death and wipes out 9 all sin. Givers of alms will enjoy long life; but sinners and wrong-doers are 10 their own worst enemies.

'I will tell you the whole truth; I will hide nothing from you. Indeed I 11 told you just now when I said, "A king's secret ought to be kept, but the 11 works of God should be publicly honoured." When you and Sarah prayed, 12 it was I who brought your prayers into the glorious presence of the Lord; 12 and so too whenever you buried the dead. That day when you got up from 13 your dinner without hesitation to go and bury the corpse, I was sent to test 13 you; and again God sent me to cure both you and Sarah your daughter-in- 14 law at the same time. I am Raphael, one of the seven angels who stand in 15 attendance on the Lord and enter his glorious presence.'

The two men were shaken, and prostrated themselves in awe. But he 16 17 said to them: 'Do not be afraid, all is well; praise God for ever. It is no 18 thanks to me that I have been with you; it was the will of God. Worship 18 him all your life long, sing his praise. Take note that I ate no food; what 19 appeared to you was a vision. And now praise the Lord, give thanks to God 20 here on earth; I am ascending to him who sent me. Write down all these 21 things that have happened to you.' He then ascended, and when they rose 21 to their feet, he was no longer to be seen. They sang hymns of praise to God, 22 giving him thanks for these great deeds he had done when his angel appeared to them.

TOBIT said:

13

'Praise to the ever-living God and to his kingdom.
 He punishes and he shows mercy;
 he brings men down to the grave below,
 and up from the great destruction.
 Nothing can escape his power.
 Give him thanks, men of Israel, in the presence of the nations, 3 for he has scattered you among them;
 there he has shown you his greatness. 4 Exalt him in the sight of every living creature, for he is our Lord and God;
 he is our Father and our God for ever.

- 5 He will punish you for your wickedness,
and he will show mercy to you all,
gathering you from among all the nations
wherever you have been scattered.
- 6 When you turn to him with all your heart and soul and act in loyal obedience to him, then he will turn to you and hide his face from you no longer.
Consider now the deeds he has done for you,
and give him thanks with full voice;
praise the righteous Lord and exalt the King of ages. ^a
- 10 'Your sanctuary ^b shall be rebuilt for you with rejoicing.
May he give happiness to all your exiles and cherish all who mourn and your descendants for ever.
- 11 Your light shall shine brightly to all the ends of the earth.
Many nations shall come to you from afar,
from all the corners of the earth to your holy name;
they shall bring gifts in their hands for the King of heaven.
In you endless generations shall utter their joy;
the name of the chosen city shall endure for ever and ever.
- 12 There shall be a curse upon all who speak harshly to you,
upon all who destroy you and pull down your walls,
upon all who demolish your towers and burn your houses;
but blessings shall be for evermore upon those who hold you in reverence.
- 13 Come then, be joyful for the righteous,
for they shall all be gathered together and shall praise the eternal Lord.
- 14 How happy shall they be who love you and rejoice in your prosperity, happy all who grieve for you in your afflictions;
they shall rejoice over you and for ever be witness of your joy.
- 15 My soul, praise the Lord, the great king,
16 for Jerusalem shall be built as a city for him to dwell in for ever.

^a Some witnesses add

- In the land of my exile I give thanks to him and declare his might and greatness to a sinful nation.
Turn, you sinners, and do what is right in his eyes;
who knows whether he may not welcome you and show you mercy?
- 7 I will exalt my God
and rejoice in the King of heaven.
- 8 Let all men tell of his majesty and give him thanks in Jerusalem.
- 9 O Jerusalem, the holy city,
he will punish you for what your sons have done,
but he will again show mercy on the righteous.
- 10 Thank the good Lord and praise the King of ages.

^b Or home.

How happy I shall be when the remnant of my descendants shall see your splendour

and give thanks to the King of heaven.

The gates of Jerusalem shall be built of sapphire and emerald, and all your walls of precious stones.

The towers of Jerusalem shall be built of gold, their battlements of the finest gold.

The streets of Jerusalem shall be paved with garnets and jewels of 17 Ophir.

The gates of Jerusalem shall sing hymns of joy 18

and all her houses shall say Alleluia,

praise to the God of Israel!

Blessed by him, they shall bless his holy name for ever and ever.'

SO ENDED Tobias's thanksgiving. He died peacefully at the age of a 14 hundred and twelve, and was given honourable burial in Nineveh. He was 2 sixty-two years old when his eyes were injured, and after he recovered his sight he lived in prosperity, doing his acts of charity and never ceasing to praise God and proclaim his majesty.

When he was dying he sent for his son Tobias, and gave him these 3 instructions: 'My son, you must take your children and make your escape 4 to Media, for I believe God's word against Nineveh spoken by Nahum.
It will all come true; everything will happen to Asshur and Nineveh that was spoken by the prophets of Israel whom God sent. Not a word of it will fall short; everything will be fulfilled when the time comes. It will be safer in Media than in Assyria and Babylon; I know, I am convinced, that all God's words will be fulfilled. It will be so; not one of them will fail. Our countrymen who live in Israel will all be scattered and carried off into captivity out of that good land, and the whole territory of Israel laid waste.
Samaria and Jerusalem will lie waste, and for a time the house of God will be in mourning; it will be burnt to the ground.

'Then God will have mercy on them again and will bring them back to 5 the land of Israel. They will rebuild the house of God, but not as it was before, not until the time of fulfilment comes. Then they will all return from their captivity and rebuild Jerusalem gloriously; then indeed the house will be built in her as the prophets of Israel foretold. All the nations 6 of the world will be converted to the true worship of God; they will abandon their idols which led them astray into falsehood, and praise the 7 eternal God according to his law. All the Israelites who survive at that time and are firm in their loyalty to God will be brought together; they will come to Jerusalem to take possession of the land of Abraham, and live there for ever in safety. Those who love God in truth will rejoice; and sinners and wrong-doers will disappear from the earth. Now, my children, 8
I give you this command: serve God in truth and do what pleases him.
Train your children to do what is right and give alms, to keep God in mind 9 at all times and praise his name in sincerity with all their strength.

'And now, my son, you must leave Nineveh. Do not stay here; once 10 you have laid your mother in the grave with me, do not spend another night within the city boundaries. For I see that the place is full of wickedness and shameless dishonesty. My son, think what Nadab did to Ahikar who brought him up: he forced him to hide in a living grave. Ahikar survived to see God requite the dishonour done to him; he came out into the light of day, but Nadab passed into eternal darkness for his attempt to kill Ahikar. Because I gave alms, Ahikar escaped from the fatal trap Nadab 11 set for him, and Nadab fell into the trap himself and was destroyed. So, my children, see what comes of almsgiving, and see what comes of wickedness—death. But now my strength is failing.⁷

Then they laid him on his bed, and he died; and they gave him honourable burial. When his mother died, Tobias buried her beside his father. He 12 and his wife went away to Media and settled at Ecbatana with his father-in-law Raguel. He honoured and cared for his wife's parents in their old 13 age. He buried them at Ecbatana in Media, and he inherited the estate of Raguel as well as that of his father Tobit. He died greatly respected at the 14 age of one hundred and seventeen. He lived long enough to hear of the destruction of Nineveh by Ahasuerus king of Media and to see his prisoners 15 of war brought from there into Media. So he praised God for all that he had done to the people of Nineveh and Asshur; and before he died he rejoiced over the fate of Nineveh and praised the Lord God who lives for ever and ever.

Amen.

JUDITH

The Assyrian invasion

1 IN THE TWELFTH YEAR of the reign of Nebuchadnezzar,
 2 who reigned over the Assyrians from his capital, Nineveh, Arphaxad
 2 was ruling the Medes from Ecbatana. He it was who encircled Ecbatana with a wall built of hewn stones which were four and a half feet thick and nine feet long.^a He made the wall a hundred and five feet high and seventy-3 five feet thick, and at the city gates he set up towers a hundred and fifty feet 4 high with foundations ninety feet thick; and he made the gates a hundred and five feet high and sixty feet wide to allow his army to march out in full 5 force with his infantry in formation. It was in those days, then, that King Nebuchadnezzar waged war against King Arphaxad in the great plain on 6 the borders of Ragau. Nebuchadnezzar was opposed by all the inhabitants of the hill-country, by all those who lived along the Euphrates, the Tigris, and the Hydaspes; and, on the plain, by Arioch king of Elam; and many tribes of the Chelodites joined forces with them.

7 Then Nebuchadnezzar king of Assyria sent a summons to all the inhabitants of Persia, and to all who lived in the west: the inhabitants of Cilicia and Damascus, Lebanon and Antilebanon, all who lived near the coast,

^a In verses 2-4 the measurements are given in cubits in the Greek.

the peoples in Carmel and Gilead, Upper Galilee, and the great plain of Esdraelon, all who were in Samaria and its towns, and on the west of Jordan as far as Jerusalem, Betane, Chelus, Cadesh, and the frontier^a of Egypt, those who lived in Tahpanhes, Rameses, and the whole land of Goshen as far as Tanis and Memphis, and all the inhabitants of Egypt as far as the borders of Ethiopia. But the entire region disregarded the summons of Nebuchadnezzar king of Assyria and did not join him in the war. They were not afraid of him, for he seemed to them to stand alone^b and unsupported; and they treated his envoys with contempt and sent them back empty-handed.

This roused Nebuchadnezzar to fury against the whole region, and he swore by his throne and his kingdom that he would have his revenge on all the territories of Cilicia, Damascus, and Syria, and put their inhabitants to the sword, along with the Moabites, the Ammonites, and the people in all Judaea and in Egypt as far as the shores of the two seas.

In the seventeenth year of his reign he marshalled his forces against King Arphaxad and defeated him in battle, routing his entire army, cavalry, chariots, and all. He occupied his towns; and when he reached Ecbatana he captured its towers, looted its bazaars, and turned its splendour to abject ruin. He caught Arphaxad in the mountains of Ragau, speared him through, and so made an end of him. Then he returned with his spoils to Nineveh, he and his combined forces, an immense host of warriors. There he rested and feasted with his army for four months.

In the eighteenth year, on the twenty-second day of the first month, a proposal was made in the palace of Nebuchadnezzar king of Assyria to carry out his threat of vengeance on the whole region. Assembling all his officers and nobles, the king laid before them his personal decision about the region and declared his intention of putting an end to its disaffection.
They resolved that everyone who had not obeyed his summons should be put to death.

When his plans were completed,^c Nebuchadnezzar king of Assyria summoned Holophernes, his commander-in-chief, who was second only to himself, and said to him, 'This is the decree of the Great King, lord of all the earth: Directly you leave my presence, you are to take under your command an army of seasoned troops, a hundred and twenty thousand infantry with a force of twelve thousand cavalry, and march out against all the peoples of the west who have dared to disobey my command. Tell them to have ready their offering of earth and water, for I am coming to vent my wrath on them. Their whole land will be smothered by my army, and I will give them up to be plundered by my troops. Their dead will fill the valleys, and every stream and river will be choked with corpses; and I will send them into captivity to the ends of the whole earth. Now go and occupy all their territory for me. If they surrender to you, hold them for me until the time comes to punish them. But show no mercy to those who resist; let them be slaughtered and plundered throughout the whole region.
By my life and my royal power I swear: I have spoken and I will be as good

^a Literally river.

13 as my word. As for you, do not disobey a single one of my orders, but see that you carry them out exactly as I your sovereign have commanded you.
Do this without delay.'

14 After leaving his sovereign's presence, Holophernes assembled all the 15 marshals, generals, and officers of the Assyrian army, and mustered picked 16 men, as the king had commanded, a hundred and twenty thousand infantry 17 and twelve thousand mounted archers, drawing them up in battle order.
18 He took an immense number of camels, asses, and mules for their baggage, 19 innumerable sheep, oxen, and goats for provisions, and ample rations for 20 every man, as well as a great quantity of gold and silver from the royal palace. Then he set out with all his army to go ahead of King Nebuchadnezzar and to overrun the entire region to the west with chariots, cavalry, and picked infantry. Along with them went a motley host like a swarm of locusts, countless as the dust of the earth.

21 From Nineveh they marched for three days towards the plain of Bectileth, and encamped beside Bectileth near the mountain north of Upper 22 Cilicia. From there, Holophernes advanced into the hill-country with his 23 whole army, infantry, cavalry, and chariots. He devastated Put and Lud, and plundered all the people of Rassis, and the Ishmaelites on the edge of 24 the desert south of the land of the Cheleans. Then he followed^a the Euphrates and traversed Mesopotamia, destroying all the fortified towns 25 along the river Abron as far as the sea. He occupied the territory of Cilicia and cut down all who resisted him. Then he came south to the borders of 26 Japheth fronting Arabia. He surrounded the Midianites, burnt their 27 encampments, and plundered their sheepfolds. At the time of wheat harvest he went down to the plain of Damascus, burnt their crops, exterminated their flocks and herds, sacked their towns, laid waste their 28 fields, and put all their young men to the sword. Fear and dread of him fell on all the inhabitants of the coast at Tyre and Sidon, of Sur and Okina, and of Jemnaan; the people of Azotus and Ascalon were terrified of him.

3 1 2 They sent envoys to sue for peace, who said: 'We are servants of the Great King Nebuchadnezzar, we lie prostrate before you; do with us as 3 you please. Our buildings, our territory, our wheat fields, our flocks and herds and every sheepfold in our encampments, all are yours to do with as 4 you wish. Our towns and their inhabitants are subject to you; come and deal with them as you think fit.'

5 6 When the envoys came to Holophernes with this message, he went down to the coast with his army and garrisoned all the fortified towns, taking 7 from them picked men as auxiliaries. Both there and in all the surrounding 8 country he was welcomed with garlands, dancing, and tambourines. He demolished all their sanctuaries^b and cut down their sacred groves, for he had been commissioned to destroy all the gods of the land, so that Nebuchadnezzar alone should be worshipped by every nation and invoked as a god by men of every tribe and tongue.

9 Holophernes then advanced towards Esdraelon, near Dothan, which 10 faces the great ridge of Judaea, and encamped between Geba and Scytho-polis, where he remained for a whole month to collect supplies for his army.

^a Or crossed.^b So one Vs.; Gk. borders.

WHEN THE ISRAELITES who lived in Judaea heard of all that had been done to the nations by Holophernes, the commander-in-chief of Nebuchadnezzar king of Assyria, and how he had plundered and totally destroyed all their temples, they were terrified at his approach. They were in great alarm for Jerusalem and for the temple of the Lord their God. For they had just returned from captivity, and it was only recently that the people had been re-united in Judaea, and the sacred vessels, the temple, and the altar sanctified after their profanation. So they sent out a warning to the whole of Samaria, Cona, Beth-horon, Belmain and Jericho, Choba and Aesora and the valley of Salem, and occupied the tops of all the high hills. They fortified the villages on them and laid up stores of food in preparation for war; for their fields had just been harvested. Joakim, who was high priest in Jerusalem at the time, wrote to the people of Bethulia and Bethomesthaim, which is opposite Esdraelon facing the plain near Dothan. He ordered them to occupy the passes into the hill-country, because they controlled access to Judaea, and it was easy to hold up an advancing army, for the approach was only wide enough for two men. The Israelites obeyed the orders of the high priest Joakim and the senate of all Israel in Jerusalem. Fervently they sent up a cry to God, every man of Israel, and fervently they humbled themselves before him. They put on sackcloth—they themselves, their wives, their children, their livestock, and every resident foreigner, hired labourer, and slave—and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, men, women, and children, prostrated themselves in front of the sanctuary, and, with ashes on their heads, spread out their sackcloth before the Lord. They draped the altar in sackcloth, and with one voice they earnestly implored the God of Israel not to allow their children to be captured, their wives carried off, their ancestral cities destroyed, and the temple profaned and dishonoured, to the delight of the heathen. The Lord heard their prayer and pitied their distress.

For many days the whole population of Judaea and Jerusalem fasted before the sanctuary of the Lord Almighty. Joakim the high priest and the priests who stood in the presence of the Lord, and all who served in the temple, wore sackcloth when they offered the regular burnt-offering and the votive and freewill offerings of the people; and with ashes on their turbans they cried aloud to the Lord to look favourably on the whole house of Israel.

When it was reported to Holophernes, the Assyrian commander-in-chief, that the Israelites had prepared for war, and that they had closed the passes in the hill-country, fortified all the heights, and dug pitfalls in the plains, he was furious. He summoned all the rulers of Moab, the Ammonite commanders, and all the governors of the coastal region, and said to them, 'Tell me, you Canaanites, what nation is this that lives in the hill-country? What towns do they inhabit? How big is their army? What gives them their power and strength? Who is the king that commands their forces? Why are they the only people of the west who have refused to come and meet me?'

Then Achior, the leader of all the Ammonites, said to him, 'My lord, if you will allow your servant to speak, I will tell you the truth about this

- nation that lives in the hill-country near here; and no lie shall pass my lips.
- 6 7 They are descended from the Chaldaeans; and at one time they settled in Mesopotamia, because they refused to worship the gods their fathers 8 had worshipped in Chaldaea. They abandoned the ways of their ancestors and worshipped the God of Heaven, the god whom they now acknowledged.
9 When the Chaldaeans drove them out from the presence of their gods, they fled to Mesopotamia, where they lived for a long time. Then their god told them to leave their new home and go on to Canaan. They settled there and acquired great wealth in gold, silver, and livestock.
- 10 'Because of a famine which spread over the whole of Canaan, they went down to Egypt and lived there as long as they were supplied with food.
11 While in Egypt, they multiplied so greatly that their numbers could not be reckoned, and the king of Egypt turned against them. He exploited them 12 by setting them to hard labour making bricks, and he reduced them to abject slavery. They cried out to their god, and he inflicted incurable 13 plagues on the whole of Egypt. So the Egyptians turned them out; and 14 their god dried up the Red Sea for them and led them on to Sinai and Cadesh-barnea. Then they drove out all the inhabitants of the wilderness 15 and settled in the land of the Amorites, and they destroyed all the people of Heshbon by force of arms. After that they crossed the Jordan and occu-16 pied all the hill-country, driving out the Canaanites, the Perizzites, the Jebusites, the Shechemites, and all the Gergashites. There they settled for a long time.
- 17 'As long as they did not sin against their god, they prospered; for theirs 18 is a god who hates wickedness. But when they left the path he had laid down for them, they suffered heavy losses in many wars and were carried captive to a foreign country; the temple of their god was razed to the 19 ground, and their towns were occupied by their enemies. But now that they have returned to their god, they have come back from the places where they had been dispersed, and have taken possession of Jerusalem, where their sanctuary is, and have settled in the hill-country, because it was uninhabited.
- 20 'Now, my lord and master, if these people are guilty of an error and are sinning against their god, and if we find out that they have committed this 21 offence, then we may go and make war on them. But if these people have committed no wickedness, leave them alone, my lord, for fear the god they serve should protect them and we become the laughing-stock of the 22 world.' When Achior stopped speaking there were protests from all those who stood round the tent. Holophernes' officers and all the people from the coastal region and from Moab demanded that Achior should be cut to 23 pieces. 'We are not going to be afraid of the Israelites,' they said, 'a people quite incapable of putting an effective army in the field. Let us go ahead, 24 Lord Holophernes; your great army will swallow them whole.'
- 6 When the hubbub among the men around the council had subsided, Holophernes, the Assyrian commander-in-chief, said to Achior and all the 2 Ammonites, in the presence of the assembled foreigners: 'And who are you, Achior, you and your Ammonite mercenaries, to play the prophet among us as you have done today, telling us not to make war against the people of Israel because their god will protect them? What god is there but Nebuchadnezzar? He will exert his power and wipe them off the face of the earth; and their god will not rescue them. We who serve Nebuchadnezzar will strike them all down as if they were only one man. They will not be able to stand up to the weight of our cavalry; we shall overwhelm them. Their mountains will be drenched with blood, and their plains filled with their dead. They cannot stand their ground against us; they will be completely wiped out. This is the decree of King Nebuchadnezzar, lord of the whole earth. He has spoken; and what he has said will be made good. As for you, Achior, you Ammonite mercenary, the words you have spoken today are treason, so from today you shall not see my face again until I have taken vengeance on this brood of runaways from Egypt. But when I come back, the warriors of my bodyguard will run you through and add you to their victims. My men are going to take you away now to the hill-country and leave you in one of the towns in the passes. You will not die until you share their fate. If you are so confident that they will not fall into our hands, you need not look downcast. I have spoken; and nothing that I have said will fail to come true.'

Then Holophernes ordered his men, who were standing by in his tent, to seize Achior, take him off to Bethulia, and hand him over to the Israelites. So they seized him and took him outside the camp to the plain, and from there into the hill-country, until they arrived at the springs below Bethulia. When the men of the town saw them, they picked up their weapons and came out of the town to the top of the hill; then all the slingers pelted the enemy with stones to prevent them from coming up. But they slipped through under cover of the hill, tied Achior up and left him lying at the foot of it, and went back to their master. When the Israelites came down from the town and found him there, they untied him and took him into Bethulia, where they brought him before the town magistrates then in office, Ozias son of Mica, of the tribe of Simeon, and Chabris son of Gothoniel, and Charmis son of Melchiel. The magistrates summoned all the elders of the town; and all the young men and women came running to the assembly. When Achior had been brought before the people, Ozias asked him what had happened. He answered by telling them all that had taken place in Holophernes' council, what he himself had said in the presence of the Assyrian commanders, and how Holophernes had boasted of what he would do to Israel. Then the people prostrated themselves in worship and cried out to God: 'O Lord, God of heaven, mark their arrogance; pity our people in their humiliation; show favour this day to those who are thy own.' Then they reassured Achior and commended him warmly. Ozias took him from the assembly to his own house, and gave a feast for the elders; and all that night they invoked the help of the God of Israel.

THE NEXT DAY Holophernes ordered his whole army and all his allies to strike camp and march on Bethulia, seize the passes into the hill-country, and make war on the Israelites. So the whole force set out that day, an army of a hundred and seventy thousand infantry and twelve thousand cavalry, not counting the baggage train of the infantry, an immense host.

3 They encamped in the valley near Bethulia, beside the spring; and their camp extended in breadth towards Dothan as far as Belbaim, and in length 4 from Bethulia to Cyamon which faces Esdraelon. When the Israelites saw their numbers they said to each other in great alarm, 'These men will strip 5 the whole country bare; the high mountains, the valleys, and the hills will never be able to bear the burden of them.' Then each man stood to arms; and they lit the beacons on the towers and remained on guard all that night.

6 On the following day Holofernes led out all his cavalry in full view of 7 the Israelites in Bethulia, and reconnoitred the approaches to their town.
He inspected the springs and seized them; and when he had stationed 8 detachments of soldiers there, he returned to his army. Then all the rulers of the Edomites and all the leaders of Moab and the commanders from the 9 coastal region came to him and said, 'Listen to our advice, Lord Holo-10 phernes, and save your army from a crushing defeat. These Israelites do not trust in their spears but in the height of the mountains where they live; for it is no easy task to get up to the tops of these mountains of theirs.
11 Now, Lord Holofernes, avoid fighting a pitched battle with them, and 12 you will not lose a single man. Remain in your camp and keep your men in their quarters; but let your servants take possession of the spring at the 13 foot of the hill, for that is where all the townspeople of Bethulia get their water. When they are dying of thirst they will surrender the town. Meanwhile, we and all our people will go up to the tops of the neighbouring hills 14 and camp there to see that not a man gets away from the town. They and their wives and children will waste away with famine; and before the sword 15 reaches them, their streets will be strewn with their corpses. So you will make them pay heavily for rebelling against you, instead of receiving you 16 peaceably.' Holofernes and all his staff approved this plan; and he gave 17 orders that it should be carried out. The Moabite force moved forward in company with five thousand Assyrians and encamped in the valley, where 18 they seized the springs which were the Israelites' water-supply. Then the Edomites and Ammonites went up and encamped in the hill-country opposite Dothan, and sent some of their number south-east^a in the direction of Egrebel, which is near Chus on the Mochmur ravine. The rest of the Assyrian army encamped on the plain. They filled the entire countryside, their tents and baggage train forming an immense encampment, for they were a vast host.

19 Then the Israelites cried out to the Lord their God. Their courage failed, because all their enemies had surrounded them and there was no 20 way of escape. The whole Assyrian army, infantry, cavalry, and chariots, kept them blockaded for thirty-four days. The citizens of Bethulia came 21 to the end of their household supplies of water. The cisterns too were running dry; drinking-water was so strictly rationed that there was never 22 a day when their needs were satisfied. The children were lifeless, the women and young men faint with thirst. They collapsed in the streets and gateways from sheer exhaustion.

23 Then all the people, young men, women, and children, gathered round

^a Or south and east.

Ozias and the magistrates of the town, shouting loudly. In the presence of the elders they said: 'May God judge between us, for you have done us a great wrong in not coming to terms with the Assyrians. Now we have no one to help us. God has sold us into their power; they will find us dead of thirst, and the ground strewn with our corpses. Surrender to them; let Holophernes' people and his army sack the town. It is better for us to be taken prisoner; for even as slaves we shall still be alive, and shall not have to watch our babies dying before our eyes, and our wives and children at their last gasp. We call heaven and earth to witness, we call our God, the Lord of our fathers, to witness against you—the God who is punishing us for our sins and for the sins of our fathers. We pray that he may not let our forebodings come true this day.' Then the whole assembly broke into loud lamentation and cried to the Lord God. Ozias said to them, 'Courage, my friends! Let us hold out for five more days; by that time the Lord our God may show us his mercy again. Surely he will not finally desert us. But if by the end of that time no help has reached us, then I will do what you ask.' Then he dismissed the men to their various posts; and they went off to the walls and towers of the town. The women and children he sent indoors. Throughout the town there was deep dejection.

Judith kills Holophernes

NEWS OF WHAT WAS HAPPENING reached Judith, daughter of Merari, son of Ox, son of Joseph, son of Oziel, son of Helkias, son of Elias, son of Chelkias, son of Eliab, son of Nathanael, son of Salamiel, son of Sarasadae, son of Israel. Her husband Manasses, who belonged to her own tribe and clan, had died at the time of barley harvest. While he was out in the fields supervising the binding of the sheaves, he got sunstroke, took to his bed, and died in Bethulia his native town; and they buried him beside his ancestors in the field between Dothan and Balamon. For three years and four months Judith had lived at home as a widow; she had a shelter erected on the roof of her house; she put on sackcloth and always wore mourning. After she became a widow she fasted every day except sabbath eve, the sabbath itself, the eve of the new moon, the new moon, and the Israelite feasts and days of public rejoicing. She was a very beautiful and attractive woman. Her husband Manasses had left her gold and silver, male and female slaves, livestock and land, and she lived on her estate. No one spoke ill of her, for she was a very devout woman.

When Judith heard of the shameful attack which the people had made upon Ozias the magistrate, because they were demoralized by the shortage of water, and how he had sworn to surrender the town to the Assyrians after five days, she sent her maid who had charge of all her property to ask Ozias, Chabris, and Charmis, the elders of the town, to come and see her. When they arrived she said to them: 'Listen to me, magistrates of Bethulia. You had no right to speak as you did to the people today, and to bind yourselves by oath before God to surrender the town to our enemies if the Lord sends no relief within so many days. Who are you to test God at a time like

13 this, and openly set yourselves above him? You are putting the Lord 14 Almighty to the proof. You will never understand! You cannot plumb the depths of the human heart or understand the way a man's mind works;
how then can you fathom man's Maker? How can you know God's mind, and grasp his thought? No, my friends, do not rouse the anger of the Lord 15 our God. For even if he does not choose to help us within the five days, he is free to come to our rescue at any time he pleases, or equally to let us be 16 destroyed by our enemies. It is not for you to impose conditions on the Lord our God; God will not yield to threats or be bargained with like a 17 mere man. So we must wait for him to deliver us, and in the mean time appeal to him for help. If he sees fit he will hear us.

18 'There is not one of our tribes or clans, districts or towns, that worships man-made gods today, or has done so within living memory. This did 19 happen in days gone by, and that was why our ancestors were abandoned to their enemies to be slaughtered and pillaged, and great was their down-20 fall. But we acknowledge no god but the Lord, and so we are confident that he will not spurn us or any of our race. For our capture will mean the 21 loss of all Judaea, and our temple will be looted; and God will hold us responsible for its desecration. The slaughter and deportation of our fellow-22 countrymen, and the laying waste of the land we inherited, will bring his judgement upon us wherever we become slaves among the Gentiles. Our 23 masters will regard us with disgust and contempt. There will be no happy ending to our servitude, no return to favour; the Lord our God will use it to dishonour us.

24 'So then, my friends, let us set an example to our fellow-countrymen; for their lives depend on us, and the fate of the sanctuary, the temple, and 25 the altar rests with us. We have every reason to give thanks to the Lord our God; he is putting us to the test as he did our ancestors. Remember how he 26 dealt with Abraham and how he tested Isaac, and what happened to Jacob in Syrian Mesopotamia when he was working as a shepherd for his uncle 27 Laban. He is not subjecting us to the fiery ordeal by which he tested their loyalty, or taking vengeance on us: it is for discipline that the Lord scourges his worshippers.'

28 Ozias replied, 'You are quite right; everything you say is true, and no 29 one can deny it. This is not the first time that you have given proof of your wisdom. Throughout your life we have all recognized your good sense and 30 the soundness of your judgement. But the people were desperate with thirst and compelled us to make this promise and to pledge ourselves by an 31 oath we may not break. Now, you are a devout woman; pray for us and ask the Lord to send rain to fill our cisterns, and then we shall no longer faint for lack of water.'

32 'Hear what I have to say', replied Judith. 'I am going to do a deed which 33 will be remembered among our people for all generations. Be at the gate tonight yourselves, and I will go out with my maid. Before the day on which you have promised to surrender the town to our enemies, the Lord 34 will deliver Israel by my hand. But do not try to find out my plan; I will not tell you until I have accomplished what I mean to do.' Ozias and the 35 magistrates said to her, 'Go with our blessing, and may God be with you to take vengeance on our enemies.' So they left the roof-shelter and returned to their posts. 36

Then Judith prostrated herself, put ashes on her head, and uncovered 9
the sackcloth she was wearing; and at the time when the evening incense was being offered in the temple in Jerusalem, she cried to the Lord: 'O 2 Lord, the God of my forefather Simeon! Thou didst put in his hand a sword to take vengeance on those foreigners who had stripped off a virgin's veil to defile her, uncovered her thighs to shame her, and polluted her womb to dishonour her. Thou didst say, "It shall not be done"; yet they did it. So thou didst give up their rulers to be slain, and their bed, which blushed for their treachery, to be stained with blood; beneath thy stroke slaves fell dead upon the bodies of princes, and princes upon their thrones. 3 Thou didst give up their wives as booty, and their daughters as captives, and all their spoils to be divided among thy beloved sons, who, aflame with zeal for thy cause and aghast at the pollution of their blood, called on thee to help them. O God, thou art my God, hear now a widow's prayer. All 5 that happened then, and all that happened before and after, thou didst accomplish. The things that are now, and are yet to be, thou hast designed; and what thou didst design has come to pass. The things thou hast foreordained present themselves and say, "We are here." Thy ways are prepared beforehand: foreknowledge determines thy judgement. 6

"Thou seest the Assyrians assembled in their strength, proud of their horses and riders, boasting of the power of their infantry, and putting their faith in shield and javelin, bow and sling. They do not know that thou art the Lord who stamps out wars; the Lord is thy name. Shatter their strength 8 by thy power and crush their might in thy anger. For they have planned to desecrate thy sanctuary, to pollute the dwelling-place of thy glorious name, and to strike down the horns of thy altar with the sword. Mark 9 their arrogance, pour thy wrath on their heads, and give to me, widow as I am, the strength to achieve my end. Use the deceit upon my lips to strike them dead, the slave with the ruler, the ruler with the servant; shatter their pride by a woman's hand. For thy might lies not in numbers nor thy sovereign power in strong men; but thou art the God of the humble, the help of the poor, the support of the weak, the protector of the desperate, the deliverer of the hopeless. Hear, O hear, thou God of my forefather, 12 God of Israel's heritage, ruler of heaven and earth, creator of the waters, king of all thy creation, hear thou my prayer. Grant that my deceitful words may wound and bruise them; for they have cruel designs against thy covenant, thy sacred house, the summit of Zion, and thy children's home, their own possession. Give thy whole nation and every tribe the knowledge that thou alone art God, God of all power and might, and that thou and thou alone art Israel's shield.' 14

When Judith had ended her prayer, prostrate before the God of Israel, 10 1-2 she rose, called her maid, and went down into the house, where she was accustomed to spend her sabbaths and festivals. She removed the sackcloth she was wearing and took off her widow's weeds; then she washed, 3 and anointed herself with rich perfume. She did her hair, put on a headband, and dressed in her gayest clothes, which she used to wear when her

4 husband Manasses was alive. She put on sandals and anklets, bracelets and rings, her ear-rings and all her ornaments, and made herself very 5 attractive, so as to catch the eye of any man who might see her. She gave her maid a skin of wine and a flask of oil; then she filled a bag with roasted grain, cakes of dried figs, and the finest bread, packed everything up, and gave it all to her maid to carry.

6 They went out towards the gate of Bethulia and found Ozias standing 7 there, with Chabris and Charmis the elders of the town. When they saw Judith transformed in appearance and quite differently dressed, they were 8 filled with admiration of her beauty, and said to her, 'The God of our fathers grant you favour and fulfil your plans, so that Israel may triumph 9 and Jerusalem may be exalted!' Judith bowed to God in worship. Then she said to them, 'Order the gate to be opened for me, and I will go out to accomplish all that you say.' They ordered the young men to open the 10 gate as she had asked. When they had done so, Judith went out, accompanied by her maid; and the men of the town watched her until she had gone down the hill-side and crossed the valley, and then they lost sight of her.

11 The women went straight across the valley and were met by an Assyrian outpost; they seized Judith and questioned her: 'What is your nationality?
12 Where have you come from? Where are you going?' 'I am a Hebrew,' she replied; 'but I am running away from my people, because they are going to 13 fall into your hands and be devoured. I am on my way to Holophernes, your commander-in-chief, with reliable information. I will show him a route by which he can gain command of the entire hill-country without losing a single man.'

14 As the men listened to her story they looked at her face and were amazed 15 at her beauty. 'You have saved your life', they said, 'by coming down at once to see our master. Go to his tent straight away. Some of us will escort 16 you and hand you over to him. When you are in his presence, do not be afraid; just tell him what you have told us, and he will treat you kindly.'
17 They detailed a hundred of their number to accompany her and her maid, and they brought the two women to Holophernes' tent.

18 AS THE NEWS of her arrival spread from tent to tent, men came running from all parts of the camp. They gathered round her as she stood outside 19 Holophernes' tent waiting until he had been told about her. Her wonderful beauty made them think that the Israelites must be a wonderful people.
They said to each other, 'Who can despise a nation which has such women as this? We had better not leave a man of them alive, for if they get away they will be able to outfit the whole world.'

20 Then Holophernes' bodyguard and all his attendants came out and took 21 her into the tent. He was resting on his bed under a mosquito-net of purple 22 interwoven with gold, emeralds, and precious stones. When Judith was announced he came out into the front part of the tent, with silver lamps 23 carried before him. He and his attendants were all amazed at the beauty of her face as she stood before them. She prostrated herself and did obei-sance to him; but his slaves raised her up.

'Take heart, madam,' said Holophernes; 'do not be afraid. I have never harmed anyone who chose to serve Nebuchadnezzar, king of all the earth. I should never have raised my spear against your people in the hill-country if they had not insulted me; they brought it on themselves. Now tell me why you have run away from them and joined us. By coming here you have saved your life. Take heart! You are in no danger tonight or in the future; no one will harm you. You will enjoy the good treatment which is given to the subjects of my master King Nebuchadnezzar.'

Judith replied, 'My lord, grant your slave a hearing and listen to what I have to say to you. The information I am giving you tonight is the truth. If you follow my advice, God will do some great thing through you, and my lord will not fail to attain his ends. By the life of Nebuchadnezzar, king of all the earth, and by the living might of him who sent you to bring order to all creatures, I swear: not only do men serve him, thanks to you, but wild animals also, cattle, and birds, will owe their lives to your power as long as Nebuchadnezzar and his dynasty reign.^a We have heard how wise and clever you are. You are known throughout the world as the man of ability unrivalled in the whole empire, of powerful intelligence and amazing skill in the art of war. We know about the speech that Achior made in your council, because the men of Bethulia rescued him, and he told them what he had said to you. Do not disregard what he said, my lord and master, but give full weight to his words. They are true. No punishment ever falls on our race and the sword does not subdue them, except when they sin against their God. But now, my lord, you are not to be thwarted and cheated of success, for they are doomed to die. Sin has them in its power, and when they do wrong they will arouse their God's anger. Because they have run out of food and their water-supply is low, they have decided to lay hands on their cattle; they mean to consume everything that God by his laws has prohibited as food; and they have resolved to use up the first-fruits of the grain and the tithes of wine and oil, although these are dedicated and reserved for the priests who stand in attendance before our God in Jerusalem, and no layman may so much as handle them. They have sent men to Jerusalem to get permission from the senate, because even the people there have done this. As soon as ever word reaches them and they act on it, on that very day they will be given up to you to be destroyed.

'So, my lord, when I learnt all this, I ran away from them; and God has sent me to do with you things that will be the wonder of the world, wherever men hear about them. For I, your servant, am a religious woman: day and night I worship the God of heaven. I will stay with you now, my lord; and each night I shall go out into the valley and pray to God, and he will tell me when they have committed their sins. Then, when I return and bring you word, you may lead out your whole army, and you will meet with no resistance from any of them. I will guide you across Judaea until you reach Jerusalem, and I will set up your throne in the heart of the city. They will follow you like sheep that have lost their shepherd, and not a dog will so much as growl at you. I have been given foreknowledge of this. It has been revealed to me, and I have been sent to announce it to you.'

^a not only . . . reign: or thanks to you and to your power, not only do men serve him, but wild animals also, cattle, and birds, will live at the disposal of Nebuchadnezzar and his household; the text and meaning are uncertain.

20 Judith's words delighted Holophernes and all his attendants, and they 21 were amazed at her wisdom. 'In the whole wide world', they said, 'there is 22 not a woman to compare with her for beauty of face or shrewdness of 23 speech.' Holophernes said to her, 'Thank God for sending you out from your people, to bring strength to us and destruction to those who have insulted my lord! You are a beautiful woman and your words are good. If you do as you have promised, your God shall be my God, and you shall live in King Nebuchadnezzar's palace and be renowned throughout the world.'

12 Holophernes then commanded them to bring her in where his silver was set out, and he ordered a meal to be served for her from his own food and 2 wine. But Judith said, 'I will not eat any of it, in case I should be breaking 3 our law. What I have brought with me will meet my needs.' Holophernes said to her, 'But if you use up all you have with you, where can we get you a fresh supply of the same kind? There is no one of your race here among 4 us.' Judith replied, 'As sure as you live, my lord, I shall not finish what I have brought with me before the Lord accomplishes through me what he has planned.'

5 Holophernes' attendants brought her into the tent; and she slept until 6 midnight. Shortly before the morning watch she got up and sent this message to Holophernes: 'My lord, will you give orders for me to be 7 allowed to go out and pray?' Holophernes ordered his bodyguard to let her pass. She remained in the camp for three days, going out each night 8 into the valley of Bethulia and bathing in the spring. When she came up from the spring, she prayed the Lord, the God of Israel, to prosper her 9 undertaking to restore her people. Then she returned to the camp purified, and remained in the tent until she took her meal towards evening.

10 ON THE FOURTH DAY Holophernes gave a banquet for his personal 11 servants only, and did not invite any of the army officers. He said to Bagoas, the eunuch in charge of all his affairs: 'Go to the Hebrew woman who is in 12 your care, and persuade her to join us and to eat and drink with us. It would be a disgrace if we let such a woman go without enjoying her 13 company. If we do not win her favours she will laugh at us.' Bagoas left Holophernes' presence, and went to Judith and said, 'Now, my beauty, do not be bashful; come along to my master and give yourself the honour of his company. Drink with us and enjoy yourself, and behave today like one of the Assyrian women in attendance at Nebuchadnezzar's palace.'
14 'Who am I to refuse my master?' said Judith. 'I am eager to do whatever 15 pleases him; and it will be something to boast of till my dying day.' She proceeded to dress herself up and put on all her feminine finery. Her maid went ahead of her, and spread on the ground in front of Holophernes the 16 fleeces which she had received from Bagoas for her daily use, so that she might recline on them when she ate. When Judith came in and took her place, Holophernes was beside himself with desire for her. He shook with passion and was filled with an ardent longing to possess her; indeed he had been looking for an opportunity to seduce her ever since he first set eyes on her. So he said to her, 'Drink and enjoy yourself with us.' 'Indeed I will, my lord,' said Judith; 'today is the greatest day of my whole life.' Then she took what her servant had prepared, and ate and drank in his presence. Holophernes was delighted with her, and drank a great deal of wine, more, indeed, than he had ever drunk on any single day since he was born.

When it grew late, Holophernes' servants quickly withdrew. Bagoas closed the tent from outside, shutting out all the attendants from his master's presence, and they went to bed; the banquet had lasted so long that they were all worn out. Judith was left alone in the tent, with Holophernes lying sprawled on his bed, dead drunk.

Judith had told her maid to stand outside the sleeping-apartment and wait for her mistress to go out, as she did every day; she had said that she would be going out to pray, and had explained this to Bagoas also. When they had all gone and not a soul was left, Judith stood beside Holophernes' bed and prayed silently: 'O Lord, God of all power, look favourably now on what I am about to do to bring glory to Jerusalem, for now is the time to help thy heritage and to give success to my plan for crushing the enemies who have risen up against us.' She went to the bed-rail beside Holophernes' head and took down his sword, and stepping close to the bed she grasped his hair. 'Now give me strength, O Lord, God of Israel', she said; then she struck at his neck twice with all her might, and cut off his head. She rolled the body off the bed and took the mosquito-net from its posts; a moment later she went out and gave Holophernes' head to the maid, who put it in her food-bag. The two of them went out together, as they had usually done for prayer. Through the camp they went, and round that valley, and up the hill to Bethulia till they reached the gates.

From a distance Judith called to the sentries at the gates: 'Open! Open the gate! God, our God, is with us, still showing his strength in Israel and his might against our enemies. He has shown it today!' When the citizens heard her voice, they hurried down to the gate and summoned the elders of the town. Everyone high and low came running, hardly able to believe that Judith had returned. They opened the gate and let the two women in; they lit a fire to see by, and gathered round them. Then Judith raised her voice and cried, 'Praise God! O praise him! Praise God, who has not withdrawn his mercy from the house of Israel, but has crushed our enemies by my hand this very night!' Then she took the head from the bag and showed it to them. 'Look!' she said. 'The head of Holophernes, the Assyrian commander-in-chief! And here is the net under which he lay drunk! The Lord has struck him down by the hand of a woman! And I swear by the Lord who has brought me safely along the way I have travelled that, though my face lured him to destruction, he committed no sin with me, and my honour is unblemished.'

The people were all astounded; and bowing down in worship to God, they said with one voice, 'Praise be to thee, O Lord our God, who hast humiliated the enemies of thy people this day.' And Ozias said to Judith, 'My daughter, the blessing of God Most High is upon you, you more than all other women on earth; praise be to the Lord, the God who created heaven and earth, and guided you when you struck off the head of the 19 enemy commander. The sure hope which inspired you^a will never fade 20 from men's minds while they commemorate the power of God. May God make your deed redound to your honour for ever, and shower blessings upon you! You risked your life for our country when it was faced with humiliation. You went boldly to meet the disaster that threatened us, and held firmly to God's straight road.' All the people responded: 'Amen!

 Amen!'

The triumph of Israel

14 THEN JUDITH SAID TO THEM, 'Listen to me, my friends; take this 2 head and hang it out on the battlements of your wall. As soon as dawn breaks and the sun rises, take up your weapons, every able-bodied man of you, and march out of the town. You must set a commander at your head, as if you were going down to the plain to attack the Assyrian outpost; but 3 do not go down. The Assyrians will take up their weapons and make for their camp, and rouse the commanders, who will run to Holofernes' tent but will not find him. They will all be seized with panic and will flee from 4 you; then pursue them, you and all who live within Israel's borders, and cut them down in their tracks. But first of all summon Achior the Ammonite 5 to me, so that he may see and recognize the man who treated Israel with contempt and sent him to us as if to his death.'

6 They summoned Achior from Ozias's house. When he came and saw Holofernes' head held by one of the men in the assembly of the people, 7 he fainted and fell down. They lifted him up, and he threw himself at Judith's feet and did obeisance to her, and said, 'Your praises will be sung in every camp in Judah and among all nations. They will tremble when 8 they hear your name. Tell me now the whole story of what you have done during these days.' Then Judith, in the hearing of the people, told him 9 everything from the day she left until that very moment. As she ended her story, the people raised a great shout and made the town ring with their 10 cheers. And when Achior realized all that the God of Israel had done, he came to full belief in God, and was circumcised, and admitted as a member of the community of Israel, as his descendants still are.

11 When dawn came they hung Holofernes' head on the wall; then they all took their weapons and went out in companies into the approaches to 12 the town. When the Assyrians saw them, they sent word to their leaders, 13 who then went to the generals, captains, and all the other officers. They came to Holofernes' tent and said to his steward: 'Wake our master.
 These slaves have had the audacity to offer us battle; they are asking to be 14 utterly wiped out.' Bagoas went in and knocked at the screen of the inner 15 tent, supposing that Holofernes was sleeping with Judith. When there was no reply, he drew aside the screen, went into the sleeping-apartment, 16 and found the dead body sprawling over a footstool, and the head gone. He 17 gave a great cry, wailing and groaning aloud, and tore his clothes. Then he went into the tent which Judith had occupied; and not finding her he 18 rushed out to the people shouting, 'The slaves have played us false. One

^a Or which you inspire.

Hebrew woman has brought shame on Nebuchadnezzar's kingdom. Look! Holophernes is lying on the ground, and his head is gone! His words filled the officers of the Assyrian army with dismay; they tore their clothes, and the camp rang with their shouts and cries. 19

When the news spread to the men in the camp, they were thrown into consternation at what had happened. In terror and panic they all scattered at once, with no attempt to keep together, and fled by every path across the plain and the hill-country. Those who were encamped in the hills round Bethulia also took to flight. Then all the Israelites of military age sallied out after them. Ozias sent men to Bethomesthaim, Choba, and Chola, and the whole territory of Israel, to give news of what had happened and to tell them to sally out against the enemy and destroy them. When the news reached them, every man in Israel joined the attack and cut them down, going as far as Choba. The men from Jerusalem and all the hill-country also joined in, for they had been told what had happened in the enemy camp. The men of Gilead and Galilee outflanked the Assyrians and inflicted heavy losses on them, continuing beyond Damascus and the district round it. The rest of the inhabitants of Bethulia fell upon the camp and made themselves rich with the spoils. When the Israelites returned from the slaughter, they took possession of what remained. The villages and hamlets in the hill-country and in the plain got masses of booty, for there was a huge quantity of it. 15 2 3 4 5 6 7

Joakim the high priest and the senate of Israel came from Jerusalem to see for themselves the great things the Lord had done for his people, and to meet Judith and wish her well. When they arrived they praised her with one voice and said, 'You are the glory of Jerusalem, the heroine of Israel, the proud boast of our people! With your own hand you have done all this, you have restored the fortunes of Israel, and God has shown his approval. Blessings on you from the Lord Almighty, for all time to come!' And all the people responded, 'Amen!' 8 9 10

The looting of the camp went on for thirty days. They gave Judith Holophernes' tent, with all his silver, and his couches, bowls, and furniture. She took them and loaded her mule, then got her wagons ready and piled the goods on them. All the Israelite women came running to see her; they sang her praises, and some of them performed a dance in her honour. She took garlanded wands in her hands and gave some also to the women who accompanied her; and she and those who were with her crowned themselves with olive leaves. Then, at the head of all the people, she led the women in the dance; and the men of Israel, in full armour and with garlands on their heads, followed them singing hymns. 11 12 13

IN THE PRESENCE of all Israel, Judith struck up this hymn of praise and thanksgiving, in which all the people joined lustily: 16

'Strike up a song to my God with tambourines;
sing to the Lord with cymbals;
raise a psalm of praise^a to him;
honour him and invoke his name. 2

^a Some witnesses read a new psalm.

- 3 The Lord is a God who stamps out wars;
he has brought me safe from my pursuers into his camp among his people.
- 4 The Assyrian came from the mountains of the north;
his armies came in such myriads
that his troops choked the valleys, his cavalry covered the hills.
- 5 He threatened to set fire to my land,
put my young men to the sword,
dash my infants to the ground,
take my children as booty,
and my maidens as spoil.
- 6 The Lord Almighty has thwarted them by a woman's hand.
7 It was no young man that brought their champion low;
no Titan struck him down,
no tall giant set upon him;
but Judith daughter of Merari disarmed him by the beauty of her face.
- 8 She put off her widow's weeds
to raise up the afflicted in Israel;
she anointed her face with perfume,
and bound her hair with a headband,
and put on a linen gown to beguile him.
- 9 Her sandal entranced his eye,
her beauty took his heart captive;
and the sword cut through his neck.
- 10 The Persians shuddered at her daring,
the Medes were daunted by her boldness.
- 11 Then my oppressed people shouted in triumph, and the enemy were afraid;
my weak ones shouted, and the enemy cowered in fear;
they raised their voices, and the enemy took to flight.
- 12 The sons of servant girls ran them through,
wounding them like runaway slaves;
they were destroyed by the army of my Lord.
- 13 'I will sing a new hymn to my God.
O Lord, thou art great and glorious,
thou art marvellous in thy strength, invincible.
- 14 Let thy whole creation serve thee;
for thou didst speak and all things came to be;
thou didst send out thy spirit and it formed them.
No one can resist thy voice;
- 15 mountains and seas are stirred to their depths,
rocks melt like wax at thy presence;
but to those who revere thee thou dost still show mercy.
- 16 For no sacrifice is sufficient to please thee with its fragrance, and all the fat in the world is not enough for a burnt-offering,

but he who fears the Lord is always great.
Woe to the nations which rise up against my people! 17
The Lord Almighty will punish them on the day of judgement;
he will consign their bodies to fire and worms;
they will weep in pain for ever.'

When they arrived at Jerusalem they worshipped God. As soon as the 18 people were purified, they offered their burnt-offerings, freewill offerings, and gifts. Judith dedicated to God all Holophernes' possessions, which the 19 people had given to her; and the net, which she had taken for herself from the sleeping-apartment, she presented as a votive offering. For three 20 months the people continued their celebrations in Jerusalem in front of the sanctuary; and Judith remained with them.

At the end of that time they all returned to their own homes. Judith went 21 back to Bethulia and lived on her estate. In her time she was famous throughout the whole country. She had many suitors; but she remained 22 unmarried all her life after her husband Manasses died and was gathered to his fathers. Her fame continued to increase; and she lived on in her 23 husband's house until she was a hundred and five years old. She gave her maid her liberty. She died in Bethulia and was buried in the same tomb as her husband Manasses, and Israel observed mourning for her for seven 24 days. Before her death she divided her property among all those who were most closely related to her husband Manasses, and among her own nearest relations.

No one dared to threaten the Israelites again in Judith's lifetime, or for 25
a long time after her death.

NOTE. The portions of the Book of Esther commonly included in the Apocrypha are extracts from the Greek version of the book, which differs substantially from the Hebrew text (translated in The New English Bible: Old Testament). In order that they may be read in their original sequence, the whole of the Greek version is here translated, those portions which are not normally printed in the Apocrypha being enclosed in square brackets, with the chapter and verse numbers in italic figures. The order followed is that of the Greek text, but the chapter and verse numbers are made to conform to those of the Authorized Version. Proper names are given in the form in which they occur in the Greek version.

- 11 ² IN THE SECOND YEAR of the reign of Artaxerxes the Great King, on the first day of Nisan, Mardocheaus son of Jairus, son of Semeius, 3 son of Kisaesus, of the tribe of Benjamin, had a dream. Mardocheaus was a Jew living in the city of Susa, a man of high standing, who was 4 in the royal service; he came of those whom Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon had taken into exile from Jerusalem with Jechonias king of 5 Judah. This was his dream: din and tumult, peals of thunder and an earth-
6 quake, confusion upon the earth. Then appeared two great dragons, ready 7 to grapple with each other, and the noise they made was terrible. Every nation was roused by it to prepare for war, to fight against the righteous 8 nation. It was a day of darkness and gloom, with distress and anguish, 9 oppression and great confusion upon the earth. And the whole righteous nation was troubled, dreading the evils in store for them, and they pre-10 pared for death. They cried aloud to God; and in answer to their cry there 11 came as though from a little spring a great river brimming with water. It grew light, and the sun rose; the humble were exalted and they devoured 12 the great. After he had had this dream and had seen what God had resolved to do, Mardocheaus woke; he kept it before his mind, seeking in every way to understand it, until nightfall.
- 12 Now when Mardocheaus was resting in the royal courtyard with 2 Gabatha and Tharra, the two eunuchs who guarded the courtyard, he heard them deep in discussion. He listened carefully to discover what was on their minds, and found that they were plotting violence against King Artaxerxes. He denounced them to the king, who had the two eunuchs 3 interrogated. They confessed and were led away to execution. Then the 4 king wrote an account of the affair, to have it on record; Mardocheus also wrote an account of it. The king gave Mardocheus an appointment at 5 court, and rewarded him for his services. But Haman, the son of Hama- 6 dathus, a Bugaeon, who enjoyed the king's favour, sought to injure Mardocheus and his people because of the two eunuchs.

A Jewess becomes queen in Persia

THOSE EVENTS HAPPENED in the days of Artaxerxes, the Artaxerxes 1 who ruled from India to Ethiopia, a hundred and twenty-seven 2 provinces. At this time he sat on his royal throne in the city of Susa. Then 3 in the third year of his reign he gave a banquet for the King's Friends and 4 persons of various races, the Persian and Median nobles and the leading provincial governors. And afterwards, after displaying to them the wealth 4 of his empire and the splendour of his rich festivities for a hundred and eighty days, when these days of feasting were over, the king gave a banquet 5 for all the people of various races present in the city of Susa; it was held in 6 the court of the king's palace and lasted six days. The court was decorated with white curtains of linen and cotton stretched on cords of purple, and these were attached to blocks of gold and silver resting on stone and marble columns. There were couches of gold and silver set on a pavement of malachite, marble, and mother-of-pearl. There were mats of transparent weave elaborately embroidered with roses arranged in a circle. The cups 7 were of gold and silver, and there was displayed a miniature cup made of carbuncle worth thirty thousand talents. The wine was abundant and sweet, from the king's own cellar. The drinking was not according to 8 a fixed rule, but the king had laid it down that all the stewards of his palace should respect his will and that of the guests. In addition, Queen Astin 9 gave a banquet for the women in the same palace where King Artaxerxes was.

On the seventh day, when he was in high good humour, the king ordered 10 Haman, Mazan, Tharra, Borazes, Zatholtha, Abataza, and Tharaba, the seven eunuchs who were in attendance on the king's person, to bring the 11 queen before him, so that he might place the royal diadem on her head and let her display her beauty to the officers and people of various races; for she was indeed a beautiful woman. But Queen Astin refused to obey him 12 and come with the eunuchs. This offended the king and made him angry.

Then the king said to his courtiers, 'You hear what Astin said. Give your 13 ruling and judgement in the matter.' Then the nobles of Persia and Media 14 who were closest to the king—Harkesaeus, Sarsathaeus, and Malesear, who sat next him in the chief seats—approached him and declared what 15 should be done according to the law to Queen Astin for disobeying the order which the king sent her by the eunuchs. Then Muchaeus said to 16 the king and the nobles: 'Queen Astin has done wrong, and not to the 17 king alone, but to all his nobles and officers as well.' (For he had repeated 18 to them what the queen had said and how she had defied the king.) 'And just as she defied King Artaxerxes, so now the nobles of Persia and Media will find that all their ladies are bold enough to treat their husbands with 19 contempt, when they hear what she said to the king. If it please your majesty, let a royal decree go out from you, and let it be inscribed among the laws of the Medes and Persians, that Astin shall not again appear before the king; this is the only course. And let the king give her place as queen to 20 another woman who is more worthy of it than she. Let whatever law the king makes be proclaimed throughout his empire, and then all women will give 21 due honour to their husbands, rich and poor alike.' The advice pleased the king and the princes, and the king did as Muchaeus had proposed. Letters were sent to all the provinces of the empire, to each province in its own language, in order that every man might be respected in his own house.

2 Later, when the anger of King Artaxerxes had died down, he remembered Astin and what she had done, and how he had given judgement against her.
2 So the king's attendants said: 'Let beautiful girls of unblemished virtue 3 be sought out for your majesty. Let your majesty appoint commissioners in all the provinces of the empire to select these beautiful virgins and bring them to the city of Susa, into the women's quarters. There let them be committed to the care of the king's eunuch in charge of the women, and let 4 them be provided with cosmetics and everything else they need. Then the one who is most acceptable to the king shall become queen in place of Astin.' The advice pleased the king, and he acted on it.

5 Now there was a Jew in the city of Susa named Mardocheaus, son of 6 Jairus, son of Semeius, son of Kisaeus, of the tribe of Benjamin; he had been carried into exile from Jerusalem when it was taken by Nebuchad-7 nezzar king of Babylon. He had a foster-child named Esther, the daughter of his father's brother Aminadab. She had lost her parents, and he had 8 brought her up to womanhood. She was a very beautiful girl. When the king's edict was proclaimed, many girls were brought to Susa to be entrusted to Gai, who had charge of the women, and among them was 9 Esther. She attracted his notice and received his special favour: he readily provided her with her cosmetics and allowance of food, and also with seven maids assigned to her from the king's palace. He gave her and her maids honourable treatment in the women's quarters.

10 Esther had not disclosed her race or country, because Mardocheaus had 11 forbidden her to do so. Every day Mardocheaus passed along by the forecourt of the women's quarters to keep an eye on Esther and see what would happen to her.

12 The period after which a girl was to go to the king was twelve months.
This was for the completion of the required treatment—six months with 13 oil and myrrh and six months with perfumes and cosmetics. Then the girl went to the king. She was handed to the person appointed, and accompanied 14 him from the women's quarters to the king's palace. She entered the palace in the evening and returned in the morning to Gai, the king's eunuch in charge of the women, in another part of the women's quarters. She did not go to the king again unless summoned by name.

When the time came for Esther, daughter of Aminadab the uncle of Mardocheus, to go to the king, she neglected none of the instructions of Gai the king's eunuch in charge of the women; for Esther charmed all who saw her. She was taken to King Artaxerxes in the twelfth month, that is, the month Adar, in the seventh year of his reign. The king fell in love with her, finding her more acceptable than any of the other girls, and crowned her with the queen's diadem. Then the king gave a banquet lasting seven days for all the King's Friends and the officers, to celebrate Esther's marriage. He also granted a remission of taxation to all subjects of his empire.

Mardocheus was in attendance in the courtyard. But Esther had not disclosed her country—such were the instructions of Mardocheus; but she was to fear God and keep his commandments just as she had done when she was with him. So Esther made no change in her way of life.

Two of the king's eunuchs, officers of the bodyguard, were offended at the advancement of Mardocheus and plotted to kill King Artaxerxes. This became known to Mardocheus, who told Esther, and she revealed the plot to the king. The king interrogated the two eunuchs and had them hanged, and he ordered that the service Mardocheus had rendered should be recorded in the royal archives to his honour.

A plot against the Jews

AFTER THIS King Artaxerxes promoted Haman son of Hamadathus the Bugaeon, advancing him and giving him precedence above all the King's Friends. So all who were at court did obeisance to Haman, for so the king had commanded; but Mardocheus did not do obeisance. Then the king's courtiers said to him, 'Mardocheus, why do you flout the king's command?' Day by day they challenged him, but he refused to listen to them. Then they informed Haman that Mardocheus was resisting the king's command. Mardocheus had told them that he was a Jew. So when Haman learnt that Mardocheus was not doing obeisance to him, he was infuriated and plotted to exterminate all the Jews under Artaxerxes' rule.

In the twelfth year of King Artaxerxes he arrived at a decision by casting lots, taking the days and the months one by one, to decide on one day for the destruction of the whole race of Mardocheus. The lot fell on the thirteenth^a day of the month Adar.

Then Haman said to King Artaxerxes: 'There is a certain nation dispersed among the other nations of your empire. Their laws are different from those of every other nation; they do not keep your majesty's laws. It is not to your majesty's advantage to tolerate them. If it please your majesty, let an order be made for their destruction; and I will contribute ten thousand talents of silver to the royal treasury.' So the king took off his signet-ring and gave it to Haman to seal the decree against the Jews. 'Keep the money, and deal with these people as you will', he said.

On the thirteenth day of the first month the king's secretaries were summoned, and in accordance with Haman's instructions, they wrote in the name of King Artaxerxes to his army commanders and governors in every province from India to Ethiopia. There were a hundred and twenty-seven provinces in all, and each was addressed in its own language. Instructions were dispatched by courier to all the empire of Artaxerxes to exterminate the Jewish race, on a given day of the twelfth month, Adar, and to plunder their possessions.]

13 THIS IS A COPY of the letter:

Artaxerxes the Great King to the governors of the one hundred and twenty-seven provinces, from India to Ethiopia, and to the subordinate officials.

Ruler as I am over many nations and master of all the world, it is my will—not in the arrogance of power, but because my rule is mild and equitable—to ensure to my subjects a life permanently free from disturbance, to pacify my empire and make it safe for travel to its farthest limits, and to restore the peace that all men long for. I asked my counselors how this object might be achieved and received a reply from Haman. Haman is eminent among us for sound judgement, one whose worth is proved by his constant goodwill and steadfast loyalty, and who has gained the honour of the second place at our court. He represented to us that scattered among all the races of the empire is a disaffected people, opposed in its laws to every nation, and continually ignoring the royal ordinances, so that our irreproachable plans for the unified administration of the empire cannot be made effective. We understand that this nation stands alone in its continual opposition to all men, that it evades the laws by its strange manner of life, and in disloyalty to our government commits grievous offences, thus undermining the security of our empire. We therefore order that those who are designated to you in the indictments drawn up by Haman, our vicegerent and second father, shall all, together with their wives and children, be utterly destroyed by the sword of their enemies, without mercy or pity, on the thirteenth^a day of Adar, the twelfth month, of the present year. Those persons who have long been disaffected shall meet a violent death in one day so that our government may henceforth be stable and untroubled.

[Copies of the document were posted up in every province, and all nations of the empire were ordered to be ready by that day. The matter was expedited also in Susa. While the king and Haman caroused together, the city of Susa was thrown into confusion.]

WHEN MARDOCHAEUS LEARNT all that was being done, he tore his clothes, put on sackcloth and sprinkled himself with ashes; and he rushed through the city, crying loudly: 'An innocent nation is being destroyed.' He went as far as the king's gate, and there he halted, because no one was allowed to enter the courtyard clothed with sackcloth and ashes. In every province where the king's decree was posted up, there was a great cry of mourning and lamentation among the Jews, and they put on sackcloth and ashes. When the queen's maids and eunuchs came and told her, she was distraught at the news, and sent clothes for Mardocheus, urging him to take off his sackcloth; but he would not consent. Then Esther summoned Hachrathaeus, the eunuch who waited upon her, and ordered him to obtain accurate information for her from Mardocheus.^a So Mardocheus told him all that had happened, and how Haman had promised to pay ten thousand talents into the royal treasury to bring about the destruction of the Jews. He also gave him a copy of the written decree for their destruction which had been posted up in Susa, to show to Esther; and he gave him a message for her, that she should go to the king and plead for his favour and entreat him for her people. 'Remember', he said, 'those days when you were brought up in my humble home; for Haman, who stands next to the king, has spoken against us and demanded our death. Call upon the Lord, and then speak for us to the king and save our lives.' Hachrathaeus returned and told her what Mardocheus had said. She sent him back with this message: 'All nations of the empire know that if any person, man or woman, enters the king's presence in the inner court unbidden, there is no escape for him. Only one to whom the king stretches out the golden sceptre is safe; and it is now thirty days since I myself was called to go to the king.'

When Hachrathaeus delivered her message, Mardocheus told him to go back and say: 'Do not imagine, Esther, that you alone of all the Jews in the empire will escape alive. For if you remain silent at such a time as this, the Jews will somewhere find relief and deliverance, but you and your father's family will perish. Who knows whether it is not for such a time as this that you have been made a queen?' Esther gave the messenger this answer to take back to Mardocheus: 'Go and assemble all the Jews who are in Susa and fast for me; for three days take neither food nor drink, night or day, and I and my maids will also go without food. Then in defiance of the law I will enter the king's presence, even if it costs me my life.' So Mardocheus went away and did as Esther had bidden him.]

AND MARDOCHEUS PRAYED to the Lord, calling to mind all the works of the Lord. He said, 'O Lord, Lord and King who rulest over all, because the whole world is under thy authority, and when it is thy will to save Israel there is no one who can stand against thee: thou didst make heaven and earth and every wonderful thing under heaven; thou art Lord of all, and there is no one who can resist thee, the Lord. Thou knowest all things; thou knowest, Lord, that it was not from insolence or arrogance or vainglory that I refused to bow before proud Haman, for I could gladly have kissed the soles of his feet to save Israel; no, I did it so that I might not hold a man in greater honour than God; I will not bow before any but thee, my Lord, and it is not from arrogance that I refuse this homage. And now Lord, God and King, God of Abraham, spare thy people; for our enemies are watching us to bring us to ruin, and they have set their hearts upon the

^a Some witnesses add (6) So he went out to Mardocheus in the street opposite the city gate.

- 16 destruction of thy chosen people, thine from the beginning. Do not disdain thy own possession which thou didst ransom for thyself out of 17 Egypt. Hear my prayer, and have mercy on thy heritage, and turn our mourning into feasting, that we may live and sing of thy name, Lord; do 18 not put to silence the lips that give thee praise.⁴ And all Israel cried aloud with all their might, for death stared them in the face.
- 14 Then Queen Esther, caught up in this deadly conflict,^a took refuge in 2 the Lord. She stripped off her splendid attire and put on the garb of mourning and distress. Instead of proud perfumes she strewed ashes and dung over her head. She abased her body, and every part that she had 3 delightfully adorned she covered with her dishevelled hair. And so she prayed to the Lord God of Israel:
- 4 'O my Lord, thou alone art our king; help me who am alone, with no
 5 helper but thee; for I am taking my life in my hands. Ever since I was born I have been taught by my father's family and tribe that thou, O Lord, didst choose Israel out of all the nations, and out of all the founders of our race didst choose our fathers for an everlasting possession, and that what 6 thou didst promise them, thou didst perform. But now we have sinned against thee, and thou hast handed us over to our enemies because we
 7 honoured their gods; thou art just, O Lord. But they are not content with our bitter servitude; they have now pledged themselves to their idols to annul thy decree and to destroy thy possession, silencing those who praise thee, extinguishing the glory of thy house, and casting down thy altar.
 10 They would give the heathen cause to sing the praises of their worthless gods, and would have a mortal king held in everlasting honour.
- 11 'Yield not thy sceptre, O Lord, to gods that are nothing; let not our enemies mock at our ruin, but turn their plot against themselves, and make 12 an example of the man who planned it. Remember us, O Lord, make thy power known in the time of our distress, and give me courage, O King of 13 gods, almighty Lord. Give me the apt word to say when I enter the lion's den. Divert his hatred to our enemy, so that there may be an end of him and his confederates.
- 14 'Save us by thy power, and help me who am alone and have no helper
 15 but thee, Lord. Thou knowest all; thou knowest that I hate the splendour of the heathen, I abhor the bed of the uncircumcised or of any Gentile.
 16 Thou knowest in what straits I am: I loathe that symbol of pride, the head-dress that I wear when I show myself abroad, I loathe it as one loathes a filthy rag; in private I refuse to wear it. I, thy servant, have not eaten at Haman's table; I have not graced a banquet of the king or touched the wine
 18 of his drink-offerings; I have not known festive joy from the time that I was brought here until now except in thee, Lord God of Abraham. O God who dost prevail against all, give heed to the cry of the despairing: rescue us from the power of wicked men, and rescue me from what I dread.'
- 15 ON THE THIRD DAY Esther brought her prayers to an end. She took off the clothes she had worn while she worshipped and put on all her splendour.
 2 When she was in her royal robes and had invoked the all-seeing God, her preserver, she took two maids with her; on one she leaned for support, as befitted a fine lady, while the other followed, bearing her train. She was blushing and in the height of her beauty; her face was as cheerful as it was lovely, but her heart was in the grip of fear. She passed through all the doors and reached the royal presence. The king was seated on his throne, in the full array of his majesty. He was all gold and precious stones, an awe-inspiring figure. He looked up, his face glowing with regal dignity, and glanced at her in towering anger. The queen fell, changing colour in a faint, and swooning on the shoulder of the maid who went before her.

Then God changed the spirit of the king to gentleness, and in deep concern he leapt from his throne and took her in his arms until she came to herself. He soothed her with reassuring words: 'Esther, what is it? Have no fear of me, your loving husband; you shall not die, for our order is only for our subjects. Come to me.' And the king lifted his golden sceptre and laid it upon her neck; then he kissed her and said, 'You may speak to me.' She answered, 'I saw you, my lord, looking like an angel of God, and I was awestruck at your glorious appearance; your countenance is so full of grace, my lord, that I look on you in wonder.' But while she was speaking she fell down in a faint; the king was distressed, and all his attendants comforted her.

[Then the king said, 'What is your wish, Queen Esther? What is your request? Up to half my empire, it shall be given you.' 'Today is a special day for me', said Esther. 'If it please your majesty, will you come, and Haman with you, to a banquet which I shall give today?' The king ordered Haman to be sent for in haste, so that Esther's wish might be fulfilled; and they both went to the banquet to which Esther had invited them. Over the wine the king said to her, 'What is it, Queen Esther? Whatever you ask for shall be yours.' Esther said, 'This is my humble request: if I have won your majesty's favour, will your majesty and Haman come again tomorrow to the banquet which I shall give for you both, and tomorrow I will do as I have done today.'

So Haman went out from the royal presence in good spirits and well pleased with himself. But when he saw Mardocheaus the Jew in the king's courtyard, he was filled with rage. He went home, and called for his friends and his wife Zosara, and held forth to them about his wealth and the honours with which the king had invested him, how he had made him first man in the empire. 'Queen Esther', he said, 'invited no one but myself to accompany the king to her banquet; and I am invited again for tomorrow. Yet all this is no pleasure to me so long as I see that Jew Mardocheaus in the courtyard.' Then his wife Zosara and his friends said to him: 'Have a gallows put up, seventy-five feet^a high, and in the morning speak to the king and have Mardocheaus hanged upon it. Then you can go with the king to the banquet and enjoy yourself.' Haman thought this an excellent plan, and the gallows was made ready.

The triumph of the Jews

6 THAT NIGHT the Lord kept sleep from the king, so he ordered his 2 private secretary to bring the court chronicle and read it to him. He found written there the record about Mardocheaus, how he had given information about the two royal eunuchs who, while they were on guard, 3 had plotted violence against King Artaxerxes. Whereupon the king said, 'What honour or favour did we confer on Mardocheaus for this?' The king's courtiers who were in attendance replied, 'You have done nothing 4 for him.' While the king was inquiring about the service that Mardocheaus had rendered, Haman appeared in the courtyard. 'Who is that in the court?'
 asked the king. Now Haman had just come in to recommend to the king that Mardocheaus should be hanged on the gallows which he had pre-5 pared; so the king's servants said, 'It is Haman standing in the court.'
 6 'Call him', said the king. Then the king said to Haman, 'What shall I do for the man I wish to honour?' Haman said to himself, 'Whom would the 7 king wish to honour but me?' So he said to the king, 'For the man whom the 8 king wishes to honour, let the king's attendants bring a robe of fine linen 9 from the king's own wardrobe and a horse from the king's own stable. Let both be delivered to one of the king's most honourable Friends, and let him robe the man whom the king loves and mount him on the horse, and let him proclaim through the city: "This shall be the lot of any man whom 10 the king honours."' Then the king said to Haman, 'An excellent suggestion! Do all this for Mardocheaus the Jew who serves in the courtyard.
 11 Let nothing that you have said be omitted.' So Haman took the robe and put it on Mardocheaus, and mounted him on the horse; then he went through the city, proclaiming: 'This shall be the lot of any man whom the king wishes to honour.'

12 Then Mardocheaus returned to the courtyard, and Haman hurried 13 off home with head veiled in mourning. He told his wife Zosara and his friends what had happened to him. They replied, 'If Mardocheaus is a Jew, and you have been humiliated before him, you are a lost man. You cannot get the better of him, because the living God is on his side.'

14 While they were still talking with Haman, the king's eunuchs arrived and hurried him away to the banquet which Esther had prepared.

7 12 So the king and Haman went to the queen's banquet. Again on that second day, over the wine, the king said, 'What is it, Queen Esther? What is your request? What is your petition? You shall have it, up to half my 3 empire.' Queen Esther answered: 'If I have won your majesty's favour,
 4 my request is for my life, my petition is for my people. For it has come to my ears that we have been sold, I and my people; to be destroyed, plundered, and enslaved, we and our children, male and female. Our 5 adversary is a disgrace to the king's court.' The king said, 'Who is it that 6 has dared to do such a thing?' 'Our enemy', said Esther, 'is this wicked 7 Haman.' Haman stood dumbfounded before the king and the queen. The king rose from the banquet and went into the garden, and Haman began to plead with the queen, for he saw that things were going badly for him.

When the king returned to the banqueting hall from the garden, Haman 8 in his entreaties had flung himself across the queen's couch. The king exclaimed, 'What! You assault the queen in my own house?' At those words Haman turned away in despair. Then Bugathan, one of the 9 eunuchs, said to the king, 'Look! Haman has even prepared a gallows for Mardocheaus, the man who reported the plot against the king, and there it stands, seventy-five feet ^a high, in Haman's compound.' 'Have Haman hanged on it', said the king. So Haman was hanged on the gallows 10 that he himself had prepared for Mardocheaus. After that the king's rage died down.

That day King Artaxerxes gave Esther all that had belonged to Haman 8
 the persecutor; and Mardocheaus was called into the king's presence, for Esther had told him how he was related to her. Then the king took 2 off his signet-ring, which he had taken back from Haman, and gave it to Mardocheaus. And Esther put Mardocheaus in charge of Haman's estate.

Once again Esther spoke before the king, falling at his feet and pleading 3 with him to avert the calamity planned by Haman and to frustrate his plot against the Jews. The king stretched out the golden sceptre to Esther, and 4
 she rose and stood before the king. 'May it please your majesty,' she said; 5
 'if I have won your favour, let an order be issued recalling the letters which Haman sent in pursuance of his plan to destroy the Jews in your empire.
 How can I bear to see the downfall of my people? How escape myself 6 when my country is destroyed?' Then the king said to Esther: 'I have 7 given Haman's property to you, and hanged him on the gallows because he threatened the lives of the Jews. If you want anything further, you may 8 draw up an order in my name, in whatever terms you think fit, and seal it with my signet. An order written at the king's direction and sealed with the royal signet cannot be contravened.'

And so, on the twenty-third day of the first month, Nisan, in the same 9 year, the king's secretaries were summoned; and the Jews were informed in writing of the instructions given to the administrators and chief governors in the provinces, from India to Ethiopia, a hundred and twenty-seven provinces, to each province in its own language. The orders were written as 10 from the king and sealed with his signet, and dispatched by courier. By 11 these documents the king granted permission to the Jews in every city to observe their own laws and to defend themselves, and to deal as they would with their opponents and enemies, throughout the empire of Artaxerxes, 12 on a given day, the thirteenth of the twelfth month, Adar.]

THE FOLLOWING IS A COPY of this letter:

Artaxerxes the Great King to the governors of the one hundred and twenty-seven provinces, from India to Ethiopia, and to those who are of our allegiance, greeting.

Many who have been honoured only too often by the lavish generosity 2 of their benefactors have grown arrogant and not only attempt to 3

^a Gk. fifty cubits.

4 ill-treat our subjects but, unable to carry the favours heaped upon themselves, even plot mischief against those who grant them. Not content with destroying gratitude in men, they are carried away by the insolence of those who are strangers to good breeding; they even suppose that they will escape the justice of all-seeing God, who is no friend to evil-doers.
 5 And often, when the king's business has been entrusted to those he counts his friends, they have, by their plausibility, made those in supreme authority partners in shedding innocent blood and involved 6 them in irreparable misfortunes, for their malevolence with its misleading sophistries has imposed upon the sincere goodwill of their rulers.
 7 The evil brought about by those who wield power unworthily you can observe, not only in records of tradition and history but also in your 8 familiar experience, and apply the lesson to the future. Thus we shall peacefully free this realm from disturbance for the benefit of all, making 9 no changes but always deciding matters which come under our notice with firmness and equity. Now Haman son of Hamadathus, a Macedo-10 nian, an alien in fact with no Persian blood, a man with nothing of our 11 kindly nature,^a was accepted by us and enjoyed^b so fully the benevolence with which we treat every nation that he was proclaimed our Father, and all along received obeisance from everyone as second only to our 12 royal throne. But this man in his unbridled arrogance planned to deprive 13 us of our empire and our life by using fraud and tortuous cunning to bring about the destruction of Mardocheaus, our constant benefactor who had saved our life, and of Esther, our blameless consort, together 14 with their whole nation. For he thought that by these methods he would catch us defenceless and would transfer to the Macedonians the sove-15 reignty now held by the Persians. But we find that the Jews, whom this triple-dyed villain had consigned to extinction, are no evil-doers; they 16 order their lives by the most just of laws, and are children of the living God, most high, most mighty, who maintains the empire in most wonderful order, for us as for our ancestors.

17 You will therefore disregard the letters sent by Haman son of Hama-18 dathus, because he, the contriver of all this, has been hanged aloft at the gate of Susa with his whole household, God who is Lord of all having 19 speedily brought upon him the punishment that he deserved. Copies of this letter are to be posted up in all public places. Permit the Jews to 20 live under their own laws, and give them every assistance so that on the thirteenth day of Adar, the twelfth month, on that very day, they may 21 avenge themselves on those who were ranged against them^c in the time of their oppression. For God, who has all things in his power, has made 22 this a day not of ruin, but of joy, for his chosen people. Therefore you also must keep it with all good cheer, as a notable day among your feasts 23 of commemoration, so that henceforth it may be a standing symbol of deliverance to us and our loyal Persians, but a reminder of destruction to 24 those who plot against us. Any city or country whatsoever which does not act upon these orders shall incur our wrath and be wiped out with ^a Or a man fallen away greatly from our favour.

 defend themselves against their assailants.

fire and sword. No man shall set foot in it and even the beasts and birds shall shun it for all time.

[Let copies be posted up conspicuously throughout the empire, so that the Jews may be prepared by that day to fight against their enemies.]

Mounted messengers set out with all speed to do what the king commanded; and the decree was posted up also in Susa.

Mardocheus left the king's presence in royal robes, wearing a golden crown and a turban of fine linen dyed purple, and all in Susa rejoiced to see him. For the Jews there was light and gladness in every province and every city. Wherever the decree was posted up there was joy and gladness for the Jews, feasting and merriment. And many of the Gentiles were circumcised and professed Judaism, because they were afraid of the Jews.

ON THE THIRTEENTH DAY of the twelfth month, Adar, the decree drawn up by the king arrived. On that very day the enemies of the Jews perished. No one offered resistance, because they were afraid of them. The leading provincial governors, the princes, and the royal secretaries paid all respect to the Jews, because fear of Mardocheus weighed upon them. For they had received the king's decree that his name should be honoured throughout the empire.^{a b} In the city itself the Jews slaughtered five hundred men, including Pharsanestan, Delphon, Phasga, Pharadatha, Barsa, Sarbacha, Marmasima, Ruphaeus, Arsaesus, and Zabuthaeus, the ten sons of Haman son of Hamadathus, the Bugaeon, the Jews' great enemy; and that day they took plunder.

When the number of those killed in Susa was reported to the king, he said to Esther, 'In the city of Susa the Jews have killed five hundred men. What do you suppose they have done in the surrounding country? Whatever further request you have will be granted.' Esther answered him, 'Let the Jews be allowed to do the same tomorrow, and hang up the bodies of Haman's ten sons.' The king consented; he handed over the bodies of Haman's sons to the Jews of the city to be hung up. The Jews in Susa assembled on the fourteenth day of Adar also, and killed three hundred, but they took no plunder.

The rest of the Jews in the empire rallied together in self-defence, and so were quit of their enemies; for they slaughtered fifteen thousand of them on the thirteenth of Adar; but they took no plunder. On the fourteenth they rested, and made that day a day of rest, with rejoicing and merriment. The Jews in the city of Susa had assembled also on the fourteenth day of the month; they did not rest on that day, but they kept the fifteenth day with rejoicing and merriment. That is why Jews who are dispersed over the remoter parts keep the fourteenth day of Adar as a holiday with rejoicing and merriment, sending presents of food to one another; but those who live in the principal cities keep the fifteenth of Adar as a holiday, sending presents of food to one another.

^a For they . . . empire: probable reading; Gk. obscure. ^b Some witnesses add from the Heb. (5) So the Jews put their enemies to the sword with great slaughter and destruction; they worked their will on those who hated them.

20 Then Mardocheus wrote down the whole story in a book and sent it 21 to all the Jews in the empire of Artaxerxes, far and near, ordering them to establish these holidays, and to keep the fourteenth and fifteenth of Adar, 22 because these were the days on which the Jews were quit of their enemies, and to keep the whole month of Adar, in which came the great change from sorrow to joy and from mourning to holiday, as a time for feasting and merriment, days for sending presents of food to friends and to the poor.

23 So the Jews formally accepted the account which Mardocheus wrote:
 24 how Haman son of Hamadathus, the Bugaeon, ^a fought against them; how 25 he cast lots to decide the date of their destruction; how he came before the king with a proposal to hang Mardocheus; and how all the evils which he had plotted against the Jews recoiled on his own head, and he and his sons 26 were hanged. This is why these days were named 'Purim', which in the Jews' language means 'lots'. Because of all that was recorded in this letter
 —all that they had experienced, all that had happened—Mardocheus 27 directed that this festival should be observed, and the Jews undertook, on behalf of themselves, their descendants, and all who should join them, to 28 do so without fail. These were to be days of commemoration, duly celebrated age after age in every town, family, and province. These days of Purim were to be kept for all time, and the commemoration was never to cease throughout all ages.

29 Queen Esther daughter of Aminadab, and Mardocheus the Jew, 30–31 recorded in writing all that they had done, and confirmed the regulations for Purim. They made themselves responsible for this decision and staked 32 their life upon the plan. ^b Esther established it for all time by her decree, and it was put on record.

10 1 2 The king made decrees for the empire by land and sea. His strength and courage, his wealth and the splendour of his empire, are recorded in the 3 annals of the kings of the Persians and Medes. Mardocheus acted for King Artaxerxes; he was a great man in the empire and honoured by the Jews. His way of life won him the affection of his whole nation.]

4 5 MARDOCHEUS SAID, 'All this is God's doing. For I have been reminded of the dream I had about these things; not one of the visions I saw 6 proved meaningless. There was the little spring which became a river, and there was light and sun and water in abundance. The river is Esther, whom 7 the king married and made queen; the two dragons are Haman and myself;
 8 9 the nations are those who gathered to wipe out the Jews; my nation is Israel, which cried aloud to God and was delivered. The Lord has delivered his people, he has rescued us from all these evils. God performed great 10 miracles and signs such as have not occurred among the nations. He made 11 ready two lots, one for the people of God and one for all the nations; then came the hour and the time for these two lots to be cast, the day of decision 12 by God before ^c all the nations; he remembered his people and gave the verdict for his heritage.

'So they shall keep these days in the month of Adar, the fourteenth and fifteenth of that month, by gathering with joy and gladness before God from one generation of his people to another, for ever.'

IN THE FOURTH YEAR of the reign of Ptolemy and Cleopatra, Dositheus, who said that he was a levitical priest, and Ptolemaeus his son, brought the foregoing letter about Purim, which they said was authentic and had been translated by Lysimachus son of Ptolemaeus, a resident in Jerusalem.

THE WISDOM OF SOLOMON

The promise of immortality

LOVE JUSTICE, you rulers of the earth; set your mind upon the Lord, as is your duty, and seek him in simplicity of heart; for he is found by those who trust him without question, and makes himself known to those who never doubt him. Dishonest thinking cuts men off from God, and if fools will take liberties with his power, he shows them up for what they are. Wisdom will not enter a shifty soul, nor make her home in a body that is mortgaged to sin. This holy spirit of discipline will have nothing to do with falsehood; she cannot stay in the presence of unreason, and will throw up her case at the approach of injustice. Wisdom is a spirit devoted to man's good, and she will not hold a blasphemer blameless for his words, because God is a witness of his inmost being, who sees clear into his heart and hears every word he says. For the spirit of the Lord fills the whole earth, and that which holds all things together is well aware of what men say. Hence no man can utter injustice and not be found out, nor will justice overlook him when she passes sentence. The devices of a godless man will be brought to account, and a report of his words will come before the Lord as proof of his iniquity; no muttered syllable escapes that vigilant ear. Beware, then, of futile grumbling, and avoid all bitter words; for even a secret whisper will not go unheeded, and a lying tongue is a man's destruction. Do not stray from the path of life and so court death; do not draw disaster on yourselves by your own actions. For God did not make death, and takes no pleasure in the destruction of any living thing; he created all things that they might have being. The creative forces of the world make for life; there is no deadly poison in them. Death is not king on earth, for justice is immortal; but godless men by their words and deeds have asked death for his company. Thinking him their friend, they have made a pact with him because they are fit members of his party; and so they have wasted away.

2 They said to themselves in their deluded way: 'Our life is short and full of trouble, and when a man comes to his end there is no remedy; no 2 man was ever known to return from the grave. By mere chance were we born, and afterwards we shall be as though we had never been, for the breath in our nostrils is but a wisp of smoke; our reason is a mere spark 3 kept alive by the beating of our hearts, and when that goes out, our body 4 will turn to ashes and the breath of our life disperse like empty air. Our names will be forgotten with the passing of time, and no one will remember anything we did. Our life will blow over like the last vestige of a cloud; and as a mist is chased away by the sun's rays and overborne by its heat, 5 so will it too be dispersed. A passing shadow—such is our life, and there is 6 no postponement of our end; man's fate is sealed, and none returns. Come then, let us enjoy the good things while we can, and make full use of the 7 creation, with all the eagerness of youth. Let us have costly wines and per-8 fumes to our heart's content, and let no flower of spring escape us. Let us 9 crown ourselves with rosebuds before they can wither. Let none of us miss his share of the good things that are ours; who cares what traces our revelry leaves behind? This is the life for us; it is our birthright.

10 'Down with the poor and honest man! Let us tread him under foot; let us show no mercy to the widow and no reverence to the grey hairs of old 11 age. For us let might be right! Weakness is proved to be good for nothing.
12 Let us lay a trap for the just man; he stands in our way, a check to us at every turn; he girds at us as law-breakers, and calls us traitors to our up-13 bringing. He knows God, so he says; he styles himself "the servant ^u of the 14 Lord". He is a living condemnation of all our ideas. The very sight of him
15 is an affliction to us, because his life is not like other people's, and his ways 16 are different. He rejects us like base coin, and avoids us and our ways as if we were filth; he says that the just die happy, and boasts that God is his 17 father. Let us test the truth of his words, let us see what will happen to 18 him in the end; for if the just man is God's son, God will stretch out a hand 19 to him and save him from the clutches of his enemies. Outrage and torment are the means to try him with, to measure his forbearance and learn 20 how long his patience lasts. Let us condemn him to a shameful death, for on his own showing he will have a protector.'

21 So they argued, and very wrong they were; blinded by their own male-22 volence, they did not understand God's hidden plan; they never expected that holiness of life would have its recompense; they thought that inno-23 cence had no reward. But God created man for immortality, and made him 24 the image of his own eternal self; it was the devil's spite that brought death into the world, and the experience of it is reserved for those who take his side.

3 But the souls of the just are in God's hand, and torment shall not touch
2 them. In the eyes of foolish men they seemed to be dead; their departure 3 was reckoned as defeat, and their going from us as disaster. But they are at 4 peace, for though in the sight of men they may be punished, they have a 5 sure hope of immortality; and after a little chastisement they will receive great blessings, because God has tested them and found them worthy to be his. Like gold in a crucible he put them to the proof, and found them acceptable like an offering burnt whole upon the altar. In the moment of God's coming to them they will kindle into flame, like sparks that sweep through stubble; they will be judges and rulers over the nations of the world, and the Lord shall be their king for ever and ever. Those who have put their trust in him shall understand that he is true, and the faithful shall attend upon him in love; they are his chosen, and grace and mercy shall be theirs.

But the godless shall meet with the punishment their evil thoughts deserve, because they took no account of justice and rebelled against the Lord. Wretched indeed is he who thinks nothing of wisdom and discipline; such men's hopes are void, their labours unprofitable, their actions futile; their wives are frivolous, their children criminal, their parenthood is under a curse. No, blessed is the childless woman if she is innocent, if she has never slept with a man in sin; at the great assize of souls she shall find a fruitfulness of her own. Blessed is the eunuch, if he has never done anything against the law and never harboured a wicked thought against the Lord; he shall receive special favour in return for his faith, and a place in the Lord's temple to delight his heart the more. Honest work bears glorious fruit, and wisdom grows from roots that are imperishable. But the children of adultery are like fruit that never ripens; they have sprung from a lawless union, and will come to nothing. Even if they attain length of life, they will be of no account, and at the end their old age will be without honour. If they die young, they will have no hope, no consolation in the hour of judgement; the unjust generation has a hard fate in store for it.

It is better to be childless, provided one is virtuous; for virtue held in remembrance is a kind of immortality, because it wins recognition from God, and from men too. They follow the good man's example while it is with them, and when it is gone they mourn its loss; and through all time virtue makes its triumphal progress, crowned with victory in the contest for prizes that nothing can tarnish. But the swarming progeny of the wicked will come to no good; none of their bastard offshoots will strike deep root or take firm hold. For a time their branches may flourish, but as they have no sure footing they will be shaken by the wind, and by the violence of the winds uprooted. Their boughs will be snapped off half-grown, and their fruit will be worthless, unripe, uneatable, and good for nothing. Children engendered in unlawful union are living evidence of their parents' sin when God brings them to account.

But the good man, even if he dies an untimely death, will be at rest. For it is not length of life and number of years which bring the honour due to age; if men have understanding, they have grey hairs enough, and an unspotted life is the true ripeness of age. There was once such a man who pleased God, and God accepted him and took him while still living from among sinful men. He was snatched away before his mind could be perverted by wickedness or his soul deceived by falsehood (because evil is like witchcraft: it dims the radiance of good, and the waywardness of desire unsettles an innocent mind); in a short time he came to the perfection of a full span of years. His soul was pleasing to the Lord, who 15 removed him early from a wicked world. The mass of men see this and give it no thought; they do not lay to heart this truth, that those whom God has chosen enjoy his grace and mercy, and that he comes to the help of his 16 holy people. Even after his death the just man will shame the godless who are still alive; youth come quickly to perfection will shame the man 17 grown old in sin. Men will see the wise man's end, without understanding what the Lord had purposed for him and why he took him into safe keep-18 ing; they will see it and make light of him, but it is they whom the Lord will laugh to scorn. In death their bodies will be dishonoured, and among 19 the dead they will be an object of contempt for ever; for he shall strike them speechless, fling them headlong, shake them from their foundations, and make an utter desert of them; they shall be full of anguish, and all 20 memory of them shall perish. So in the day of reckoning for their sins, they will come cringing, convicted to their face by their lawless doings.

5 Then the just man shall take his stand, full of assurance, to confront
2 those who oppressed him and made light of all his sufferings; at the sight of him there will be terror and confusion, and they will be beside them-3 selves to see him so unexpectedly safe home. Filled with remorse, groaning and gasping for breath, they will say among themselves: 'Was not this the 4 man who was once our butt, a target for our contempt? Fools that we were,
5 we held his way of life to be madness and his end dishonourable. To think that he is now counted one of the sons of God and assigned a place of his 6 own among God's people! How far we strayed from the road of truth!
7 The lamp of justice never gave us light, the sun never rose upon us. We roamed to our heart's content along the paths of wickedness and ruin, wandering through trackless deserts and ignoring the Lord's highway.
8 What good has our pride done us? What can we show for all our wealth and 9 arrogance? All those things have passed by like a shadow, like a messenger 10 galloping by; like a ship that runs through the surging sea, and when she has passed, not a trace is to be found, no track of her keel among the waves; 11 or as when a bird flies through the air, there is no sign of her passing, but with the stroke of her pinions she lashes the insubstantial breeze and parts it with the whirr and the rush of her beating wings, and so she passes 12 through it, and thereafter it bears no mark of her assault; or as when an arrow is shot at a target, the air is parted and instantly closes up again and 13 no one can tell where it passed through. So we too ceased to be, as soon as we were born; we left no token of virtue behind, and in our wickedness we 14 frittered our lives away.' The hope of a godless man is like down flying on the wind, like spindrift swept before a storm and smoke which the wind whirls away, or like the memory of a guest who stayed for one day and passed on.

15 But the just live for ever; their reward is in the Lord's keeping, and the 16 Most High has them in his care. Therefore royal splendour shall be theirs, and a fair diadem from the Lord himself; he will protect them with his right 17 hand and shield them with his arm. He will put on from head to foot the armour of his wrath, and make all creation his weapon against his enemies.
18 With the cuirass of justice on his breast, and on his head the helmet of doom
19 20 inflexible, he will take holiness for his impenetrable shield and sharpen his relentless anger for a sword; and his whole world shall join him in the fight against his frenzied foes. The bolts of his lightning shall fly straight on the mark, they shall leap upon the target as if his bow in the clouds were drawn in its full arc, and the artillery of his resentment shall let fly a fury of hail. The waters of the sea shall rage over them, and the rivers wash them relentlessly away; a great tempest will arise against them, and blow them away like chaff before a whirlwind. So lawlessness will make the whole world desolate, and active wickedness will overturn the thrones of princes.

In praise of wisdom

HEAR THEN, YOU KINGS, take this to heart; learn your lesson, lords of the wide world; lend your ears, you rulers of the multitude, whose pride is in the myriads of your people. It is the Lord who gave you your authority; your power comes from the Most High. He will put your actions to the test and scrutinize your intentions. Though you are viceroys of his kingly power, you have not been upright judges; you do not stand up for the law or guide your steps by the will of God. Swiftly and terribly will he descend upon you, for judgement falls relentlessly upon those in high place. The small man may find pity and forgiveness, but the powerful will be called powerfully to account; for he who is all men's master is obsequious to none, and is not overawed by greatness. Small and great alike are of his making, and all are under his providence equally, but it is the powerful for whom he reserves the sternest inquisition. To you then who have absolute power I speak, in hope that you may learn wisdom and not go astray; those who in holiness have kept a holy course, will be accounted holy, and those who have learnt that lesson will be able to make their defence. Be eager then to hear me, and long for my teaching; so you will learn.

Wisdom shines bright and never fades; she is easily discerned by those who love her, and by those who seek her she is found. She is quick to make herself known to those who desire knowledge of her; the man who rises early in search of her will not grow weary in the quest, for he will find her seated at his door. To set all one's thoughts on her is prudence in its perfect shape, and to lie wakeful in her cause is the short way to peace of mind. For she herself ranges in search of those who are worthy of her; on their daily path she appears to them with kindly intent, and in all their purposes meets them half-way. The true beginning of wisdom is the desire to learn, and a concern for learning means love towards her; the love of her means the keeping of her laws; to keep her laws is a warrant of immortality; and immortality brings a man near to God. Thus the desire of wisdom leads to kingly stature. If, therefore, you value your thrones and your sceptres, you rulers of the nations, you must honour wisdom, so that you may reign for ever.

What wisdom is, and how she came into being, I will tell you; I will hide no secret from you. From her first beginnings I will trace out her course, and bring the knowledge of her into the light of day; I will not leave the 23 truth untold. Pale envy shall not travel in my company, for the spiteful 24 man will have no share in wisdom. Wise men in plenty are the world's 25 salvation, and a prudent king is the sheet-anchor of his people. Learn what I have to teach you, therefore, and it will be for your good.

7 I too am a mortal man like all the rest, descended from the first man,
 2 who was made of dust, and in my mother's womb I was wrought into flesh during a ten-months space, compacted in blood from the seed of her 3 husband and the pleasure that is joined with sleep. When I was born, I breathed the common air and was laid on the earth that all men tread; and 4 the first sound I uttered, as all do, was a cry; they wrapped me up and 5 nursed me and cared for me. No king begins life in any other way; for all 6 come into life by a single path, and by a single path go out again.

7 Therefore I prayed, and prudence was given to me; I called for help, 8 and there came to me a spirit of wisdom. I valued her above sceptre and 9 throne, and reckoned riches as nothing beside her; I counted no precious stone her equal, because all the gold in the world compared with her is but 10 a little sand, and silver worth no more than clay. I loved her more than health and beauty; I preferred her to the light of day; for her radiance is 11 unsleeping. So all good things together came to me with her, and in her 12 hands was wealth past counting; and all was mine to enjoy, for all follows where wisdom leads, and I was in ignorance before, that she is the begin-13 ning of it all. What I learnt with pure intention I now share without 14 grudging, nor do I hoard for myself the wealth that comes from her. She is an inexhaustible treasure for mankind, and those who profit by it become God's friends, commended to him by the gifts they derive from her instruction.

15 God grant that I may speak according to his will, and that my own thoughts may be worthy of his gifts; for even wisdom is under God's 16 direction and he corrects the wise; we and our words, prudence and know-17 ledge and craftsmanship, all are in his hand. He himself gave me true understanding of things as they are: a knowledge of the structure of the 18 world and the operation of the elements; the beginning and end of epochs and their middle course; the alternating solstices and changing seasons; 19 20 the cycles of the years and the constellations; the nature of living creatures and behaviour of wild beasts; the violent force of winds and the thoughts of 21 men; the varieties of plants and the virtues of roots. I learnt it all, hidden 22 or manifest, for I was taught by her whose skill made all things, wisdom.

For in wisdom there is a spirit intelligent and holy, unique in its kind yet made up of many parts, subtle, free-moving, lucid, spotless, clear, 23 invulnerable,^a loving what is good, eager, unhindered, beneficent, kindly towards men, steadfast, unerring, untouched by care, all-powerful, all-24 surveying, and permeating all intelligent, pure, and delicate spirits. For wisdom moves more easily than motion itself, she pervades and permeates 25 all things because she is so pure. Like a fine mist she rises from the power of God, a pure effluence from the glory of the Almighty; so nothing defiled 26 can enter into her by stealth. She is the brightness that streams from ^b everlasting light, the flawless mirror of the active power of God and the image

^a invulnerable: or working no harm.

^b Or She is the reflection of . . .

of his goodness. She is but one, yet can do everything; herself unchanging, she makes all things new; age after age she enters into holy souls, and makes them God's friends and prophets, for nothing is acceptable to God but the man who makes his home with wisdom. She is more radiant than the sun, and surpasses every constellation; compared with the light of day, she is found to excel; for day gives place to night, but against wisdom no evil can prevail. She spans the world in power from end to end, and orders all things benignly.

Wisdom I loved; I sought her out when I was young and longed to win her for my bride, and I fell in love with her beauty. She adds lustre to her noble birth, because it is given her to live with God, and the Lord of all things has accepted her. She is initiated into the knowledge that belongs to God, and she decides for him what he shall do. If riches are a prize to be desired in life, what is richer than wisdom, the active cause of all things? If prudence shows itself in action, who more than wisdom is the artificer of all that is? If virtue is the object of a man's affections, the fruits of wisdom's labours are the virtues; temperance and prudence, justice and fortitude, these are her teaching, and in the life of men there is nothing of more value than these. If a man longs, perhaps, for great experience, she knows the past, she can infer what is to come; she understands the subtleties of argument and the solving of problems, she can read signs and portents, and can foretell the outcome of events and periods. So I determined to bring her home to live with me, knowing that she would be my counsellor in prosperity and my comfort in anxiety and grief. Through her, I thought, I shall win fame in the eyes of the people and honour among older men, young though I am. When I sit in judgement, I shall prove myself acute, and the great men will admire me; when I say nothing, they will wait for me to speak; when I speak they will attend, and though I hold forth at length, they will lay a finger to their lips and listen. Through her I shall have immortality, and shall leave an undying memory to those who come after me. I shall rule over many peoples, and nations will become my subjects. Grim tyrants will be frightened when they hear of me; among my own people I shall show myself a good king, and on the battlefield a brave one. When I come home, I shall find rest with her; for there is no bitterness in her company, no pain in life with her, only gladness and joy.

I thought this over in my mind, and I perceived that in kinship with wisdom lies immortality and in her friendship is pure delight; that in doing her work is wealth that cannot fail, to be taught in her school gives understanding, and an honourable name is won by converse with her. So I went about in search of some way to win her for my own. As a child I was born to excellence, and a noble soul fell to my lot; or rather, I myself was noble, and I entered into an unblemished body; but I saw that there was no way to gain possession of her except by gift of God—and it was a mark of understanding to know from whom that gift must come. So I pleaded with the Lord, and from the depths of my heart I prayed to him in these words:

God of our fathers, merciful Lord, who hast made all things by thy word, and in thy wisdom hast fashioned man, to be the master of thy whole

3 creation, and to be steward of the world in holiness and righteousness, and 4 to administer justice with an upright heart, give me wisdom, who sits 5 beside thy throne, and do not refuse me a place among thy servants. I am 6 thy slave, thy slave-girl's son, a weak ephemeral man, too feeble to under-7 stand justice and law; for let a man be ever so perfect in the eyes of his 8 fellow-men, if the wisdom that comes from thee is wanting, he will be of 9 no account. Thou didst choose me to be king of thy own people, and 10 judge over thy sons and daughters; thou didst tell me to build a temple on 11 thy sacred mountain and an altar in the city which is thy dwelling-place, 12 a copy of the sacred tabernacle prepared by thee from the beginning. And 13 with thee is wisdom, who is familiar with thy works and was present at the 14 making of the world by thee, who knows what is acceptable to thee and in 15 line with thy commandments. Send her forth from the holy heavens, and 16 from thy glorious throne bid her come down, so that she may labour at my 17 side and I may learn what pleases thee. For she knows and understands all 18 things, and will guide me prudently in all I do, and guard me in her glory.
19 So shall my life's work be acceptable, and I shall judge thy people justly, 20 and be worthy of my father's throne. For how can any man learn what is 21 God's plan? How can he apprehend what the Lord's will is? The reasoning 22 of men is feeble, and our plans are fallible; because a perishable body 23 weighs down the soul, and its frame of clay burdens the mind so full of 24 thoughts. With difficulty we guess even at things on earth, and laboriously 25 find out what lies before our feet; and who has ever traced out what is in 26 heaven? Who ever learnt to know thy purposes, unless thou hadst given 27 him wisdom and sent thy holy spirit down from heaven on high? Thus 28 it was that those on earth were set upon the right path, and men were 29 taught what pleases thee; thus were they preserved by wisdom.

Divine wisdom in history

10 WISDOM IT WAS who kept guard over the first father of the human 11 race, when he alone had yet been made; she saved him after his fall, 12 and gave him the strength to master all things. It was because a wicked 13 man forsook her in his anger that he murdered his brother in a fit of rage, 14 and so destroyed himself. Through his fault the earth was covered with a 15 deluge, and again wisdom came to the rescue, and taught the one good man 16 to pilot his plain wooden hulk. It was she, when heathen nations leagued in 17 wickedness were thrown into confusion, who picked out one good man and 18 kept him blameless in the sight of God, giving him strength to resist his 19 pity for his child. She saved a good man from the destruction of the godless, 20 and he escaped the fire that came down on the Five Cities, cities whose 21 wickedness is still attested by a smoking waste, by plants whose fruit can 22 never ripen, and a pillar of salt standing there as a memorial of an un-23 believing soul. Wisdom they ignored, and they suffered for it, losing the 24 power to recognize what is good and leaving by their lives a monument of 25 folly, such that their enormities can never be forgotten. But wisdom 26 brought her servants safely out of their troubles. It was she, when a good man was a fugitive from his brother's anger, who guided him on the straight path; she showed him that God is king, and gave him knowledge of his holiness;^a she prospered his labours and made his toil productive. When men in their rapacity tried to exploit him, she stood by him and made him rich. She kept him safe from his enemies, and preserved him from treacherous attacks; she gave him victory after a hard struggle, and taught him that godliness is the greatest power of all. It was she who refused to desert a good man when he was sold as a slave; she preserved him from sin and went down into the dungeon with him, nor did she leave him when he was in chains until she had brought him sceptre and kingdom and authority over his persecutors; she gave the lie to his accusers, and brought him undying fame. It was she who rescued a godfearing people, a blameless race, from a nation of oppressors; she inspired a servant of the Lord, and with his signs and wonders he defied formidable kings. She rewarded the labours of godfearing men, she guided them on a marvellous journey and became a covering for them by day and a blaze of stars by night. She brought them over the Red Sea and guided them through its deep waters; but their enemies she engulfed, and cast them up again out of the fathomless deep. So good men plundered the ungodly; they sang the glories of thy holy name, O Lord, and praised with one accord thy power, their champion; for wisdom taught the dumb to speak, and made the tongues of infants eloquent.

Wisdom, working through a holy prophet, brought them success in all they did. They made their way across an unpeopled desert and pitched camp in untrodden wastes; they resisted every enemy, and beat off hostile assaults. When they were thirsty they called upon thee, and water to slake their thirst was given them out of the hard stone of a rocky cliff. The self-same means by which their oppressors had been punished were used to help them in their hour of need: those others found their river no unfailing stream of water, but putrid and befouled with blood, in punishment for their order that all the infants should be killed, while to these thou gavest abundant water unexpectedly. So from the thirst they then endured, they learnt how thou hadst punished their enemies; when they themselves were put to the test, though discipline was tempered with mercy, they understood the tortures of the godless who were sentenced in anger. Thy own people thou didst subject to an ordeal, warning them like a father; those others thou didst put to the torture, like a stern king passing sentence. At home and abroad, they were equally in distress, for a double misery had come upon them, and they groaned as they recalled the past. When they heard that the means of their own punishment had been used to benefit thy people, they saw thy hand in it, O Lord. The man who long ago had been abandoned and exposed, whom they had rejected with contumely, became in the event the object of their wonder and admiration; their thirst was such as the godly never knew.

In return for the insensate imagination of those wicked men, which deluded them into worshipping reptiles devoid of reason, and mere vermin,

^a showed . . . holiness: or gave him a vision of God's realm, and knowledge of his holy angels.

16 thou didst send upon them a swarm of creatures devoid of reason to 17 chastise them, and to teach them that the instruments of a man's sin are 18 the instruments of his punishment. For thy almighty hand, which created 19 the world out of formless matter, was not without other resource: it could 20 have let loose upon them a host of bears or ravening lions or unknown 21 ferocious monsters newly created, either breathing out blasts of fire, or 22 roaring and belching smoke, or flashing terrible sparks like lightning from 23 their eyes, with power not only to exterminate them by the wounds they 24 inflicted, but by their mere appearance to kill them with fright. Even with-25 out these, a single breath would have sufficed to lay them low, with justice
26 in pursuit and the breath of thy power to blow them away; but thou hast 27 ordered all things by measure and number and weight.

28 Great strength is thine to exert at any moment, and the power of thy 29 arm no man can resist, for in thy sight the whole world is like a grain that 30 just tips the scale or a drop of dew alighting on the ground at dawn. But 31 thou art merciful to all men because thou canst do all things; thou dost 32 overlook the sins of men to bring them to repentance; for all existing 33 things are dear to thee and thou hatest nothing that thou hast created—34 why else wouldst thou have made it? How could anything have continued 35 in existence, had it not been thy will? How could it have endured unless 36 called into being by thee? Thou sparest all things because they are thine, 37 our lord and master who lovest all that lives; for thy imperishable breath 38 is in them all.

39 For this reason thou dost correct offenders little by little, admonishing 40 them and reminding them of their sins, in order that they may leave their 41 evil ways and put their trust, O Lord, in thee. For example, the ancient 42 inhabitants of thy holy land were hateful to thee for their loathsome 43 practices, their sorcery and unholy rites, ruthless murders of children, 44 cannibal feasts of human flesh and blood; they were initiates of a secret 45 ritual in which parents slaughtered their defenceless children. Therefore 46 it was thy will to destroy them at the hand of our forefathers, so that the 47 land which is of all lands most precious in thine eyes could receive in God's 48 children settlers worthy of it. And yet thou didst spare their lives because 49 even they were men, sending hornets as the advance-guard of thy army
50 to exterminate them gradually. It was well within thy power to let the godly 51 overwhelm the godless in a pitched battle, or to wipe them out in an 52 instant with cruel beasts or by one stern word. But thou didst carry out 53 their sentence gradually to give them space for repentance, knowing well 54 enough that they came of evil stock, their wickedness ingrained, and that 55 their way of thinking would not change to the end of time, for there was 56 a curse on their race from the beginning.

57 Nor was it out of deference to anyone else that thou gavest them an 58 amnesty for their misdeeds; for to thee no one can say 'What hast thou 59 done?' or dispute thy verdict. Who shall bring a charge against thee for 60 destroying nations which were of thy own making? Who shall appear 61 against thee in court to plead the cause of guilty men? For there is no other 62 god but thee; all the world is thy concern, and there is none to whom thou 63 must prove the justice of thy sentence. There is no king or other ruler who can outface thee on behalf of those whom thou hast punished. But thou art just and orderest all things justly, counting it alien to thy power to condemn a man who ought not to be punished. For thy strength is the source of justice, and it is because thou art master of all that thou sparest all. Thou showest thy strength when men doubt the perfection of thy power; it is when they know it and yet are insolent that thou dost punish them. But thou, with strength at thy command, judgest in mercy and rulest us in great forbearance; for the power is thine to use when thou wilt.

By acts like these thou didst teach thy people that the just man must also be kind-hearted, and thou hast filled thy sons with hope by the offer of repentance for their sins. If thou didst use such care and such indulgence even in punishing thy children's enemies, who deserved to die, granting them time and space to get free of their wickedness, with what discrimination thou didst pass judgement on thy sons, to whose fathers thou hast given sworn covenants full of the promise of good!

So we are chastened by thee, but our enemies thou dost scourge ten thousand times more, so that we may lay thy goodness to heart when we sit in judgement, and may hope for mercy when we ourselves are judged.
This is why the wicked who had lived their lives in heedless folly were tormented by thee with their own abominations. They had strayed far down the paths of error, taking for gods the most contemptible and hideous creatures, deluded like thoughtless children. And so, as though they were mere babes who have not learnt reason, thou didst visit on them a sentence that made them ridiculous; but those who do not take warning from such derisive correction will experience the full weight of divine judgement.
They were indignant at their own sufferings, but finding themselves chastised through the very creatures they had taken to be gods, they recognized that the true God was he whom they had long ago refused to know. Thus the full rigour of condemnation descended on them.

The evils of idolatry

WHAT BORN FOOLS all men were who lived in ignorance of God, 13 who from the good things before their eyes could not learn to know him who really is, and failed to recognize the artificer though they observed his works! Fire, wind, swift air, the circle of the starry signs, rushing water, 2 or the great lights in heaven that rule the world—these they accounted gods. If it was through delight in the beauty of these things that men sup- 3 posed them gods, they ought to have understood how much better is the Lord and Master of it all; for it was by the prime author of all beauty that they were created. If it was through astonishment at their power and 4 influence, men should have learnt from these how much more powerful is he who made them. For the greatness and beauty of created things give us 5 a corresponding idea of their Creator. Yet these men are not greatly to be 6 blamed, for when they go astray they may be seeking God and really wishing to find him. Passing their lives among his works and making a close 7 study of them, they are persuaded by appearances because what they see is 8 9 so beautiful. Yet even so they do not deserve to be excused, for with enough understanding to speculate about the universe, why did they not sooner discover the Lord and Master of it all?

10 The really degraded ones are those whose hopes are set on dead things, who give the name of gods to the work of human hands, to gold and silver fashioned by art into images of living creatures, or to a useless stone carved
11 by a craftsman long ago. Suppose some skilled woodworker fells with his saw a convenient tree and deftly strips off all the bark, then works it up 12 elegantly into some vessel suitable for everyday use; and the pieces left over from his work he uses to cook his food, and eats his fill. But among the 13 waste there is one useless piece, crooked and full of knots, and this he takes and carves to occupy his idle moments, and shapes it with leisurely skill
14 into the image of a human being; or else he gives it the form of some contemptible creature, painting it with vermilion and raddling its surface with 15 red paint, so that every flaw in it is painted over. Then he makes a suitable shrine for it and fixes it on the wall, securing it with iron nails. It is he who 16 has to take the precautions on its behalf to save it from falling, for he knows that it cannot fend for itself: it is only an image, and needs help. Yet he
17 prays to it about his possessions and his wife and children, and feels no shame in addressing this lifeless object; for health he appeals to a thing that 18 is feeble, for life he prays to a dead thing, for aid he implores something utterly incapable, for a prosperous journey something that has not even 19 the use of its legs; in matters of earnings and business and success in handicraft he asks effectual help from a thing whose hands are entirely ineffectual.

14 The man, again, who gets ready for a voyage, and plans to set his course through the wild waves, cries to a piece of wood more fragile than the ship which carries him. Desire for gain invented the ship, and the shipwright with his wisdom built it; ^a but it is thy providence, O Father, that is its pilot, for thou hast given it a pathway through the sea and a safe course
4 among the waves, showing that thou canst save from every danger, so that even a man without skill can put to sea. It is thy will that the things made
5 by thy wisdom should not lie idle; and therefore men trust their lives even to the frailest spar, and passing through the billows on a mere raft come
6 safe to land. Even in the beginning, when the proud race of giants was being brought to an end, the hope of mankind escaped on a raft and,
7 piloted by thy hand, bequeathed to the world a new breed of men. For a blessing is on the wooden vessel through which right has prevailed; but 8 the wooden idol made by human hands is accursed, and so is its maker—he because he made it, and the perishable thing because it was called a god.
9 10 Equally hateful to God are the godless man and his ungodliness; the doer and the deed shall both be punished.

11 And so retribution shall fall upon the idols of the heathen, because though part of God's creation they have been made into an abomination, to make men stumble and to catch the feet of fools. The invention of idols is the root of immorality; they are a contrivance which has blighted human 12 life. They did not exist from the beginning, nor will they be with us for ^a Other witnesses read and wisdom was the shipwright that built it.

ever; superstition brought them into the world, and for good reason a short sharp end is in store for them. 14

Some father, overwhelmed with untimely grief for the child suddenly taken from him, made an image of the child and honoured thenceforth as a god what was once a dead human being, handing on to his household the observance of rites and ceremonies. Then this impious custom, established by the passage of time, was observed as a law. Or again graven images came to be worshipped at the command of despotic princes. When men could not do honour to such a prince before his face because he lived far away, they made a likeness of that distant face, and produced a visible image of the king they sought to honour, eager to pay court to the absent prince as though he were present. Then the cult grows in fervour as those to whom the king is unknown are spurred on by ambitious craftsmen. In his desire, it may be, to please the monarch, a craftsman skilfully distorts the likeness into an ideal form, and the common people, beguiled by the beauty of the workmanship, take for an object of worship him whom lately they honoured as a man. So this becomes a trap for living men: enslaved by mischance or misgovernment, men confer on stocks and stones the name that none may share. 15 16 17 18 19 20 21

Then, not content with gross error in their knowledge of God, men live in the constant warfare of ignorance and call this monstrous evil peace. They perform ritual murders of children and secret ceremonies and the frenzied orgies of unnatural cults; the purity of life and marriage is abandoned; and a man treacherously murders his neighbour or corrupts his wife and breaks his heart. All is in chaos—bloody murder, theft and fraud, corruption, treachery, riot, perjury, honest men driven to distraction; ingratitude, moral corruption, sexual perversion, breakdown of marriage, adultery, debauchery. For the worship of idols, whose names it is wrong even to mention, is the beginning, cause, and end of every evil. Men either indulge themselves to the point of madness, or produce inspired utterance which is all lies, or live dishonest lives, or break their oath without scruple. They perjure themselves and expect no harm because the idols they trust in are lifeless. On two counts judgement will overtake them: because in their devotion to idols they have thought wrongly about God, and because, in their contempt for religion, they have deliberately perjured themselves. It is not any power in what they swear by, but the nemesis of sin, that always pursues the transgression of the wicked. 22 23 24 25 26 27 28 29 30 31

But thou, our God, art kind and true and patient, a merciful ruler of all that is. For even if we sin, we are thine; we acknowledge thy power. But we will not sin, because we know that we are accounted thine. To know thee is the whole of righteousness, and to acknowledge thy power is the root of immortality. We have not been led astray by the perverted inventions of human skill or the barren labour of painters, by some gaudy painted shape, the sight of which arouses in fools a passionate desire for a mere image without life or breath. They are in love with evil and deserve to trust in nothing better, those who do these evil things or hanker after them or worship them. 15 2 3 4 5 6

use, but out of the self-same clay he fashions without distinction the pots that are to serve for honourable uses and the opposite; and what the purpose of each one is to be, the moulder of the clay decides. And then with ill-directed toil he makes a false god out of the same clay, this man who not long before was himself fashioned out of earth and soon returns to the place whence he was taken, when the living soul that was lent to him must be repaid. His concern is not that he must one day fall sick or that his span of life is short; but he must vie with goldsmiths and silversmiths and copy the bronze-workers, and he thinks it does him credit to make counterfeits. His heart is ashes, his hope worth less than common earth, and his life cheaper than his own clay, because he did not recognize by whom he himself was moulded, or who it was that inspired him with an active soul and breathed into him the breath of life. No, he reckons our life a game, and our existence a market where money can be made; 'one must get a living', he says, 'by fair means or foul'. But this man knows better than anyone that he is doing wrong, this maker of fragile pots and idols from the same earthy stuff.

The greatest fools of all, and worse than infantile, were the enemies and oppressors of thy people, for they supposed all their heathen idols to be gods, although they have eyes that cannot see, nostrils that cannot draw breath, ears that cannot hear, fingers that cannot feel, and feet that are useless for walking. It was a man who made them; one who draws borrowed breath gave them their shape. But no human being has the power to shape a god like himself: he is only mortal, but what he makes with his impious hands is dead; and so he is better than the objects of his worship, for he is at least alive—they never can be.

Moreover, these men worship animals, the most revolting animals. Compared with the rest of the brute creation, their divinities are the least intelligent. Even as animals they have no beauty to make them desirable; when God approved and blessed his work, they were left out.

The pattern of divine justice

AND SO THE OPPRESSORS were fittingly chastised by creatures like these: they were tormented by swarms of vermin. But while they were punished, thou didst make provision for thy people, sending quails for them to eat, an unwonted food to satisfy their hunger; for thy purpose was that whereas those others, hungry as they were, should turn in loathing even from necessary food because the creatures sent upon them were so disgusting, thy people after a short spell of scarcity should enjoy unwonted delicacies. It was right that the scarcity falling on the oppressors should be inexorable, and that thy people should learn by brief experience how their enemies were tormented. Even when fierce and furious snakes attacked thy people and the bites of writhing serpents were spreading death, thy anger did not continue to the bitter end; their short trouble was sent them as a lesson, and they were given a symbol^u of salvation to remind them of the requirements of thy law. For any man who turned towards it was saved, not by the thing he looked upon but by thee, the saviour of all. In this way thou didst convince our enemies that thou art the deliverer from every evil. Those other men died from the bite of locusts and flies, and no remedy was found to save their lives, because it was fitting for them to be chastised by such creatures. But thy sons did not succumb to the fangs of snakes, however venomous, because thy mercy came to their aid and healed them. It was to remind them of thy utterances that they were bitten and quickly recovered; it was for fear they might fall into deep forgetfulness and become unresponsive to thy kindness. For it was neither herb nor poultice that cured them, but thy all-healing word, O Lord. Thou hast the power of life and death, thou bringest a man down to the gates of death and up again. Man in his wickedness may kill, but he cannot bring back the breath of life that has gone forth nor release a soul that death has arrested.

But from thy hand there is no escape; for godless men who refused to acknowledge thee were scourged by thy mighty arm, pursued by extraordinary storms of rain and hail in relentless torrents, and utterly destroyed by fire. Strangest of all, in water, that quenches everything, the fire burned more fiercely; creation itself fights to defend the godly. At one time the flame was moderated, so that it should not burn up the living creatures inflicted on the godless, who were to learn from this that it was by God's justice that they were pursued; at another time it blazed even under water with more than the natural power of fire, to destroy the produce of a sinful land. By contrast, thy own people were given angels' food, and thou didst send them from heaven, without labour of their own, bread ready to eat, rich in delight of every kind and suited to every taste. The sustenance thou didst supply showed thy sweetness towards thy children, and the bread, serving the desire of each man who ate it, was changed into what he wished. Its snow and ice resisted fire and did not melt, to teach them that whereas their enemies' crops had been destroyed by fire that blazed in the hail and flashed through the teeming rain, that same fire had now forgotten its own power, in order that the godly might be fed.

For creation, serving thee its maker, exerts its power to punish the godless and relaxes into benevolence towards those who trust in thee. And so it was at that time too: it adapted itself endlessly in the service of thy universal bounty, according to the desire of thy suppliants. So thy sons, O Lord, whom thou hast chosen, were to learn that it is not the growing of crops by which mankind is nourished, but it is thy word that sustains those who trust in thee. That substance, which fire did not destroy, simply melted away when warmed by the sun's first rays, to teach us that we must rise before the sun to give thee thanks and pray to thee as daylight dawns. The hope of an ungrateful man will melt like the hoar-frost of winter, and drain away like water that runs to waste.

Great are thy judgements and hard to expound; and thus it was that uninstructed souls went astray. Thus heathen men imagined that they could lord it over thy holy people; but, prisoners of darkness and captives of unending night, they lay each immured under his own roof, fugitives from

3 eternal providence. Thinking that their secret sins might escape detection
 4 beneath a dark pall of oblivion, they lay in disorder, dreadfully afraid,
 5 terrified by apparitions. For the dark corner that held them offered no 6 refuge from fear, but loud unnerving noises roared around them, and 7 phantoms with downcast unsmiling faces passed before their eyes. No 8 fire, however great, had force enough to give them light, nor had the 9 brilliant flaming stars strength to illuminate that hideous darkness. There 10 shone upon them only a blaze, of no man's making, that terrified them, 11 and in their panic they thought the real world even worse than that imagin-12 ary sight. The tricks of the sorcerers' art failed, and all their boasted wisdom
 13 was exposed and put to shame; for the very men who profess to drive 14 away fear and trouble from sick souls were themselves sick with dread
 15 that made them ridiculous. Even if nothing frightful was there to terrify 16 them, yet having once been scared by the advancing vermin and the hiss-
 17 ing serpents, they collapsed in terror, refusing even to look upon the air
 18 from which there can be no escape.^a For wickedness proves a cowardly
 19 thing when condemned by an inner witness, and in the grip of conscience
 20 gives way to forebodings of disaster. Fear is nothing but an abandonment 21 of the aid that comes from reason; and hope, defeated by this inward weak-
 22 ness, capitulates before ignorance of the cause by which the torment 23 comes.

24 So all that night, which really had no power against them because it 25 came upon them from the powerless depths of hell, they slept the same 26 haunted sleep, now harried by portentous spectres, now paralysed by the 27 treachery of their own souls; sudden and unforeseen, fear came upon them.
 28 Thus a man would fall down where he stood and be held in durance, 29 locked in a prison that had no bars. Farmer or shepherd or labourer toiling
 30 in the wilds, he was caught, and awaited the inescapable doom; the same 31 chain of darkness bound all alike. The whispering breeze, the sweet 32 melody of birds in spreading branches, the steady beat of water that rushes 33 by, the headlong crash of rocks falling, the racing of creatures as they bound 34 along unseen, the roar of fierce wild beasts, or echo reverberating from 35 hollows in the hills—all these sounds paralysed them with fear. The whole 36 world was bathed in the bright light of day, and went about its tasks un-37 hindered; those men alone were overspread with heavy night, fit image of 38 the darkness that awaited them; and heavier than the darkness was the 39 burden each was to himself.

40 But for thy holy ones there shone a great light. And so their enemies, 41 hearing their voices but not seeing them, counted them happy because 42 they had not suffered like themselves, gave thanks for their forbearance 43 under provocation, and begged as a favour that they should part company.
 44 Accordingly, thy gift was a pillar of fire to be the guide of their uncharted 45 journey, a sun that would not scorch them on their glorious expedition.
 46 Their enemies did indeed deserve to lose the light of day and be kept 47 prisoners in darkness, for they had kept in durance thy sons, through whom 48 the imperishable light of the law was to be given to the world.

49 They planned to kill the infant children of thy holy people, but when one child had been exposed to death and rescued, thou didst deprive them of all their children in requital, and drown them all together in the swelling waves. Of that night our forefathers were given warning in advance, so that, having sure knowledge, they might be heartened by the promises which they trusted. Thy people were looking for the deliverance of the godly and the destruction of their enemies; for thou didst use the same means to punish our enemies and to make us glorious when we heard thy call. The devout children of a virtuous race were offering sacrifices in secret, and covenanted with one consent to keep the law of God and to share alike in the same blessings and the same dangers, and they were already singing their sacred ancestral songs of praise. In discordant contrast there came an outcry from their enemies, as piteous lamentation for their children spread abroad. Master and slave were punished together with the same penalty; king and common man suffered the same fate. All alike had their dead, past counting, struck down by one common form of death; there were not enough living even to bury the dead; at one stroke the most precious of their offspring had perished. Relying on their magic arts, they had scouted all warnings; but when they saw their first-born dead, they confessed that thy people have God as their father.

^a Or there is no need to escape.

All things were lying in peace and silence, and night in her swift course was half spent, when thy almighty Word leapt from thy royal throne in heaven into the midst of that doomed land like a relentless warrior, bearing the sharp sword of thy inflexible decree, and stood and filled it all with death, his head touching the heavens, his feet on earth. At once nightmare phantoms appalled them, and unlooked-for fears set upon them; and as they flung themselves to the ground half dead, one here, one there, they confessed the reason for their deaths; for the dreams that tormented them had taught them before they died, so that they should not die ignorant of the reason why they suffered.

The godly also had a taste of death when a multitude were struck down in the wilderness; but the divine wrath did not long continue. A blameless man was quick to be their champion, bearing the weapons of his priestly ministry, prayer and the incense that propitiates; he withstood the divine anger and set a limit to the disaster, thus showing that he was thy servant. He overcame the avenging fury not by bodily strength or force of arms; by words he subdued the avenger, appealing to the sworn covenants made with our forefathers. When the dead had already fallen in heaps one on another, he interposed himself and beat back the divine wrath, barring its line of attack upon the living. On his long-skirted robe the whole world was represented; the glories of the fathers were engraved on his four rows of precious stones; and thy majesty was in the diadem upon his head. To these the destroyer yielded, for these made him afraid; only to taste his wrath had been enough.

But the goddess were pursued by pitiless anger to the bitter end, for God knew their future also: how after allowing thy people to depart, and even urging their departure, they would change their minds and set out in pursuit. While they were still mourning, still lamenting at the graves of their dead, they rushed into another foolish decision, and pursued as

4 fugitives those whom they had begged to leave. For the fate they had merited was drawing them on to this conclusion and made them forget what had happened, so that they might suffer the torments still needed to 5 complete their punishment, and that thy people might achieve an incredible journey, and that their enemies might meet an outlandish death.

6 The whole creation, with all its elements, was refashioned in subservience
7 to thy commands, so that thy servants might be preserved unscathed. Men gazed at the cloud that overshadowed the camp, at dry land emerging where before was only water, at an open road leading out of the Red Sea, 8 and a grassy plain in place of stormy waves, across which the whole nation passed, under the shelter of thy hand, after all the marvels they had seen.
9 They were like horses at pasture, like skipping lambs, as they praised thee, 10 O Lord, by whom they were rescued. For they still remembered their life in a foreign land: how instead of cattle the earth bred lice, and instead of 11 fish the river spewed up swarms of frogs; and how, after that, they had seen a new sort of bird when, driven by greed, they had begged for delicacies to 12 eat, and for their relief quails came up from the sea.

13 So punishment came upon those sinners, not unheralded by violent thunderbolts. They suffered justly for their own wickedness, for they had 14 raised bitter hatred of strangers to a new pitch. There had been others who refused to welcome strangers when they came to them, but these made 15 slaves of guests who were their benefactors. There is indeed a judgement awaiting those who treated foreigners as enemies; but these, after a festal 16 welcome, oppressed with hard labour men who had earlier shared their rights. They were struck with blindness also, like the men at the door of 17 the one good man, when yawning darkness fell upon them and each went groping for his own doorway.

18 For as the notes of a lute can make various tunes with different names though each retains its own pitch, so the elements combined among themselves in different ways, as can be accurately inferred from the observa-19 tion of what happened. Land animals took to the water and things that swim migrated to dry land; fire retained its normal power even in water, 20 and water forgot its quenching properties. Flames on the other hand failed to consume the flesh of perishable creatures that walked in them, and the 21 substance of heavenly food, like ice and prone to melt, no longer melted.

22 In everything, O Lord, thou hast made thy people great and glorious, and hast not neglected in every time and place to be their helper.

ECCLESIASTICUS

OR

THE WISDOM OF JESUS SON OF SIRACH

Preface

A LEGACY OF GREAT VALUE has come to us through the law, the prophets, and the writers who followed in their steps, and for this Israel's traditions of discipline and wisdom deserve recognition. It is the duty of those who study the scriptures not only to become expert themselves, but also to use their scholarship for the benefit of the outside world through both the spoken and the written word. So my grandfather Jesus, who had applied himself industriously to the study of the law, the prophets, and the other writings of our ancestors, and had gained a considerable proficiency in them, was moved to compile a book of his own on the themes of discipline and wisdom, so that, with this further help, scholars might make greater progress in their studies by living as the law directs.

You are asked then to read with sympathetic attention, and make allowances if, in spite of all the devoted work I have put into the translation, some of the expressions appear inadequate. For it is impossible for a translator to find precise equivalents for the original Hebrew in another language. Not only with this book, but with the law, the prophets, and the rest of the writings, it makes no small difference to read them in the original.

When I came to Egypt and settled there in the thirty-eighth year of^a the reign of King Euergetes, I found great scope for education; and I thought it very necessary to spend some energy and labour on the translation of this book. Ever since then I have been applying my skill night and day to complete it, and to publish it for the use of those who have made their home in a foreign land, and wish to become scholars by training themselves to live according to the law.

The ways of wisdom

1 ALL WISDOM is from the Lord;
 2 wisdom is with him for ever.
 3 Who can count the sand of the sea,
 the drops of rain, or the days of unending time?
 4 Who can measure the height of the sky,
 the breadth of the earth, or the depth of the abyss ^a?
 5 Wisdom was first of all created things;
 intelligent purpose has been there from the beginning. ^b
 6 Who has laid bare the root of wisdom?
 Who has understood her subtlety? ^c 7 One alone is wise, the Lord most terrible, seated upon his throne.
 8 It is he who created her, surveyed and measured her,
 and infused her into all his works.
 9 To all mankind he has given her in some measure,
 but in plenty to those who love him.

11 THE FEAR OF THE LORD brings honour and pride, cheerfulness and a garland of joy.
 12 The fear of the Lord gladdens the heart;
 it brings cheerfulness and joy and long life.
 13 Whoever fears the Lord will be prosperous at the last;
 blessings will be his on the day of his death.
 14 The essence of wisdom is the fear of the Lord;
 she is created with the faithful in their mother's womb, 15 she has built an everlasting home among men,
 and will keep faith with their descendants.
 16 Those who fear the Lord have their fill of wisdom;
 she gives them deep draughts of her wine.
 17 She stocks her home with all that the heart can desire and her storehouses with her produce.
 18 Wisdom's garland is the fear of the Lord, flowering with peace and health.
 19 She showers down knowledge and ability,
 and bestows high honour on those who hold fast to her.
 20 Wisdom is rooted in the fear of the Lord, and long life grows on her branches. ^d

22 Unjust rage can never be excused;
 when anger tips the scale it is a man's downfall.

^a Some witnesses add or wisdom.

^b Some witnesses add (5) The fountain of wisdom is God's word on high, and her ways are the eternal commandments.

^c Some witnesses add (7) Who has discovered all that wisdom knows, or understood her wealth of experience?

^d Some witnesses add (21) The fear of the Lord drives away sins, and wherever it dwells it averts his anger.

Until the right time comes, a patient man restrains himself, 23 and afterwards cheerfulness breaks through again; until the right moment he keeps his thoughts to himself, 24
and later his good sense is on everyone's lips.
In wisdom's store are wise proverbs, 25
but godliness is detestable to a sinner.
If you long for wisdom, keep the commandments, 26
and the Lord will give it you in plenty.
For the fear of the Lord is wisdom and discipline; 27
fidelity and gentleness are his delight.
Do not disregard the fear of the Lord 28
or approach him without sincerity.
Do not act a part before the eyes of the world; 29
keep guard over your lips.
Never be arrogant, for fear you fall 30
and bring disgrace on yourself;
the Lord will reveal your secrets and humble you before the assembly, because it was not the fear of the Lord that prompted you, ^a but your heart was full of hypocrisy.

MY SON, if you aspire to be a servant of the Lord, 2 prepare yourself for testing.
Set a straight course, be resolute, 2
and do not lose your head in time of disaster.
Hold fast to him, never desert him, 3
if you would end your days in prosperity.
Bear every hardship that is sent you; 4 be patient under humiliation, whatever the cost.
For gold is assayed by fire, 5
and the Lord proves men in the furnace of humiliation.
Trust him and he will help you; 6
steer a straight course and set your hope on him.

You who fear the Lord, wait for his mercy; 7
do not stray or you will fall.
You who fear the Lord, trust in him, 8
and you shall not miss your reward.
You who fear the Lord, expect prosperity, 9 lasting happiness and favour.
Consider the past generations and see: 10
was anyone who trusted the Lord ever disappointed?
was anyone who stood firm in the fear of him ever deserted?
did he ever neglect anyone who prayed to him?
For the Lord is compassionate and merciful; 11
he forgives sins and comes to the rescue in time of trouble.

^a Or because you had no concern for the fear of the Lord.

- 12 Woe to faint hearts and nerveless hands and to the sinner who leads a double life!
- 13 Woe to the feeble-hearted! they have no faith,
and therefore shall go unprotected.
- 14 Woe to you who have given up the struggle!
What will you do when the Lord's reckoning comes?
- 15 Those who fear the Lord never disobey his words;
and all who love him keep to his ways.
- 16 Those who fear the Lord try to do his will;
and all who love him steep themselves in the law.
- 17 Those who fear the Lord are always prepared;
they humble themselves before him and say:
- 18 'We will fall into the hands of the Lord, not into the hands of men,
for his majesty is equalled by his mercy.'

- 3 CHILDREN, LISTEN TO ME, for I am your father;
do what I tell you, if you wish to be safe.
- 2 It is the Lord's will that a father should be honoured by his children, and a mother's rights recognized by her sons.
- 3 Respect for a father atones for sins,
4 and to honour your mother is to lay up a fortune.
- 5 A son who respects his father will be made happy by his own children;
when he prays, he will be heard.
- 6 He who honours his father will have a long life,
and he who obeys the Lord comforts his mother;
- 7 he obeys his parents as though he were their slave.
- 8 My son, honour your father by word and deed,
so that you may receive his blessing.
- 9 For a father's blessing strengthens his children's houses,
but a mother's curse uproots their foundations.
- 10 Never seek honour at the cost of discredit to your father;
how can his discredit bring honour to you?
- 11 A man is honoured if his father is honoured,
and neglect of a mother is a disgrace to children.
- 12 My son, look after your father in his old age;
do nothing to vex him as long as he lives.
- 13 Even if his mind fails, make allowances for him, and do not despise him because you are in your prime.
- 14 If you support your father it will never be forgotten,
but be put to your credit against your sins;
- 15 when you are in trouble, it will be remembered in your favour,
and your sins will melt away like frost in the sunshine.
- 16 To leave your father in the lurch is like blasphemy, and to provoke your mother's anger is to call down the Lord's curse.

My son, be unassuming in all you do, and those the Lord approves will love you.	17
The greater you are, the humbler you must be, and the Lord will show you favour. ^a	18
For his power is great, and he is honoured by the humble.	20
Do not pry into things too hard for you or examine what is beyond your reach.	21
Meditate on the commandments you have been given; what the Lord keeps secret is no concern of yours.	22
Do not busy yourself with matters that are beyond you; even what has been shown you is above man's grasp.	23
Many have been led astray by their speculations, and false conjectures have impaired their judgement. ^b	24
Stubbornness will come to a bad end, and the man who flirts with danger will lose his life.	26
Stubbornness brings a load of troubles; the sinner piles sin on sin.	27
When calamity befalls the arrogant, there is no cure; wickedness is too deeply rooted in him.	28
A sensible man will take a proverb to heart; an attentive ear is the desire of the wise.	29
As water quenches a blazing fire, so almsgiving atones for sin.	30
He who repays a good turn is mindful of the future; when he falls he will find support.	31
My son, do not cheat a poor man of his livelihood or keep him waiting with hungry eyes.	4
Do not tantalize a starving man or drive him to desperation in his need.	2
If a man is desperate, do not add to his troubles or keep him waiting for the charity he asks.	3
Do not reject the appeal of a man in distress or turn your back on the poor;	4
when he begs for alms, do not look the other way and so give him reason to curse you, for if he curses you in his bitterness,	5
his Maker will listen to his prayer.	6
Make yourself popular in the assembly, and show deference to the great.	7
When a poor man speaks to you, give him your attention and answer his greeting politely.	8

^a Some witnesses add (19) Many are high and mighty; but he reveals his secrets to the modest.

^b Some witnesses add (25) Without eyes you will be deprived of light; if you have no knowledge, do not lay claim to it.

- 9 Rescue the downtrodden from the oppressor, and be firm when giving a verdict.
- 10 Be a father to orphans
and like a husband to their mother;
then the Most High will call you his son, and his love for you will be greater than a mother's.
- 11 WISDOM RAISES her sons to greatness and cares for those who seek her.
- 12 To love her is to love life;
to rise early for her sake is to be filled with joy.
- 13 The man who attains her will win recognition;
the Lord's blessing rests upon every place she enters.
- 14 To serve her is to serve the Holy One,
and the Lord loves those who love her.
- 15 Her dutiful servant will give laws to the heathen,
and because he listens to her, his home will be secure.
- 16 If he trusts her, he will possess her and bequeath her to his descendants.
- 17 At first she will lead him by devious ways,
filling him with craven fears.
Her discipline will be a torment to him,
and her decrees a hard test until he trusts her with all his heart.^a
- 18 Then she will come straight back to him again and gladden him, and reveal her secrets to him.
- 19 But if he strays from her, she will desert him and abandon him to his fate.
- 20 WATCH YOUR CHANCE and defend yourself against wrong,
and do not be over-modest in your own cause;
for there is a modesty that leads to sin,
as well as a modesty that brings honour and favour.
- 22 Do not be untrue to yourself in deference to another,
or so diffident that you fail in your duty.
- 23 Never remain silent when a word might put things right,
for wisdom shows itself by speech,
and a man's education must find expression in words.
- 25 Do not argue against the truth,
but have a proper sense of your own ignorance.
- 26 Never be ashamed to admit your mistakes,
nor try to swim against the current.
- 27 Do not let yourself be a doormat to a fool or curry favour with the powerful.
- 28 Fight to the death for truth,
and the Lord God will fight on your side.

^a Or until she can trust him.

Do not be forward in your speech but slack and neglectful in your work.	29
Do not play the lion in your home or swagger ^a among your servants.	30
Do not keep your hand open to receive and close it when it is your turn to give.	31
Do not rely upon your money and say, 'I am independent.'	5
Do not yield to every impulse you can gratify or follow the desires of your heart.	2
Do not say, 'I am my own master'; you may be sure the Lord will call you to account.	3
Do not say, 'I sinned, yet nothing happened to me'; it is only that the Lord is very patient.	4
Do not be so confident of pardon that you sin again and again.	5
Do not say, 'His mercy is so great, he will pardon my sins, however many.'	6
To him belong both mercy and wrath, and sinners feel the weight of his retribution.
Come back to the Lord without delay; do not put it off from one day to the next, or suddenly the Lord's wrath will be upon you, and you will perish at the time of reckoning.	7
Do not rely upon ill-gotten gains, for they will not avail in time of calamity.	8
Do not winnow in every wind or walk along every path. ^b	9
Stand firmly by what you know and be consistent in what you say.	10
Be quick to listen, but take time over your answer.	11
Answer a man if you know what to say, but if not, hold your tongue.	12
Honour or shame can come through speaking, and a man's tongue may be his downfall.	13
Do not get a name for being a gossip or lay traps with your tongue; for as there is shame in store for the thief, so there is harsh censure for duplicity.	14
Avoid the little faults as well as the great	15
Do not change from a friend into an enemy, for a bad name brings shame and disgrace, and this is the mark of duplicity.	6

^a Possible meaning; Gk. obscure.^b Gk. adds this is the mark of duplicity (from 6. 1).

2 Never be roused by violent passions;
 they will tear you apart like a bull,^a 3 they will eat up your leaves, destroy your fruit, and leave you a withered tree.
 4 Evil passion ruins the man who harbours it, to the delight of his gloating enemies.
 5 Pleasant words win many friends,
 and an affable manner makes acquaintance easy.
 6 Accept a greeting from everyone,
 but advice from only one in a thousand.
 7 When you make a friend, begin by testing him,
 and be in no hurry to trust him.
 8 Some friends are loyal when it suits them but desert you in time of trouble.
 9 Some friends turn into enemies and shame you by making the quarrel public.
 10 Another sits at your table,
 but is nowhere to be found in time of trouble;
 11 when you are prosperous, he will be your second self and make free with your servants, 12 but if you come down in the world, he will turn against you and you will not see him again.
 13 Hold your enemies at a distance,
 and keep a wary eye on your friends.
 14 A faithful friend is a secure shelter;
 whoever finds one has found a treasure.
 15 A faithful friend is beyond price;
 his worth is more than money can buy.
 16 A faithful friend is an elixir of life, found only by those who fear the Lord.
 17 The man who fears the Lord keeps his friendships in repair, for he treats his neighbour as himself.

18 MY SON, seek wisdom's discipline while you are young,
 and when your hair is white, you will find her still.
 19 Come to her like a farmer ploughing and sowing;
 then wait for her plentiful harvest.
 If you cultivate her, you will labour for a little while,
 but soon you will be eating her crops.
 20 How harsh she seems to the undisciplined!
 The fool cannot abide her;
 21 like a stone she is a burden that tests his strength,
 but he is quick to toss her aside.
 22 Wisdom well deserves her name, for she is not accessible to many.

^a they . . . bull: probable meaning; Gk. and Heb. both obscure.

Listen, my son, accept my judgement; do not reject my advice.	23
Put your feet in wisdom's fetters and your neck into her collar.	24
Stoop to carry her on your shoulders and do not chafe at her bonds.	25
Come to her whole-heartedly, and keep to her ways with all your might.	26
Follow her track, and she will make herself known to you; once you have grasped her, never let her go.	27
In the end you will find the relief she offers; she will transform herself into joy for you.	28
Her fetters will become your strong defence and her collar a gorgeous robe.	29
Her yoke ^a is a golden ornament and her bonds a purple cord.	30
You shall put her on like a gorgeous robe and wear her like a splendid crown.	31
If it is your wish, my son, you can be trained; if you give your mind to it, you can become clever; if you enjoy listening, you will learn; if you are attentive, you will grow wise.	32 33 33
When you stand among your elders, decide who is wise and join him.	34
Listen gladly to every godly argument and see that no wise proverb escapes you.	35
If you discover a wise man, rise early to visit him; let your feet wear out his doorstep.	36
Ponder the decrees of the Lord and study his commandments at all times.	37
He will strengthen your mind and grant your desire for wisdom.
Do no evil, and evil will not come upon you; turn away from wrong, and it will avoid you.	7 2
Do not sow in the furrows of injustice, for fear of reaping a sevenfold crop.	3
Do not ask the Lord for high office or the king for preferment.	4
Do not pose as a righteous man before the Lord or play the sage in the king's presence.	5
Do not aspire to be a judge, unless you have the strength to put an end to injustice; for you may be intimidated by a man of rank and so compromise your integrity.	6
Do not commit an offence against the community and so incur a public disgrace.	7

^a So Heb.; Gk. Upon her.

- 8 Do not pile sin upon sin,
for even one is enough to make you guilty.
- 9 Do not say, 'My liberality will be taken into account ;
when I make an offering to God Most High he will accept it.'
- 10 Do not grow weary of praying or neglect the giving of charity.
- 11 Never laugh at a man in his bitter humiliation,
for there is One who both humbles and exalts.
- 12 Do not plot to deceive your brother or pay back a friend in his own coin.
- 13 Refuse ever to tell a lie ;
it is a habit from which no good comes.
- 14 Never be garrulous among your elders or repeat yourself when you pray.
- 15 Do not resent manual labour or farm-work,
for it was ordained by the Most High.
- 16 Do not enlist in the ranks of sinners ;
remember that retribution will not delay.
- 17 Humble yourself to the uttermost,
for the doom of the impious is fire and worms.
- 18 Do not part with a friend for gain,^a or a true brother for all the gold of Ophir.
- 19 Do not lose the chance of a wise and good wife,
for her attractions are worth more than gold.
- 20 Do not ill-treat a slave who works honestly or a hired servant whose heart is in his work.
- 21 Love a good slave from the bottom of your heart and do not grudge him his freedom.
- 22 Have you cattle? Take care of them, and if they bring you profit, keep them.
- 23 Have you sons? Discipline them and break them in from their earliest years.
- 24 Have you daughters? See that they are chaste, and do not be too lenient with them.
- 25 Marry your daughter, and a great load will be off your hands ;
but give her to a sensible husband.
- 26 If you have a wife after your own heart, do not divorce her ;
but do not trust yourself to one you cannot love.
- 27 Honour your father with all your heart and do not forget your mother's birth-pangs ;
- 28 remember that your parents brought you into the world ;
how can you repay what they have done for you?
- 29 Fear the Lord with all your heart and reverence his priests.
- 30 Love your Maker with all your might and do not leave his ministers without support.

^a Probable reading (compare 27. 1), supported by Vss. ; Gk. for a trifle.

Fear the Lord and honour the priest and give him his dues, as you have been commanded, the firstfruits, the guilt-offering, and the shoulder of the victim, the dedication sacrifice, and the firstfruits of holy things.	31
Be open-handed also with the poor, so that your own well-being may be complete.	32
Every living man appreciates generosity; do not withhold your kindness even when a man is dead.	33
Do not turn your back on those who weep, but mourn with those who mourn.	34
Do not hesitate to visit the sick, for by such visits you will win their affection.	35
Whatever you are doing, remember the end that awaits you; then all your life you will never go wrong.	36
Do not pit yourself against a great man, for fear of falling into his power.	8
Do not quarrel with a rich man; you may be sure he will outbid you.	2
For money has been the ruin of many and has misled the minds of kings.
Do not argue with a long-winded man, and so add fuel to his fire.	3
Never make fun of an ill-mannered man, or you may hear your ancestors insulted.	4
Do not rebuke a man who is already penitent; remember that we are all guilty.	5
Despise no man for being old; some of us are growing old as well.	6
Do not be smug over another man's death; remember that we must all die.	7
Do not neglect the studies of the learned, but apply yourself to their maxims; from these you will learn discipline, and how to be the servant of princes.	8
Do not ignore the discourse of your elders, for they themselves learned from their fathers; they can teach you to understand and to have an answer ready in time of need.	9
Do not kindle a sinner's coals, for fear of being burnt in the flames of his fire.	10
Do not let a man's insolence bring you to your feet; he will only sit waiting to trap you with your own words.	11
Do not lend to a man with more influence than yourself, or, if you do, write off the loan as a loss.	12
Do not stand surety beyond your means, and, when you do stand surety, be prepared to pay.	13

- 14 Do not go to law with a judge, for in deference to his position they will give him the verdict.
- 15 Do not go travelling with a reckless man:
you may find him a burden on you.
He will do as he fancies,
and his folly will bring death on you as well.
- 16 Do not fall out with a hot-tempered man or walk with him in unfrequented places;
he thinks nothing of bloodshed,
and where no help is at hand he will set upon you.
- 17 Never discuss your plans with a fool,
for he cannot keep a secret.
- 18 Do nothing private in the presence of a stranger;
you do not know what use he will make of it.
- 19 Do not tell what is in your mind to all comers or accept favours from them.
- 9 Do not be jealous over the wife you cherish,
and so put into her head the idea of wronging you.
- 2 Do not surrender yourself to a woman and let her trample down your strength.
- 3 Do not go near a loose woman,
for fear of falling into her snares.
- 4 Do not keep company with a dancing-girl,
or you may be caught by her tricks.
- 5 Do not let your mind dwell on a virgin,
or you may be trapped into paying damages for her.
- 6 Never surrender yourself to prostitutes,
for fear of losing all you possess,
nor gaze about you in the city streets or saunter in deserted corners.
- 8 Do not let your eye linger on a woman's figure or your thoughts dwell on beauty not yours to possess.
Many have been seduced by the beauty of a woman,
which kindles passion like fire.
- 9 Never sit at table with another man's wife or join her in a drinking party, for fear of succumbing to her charms
and slipping into fatal disaster.
- 10 Do not desert an old friend;
a new one is not worth as much.
A new friend is like new wine;
you do not enjoy drinking it until it has matured.
- 11 Do not envy a bad man his success;
you do not know what fate is in store for him.
- 12 Take no pleasure in the pleasures of the wicked;
remember that they will not go scot-free all their lives.

13 as its origin is sin,
 so persistence in it brings on a deluge of depravity.
 Therefore the Lord sends upon them signal punishments and brings them to utter disaster.

14 The Lord overturns the thrones of princes and enthrones the gentle in their place.
 15 The Lord pulls up nations by the roots and plants the humble instead.
 16 The Lord lays waste the territory of nations, destroying them to the very foundations of the earth.
 17 Some he shrivels away to nothing, so that all memory of them vanishes from the earth.
 18 Pride was not the Creator's design for man nor violent anger for those born of woman.

19 What creature is worthy of honour? Man.
 What men? Those who fear the Lord.
 What creature is worthy of contempt? Man.
 What men? Those who break the commandments.
 20 As the members of the family honour their head,
 so the Lord honours those who fear him.^a 22 The rich, the famous, and the poor—their only boast is the fear of the Lord.
 23 It is unjust to despise a poor man who is intelligent,
 and wrong to honour a man who is a sinner.
 24 The prince, the judge, and the ruler win high honours, but none of them is as great as the godfearing man.
 25 The wise slave will have free men to wait on him,
 and a man of sense will not grumble at it.

26 DO NOT BE TOO CLEVER to do a day's work or boast when you have nothing to live on.
 27 It is better to work and have more than enough than to boast and go hungry.
 28 My son, in all modesty, keep your self-respect and value yourself at your true worth.
 29 Who will speak up for a man who is his own enemy, or respect one who disparages himself?
 30 A poor man may be honoured for his wisdom,
 a rich man for his wealth;
 31 if a man is honoured in poverty, how much more in wealth!
 And if he is despised in wealth, how much more in poverty!
 11 A poor man with wisdom can hold his head high and take his seat among the great.

^a Some witnesses add (21) Fear the Lord, and you will be accepted; be obstinate and proud, and you will be rejected.

Do not overrate one man for his good looks or be repelled by another man's appearance.	2
The bee is small among winged creatures, yet her produce takes first place for sweetness.	3
Do not pride yourself on your fine clothes or be haughty when honours come to you; for the Lord can perform marvels which are hidden from the eyes of men.	4
Many kings have been reduced to sitting on the ground, while a mere nobody has worn the crown.	5
Many rulers have been stripped of their honours, and great men have found themselves at the mercy of others.	6
Do not find fault before examining the evidence; think first, and criticize afterwards.	7
Do not answer without first listening, and do not interrupt when another is speaking.	8
Never take sides in a quarrel not your own or become involved in the disputes of rascals.	9
My son, do not engage in too many transactions; if you attempt too much, you will come to grief. When you are in pursuit, you will not overtake; when you are in flight, you will not escape.	10
One man slaves and strains and hurries and is all the farther behind.	11
Another is slow-witted and in need of help, lacking in strength and abounding in poverty; but the Lord turns a kindly eye upon him and lifts him up out of his miserable plight.	12
He raises him to dignity to the amazement of all.	13
Good fortune and bad, life and death, poverty and wealth, all come from the Lord. ^a	14
His gifts to the devout are lasting; his approval brings unending success.	17
A man may grow rich by stinting and sparing, but what does he get for his pains?	18
When he says, 'I have earned my rest, now I can live on my savings', he does not know how long it will be before he must die and leave his wealth to others.	19
Stand by your contract and give your mind to it; grow old at your work.	20

^a Some witnesses add (15) From the Lord come wisdom, understanding, and love, knowledge of the law, and the doing of good works. (16) Error and darkness have been with sinners from their birth, and evil grows old along with those who take delight in it.

21 Do not envy a rogue his success;
 trust the Lord and stick to your job.
 It is no difficult thing for the Lord to make a poor man rich in a moment.

22 The Lord's blessing is the reward of piety, which blossoms in one short hour.

23 Do not say, 'What use am I?
 What good^a can the future hold for me?'
 24 And do not say, 'I am independent;
 nothing can ever go wrong for me.'
 25 Hardship is forgotten in time of success, and success in time of hardship.

26 Even on the day a man dies it is easy for the Lord to give him his deserts.

27 One hour's misery wipes out all memory of delight,
 and a man's end reveals his true character.

28 Call no man happy before he dies, for not until death is a man known for what he is. ^b

29 DO NOT INVITE all comers into your home; dishonesty has many disguises.

30 A proud man's mind is like a decoy-partridge in its cage, or like a spy watching for a false step.

31 He waits for a chance to twist good into evil or to cast blame on innocent actions.

32 A small spark kindles many coals,
 and the insinuations of a bad man end in bloodshed.

33 Beware of a scoundrel and his evil plots,
 or he may ruin your reputation for ever.

34 Admit a stranger to your home and he will stir up trouble for you and make you a stranger to your own flesh and blood.

12 If you do a good deed, make sure to whom you are doing it;
 then you will have credit for your kindness.

2 A good turn done to a godfearing man will be rewarded,
 if not by him, then by the Most High.

3 No good comes to the persistent wrong-doer or to the man who never gives alms; ^c 5 refuse him bread; give him nothing at all;
 he will only use your gifts to get the better of you,
 and you will suffer a double wrong
 in return for the favours you have done him.

^a Or 'What more do I need? What greater success . . . ^b not . . . he is: so Heb. :
 Gk. a man is known by his children. ^c The order of the following verses has been disturbed in all versions; Gk. reads . . . gives alms; (4) give to a godfearing man, but never help a sinner; (5) keep your good works for the humble, not the insolent; refuse him . . . (compare verse 7).

- The Most High himself hates sinners 6
and sends bad men what they deserve.
Give to a good man, but never help a sinner; 7
keep your good works for the humble, not the insolent. ^a
- Prosperity does not reveal your friends; 8
adversity does not conceal your enemies.
When all goes well a man's enemies are friendly, ^b 9
but in hard times even his friend will desert him.
Never trust your enemy; 10
he will turn vicious as sure as metal rusts.
If he appears humble and obsequious, 11 take care! Be on your guard against him!
Behave towards him like a man who polishes a mirror
to make sure that it does not corrode away.
Do not have him at your side, 12
or he will trip you up and supplant you.
Do not let him sit at your right hand,
or he will soon be wanting your own seat;
and in the end you will see the force of my words
and recall my warning with regret.
Who sympathizes with a snake-charmer when he is bitten, 13 or with a tamer of wild animals?
No more does anyone pity the man who keeps bad company 14
and involves himself in another's wickedness.
He may stand by you for a while, 15
but, if you falter, his friendship will not last.
- An enemy has honey on his lips, 16
but in his heart he plans to trip you into the ditch.
He may have tears in his eyes,
but give him a chance and he will not stop at bloodshed.
If disaster overtakes you, you will find him there ahead of you, 17 ready, with a pretence of help, to pull your feet from under you.
Then he will nod his head and rub his hands 18
and spread gossip, showing his true colours.
Handle pitch and it will make you dirty; 13
keep company with an arrogant man and you will grow like him.
- Do not lift a weight too heavy for you, 2 keeping company with a man greater and richer than yourself.
How can a jug be friends with a kettle?
If they knock together, the one will be smashed.
A rich man does wrong, and adds insult to injury; 3
a poor man is wronged, and must apologize into the bargain.
If you can serve his turn, a rich man will exploit you, 4
but if you are in need, he will leave you alone.

^a keep . . . insolent: this is the beginning of verse 5 in Gk.^b So Heb.; Gk. grieve.

5 If you are in funds, he will be your constant companion, and drain you dry without a twinge of remorse.
6 He may need you; and then he will deceive you,
and will be all smiles and encouragement,
7 paying you compliments and asking, 'What can I do for you?', embarrassing you with his hospitality,
until he has drained you two or three times over;
but in the end he will laugh at you.
Afterwards, when he sees you, he will pass you by,
nodding his head over you.

8 Take care not to be led astray
and humiliated when you are enjoying yourself.
9 If a great man invites you, be slow to accept,
and he will be the more pressing in his invitation.
10 Do not be forward, for fear of a rebuff,
but do not keep aloof, or you may be forgotten.
11 Do not presume to converse with him as an equal or be over-confident if he holds you long in talk.
The more he speaks, the more he is testing you,
examining you even while he smiles.
12 The man who cannot keep your secrets is without compunction and will not spare you harm or imprisonment; 13 so keep your secrets to yourself and be very careful,
for you are walking on the brink of ruin. ^a 15 Every animal loves its like,

and every man his neighbour.
16 All creatures flock together with their kind,
and men form attachments with their own sort.
17 What has a wolf in common with a lamb,
or a sinner with a man of piety?
18 What peace can there be between hyena and dog,
what peace between rich man and pauper?
19 As lions prey on the wild asses of the desert,
so the rich batten on the poor.
20 As humility disgusts the proud,
so is the rich man disgusted by the poor.

21 If a rich man staggers, he is held up by his friends;
a poor man falls, and his friends disown him as well.
22 When a rich man slips, many come to his rescue;
if he says something outrageous, they make excuses for him.
A poor man makes a slip, and they all criticize him;
even if he talks sense, he is not given a hearing.

^a Some witnesses add When you hear this in your sleep, wake up. (14) Love the Lord all your life and appeal to him for salvation.

A rich man speaks, and all are silent; 23
then they praise his speech to the skies.
A poor man speaks, and they say, 'Who is this?',
and if he stumbles, they give him an extra push.

WEALTH IS GOOD, if sin has not tainted it; 24 poverty is a crime only to the ungodly.
It is a man's heart that changes the look on his face 25 either for better or worse.
The sign of a happy heart is a cheerful face, 26
but the invention of proverbs involves wearisome thought.
Happy the man who has never let slip a careless word, 14
who has never felt the sting of remorse!
Happy the man whose conscience does not accuse him, 2
whose hope has never been disappointed!

It is not proper for a mean man to be rich: 3
what use is money to a miser?
He deprives himself only to hoard for other men; 4
others will live in luxury on his riches.
How can a man be hard on himself and kind to others? 5
His possessions bring him no enjoyment.
No one is worse than the man who is grudging to himself: 6 his niggardliness is its own punishment.
If ever he does good, it is by mistake, 7
and then in the end he reveals his meanness.
It is a hard man who has a grudging eye; 8
he turns his back on need and looks the other way.
A covetous man's eye is not satisfied with his share; 9 greedy injustice shrive's the soul.
A miser grudges bread 10
and keeps an empty table.

My son, if you can afford it, do yourself well, 11 always offering to the Lord the sacrifice due to him.
Remember that death is not to be postponed; 12
the hour of your appointment with the grave is undisclosed.
Before you die, do good to your friend; 13
reach out as far as you can to help him.
Do not miss a day's enjoyment 14
or forgo your share of innocent pleasure.
Are you to leave to others all you have laboured for 15
and let them draw lots for your hard-earned wealth?
Give and receive; indulge yourself; 16
you need not expect luxuries in the grave.
Man's body wears out like a garment; 17
for the ancient sentence stands: You shall die.

18 In the thick foliage of a growing tree
one crop of leaves falls and another grows instead;
so the generations of flesh and blood pass
with the death of one and the birth of another.
19 All man's works decay and vanish,
and the workman follows them into oblivion.

20 HAPPY THE MAN who fixes his thoughts on wisdom and uses his brains to think, 21 the man who contemplates her ways and ponders her secrets.
22 Stalk her like a hunter and lie in wait beside her path!
23 The man who peers in at her windows and listens at her keyhole, 24 who camps beside her house,
driving his tent-peg into her wall, 25 who pitches his tent close by her,
where it is best for men to live—26 he will put his children in her shade and camp beneath her branches, 27 sheltered by her from the heat,
and dwelling in the light of her presence.

15 The man who fears the Lord will do all this,
and if he masters the law, wisdom will be his.
2 She will come out to meet him like a mother;
she will receive him like a young bride.
3 For food she will give him the bread of understanding and for drink the water of knowledge.
4 He will lean on her and not fall;
he will rely on her to save him from disgrace.
5 She will promote him above his neighbours, and find words for him when he speaks in the assembly.
6 He shall be crowned with joy and exultation;
lasting honour shall be his heritage.
7 Fools shall never possess wisdom;
sinners shall catch no glimpse of her.
8 She holds aloof from arrogance, far from the thoughts of liars.
9 Worship is out of place on the lips of a sinner, unprompted as he is by the Lord.
10 Worship is the outward expression of wisdom,
and the Lord himself inspires it.
11 Do not say, 'The Lord is to blame for my failure';
it is for you to avoid doing what he hates.

Do not say, 'It was he who led me astray'; 12
he has no use for sinful men.
The Lord hates every kind of vice; 13
you cannot love it and still fear him.
When he made man in the beginning, 14
he left him free to take his own decisions;
if you choose, you can keep the commandments; 15
whether or not you keep faith is yours to decide.
He has set before you fire and water; 16 reach out and take which you choose;
before man lie life and death, 17
and whichever he prefers is his.
For in his great wisdom and mighty power 18
the Lord sees everything.
He keeps watch over those who fear him; 19
no human act escapes his notice.
But he has commanded no man to be wicked, 20
nor has he given licence to commit sin.

DO NOT SET YOUR HEART on a large family of ne'er-do-wells 16 or be content if your sons are godless.
However many they are, do not think yourself happy, 2
unless the fear of the Lord is in them.
Do not count on their living to be old 3
or rely on their numbers;
for one son can be better than a thousand;
better indeed to die childless than to have godless children.
Thanks to one man of good sense a city may be populous, 4
while a tribe of lawless men becomes a desert.
Many a time have I seen this with my own eyes, 5
and still weightier examples have come to my ears.

Where sinners gather, the fire breaks out; 6 retribution blazes up in a rebellious nation.
There was no pardon for the giants of old, 7
who revolted in all their strength.
There was no reprieve for Lot's adopted home, 8 abhorrent in its arrogance.
There was no mercy for the doomed nation, 9 exterminated for their sins—
those six hundred thousand warriors 10 marshalled in stubborn defiance.
Even if only one man were obstinate, 11
it would be a miracle for him to escape punishment.
For mercy and anger belong to the Lord;
he shows his power in forgiveness, or in the flood of his wrath.

12 His mercy is great, but great also is his condemnation;
 he judges a man by what he has done.
 13 He does not let the sinner escape with his loot or try the patience of the godly too long.
 14 He opens a way for every work of mercy, and everyone is treated according to his own deserts.^a 17 Do not say, 'I am hidden from the Lord;

 who is there in heaven to give a thought to me?
 Among so many I shall not be noticed;
 what is my life compared with the measureless creation?
 18 Heaven itself, the highest heaven,
 the abyss and the earth are shaken at his coming;
 19 the very mountains and the foundations of the world
 tremble when he looks upon them.
 20 What human mind can grasp this,
 or comprehend his ways?
 21 As a squall takes men unawares,
 so most of his works are done in secret.
 22 Who is to declare his acts of justice or wait for his remote decree?'
 23 These are the thoughts of a small mind,
 the absurdities of a senseless and misguided man.

24 LISTEN TO ME, MY SON, and learn sense;
 pay close attention to what I say;
 25 I will show you exact discipline and teach you accurate knowledge.
 26 When the Lord created his works in the beginning, and after making them defined^b their boundaries, 27 he disposed them in an eternal order and fixed their influences for all time.
 They do not grow hungry or weary,
 or abandon their tasks;
 28 one does not jostle another;
 they never disobey his word.
 29 The Lord then looked at the earth and filled it with his good things.
 30 With every kind of living creature he covered the ground,
 into which they must all return.

17 The Lord created man from the earth and sent him back to it again.

^a Some witnesses add (15) The Lord made Pharaoh too stubborn to acknowledge him, so that his deeds might be published to the world. (16) He displays his mercy to the whole creation, and has separated light from darkness with a plumb-line. ^b When . . . defined: probable reading, based on Heb.; Gk. The works of the Lord have been under his judgement from the beginning, . . . he defined . . .

He set a fixed span of life for men	2
and granted them authority over everything on earth.
He clothed them with strength like his own, ^a	3 forming them in his own image.
He put the fear of man into all creatures	4
and gave him lordship over beasts and birds. ^b
He gave men tongue and eyes and ears,	6
the power of choice and a mind for thinking.
He filled them with discernment	7
and showed them good and evil.
He kept watch over their hearts,	8
to display to them the majesty of his works. ^c
They shall praise his holy name,	10
proclaiming the grandeur of his works.
He gave them knowledge as well	11
and endowed them with the life-giving law.
He established a perpetual covenant with them	12
and revealed to them his decrees.
Their eyes saw his glorious majesty,	13
and their ears heard the glory of his voice.
He said to them, 'Guard against all wrongdoing',	14
and taught each man his duty towards his neighbour.
Their conduct always lies open before him,	15
never hidden from his scrutiny. ^d
For every nation he appointed a ruler,	17
but chose Israel to be his own possession. ^e
So whatever they do is clear to him as daylight;	19
he keeps constant watch over their lives.
Their wrongdoing is not hidden from the Lord;	20
he observes all their sins. ^f
A man's good deeds he treasures like a signet-ring,	22
and his kindness like the apple of his eye.
In the end he will rise up and give the wicked their deserts,	23 bringing down their recompense on their own heads.
Yet he leaves a way open for the penitent to return to him,	24
and gives the waverer strength to endure.
Turn to the Lord and have done with sin;	25
make your prayer in his presence, and so lessen your offence.

^a So one V.s.; Gk. their own. ^b Some witnesses add (5) The Lord gave them the use of the five faculties; as a sixth gift he distributed to them mind, and as a seventh, reason, the interpreter of those faculties. ^c Some witnesses add (9) He has given them the right to boast for ever of his marvels. ^d Some witnesses read . . .

scrutiny. (16) Every man from his youth tended towards evil; they could not make themselves hearts of flesh in place of their hearts of stone. (17) When he distributed the nations over all the earth, for every . . . ^e Some witnesses add (18) He rears them with discipline as his first-born, imparting to them the light of love and never neglecting them.

^f Some witnesses add (21) The Lord who is gracious and knows what they are made of has neither rejected nor deserted them, but spared them.

- 26 Come back to the Most High, renounce wrongdoing, and hate intensely what he abhors.
- 27 Who will praise the Most High in the grave
in place of the living who give him thanks?
- 28 When a man is dead and ceases to be, his gratitude dies with him;
it is when he is alive and well that he praises the Lord.
- 29 How great is the Lord's mercy and his pardon to those who turn to him!
- 30 Not everything is within man's reach,
for the human race is not immortal.
- 31 Is anything brighter than the sun? Yet the sun suffers eclipse.
So flesh and blood have evil thoughts.
- 32 The Lord marshals the armies of high heaven,
but all men are dust and ashes.
- 18 He who lives for ever is the Creator of the whole universe;
2 right belongs to the Lord alone. ^a
- 4 To no man is it given to unfold the story of his works;
who can trace his marvels to their source?
- 5 No one can measure his majestic power,
still less, tell the full tale of all his mercies.
- 6 Man can neither increase nor diminish them,
nor fathom the wonders of the Lord.
- 7 When a man comes to the end of them he is still at the beginning,
and when he has finished he will still be perplexed.
- 8 What is man and what use is he?
What do his good or evil deeds signify?
- 9 His span of life is at the most a hundred years;
10 compared with endless time, his few years are like one drop of sea-water or a single grain of sand.
- 11 This is why the Lord is patient with them,
lavishing his mercy upon them.
- 12 He sees and knows the harsh fate in store for them,
and therefore gives full play to his forgiveness.
- 13 Man's compassion is only for his neighbour,
but the Lord's compassion is for every living thing.
He corrects and trains and teaches and brings them back as a shepherd his flock.
- 14 He has compassion on those who accept discipline and are eager to obey his decrees.
- 15 My son, do good without scolding;
do not spoil your generosity with hard words.
- 16 Does not the dew give respite from the sweltering heat?
So a word can do more than a gift.

^a Some witnesses add and there is none beside him, (3) who can steer the world with his little finger, so that all things obey his will; as king of the universe, he has power to fix the bounds between what is holy and what is profane.

A kind word counts for more than a rich present; with a gracious man you will find both.	17
A fool cannot refrain from tactless criticism, and a grudging giver makes no eyes sparkle.	18
Before you speak, learn; and before you fall sick, consult a doctor.	19
Before judgement comes, examine yourself, and you will find pardon in the hour of scrutiny.	20
Before you fall ill, humble yourself; show your penitence as soon as you sin.	21
Let nothing hinder the prompt discharge of your vows; do not wait till death to be absolved.	22
Before you make a vow, give it due thought; do not be like those who try the Lord's patience.	23
Think of the wrath you must face in the hour of death, when the time of reckoning comes, and he turns away his face.	24
In time of plenty remember the time of famine, poverty and need in days of wealth.	25
Between dawn and dusk times may alter; all change comes quickly, when the Lord wills it.	26
A wise man is always on his guard; when sin is rife, he will beware of negligence.	27
Every man of sense makes acquaintance with wisdom, and to him who finds her she gives cause for thankfulness.	28
Skilled speakers display their special wisdom by a flow of apt proverbs.	29

Maxims of prudence and self-discipline

D O NOT LET your passions be your guide, but restrain your desires.	30
If you indulge yourself with all that passion fancies, it will make you the butt of your enemies.	31
Do not revel in great luxury, or the expense of it may ruin you.	32
Do not beggar yourself by feasting on borrowed money, when there is nothing in your purse.	33
A drunken workman never grows rich; carelessness in small things leads little by little to ruin.	19
Wine and women rob the wise of their wits, and a frequenter of prostitutes becomes more and more reckless, till sores ^a and worms take possession of him, and his recklessness becomes his undoing.	2 3
To trust a man hastily shows a shallow mind, and to sin is to do an injury to yourself.	4

^a Qr decay.

- 5 To delight in wickedness is to court condemnation,
6 but evil loses its hold on the man who hates gossip.
7 Never repeat what you hear,
and you will never be the loser.
8 Tell no tales about friend or foe;
unless silence makes you an accomplice, never betray a man's secret.
9 Suppose he has heard you and learnt to distrust you,
he will seize the first chance to show his hatred.
10 Have you heard a rumour? Let it die with you.
Never fear, it will not make you burst.
11 A fool with a secret goes through agony like a woman in childbirth.
12 As painful as an arrow through the thigh is a rumour in the heart of a fool.
13 Confront your friend with the gossip about him; he may not have done it;
or if he did it, he will know not to do it again.
14 Confront your neighbour; he may not have said it;
or if he did say it, he will know not to say it again.
15 Confront your friend; it will often turn out to be slander;
do not believe everything you hear.
16 A man may let slip more than he intends;
whose tongue is always free from guilt?
17 Confront your neighbour before you threaten him, and let the law of the Most High take its course. ^a
- 20 All wisdom is the fear of the Lord and includes the fulfilling of the law. ^b 22 The knowledge of wickedness is not wisdom, nor is there good sense in the advice of sinners.
23 There is a cleverness that is loathsome,
and some fools are merely ignorant.
24 Better to be godfearing and lack brains than to have great intelligence and break the law.
25 A meticulous cleverness may lead to injustice, and a man may make himself offensive in order that right may prevail.
26 There is a scoundrel who stoops and wears mourning,
but who is a fraud at heart.
27 He covers his face and pretends to be deaf,
but when nobody is looking, he will steal a march on you; 28 and if lack of strength prevents him from doing wrong,
he will still harm you at the first opportunity.

^a Some witnesses add without giving way to anger. (18) The fear of the Lord is the way towards acceptance, and wisdom wins love from him. (19) The knowledge of the Lord's commandments is life-giving discipline, and those who do what pleases him eat from the tree of immortality.

^b Some witnesses add and a knowledge of his omnipotence. (21) A servant who says, 'I will not do as you wish', even if he does it later, angers the man who feeds him.

Yet you can tell a man by his looks 29
and recognize good sense at first sight.
A man's clothes, and the way he laughs, 30
and his gait, reveal his character.

A reproof may be untimely, 20
and silence may show a man's good sense.
Yet how much better it is to complain than to nurse a grudge, 2 and confession saves a man from disgrace. ^a Like a eunuch longing to seduce a girl 4 is the man who tries to do right by violence.
One man is silent and is found to be wise; 5
another is hated for his endless chatter.
One man is silent, at a loss for an answer; 6
another is silent, biding his time.
The wise man is silent until the right moment, 7
but a swaggering fool is always speaking out of turn.
A garrulous man makes himself detested, 8
and one who abuses his position arouses hatred.

A MAN SOMETIMES FINDS profit in adversity, 9
and a windfall may result in loss.
Sometimes liberality does not benefit the giver, 10
sometimes it brings a double return.
The quest for honour may lead to disgrace, 11
but there are those who have risen from obscurity to eminence.
A man may make a good bargain, 12
but pay for it seven times over.
A wise man endears himself when he speaks, 13
but fools scatter compliments in vain.
A gift from a fool will bring you no benefit; 14
it looks bigger to him than it does to you.
He gives small gifts accompanied by long lectures, 15
and opens his mouth as wide as the town crier.
He gives a loan today and asks it back tomorrow, obnoxious fellow that he is!
The fool says, 'I have no friends, 16
I get no thanks for my kindnesses;
though they eat my bread, they speak ill of me.'
How everyone will laugh at him—and how often! 17

Better a slip on the stone floor than a slip of the tongue; 18 and the fall of the wicked comes just as suddenly.
An ill-mannered man is like an unseasonable story, 19 continually on the lips of the ill-bred.

^a Some witnesses add (3) How good it is to respond to reproof with repentance, and so escape deliberate sin!

- 20 A proverb will fall flat when uttered by a fool,
for he will produce it at the wrong time.
- 21 Poverty may keep a man from doing wrong;
when the day's work is over, conscience will not trouble him.
- 22 A man's diffidence may be his undoing, or the foolish figure he cuts in the eyes of the world.
- 23 A man may be shamed into making promises to a friend and needlessly turn him into an enemy.
- 24 A lie is an ugly blot on a man's name,
and is continually on the lips of those who know no better.
- 25 It is better to be a thief than a habitual liar,
but both will come to the same bad end.
- 26 A lying disposition brings disgrace;
the shame of it can never be shaken off.
- 27 A wise man advances himself when he speaks,
and a man of sense makes himself pleasant to the great.
- 28 The man who tills his land heaps up a harvest, and he who pleases the great reaps pardon for his wrongdoing.
- 29 Hospitality and presents make wise men blind;
like a gag in the mouth they silence criticism.
- 30 Hidden wisdom and buried treasure,
what use is there in either?
- 31 Better a man who hides his folly than one who hides his wisdom! ^a
- 21 Have you done wrong, my son? Do it no more, but ask pardon for your past wrongdoing.
- 2 Avoid wrong as you would a viper,
for if you go near, it will bite you;
its teeth are like a lion's teeth and can destroy the lives of men.
- 3 Every breach of the law is like a two-edged sword;
it inflicts an incurable wound.
- 4 By intimidation and insolence a man forfeits his wealth;
thus a proud man will be stripped of his possessions.
- 5 The Lord listens to the poor man's appeal,
and his verdict follows without delay.
- 6 To hate reproof is to go the way of sinners,
but whoever fears the Lord will repent whole-heartedly.
- 7 A great talker is known far and wide,
but a sensible man is aware of his failings.
- 8 To build a house with borrowed money is like collecting stones for your own tomb. ^b

^a Some witnesses add (32) Better to seek the Lord with unremitting patience than to be the masterless charioteer of one's own life.

^b Some witnesses read like harvesting stones against the winter.

A gathering of lawless men is like a bundle of tow, 9 which ends by going up in flames.
The road of sinners is smoothly paved, 10
but it leads straight down to the grave.
Whoever keeps the law keeps his thoughts under control; 11
the fear of the Lord has its outcome in wisdom.

A MAN WHO IS NOT CLEVER cannot be taught, 12
but there is a cleverness which only breeds bitterness.
A wise man's knowledge is like a river in full spate, 13
and his advice is a life-giving spring.
A fool's mind is a leaky bucket: 14
it cannot hold anything it learns.
If an instructed man hears a wise saying, 15
he applauds it and improves on it.
If a rake hears it, he is annoyed and throws it behind his back.
Listening to a fool is like travelling with a heavy pack, 16
but there is delight to be found in intelligent conversation.
The assembly welcomes a word from the wise man, 17
and thinks over what he says.

A fool's wisdom is like a tumbledown house; 18
his knowledge is a string of ill-digested sayings.
To fools education is like fetters, 19
like a handcuff on the wrist.
To the wise education is a golden ornament 21
like a bracelet on the arm.
A fool laughs out loud; 20
a clever man smiles quietly, if at all.

A fool rushes into a house, 22
while a man of experience hangs back politely.
A boor peers into the house from the doorstep, 23
while a well-bred man stands outside.
It is bad manners to listen at doors; 24
a man of sense would think it a crushing disgrace.
The glib only repeat what others have said, 25
but the wise weigh every word.
Fools speak before they think; 26
wise men think first and speak afterwards.
When a bad man curses his adversary,^a 27
he is cursing himself.
A tale-bearer blackens his own character 28
and makes himself hated throughout the neighbourhood.

^a Or curses Satan.

- 22 An idler is like a filthy stone;
everyone jeers at his disgrace.
- 2 An idler is like a lump of dung;
whoever picks it up shakes it off his hand.
- 3 There is shame in being father to a spoilt son,
and the birth of a daughter means loss.
- 4 A sensible daughter wins a husband,
but an immodest one is a grief to her father.
- 5 A brazen daughter disgraces both father and husband and is despised by both.
- 6 Unseasonable talk is like music in time of mourning,
but the lash of wisdom's discipline is always in season.
- 7 Teaching a fool is like mending pottery with glue,
or like rousing a sleeper from heavy sleep.
- 8 As well reason with a drowsy man as with a fool;
when you have finished, he will say, 'What was that?' ^a
- 11 Mourn over the dead for the eclipse of his light;
mourn over the fool for the eclipse of his wits.
Mourn less bitterly for the dead, for he is at rest;
but the fool's life is worse than death.
- 12 Mourning for the dead lasts seven days,
but for a godless fool it lasts all his life.
- 13 Do not talk long with a fool
or visit a stupid man.
Beware of him, or you may be in trouble and find yourself bespattered when he shakes himself.
Avoid him, if you are looking for peace,
and you will not be worn out by his folly.
- 14 What is heavier than lead?
What is its name but 'Fool'?
- 15 Sand, salt, and a lump of iron are less of a burden than a stupid man.
- 16 A tie-beam fixed firmly into a building is not shaken loose by an earthquake;
so a mind kept firm by intelligent advice will not be daunted in a crisis.
- 17 A mind solidly backed by intelligent thought is like the stucco that decorates a smooth wall.
- 18 As a fence set on a hill-top cannot stand against the wind, so a mind made timid by foolish fancies is not proof against any terror.

^a Some witnesses add (9) Children well brought up reveal no trace of any humble origin.
(10) But those who run riot, haughty and undisciplined, sully the nobility of their parentage.

Hurt the eye and tears will flow;
hurt the mind and you will find it sensitive. 19
Throw a stone at the birds and you scare them away;
abuse a friend and you break off your friendship. 20
If you have drawn your sword on a friend, do not give up hope, there is still a way back. 21
If you have quarrelled with your friend, never fear, there can still be a reconciliation. 22
But abuse, scorn, a secret betrayed, a stab in the back—
these will make any friend keep his distance.
Win your neighbour's confidence while he is poor,
and you will share the joy of his prosperity;
stand by him in time of trouble, and you will be his partner when he comes into a fortune. 23
As furnace-fumes and smoke come before the flame, so insults come before bloodshed. 24
I will not be afraid to protect my friend
nor will I turn my back on him. 25
If harm should befall me on his account, everyone who hears of it will beware of him. 26

OH FOR A SENTRY to guard my mouth and a seal of discretion to close my lips,
to keep them from being my downfall,
and to keep my tongue from causing my ruin!
Lord, Father, and Ruler of my life, 27
do not abandon me to the tongue's control or allow me to fall on its account. 23
Oh for wisdom's lash to curb my thoughts 2
and to discipline my mind, without overlooking my mistakes
or condoning my sins!
Then my mistakes would not multiply 3
nor my sins increase, humiliating me before my opponents
and giving my enemy cause to gloat.
Lord, Father, and God of my life, 4
do not let me have a supercilious eye.
Protect me from the onslaught of desire;
let neither gluttony nor lust take hold of me, 5
nor give me over to the power of shameless passion. 6 Hear, my sons, how to discipline the mouth, 7 take warning, and you will never be caught out.
It is by his own words that the sinner is ensnared;
he is tripped up by his own scurrility and pride. 8
Do not inure your mouth to oaths 9 or make a habit of naming the Holy One.

- 10 As a slave constantly under the lash
is never free from weals, so the man who has oaths and the sacred name for ever on his lips will never be clear of guilt.
- 11 A man given to swearing is lawless to the core;
the scourge will never be far from his house.
If he goes back on his word, he must bear the blame;
if he wilfully neglects it, he sins twice over;
if his oath itself was insincere, he cannot be acquitted;
his house will be filled with trouble.
- 12 There is a kind of speech that is the counterpart of death;
may it never be found among Jacob's descendants!
The pious keep clear of such conduct and do not wallow in sin.
- 13 Do not make a habit of coarse, vulgar talk,
or you will be bound to say something sinful.
- 14 Remember your father and mother when you take your seat among the great,
or you may forget yourself in their presence and make a fool of yourself through bad habit;
then you will wish you had never been born,
and curse the day of your birth.
- 15 A man addicted to scurrilous talk will never learn better as long as he lives.
- 16 TWO KINDS OF MEN add sin to sin,
and a third brings retribution on himself.
Hot lust that blazes like a fire
can never be quenched till life is destroyed.
A man whose whole body is given to sensuality never stops till the fire consumes him.
- 17 To a seducer every loaf is as sweet as the last,
and he does not weary until he dies.
- 18 The man who strays from his own bed
says to himself, 'Who can see me?
All around is dark and the walls hide me;
nobody can see me, why need I worry?
The Most High will not take note of my sins.'
- 19 The eyes of men are all he fears;
he forgets that the eyes of the Lord
are ten thousand times brighter than the sun, observing every step men take and penetrating every secret.
- 20 Before the universe was created, it was known to him,
and so it is since its completion.
- 21 This man will pay the penalty in the public street,
caught where he least expected it.

So too with the woman who is unfaithful to her husband, 22 presenting him with an heir by a different father:
first, she disobeys the law of the Most High; 23
secondly, she commits an offence against her husband;
thirdly, she has prostituted herself
by bearing bastard children.
She shall be disgraced before the assembly, 24
and the consequences will fall on her children.
Her children will not take root, 25
nor will fruit grow on her branches.
A curse will rest on her memory, 26
and her shame will never be blotted out.
All who survive her will learn 27
that nothing is better than the fear of the Lord or sweeter than obeying his commandments. ^a

The praise of wisdom

HEAR THE PRAISE of wisdom from her own mouth, 24
as she speaks with pride among her people, before the assembly of the Most High 2
and in the presence of the heavenly host:
'I am the word which was spoken by the Most High;
it was I who covered the earth like a mist. 3
My dwelling-place was in high heaven;
my throne was in a pillar of cloud. 4
Alone I made a circuit of the sky 5
and traversed the depth of the abyss.
The waves of the sea, the whole earth, 6
every people and nation were under my sway.
Among them all I looked for a home: 7
in whose territory was I to settle?
Then the Creator of the universe laid a command upon me; 8
my Creator decreed where I should dwell.
He said, "Make your home in Jacob;
find your heritage in Israel."
Before time began he created me, 9
and I shall remain for ever.
In the sacred tent I ministered in his presence, 10
and so I came to be established in Zion.
Thus he settled me in the city he loved 11
and gave me authority in Jerusalem.
I took root among the people whom the Lord had honoured 12
by choosing them to be his special possession.

^a Some witnesses add (28) To follow God brings great honour; to win his approval means long life.

- 13 'There I grew like a cedar of Lebanon,
like a cypress on the slopes of Hermon, 14 like a date-palm at Engedi,
like roses at Jericho.
I grew like a fair olive-tree in the vale,
or like a plane-tree planted beside the water.
- 15 Like cassia or camel-thorn I was redolent of spices;
I spread my fragrance like choice myrrh,
like galban, aromatic shell, and gum resin;
I was like the smoke of incense in the sacred tent.
- 16 Like a terebinth I spread out my branches, laden with honour and grace.
- 17 I put forth lovely shoots like the vine, and my blossoms were a harvest of wealth and honour. ^a
- 19 'Come to me, you who desire me,
and eat your fill of my fruit.
- 20 The memory of me is sweeter than syrup,
the possession of me sweeter than honey dripping from the comb.
- 21 Whoever feeds on me will be hungry for more,
and whoever drinks from me will thirst for more.
- 22 To obey me is to be safe from disgrace;
those who work in wisdom will not go astray.'
- 23 All this is the covenant-book of God Most High, the law which Moses enacted to be the heritage of the assemblies of Jacob. ^b
- 25 He sends out wisdom in full flood like the river Pishon or like the Tigris at the time of firstfruits; 26 he overflows with understanding like the Euphrates or like Jordan at the time of harvest.
- 27 He pours forth instruction like the Nile, ^c
like the Gihon at the time of vintage.
- 28 No man has ever fully known wisdom;
from first to last no one has fathomed her;
29 for her thoughts are vaster than the ocean and her purpose deeper than the great abyss.
- 30 As for me, I was like a canal leading from a river,
a watercourse into a pleasure-garden.
- 31 I said, 'I will water my garden,
drenching its flower-beds';
and at once my canal became a river
and my river a sea.

^a Some witnesses add (18) I give birth to noble love, reverence, knowledge, and holy hope; and I give all these my eternal progeny to God's elect (probable meaning; Gk. obscure).

^b Some witnesses add (24) Never fail to be strong in the Lord; hold fast to him, so that he may strengthen you; the Lord Almighty is God alone; beside him there is no saviour.

^c So one Vs.; Gk. He makes instruction shine like light.

I will again make discipline shine like the dawn,
 so that its light may be seen from afar. 32
 I will again pour out doctrine like prophecy 33
 and bequeath it to future generations.
 Truly, my labour has not been for myself alone 34
 but for all seekers of wisdom.

THERE ARE THREE SIGHTS which warm my heart ^a 25 and are beautiful in the eyes of the Lord and of men:
 concord among brothers, friendship among neighbours,
 and a man and wife who are inseparable.
 There are three kinds of men who arouse my hatred, 2
 who disgust me by their manner of life:
 a poor man who boasts, a rich man who lies,
 and an old fool who commits adultery.

If you have not gathered wisdom in your youth, 3
 how will you find it when you are old?
 Sound judgement sits well on grey hairs 4
 and wise advice comes well from older men.
 Wisdom is fitting in the aged, 5
 and ripe counsel in men of eminence.
 Long experience is the old man's crown, 6
 and his pride is the fear of the Lord.

I can think of nine men I count happy, 7
 and I can tell you of a tenth:
 a man who can take delight in his children,
 and one who lives to see his enemy's downfall;
 happy the husband of a sensible wife, 8
 the farmer who does not plough with ox and ass together, ^b
 the man whose tongue never betrays him, and the servant who has never worked for an inferior!
 Happy the man who has found a friend, ^c 9
 and the speaker who has an attentive audience!
 How great is the man who finds wisdom! 10
 But no greater than he who fears the Lord.
 The fear of the Lord excels all other gifts; 11
 to what can we compare the man who has it? ^d

^a So Vss.; Gk. which make me beautiful.

^b the farmer . . . together: so Heb.;

Gk. omits. ^c So Vss.; Gk. found good sense.

^d Some witnesses add (12) The fear of the Lord is the source of love for him, and faith is the source of loyalty to him.

Counsels upon social behaviour

- 13 ANY WOUND but a wound in the heart!
 Any spite but a woman's!
 14 Any disaster but one caused by hate!
 Any vengeance but the vengeance of an enemy!
 15 There is no venom^a worse than a snake's, and no anger worse than an enemy's.
- 16 I would sooner share a home with a lion or a snake than keep house with a spiteful wife.
 17 Her spite changes her expression, making her look as surly as a bear.
 18 Her husband goes to a neighbour for his meals and cannot repress a bitter sigh.
- 19 There is nothing so bad as a bad wife;
 may the fate of the wicked overtake her!^b 20 It is as easy for an old man to climb a sand-dune
 as for a quiet husband to live with a nagging wife.
 21 Do not be enticed by a woman's beauty or set your heart on possessing her.
 22 If a man is supported by his wife
 he must expect tantrums, shamelessness, and outrage.
 23 A bad wife brings humiliation, downcast looks, and a wounded heart.
 Slack of hand and weak of knee is the man whose wife fails to make him happy.
- 24 Woman is the origin of sin,
 and it is through her that we all die.
 25 Do not leave a leaky cistern to drip or allow a bad wife to say what she likes.
 26 If she does not accept your control, divorce her and send her away.
- 26 A good wife makes a happy husband;
 she doubles the length of his life.
 2 A staunch wife is her husband's joy;
 he will live out his days in peace.
 3 A good wife means a good life;
 she is one of the Lord's gifts to those who fear him.
 4 Rich or poor, they are light-hearted, and always have a smile on their faces.
- 5 Three things there are that alarm me,
 and a fourth I am afraid to face:
 the scandal of the town, the gathering of a mob,
 and calumny—all harder to bear than death;

^a Probable meaning, based on one Vs.; Gk. head.
 marry a scoundrel!

^b Or may it fall to her lot to but it is heart-ache and grief when a wife is jealous of a rival, 6 and everyone alike feels the lash of her tongue.

 A bad wife is a chafing yoke; 7 controlling her is like clutching a scorpion.
 A drunken wife is a great provocation; 8
 she cannot keep her excesses secret.
 A loose woman betrays herself by her bold looks; 9
 you can tell her by her glance.
 Keep close watch over a headstrong daughter; 10
 if she finds you off your guard, she will take her chance.
 Beware of her impudent looks 11
 and do not be surprised if she disobeys you.
 As a parched traveller with his tongue hanging out 12 drinks from any spring that offers,
 she will open her arms to every embrace,
 and her quiver to the arrow.
 A wife's charm is the delight of her husband, 13
 and her womanly skill puts flesh on his bones.
 A silent wife is a gift from the Lord; 14
 her restraint is more than money can buy.
 A modest wife has charm upon charm; 15
 no scales can weigh the worth of her chastity.
 As beautiful as the sunrise in the Lord's heaven 16
 is a good wife in a well-ordered home.
 As bright as the light on the sacred lamp-stand 17
 is a beautiful face in the settled prime of life.
 Like a golden pillar on a silver base 18
 is a shapely leg with a firm foot. ^{a b}

^a is . . . foot: probable meaning; Gk. obscure.

^b Some witnesses add

My son, guard your health in the bloom of your youth, 19 and do not waste your vigour on what belongs to others.
 Search the whole plain for a fertile plot; 20
 sow your own seed, trusting in your pedigree.
 Then the children you leave behind 21 will prosper, confident in their parentage.
 A woman of the streets counts as mere spittle, 22
 a married woman as a mortuary for her lovers.
 A godless woman is a good match for a lawless husband, 23
 a pious one for a man who fears the Lord.
 A brazen woman courts disgrace, 24
 but a virtuous one is modest even before her husband.
 A wilful woman is a shameless bitch, 25
 but a modest one fears the Lord.
 A woman who honours her husband is accounted wise by all, 26
 but if she despises him, all know her as proud and godless.
 A good wife makes a happy husband;
 she doubles the length of his life.
 A strident, garrulous wife is like a trumpet sounding the charge; 27 in a home like hers a man lives in the tumult of war.

- 28 TWO THINGS GRIEVE my heart, and a third excites my anger:
a soldier in distress through poverty,
wise men treated with contempt,
and a man deserting right conduct for wrong—
the Lord will bring him to the scaffold.
- 29 How hard it is for a merchant to keep clear of wrong
or for a shopkeeper to be innocent of dishonesty!
27 Many have cheated for gain;^a a money-grubber will always turn a blind eye.
- 2 As a peg is held fast in the joint between stones,
so dishonesty squeezes in between selling and buying.
- 3 Unless a man holds resolutely to the fear of the Lord,
his house will soon be in ruins.
- 4 Shake a sieve, and the rubbish remains;
start an argument, and discover a man's faults.
- 5 As the work of a potter is tested in the furnace,
so a man is tried in debate.
- 6 As the fruit of the tree reveals the skill of its grower,
so the expression of a man's thought reveals his character.
- 7 Do not praise a man till you hear him in discussion,
for this is the test.
- 8 If justice is what you seek, you will succeed,
and wear it like a splendid robe.
- 9 Birds of a feather roost together,
and honesty comes home to those who practise it.
- 10 A lion lies in wait for its prey,
and so do sins for those who do wrong.
- 11 The conversation of the pious is constantly wise,
but a fool is as changeable as the moon.
- 12 Grudge every minute spent among fools,
but linger among the thoughtful.
- 13 The conversation of fools is repulsive;
they make a joke of unbridled vice.
- 14 Their cursing and swearing make the hair stand on end;
when such men quarrel, others stop their ears.
- 15 The quarrels of the proud lead to bloodshed;
their abuse offends the ear.
- 16 The betrayer of secrets loses his credit and can never find an intimate friend.
- 17 Love your friend and keep faith with him,
but if you betray his secrets, keep out of his way;

^a Some witnesses read for a trifle.

as a man kills his enemy,	18
so you have killed your neighbour's friendship.
As a bird that is allowed to escape your hand,	19
your neighbour, once lost, will not be caught again.
He has gone too far for you to pursue him,	20
and escaped like a gazelle from a trap.
A wound may be bandaged, an insult pardoned,	21
but the betrayer of secrets has nothing to hope for.
A man who winks is plotting mischief;	22
those who know him will keep their distance.
He speaks sweetly enough to your face	23
and admires whatever you say, but later he will change his tune
and use your own words to trip you.
There are many things I hate, but him above all;	24
the Lord will hate him too.
Whoever throws a stone up in the air is throwing it at his own head,	25
and a treacherous blow means wounds all round.
Dig a pit and you will fall into it;	26
set a trap and you will be caught by it.
The wrong a man does recoils on him,	27
and he does not know where it has come from.
An arrogant man deals in mockery and insults,	28
but retribution lies in wait for him like a lion.
Those who rejoice at the downfall of good men will be trapped	29 and consumed with pain before they die.
Rage and anger, these also I abhor,	30
but a sinner has them ready at hand.
The vengeful man will face the vengeance of the Lord,	28
who keeps strict account of his sins.
Forgive your neighbour his wrongdoing;	2
then, when you pray, your sins will be forgiven.
If a man harbours a grudge against another,	3
is he to expect healing from the Lord?
If he has no mercy on his fellow-man,	4
is he still to ask forgiveness for his own sins?
If a mere mortal cherishes rage,	5
where is he to look for pardon?
Think of the end that awaits you, and have done with hate;	6 think of mortality and death, and be true to the commandments;
think of the commandments, and do not be enraged at your neighbour;	7 think of the covenant of the Most High, and overlook faults.
To avoid a quarrel is a setback for sin,	8
for it is a hot temper that kindles quarrels.
A sinner sows trouble between friends	9
and spreads scandal where before there was peace.

- 10 A fire is kept hot by stoking
and a quarrel by persistence.
A man's rage is in proportion to his strength,
and his anger in proportion to his wealth.
- 11 A hasty argument kindles a fire,
and a hasty quarrel leads to bloodshed.
- 12 Blow on a spark to make it glow, or spit on it to put it out;
both results come from the one mouth.
- 13 Curses on the gossip and the tale-bearer!
For they have been the ruin of many peaceable men.
- 14 The talk of a third party has wrecked the lives of many and driven them from country to country;
it has destroyed fortified towns and demolished the houses of the great.
- 15 The talk of a third party has brought divorce on staunch wives and deprived them of all they have laboured for.
- 16 Whoever pays heed to it will never again find rest or live in peace of mind.
- 17 The lash of a whip raises weals,
but the lash of a tongue breaks bones.
- 18 Many have been killed by the sword,
but not so many as by the tongue.
- 19 Happy the man who is sheltered from its onslaught,
who has not been exposed to its fury,
who has not borne its yoke,
or been chained with its fetters!
- 20 For its yoke is of iron,
its fetters of bronze.
- 21 The death it brings is an evil death;
better the grave than the tongue!
- 22 But it has no power over the godfearing;
they cannot be burned in its flames.
- 23 Those who desert the Lord fall victim to it;
among them it will burn like fire and not be quenched.
It will launch itself against them like a lion and tear them like a leopard.
- 24 As you enclose your garden with a thorn hedge,
and lock up your silver and gold,
so weigh your words and measure them,
and make a door and a bolt for your mouth.
- 25 Beware of being tripped by your tongue and falling into the power of a lurking enemy.
- 26
- 29 A DEVOUT MAN lends to his neighbour;
by supporting him he keeps the commandments.
- 2 Lend to your neighbour in his time of need;
repay your neighbour punctually.

- Be as good as your word and keep faith with him, 3
 and your needs will always be met.
- Many treat a loan as a windfall 4
 and bring trouble on those who helped them.
- Until he gets a loan, a man kisses his neighbour's hand 5 and talks with bated breath about his money;
 but when it is time to repay, he postpones it, pays back only perfunctory promises, and alleges that the time is too short. ^a
- If he can pay, his creditor will scarcely get back half, 6 and will count himself lucky at that;
 if he cannot pay, he has defrauded the other of his money,
 and gratuitously made an enemy of him; ^b
 he will pay him back in curses and insults and with shame instead of honour.
- Because of such dishonesty many refuse to lend, 7
 for fear of being needlessly defrauded.
- Nevertheless be patient with the penniless, 8
 and do not keep him waiting for your charity;
 for the commandment's sake help the poor, 9
 and in his need do not send him away empty-handed.
- Be ready to lose money for a brother or a friend; 10
 do not leave it to rust away under a stone.
- Store up for yourself the treasure which the Most High has commanded, 11 and it will benefit you more than gold.
- Let almsgiving be the treasure in your strong-room, 12
 and it will rescue you from every misfortune.
- It will arm you against the enemy 13 better than stout shield or strong spear.
- A good man will stand surety for his neighbour; 14
 only a man who has lost all sense of shame will fail him.
- If a man stands surety for you, do not forget his kindness, 15 for he has staked his very self for you.
- A sinner wastes the property of his surety, 16
 and an ungrateful man fails his rescuer. 17
- Suretyship has ruined the prosperity of many 18
 and wrecked them like a storm at sea;
 it has driven men of influence into exile,
 and set them wandering in foreign countries.
- When a sinner commits himself to suretyship, 19
 his pursuit of gain will involve him in lawsuits.
- Help your neighbour to the best of your ability, 20
 but beware of becoming too deeply involved.

^a Or that times are hard.^b and . . . him: some witnesses read and the other has won himself an enemy at his own expense.

- 21 The necessities of life are water, bread, and clothes, and a home with its decent privacy;
22 better the life of a poor man in his own hut than a sumptuous banquet in another man's house.
23 Be content with whatever you have,
and do not get a name for living on hospitality.^a 24 It is a poor life going from house to house, keeping your mouth shut because you are a visitor.
25 You receive the guests and hand the drinks without being thanked for it, and into the bargain must listen to words that rankle:
26 'Come here, stranger, and lay the table;
whatever you have there, hand it to me.'
27 'Be off, stranger! Make way for a more important guest;
my brother has come to stay, and I need the guest-room.'
28 How hard it is for a sensible man to bear criticism from the household or abuse from his creditor!

- 30 A MAN WHO LOVES HIS SON will whip him often so that when he grows up he may be a joy to him.
2 He who disciplines his son will find profit in him and take pride in him among his acquaintances.
3 He who gives his son a good education will make his enemy jealous and will boast of him among his friends.
4 When the father dies, it is as if he were still alive,
for he has left a copy of himself behind him.
5 While he lived he saw and rejoiced,
and when he died he had no regrets.
6 He has left an heir to take vengeance on his enemies and to repay the kindness of his friends.
7 A man who spoils his son will bandage every wound and will be on tenterhooks at every cry.
8 An unbroken horse turns out stubborn,
and an unchecked son turns out headstrong.
9 Pamper a boy and he will shock you;
play with him and he will grieve you.
10 Do not share his laughter, for fear of sharing his pain;
you will only end by grinding your teeth.
11 Do not give him freedom while he is young or overlook his errors.
12 Break him in while he is young,
beat him soundly while he is still a child, or he may grow stubborn and disobey you and cause you vexation.
13 Discipline your son and take pains with him or he may offend you by some disgraceful act.

^a Reading based on one Vs.; Gk. and do not hear reproaches from your family.

BETTER A POOR MAN who is healthy and fit than a rich man racked by disease.	14
Health and fitness are better than any gold, and bodily vigour than boundless prosperity.	15
There is no wealth to compare with health of body, no festivity to equal a joyful heart.	16
Better death than a life of misery, eternal rest than a long illness.	17
Good things spread before a man without appetite are like offerings of food placed on a tomb.	18
What use is a sacrifice to an idol which can neither taste nor smell?	19
So it is with the man afflicted by the Lord. He gazes at the food before him and sighs as a eunuch sighs when he embraces a girl.	20
Do not give yourself over to sorrow or distress yourself deliberately.	21
A merry heart keeps a man alive, and joy lengthens his span of days.	22
Indulge yourself, take comfort, and banish sorrow;	23
for sorrow has been the death of many, and no advantage ever came of it.
Envy and anger shorten a man's life, and anxiety brings premature old age.	24
A man with a gay heart has a good appetite and relishes the food he eats.	25
A rich man loses weight by wakeful nights, when the cares of wealth drive sleep away; sleepless worry keeps him wide awake, just as serious illness banishes ^a sleep.	31
A rich man toils to amass a fortune, and when he relaxes he enjoys every luxury.	2
A poor man toils to make a slender living, and when he relaxes he finds himself in need.	3
Passion for gold can never be right; the pursuit of money leads a man astray. ^b	4
Many a man has come to ruin for the sake of gold and found disaster staring him in the face.	5
Gold is a pitfall to those who are infatuated with it, and every fool is caught by it.	6
Happy the rich man who has remained free of its taint and has not made gold his aim!	7

^a banishes: probable meaning, based on Heb. ; Gk. obscure.^b the pursuit . . .

9 Show us that man, and we will congratulate him;
he has performed a miracle among his people.
10 Has anyone ever come through this test unscathed?
Then he has good cause to be proud.
Has anyone ever had it in his power to sin and refrained,
or to do wrong and has not done it?
11 Then he shall be confirmed in his prosperity,
and the whole people will hail him as a benefactor.

12 IF YOU ARE SITTING at a grand table,
do not lick your lips and exclaim, 'What a spread!'
13 Remember, it is a vice to have a greedy eye.
There is no greater evil in creation than the eye;
that is why it must shed tears at every turn.
14 Do not reach for everything you see,
or jostle your fellow-guest at the dish;
15 judge his feelings by your own and always behave considerately.
16 Eat what is set before you like a gentleman;
do not munch and make yourself objectionable.
17 Be the first to stop for good manners' sake and do not be insatiable, or you will give offence.
18 If you are dining in a large company,
do not reach out your hand before others.
19 A man of good upbringing is content with little,
and he is not short of breath when he goes to bed.
20 The moderate eater enjoys healthy sleep;
he rises early, feeling refreshed.
But sleeplessness, indigestion, and colic are the lot of the glutton.
21 If you cannot avoid overeating at a feast, leave the table and find relief by vomiting.

22 Listen to me, my son; do not disregard me, and in the end my words will come home to you.
Whatever you do, do it shrewdly,
and no illness will come your way.
23 Everyone has a good word for a liberal host,
and the evidence of his generosity is convincing.
24 The whole town grumbles at a mean host,
and there is precise evidence of his meanness.

25 Do not try to prove your manhood by drinking, for wine has been the ruin of many.
26 As the furnace tests iron when it is being tempered, so wine tests character when boastful men are wrangling.

Wine puts life into a man,
 if he drinks it in moderation. 27
 What is life to a man deprived of wine?
 Was it not created to warm men's hearts?
 Wine brings gaiety and high spirits, 28
 if a man knows when to drink and when to stop;
 but wine in excess makes for bitter feelings 29
 and leads to offence and retaliation.
 Drunkenness inflames a fool's anger to his own hurt;
 it saps his strength and exposes him to injury. 30
 At a banquet do not rebuke your fellow-guest 31 or make him feel small while he is enjoying himself.
 This is no time to take up a quarrel with him or pester him to pay his debts.

If they choose you to preside at a feast, do not put on airs; 32 behave to them as one of themselves.
 Look after the others before you sit down;
 do not take your place until you have discharged all your duties. 2
 Let their enjoyment be your pleasure, and you will win the prize for good manners.

Speak, if you are old—it is your privilege— 3
 but come to the point and do not interrupt the music.
 Where entertainment is provided, do not keep up a stream of talk; 4
 it is the wrong time to show off your wisdom.
 Like a signet of ruby in a gold ring 5
 is a concert of music at a banquet.
 Like a signet of emerald in a gold setting 6
 is tuneful music with good wine.

Speak, if you are young, when the need arises, 7
 but twice at the most, and only when asked.
 Be brief, say much in few words, 8
 like a man who knows and can still hold his tongue.
 Among the great do not act as their equal 9 or go on chattering when another is speaking.
 As lightning travels ahead of thunder, 10
 so popularity goes before a modest man.
 Leave in good time and do not be the last to go; 11 go straight home without lingering.
 There you may amuse yourself to your heart's content, 12
 and run no risk of arrogant talk.
 And one thing more: give praise to your Maker, 13
 who has filled your cup with his blessings.

THE MAN WHO FEARS THE LORD will accept his discipline, 14
 and the diligent will receive his approval.

15 The genuine student will find satisfaction in the law,
but it will prove a stumbling-block to the insincere.
16 Those who fear the Lord will discover what is right, and will make his decrees^a shine out like a lamp.
17 A sinner will not accept criticism;
he will find precedents to justify his choice.

18 A sensible man can always take a hint;
but an arrogant heathen does not know the meaning of diffidence.
19 Never do anything without deliberation, and afterwards you will have no regrets.^b 20 Do not travel by a road full of obstacles and stumble along through its boulders.
21 Do not be careless on a clear road
but watch where you are going.^c 22 Whatever you are doing, rely on yourself, for this too is a way of keeping the commandments.
24 To rely on the law is to heed its commandments, and to trust the Lord is to want for nothing.

33 Disaster never comes the way of the man who fears the Lord:
in times of trial he will be rescued again and again.
2 A wise man never hates the law,
but the man who is insincere about it is like a boat in a squall.
3 A sensible man trusts the law and finds it as reliable as the divine oracle.

4 Prepare what you have to say, if you want a hearing;
marshal your learning and then give your answer.
5 The feelings of a fool turn like a cart-wheel,
and his thoughts spin like an axle.
6 A sarcastic friend is like a stallion which neighs no matter who is on its back.

7 Why is one day more important than another, when every day in the year has its light from the sun?
8 It was by the Lord's decision that they were distinguished;
he appointed the various seasons and festivals:
9 some days he made high and holy,
and others he assigned to the common run of days.
10 All men alike come from the ground;
Adam was created out of earth.
11 Yet in his great wisdom the Lord distinguished them and made them go various ways:

^a Or their good conduct.

^b you . . . regrets: or do not change your mind.

^c but . . . going: so Heb.; Gk. and keep an eye on your children.

- some he blessed and lifted high, 12
some he hallowed and brought near to himself, some he cursed and humbled and removed from their place.
As clay is in the potter's hands, 13
to be moulded just as he chooses,
so are men in the hands of their Maker,
to be dealt with as he decides.
Good is the opposite of evil, and life of death; 14
yes, and the sinner is the opposite of the godly.
Look at all the works of the Most High: 15
they go in pairs, one the opposite of the other.
- I was the last to wake up, 16
I was like a gleaner following the grape-pickers;
by the Lord's blessing I arrived in time to fill my winepress as full as any of them.
Remember that I did not toil for myself alone, 17
but for all who seek learning.
Listen to me, you dignitaries; 18
leaders of the assembly, give me your attention.
- As long as you live, give no one power over yourself— 19 son or wife, brother or friend.
Do not give your property to another,
in case you change your mind and want it back.
As long as you have life and breath, 20
never change places with anyone.
It is better for your children to ask from you 21
than for you to be dependent on them.
Whatever you are doing, keep the upper hand, 22
and allow no blot on your reputation.
Let your life run its full course, 23
and then, at the hour of death, distribute your estate.
- Fodder, and stick, and burdens for the donkey; 24
bread, and discipline, and work for the servant!
Make your slave work, if you want rest for yourself; 25
if you leave him idle, he will be looking for his liberty.
The ox is tamed by yoke and harness, 26
the bad servant by racks and tortures.
Put him to work to keep him from being idle, 27
for idleness is a great teacher of mischief.
Set him to work, for that is what he is for, 28
and if he disobeys you, load him with fetters.
- Do not be too exacting towards anyone 29
or do anything contrary to justice.

- 30 If you have a servant, treat him as an equal,
because you bought him with blood.
- 31 If you have a servant, treat him like a brother;
you will need him as much as you need yourself.
If you ill-treat him and he takes to his heels,
where will you go to look for him?
- 34 Vain hopes delude the senseless,
and dreams give wings to a fool's fancy.
2 It is like clutching a shadow, or chasing the wind,
to take notice of dreams.
3 What you see in a dream is nothing but a reflection, like the image of a face in a mirror.
4 Purity cannot come out of filth;
how then can truth issue from falsehood?
5 Divination, omens, and dreams are all futile, mere fantasies, like those of a woman in labour.
6 Unless they are sent by intervention from the Most High,
pay no attention to them.
7 Dreams have led many astray and ruined those who built their hopes on them.
8 Such delusions can add nothing to the completeness of the law;
the wisdom spoken by the faithful is complete in itself.
- 9 An educated man knows many things, and a man of experience understands what he is talking about.
10 An inexperienced man knows little,
but a man who travels grows in ability.
11 I have seen many things in the course of my travels, and understand more than I can tell.
12 I have often been in deadly danger and escaped, thanks to the experience I had gained.

True piety and the mercy of God

- 13 THOSE WHO FEAR the Lord shall live, for their trust is in one who can keep them safe.
- 14 The man who fears the Lord will have nothing else to fear;
he will never be a coward, because his trust is in the Lord.
15 How blest is the man who fears the Lord!
He knows where to look for support.
- 16 The Lord keeps watch over those who love him,
their strong shield and firm support,
a shelter from scorching wind and midday heat,
a safeguard against stumbles and falls.
- 17 He raises the spirits and makes the eyes sparkle, giving health, and life, and blessing.

A sacrifice derived from ill-gotten gains is contaminated, a lawless mockery that cannot win approval.	18
The Most High is not pleased with the offering of the godless, nor do endless sacrifices win his forgiveness.	19
To offer a sacrifice from the possessions of the poor is like killing a son before his father's eyes.	20
Bread is life to the destitute, and it is murder to deprive them of it.	21
To rob your neighbour of his livelihood is to kill him, and the man who cheats a worker of his wages sheds blood	22
When one builds and another pulls down, what have they gained except hard work?	23
When one prays and another curses, which is the Lord to listen to?	24
Wash after touching a corpse and then touch it again, and what have you gained by your washing?	25
So it is with the man who fasts for his sins and goes and does the same again; who will listen to his prayer? what has he gained by his penance?	26
Keeping the law is worth many offerings; to heed the commandments is to sacrifice a thank-offering.	35
A kindness repaid is an offering of flour, and to give alms is a praise-offering.	2
The way to please the Lord is to renounce evil; and to renounce wrongdoing is to make atonement.	3
Yet do not appear before the Lord empty-handed; perform these sacrifices because they are commanded.	4
When the just man brings his offering of fat to the altar, its fragrance rises to the presence of the Most High.	5 6
The just man's sacrifice is acceptable; it will never be forgotten.	7
Be generous in your worship of the Lord and present the firstfruits of your labour in full measure.	8
Give all your gifts cheerfully and be glad to dedicate your tithe.	9
Give to the Most High as he has given to you, as generously as you can afford.	10
For the Lord always repays; you will be repaid seven times over.	11
Do not offer him a bribe, for he will not accept it, and do not rely on a dishonest sacrifice; for the Lord is a judge who knows no partiality.	12
He has no favourites at the poor man's expense, but listens to his prayer when he is wronged.	13

14 He never ignores the appeal of the orphan or the widow when she pours out her complaint.
 15 How the tears run down the widow's cheeks,
 and her cries accuse the man who caused them!
 16 To be accepted a man must serve the Lord as he requires,
 and then his prayer will reach the clouds.
 17 The prayer of the humble pierces the clouds,
 but he is not consoled until it reaches its destination.
 He does not desist until the Most High intervenes, gives the just their rights, and sees justice done.
 18 The Lord will not be slow, neither will he be patient with the wicked,
 until he crushes the sinews of the merciless and sends retribution on the heathen;
 until he blots out the insolent, one and all,
 and breaks the power of the unjust;
 19 until he gives all men their deserts, judging their actions by their intentions;
 until he gives his people their rights and gladdens them with his mercy.
 20 His mercy is as timely in days of trouble
 as rain-clouds in days of drought.

36 HAVE PITY ON US, O LORD, thou God of all; look down,
 2 and send thy terror upon all nations.
 3 Raise thy hand against the heathen,
 and let them see thy power.
 4 As they have seen thy holiness displayed among us,
 so let us see thy greatness displayed among them.
 5 Let them learn, as we also have learned, that there is no God but only thou, O Lord.
 6 Renew thy signs, repeat thy miracles, win glory for thy hand, for thy right arm.
 7 Rouse thy wrath, pour out thy fury, destroy the adversary, wipe out the enemy.
 8 Remember the day thou hast appointed and hasten it, ^a and give men cause to recount thy wonders.
 9 Let fiery anger devour the survivors,
 and let the oppressors of thy people meet their doom.
 10 Crush the heads of hostile princes, who say, 'There is no one to match us.' 11 Gather all the tribes of Jacob, and grant them their inheritance, ^b as thou didst long ago.
 12 Have pity, O Lord, on the people called by thy name,
 Israel, whom thou hast named thy first-born.

^a Remember . . . it: some witnesses read Hasten the day and remember thy oath.

^b Or and take them to be thy own.

Show mercy to the city of thy sanctuary, 13
 Jerusalem, the city of thy rest.
 Fill Zion with the praise of thy triumph; 14
 fill thy people with thy glory.
 Thou didst create them at the beginning; acknowledge them now 15 and fulfil the prophecies spoken in thy name.
 Reward those who wait for thee; 16 prove thy prophets trustworthy.
 Listen, O Lord, to the prayer of thy servants, 17
 who claim Aaron's blessing upon thy people.
 Let all who live on earth acknowledge that thou art the Lord, the eternal God.

Man in society

ALL IS FOOD for the stomach, 18
 but one food is better than another.
 As the palate identifies game by its taste, 19
 so the discerning mind detects lies.
 A warped mind makes trouble, 20
 but a man of experience can pay it back.

A woman will take any man for husband, 21
 but a man may prefer one girl to another.
 A woman's beauty makes a man happy, 22
 and there is nothing he desires more.
 If she has a kind and gentle tongue, 23
 then her husband is luckier than most men.
 The man who wins a wife has the beginnings of a fortune, 24
 a helper to match his needs and a pillar to support him.
 Where there is no hedge, property is plundered; 25
 and where there is no wife, the wanderer sighs for a home.
 Does anyone trust a roving bandit 26
 who swoops on town after town?
 No more will they trust a homeless man who lodges wherever night overtakes him.

Every friend says, 'I too am your friend'; 37
 but some are friends in name only.
 What a mortal grief it is 2
 when a dear friend turns into an enemy!
 Oh this propensity to evil, how did it creep in 3
 to cover the earth with treachery?
 A friend may be all smiles when you are happy, 4
 but turn against you when trouble comes.
 Another shares your toil for the sake of a meal, 5
 and yet may protect you against an enemy.

- 6 Never forget a friend or neglect him when prosperity comes your way.
- 7 Every counsellor says his own advice is best,
but some have their own advantage in view.
- 8 Beware of the man who offers advice,
and find out beforehand where his interest lies.
His advice will be weighted in his own favour and may tip the scales against you.
- 9 He may say, 'Your road is clear',
and stand aside to see what happens.
- 10 Do not consult a man who is suspicious of you or reveal your intentions to those who envy you.
- 11 Never consult a woman about her rival or a coward about war,
a merchant about a bargain
or a buyer about a sale,
a skinflint about gratitude
or a hard-hearted man about a kind action, an idler about work of any sort,
a casual labourer about finishing the job,
or a lazy servant about an exacting task—
do not turn to them for any advice.
- 12 Rely rather on a godfearing man whom you know to be a keeper of the commandments, whose interests are like your own,
who will sympathize if you have a setback.
- 13 But also trust your own judgement,
for it is your most reliable counsellor.
- 14 A man's own mind has sometimes a way of telling him more than seven watchmen posted high on a tower.
- 15 But above all pray to the Most High to keep you on the straight road of truth.
- 16 Every undertaking begins in discussion,
and consultation precedes every action.
- 17 Here you can trace the mind's variety.
- 18 Four kinds of destiny are offered to men,
good and evil, life and death;
and always it is the tongue that decides the issue.
- 19 A man may be clever enough to teach others
and yet be useless to himself.
- 20 A brilliant speaker may make enemies
and end by dying of hunger,
if the Lord has withheld the gift of popular appeal,
because he is devoid of wisdom.
- 22 If a man is wise in the conduct of his own life,
his good sense can be trusted when he speaks.

If a man is wise and instructs his people, 23
 then his good sense can be trusted.
 A wise man will have praise heaped on him, 24
 and all who see him will count him happy.
 The days of a man's life can be numbered, 25
 but the days of Israel are countless.
 A wise man will possess the confidence of his people, 26
 and his name will live for ever.

MY SON, TEST YOURSELF all your life long; 27 take note of what is bad for you and do not indulge in it.
 For not everything is good for everyone; 28
 we do not all enjoy the same things.
 Do not be greedy for every delicacy 29
 or eat without restraint.
 For illness is a sure result of overeating, 30
 and gluttony is next door to colic.
 Gluttony has been the death of many; 31
 be on your guard and prolong your life.

Honour the doctor for his services, 38
 for the Lord created him.
 His skill comes from the Most High, 2
 and he is rewarded by kings.
 The doctor's knowledge gives him high standing 3
 and wins him the admiration of the great.
 The Lord has created medicines from the earth, 4
 and a sensible man will not disparage them.
 Was it not a tree that sweetened water 5
 and so disclosed its properties ^a?
 The Lord has imparted knowledge to men, 6
 that by their use of his marvels he may win praise;
 by using them the doctor ^b relieves pain 7
 and from them the pharmacist makes up his mixture. 8
 There is no end to the works of the Lord,
 who spreads health over the whole world.

My son, if you have an illness, do not neglect it, 9
 but pray to the Lord, and he will heal you.
 Renounce your faults, amend your ways, 10
 and cleanse your heart from all sin.
 Bring a savoury offering and bring flour for a token 11 and pour oil on the sacrifice; be as generous as you can. ^c
 Then call in the doctor, for the Lord created him; 12
 do not let him leave you, for you need him.

^a Or and revealed the power of the Lord.

^b the doctor: so Heb.; Gk. he heals and . . . ^c be . . . can: so Heb.; Gk. obscure.

13 There may come a time when your recovery is in their hands;
14 then they too will pray to the Lord to give them success in relieving pain and finding a cure to save their patient's life.
15 When a man has sinned against his Maker,
let him put himself in the doctor's hands.

16 My son, shed tears for the dead;
raise a lament for your grievous loss.
Shroud his body with proper ceremony,
and do not neglect his burial.
17 With bitter weeping and passionate lament make your mourning worthy of him.
Mourn for a few days as propriety demands,
and then take comfort for your grief.
18 For grief may lead to death,
and a sorrowful heart saps the strength.
19 When a man is taken away, suffering is over,
but to live on in poverty goes against the grain.
20 Do not abandon yourself to grief;
put it from you and think of your own end.
21 Never forget! there is no return;
you cannot help him and can only injure yourself.
22 Remember that his fate will also be yours:
'Mine today and yours tomorrow.'
23 When the dead is at rest, let his memory rest too;
take comfort as soon as he has breathed his last.

24 A SCHOLAR'S WISDOM comes of ample leisure;
if a man is to be wise he must be relieved of other tasks.
25 How can a man become wise who guides the plough, whose pride is in wielding his goad,
who is absorbed in the task of driving oxen,
and talks only about cattle?
26 He concentrates on ploughing his furrows,
and works late to give the heifers their fodder.
27 So it is with every craftsman or designer who works by night as well as by day, such as those who make engravings on signets,
and patiently vary the design;
they concentrate on making an exact representation,
and sit up late to finish their task.
28 So it is with the smith, sitting by his anvil, intent on his iron-work.
The smoke of the fire shrivels his flesh,
as he wrestles in the heat of the furnace.

The hammer rings again and again in his ears,
 and his eyes are on the pattern he is copying.
 He concentrates on completing the task,
 and stays up late to give it a perfect finish.
 So it is with the potter, sitting at his work, 29
 turning the wheel with his feet, always engrossed in the task of making up his tally;
 he moulds the clay with his arm, 30
 crouching forward to apply his strength.
 He concentrates on finishing the glazing,
 and stays awake to clean out the furnace.

All these rely on their hands, 31
 and each is skilful at his own craft.
 Without them a city would have no inhabitants;
 no settlers or travellers would come to it. 32
 Yet they are not in demand at public discussions or prominent in the assembly. 33
 They do not sit on the judge's bench or understand the decisions of the courts.
 They cannot expound moral or legal principles and are not ready with maxims.
 But they maintain the fabric of this world, 34 and their prayers are about their daily work. ^a

How different it is with the man who devotes himself 39
 to studying the law of the Most High, who investigates all the wisdom of the past,
 and spends his time studying the prophecies!
 He preserves the sayings of famous men 2
 and penetrates the intricacies of parables.
 He investigates the hidden meaning of proverbs and knows his way among riddles. 3
 The great avail themselves of his services, 4
 and he is seen in the presence of rulers.
 He travels in foreign countries and learns at first hand the good or evil of man's lot.
 He makes a point of rising early 5
 to pray to the Lord, his Maker, and prays aloud to the Most High,
 asking pardon for his sins.
 If it is the will of the great Lord, 6
 he will be filled with a spirit of intelligence;
 then he will pour forth wise sayings of his own and give thanks to the Lord in prayer.

^a Or and their daily work is their prayer.

7 He will have sound advice and knowledge to offer, and his thoughts will dwell on the mysteries he has studied.
 8 He will disclose what he has learnt from his own education, and will take pride in the law of the Lord's covenant.
 9 Many will praise his intelligence;
 it will never sink into oblivion.
 The memory of him will not die
 but will live on from generation to generation; 10 the nations will talk of his wisdom,
 and his praises will be sung in the assembly.
 11 If he lives long, he will leave a name in a thousand, and if he goes to his rest, his reputation is secure. ^a 12 I HAVE STILL MORE in my mind to express;

 I am full like the moon at mid-month.
 13 Listen to me, my devout sons, and blossom like a rose planted by a stream.
 14 Spread your fragrance like incense,
 and bloom like a lily.
 Scatter your fragrance; lift your voices in song, praising the Lord for all his works.
 15 Ascribe majesty to his name and give thanks to him with praise, with songs on your lips, and with harps;
 let these be your words of thanksgiving:
 16 'All that the Lord has made is very good;
 all that he commands will happen in due time.'
 17 No one should ask, 'What is this?' or 'Why is that?'
 At the proper time all such questions will be answered.
 When he spoke the water stood up like a heap,
 and his word created reservoirs for it.
 18 When he commands, his purpose is fulfilled,
 and no one can thwart his saving power.
 19 He sees the deeds of all mankind;
 there is no hiding from his gaze.
 20 From the beginning to the end of time he keeps watch, and nothing is too marvellous for him.
 21 No one should ask, 'What is this?' or 'Why is that?'
 Everything has been created for its own purpose.
 22 His blessing is like a river in flood which inundates the parched ground.
 23 But the doom he assigns the heathen is his wrath,
 as when he turned a watered plain into a salt desert.
 24 For the devout his paths are straight;
 but full of pitfalls for the wicked.

^a his reputation is secure: possible reading; Gk. obscure.

From the beginning good things were created for the good,
and evils for sinners. 25
The chief necessities of human life 26
are water, fire, iron, and salt, flour, honey, and milk,
the juice of the grape, oil, and clothing.
All these are good for the godfearing,
but turn to evil for sinners. 27

There are winds created to be agents of retribution, with great whips to give play to their fury;
on the day of reckoning, they exert their force and give full vent to the anger of their Maker.
Fire and hail, famine and deadly disease, 29
all these were created for retribution;
beasts of prey, scorpions and vipers, 30
and the avenging sword that destroys the wicked.
They delight in carrying out his orders, 31
always standing ready for his service on the earth;
and when their time comes, they never disobey.

I have been convinced of all this from the beginning; 32
I have thought it over and left it in writing:
all the works of the Lord are good, 33
and he supplies every need as it occurs.
No one should say, 'This is less good than that', 34
for all things prove good at their proper time.
Come then, sing with heart and voice, 35
and praise the name of the Lord.

HARD WORK IS THE LOT of every man, 40 and a heavy yoke is laid on the sons of Adam,
from the day when they come from their mothers' womb
until the day of their return to the mother of all;
troubled thoughts and fears are theirs, 2
and anxious expectation of the day of their death.
Whether a man sits in royal splendour on a throne 3 or grovels in dust and ashes, whether he wears the purple and a crown 4
or is clothed in sackcloth, his life is nothing but anger and jealousy, worry and perplexity, fear of death, and guilt, and rivalry. 5
Even when he goes to bed at night, sleep only brings to mind the same things in a new form.
His rest is little or nothing; 6
he begins to struggle as hard in his sleep as in the day. ^a

^a he begins . . . day: possible meaning; Gk. obscure.

- 7 Disturbed by nightmares,
 he fancies himself a fugitive from the battlefield;
 and at the moment when he reaches safety, he wakes up,
 astonished to find his fears groundless.
- 8 To all living creatures, man and beast—
 and seven times over to sinners—9 come death and bloodshed, quarrel and sword, disaster, famine, ruin, and plague.
10 All these were created for the wicked,
 and on their account the flood happened.
11 All that is of earth returns to earth again,
 and all that is of water finds its way back to the sea.
- 12 Bribery and injustice will all vanish,
 but good faith will last for ever.
13 The wealth of the wicked will dry up like a torrent and die away like a great roll of thunder in a storm.
14 As a generous man will have cause for rejoicing,
 so law-breakers will come to utter ruin.
15 The shoots of an impious stock put out few branches;
 their tainted roots are planted on sheer rock.
16 The rush that grows on every river-bank is pulled up before any other grass, 17 but kindness is like a luxuriant garden,
 and almsgiving lasts for ever.
- 18 To be employed and to be one's own master, both are sweet,
 but it is better still to find a treasure.
19 Offspring and the founding of a city perpetuate a man's name, but better still is a perfect wife.
20 Wine and music gladden the heart, but better still is the love of wisdom.
21 Flute and harp make pleasant melody,
 but better still is a pleasant voice.
22 A man likes to see grace and beauty,
 but better still the green shoots in a cornfield.
23 A friend or companion is always welcome,
 but better still to be man and wife.
24 Brothers and helpers are a stand-by in time of trouble,
 but better still is almsgiving.
25 Gold and silver make a man stand firm,
 but better still is good advice.
26 Wealth and strength make for confidence,
 but better still is the fear of the Lord.
 To fear the Lord is to lack nothing and never to be in need of support.
27 The fear of the Lord is like a luxuriant garden;
 it shelters a man better than any riches.

- My son, do not live the life of a beggar ; 28
it is better to die than to beg.
- When a man starts looking to another man's table, 29
his existence is not worth calling life.
- It is demoralizing to live on another man's food,
and a wise, well-disciplined man will guard against it.
- When a man has lost all shame, he speaks as if begging were sweet, 30
but inside him there is a blazing fire.
- Death, how bitter is the thought of you 41
to a man living at ease among his possessions, free from anxiety, prosperous in all things,
and still vigorous enough to enjoy a good meal!
- Death, how welcome is your sentence 2
to a destitute man whose strength is failing, worn down by age and endless anxiety,
resentful and at the end of his patience!
- Do not be afraid of death's summons ; 3 remember those who have gone before you, and those who will come after.
- This is the Lord's decree for all living men ; 4
why try to argue with the will of the Most High?
- Whether life lasts ten years, or a hundred, or a thousand,
there will be no questions asked in the grave.
- What a loathsome brood are the children of sinners, 5 brought up in haunts of vice!
- Their inheritance dwindles away, 6
and their descendants suffer a lasting disgrace.
- A godless father is blamed by his children 7
for the disgrace they endure on his account.
- Woe to you, godless men 8
who have abandoned the law of God Most High!
- When you are born, you are born to a curse, 9
and when you die, a curse is your lot.
- Whatever comes from earth returns to earth ; 10
so too the godless go from curse to ruin.
- Men grieve over the death of the body, 11
but sinners have no good name to survive them.
- Take thought for your name, for it will outlive you 12 longer than a thousand hoards of gold.
- The days of a good life are numbered, 13
but a good name lasts for ever.
- MY CHILDREN, BE TRUE to your training and live in peace. 14 Wisdom concealed and treasure hidden—what is the use of either?
- Better a man who hides his folly 15
than one who hides his wisdom!

- 16 Show deference then to my teaching:
shame is not always to be encouraged,
or given unqualified approval in all circumstances.
- 17 Be ashamed to be found guilty of fornication by your parents, or of lies by a ruler or prince;
- 18 of crime by a judge or magistrate,
or of a breach of the law by the assembly and people;
of dishonesty by a partner or friend,
- 19 or of theft by the neighbourhood;
be ashamed before the truth of God and his covenant.
Be ashamed of bad manners at table,
of giving or receiving with a sneer,
- 20 of refusing to return a greeting,
or of ogling a prostitute.
- 21 Be ashamed of turning away a relative,
of robbing someone of his rightful share,
or of eyeing another man's wife.
- 22 Be ashamed of meddling with his slave-girl,
and keep away from her bed.
Be ashamed of reproaching your friends,
or following up your charity with a lecture.
- 23 Be ashamed of repeating what you have heard and of betraying a secret.
- 24 Then you will be showing a proper shame
and will be popular with everyone.
- 42 But at other times you must not be ashamed,
or you will do wrong out of deference to others.
- 2 Do not be ashamed of the law and covenant of the Most High,
or of justice, for fear you acquit the guilty;
- 3 of settling accounts with a partner or a travelling-companion,
or of sharing an inheritance with the other heirs;
- 4 of using accurate weights and measures,
or of business dealings, large or small,
and making a profit out of trade;
- 5 of frequent disciplining of children,
or of drawing blood from the back of a worthless servant.
- 6 If your wife is untrustworthy, or where many hands are at work, it is well to keep things under lock and key.
- 7 When you make a deposit, see that it is counted and weighed,
and when you give or receive, have it all in writing.
- 8 Do not be ashamed to correct the ignorant and foolish,
or a greybeard guilty of fornication.
Then you will be showing your sound upbringing and will win everyone's approval.
- 9 A daughter is a secret anxiety to her father,
and the worry of her keeps him awake at night;

when she is young, for fear she may grow too old to marry, and when she is married, for fear she may lose her husband's love;
 when she is a virgin, for fear she may be seduced 10
 and become pregnant in her father's house, when she has a husband, for fear she may misbehave,
 and after marriage, for fear she may be barren.
 Keep close watch over a headstrong daughter, 11
 or she may give your enemies cause to gloat, making you the talk of the town and a byword^a among the people,
 and shaming you in the eyes of the world.
 Do not let her display her beauty to any man, 12 or gossip in the women's quarters.^b
 For out of clothes comes the moth, 13
 and out of woman comes woman's wickedness.
 Better a man's wickedness than a woman's goodness; 14
 it is woman who brings shame and disgrace.

The wonders of creation

NOW I WILL CALL to mind the works of the Lord 15
 and describe what I have seen;
 by the words of the Lord his works are made.
 As the sun in its brilliance looks down on everything, 16
 so the glory of the Lord fills his creation.
 Even to his angels the Lord has not given the power 17
 to tell the full story of his marvels, which the Lord Almighty has established
 so that the universe may stand firm in his glory.
 He fathoms the abyss and the heart of man, 18
 he is versed in their intricate secrets;
 for the Lord possesses all knowledge and observes the signs of all time.
 He discloses the past and the future, 19
 and uncovers the traces of the world's mysteries.
 No thought escapes his notice, 20
 and not a word is hidden from him.
 He has set in order the masterpieces of his wisdom, 21
 he who is from eternity to eternity;
 nothing can be added, nothing taken away,
 and he needs no one to give him advice.
 How beautiful is all that he has made, 22
 down to the smallest spark that can be seen!
 His works endure, all of them active for ever 23
 and all responsive to their various purposes.
 All things go in pairs, one the opposite of the other; 24
 he has made nothing incomplete.

^a a byword: so Heb.; Gk. obscure.

^b Do not . . . quarters: so Heb.; Gk. obscure.

25 One thing supplements the virtues of another.
Who could ever contemplate his glory enough?

43 What a masterpiece is the clear vault of the sky!
How glorious is the spectacle of the heavens!
2 The sun comes into view proclaiming as it rises
how marvellous a thing it is, made by the Most High.
3 At noon it parches the earth,
and no one can endure its blazing heat.
4 The stoker of a furnace works in the heat, but three times as hot is the sun scorching the hills.
It breathes out fiery vapours,
and its glare blinds the eyes.
5 Great is the Lord who made it, whose word speeds it on its course.

6 He made the moon also to serve in its turn,
a perpetual sign to mark the divisions of time.
7 From the moon, feast-days are reckoned;
it is a light that wanes as it completes its course.
8 The moon gives its name to the month;
it waxes marvellously as its phases change,
a beacon to the armies of heaven,
shining in the vault of the sky.

9 The brilliant stars are the beauty of the sky,
a glittering array in the heights of the Lord.
10 At the command of the Holy One they stand in their appointed place;
they never default at their post.

11 Look at the rainbow and praise its Maker;
it shines with a supreme beauty, 12 rounding the sky with its gleaming arc,
a bow bent by the hands of the Most High.

13 His command speeds the snow-storm and sends the swift lightning to execute his sentence.
14 To that end the storehouses are opened,
and the clouds fly out like birds.
15 By his mighty power the clouds are piled up and the hailstones broken small.
16-17 The crash of his thunder makes the earth writhe,
and, when he appears, an earthquake shakes the hills.
At his will the south wind blows,
the squall from the north and the hurricane.
He scatters the snow-flakes like birds alighting;
they settle like a swarm of locusts.
18 The eye is dazzled by their beautiful whiteness,
and as they fall the mind is entranced.

He spreads frost on the earth like salt, and icicles form like pointed stakes.	19
A cold blast from the north, and ice grows hard on the water, settling on every pool, as though the water were putting on a breastplate.	20
He consumes the hills, scorches the wilderness, and withers the grass like fire.	21
Cloudy weather quickly puts all to rights, and dew brings welcome relief after heat.	22
By the power of his thought he tamed the deep and planted it with islands.	23
Those who sail the sea tell stories of its dangers, which astonish all who hear them; in it are strange and wonderful creatures, all kinds of living things and huge sea-monsters.	24
By his own action he achieves his end, and by his word all things are held together.	25
By his own action he achieves his end, and by his word all things are held together.	26
However much we say, we cannot exhaust our theme; to put it in a word: he is all.	27
Where can we find the skill to sing his praises? For he is greater than all his works.	28
The Lord is terrible and very great, and marvellous is his power.	29
Honour the Lord to the best of your ability, and he will still be high above all praise.	30
Summon all your strength to declare his greatness, and be untiring, for the most you can do will fall short.	31
Has anyone ever seen him, to be able to describe him? Can anyone praise him as he truly is?	32
We have seen but a small part of his works, and there remain many mysteries greater still.	33
The Lord has made everything and has given wisdom to the godly.	33

Heroes of Israel's past

L ET US NOW SING the praises of famous men, the heroes of our nation's history, through whom the Lord established his renown, and revealed his majesty in each succeeding age.	44
Some held sway over kingdoms and made themselves a name by their exploits.	2
Others were sage counsellors, who spoke out with prophetic power.	3

- 4 Some led the people by their counsels
and by their knowledge of the nation's law;
out of their fund of wisdom they gave instruction.
- 5 Some were composers of music or writers of poetry.
- 6 Others were endowed with wealth and strength,
living peacefully in their homes.
- 7 All these won fame in their own generation and were the pride of their times.
- 8 Some there are who have left a name behind them to be commemorated in story.
- 9 There are others who are unremembered;
they are dead, and it is as though they had never existed,
as though they had never been born or left children to succeed them.
- 10 Not so our forefathers; they were men of loyalty,
whose good deeds have never been forgotten.
- 11 Their prosperity is handed on to their descendants, and their inheritance to future generations.^a
- 12 Thanks to them their children are within the covenants—
the whole race of their descendants.
- 13 Their line will endure for all time,
and their fame will never be blotted out.
- 14 Their bodies are buried in peace,
but their name lives for ever.
- 15 Nations will recount their wisdom,
and God's people will sing their praises.
- 16 Enoch pleased the Lord and was carried off to heaven,
an example of repentance to future generations.
- 17 Noah was found perfect and righteous,
and thus he made amends in the time of retribution;
therefore a remnant survived on the earth,
when the flood came.
- 18 A perpetual covenant was established with him, that never again should all life be swept away by a flood.
- 19 Great Abraham was the father of many nations;
no one has ever been found to equal him in fame.
- 20 He kept the law of the Most High;
he entered into covenant with him,
setting upon his body the mark of the covenant;
and, when he was tested, he proved faithful.
- 21 Therefore the Lord swore an oath to him, that nations should find blessing through his descendants, that his family should be countless as the dust of the earth and be raised as high as the stars, and that their possessions should reach from sea to sea,
from the Great River to the ends of the earth.

To Isaac he made the same promise 22
 for the sake of his father Abraham,
 a blessing for all mankind and a covenant;
 and so he transmitted them to Jacob. 23
 He confirmed him in the blessings he had received and gave him the land he was to inherit, dividing it into portions,
 which he allotted to the twelve tribes.

From Jacob's stock the Lord raised up a loyal servant, 45 who won the approval of all mankind, beloved by God and men,
 Moses of blessed memory.
 The Lord made him equal in glory to the angels 2
 and gave him power to strike terror into his enemies.
 At his request he put an end to the portents, 3
 and enhanced his reputation with kings.
 He gave him commandments for his people and showed him a vision of his own glory.
 For his loyalty and humility he consecrated him, 4 choosing him out of all mankind.
 He let him hear his voice 5
 and led him into the dark cloud.
 Face to face, he gave him the commandments,
 a law that brings life and knowledge,
 so that he might teach Jacob the covenant and Israel his decrees.

He raised to a like holy office 6
 Moses' brother Aaron from the tribe of Levi.
 He made a perpetual covenant with him, 7 conferring on him the priesthood of the nation.
 He honoured him with splendid ornaments and clothed him in gorgeous vestments.
 He robed him in perfect splendour 8
 and armed him with the emblems of power,
 the breeches, the mantle, and the tunic.
 Round his robe he placed pomegranates 9
 and a circle of many golden bells, to make music as he walked,
 ringing aloud throughout the temple
 as a reminder to his people.
 He gave him the sacred vestment adorned by an embroiderer 10 with gold and violet and purple;
 the oracle of judgement with the tokens of truth; ^a
 the scarlet thread spun with a craftsman's art; 11

^a the oracle . . . truth: or the breast-piece of judgement with the Urim and Thummim (Exodus 28. 30).

- the precious stones, engraved like seals,
and placed by the jeweller in a gold setting,
with inscriptions to serve as reminders,
one for each of the tribes of Israel;
12 the gold crown upon his turban, engraved like a seal with 'Holy to the Lord'.^a
What rich adornments to feast the eyes!
What a miracle of art! What a proud honour!
13 Before him no such splendour existed, and no one outside his family has ever put them on,
no one except his sons
and his descendants in perpetuity.
14 Twice every day without fail
they present his sacrifice of a whole-offering.
- 15 It was Moses who ordained him and anointed him with sacred oil, in token of the perpetual covenant made with him and with his descendants as long as the heavens endure, that he should be the Lord's minister in the priestly office and bless his people in his name.
16 He chose him out of all mankind to bring offerings to the Lord, incense and the fragrance of memorial sacrifice,
to make atonement for the people.
17 He entrusted to him his commandments,
with authority to pronounce legal decisions,
to teach Jacob his decrees
and enlighten Israel about his law.
- 18 Upstarts grew jealous of him and conspired against him in the desert, Dathan and Abiram with their supporters and Korah's band in their violent anger.
19 The Lord saw and refused his sanction;
he destroyed them in the heat of his wrath,
and worked a miracle against them
by consuming them in a blazing fire.
20 But he added fresh honours to Aaron and gave him a special privilege, allotting to the priests the choicest firstfruits,
to ensure that they above all should have bread in plenty.
21 For they eat the sacrifices of the Lord,
which he gave to Aaron and his descendants.
22 But he was to have no inheritance in the land of his people, no portion allotted to him among them;
for the Lord himself is his portion, his inheritance.

^a Compare Exodus 28. 36; literally a seal of holiness.

Phinehas son of Eleazar ranks third in renown 23
for being zealous in his reverence for the Lord, and for standing firm with noble courage,
when the people were in revolt;
by so doing he made atonement for Israel.
Therefore a covenant was established with him, 24
assuring him command of the sanctuary and of the nation, conferring on him and his descendants
the high-priesthood for ever.
Just as a covenant was made with David son of Jesse of the tribe of Judah, 25 that the royal succession should always pass from father to son, so the succession was to pass from Aaron to his descendants.
May the Lord grant you a wise mind 26
to judge his people with justice, so that their prosperity may never vanish
and their glory may be handed on to future generations!

Joshua son of Nun was a mighty warrior, 46
who succeeded Moses in the prophetic office.
He lived up to his name
as a great liberator of the Lord's chosen people, able to take reprisals on the enemies who attacked them,
and to put Israel in possession of their territory.
How glorious he was when he raised his hand 2
and brandished his sword against cities!
Never before had a man made such a stand, 3
for he was fighting the Lord's battles.
Was it not through him that the sun stood still 4
and made one day as long as two?
He called on the Most High, the Mighty One, 5
when the enemy was pressing him on every side, and the great Lord answered his prayer with a violent storm of hail. 6
He overwhelmed that nation in battle and crushed his assailants as they fled down the pass, to make the nations recognize his strength in arms and teach them that he fought under the very eyes of the Lord, for he followed the lead of the Mighty One.

In the time of Moses he had proved his loyalty, 7
he and Caleb son of Jephunneh:
they stood their ground against the whole assembly, restrained the people from sin,
and silenced their wicked grumbling.
Out of six hundred thousand warriors 8
these two alone escaped with their lives to enter the land and take possession of it,
the land flowing with milk and honey.

- 9 The Lord gave Caleb strength, which still remained with him in his old age,
so that he was able to invade the hill-country and win possession of it for his descendants.
- 10 So all Israel could see how good it is to be a loyal follower of the Lord.
- 11 Then there are the judges, name after famous name,
all of them men who rejected idolatry and never rebelled against the Lord:
blessings be on their memory!
- 12 May their bones send forth new life from the ground where they lie!
May the fame of the honoured dead be matched by their sons!
- 13 Samuel was beloved by his Lord;
as prophet of the Lord he established the monarchy and anointed rulers over his people.
- 14 As long as he dispensed justice according to the law of the Lord, the Lord kept watch over Jacob.
- 15 Because of his fidelity he proved to be an accurate prophet;
the truth of his vision was shown by his utterances.
- 16 He called on the Mighty Lord,
when enemies were pressing him on every side,
and offered a sucking-lamb in sacrifice;
- 17 then the Lord thundered from heaven,
making his voice heard in a mighty crash, and routed the leaders of the enemy,^a all the rulers of the Philistines.
- 18 Before the time came for his eternal sleep,
Samuel called the Lord and his anointed to witness:
'I never took any man's property,
not so much as a pair of shoes';
and no man accused him.
- 19 Even after he had gone to his rest he prophesied
and foretold to the king his death, lifting up his voice in prophecy from the ground to wipe out the people's guilt.
- 47 After him Nathan came forward to be prophet in the reign of David.
- 2 As the fat is separated from the sacrifice,
so David was chosen out of all Israel.
- 3 He played with lions as though they were kids,
with bears as though they were lambs.
- 4 In his youth did he not kill a giant and restore the honour of his people, when he whirled his sling with its stone and brought down boastful Goliath?

^a the enemy: so Heb.; Gk. Tyre.

For he called on the Lord Most High, who gave strength to his right arm to strike down that mighty warrior and win victory for his people. 5
So they hailed him as conqueror of tens of thousands, they sang his praises for the blessings bestowed by the Lord,
when he was offered the royal diadem. 6
For he subdued their enemies on every side and crushed the resistance of the Philistines, whose power remains broken to this day. 7
In all he did he gave thanks, ascribing glory to the Holy One, the Most High. 8
With his whole heart he sang hymns of praise, to show his love for his Maker.
He appointed musicians to stand before the altar and sing sweet music to the harp. 9
So he gave splendour to the festivals and fixed for all time the round of sacred seasons, when men praise the holy name of the Lord and the sanctuary resounds from morning to night. 10
The Lord pardoned his sins and endowed him with great power for ever: 11
he gave him a covenant of kingship and the glorious throne of Israel.

He was succeeded by a wise son, Solomon, 12 who, thanks to his father David, lived in spacious days.
He reigned in an age of peace, 13
because God made all his frontiers quiet, and so he was able to build a house in God's honour,
a sanctuary founded to last for ever.
How wise you were, Solomon, in your youth! 14
Your mind was like a brimming river;
your influence spread throughout the world, 15
which you filled with your proverbs and riddles.
Your fame reached to distant islands, 16
and you were beloved for your peaceful reign.
Your songs, your proverbs, your parables, 17
and the answers you gave were the admiration of the world.
In the name of the Lord God, 18
who is known as the God of Israel, you amassed gold and silver
as though they were tin and lead.
But you took women to lie at your side 19
and gave yourself up to their control.
You stained your reputation 20
and tainted your line.

- You brought retribution on your children and made them grieve over your folly, 21 because it divided the sovereignty and produced out of Ephraim a rebel kingdom.
 22 But the Lord never ceases to be merciful;
 he does not destroy what he himself has made;
 he will not wipe out the children of his chosen servant
 or cut short the line of the man who has loved him.
 So he granted a remnant to Jacob and let one scion of David survive.
- 23 So Solomon died like his forefathers and left one of his sons to succeed him,
 a man of weak intelligence, the fool of the nation,
 Rehoboam, whose policy drove the people to revolt.
 Then Jeroboam son of Nebat led Israel into sin and started Ephraim on its wicked course.
 24 Their sins increased beyond measure, until they were driven into exile from their native land;
 25 for they had explored every kind of wickedness,
 until retribution came upon them.
- 48 Then Elijah appeared, a prophet like fire,
 whose word flamed like a torch.
 2 He brought famine upon them,
 and his zeal made their numbers small.
 3 By the word of the Lord he shut up the sky and three times called down fire.
 4 How glorious you were, Elijah, in your miracles!
 Who else can boast such deeds?
 5 You raised a corpse from death and from the grave, by the word of the Most High.
 6 You sent kings and famous men from their sick-beds down to their deaths.
 7 You heard a denunciation at Sinai,
 a sentence of doom at Horeb.
 8 So you anointed kings for vengeance,
 and prophets to succeed you.
 9 You were taken up to heaven in a fiery whirlwind,
 in a chariot drawn by horses of fire.
 10 It is written that you are to come at the appointed time with warnings, to allay the divine wrath before its final fury,
 to reconcile father and son,
 and to restore the tribes of Jacob.
 11 Happy are those who saw you and were honoured with your love! ^a

^a honoured . . . love: probable meaning; Gk. adds for we also shall certainly live.

When Elijah had vanished in a whirlwind, 12
 Elisha was filled with his spirit.
 Throughout his life no ruler made him tremble;
 no one could make him subservient.
 Nothing was too difficult for him; 13
 even in the grave his body kept its prophetic power.
 In life he worked miracles, 14
 and in death his deeds were marvellous.
 In spite of all this the people did not repent 15
 or renounce their sins, until they were carried off as plunder from their land and scattered over the whole earth.
 Only a tiny nation was left,
 with a ruler from the house of David;
 and of these some did what was pleasing to the Lord, 16
 but others heaped sin upon sin.
 Hezekiah fortified his city, 17 bringing water within its walls;
 he drilled through the rock with tools of iron and made cisterns for the water.
 In his reign Sennacherib invaded the country. 18
 He sent Rab-shakeh from Lachish,^a who made threats against Zion and grew arrogant in his boasting.
 Then they were unnerved in heart and hand; 19
 they suffered the anguish of a woman in labour.
 So they called on the merciful Lord, 20 spreading out their hands in supplication to him.
 The Holy One quickly answered their prayer from heaven
 by sending Isaiah to the rescue;
 he struck down the Assyrian camp, 21
 and his angel wiped them out.
 For Hezekiah did what was pleasing to the Lord, 22
 and kept firmly to the ways of his ancestor David,
 as he was instructed by Isaiah,
 the great prophet whose vision could be trusted.
 In his time the sun went back, 23
 and he added many years to the king's life.
 With inspired power he saw the future 24
 and comforted the mourners in Zion.
 He revealed things to come before they happened, 25
 the secrets of the future to the end of time.
 The memory of Josiah is fragrant as incense 49 blended by the skill of the perfumer, sweet as honey to every palate
 or as music at a banquet.

^a from Lachish: other witnesses read and went away.

2 He did what was right: he reformed the nation and rooted out their loathsome and lawless practices.
3 He was whole-heartedly loyal to the Lord and in lawless times made godliness prevail.

4 Except David, Hezekiah, and Josiah, all were guilty of wrongdoing,
for they deserted the law of the Most High;
and so the royal line of Judah came to an end.
5 They surrendered their power to others and their glory to a foreign nation, 6 who set fire to the chosen city, the city of the sanctuary,
and left its streets deserted, as Jeremiah prophesied;
7 for they had ill-treated him,
a prophet consecrated even before his birth to uproot, to destroy, and to demolish, but also to build and to plant.

8 Ezekiel had a vision of the Glory, which was revealed enthroned on the chariot of the cherubim.
9 The Lord remembered his enemies and sent a storm,
but he did good to those who kept to the straight path.
10 May the bones of the twelve prophets also send forth new life from the ground where they lie!
For they put new heart into Jacob,
and rescued the people by their confident hope.

11 How can we tell the greatness of Zerubbabel, who was like a signet-ring on the Lord's right hand?
12 With him was Joshua son of Jehozadak;
in their days they built the house,
raising a holy temple to the Lord,
destined for eternal glory.
13 Great is the memory of Nehemiah, who raised our fallen walls, constructed gates and bars,
and rebuilt our ruined homes.

14 No one on earth has been created to equal Enoch,
for he was taken up from the earth.
15 No man has been born to be Joseph's peer,
the ruler of his brothers and the strength of his people;
and the Lord kept watch over his body.
16 Shem and Seth were given distinction among men, but Adam holds pre-eminence over all creation.

50 It was the high priest Simon son of Onias in whose lifetime the house was repaired, in whose days the temple was fortified.

He laid the foundation for the high double wall,
 the high retaining wall of the temple precinct. 2
 In his day they dug^a the reservoir, 3
 a cistern broad as the sea.
 He applied his mind to protecting his people from ruin 4
 and strengthened the city against siege.
 How glorious he was, surrounded by the people, 5
 when he came from behind the temple curtain!
 He was like the morning star appearing through the clouds 6 or the moon at the full;
 like the sun shining on the temple of the Most High 7 or the light of the rainbow on the gleaming clouds;
 like a rose in spring 8
 or lilies by a fountain of water;
 like a green shoot upon Lebanon on a summer's day 9 or burning incense in the censer;
 like a cup of beaten gold,
 decorated with every kind of precious stone;
 like an olive-tree laden with fruit 10
 or a cypress with its top in the clouds.
 When he put on his gorgeous vestments, 11
 robed himself in perfect splendour,
 and went up to the holy altar,
 he added lustre to the court of the sanctuary.
 When the priests were handing him the portions of the sacrifice, 12
 as he stood by the altar hearth with his brothers round him like a garland, he was like a young cedar of Lebanon
 in the midst of a circle of palms.
 All the sons of Aaron in their magnificence 13 stood with the Lord's offering in their hands before the whole congregation of Israel.
 To complete the ceremonies at the altar 14
 and adorn the offering of the Most High, the Almighty, he held out his hand for the libation cup 15
 and poured out the blood of the grape, poured its fragrance at the foot of the altar
 to the Most High, the King of all.
 Then the sons of Aaron shouted 16
 and blew their trumpets of beaten silver;
 they sounded a mighty fanfare
 as a reminder before the Lord.
 Instantly the people as one man fell on their faces 17
 to worship the Lord their God, the Almighty, the Most High.
 Then the choir broke into praise, 18
 in the full sweet strains of resounding song,

^a they dug: so Heb.; Gk. obscure.

19 while the people of the Most High were making their petitions to the merciful Lord, until the liturgy of the Lord was finished and the ritual complete.
 20 Then Simon came down and raised his hands over the whole congregation of Israel, to pronounce the Lord's blessing,
 proud to take his name on his lips;
 21 and a second time they bowed in worship
 to receive the blessing from the Most High.

22 COME THEN, PRAISE the God of the universe, who everywhere works great wonders, who from our birth ennobles our life ^a
 and deals with us in mercy.
 23 May he grant us a joyful heart,
 and in our time send Israel lasting peace.
 24 May he confirm his mercy towards us,
 and in his own good time grant us deliverance.

25 Two nations I detest,
 and a third is no nation at all:
 26 the inhabitants of Mount Seir, ^b the Philistines, and the senseless folk that live at Shechem.

27 In this book I have written lessons of good sense and understanding,
 I, Jesus son of Sirach, ^c of Jerusalem, whose mind was a fountain of wisdom.
 28 Happy the man who occupies himself with these lessons, who lays them to heart and grows wise!
 29 If he lives by them, he will be equal to anything, with the light of the Lord shining on his path.

Epilogue

51 I THANK THEE, my Lord and King,
 I praise thee, my God and Saviour,
 I give thee thanks,
 2 because thou hast been my protector and helper,
 rescuing me from death,
 from the trap laid by a slanderous tongue
 and from lips that utter lies.
 In the face of my assailants thou didst come to my help;

^a ennobles our life: or brings us up.

^b Mount Seir: so Heb.; Gk. the mountain in the fullness of thy mercy and glory thou didst rescue me 3 from grinding teeth which waited to devour me, from hands that threatened my life,

 from the many troubles I endured,
 from the choking fire around me, 4
 from the flames I had not kindled, from the deep recesses of the grave, 5
 from the foul tongue and its lies—a wicked slander spoken in the king's presence. 6
 I came near to death;
 I was on the brink of the grave.
 They surrounded me on every side, 7
 and there was no one to help me.
 I looked for human aid and there was none.
 Then I remembered thy mercy, Lord, 8
 thy deeds in bygone days;
 thou dost deliver those who patiently trust thee
 and free them from the power of their enemies.
 So I sent up a prayer from the earth 9
 and begged for rescue from death.
 I cried, 'Lord, thou art my Father; ^a 10
 do not desert me in time of trouble,
 when I am helpless in the face of arrogance.
 I will praise thee continually, 11
 I will sing hymns of thanksgiving.'
 And my prayer was granted; 12
 for thou didst save me from death and rescue me from my desperate plight.
 Therefore I will thank thee and praise thee and bless thee, O Lord.

When I was still young, before I set out on my travels, 13
 I asked openly for wisdom in my prayers.
 In the forecourt of the sanctuary I laid claim to her, 14
 and I shall seek her out to the end.
 From the first blossom to the ripening of the grape 15
 she has been the delight of my heart.
 From my youth my steps have followed her without swerving.
 I had hardly begun to listen when I was rewarded, 16
 and I gained for myself much instruction.
 I made progress in my studies; 17
 all honour to him who gives me wisdom!
 I determined to practise what I had learnt; 18
 I pursued goodness, and shall never regret it.
 I strove for wisdom with all my might, 19
 and was scrupulous in whatever I did.

^a thou . . . Father: so Heb. ; Gk. Father of my lord.

I spread out my hands to heaven above,
 deploring my ignorance;
 20 I set my heart on possessing wisdom,
 and by keeping myself pure I found her.
 With her I gained understanding from the first;
 therefore I shall never be at a loss.
 21 Because I passionately yearned to discover her,
 I won a noble prize.
 22 The Lord gave me eloquence as my reward,
 and with it I will praise him.
 23 Come to me, you who need instruction, and lodge in my house of learning.
 24 Why do you admit to a lack of these things,
 yet leave your great thirst unslaked?
 25 I have made my proclamation:
 'Buy for yourselves without money, 26 bend your neck to the yoke,
 be ready to accept discipline;
 you need not go far to find it.'
 27 See for yourselves how little were my labours compared with the great peace I have found.
 28 Your share of instruction may cost you a large sum of silver,
 but it will bring you a large return in gold.
 29 May you take delight in the Lord's mercy and never be ashamed of praising him.
 30 Do your duty in good time, and in his own time he will reward you.

BARUCH

A message to a conquered people

1 THIS IS THE BOOK OF BARUCH, son of Neriah, son of Mahseiah, son of Zedekiah, son of Hasadiah, son of Hilkiyah, written 2 in Babylon, on the seventh day of the month, in the fifth year after the Chaldeans had captured and burnt Jerusalem.

3 Baruch read the book aloud to Jeconiah son of Jehoiakim, king of Judah, 4 and to all the people who had assembled to hear it: the nobles, the princes of the royal blood, the elders, and the whole community, high and low—5 in short, all who lived in Babylon, by the river Soud. Then they prayed
 6 to the Lord with tears and fasting; and each of them collected as much 7 money as he could, and they sent it to Jerusalem, to Jehoiakim the high priest, son of Hilkiyah, son of Shallum, and to the priests and all the people 8 who were with him. This was the time when he took the vessels belonging to the house of the Lord which had been looted from the temple, and returned them to the land of Judah, on the tenth of the month Sivan. These were the silver vessels made by Zedekiah son of Josiah, king of Judah, after Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon had deported Jeconiah, the rulers, the captives, the nobles, and the common people from Jerusalem and taken them to Babylon.

They said: We are sending you money to buy whole-offerings, sin-offerings, and incense; provide a grain-offering, and offer them all upon the altar of the Lord our God; and pray for Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, and for his son Belshazzar, that their life on earth may last as long as the heavens. So the Lord will give us strength, and light to walk by, and we shall live under the protection of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, and of Belshazzar his son; we shall give them long service and gain their favour. Pray also for us to the Lord our God, because we have sinned against him, and to this day the Lord's anger and wrath have not been averted from us.

You are to read this book that we are sending you, and make your confession in the house of the Lord on the feast day and during the festal season, and say: The Lord our God is in the right; but on us the shame rests to this very day—on the men of Judah, the citizens of Jerusalem, on our kings and rulers, on our priests and prophets, and on our fathers. We have sinned against the Lord and disobeyed him; we did not listen to the Lord our God or follow the precepts he gave us. From the day when the Lord brought our fathers out of Egypt until now, we have been disobedient to the Lord our God and have heedlessly disregarded his voice. So here we are today in the grip of adversity, suffering under the curse which the Lord commanded his servant Moses to pronounce, when he led our fathers out of Egypt to give us a land flowing with milk and honey. Moreover we refused to hear the Lord our God speaking in all the words of the prophets he sent us; we went our own way, each following the promptings of his own wicked heart, serving other gods, doing what was evil in the sight of the Lord our God.

So the Lord made good the warning he had given to us, to our magistrates in Israel, our kings and our rulers, and the men of Israel and Judah. Nowhere under heaven have such deeds been done as were done in Jerusalem, thus fulfilling what was foretold in the law of Moses, that we should eat the flesh of our children, one his own son and another his own daughter. The Lord made our nation subject to all the kingdoms round us, our land a waste, our name a byword to all the nations among whom he had scattered our people. Instead of rising to the top, they sank to the bottom, because we sinned against the Lord our God and did not listen to his voice. The Lord our God is in the right; but on us and our fathers the shame rests to this very day. All these evils of which the Lord warned us have come about. Yet we did not entreat the Lord that we might all turn away from the thoughts of our wicked hearts. The Lord kept strict watch and brought these evils on our heads, because he is just; he laid all these commandments upon us, but we did not listen to his voice or follow the precepts which he gave us.

11 And now, Lord God of Israel, who didst bring thy people out of Egypt 12 with a mighty hand, with signs and portents, with great power and arm uplifted, winning for thyself a renown that lives on to this day: by our sin, 13 our godlessness, and our injustice we have broken all thy commandments, 14 O Lord our God. Be angry with us no longer, for we are left a mere handful among the heathen where thou hast scattered us. Listen, O Lord, to our prayer and our entreaty, deliver us for thy own sake, and grant us 15 favour with those who have taken us into exile, so that the whole earth may know that thou art the Lord our God, who hast named Israel and his posterity as thy own.

16 O Lord, look down from thy holy dwelling and think of us. Turn thy 17 ear to us, Lord, and hear us; open thine eyes and see. The dead are in their graves, the breath is gone from their bodies; it is not they who can 18 sing the Lord's praises or applaud his justice; it is living men, mourning their fall from greatness, walking the earth bent and feeble, blind and famished—it is these who will sing thy praises, O Lord, and applaud thy justice.

19 Not for any just deeds of our fathers and our kings do we lay before thee 20 our plea for pity, O Lord our God. Thou hast vented upon us that wrath and anger of which thou didst warn us through thy servants the prophets 21 who said: 'These are the words of the Lord: Bow your shoulders and serve the king of Babylon and you shall remain in the land that I gave 22 to your fathers; but if you do not listen to the Lord and serve the king of Babylon, then I will banish from Jerusalem and the cities of Judah all 23 sounds of joy and merriment, the voice of bride and bridegroom; the whole land shall lie waste and uninhabited.' But we did not obey thy command to 24 serve the king of Babylon. And so thou didst make good the warning given through thy servants the prophets: the bones of our kings and of our fathers 25 have been taken from their resting-place; and there they lie, exposed to the heat by day and the frost by night. They died a painful death by famine, 26 sword, and disease.^a And because of the wickedness of Israel and Judah the house that was named as thine has become what it is today.

27 Yet thou hast shown us, O Lord our God, all thy wonted forbearance
28 and great mercy. For this is what thou didst promise through thy servant
Moses, on the day thou didst command him to write thy law in the presence 29 of the Israelites: 'If you will not listen to my voice, this great swarming multitude will be reduced to a tiny remnant among the heathen where I 30 will scatter them. I know they will not hear me, this stubborn people, but in the land of their exile they will come to their senses and know that I am 31 the Lord their God. I will give them a mind to understand and ears to hear.
32 Then they will praise me in the land of their exile and will turn their 33 thoughts to me; they will repent of their stubbornness and their wicked 34 deeds, for they will recall how their fathers sinned against the Lord. Then I will restore them to the land that I swore to give to their forefathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and they shall rule over it. And I will increase 35 their number: they shall never dwindle away. I will enter into an eternal covenant with them, that I will become their God and they shall become ^a disease: probable meaning (compare Jeremiah 32. 36); Gk. obscure.

my people. Never again will I remove my people Israel from the land that I have given them.'

O Lord Almighty, God of Israel, the soul in anguish and the fainting spirit cry out to thee. Listen, Lord, and have mercy, for we have sinned against thee. Thou art enthroned for ever; we are for ever passing away. Now, Almighty Lord, God of Israel, hear the prayer of Israel's dead and of the sons of those who sinned against thee. They did not heed the voice of their God, and so we are in the grip of adversity. Do not recall the misdeeds of our fathers, but remember now thy power and thy name, for thou art the Lord our God, and we will praise thee, O Lord. It is for this that thou hast put the fear of thee in our hearts, to make us call upon thy name. And we will praise thee in our exile, for we have put away from us all the wrongdoing of our fathers who sinned against thee. Today we are in exile; thou hast scattered us and made us a byword and a curse, to be punished for all the sins of our fathers, who rebelled against the Lord our God.

LISTEN, ISRAEL, to the commandments of life; hear, and learn wisdom. Why is it, Israel, that you are in your enemies' country, that you have grown old in an alien land? Why have you shared the defilement of the dead and been numbered with those that lie in the grave? It is because you have forsaken the fountain of wisdom. If you had walked in the way of God, you would have lived in peace for ever. Where is understanding, where is strength, where is intelligence? Learn that, and then you will know where to find life and light to walk by, long life and peace. Has any man discovered the dwelling-place of wisdom or entered her storehouse? Where are the rulers of the nations now? Where are those who have hunted wild beasts or the birds of the air for sport? Where are those who have hoarded the silver and gold men trust in, never satisfied with their gains? Where are the silversmiths with their patient skill and the secrets of their craft? They have all vanished and gone down to the grave, and others have risen to take their place. A younger generation saw the light of day and dwelt in the land. But they did not learn the way of knowledge, or discover its paths; they did not lay hold of it; their sons went far astray. Wisdom was not heard of in Canaan, nor seen in Teman. The sons of Hagar who sought for understanding on earth, the merchants of Merran and Teman, the myth-makers, the seekers after knowledge, none of them discovered the way of wisdom, or remembered her paths.

How great, O Israel, is God's dwelling-place, how vast the extent of his domain! Great it is, and boundless, lofty, and immeasurable. There in ancient time the giants were born, a famous race, great in stature, skilled in war. But these men were not chosen by God, nor shown the way of knowledge. So their race died out because they had no understanding; they lacked the wit to survive. Has any man gone up to heaven to gain wisdom and brought her down from the clouds? Has any man crossed the sea to find her or bought her for fine gold? No one can know the path or conceive the way that will lead to her. Only the One who knows all things knows her: his understanding discovered her. He who established the earth for all time filled it with four-footed beasts. He sends forth the light, and it goes on its 34 way; he called it, it feared him and obeyed. The stars shone at their ap-35 pointed stations and rejoiced; he called them and they answered, 'We are 36 here!' Joyfully they shone for their Maker. This is our God; there is none 37 to compare with him. The whole way of knowledge he found out and gave 4 appeared on earth and lived among men. She is the book of the commandments of God, the law that stands for ever. All who hold fast to her shall 2 live, but those who forsake her shall die. Return, Jacob, and lay hold of her;

3 set your course towards her radiance, and face her beacon light. Do not give 4 up your glory to another or your privileges to an alien people. Happy are we, Israel, because we know what is pleasing to God!

5 6 Take heart, my people, you who keep Israel's name alive. You were sold to the heathen, but not to be destroyed; it was because you roused God's 7 anger that you were handed over to your enemies. You provoked your 8 Maker by sacrificing to demons and to that which is not God. You forgot the Everlasting God who nurtured you, and you grieved Jerusalem who 9 fostered you; for she saw how God's anger had come upon you, and she said: Listen, you neighbours of Zion, God has brought great grief upon 10 me. I have seen the captivity of my sons and daughters which the Ever-
11 lasting has inflicted upon them; I nursed them in delight, but with tears 12 and mourning I saw them go. Let no one exult over me in my widowhood, bereaved of so many. I have been left desolate through the sins of my 13 children, through their turning away from the law of God. They would not learn his statutes, or follow his commandments, or let God guide and train them in his righteousness.

14 Come then, neighbours of Zion, remember the captivity of my sons and 15 daughters which the Everlasting has inflicted upon them. For he brought down on them a nation from far away, a ruthless nation speaking a strange 16 language and without reverence for age or pity for children. They carried off the widow's beloved sons, and left her in loneliness, deprived of her 17 18 daughters. But I, how can I help you? Only the One who brought these 19 evils upon you can deliver you from your enemies. Go your way, my 20 children, go, for I am left desolate. I have put off the robes of peaceful days, and put on the sackcloth of a suppliant. I will cry out to the Everlasting as long as I live.

21 Take heart, my children! Cry out to God, and he will rescue you from 22 tyranny and from the power of your enemies. For I have set my hope of your deliverance on the Everlasting; the Holy One, your everlasting saviour, has 23 filled me with joy over the mercy soon to be granted you. I saw you go with mourning and tears, but God will give you back to me with joy and glad-24 ness for ever. For as the neighbours of Zion have now seen your captivity, so they will soon see your deliverance coming upon you from your God 25 with the great glory and splendour of the Everlasting. My children, endure in patience the wrath God has brought upon you; your enemy has hunted you down, but soon you will see him destroyed, and will put your foot upon 26 his neck. My pampered children have trodden rough paths; they have been carried off like a flock seized by raiders.

27 Take heart, my children! Cry out to God, for he who afflicted you will not forget you. You once resolved to go astray from God; now with tenfold zeal you must turn about and seek him. He who brought these calamities upon you will bring you everlasting joy when he delivers you.

Take heart, Jerusalem! He who called you by name will comfort you.
Wretched shall they be who despoiled you and gloated over your fall; wretched the cities where your children were slaves; wretched the city that received your sons! The same city that rejoiced at your downfall and made merry over your ruin shall grieve over her own desolation. I will strip her of the multitudes that were her boast, and turn her pride to mourning.
Fire from the Everlasting shall be her doom for many a day, and long shall she be a haunt of demons.

Jerusalem, look eastwards and see the joy that is coming to you from God. They come, the sons from whom you parted, they come, gathered together at the word of the Holy One from east to west, rejoicing in the glory of God.

Jerusalem, strip off the garment of your sorrow and affliction, and put on for ever the glorious majesty that is the gift of God. Wrap about you his robe of righteousness; set on your head for diadem the splendour of the Everlasting; for God will show your radiance to every land under heaven.
You shall receive from God for ever the name Righteous Peace, Godly Splendour.

Jerusalem, arise and stand upon the height; look eastwards and see from west to east your children gathered together at the word of the Holy One, rejoicing that God has remembered them. They went away from you on foot, led off by their enemies, but God is bringing them home to you borne aloft in glory, like a king on his throne. For God has commanded every high mountain and the everlasting hills to be made low, and the valleys to be filled and levelled, so that Israel may walk safely in the glory of God. And woods and every fragrant tree shall give Israel shade by God's command. For God shall lead Israel with joy in the light of his glory, granting them his mercy and his righteousness.

A LETTER OF JEREMIAH

The folly of idolatry

6^a A COPY OF A LETTER sent by Jeremiah to the captives who were to be taken to Babylon by the king of Babylon, conveying a message entrusted to him by God.

2 The sins you have committed in the sight of God are the cause of your being led away captive to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon.
3 Once you are in Babylon, your stay there will be long; it will last for many years, up to seven generations; but afterwards I will lead you out in peace and prosperity.

4 Now in Babylon you will see carried on men's shoulders gods made of 5 silver, gold, and wood, which fill the heathen with awe. Be careful, then, never to imitate these Gentiles; do not be overawed by their gods when you
6 see them in the midst of a procession of worshippers. But say in your hearts, 7 'To thee alone, Lord, is worship due.' For my angel is with you; your lives are in his care.

8 The idols are plated with gold and silver, they have tongues fashioned 9 by a craftsman, but they are a fraud and cannot speak. And the people take gold and make crowns for the heads of their gods, as one might for a girl fond of finery. Sometimes also the priests filch gold and silver from their
10 gods and spend it on themselves; they will even give some of it to the prostitutes in the inner chamber. They dress up the idols in clothes like 11 human beings, these gods of silver, gold, and wood. But the gods, decked in purple though they are, cannot protect themselves against rust and moth.
12 The dust in the temple, too, lies thick upon them, so that their faces have to 13 be wiped clean. Like a human judge the god holds a sceptre, yet he cannot 14 put to death anyone who offends him. In his right hand he has a dagger and 15 an axe, yet he cannot deliver himself from war and pillage. This shows they 16 are not gods, so have no fear of them.

17 Their gods are no more use than a broken tool, sitting there in their temples. Their eyes get filled with dust from the feet of those who come in.
18 And just as the palace-court is barricaded to secure a traitor awaiting execution, so the priests secure their temples with doors and bolts and bars to 19 guard against plundering by robbers. They light lamps, more than they 20-21 need for themselves—yet the idols can see none of them. They are like one of the beams of the temple; their hearts are eaten out, as the saying is, for creatures crawl out of the ground and devour them and their clothing.

^a The chapter and verse numbering is that of the Authorized Version, in which this forms chapter 6 of Baruch.

When their faces are blackened by the smoke of the temple they are quite unaware of it. Bats and swallows and birds of all kinds perch on their heads and bodies, and cats do the same. From all this you may be sure that they are not gods, so have no fear of them.

Though plated with gold for ornament, the idols will not shine, unless someone rubs off the tarnish. Even when they were being cast they did not feel it. They were bought at great cost, but there is no breath in them. As they have no real feet they are carried on men's shoulders, which shows how worthless they are. Even those who serve them are ashamed, because if ever an idol falls on the ground, it does not get up by itself; nor, if anyone sets it up again, can it move by its own effort, and if it is tilted it cannot straighten itself. To set offerings before them is like setting them before the dead.
The sacrifices made to gods are sold by the priests, who spend the proceeds on themselves. Their wives are no better; they take portions of these sacrifices and cure the meat, and give no share to the poor or helpless.
Their offerings are touched by women who are menstruating or by mothers fresh from childbed. Be assured by all this that they are not gods, and have no fear of them.

Why should they be called gods? These gods of silver, gold, and wood have food served to them by women. In their temples the priests sit shaven and shorn, with their clothes rent, and their heads uncovered. They shout and howl before these gods of theirs, like mourners at a funeral feast. The priests strip vestments from the gods to clothe their own wives and children. Should anyone do these gods either injury or service they will not be able to repay it. They cannot set up or depose a king. So also they are incapable of bestowing wealth or money; if someone makes a vow to them and does not honour it, they will never exact payment. They will never save any man from death, never rescue the weak from the strong. They cannot restore the blind man's sight or give relief to the needy. They do not pity the widow or befriend the orphan. They are like blocks from the quarry, these wooden things plated with gold and silver, and their worshippers will be humiliated. How then can anyone suppose them to be gods or call them so?

Besides, even the Chaldaeans themselves bring these idols of theirs into disrepute; for, when they see a dumb man without the power of articulate speech, they bring him into the temple and make him call upon Bel, as if Bel could understand him. They cannot see the folly of it and abandon the idols, because they themselves have no understanding. The women too sit in the street with cords round them, burning bran for incense. And when a passer-by has pulled one of them to him and she has lain with him, she taunts her neighbour, because she has not been thought as attractive as herself and her cord has not been broken. Everything to do with these idols is fraud and delusion. How then can anyone suppose them to be gods or call them so?

They are things manufactured by carpenters and goldsmiths; they can be nothing but what the craftsmen wish them to be. Even their makers' lives cannot be prolonged; what, then, can the things they make expect?
It is simply a scandalous fraud that they have bequeathed to posterity.

48 When war and disasters befall the gods, it is the priests who discuss 49 amongst themselves where they and their gods can hide. How then can 50 men fail to see that these are not gods, when they cannot save themselves
51 from war and disaster? Since they are nothing but wood plated with gold 52 and silver, they will in time be recognized for the frauds they are. All the 53 heathen and their kings will plainly see that they are not gods but the work 54 of men's hands, with no divine power in them at all. Can there still be any-55 one who does not realize that they are not gods?

56 They cannot set up a king over a country, and they cannot give men rain.
57 They cannot decide a case or redress a wrong.^a They are as helpless as 58 crows tossed about in mid air. When fire breaks out in a temple belonging 59 to those wooden gods all gilded and silvered, their priests will run away to 60 safety, but the gods will be burnt up in the flames like timbers. They can-61 not resist king or enemy. How then can anyone allow or believe that they 62 are gods?

63 They cannot save themselves from thieves and robbers, these wooden 64 gods, plated with silver and gold. Anyone who can will strip away their gold 65 and silver and make off with the clothing they wear, and the gods can do 66 nothing to help themselves. It is better to be a king who proves his courage 67 than such a sham god, better a household vessel that serves its owner's 68 purpose, better even the door of a house that keeps the contents safe, or a 69 wooden pillar in a palace. Sun and moon and the stars that shine so brightly 70 are sent to serve a purpose, and they obey. So too, when the lightning 71 flashes, it is seen far and wide. It is the same with the wind; it blows in 72 every land. And when God orders the clouds to travel over all the world
73 they carry out their task, and so does fire when it is sent down from above 74 to consume mountains and forests. But idols are not to be compared with 75 any of these, in appearance or in power. It follows that they are not to be 76 considered gods or called by that name, seeing that they are incapable of 77 pronouncing judgement or of conferring benefits on mankind. Recognize, 78 therefore, that they are not gods, and have no fear of them.

79 They wield no power over kings, either to curse them or to bless them;
80 and they cannot provide heavenly signs for the nations, either by shining 81 like the sun or by giving light like the moon. They are more helpless than 82 wild beasts, which can at least save themselves by taking cover. There is 83 no evidence at all that they are gods, so have no fear of them.

84 These wooden gods of theirs, plated with gold and silver, give no better 85 protection than a scarecrow in a plot of cucumbers. They are like a thorn-86 bush in a garden, a perch for every bird, like a corpse cast out in the dark.
87 Such are their wooden gods, with their plating of gold and silver. The 88 purple and fine linen^b rotting on them proves that they are not gods; in 89 the end they will themselves be eaten away, held in contempt throughout 90 the land.

91 Better, then, is an upright man who has no idols; he will be in no danger 92 of contempt.

^a Some witnesses read cannot judge in their own cause, or redress a wrong done them.

THE SONG OF THE THREE

AN ADDITION IN THE GREEK VERSION
OF DANIEL BETWEEN 3. 23 AND 3. 24

THEY WALKED IN THE HEART of the fire, praising God and blessing the Lord. Azariah stood still among the flames and began to pray aloud: 'Blessed art thou, O Lord, the God of our fathers, thy name is worthy of praise and glorious for ever: thou art just in all thy deeds and true in all thy works; straight are thy paths, and all thy judgements just. Just sentence hast thou passed in all that thou hast brought upon us and upon Jerusalem the holy city of our fathers: yes, just sentence thou hast passed upon our sins. For indeed we sinned and broke thy law in rebellion against thee, in all we did we sinned; we did not heed thy commandments, we did not keep them, we did not do what thou hadst commanded us for our good. In all the punishments thou hast sent upon us thy judgements have been just. Thou hast handed us over to our bitterest enemies, rebels against thy law, and to a wicked king, the vilest in the world. And so now we are speechless for shame: contempt has fallen on thy servants and thy worshippers. For thy honour's sake do not abandon us for ever; do not annul thy covenant. Do not withdraw thy mercy from us, for the sake of Abraham, thy beloved, for the sake of Isaac, thy servant, and Israel, thy holy one. Thou didst promise to multiply their descendants as the stars in the sky and the sand on the sea-shore. But now, Lord, we have been made the smallest of all nations; for our sins we are today the most abject in the world. We have no ruler, no prophet, no leader now; there is no burnt-offering, no sacrifice, no oblation, no incense, no place to make an offering before thee and find mercy. But because we come with contrite heart and humbled spirit, accept us. As though we came with burnt-offerings of rams and bullocks and with thousands of fat lambs, so let our sacrifice be made before thee this day. Accept our pledge of loyalty to thee,^a for no shame shall come to those who put their trust in thee. Now we will follow thee with our whole heart and fear thee. We seek thy presence; do not put us to shame, but deal with us in thy forbearance and in the greatness of thy mercy. Grant us again thy marvellous deliverance, and win glory for thy name, O Lord. Let all who do thy servants harm be humbled; may they be put to shame and stripped of all their power, and may their strength be crushed; let them know that thou alone art the Lord God, and glorious over all the world.'

^a Accept our . . . thee: possible meaning; Gk. obscure.

23 The servants of the king who threw them in kept on feeding the furnace 24 with naphtha, pitch, tow, and faggots, and the flames poured out above it to 25 a height of seventy-five feet.^a They spread out and burnt those Chal-26 daeans who were caught near the furnace. But the angel of the Lord came 27 down into the furnace to join Azariah and his companions; he scattered the flames out of the furnace and made the heart of it as if a moist wind were whistling through. The fire did not touch them at all and neither hurt nor distressed them.

DANIEL AND SUSANNA

Innocence vindicated

- 1 2 THERE ONCE LIVED in Babylon a man named Joakim. He married Susanna daughter of Hilkiyah, a very beautiful and devout 3 woman. Her parents, religious people, had brought up their daughter 4 according to the law of Moses. Joakim was very rich and his house had a fine garden adjoining it, which was a regular meeting-place for the Jews, because he was the man of greatest distinction among them.
- 5 Now two elders of the community were appointed that year as judges.
 It was of them that the Lord had said, 'Wickedness came forth from Babylon from elders who were judges and were supposed to govern my 6 people.' These men were constantly at Joakim's house, and everyone who had a case to be tried came to them there.
- 7 When the people went away at noon, Susanna used to go and walk in her 8 husband's garden. Every day the two elders saw her entering the garden 9 and taking her walk, and they were obsessed with lust for her. They no longer prayed to God, but let their thoughts stray from him and forgot the 10 claims of morality. They were both infatuated with her; but they did not 11 tell each other what pangs they suffered, because they were ashamed to 12 confess that they wanted to seduce her. Day after day they watched eagerly to see her.
- 13 14 One day they said, 'Let us go home; it is time for lunch.' So they went off in different directions, but soon retraced their steps and found themselves face to face. When they questioned one another, each confessed his passion. Then they agreed on a time when they might find her alone.
- 15 And while they were watching for an opportune day, she went into the garden as usual with only her two maids; it was very hot, and she wished 16 to bathe there. No one else was in the garden except the two elders, who 17 had hidden and were spying on her. She said to her maids, 'Bring me soap 18 and olive oil, and shut the garden doors so that I can bathe.' They did as she told them: they closed the garden doors and went out by the side door to fetch the things they had been ordered to bring; they did not see the 19 elders because they were hiding. As soon as the maids had gone, the two elders started up and ran to Susanna. 'Look!' they said, 'the garden doors are shut, and no one can see us. We are burning with desire for you, so consent and yield to us. If you refuse, we shall give evidence against you that there was a young man with you and that was why you sent your maids away.' Susanna groaned and said: 'I see no way out. If I do this thing, the penalty is death; if I do not, you will have me at your mercy. My choice is made: I will not do it. It is better to be at your mercy than to sin against the Lord.'

With that Susanna gave a loud shout, but the two elders shouted her down. One of them ran and opened the garden door. The household, hearing the uproar in the garden, rushed in through the side door to see what had happened to her. And when the elders had told their story, the servants were deeply shocked, for no such allegation had ever been made against Susanna.

Next day, when the people gathered at her husband Joakim's house, the two elders came, full of their criminal design to put Susanna to death. In the presence of the people they said, 'Send for Susanna daughter of Hilkiah, Joakim's wife.' So they sent for her, and she came with her parents and children and all her relatives. Now Susanna was a woman of great beauty and delicate feeling. She was closely veiled, but those scoundrels ordered her to be unveiled so that they might feast their eyes on her beauty. Her family and all who saw her were in tears. Then the two elders stood up before the people and put their hands on her head. She looked up to heaven through her tears, for she trusted in the Lord. The elders said: 'As we were walking alone in the garden, this woman came in with two maids. She shut the garden doors and dismissed her maids. Then a young man, who had been in hiding, came and lay down with her. We were in a corner of the garden, and when we saw this wickedness we ran up to them. Though we saw them in the act, we could not hold the man; he was too strong for us, and he opened the door and forced his way out. We seized the woman and asked who the young man was, but she would not tell us. That is our evidence.'

As they were elders of the people and judges, the assembly believed them and condemned her to death. Then Susanna cried out loudly: 'Eternal God, who dost know all secrets and foresee all things, thou knowest that their evidence against me was false. And now I am to die, guiltless though I am of all the wicked things these men have said against me.'

The Lord heard her cry. Just as she was being led off to execution, God inspired a devout young man named Daniel to protest, and he shouted out, 'I will not have this woman's blood on my head.' All the people turned and asked him, 'What do you mean by that?' He came forward and said: 'Are you such fools, you Israelites, as to condemn a woman of Israel, without making careful inquiry and finding out the truth? Re-open the trial; the evidence these men have brought against her is false.'

So the people all hurried back, and the rest of the elders said to him, 'Come, take your place among us and state your case, for God has given you the standing of an elder.' Daniel said to them, 'Separate these men and keep them at a distance from each other, and I will examine them.'

52 When they had been separated Daniel summoned one of them. 'You 53 hardened sinner,' he said, 'the sins of your past have now come home to you. You gave unjust decisions, condemning the innocent, and acquitting the guilty, although the Lord has said, "You shall not put to death an 54 innocent and guiltless man." Now then, if you saw this woman, tell us, under what tree did you see them together?' He answered, 'Under a 55 clove-tree.'^a Then Daniel retorted, 'Very good: this lie has cost you your life, for already God's angel has received your sentence from God, and he 56 will cleave^b you in two.' And he told him to stand aside, and ordered them to bring in the other.

He said to him: 'Spawn of Canaan, no son of Judah, beauty has been 57 your undoing, and lust has corrupted your heart! Now we know how you have been treating the women of Israel, frightening them into consorting with you; but here is a woman of Judah who would not submit to your 58 villainy. Now then, tell me, under what tree did you surprise them 59 together?' 'Under a yew-tree',^c he replied. Daniel said to him, 'Very good:
 this lie has cost you your life, for the angel of God is waiting with his sword to hew^d you down and destroy you both.'

60 Then the whole assembly gave a great shout and praised God, the 61 saviour of those who trust in him. They turned on the two elders, for out of their own mouths Daniel had convicted them of giving false evidence; 62 they dealt with them according to the law of Moses, and put them to death, as they in their wickedness had tried to do to their neighbour. And so an 63 innocent life was saved that day. Then Hilkiyah and his wife gave praise for their daughter Susanna, because she was found innocent of a shameful 64 deed, and so did her husband Joakim and all her relatives. And from that day forward Daniel was a great man among his people.

DANIEL, BEL, AND THE SNAKE

The destruction of Bel

1 WHEN KING ASTYAGES was gathered to his fathers
 2 he was succeeded on the throne by Cyrus the Persian. Daniel was a confidant of the king, the most honoured of all the King's Friends.

3 Now the Babylonians had an idol called Bel, for which they provided every day twelve bushels of fine flour, forty sheep, and fifty gallons of wine.
 4 The king held it to be divine and went daily to worship it, but Daniel worshipped his God. So the king said to him, 'Why do you not worship Bel?' He replied, 'Because I do not believe in man-made idols, but in the living God who created heaven and earth and is sovereign over all mankind.' The king said, 'Do you think that Bel is not a living god? Do you not see how much he eats and drinks each day?' Daniel laughed and said, 'Do not be deceived, your majesty; this Bel of yours is only clay inside and bronze outside, and has never eaten anything.'

Then the king was angry, and summoned the priests of Bel and said to them, 'If you cannot tell me who it is that eats up all these provisions, you shall die; but if you can show that it is Bel that eats them, then Daniel shall die for blasphemy against Bel.' Daniel said to the king, 'Let it be as you command.' (There were seventy priests of Bel, not counting their wives and children.) Then the king went with Daniel into the temple of Bel. The priests said, 'We are now going outside; set out the food yourself, your majesty, and mix the wine; then shut the door and seal it with your signet. When you come back in the morning, if you do not find that Bel has eaten it all, let us be put to death; but if Daniel's charges against us turn out to be false, then he shall die.' They treated the whole affair with contempt, because they had made a hidden entrance under the table, and they regularly went in by it and ate everything up.

So when the priests had gone, the king set out the food for Bel; and Daniel ordered his servants to bring ashes and sift them over the whole temple in the presence of the king alone. Then they left the temple, closed the door, sealed it with the king's signet, and went away. During the night the priests, with their wives and children, came as usual and ate and drank everything. Early in the morning the king came, and Daniel with him. The king said, 'Are the seals intact, Daniel?' He answered, 'They are intact, your majesty.' As soon as he opened the door, the king looked at the table and cried aloud, 'Great art thou, O Bel! In thee there is no deceit at all.' But Daniel laughed and held back the king from going in. 'Just look at the floor,' he said, 'and judge whose footprints these are.' The king said, 'I see the footprints of men, women, and children.' In a rage he put the priests under arrest, with their wives and children. Then they showed him the secret doors through which they used to go in and consume what was on the table. So the king put them to death, and handed Bel over to Daniel, who destroyed the idol and its temple.

The destruction of the snake

NOW THERE WAS A HUGE SNAKE, which the Babylonians held to be divine. The king said to Daniel, 'You cannot say that this is not a living god; so worship him.' Daniel answered, 'I will worship the Lord my God, for he is the living God. But give me authority, your majesty, and without sword or staff I will kill the snake.' 'I give it you', said the king. So Daniel took pitch and fat and hair, boiled them together, and made them into cakes, which he put into the mouth of the snake. When the snake ate them, it burst. Then Daniel said, 'See what things you worship!'

28 When the Babylonians heard of this they gathered in an angry crowd to 29 oppose the king. 'The king has turned Jew!' they cried. 'He has pulled 30 down Bel, killed the snake, and put the priests to the sword.' So they went 31 to the king and said, 'Hand Daniel over to us, or else we will kill you and 32 your family.' The king, finding himself hard pressed, was compelled to 33 give Daniel up to them. They threw him into the lion-pit, and he was there 34 for six days. There were seven lions in the pit, and every day two men and 35 two sheep were fed to them; but now they were given nothing, to make 36 sure that they would devour Daniel.

33 Now the prophet Habakkuk was in Judaea; he had made a stew and 34 crumbled bread into the bowl, and he was on the way to his field, carrying 35 it to the reapers, when an angel of the Lord said, 'Habakkuk, carry the 36 meal you have with you to Babylon, for Daniel, who is in the lion-pit.'
 37 Habakkuk said, 'My lord, I have never been to Babylon. I do not know 38 where the lion-pit is.' Then the angel took the prophet by the crown of his 39 head, and carrying him by his hair, he swept him to Babylon with the blast 40 of his breath and put him down above the pit. Habakkuk called out, 41 'Daniel, Daniel, take the meal that God has sent you!' Daniel said, 'O God, 42 thou dost indeed remember me; thou dost never forsake those who love thee.' Then he got up and ate; and God's angel returned Habakkuk at once to his home. On the seventh day the king went to mourn for Daniel, but when he arrived at the pit and looked in, there sat Daniel! Then the king cried aloud, 'Great art thou, O Lord, the God of Daniel, and there is no God but thou alone.' So the king drew Daniel up; and the men who had planned to destroy him he flung into the pit, and then and there they were eaten up before his eyes.

THE PRAYER OF MANASSEH

Repentance

- 1 LORD ALMIGHTY,
 God of our fathers,
 of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob,
 and of their righteous offspring;
 2 who hast made heaven and earth in their manifold array;
 3 who hast confined the ocean by thy word of command, who hast shut up the abyss and sealed it with thy fearful and glorious name;
 4 all things tremble and quake in the face of thy power.
 5 For the majesty of thy glory is more than man can bear,
 and none can endure thy menacing wrath against sinners;

the mercy in thy promise is beyond measure: none can fathom it. 6
 For thou art Lord Most High, 7 compassionate, patient, and of great mercy, relenting when men suffer for their sins.
 For out of thy great goodness thou, O God, hast promised repentance and remission to those who sin against thee, and in thy boundless mercy thou hast appointed repentance for sinners as the way to salvation.^a So thou, Lord God of the righteous, 8 didst not appoint repentance for Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, who were righteous and did not sin against thee,
 but for me, a sinner,
 whose sins are more in number than the sands of the sea. 9
 My transgressions abound, O Lord, my transgressions abound, and I am not worthy to look up and gaze at the height of heaven because of the number of my wrongdoings.
 Bowed down with a heavy chain of iron, 10
 I grieve over my sins and find no relief, because I have provoked thy anger and done what is evil in thine eyes, setting up idols and so piling sin on sin.
 Now I humble my heart, imploring thy great goodness. 11
 I have sinned, O Lord, I have sinned, 12 and I acknowledge my transgressions.
 I pray and beseech thee, 13
 spare me, O Lord, spare me, destroy me not with my transgressions on my head,
 do not be angry with me for ever, nor store up evil for me.
 Do not condemn me to the grave,
 for thou, Lord, art the God of the penitent.
 Thou wilt show thy goodness towards me, 14 for unworthy as I am thou wilt save me in thy great mercy;
 and so I shall praise thee continually all the days of my life. 15
 For all the host of heaven sings thy praise, and thy glory is for ever and ever. Amen.

THE FIRST BOOK OF THE MACCABEES

Antiochus and the Jewish revolt

- 1 ALLEXANDER OF MACEDON, the son of Philip, marched 2 from the land of Kittim, defeated Darius, king of Persia and 3 Media, and seized his throne, being already king of Greece.^a In 4 the course of many campaigns he captured fortified towns, slaughtered 5 kings, traversed the earth to its remotest bounds, and plundered in-6 numerable nations. When at last the world lay quiet under his rule, his 7 pride knew no limits; he built up an extremely powerful army, and ruled 8 over countries, nations, and dominions; all paid him tribute.
- 9 The time came when he fell ill, and, knowing that he was dying, he 10 summoned his generals, nobles who had been brought up with him from 11 childhood, and divided his empire among them while he was still alive.
12 Alexander had reigned twelve years when he died. His generals took over 13 the government, each in his own province. On his death they were all 14 crowned as kings, and their descendants succeeded them for many years.
15 They brought untold miseries upon the world.
- 16 A scion of this stock was that wicked man, Antiochus Epiphanes, son of 17 King Antiochus. He had been a hostage in Rome before he succeeded to 18 the throne in the year 137 of the Greek era.^b
- 19 At that time there appeared in Israel a group of renegade Jews, who 20 incited the people. 'Let us enter into a covenant with the Gentiles round 21 about,' they said, 'because disaster upon disaster has overtaken us since 22 we segregated ourselves from them.' The people thought this a good argu-
23 ment, and some of them in their enthusiasm went to the king and received 24 authority to introduce non-Jewish laws and customs. They built a sports-25 stadium in the gentile style in Jerusalem. They removed their marks of 26 circumcision and repudiated the holy covenant. They intermarried with 27 Gentiles, and abandoned themselves to evil ways.
- 28 When he was firmly established on his throne, Antiochus made up his 29 mind to become king of Egypt and so to rule over both kingdoms. He 30 assembled a powerful force of chariots, elephants, and cavalry, and a great 31 fleet, and invaded Egypt. When battle was joined, Ptolemy king of Egypt 32 was seized with panic and took to flight, leaving many dead. The fortified 33 towns were captured and the land pillaged.
- 34 On his return from the conquest of Egypt, in the year 143,^c Antiochus 35 marched with a strong force against Israel and Jerusalem. In his arrogance

^a being . . . Greece: probable meaning; Gk. obscure.

he entered the temple and carried off the golden altar, the lamp-stand with all its equipment, the table for the Bread of the Presence, the sacred cups and bowls, the golden censers, the curtain, and the crowns. He stripped off all the gold plating from the temple front. He seized the silver, gold, and precious vessels, and whatever secret treasures he found, and took them all with him when he left for his own country. He had caused much bloodshed, and he gloated over all he had done.

Great was the lamentation throughout Israel;
rulers and elders groaned in bitter grief.
Girls and young men languished;
the beauty of our women was disfigured.
Every bridegroom took up the lament,
and every bride sat grieving in her chamber.
The land trembled for its inhabitants,
and all the house of Jacob was wrapped in shame.

Two years later, the king sent to the towns of Judaea a high revenue official, who arrived at Jerusalem with a powerful force. His language was friendly, but full of guile. For, once he had gained the city's confidence, he suddenly attacked it. He dealt it a heavy blow, and killed many Israelites, plundering the city and setting it ablaze. He pulled down houses and walls on every side; women and children were made prisoners, and the cattle seized.

The city of David was turned into a citadel, enclosed by a high, stout wall with strong towers, and garrisoned by impious foreigners and renegades. Having made themselves secure, they accumulated arms and provisions, and deposited there the massed plunder of Jerusalem. There they lay in ambush, a lurking threat to the temple and a perpetual menace to Israel.

They shed the blood of the innocent round the temple;
they defiled the holy place.
The citizens of Jerusalem fled for fear of them;
she became the abode of aliens,
and alien herself to her offspring:
her children deserted her.
Her temple lay desolate as a wilderness;
her feasts were turned to mourning,
her sabbaths to a reproach,
her honour to contempt.
The shame of her fall matched the greatness of her renown,
and her pride was bowed low in grief.

The king then issued a decree throughout his empire: his subjects were all to become one people and abandon their own laws and religion. The nations everywhere complied with the royal command, and many in Israel accepted the foreign worship, sacrificing to idols and profaning the sabbath. Moreover, the king sent agents with written orders to Jerusalem and the towns of Judaea. Ways and customs foreign to the country were to be

45 introduced. Burnt-offerings, sacrifices, and libations in the temple were 46 forbidden; sabbaths and feast-days were to be profaned; the temple and 47 its ministers to be defiled. Altars, idols, and sacred precincts were to be 48 established; swine and other unclean beasts to be offered in sacrifice. They must leave their sons uncircumcised; they must make themselves in every 49 way abominable, unclean, and profane, and so forget the law and change all 50 their statutes. The penalty for disobedience was death.

51 Such was the decree which the king issued to all his subjects. He appointed superintendents over all the people, and instructed the towns of 52 Judaea to offer sacrifice, town by town. People thronged to their side in large numbers, every one of them a traitor to the law. Their wicked conduct 53 throughout the land drove Israel into hiding in every possible place of refuge.

54 On the fifteenth day of the month Kislev in the year 145,^a 'the abomination of desolation' was set up on the altar. Pagan altars were built through-55 out the towns of Judaea; incense was offered at the doors of houses and in 56 the streets. All scrolls of the law which were found were torn up and burnt.
 57 Anyone discovered in possession of a Book of the Covenant, or conform-58 ing to the law, was put to death by the king's sentence. Thus month after month these wicked men used their power against the Israelites whom they found in their towns.

59 On the twenty-fifth day of the month they offered sacrifice on the pagan 60 altar which was on top of the altar of the Lord. In accordance with the royal decree, they put to death women who had had their children circumcised.
 61 Their babies, their families, and those who had circumcised them, they 62 hanged by the neck. Yet many in Israel found strength to resist, taking a 63 determined stand against eating any unclean food. They welcomed death rather than defile themselves and profane the holy covenant, and so they 64 died. The divine wrath raged against Israel.^b

2 AT THIS TIME a certain Mattathias, son of John, son of Symeon, appeared on the scene. He was a priest of the Joarib family from Jerusalem, who had 2 3 settled at Modin. Mattathias had five sons, John called Gaddis, Simon 4 5 called Thassis, Judas called Maccabaeus, Eleazar called Avaran, and Jonathan called Apphus.

6 When Mattathias saw the sacrilegious acts committed in Judaea and 7 Jerusalem, he said:

'Oh! Why was I born to see this,
 the crushing of my people, the ruin of the holy city?
 They sat idly by when it was surrendered,
 when the holy place was given up to the alien.
 8 Her temple is like a man robbed of honour;
 9 its glorious vessels are carried off as spoil.
 Her infants are slain in the street,
 her young men by the sword of the foe.

^a That is 167 B.C.

^b The divine . . . Israel: or Israel lived under a reign of terror.

Is there a nation that has not usurped her sovereignty,^a 10
 a people that has not plundered her?
 She has been stripped of all her adornment, 11
 no longer free, but a slave.

Now that we have seen our temple with all its beauty and splendour laid 12 waste and profaned by the Gentiles, why should we live any longer?' So 13 14 Mattathias and his sons tore their garments, put on sackcloth, and mourned bitterly.

The king's officers who were enforcing apostasy came to the town of 15
 Modin to see that sacrifice was offered, and many Israelites went over to 16 them. Mattathias and his sons stood in a group. The king's officers spoke 17 to Mattathias: 'You are a leader here,' they said, 'a man of mark and 18 influence in this town, with your sons and brothers at your back. You be the first now to come forward and carry out the king's order. All the nations have done so, as well as the leading men in Judaea and the people left in Jerusalem. Then you and your sons will be enrolled among the King's Friends; you will all receive high honours, rich rewards of silver and gold, and many further benefits.'

To this Mattathias replied in a ringing voice: 'Though all the nations 19 within the king's dominions obey him and forsake their ancestral worship, though they have chosen to submit to his commands, yet I and my sons 20 and brothers will follow the covenant of our fathers. Heaven forbid we 21 should ever abandon the law and its statutes. We will not obey the 22 command of the king, nor will we deviate one step from our forms of worship.'

As soon as he had finished, a Jew stepped forward in full view of all to 23 offer sacrifice on the pagan altar at Modin, in obedience to the royal com- 24 mand. The sight stirred Mattathias to indignation; he shook with passion, and in a fury of righteous anger rushed forward and slaughtered the traitor 25 on the very altar. At the same time he killed the officer sent by the king to 26 enforce sacrifice, and pulled the pagan altar down. Thus Mattathias showed his fervent zeal for the law, just as Phinehas had done by killing Zimri son 27 of Salu. 'Follow me,' he shouted through the town, 'every one of you who is 28 zealous for the law and strives to maintain the covenant.' He and his sons took to the hills, leaving all their belongings behind in the town.

At that time many who wanted to maintain their religion and law went 29 down to the wilds to live there. They took their sons, their wives, and their 30 cattle with them, for their miseries were more than they could bear. Word 31 soon reached the king's officers and the forces in Jerusalem, the city of David, that men who had defied the king's order had gone down into 32 hiding-places in the wilds. A large body of men went quickly after them, came up with them, and occupied positions opposite. They prepared to 33 attack them on the sabbath. 'There is still time,' they shouted; 'come out, 34 obey the king's command, and your lives will be spared.' 'We will not come out,' the Jews replied; 'we will not obey the king's command or profane the sabbath.' Without more ado the attack was launched; but the Israelites did 35 36 nothing in reply; they neither hurled stones, nor barricaded their caves.

37 'Let us all meet death with a clear conscience,' they said; 'we call heaven 38 and earth to testify that there is no justice in this slaughter.' So they were attacked and massacred on the sabbath, men, women, and children, up to a thousand in all, and their cattle with them.

39 Great was the grief of Mattathias and his friends when they heard the 40 news. They said to one another, 'If we all do as our brothers have done, if we refuse to fight the Gentiles for our lives as well as for our laws and 41 customs, then they will soon wipe us off the face of the earth.' That day they decided that, if anyone came to fight against them on the sabbath, they would fight back, rather than all die as their brothers in the caves had done.

42 It was then that they were joined by a company of Hasidaeans, stalwarts 43 of Israel, every one of them a volunteer in the cause of the law; and all who were refugees from the troubles came to swell their numbers, and so add 44 to their strength. Now that they had an organized force, they turned their wrath on the guilty men and renegades. Those who escaped their fierce attacks took refuge with the Gentiles.

45 Mattathias and his friends then swept through the country, pulling down
46 the pagan altars, and forcibly circumcising all the uncircumcised boys 47 found within the frontiers of Israel. They hunted down their arrogant 48 enemies, and the cause prospered in their hands. Thus they saved the law from the Gentiles and their kings, and broke the power of the tyrant.

49 The time came for Mattathias to die, and he said to his sons: 'Arrogance now stands secure and gives judgement against us; it is a time of calamity 50 and raging fury. But now, my sons, be zealous for the law, and give your 51 lives for the covenant of your fathers. Remember the deeds they did in 52 their generations, and great glory and eternal fame shall be yours. Did not Abraham prove steadfast under trial, and so gain credit as a righteous man?
53 Joseph kept the commandments, hard-pressed though he was, and became 54 lord of Egypt. Phinehas, our father, never flagged in his zeal, and his was the 55 covenant of an everlasting priesthood. Joshua kept the law, and he became 56 a judge in Israel. Caleb bore witness before the congregation, and a share 57 in the land was his reward. David was a man of loyalty, and he was granted 58 the throne of an everlasting kingdom. Elijah never flagged in his zeal for 59 the law, and he was taken up to heaven. Hananiah, Azariah, and Mishael 60 had faith, and they were saved from the blazing furnace. Daniel was a man 61 of integrity, and he was rescued from the lions' jaws. As generation succeeds generation, follow their example; for no one who trusts in Heaven shall 62 ever lack strength. Do not fear a wicked man's words; all his success will 63 end in filth and worms. Today he may be high in honour, but tomorrow there will be no trace of him, because he will have returned to the dust and 64 all his schemes come to nothing. But you, my sons, draw your courage and strength from the law, for by it you will win great glory.

65 'Now here is Symeon, your brother; I know him to be wise in counsel:
66 always listen to him, for he shall be a father to you. Judas Maccabaeus has been strong and brave from boyhood; he shall be your commander in the 67 field, and fight his people's battles. Gather to your side all who observe the law, and avenge your people's wrongs. Repay the Gentiles in their own 68 coin, and always heed the law's commands.'

Then Mattathias blessed them, and was gathered to his fathers. He died 69 70 in the year 146,^a and was buried by his sons in the family tomb at Modin.
All Israel raised a loud lament for him.

The war under Judas and Jonathan

THEN JUDAS MACCABAEUS came forward in his father's place. He 3 1 2 had the support of all his brothers and his father's followers, and they carried on the fight for Israel with zest.

He enhanced his people's glory. 3
He put on his breastplate like a giant,
and girt himself with weapons of war.
He fought battle on battle;
he guarded his army with his sword.
He was like a lion in his exploits,
like a lion's whelp roaring for prey. 4
He hunted and tracked down the lawless;
he blasted the troublers of his people. 5
The lawless cowered in fear of him;
all evil-doers were confounded. 6
The cause of freedom prospered in his hands;
he provoked many kings to anger. 7
But he made Jacob glad by his deeds;
he is remembered for ever in blessing.
He passed through the towns of Judaea;
he destroyed the godless there. 8
He turned wrath away from Israel;
his fame spread to the ends of the earth, 9
and he rallied a people near to destruction.

Apollonius now collected a gentile force and a large contingent from 10
Samaria, to fight against Israel. When Judas heard of it, he marched out to 11 meet him, and defeated and killed him. Many of the Gentiles fell, and the rest took to flight. From the arms they captured, Judas took the sword of 12 Apollonius, and used it in his campaigns for the rest of his life.

When Seron, who commanded the army in Syria, heard that Judas had 13 mustered a large force, consisting of all his loyal followers of military age, he said to himself, 'I will win a glorious reputation in the empire by making 14 war on Judas and his followers, who defy the royal edict.' Seron was re- 15 inforced by a strong contingent of renegade Jews, who marched up to help him take vengeance on Israel. When he reached the pass of Beth-horon, 16 Judas advanced to meet him with a handful of men. When his followers 17 saw the host coming against them, they said to Judas, 'How can so few of us fight against so many? Besides, we have had nothing to eat all day, and we are exhausted.'

^a That is 166 B.C.

18 Judas replied: 'Many can easily be overpowered by a few; it makes no
19 difference to Heaven to save by many or by few. Victory does not depend 20 on numbers; strength comes from Heaven alone. Our enemies come filled with insolence and lawlessness to plunder and to kill us and our wives and 21 22 children. But we are fighting for our lives and our religion. Heaven will crush them before our eyes. You need not be afraid of them.'

23 When he had finished speaking, he launched a sudden attack, and Seron 24 and his army broke before him. They pursued them down the pass of Bethhoron as far as the plain; some eight hundred of the enemy fell, and the rest fled to Philistia.

25 Thus Judas and his brothers began to be feared, and alarm spread to the 26 Gentiles all round. His fame reached the ears of the king, and the story of 27 his battles was told in every nation. When King Antiochus heard this news, he flew into a rage and ordered all the forces of his empire to be assembled, 28 an immensely powerful army. He opened his treasury and gave a year's pay 29 to his troops, ordering them to be prepared for any duty. But he found that his resources were running low; his tribute, too, had dwindled as a result of the disaffection and violence he had brought upon the world by abolish-30 ing traditional laws and customs. He now saw with alarm that he might be short of money, as had happened once or twice before, both for his normal expenses and for the gifts he had been accustomed to distribute with an even more lavish hand than any of his predecessors on the throne.

31 For a time he was much perplexed; then he decided to go to Persia, collect the tribute due from the provinces, and raise a large sum of ready 32 money. He left Lysias, a distinguished member of the royal family, as viceroys of the territories between the Euphrates and the Egyptian frontier.
33 34 He also appointed him guardian of his son Antiochus until his return. He transferred to Lysias half the armed forces, together with the elephants, and told him all that he wanted done, especially to the population of Judaea 35 and Jerusalem. Against these Lysias was to send a force, and break and destroy the strength of Israel and those who were left in Jerusalem, to blot 36 out all memory of them from the place. He was to settle foreigners in all 37 their territory, and allot the land to the settlers. The other half of the forces the king took with him, and set out from Antioch, his capital, in the year 147.^a He crossed the Euphrates and marched through the upper provinces.

38 Lysias chose Ptolemaeus son of Dorymenes, with Nicanor and Gorgias, 39 all three powerful members of the order of King's Friends, and sent with them forty thousand infantry and seven thousand cavalry to invade Judaea 40 and devastate the country as the king had commanded. They set out with 41 all their forces and encamped near Emmaus in the lowlands. The merchants of the region, impressed by what they heard of the army, took a large quantity of silver and gold, with a supply of fessards, and came into the camp to buy the Israelites for slaves. The army was also reinforced by troops from Syria and Philistia.

42 Judas and his brothers saw that their plight had become grave, with the enemy encamped inside their frontiers. They learnt, too, of the commands

^a That is 165 B.C.

which the king had given for the complete destruction of the nation. So 43 they said to one another, 'Let us restore the shattered fortunes of our nation ; let us fight for our nation and for the holy place.' They gathered in full 44 assembly to prepare for battle, and to pray and seek divine mercy and compassion.

Jerusalem lay deserted like a wilderness ; 45
none of her children went in or out.
Her holy place was trampled down ;
aliens and heathen lodged in her citadel.
Joy had been banished from Jacob ;
and flute and harp were dumb.

They assembled at Mizpah, opposite Jerusalem, for in former times 46
Israel had a place of worship at Mizpah. That day they fasted, put on sack- 47 cloth, sprinkled ashes on their heads, and tore their garments. They un- 48 rolled the scroll of the law, seeking the guidance which Gentiles seek from the images of their gods. They brought the priestly vestments, the first- 49 fruits, and the tithes ; they presented Nazirites who had completed their vows, and they cried to Heaven : 'What shall we do with these Nazirites, 50 and where shall we take them? Thy holy place is trodden down and defiled, and sorrow and humiliation have come upon thy priests. And see, the 51 Gentiles have gathered against us to destroy us. Thou knowest the fate 52 they plan for us ; how can we withstand them unless thou help us?' Then 53 54 the trumpets sounded, and a great shout went up.

Judas then appointed leaders of the people, officers over thousands, 55 hundreds, fifties, and tens. As the law commands, he ordered back to their 56 homes those who were building their houses or were newly wed or who were planting vineyards, or who were faint-hearted. Thereupon the army moved 57 and took up their positions to the south of Emmaus, where Judas thus 58 addressed them : 'Prepare for action and show yourselves men. Be ready at dawn to fight these Gentiles who are massed against us to destroy us and our holy place. Better die fighting than look on while calamity overwhelms 59 our people and the holy place. But it will be as Heaven wills.' 60

Gorgias, taking a detachment of five thousand men and a thousand 4 picked cavalry, set out by night to attack the Jewish army and fall upon 2 them unawares ; his guides were men from the citadel. But Judas had word 3 of this, and he and his soldiers moved out to attack the king's army in Emmaus, while its forces were still divided. Gorgias reached the camp of 4 5 Judas during the night, but found no one there. He set out to search for them in the hills, thinking, 'These Jews are running away from us.'

At daybreak, there was Judas in the plain with three thousand men, 6 though they had not all the armour and the swords they wanted. They saw 7 the Gentiles' camp strongly fortified with breastworks, while mounted guards, seasoned troops, patrolled round it.

Judas said to his men : 'Do not be afraid of their great numbers or panic 8 when they charge. Remember how our fathers were saved at the Red Sea, 9 when Pharaoh and his army were pursuing them. Let us cry now to Heaven 10 to favour our cause, to remember the covenant made with our fathers, and 11 to crush this army before us today. Then all the Gentiles will know that there is One who saves and liberates Israel.'

12 When the foreigners looked up and saw them advancing to the attack, 13 they marched out of their camp to give battle. Judas and his men sounded 14 their trumpets and closed with them. The Gentiles broke, and fled to the 15 plain. All the rearmost fell by the sword. The pursuit was pressed as far as Gazara and the lowlands of Idumaea, Azotus and Jamnia; about three thousand of the enemy were killed.

16 17 Judas and his force then broke off the pursuit and returned. He said to the people: 'Curb your greed for spoil; there is more fighting before us; 18 Gorgias and his force are in the hills near by. Stand firm now against our enemies and fight; after that, plunder as you please.'

19 Before Judas had finished speaking, an enemy patrol appeared, recon-20 noitring from the hills. They saw that their army was in flight, and that their camp was being set on fire; the smoke that met their gaze showed 21 what had happened. They were filled with panic as they took in the scene, 22 and when they saw the army of Judas in the plain, ready for battle, they all fled to Philistia.

23 Then Judas turned back to plunder the camp, and there they got much 24 gold and silver, violet and purple stuffs, and great riches. On their return they sang songs of thanksgiving and praised Heaven, 'for it is right, because 25 his mercy endures for ever'. That day saw a great deliverance for Israel.

26 Those of the Gentiles who escaped with their lives went and reported 27 to Lysias all that had happened. On hearing the news he was overwhelmed with disappointment, because Israel had not suffered the disaster he had hoped for, and the issue was not what the king had ordered.

28 In the following year he gathered sixty thousand picked infantry and 29 five thousand cavalry to make war on the Jews. They marched into Idumaea, and encamped at Bethsura, where Judas met them with ten 30 thousand men. When he saw the strength of the enemy's army, he prayed:
'All praise to thee, the Saviour of Israel, who didst break the attack of the giant by thy servant David. Thou didst deliver the army of the Philistines 31 into the power of Saul's son, Jonathan, and of his armour-bearer. In like manner put this army into the power of thy people Israel. Humble their 32 pride in their forces and their mounted men. Strike them with panic, turn their insolent strength to water, make them reel under a crushing defeat.
33 Overthrow them by the sword of those who love thee, and let all who know thy name praise thee with songs of thanksgiving.'

34 So they joined battle, and Lysias lost about five thousand men in the 35 close fighting. When he saw his own army routed and Judas's army full of daring, ready to live or die nobly, he departed for Antioch, and there collected a force of mercenaries, in order to return to Judaea with a much larger army than before.^a 36 But Judas and his brothers said: 'Now that our enemies have been crushed, let us go up to Jerusalem to cleanse the temple and rededicate it.' 37 38 So the whole army was assembled and went up to Mount Zion. There they found the temple laid waste, the altar profaned, the gates burnt down, the courts overgrown like a thicket or wooded hill-side, and the priests' rooms in ruin. They tore their garments, wailed loudly, put ashes on their heads, and fell on their faces to the ground. They sounded the ceremonial trumpets, and cried aloud to Heaven.

Then Judas detailed troops to engage the garrison of the citadel while he cleansed the temple. He selected priests without blemish, devoted to the law, and they purified the temple, removing to an unclean place the stones which defiled it. They discussed what to do with the altar of burnt-offering, which was profaned, and rightly decided to demolish it, for fear it might become a standing reproach to them because it had been defiled by the Gentiles. They therefore pulled down the altar, and stored away the stones in a fitting place on the temple hill, until a prophet should arise who could be consulted about them. They took unhewn stones, as the law commands, and built a new altar on the model of the previous one. They rebuilt the temple and restored its interior, and consecrated the temple courts. They renewed the sacred vessels and the lamp-stand, and brought the altar of incense and the table into the temple. They burnt incense on the altar and lit the lamps on the lamp-stand to shine within the temple. When they had put the Bread of the Presence on the table and hung the curtains, all their work was completed.

Then, early on the twenty-fifth day of the ninth month, the month Kislev, in the year 148,^a sacrifice was offered as the law commands on the newly made altar of burnt-offering. On the anniversary of the day when the Gentiles had profaned it, on that very day, it was rededicated, with hymns of thanksgiving, to the music of harps and lutes and cymbals. All the people prostrated themselves, worshipping and praising Heaven that their cause had prospered.

They celebrated the rededication of the altar for eight days; there was great rejoicing as they brought burnt-offerings and sacrificed peace-offerings and thank-offerings. They decorated the front of the temple with golden wreaths and ornamental shields. They renewed the gates and the priests' rooms, and fitted them with doors. There was great merry-making among the people, and the disgrace brought on them by the Gentiles was removed.

Then Judas, his brothers, and the whole congregation of Israel decreed that the rededication of the altar should be observed with joy and gladness at the same season each year, for eight days, beginning on the twenty-fifth of Kislev.

At that time they encircled Mount Zion with high walls and strong towers to prevent the Gentiles from coming and trampling it down as they had done before. Judas set a garrison there; he also fortified Bethsura, so that the people should have a fortress facing Idumaea.

WHEN THE GENTILES round about heard that the altar had been rebuilt and the temple rededicated, they were furious, and determined to wipe out all those of the race of Jacob who lived among them. Thus began the work of massacre and extermination among the people.

^a That is 164 B.C.

3 Judas then made war on the descendants of Esau in Idumaea and 4 attacked Acrabattene, because they had hemmed Israel in. There he 5 inflicted on them a severe and humiliating defeat, and took spoils from 6 them. He remembered also the wrong done by the Baeonites, who with 7 their traps and road-blocks were continually ambushing the Israelites.
8 He first confined them to their forts and took up positions against them;
9 then he solemnly committed them to destruction and set the forts ablaze
10 with all their occupants. He crossed over to the Ammonites, and came upon 11 a strong and numerous force under the command of a certain Timotheus.
12 He fought many battles with them, and they broke before him and were 13 crushed. After capturing Jazer and its dependent villages, he returned to 14 Judaea.

15 Then the Gentiles in Gilead gathered against the Israelites within their 16 territory, intending to destroy them; but they took refuge in the fortress of 17 Dathema, and sent this letter to Judas and his brothers:

18 The Gentiles round us have gathered to wipe us out. They are pre-19 paring to come and seize the fortress where we have taken refuge;
20 Timotheus is in command of their army. So come at once and rescue us 21 from their clutches, for many of our number have already fallen. All our 22 fellow-Jews in the region of Tubias have been massacred, their wives 23 and their children taken captive, and their property carried off. About 24 a thousand men there have lost their lives.

25 While the letter was being read, other messengers with their garments
26 torn arrived from Galilee. 'Ptolemais, Tyre and Sidon,' they said, 'and all 27 heathen Galilee have mustered their forces to make an end of us.'

28 When Judas and the people heard this, a full assembly was called to 29 decide what they should do for their fellow-countrymen in distress and 30 under enemy attack. Judas said to Simon his brother, 'Choose your men, 31 and go and rescue your countrymen in Galilee, while I and my brother 32 Jonathan march into Gilead.' The rest of his forces he left for the defences 33 of Judaea, with Josephus son of Zacharias, and Azarias, leading citizens, 34 and gave them this order: 'Take charge of the people of Jerusalem, but 35 on no account join battle with the Gentiles until we return.' Simon was 36 allotted three thousand men for the march on Galilee, and Judas eight 37 thousand for the march on Gilead.

38 Simon invaded Galilee and, after many battles, broke the resistance of 39 the Gentiles. He pursued them as far as the gate of Ptolemais, killed nearly 40 three thousand of them, and stripped their corpses. He took back with him 41 the Jews from Galilee and Arbatta, their wives and children, and all their 42 property, and brought them to Judaea with great jubilation.

43 Meanwhile Judas Maccabaeus and his brother Jonathan crossed the 44 Jordan and made a three days' march through the desert. They came upon 45 some Nabataeans, who met them peacefully, and gave them an account of 46 all that had happened to their fellow-Jews in Gilead: many of them were 47 held prisoner in Bozrah and Bezer, in Alema, Casphor, Maked, and 48 Carnaim—all large fortified towns; some in the other towns of Gilead.
49 'Your enemies', they told them, 'are marshalling their forces to storm your fortresses tomorrow so as to capture them and destroy all the Jews in them in a single day.'

Then Judas and his army suddenly turned aside to Bozrah by way of the desert, captured the town, and put all the males to the sword. He plundered all their property and set fire to the town. From there he made a night-march and came within reach of the fortress of Dathema. When dawn broke they saw in front of them an innumerable host, bringing up scaling-ladders and siege-engines and engaging the defenders, to capture the fortress. Judas saw that battle was already joined, and a cry went up to heaven from the town, with trumpeting and loud shouting. Judas said to his men: 'Now is the time to fight for our brothers.'

They marched out in three columns to take the enemy in the rear. Then they sounded the trumpets and cried aloud in prayer, and the army of Timotheus recognized that it was Maccabaeus and took to flight before him. He inflicted a severe defeat on them, and nearly eight thousand of the enemy fell that day.

Judas then turned aside to Alema,^a attacked and captured it, and killed all the males. He plundered the town and set it on fire. From there he moved on and occupied Casphor, Maked, Bezer, and the other towns of Gilead.

After these events, Timotheus gathered another army, and took up position opposite Raphon, on the other side of the ravine. Judas sent spies to their camp, and they reported that all the Gentiles in the neighbourhood had rallied in very great strength to Timotheus, who had also hired Arab mercenaries to help them; they were encamped on the far side of the ravine, ready to engage him in battle. So Judas marched to meet them.

As Judas and his army were approaching the flooded ravine, Timotheus said to his officers: 'If Judas crosses over to our side first, we shall not be able to stand up to him; he will certainly get the better of us. If, however, his courage fails him and he takes up a position on the other side of the river, then we will cross over and get the better of him.' When Judas reached the ravine, he stationed the officers of the muster on its bank, with instructions that no one should be allowed to take up a fixed position, but that all should advance to battle. Thus Judas forestalled the enemy by crossing to attack them, with all his people following. The Gentiles broke before him; they all threw away their arms and took refuge in the temple at Carnaim. Judas captured the town and burnt the temple together with all its occupants: Carnaim was completely subdued and could no longer withstand him.

Then Judas gathered together all the Israelites in Gilead to escort them to Judaea. They amounted to an immense host, small and great, women and children, with their property. They came as far as Ephron, a large and strongly fortified town on the road: it was impossible to pass by it on either side; the only route was through the town. But the townsmen kept them out, barricading their gates with boulders. Judas sent them a conciliatory message: 'We have to pass through your territory to reach our own. No one shall do you any harm: we shall only march through.' But they refused to open their gates to him.

Judas issued orders to the whole host for everyone to halt where he was. Then the fighting men took up battle positions and attacked the town all that day and all the night, until it fell into their hands. They put every male to the sword, razed the town to the ground and plundered it, and then marched through it over the bodies of the dead. They crossed the Jordan to the great plain opposite Bethshan, while Judas brought up the stragglers and encouraged the people all along the road till he arrived in Judaea. They went up to Mount Zion with gladness and jubilation, and offered burnt-offerings, because they had returned in safety without the loss of a single man.

Now while Judas and Jonathan were in Gilead, and Simon their brother in Galilee was besieging Ptolemais, the two commanders, Josephus son of Zacharias, and Azarias, heard of their exploits in battle. 'We too', they said, 'must make a name for ourselves: let us go and fight the Gentiles in our neighbourhood.' So they gave orders to their forces and marched against Jamnia. Gorgias came out of the town with his men to meet them in battle; and Josephus and Azarias were routed and pursued to the frontier of Judaea. Some two thousand of the people fell that day. So the Israelites suffered a heavy defeat, because their commanders, thinking to play the hero themselves, had not obeyed Judas and his brothers. They were not, however, of that family to whom it was granted to bring deliverance to Israel.

Judas and his brothers won a great reputation in all Israel and among the Gentiles, wherever their fame was heard, and crowds flocked to acclaim them.

After this, Judas marched out with his brothers and made war on the descendants of Esau to the south. He struck at Hebron and its villages, demolished its fortifications, and burnt down its forts on all sides. He then set out to invade Philistine territory, marching through Marisa. On that day several priests, who had ill-advisedly gone into action wishing to distinguish themselves, fell in battle. Then Judas turned aside to Azotus in Philistia. He pulled down their altars, burnt the images of their gods, carried off the spoil from their towns, and returned to Judaea.

As King Antiochus marched through the upper provinces he heard that there was a city in Persia called Elymais, famous for its wealth in silver and gold. Its temple was very rich, full of gold shields, coats of mail, and arms, left there by Alexander son of Philip, king of Macedon and the first to be king over the Greeks. Antiochus came and tried to capture and plunder the city, but failed because his plan had become known to the citizens. They gave battle and put him to flight, and he withdrew to Babylon in bitter disappointment.

A messenger met him in Persia with the news that the armies which had invaded Judaea were in full retreat. Lysias had marched up with an exceptionally strong force, only to be flung back before the enemy, and the strength of the Jews had grown by the capture of arms, equipment, and spoils from the Syrian armies they had defeated. They had pulled down the abomination he had built on the altar in Jerusalem, and surrounded their temple with high walls as before, and had even fortified Bethsura.

When the king heard this news, he was thrown into such deep dismay 8 that he took to his bed, ill with grief at the miscarriage of his plans. There 9 he lay for many days, his bitter grief breaking out again and again, and he realized that he was dying. So he summoned all his Friends and said to 10 them: 'Sleep has deserted me; the weight of care has broken my heart.
 At first I said to myself, "Why am I overwhelmed by this flood of trouble, 11
 I who was kind and well-loved in the day of my power?" But now I 12 remember the wrong I did in Jerusalem, when I took all her vessels of silver and gold, and when I made an unjustified attempt to wipe out the inhabit- 13 ants of Judaea. It is for this, I know, that these misfortunes have come upon me; and here I am, dying of grief in a foreign land.'

He summoned Philip, one of his Friends, and appointed him regent 14 over his whole empire, giving him the crown, the royal robe, and the signet- 15 ring, with authority to take his son Antiochus and bring him up to be king.
 King Antiochus died there in the year 149.^a 16

When Lysias learnt that the king was dead, he placed the young Antioch- 17 us, whom he had brought up from boyhood, on the throne in succession to his father, and gave him the name of Eupator.

MEANWHILE THE GARRISON of the citadel were confining the 18 Israelites to the neighbourhood of the temple, and giving continual sup- 19 port to the Gentiles by their harassing tactics. Judas therefore determined to make an end of them. He gathered all the people together to lay siege to 20 the citadel in the year 150,^b erecting emplacements and siege-engines against the enemy.

Now some of the besieged garrison escaped and were joined by a number 21 of renegade Israelites. They went to the king and said: 'How long must we 22 wait for you to do justice and avenge our comrades? We were willing to 23 serve your father, to follow his instructions and to obey his decrees, and 24 what was the result? Our own countrymen became our enemies. They actually killed as many of us as they could find, and robbed us of our prop- 25 erty. Nor are we the only ones to suffer at their hands. They have attacked 26 all their neighbours as well. At this very moment they are besieging the citadel in Jerusalem and mean to capture it; and they have fortified both the 27 temple and Bethsura. Unless your majesty quickly overpowers them they will go to yet greater lengths, and you will not be able to keep them in 28 check.'

When the king heard this he was furious. He assembled all his Friends, 28 the commanders of his army, and his cavalry officers. He was joined by 29 mercenary troops from other kingdoms and from the islands. His forces 30 numbered one hundred thousand infantry, twenty thousand cavalry, and thirty-two war-elephants. They passed through Idumaea and laid siege to 31 Bethsura. They kept up the attack for a long time and erected siege-engines, but the defenders made a sortie and set fire to them, and fought 32 back manfully.

Judas now withdrew from the citadel and encamped at Bethzacharia, 32 opposite the camp of the king. Early next morning the king broke camp 33 and rushed his army along the road to Bethzacharia; there his forces were drawn up for battle and the trumpets were sounded. The elephants were roused for battle with the juice of grapes and of mulberries. The great beasts were distributed among the phalanxes; by each were stationed a thousand men, equipped with coats of chain-mail and bronze helmets. Five hundred picked horsemen were also assigned to each animal. These had been stationed beforehand where the beast was; and wherever it went, they went with it, never leaving it. Each animal had a strong wooden turret fastened on its back with a special harness, by way of protection, and carried four^a fighting men as well as an Indian driver. The rest of the cavalry Lysias stationed on either flank of the army, to harass the enemy while themselves protected by the phalanxes. When the sun shone on the gold and bronze shields, they lit up the hills, which flashed like torches.

Part of the king's army was deployed over the heights, and part over the low ground. They advanced confidently and in good order. All who heard the din of this marching multitude and its clashing arms shook with fear. It was a very great and powerful array indeed.

Judas advanced with his army and gave battle, and six hundred of the king's men were killed. Eleazar Avaran, seeing that one of the elephants wore royal armour and stood out above all the rest, thought that the king was riding on it. So he gave his life to save his people and win everlasting renown for himself. He ran boldly towards it, into the middle of the phalanx, dealing death right and left, while they fell back on either side before him. He got in underneath the elephant, and thrust at it from below and killed it. It fell to the ground on top of him, and there he died.

When the Jews saw the strength and impetus of the imperial forces, they fell back before them. Part of the king's army marched up to Jerusalem to renew the engagement, and the king put Judaea and Mount Zion into a state of siege. He made peace with the people of Bethsura, who abandoned the town, having no more food there to withstand a siege, as it was a sabbatical year when the land was left fallow. Thus the king occupied Bethsura and detailed a garrison to hold it.

He then attacked the temple and subjected it to a long siege; he set up emplacements and siege-engines, with flame-throwers, catapults for discharging stones and barbed missiles, and slings. But the defenders too constructed engines to counter his engines, and put up a prolonged resistance. There was no food, however, in the stores^b because of the sabbatical year; those who from time to time had arrived in Judaea as refugees from the Gentiles had eaten up all that remained of the provisions. There were only a few men left in the temple, because the famine had been too severe for them, and they had scattered to their own homes.

Lysias heard that Philip, whom King Antiochus had appointed before he died to educate his son Antiochus for the kingship, had returned from Persia and Media with the late king's expeditionary force, and that he was seeking to take over the government. So he hastily gave orders for departure, saying to the king, his commanders, and his troops: 'Every day in the temple.

we are growing weaker, provisions are low, the place we are besieging is strong, and the affairs of the empire are pressing. So let us offer these men terms and make peace with them and their whole nation. Let us guarantee their right to follow their laws and customs as they used to do, for it was our abolition of these very customs and laws that roused their resentment, and produced all these consequences.'

The proposal met with the approval of the king and the commanders, and an offer of peace was sent and accepted. The king and his commanders bound themselves by oath, and on the agreed terms the besieged emerged from their stronghold. But when the king entered Mount Zion and saw how strongly the place was fortified, he went back on the oath he had sworn, and gave orders for the surrounding wall to be demolished. He then set off at top speed for Antioch, where he found Philip in possession; a battle ensued, and the city was taken by storm.

IN THE YEAR 151,^a Demetrius son of Seleucus left Rome, landed with a handful of men at a town on the coast, and there made himself king. While he was travelling to the royal seat of his ancestors, the army seized Antiochus and Lysias, intending to hand them over to him. When this was reported to him, he said, 'Do not let me set eyes on them.' The soldiers accordingly put them to death, and Demetrius ascended the throne.

All the godless renegades from Israel, led by Alcimus, who aspired to be high priest, came to the king and brought charges against their people. They said to him: 'Judas and his brothers have killed all your supporters, and have driven us from our country. Be pleased now to send a man whom you trust, to go and see what devastation they have brought upon us and upon the king's territory, and to punish them and all their supporters.' The king chose Bacchides, one of the royal Friends, who was governor beyond the Euphrates, a man of high standing in the empire and loyal to the king. He sent him and the godless Alcimus, on whom he had conferred the high-priesthood, with orders to take vengeance on Israel.

They set out with a large army and entered Judaea. Bacchides sent envoys to Judas and his brothers to make false offers of friendship; but when they saw what a large force he had brought with him, they took no notice of these offers.

A deputation of doctors of the law came before Alcimus and Bacchides, asking for justice. The Hasidæans were in fact the first group in Israel to make overtures to them; for they said to themselves, 'A priest of the family of Aaron has come with their forces, and he will do us no harm.' The language of Alcimus was conciliatory; he assured them on oath that no harm was intended to them or their friends. But once he had gained their confidence, he arrested sixty of them and put them to death in a single day; as Scripture says:

'The bodies of thy saints were scattered,
their blood was shed round Jerusalem,
and there was none to bury them.'

^a That is 161 B.C.

18 This put all the people in fear and terror of them, and they said to each 19 other, 'There is neither truth nor justice among them; they have broken their pledge and the oath they swore.' Then Bacchides left Jerusalem and camped in Bethzaith; and he ordered the arrest of many of those who had deserted to him, together with some of the people, and had them slaughtered 20 and thrown into a great pit. He assigned the whole district to Alcimus, detailed some troops to assist him, and returned to the king.

21 22 Alcimus fought hard for his high-priesthood. All the trouble-makers rallied to him; they gained control over Judaea, and did terrible damage in 23 Israel. When Judas saw all the mischief which Alcimus and his followers had brought upon the Israelites, far worse than anything the Gentiles had 24 done, he marched through all the territory of Judaea and its environs, punishing deserters and debarring them from access to the country dis-25 tricts. When Alcimus saw that Judas and his band had grown powerful, and recognized that he was unable to withstand them, he returned to the king and accused them of atrocities.

26 Then the king sent Nicanor, one of his distinguished commanders and 27 a bitter enemy of Israel, with orders to wipe them out. Nicanor arrived at Jerusalem with a large force, and sent envoys to Judas and his brothers 28 to make false offers of friendship: 'Let there be no quarrel between us,' he said; 'I propose to come with a few men for a friendly personal meeting.'

29 He came to Judas and they greeted one another as friends, yet the enemy
30 were preparing to kidnap Judas. When Judas discovered that Nicanor's 31 visit was a trick, he took alarm and refused to meet him again. Nicanor, realizing that his plan had been detected, marched out to engage Judas 32 near Capharsalama. About five hundred of Nicanor's army were killed, and the rest escaped to the city of David.

33 After these events, Nicanor went up to Mount Zion, and some of the priests and members of the senate came out from the temple to give him a friendly welcome, and to show him the burnt-offering which was being 34 sacrificed for the king. But he mocked them, jeered at them, and spat on 35 them,^a boasting and swearing angrily: 'Unless Judas and his army are surrendered to me at once, when I return victorious I will burn down this 36 house.' And he went off in a rage. Thereupon the priests went in, and stood 37 facing the altar and the temple. They wept and said: 'Thou didst choose this house to bear thy name, to be a house of prayer and supplication for thy 38 people; take vengeance on this man and his army, and make them fall by the sword. Remember all their blasphemy, and grant them no reprieve.'

39 Nicanor moved from Jerusalem and encamped at Beth-horon, where he 40 was joined by an army from Syria. Judas encamped at Adasa with three 41 thousand men; there he prayed in these words: 'There was a king whose followers blasphemed, and thy angel came forth and struck down one 42 hundred and eighty-five thousand of them. So do thou crush this army before us today, and let all men know that Nicanor has reviled thy holy place; judge him as his wickedness deserves.'

43 The armies joined battle on the thirteenth of the month Adar, and the army of Nicanor suffered a crushing defeat, he himself being the first to ^a Literally and polluted them.

fall in the battle. When his army saw that Nicanor had fallen, they threw 44 away their arms and took to flight. The Jews, sounding the signal trumpets 45 in the enemy's rear, pursued them as far as Gazara, a day's journey from Adasa. From all the villages of Judaea round about, the inhabitants came 46 out and attacked their flanks, forcing them back upon their pursuers. They all fell by the sword; there were no survivors. The Jews seized spoil and 47 booty; they cut off Nicanor's head and that right hand which he had stretched out so arrogantly, and brought them to be displayed at Jerusalem.
There was great public rejoicing and that day was kept as a special day of 48 jubilation. It was ordained that the day should be observed annually, on 49 the thirteenth of Adar. Thus Judaea entered upon a short period of peace. 50

NOW JUDAS HAD HEARD about the Romans: they were renowned for 8 their military power and for the welcome they gave to those who became their allies; any who joined them could be sure of their firm friendship.
He was told about the wars they had fought, and the valour they had shown 2 in their conquest of the Gauls, whom they had laid under tribute. He heard 3 of their successes in Spain, where they had seized silver-mines and goldmines, maintaining their hold on the entire country—distant as it was from 4 their own land—by their patience and good judgement. There were kings from far and near who had marched against them, but they had been beaten off after crushing defeats; others paid them annual tribute.

They had crushed in battle and conquered Philip, and Perseus king of 5 Kittim, and all who had attacked them. Antiochus the Great, king of Asia, 6 had marched against them with one hundred and twenty elephants, with cavalry and chariots and an immense force, but they had totally defeated him. They had taken the king alive, and had required that he and his suc- 7 cessors should pay them a large annual tribute, give hostages, and cede the 8 territories of India, Media, and Lydia, together with some of their finest provinces. These they had taken from him and given to King Eumenes.

When the Greeks planned to attack and destroy them, they heard of it 9 10 and sent a single general against them. Battle was joined, and many of the Greeks fell; the Romans took their women and children prisoner, plundered their territory and annexed it, razed their fortifications, and made them slaves, as they are to this day. The remaining kingdoms, the islands, and all 11 who had ever opposed them, they destroyed or reduced to slavery. With 12 their friends, however, and all who put themselves under their protection, they maintained firm friendship. They thus conquered kings near and far, and all who heard their fame went in fear of them. Those whom they wished 13 to help and to appoint as kings, became kings, and those they wished to depose, they deposed; and thus they rose to great heights of power. For all 14 this, not one of them made any personal claim to greatness by wearing the crown or donning the purple. They had established a senate where three 15 hundred and twenty senators met daily to deliberate, giving constant thought to the proper ordering of the affairs of the common people. They 16 entrusted their government and the ruling of all their territory to one of their number every year, all obeying this one man without envy or jealousy among themselves.

17 Judas accordingly chose Eupolemus son of John son of Accos, and 18 Jason son of Eleazar, and sent them to Rome to conclude a treaty of friend-19 ship and alliance, so that the Romans might rid them of tyranny, for it was 20 clear that the Greek empire was reducing Israel to slavery. They made the 21 long journey to Rome and entered the Senate, where they spoke as follows :
22 'Judas, known as Maccabaeus, his brothers, and the Jewish people have sent us to you to conclude a treaty of friendly alliance with you, so that we may be enrolled as your allies and friends.' The Romans found the proposal acceptable, and the following is a copy of the reply which they inscribed on tablets of bronze and sent to Jerusalem, so that the Jews there might have a record of the treaty of alliance :

23 Success to the Romans and the Jewish nation by sea and land for ever !
24 May sword and foe be far from them ! But if war breaks out first against 25 Rome or any of her allies throughout her dominion, then the Jewish 26 nation shall support them whole-heartedly as occasion may require. To the enemies of Rome or of her allies the Jews shall neither give nor supply provisions, arms, money, or ships ; so Rome has decided ; and they shall observe their commitments, without compensation.

27 Similarly, if war breaks out first against the Jewish nation, then the 28 Romans shall give them hearty support as occasion may require. To their enemies there shall be given neither provisions, arms, money, nor ships ; so Rome has decided. These commitments shall be kept without breach of faith.

29 These are the terms of the agreement which the Romans have made 30 with the Jewish people. But if, hereafter, both parties shall agree to add or to rescind anything, then they shall do as they decide ; any such addition or rescindment shall be valid.

31 To this the Romans added : As for the misdeeds which King Demetrius 32 is perpetrating against the Jews, we have written to him as follows : 'Why have you oppressed our friends and allies the Jews so harshly ? If they make any further complaint against you, then we will see that justice is done them, and will make war upon you by sea and by land.'

9 When Demetrius heard that Nicanor and his forces had fallen in battle, he sent Bacchides and Alcimus a second time into Judaea, with the right 2 wing of his army. They marched along the Gilgal road, laid siege to Messaloth in Arbela, and captured it, inflicting heavy loss of life.

3 4 In the first month of the year 152,^a they moved camp to Jerusalem. From there they marched to Berea with twenty thousand infantry and two 5 thousand cavalry. Now Judas was in camp at Alasa, with three thousand 6 picked men. But when they saw the size of the enemy forces, their courage failed, and many deserted, leaving a mere eight hundred men in the field.

7 When Judas saw that with the campaign going against him his army had melted away, his heart sank, for there was no time to rally them. Though 8 much discouraged, he said to those who were left, 'Let us move to the attack 9 and see if we can defeat them.' But his men tried to dissuade him : 'Impossible !' they said. 'No ; let us save our lives now and come back later with our comrades to fight them. Now we are too few.' But Judas replied: 'Heaven 10 forbid that I should do such a thing as run away! If our time is come, let us die bravely for our fellow-countrymen, and leave no stain on our honour.'

^a That is 160 B.C.

The Syrian army left its camp and took up position to meet the Jews. 11
The cavalry^a was divided into two detachments; the slingers and the archers went ahead of the main force, and the picked troops were in the front line. Bacchides was on the right. The phalanx came on in two divi- 12 sions with trumpets sounding; Judas's men also sounded their trumpets. 13
The earth shook at the din of the armies as battle was joined, and they fought from dawn until evening.

When Judas saw that Bacchides and the main strength of his army was 14 on the right flank, all his stout-hearted men rallied to him, and they broke 15 the Syrian right; then he pursued them as far as Mount Azotus. When the 16 Syrians on the left wing saw that their right had been broken, they turned about and followed on the heels of Judas and his men, attacking them in the rear. The fighting became very heavy, and many fell on both sides. Judas 17 18 himself fell, and the rest of the Jews took to flight. Jonathan and Simon carried off Judas their brother; they buried him in the family tomb at 19 Modin, and wept over him. Great was the grief in Israel, and they mourned 20 him for many days, saying,

'How is our champion fallen, 21
the saviour of Israel!'

The rest of the history of Judas, his wars, exploits, and achievements—all 22 these were so numerous that they have not been written down.

AFTER THE DEATH OF JUDAS the renegades raised their heads in every 23 part of Israel, and all the evil-doers reappeared. In those days a terrible 24 famine broke out, and the country went over to their side. Bacchides chose 25 apostates to be in control of the country. These men set inquiries on foot, 26 and tracked down the friends of Judas and brought them before Bacchides, who took vengeance on them, loading them with indignities. It was a time 27 of great affliction for Israel, worse than any since the day when prophets ceased to appear among them. Then all the friends of Judas assembled 28 and said to Jonathan: 'Since your brother Judas died, there has not been a 29 man like him to take the lead against our enemies, Bacchides and those of our own nation who are hostile to us. Today, therefore, we choose you to 30 succeed him as our ruler and leader and to fight our battles.' So Jonathan 31 took over the leadership at that time in place of his brother Judas.

The news reached Bacchides, and he set himself to kill Jonathan. When 32 33 Jonathan and his brother Simon and all their men learnt of this, they took refuge in the desert of Tekoa, encamping by the pool of Asphar. Bacchides 34 discovered this on the sabbath, and crossed the Jordan with his whole army. So Jonathan sent his brother John to take the camp followers and 35 appeal to his friends the Nabataeans to look after their baggage train, which

^a The Syrian army . . . cavalry: or The Jewish army left its camp and stood to meet the enemy. The Syrian cavalry . . .

36 was of some size. But the Jambrites appeared from Medaba and kidnapped 37 John; they seized the baggage and made off with it. Some time afterwards, news was brought to Jonathan and his brother Simon that the Jambrites were celebrating an important wedding, and bringing the bride, the daughter of one of the great nobles of Canaan, from Nadabath with a large 38 retinue. Remembering how their brother John had been killed, Jonathan 39 and his men set out and hid themselves under cover of a hill. They looked out and there they saw the bridegroom, in the middle of a bustling crowd and a train of baggage, coming to meet the bridal party, escorted by his friends and kinsmen fully armed, to the sound of drums and instruments of 40 music. Emerging from ambush, Jonathan attacked and cut them down; many fell, while others made off into the hills and the Jews took all their 41 goods as spoil. So the wedding was turned into mourning, and the sound of 42 music to lamentation. The blood of their brother was fully avenged, and Jonathan returned to the marshes of Jordan.

43 Bacchides heard this and came to the banks of Jordan on the sabbath
44 with a powerful force. Jonathan said to his men: 'Now is the time to fight 45 for our lives; we are today in worse plight than ever: the enemy in front, the water of Jordan behind, to right and left marsh and thicket; there is 46 47 no escape. Cry to Heaven to save you from the hands of the enemy.' Battle was joined, and Jonathan had raised his hand to strike down Bacchides, 48 when he fell back and evaded him. Then Jonathan and his men leapt into the Jordan and swam over to the other side; but the enemy did not cross 49 the river in pursuit. The army of Bacchides lost about a thousand men that day.

50 Bacchides returned to Jerusalem and fortified with high walls, gates, and bars a number of places in Judaea: the fortress at Jericho, Emmaus and 51 Beth-horon, Bethel, Timnath-pharathon, and Tephon; in all of these he 52 placed garrisons to harass Israel. He fortified the towns of Bethsura and 53 Gazara and the citadel, placing forces and stores of provisions there. He took the sons of the leading men of the country as hostages and put them under guard in the citadel at Jerusalem.

54 In the second month of the year 153,^a Alcimus gave orders for the wall of the inner court of the temple to be demolished, thereby destroying the 55 work of the prophets. But at the moment when he began demolition, Alcimus had a stroke, which put a stop to his activities. Paralysed and with his speech impaired, he could not utter a word or give final instructions 56 57 about his property. Thus he died in great torment. On learning that Alcimus was dead, Bacchides returned to the king, and for two years
Judaea had peace.

58 Then the renegades put their heads together: 'Look!' they said, 'Jonathan and his people are living in peace and security. Let us bring 59 Bacchides here; he will capture them all in a single night.' They went and 60 conferred with Bacchides, and he set out with a large force, sending letters secretly to all his supporters in Judaea, with instructions to seize Jonathan and his men. But they were unable to do so, because their plan leaked out.
61 About fifty of the ringleaders of this villainy in Judaea were seized and put to death. Jonathan, Simon, and their men then made their way out to Bethbasi in the desert, built up its ruined fortifications, and strengthened it. When Bacchides learnt of this, he gathered together all his army and sent word to those in Judaea. He came and took up position against Bethbasi, and attacked it for a long time, erecting siege-engines. Jonathan left his brother Simon in the town and slipped out into the country with a few men. He attacked Odomera and his people and the Phasiritites in their encampment; he began to get the better of them and to advance towards Bethbasi with his forces.

Simon and his men made a sally out of the town and set fire to the siege-engines. They fought Bacchides and defeated him. They kept up heavy pressure upon him, and so his plan and his expedition proved fruitless. There was great anger against the renegades at whose instance he had invaded the land, and many of them were put to death. Bacchides then decided to return to his own country.

When Jonathan learnt of this, he sent envoys to Bacchides to arrange terms of peace with him and a return of the Jewish prisoners. Bacchides agreed and did as Jonathan proposed, swearing to do him no harm for the rest of his life. He sent him back the prisoners he had taken previously from Judaea, and returned to his own country; never again did he enter their territory. So the war came to an end in Israel. Jonathan took up residence in Michmash and began to govern the people, rooting the godless out of Israel.

Jonathan rules the nation

IN THE YEAR 160,^a Alexander Epiphanes son of Antiochus came and took possession of Ptolemais, where he was welcomed and proclaimed king. When King Demetrius heard of this, he raised a huge army and marched out to meet him in battle. At the same time Demetrius sent Jonathan a letter in friendly and flattering terms; for he said to himself, 'Let us forestall Alexander by making peace with the Jews before Jonathan comes to terms with him against us, for he will remember all the harm we have done him by our treatment of his brothers and of his nation.' He gave Jonathan authority to collect and equip an army, conferred on him the title of ally, and ordered the hostages in the citadel to be handed over to him. Jonathan came to Jerusalem and read the letter aloud before all the people and the garrison of the citadel, who were filled with apprehension when they heard that the king had given Jonathan authority to raise an army. They surrendered the hostages to him, and he restored them to their parents.

Jonathan took up his quarters in Jerusalem and began to repair and rebuild the city. He gave orders to those engaged on the work to build the walls and surround Mount Zion with a fortification of squared stones, and this was done. The foreigners in the strongholds which Bacchides had built made their escape, each man leaving his post and returning to his own

^a That is 152 B.C.

14 country; however, in Bethsura there were still left some of those who had abandoned the law and ordinances, and had found asylum there.

15 King Alexander heard of the promises which Demetrius had sent to Jonathan, and was told of the battles and heroic deeds of Jonathan and his brothers, and the hardships they had endured. 'Where shall we ever find another man like this?' he exclaimed. 'Let us make him our friend and ally.'

17 He therefore wrote a letter to Jonathan to this effect:

18 King Alexander to his brother Jonathan, greeting.

19 We have heard about you, what a valiant man you are and how fit to 20 be our friend. Now therefore we do appoint you this day to be High Priest of your nation with the title of King's Friend, to support our cause and to keep friendship with us.

He sent him a purple robe and a gold crown.

21 Jonathan assumed the vestments of the high priest in the seventh month of the year 160^a at the Feast of Tabernacles, and he gathered an army together and prepared a large supply of arms.

22 23 When this news reached Demetrius he was mortified. 'How did we come to let Alexander forestall us', he asked, 'in gaining the friendship and support of the Jews? I too will send them cordial messages and offer honours and gifts to keep them on my side.' So he sent a message to the Jews to this effect:

King Demetrius to the Jewish nation, greeting.

26 We have heard with great pleasure that you have kept your agreements and remained in friendship with us and have not gone over to our enemies. Continue, then, to keep faith with us, and we shall reward you well for all that you do in our cause, both by granting you numerous exemptions and making you gifts.

29 I hereby release and exempt you and all Jews whatsoever from 30 tribute, from the tax on salt, and from the crown-money. From today and hereafter I release you from the one-third of the grain-harvest and the half of the fruit-harvest due to me. From today and for all time, I will no longer exact them from Judaea or from the three administrative districts, formerly part of Samaria and Galilee, which I now attach to Judaea. Jerusalem and its environs, with its tithes and tolls, shall be sacred and tax free. I also surrender authority over the citadel in Jerusalem and grant the High Priest the right to garrison it with men of his own choice.
31 All Jewish prisoners of war taken from Judaea into any part of my kingdom, I set at liberty without ransom. No man shall exact any levy whatsoever on the cattle of the Jews. All their festivals, sabbaths, new moons, 32 and appointed days, and three days preceding and following each festival, shall be days of exemption and release for all the Jews in my kingdom; no one shall have authority to impose any exaction or burden on a Jew in any respect.

36 Jews shall be enlisted in the forces of the King to the number of thirty thousand men; they shall receive the usual army pay. Some of them shall be stationed in the great royal fortresses, others put in positions of trust in the kingdom. Their commanders and officers shall be of their own race, and they shall follow their own customs, just as the King has ordered for Judaea.

The three districts added to Judaea from the territory of Samaria shall be attached to Judaea so as to be under one authority, and subject to the High Priest alone.

Ptolemais and the lands belonging to it I make over to the temple in Jerusalem, to meet the expenses proper to it. I give fifteen thousand silver shekels annually, charged on my own royal accounts, to be drawn from such places as may prove convenient. And the arrears of the subsidy, in so far as it has not been paid by the revenue officials, as it formerly was, shall henceforth be paid in for the needs of the temple. In addition, the five thousand silver shekels which used to be taken from the annual income of the temple are also released, because they belong to the ministering priests. Whoever shall take sanctuary in the temple at Jerusalem, or in any part of its precincts, because of a debt to the crown or any other debt, shall be free from distraint on his person or on his property within my kingdom. The cost of the rebuilding and repair of the temple shall be borne by the royal revenue; also the repair of the walls of Jerusalem and its surrounding fortification, as well as of the fortresses in Judaea, shall be at the expense of the royal revenue.

When Jonathan and the people heard these proposals, they did not believe or accept them, for they recalled the terrible calamity the king had brought upon Israel, and his harsh oppression. They favoured Alexander, because it was he who had been the initiator of peaceful overtures; so they remained his allies to the end.

King Alexander mustered powerful forces and took up position against Demetrius, and the two kings joined battle. The army of Alexander took to flight, and Demetrius pursued him and got the better of them. He fought hard till sunset, but on that day Demetrius fell.

Thereupon Alexander sent ambassadors to Ptolemy king of Egypt, with a message to this effect: 'I have returned to my kingdom and sit on the throne of my ancestors. I have assumed the government, defeated Demetrius, and made myself master of our country; for I gave him battle, and he and his army were crushed by us, and we sit on the throne of his kingdom. Let us now form an alliance; make me your son-in-law by giving me your daughter in marriage, and I will give presents to you and her worthy of your royal state.'

King Ptolemy replied: 'It was a happy day when you returned to the land of your ancestors and ascended the throne of their realm. I will now do as you ask; only come to Ptolemais so that we may meet, and I will become your father-in-law as you propose.'

In the year 162,^a Ptolemy set out from Egypt, with his daughter Cleopatra, and arrived at Ptolemais, where King Alexander met him, and

^a That is 150 B.C.

Ptolemy gave him his daughter in marriage. The wedding was celebrated in royal style, with great pomp.

59 60 King Alexander wrote to Jonathan to come and meet him. Jonathan went in state to Ptolemais, where he met the two kings; he gave them silver and gold, and also made many gifts to their Friends; and so he won their favour.

61 There were some scoundrelly Jewish renegades who conspired to lodge complaints against Jonathan. The king, however, paid no attention to them, but gave orders for Jonathan to be divested of the garment he wore 62 and robed in purple, and this was done. The king made him sit at his side, 63 and told his officers to go with Jonathan into the centre of the city and proclaim that no one should bring any complaint against him or make trouble
64 for him for any reason whatsoever. When this proclamation was made and those who planned to lodge complaints saw Jonathan's splendour, and the 65 purple robe he wore, they all made off. Thus the king honoured him, enrolling him in the first class of the order of King's Friends, and making 66 him a general and a provincial governor. Jonathan returned to Jerusalem well pleased with his success.

67 IN THE YEAR 165,^a Demetrius, the son of King Demetrius, arrived in 68 the land of his fathers from Crete. King Alexander was greatly upset by 69 this news, and returned to Antioch. Demetrius appointed as his commander Apollonius the governor of Coele-syria, who raised a powerful force and encamped at Jamnia. From there he sent this message to Jonathan
70 the high priest: 'You are all alone in resisting us, and you are making me 71 look ridiculous and absurd. Why do you defy us up there in the hills? If you have confidence in your forces, come down to meet us on the plain, and let us try conclusions with each other there, for I have the power of 72 cities behind me. Make inquiries; find out who I am and who are our allies; you will be told that you cannot stand your ground against us, for your 73 predecessors have twice been routed in their own territory, and now you will not be able to resist my cavalry, and such a force as mine, on the plain, where there is not so much as a stone or a pebble to give you cover, or any place to which you can escape.'

74 Jonathan was provoked by this message from Apollonius. He took ten thousand men and marched out from Jerusalem, and was joined by his 75 brother Simon with reinforcements. He laid siege to Joppa, whose gates the citizens had closed against him because Apollonius had a garrison there.
76 But when fighting started, the citizens took fright and opened the gates; thus Jonathan became master of Joppa. When Apollonius heard of it he 77 took three thousand cavalry and a large force of infantry, and marched to Azotus as if to pass through it, but at the same time, relying on his numerous 78 cavalry, he advanced into the plain. Jonathan went in pursuit as far as Azotus, where the armies joined battle. But Apollonius had left a thousand 79 cavalry in hiding in their rear, and Jonathan discovered that there was an ambush behind him. The enemy surrounded his army, showering arrows 80 on our people from dawn till dusk. But they stood fast as Jonathan had 81

^a That is 147 B.C.

ordered them, and the enemy cavalry grew weary. At that point Simon 82 led out his troops and joined battle with the enemy phalanx, now that the cavalry was exhausted. They were routed by him and took to flight.

The horsemen scattered across the plain and took refuge in Azotus, 83 where they sought asylum in the temple of Dagon their idol. But Jonathan 84 set fire to Azotus and its surrounding villages, and plundered them; the temple of Dagon, and those who had taken refuge there, he destroyed with fire. The numbers of those who fell by the sword, together with those who 85 lost their lives in the fire, reached eight thousand. Jonathan marched away 86 from Azotus, and encamped at Ascalon, where the citizens came out to meet him with great pomp. Then he and his men returned to Jerusalem loaded 87 with spoil.

When King Alexander heard of all this, he did Jonathan still greater 88 honour, sending him the gold clasp which it is the custom to give to the 89 King's Kinsmen. He also presented him with Accaron and all its districts.

The king of Egypt collected a huge army, countless as the sand on the 11 sea-shore, and a great fleet of ships, meaning to make himself master of Alexander's kingdom by treachery and add it to his own. He set out for 2 Syria with professions of peace, and the people of the towns proceeded to open their gates to him and went to meet him; King Alexander had ordered them to do this, because Ptolemy was his father-in-law.

As he went on his progress from town to town, Ptolemy left a detach- 3 ment of troops in each of them as a garrison. When he reached Azotus, he 4 was shown the burnt-out temple of Dagon, the city itself and its ruined suburbs strewn with corpses, and, piled up along his way, the bodies of those who had been burned in the course of the fighting. They told the 5 king that it was Jonathan's doing, hoping that he would reprimand him; but the king said nothing. Jonathan met him in state at Joppa, where they 6 exchanged greetings and passed the night. Jonathan accompanied the king 7 as far as the river Eleutherus and then returned to Jerusalem. King Ptolemy 8 made himself master of the coast towns as far as Seleucia-by-the-sea. He was harbouring malicious designs against Alexander.

He sent ambassadors to King Demetrius with the following message: 9
'I propose that you and I should make a pact: I will give you my daughter, now Alexander's wife, and you shall reign over the kingdom of your father.
I now regret having given my daughter to him, for he has tried to kill me.' 10

He maligned Alexander in this way because he coveted his kingdom, and 11 12 he took his daughter away and gave her to Demetrius. This led to a breach between him and Alexander, and to open enmity.

Ptolemy now entered Antioch, where he assumed the crown of Asia; 13
thus he wore two crowns, that of Egypt and that of Asia.

King Alexander was at this time in Cilicia, because the inhabitants of that 14 region were in revolt. But when he heard the news he marched against 15
Ptolemy, who came to meet him with a powerful army and routed him.
Alexander fled to Arabia for protection, and King Ptolemy was triumphant. 16
Zabdiel the Arab chieftain cut off Alexander's head and sent it to Ptolemy. 17
But two days later King Ptolemy died, and his garrisons in the fortresses 18 19 were killed by the inhabitants. So in the year 167^a Demetrius became king.

20 At this time Jonathan gathered together the Judaeans to assault the citadel in Jerusalem, and they brought up many siege-engines against it.
21 But a number of renegades, enemies of their own people, went to the king 22 and reported that Jonathan was besieging the citadel. The king was furious at the news and immediately moved his quarters to Ptolemais. He wrote to Jonathan ordering him to raise the siege, and to meet him for conference at Ptolemais with all speed.

23 When Jonathan received this letter, he gave orders for the siege to be continued. Then, selecting elders of Israel and priests to accompany him, 24 he set out on his dangerous mission. He took with him silver and gold, and robes, and many other gifts, and went to meet the king at Ptolemais.

25 He won the favour of Demetrius, although some renegade Jews tried to lodge complaints against him. But the king treated him just as his pre-27 decessors had done, honouring him in the presence of all his Friends. He confirmed him in the high-priesthood and in all his former dignities, and appointed him head of the first class of the King's Friends.

28 Jonathan requested the king to exempt Judaea and the three Samaritan districts^b from tribute, promising him in return three hundred talents.
29 King Demetrius consented, writing to Jonathan on all these affairs as follows:

30 King Demetrius to his brother Jonathan, and to the Jewish nation, greeting.

31 This is a copy of our letter written to our kinsman Lasthenes about you, which we have had made for your information:

32 'King Demetrius to his respected kinsman Lasthenes, greeting.

33 'Because our friends the Jewish nation show us goodwill, and observe 34 their obligations to us, we are resolved to become their benefactor. We have therefore settled on them the lands of Judaea and the three districts, Apherema, Lydda, and Ramathaim, which are now transferred from Samaria to Judaea, together with all the lands adjacent thereto, for the benefit of the priesthood at Jerusalem. This is a transfer of the annual dues which the King formerly received from these territories, from the 35 produce of the soil and of the orchards. Other of our revenues, the tithes and tolls now pertaining to us, the salt-pans, and the crown-money, all 36 these we shall cede to them. These provisions are irrevocable from now 37 for all future time. See to it then that you make a copy of them to be given to Jonathan and set by him in a conspicuous position on the holy mountain.'

38 When King Demetrius saw that the country was quiet under his rule and resistance was at an end, he disbanded all his forces, sending every man home, with the exception of the foreign mercenaries he had hired from the islands of the Gentiles. Then all the troops enlisted under his pre-39 decessors turned against the king. A certain Trypho, formerly of the party of Alexander, aware of the disaffection of all the forces towards Demetrius, went to Imalcue, the Arab chieftain, who had charge of the child Antiochus, Alexander's son, and kept pressing him to hand the boy over to him to be made king in succession to his father. He also informed Imalcue of all the measures Demetrius was taking and of his unpopularity with his troops. There he remained for some time. 40

Meanwhile Jonathan sent to King Demetrius requesting him to withdraw, from the citadel in Jerusalem and from the fortresses, the garrisons which were constantly harassing Israel. Demetrius sent Jonathan this reply: 'I will not only meet your request, but when opportunity arises I will do you and your people the highest honour. And now be so good as to send men to support me, for all my troops are in revolt.' 41 42 43

Jonathan dispatched three thousand fighting men to Antioch, and the king was much relieved at their arrival. The citizens poured into the centre of the city, a hundred and twenty thousand strong, bent on killing the king. He took refuge in the palace, while the citizens seized control of the streets and fighting broke out. King Demetrius called the Jews to his assistance, and they rallied to him at once. They then dispersed all over the city and slaughtered that day as many as a hundred thousand, setting the city on fire and taking much booty. And thus they saved the king's life. 44 45 46 47 48

When the citizens saw that the Jews had the city completely at their mercy, their courage failed them and they clamoured to the king to accept their surrender and to stop the Jews fighting against them and the city. They threw down their arms and made peace; and the Jews, now in high repute with the king and all his subjects, returned to Jerusalem loaded with booty. But when King Demetrius was secure upon his throne, with the country quiet under him, he went back on all his promises and broke off relations with Jonathan; instead of repaying the benefits he had received, he put severe pressure upon him. 49 50 51 52 53

After this, Trypho returned, and with him Antiochus, a mere lad. Antiochus was crowned, and all the forces Demetrius had so contemptuously discharged rallied to the king. These fought against Demetrius, and he was utterly routed. Trypho brought up his elephants and made himself master of Antioch. The young Antiochus wrote to Jonathan confirming him in the high-priesthood, with authority over the four districts, and making him one of the King's Friends. He also sent him a service of gold plate, and gave him the right to drink from a gold cup, to be robed in purple, and to wear the gold clasp. He appointed Jonathan's brother Simon as officer commanding the area from the Ladder of Tyre to the borders of Egypt. 54 55 56 57 58 59

Jonathan made a tour through the country on the far side of the river and the towns there; and all the forces of Syria gathered to his support. 60

He went to Ascalon, where he was received with great honour by the citizens. From there he went on to Gaza, but the inhabitants closed the gates against him; so he blockaded the city, set fire to its suburbs, and plundered them. The citizens of Gaza then sought peace, and he made terms with them, taking the sons of their magistrates as hostages and 61 62 sending them off to Jerusalem; he himself continued his progress through the country in the direction of Damascus.

63 Jonathan heard that Demetrius's officers had arrived at Kedesh-in-64 Galilee with a large force to prevent him from reaching his objective. He 65 went to meet them, leaving his brother Simon in Judaea. Simon took up position against Bethsura and, after prolonged fighting, blockaded it.
66 Finally the citizens sued for terms of peace and Simon consented; he evicted them, took over the town, and installed a garrison there.

67 Jonathan, who had encamped with his army by the Lake of Gennesaret, 68 marched out early in the morning into the plain of Asor. There in the plain the gentile army was advancing to meet him; they had set an ambush for 69 him in the hills, while they themselves confronted him. When the men from the ambush emerged and joined in the fighting, all Jonathan's men 70 took to flight; not one remained except Mattathias son of Absalom, and 71 Judas son of Chalphi, officers in the army. Jonathan tore his clothes, put 72 dust upon his head, and prayed. Then he turned upon the enemy and 73 routed them in headlong flight. When the fugitives of Jonathan's army saw this, they rallied to him and joined in the pursuit as far as the enemy base 74 at Kedesh; there they encamped. That day about three thousand of the Gentiles fell. Jonathan then returned to Jerusalem.

12 JONATHAN NOW SAW his opportunity and sent picked men on a mission to Rome to confirm and renew the treaty of friendship with that city.
2 3 He sent letters to the same effect to Sparta and to other places. The envoys travelled to Rome and went to the Senate House to deliver their message:
'Jonathan the High Priest and the Jewish people have sent us to renew their 4 former pact of friendship and alliance.' The Romans gave them letters requiring the authorities in each place to give them safe conduct to Judaea.

5 Here follows a transcript of the letter which Jonathan wrote to the Spartans:

6 Jonathan the High Priest, the Senate of the Jews, the priests, and the rest of the Jewish people, to our brothers of Sparta, greeting.

7 On a previous occasion a letter was sent to Onias the High Priest from Arius your king, acknowledging our kinship; a copy is given below.
8 Onias welcomed your envoy with full honours and received the letter in 9 which the terms of the alliance and friendship were set forth. We do not regard ourselves as needing such alliances, since our support is the holy 10 books in our possession. Nevertheless, we now venture to send and renew our pact of brotherhood and friendship with you, so that we may 11 not become estranged, for it is many years since you wrote to us. We never lose any opportunity, on festal and other appropriate days, of 12 13 remembering you at our sacrifices and in our prayers, as it is right and proper to remember kinsmen; and we rejoice at your fame. We ourselves have been under the pressure of hostile attacks on every side; all 14 the surrounding kings have made war upon us. In the course of these wars we had no wish to trouble you or the rest of our allies and friends:
15 we have the aid of Heaven to support us, and so we have been saved from our enemies, and they have been humbled. Accordingly, we chose 16 Numenius son of Antiochus, and Antipater son of Jason, and have sent them to the Romans to renew our former friendship and alliance with them. We instructed them to go to you also with our greetings, and to 17 deliver this letter about the renewal of our pact of brotherhood. And now 18 we pray you to send us a reply to this letter.

This is a copy of the letter sent by the Spartans to Onias : 19

Arius, King of Sparta, to Onias the High Priest, greeting. 20

A document has come to light which shows that Spartans and Jews 21 are kinsmen, descended alike from Abraham. Now that we have learnt 22 this, we beg you to write and tell us how your affairs prosper. The 23 message we return to you is, 'What is yours, your cattle and every kind of property, is ours, and what is ours is yours', and we have therefore instructed our envoys to report to you in these terms.

Jonathan heard that Demetrius's generals had returned to attack him 24 with larger forces than before. He marched from Jerusalem and met them 25 in the region of Hamath, giving them no chance to set foot in his territory.
He sent spies to their camp, who on their return reported that preparations 26 were being made for a night attack. At sunset Jonathan gave orders to his 27 men to stay awake and stand to arms all night, ready for battle; and he stationed outposts all round the camp. When the enemy heard that 28 Jonathan and his men were ready for battle, they were alarmed; their courage failed, and they withdrew, first lighting watch-fires in their camp.
Jonathan and his men, seeing the watch-fires burning, did not realize 29 what had happened until morning. Then Jonathan set out in pursuit, 30 but failed to overtake them, for they had crossed the river Eleutherus.
So Jonathan turned aside against the Arabs called Zabadaeans, 31 and he dealt them a severe blow and plundered them. He struck camp 32 and came to Damascus, and then made a march through the whole country.

Simon set out and marched as far as Ascalon and the neighbouring 33-34 fortresses. He then turned towards Joppa; he had heard that the citizens intended to hand it over to the supporters of Demetrius, but before they could do so, he occupied the town and placed a garrison there to defend it.

When Jonathan returned he convened the senate. With their agreement 35 he decided to build fortresses in Judaea, to heighten the walls of Jerusalem, 36 and to erect a high barrier to separate the citadel from the city and so to isolate it that the garrison could not buy or sell. They assembled to rebuild 37 the city, for the wall along the ravine to the east had partly collapsed, and he repaired the section of the wall called Chaphenatha. Simon also rebuilt 38 and fortified Adida in the Shephelah, erecting gates and bars.

Trypho now aspired to be king of Asia; he meant to rebel against King 39 Antiochus and assume the crown himself. But he was afraid that Jonathan 40 would fight to prevent this, so he cast about for some means of capturing and killing him. He set off and reached Bethshan. Jonathan marched out to 41 meet him with forty thousand picked troops, and he also reached Bethshan.

42 Trypho, seeing that Jonathan had a large force with him, was afraid to 43 attack. So he received him honourably and commended him to all his Friends, gave him presents, and ordered his Friends and his troops to obey 44 Jonathan as they would himself. He said to Jonathan: 'Why have you put 45 all these men to so much trouble, when we are not at war? Send them home now and choose a few to accompany you, and come with me to Ptolemais.
 I will hand it over to you with all the other fortresses, the rest of the troops, and all the officials, and then I will leave the country. This is the only pur-46 pose of my coming.' Jonathan took him at his word and did as he said: he 47 dismissed his forces and they returned to Judaea. He kept back three thousand men, of whom he left two thousand in Galilee, while a thousand 48 accompanied him. But when Jonathan entered Ptolemais, the citizens closed the gates, seized him, and put to the sword all who had entered with him.

49 Trypho sent a force of infantry and cavalry into Galilee to the great 50 plain, to wipe out all Jonathan's men. They now learnt that Jonathan had been seized and was lost, along with his escort, but they put heart into one 51 another and marched in close formation, ready for battle. When their pur-52 suers saw that they would fight to the death, they turned back. So all came safely home to Judaea, mourning for Jonathan and his followers, and filled 53 with alarm. All Israel was plunged in grief. The surrounding Gentiles were now bent on destroying them root and branch, saying to themselves,
 'The Jews have no leader or champion, so now is the time to attack, and we shall blot out all memory of them among men.'

The high-priesthood of Simon

13 THE NEWS REACHED SIMON that Trypho had mustered a large force 2 for the invasion and destruction of Judaea, and it threw the people into a state of panic. When Simon saw this, he went up to Jerusalem, called an 3 assembly, and encouraged them in these words: 'I need not remind you of all that my brothers and I and my father's house have done for the laws and the holy place, what battles we have fought, what hardships we have 4 endured. My brothers have all fallen in this cause, fighting for Israel, and 5 I am the only one left. Now Heaven forbid that I should grudge my own life in any moment of danger, for I am not worth more than my brothers.
 6 No! I will take up the cause of my nation and the holy place, of your wives and children, since all the Gentiles in their hatred have gathered to destroy 7 8 us.' At these words the people plucked up courage, and they shouted in answer: 'You shall be our leader in place of Judas and your brother 9 10 Jonathan. Fight our battles, and we will do whatever you tell us.' So Simon 11 mustered all the fighting men and hurried on the completion of the walls of Jerusalem until it was fortified on all sides. He sent Jonathan son of Absalom with a considerable force to Joppa; he expelled its inhabitants and remained in possession of the town.

12 Trypho marched out from Ptolemais with a large force to invade Judaea, 13 taking Jonathan with him as a prisoner. Simon encamped at Adida on the edge of the plain. When Trypho learnt that Simon had come forward to take the place of his brother Jonathan, and that he was about to join battle with him, he sent envoys to Simon with the following message: 'We are detaining your brother Jonathan because of certain monies which he owed to the royal treasury in connection with the offices he held. To ensure that he will not again revolt if we release him, send one hundred talents of silver and two of his sons as hostages, and we will let him go.' Simon himself realized that this was a trick, but he had the money and the children brought to him, fearing that otherwise he might arouse deep animosity among the people, who would say, 'It was because you did not send the money and the children that Jonathan lost his life.' So he sent the children and the hundred talents, but Trypho broke his word and did not release Jonathan.

After this, Trypho set out to invade the country and ravage it, taking a roundabout way through Adora. Simon and his army marched parallel with him everywhere he went. Meanwhile the garrison of the citadel were sending emissaries to Trypho, urging him to come to them by way of the desert, and to send them provisions. Trypho prepared to send all his cavalry, but that night there was a severe snow-storm, which prevented their arrival; so he withdrew into Gilead. When he reached Bascama, he had Jonathan put to death, and there he was buried. Trypho then turned and went back to his own country.

Simon had the body of his brother Jonathan brought to Modin, and buried in the town of their fathers; and all Israel made a great lamentation and mourned him for many days. Simon built a high monument over the tomb of his father and his brothers, visible at a great distance, faced back and front with polished stone. He erected seven pyramids, those for his father and mother and his four brothers arranged in pairs. For the pyramids he contrived an elaborate setting: he surrounded them with great columns surmounted with trophies of armour for a perpetual memorial, and between the trophies carved ships, plainly visible to all at sea. This mausoleum which he made at Modin stands to this day.

Trypho now plotted against the young King Antiochus and murdered him. He usurped his throne and assumed the crown of Asia. This was a disaster for the country.

Simon rebuilt the fortresses of Judaea, furnishing them with high towers and great walls with gates and bars; he also provisioned the fortresses. He sent representatives to King Demetrius to negotiate a remission of taxes for the country, on the ground that all Trypho's exactions had been exorbitant.
Demetrius replied favourably to this request and wrote him a letter in the following terms:

King Demetrius to Simon the High Priest and friend of kings, and to the Senate and nation of the Jews, greeting.

We have received the golden crown and the palm branch which you sent, and we are ready to make a lasting peace with you and to instruct the revenue officers to grant you immunities. All our agreements with you stand, and the strongholds which you built shall remain yours. We give a free pardon for any errors of omission or commission, to take effect from the date of this letter. We remit the crown-money which you owed us, and every other tax formerly exacted in Jerusalem is henceforth cancelled. All those of you who are suitable for enrolment in our retinue shall be so enrolled. Let there be peace between us.

41 42 In the year 170,^a Israel was released from the gentile yoke. The people began to write on their contracts and agreements, 'In the first year of Simon, the great high priest, general and leader of the Jews'.

43 Then Simon invested Gazara,^b and surrounded it with his forces. He constructed a siege-engine and brought it up to the town, made a breach in one of the towers and captured it. The men on the siege-engine leapt out of it into the town, and there was a great commotion. The townspeople and their wives and children climbed up on to the city wall with their garments torn, clamouring to Simon to offer them terms. 'Do not treat us as our wickedness deserves,' they cried, 'but as your mercy prompts you.' 47 Simon came to terms with them, and brought the war to an end. But he expelled them from the town, and after purifying the houses in which the idols stood, he made his entry with songs of thanksgiving and praise. He removed every pollution from it and settled men in it who would keep the law. He strengthened its fortifications and built a residence there for himself.

49 The men in the citadel in Jerusalem were prevented from going in and out to buy and sell in the country; famine set in and many of them died of starvation. They clamoured to Simon to accept their surrender, and he agreed: he expelled them from the citadel and cleansed it from its pollutions. It was on the twenty-third day of the second month in the year 171 that he made his entry, with a chorus of praise and the waving of palm branches, with lutes, cymbals, and zithers, with hymns and songs, to celebrate Israel's final riddance of a formidable enemy. Simon decreed that this day should be observed as an annual festival. He fortified the temple hill opposite the citadel, and he and his men took up residence there. When Simon saw that his son John had become a man, he made him commander of all the forces, with Gazara as his headquarters.

14 In the year 172,^d King Demetrius mustered his army and went into Media to recruit additional forces for his war against Trypho. When Arsakes king of Persia and Media heard that Demetrius had entered his territories, he sent one of his generals to capture him alive. The general marched out and defeated Demetrius, captured him and brought him to Arsakes, who put him in prison.

4 As long as Simon lived, Judaea was at peace. He promoted his people's welfare, and they lived happily all through the glorious days of his reign. 5 Among other notable achievements he captured the port of Joppa to secure his communications overseas. He extended his nation's territories and 6 made himself master of the whole land. He repatriated a large number of prisoners of war. Without meeting any resistance he gained control over 7 Gazara and Bethsura and over the citadel, and removed their pollution.

They farmed their land in peace, and the land produced its crops, and the trees in the plains their fruit. Old men sat in the streets, talking together of their blessings; and the young men dressed themselves in splendid military style. Simon supplied the towns with food in plenty and equipped them with weapons for defence. His renown reached the ends of the earth. He restored peace to the land, and there were great rejoicings throughout Israel. Each man sat under his own vine and fig-tree, and they had no one to fear. Those were days when every enemy vanished from the land and every hostile king was crushed. Simon gave his protection to the poor among the people; he paid close attention to the law and rid the country of lawless and wicked men. He gave new splendour to the temple and furnished it with a wealth of sacred vessels.

THE REPORT OF JONATHAN'S DEATH reached Rome, and Sparta too, and they were deeply grieved. When they heard, however, that his brother Simon had become high priest in his place, and was in firm control of the country and the towns in it, they inscribed on bronze tablets a renewal of the treaty of friendship and alliance which they had established with his brothers Judas and Jonathan. This was read before the assembly in Jerusalem. The following is a copy of the letter from Sparta:

The rulers and city of Sparta to the High Priest Simon, to the Senate, the priests, and the rest of the Jewish people, our brothers, greeting.

The envoys you sent to our people have told us about your fame and honour; their visit has given us great pleasure. We have entered a transcript of the message they brought in the minutes of the public assembly: 'Numenius son of Antiochus, and Antipater son of Jason, envoys of the Jews, visited us to renew their treaty of friendship with us. It was resolved by the public assembly to receive these men with honour and to place a copy of their address in the public archives, so that the Spartans might have it on permanent record. A copy of this document has been made for Simon the High Priest.'

After this, Simon sent Numenius to Rome with a large gold shield, worth a thousand minas, to confirm the alliance with the Romans.

When the people heard of these events they asked themselves how they could show their gratitude to Simon and his sons. For he, with his brothers and his father's family, had stood firm, fought off the enemies of Israel, and ensured his nation's freedom. So an inscription was engraved on tablets of bronze and placed on a monument on Mount Zion. A copy of the inscription follows:

On the eighteenth day of the month Elul, in the year 172, ^a the third year of Simon's high-priesthood, at Asaramel, in a large assembly of priests, people, rulers of the nation, and elders of the land, the following

^a That is 140 B.C.

29 facts were placed on record. Whereas our land had been subject to frequent wars, Simon son of Mattathias, a priest of the Joarib family, and his brothers, risked their lives in resisting the enemies of their people, in order that the temple and law might be preserved, and they brought 30 great glory to their nation. Jonathan rallied the nation, became their high priest, and then was gathered to his fathers. Their enemies resolved to 32 invade their land and destroy it, and to attack the temple. Then Simon came forward and fought for his nation. He spent large sums of his own 33 money to arm the soldiers of his nation and to provide their pay. He fortified the towns of Judaea, and Bethsura on the boundaries of Judaea, 34 formerly an enemy arsenal, and stationed a garrison of Jews there. He fortified Joppa by the sea, and Gazara near Azotus, formerly occupied by the enemy. There he settled Jews, and provided these towns with 35 everything needful for their welfare. When the people saw Simon's patriotism and his resolution to win fame for his nation, they made him their leader and high priest, in recognition of all that he had done, of his just conduct, his loyalty to his nation, and his constant efforts to enhance 36 its renown. His leadership was crowned with success, and the Gentiles were expelled from the land, as were also the troops in Jerusalem who had built themselves a citadel in the city of David, from which they sallied forth to bring defilement upon the whole precinct of the temple 37 and do violence to its purity. He settled Jews in it and fortified it for the security of the land and of the city, and he raised the height of the walls of Jerusalem. King Demetrius confirmed him in the office of 38 high priest, made him one of his Friends, and granted him the highest honours; for he had heard that the Romans were naming the Jews 39 friends, allies, and brothers, and had gone in state to meet Simon's envoys.
40

41 The Jews and their priests confirmed Simon as their leader and high priest in perpetuity until a true prophet should appear. He was to be 42 their general, and to have full charge of the temple; and in addition to this the supervision of their labour, of the country, and of the arms and 43 fortifications was to be entrusted to him. He was to be obeyed by all; all contracts in the country were to be drawn up in his name. He was to wear the purple robe and the gold clasp.

44 None of the people or the priests shall have authority to abrogate any of these decrees, to oppose commands issued by Simon or convene any assembly in the land without his consent, to be robed in purple, or to wear 45 the gold clasp. Whoever shall contravene these provisions or neglect 46 any of them shall be liable to punishment. It is the unanimous decision 47 of the people that Simon shall officiate in the ways here laid down. Simon has agreed and consented to be high priest, general and ethnarch of the Jews and the priests, and to be the protector of them all.

48 This inscription, it was declared, should be engraved on bronze tablets 49 and set up within the precincts of the temple in a conspicuous position, and copies should be placed in the treasury, in the keeping of Simon and his sons.

Antiochus son of King Demetrius sent a letter from overseas to Simon the high priest and ethnarch of the Jews, and to the whole nation. The contents were as follows:

King Antiochus to Simon, High Priest and Ethnarch, and to the Jewish nation, greeting.

Whereas certain traitors have seized my ancestral kingdom, I have now decided to assert my claim to it, so that I may restore it to its former condition. I have raised a large body of mercenaries and fitted out ships of war. I intend to land in my country and to attack those who have ravaged my kingdom and destroyed many of its cities. Now therefore I confirm all the tax remissions which my royal predecessors granted you, and all their other remissions of tribute. I permit you to mint your own coinage as currency for your country. Jerusalem and the temple shall be free. All the arms you have prepared, and the fortifications which you have built and now hold, shall remain yours. All debts now owing to the royal treasury and all future liabilities thereto shall be cancelled from this time on for ever. When we have re-established our kingdom, we shall confer the highest honours upon you, your nation and temple, to make your country's greatness apparent to the whole world.

In the year 174,^a Antiochus marched into his ancestral domain, and all the armed forces came over to him, leaving very few with Trypho. Antiochus pursued him, and Trypho came as a fugitive to Dor by the sea. He knew that his position was desperate now that all his troops had deserted. Antiochus, at the head of a hundred and twenty thousand trained soldiers and eight thousand horsemen, laid siege to Dor. He encircled the town, and his ships joined in the blockade from the sea. He thus exerted heavy pressure on it from both land and sea, and prevented anyone from leaving or entering.

NUMENIUS AND HIS PARTY arrived from Rome with a letter to the various kings and countries, which read as follows:

Lucius, Consul of the Romans, to King Ptolemy, greeting.

Envoys have come to us from our friends and allies the Jews, sent by Simon the High Priest and the Jewish people, to renew their original treaty of friendship and alliance. They brought a gold shield worth a thousand minas. We have decided, therefore, to write to the kings and countries, requiring them to do no harm to the Jews, nor make war on them or their cities or their country, nor ally themselves with those who so make war. And we have decided to accept the shield from them. If therefore any traitors have escaped from their country to you, hand them over to Simon the High Priest to be punished by him according to the law of the Jews.

The same message was sent to King Demetrius, to Attalus, Ariarathes, Arsakes, Sampsakes, and the Spartans, and also to the following places:

^a That is 138 B.C.

24 Delos, Myndos, Sicyon, Caria, Samos, Pamphylia, Lycia, Halicarnassus, Rhodes, Phaselis, Cos, Sidé, Aradus, Gortyna, Cnidus, Cyprus, and Cyrene. A copy was sent to Simon the high priest.

25 KING ANTIOCHUS LAID SIEGE to Dor for the second time,^a and launched repeated attacks against it; he had siege-engines constructed, and blockaded Trypho, preventing all movement in or out of the town.

26 Simon sent Antiochus two thousand picked men to assist him, with 27 silver and gold and much equipment; but he refused the offer. He repu-28 diated all his previous agreements with Simon and broke off relations. He sent Athenobius, one of the Friends, to parley with him. This was his 29 message: 'You are occupying Joppa and Gazara and the citadel in Jerusalem, cities that belong to my kingdom. You have laid waste their terri-30 tories, and done great damage to the country, and have made yourselves masters of many places in my kingdom. I demand the return of the cities you have captured and the surrender of the tribute exacted from places beyond the frontiers of Judaea over which you have assumed control.
31 Otherwise, you must pay five hundred talents of silver on their account, and another five hundred as compensation for the destruction you have caused and for the loss of tribute from the cities. Failing this, we shall go to war with you.'

32 Athenobius, the King's Friend, came to Jerusalem, and when he saw the splendour of Simon's establishment, the gold and silver vessels on his sideboard, and his display of wealth, he was amazed. He delivered the 33 king's message, to which Simon replied: 'We have not occupied other people's land or taken other people's property, but only the inheritance of 34 our ancestors, unjustly seized for a time by our enemies. We have grasped our opportunity and have claimed our patrimony. With regard to Joppa 35 and Gazara, which you demand, these towns were doing a great deal of damage among our people and in our land. For these we offer one hundred talents.'

36 Athenobius answered not a word, but went off in a rage to the king; he reported what Simon had said, and described Simon's splendour and all the things he had seen. The king was furious.

37 Meanwhile Trypho boarded a ship and made good his escape to Orthosia.
38 The king appointed Kendebaeus as commander-in-chief of the coastal 39 zone, and gave him infantry and cavalry. He instructed him to blockade Judaea, to rebuild Kedron and strengthen its gates, and to make war on 40 our people, while he himself continued the pursuit of Trypho. Kendebaeus arrived in Jamnia and began to harass our people by invading Judaea, and 41 by capturing and killing the inhabitants. He rebuilt Kedron, stationing cavalry and troops there to sally out and patrol the roads of Judaea, in accordance with the king's instructions.

16 John came from Gazara and reported to his father Simon the results of 2 Kendebaeus's campaign. Simon summoned his two eldest sons Judas and John, and said to them: 'My brothers and I and my father's family have fought Israel's battles from our youth until this day, and many a time we have been successful in rescuing Israel. Now I am old, but mercifully you are in the prime of life. Take my place and my brother's and go out and fight for our nation. And may help from on high be with you.'

^a Some witnesses read on the second day.

He then levied from the country twenty thousand picked warriors and cavalry, and they marched against Kendebaeus. After passing the night at Modin they rose early and proceeded to the plain, where a large force of infantry and cavalry stood ready to meet them on the far side of a gully.
When his army had taken up a position opposite, John saw that his men were afraid to cross the gully. So he crossed first himself; his men saw him and followed. John drew up his army with the cavalry in the centre of the infantry, for the enemy cavalry were very numerous. The trumpets were sounded, and Kendebaeus and his army were routed; many of them fell, and the remainder took refuge in the fortress. It was in this engagement that John's brother Judas was wounded. John kept up the pursuit until Kende-baeus reached Kedron, which he had rebuilt. The enemy took refuge in the towers in the open country round Azotus, whereupon John set fire to Azotus. Some two thousand of the enemy fell in the fighting, and John returned to Judaea in safety.

Now Ptolemaeus son of Abubus had been appointed commander for the plain of Jericho. He had great wealth, for he was the high priest's son-in-law. But he became over-ambitious; he proposed to make himself master of the country and plotted to put Simon and his sons out of the way.
In the course of a tour to inspect the towns in that region and to attend to their needs, Simon came to Jericho with his sons Mattathias and Judas in the year 177,^a in the eleventh month, the month of Shebat. The son of Abubus, with treachery in his heart, received them at the small fort called Dok which he had built, and entertained them lavishly. But he had men in concealment there, and when Simon and his sons had drunk freely, Ptolemaeus and his accomplices jumped up, seized their weapons, and rushed in to the banquet. They attacked Simon and killed him, along with his two sons and some of his servants. It was an act of base treachery in which evil was returned for good.

Ptolemaeus sent news of this in a dispatch to the king, asking him to send troops to his assistance and to give him authority over the country and its towns. He sent some of his men to Gazara to kill John, and wrote to the army officers urging them to join him, and offering them silver and gold and presents. Other troops he sent to take Jerusalem and the temple hill.
But someone ran ahead and reported to John at Gazara that his father and brothers had been murdered, and that Ptolemaeus had sent men to kill him as well. When John heard this he was beside himself; he arrested the men who came to kill him, and put them to death, because he had discovered their plot against his life.

The rest of the story of John, his wars and the deeds of valour he performed, the walls he built, and his exploits, are written in the annals of his high-priesthood from the time when he succeeded his father.

THE SECOND BOOK OF THE MACCABEES

Foreword : letters to the Jews in Egypt

1 TO THEIR JEWISH KINSMEN in Egypt, the Jews who are in Jerusalem and those in the country of Judaea send brotherly greeting.

2 May God give you peace and prosperity and remember his covenant 3 with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, his faithful servants. May he give to you all a will to worship him, to fulfil his purposes eagerly with heart and 4 soul. May he give you a mind open to his law and precepts. May he make 5 peace and answer your prayers, and be reconciled to you and not forsake you in an evil hour. Here and now we are praying for you.

7 In the reign of Demetrius, in the year 169,^a we the Jews wrote to you during the persecution and the crisis that came upon us in those years since the time when Jason and his partisans revolted from the holy land and 8 the kingdom. They set the porch of the temple on fire and shed innocent blood. Then we prayed to the Lord and were answered. We offered a sacrifice and fine flour, we lit the lamps, and set out the Bread of the 9 Presence. And now, you are to observe the celebration of a Feast of Tabernacles in the month Kislev.

10 Written in the year 188.^b

FROM THE PEOPLE of Jerusalem and Judaea, from the Senate, and from Judas, to Aristobulus, the teacher of King Ptolemy and a member of the high-priestly family, and to the Jews in Egypt, greeting and good health.

11 We have been saved by God from great dangers, and give him all thanks, 12 as men standing ready to resist the king. It was God who drove out the enemy force in the holy city.

13 For when the king went into Persia with an army that seemed invincible, they were cut to pieces in the temple of Nanaea through a stratagem 14 employed by Nanaea's priests. Antiochus, along with his Companions, arrived at the temple to marry the goddess, in order to secure the consider-15 able treasure by way of dowry. After this had been laid out by the priests, he went into the temple precinct with a small retinue. When Antiochus 16 entered, the priests shut the sanctuary, opened a secret door in the panelling, and hurled stones at them. The king fell, as if struck by a thunderbolt.
17 They hacked off limbs and heads and threw them to those outside. Blessed in all things be our God, who handed over the evil-doers to death!

We are about to celebrate the purification of the temple on the twenty-fifth of Kislev, and think it right to inform you, so that you also for your part may celebrate a Feast of Tabernacles, in honour of the fire which appeared when Nehemiah offered sacrifices, after he had built the temple and the altar. When our fathers were carried off to Persia, the pious priests of those days secretly took fire from the altar and concealed it in a dry well. It proved a safe hiding-place and remained undiscovered. After many years had passed, in God's good time, Nehemiah was sent back by the king of Persia. He then dispatched the descendants of the priests who had hidden it to get the fire, and they informed our people that they found, not fire, but a thick liquid. Nehemiah ordered them to draw some out and bring it to him. When the materials of the sacrifice had been presented, he ordered the priests to sprinkle this liquid over the wood and the things laid upon it, and this was done. Some time passed; then the sun, which earlier had been hidden by clouds, shone out and the altar burst into a great blaze, so that everyone marvelled. As the sacrifice was burning, the priests offered prayer, they and all those present: Jonathan began and the rest responded, led by Nehemiah.

The prayer was in this style: 'O Lord God, creator of all things, thou the terrible, the mighty, the just, and the merciful, the only King, the only gracious one, the only giver, the only just, omnipotent, and everlasting one, who dost deliver Israel from every evil, who didst choose the patriarchs and set them apart: accept this sacrifice on behalf of thy whole people Israel; they are thy own, watch over them and sanctify them. Gather the dispersed, free those who are in slavery among the heathen, look favourably on the despised and detested; let the heathen know that thou art our God. Punish our oppressors for their insolent brutality and make them suffer torment; but plant thy people in thy holy place, as Moses said.'

Then the priests chanted the hymns. After the materials of the sacrifice had been consumed, Nehemiah further ordered what remained of the liquid to be poured over some great stones.^a At this a flame shot up, but burnt itself out as soon as the fire on the altar outshone it.^b

These events became widely known. The king of Persia was told that, in the place where the priests who were deported had hidden the fire, a liquid had appeared, and that Nehemiah and his companions had used it to burn up the materials of the sacrifice. When he had verified the fact, the king enclosed the site and made it sacred. The custodians he appointed received a share of the very substantial revenue that the king derived from it. Nehemiah and his companions called the liquid 'nephthar', which means 'purification'; but most people call it 'naphtha'.

The records show that it was the prophet Jeremiah who ordered the exiles to hide the fire, as has been mentioned; also that, having given them the law, he charged them not to neglect the ordinances of the Lord, or be led astray by the sight of images of gold and silver with all their finery. In similar words he appealed to them not to abandon the law.

^a what remained . . . stones: so some witnesses; others read that great stones should enclose what remained of the liquid.

^b Or but hardly had the light been reflected from the altar, when it burnt itself out.

4 Further, this document records that, prompted by a divine message, the prophet gave orders that the Tent of Meeting and the ark should go with him. Then he went away to the mountain from the top of which Moses saw
5 God's promised land. When he reached the mountain, Jeremiah found a cave-dwelling; he carried the tent, the ark, and the incense-altar into it,
6 then blocked up the entrance. Some of his companions came to mark out
7 the way, but were unable to find it. When Jeremiah learnt of this he reprimanded them. 'The place shall remain unknown', he said, 'until God finally 8 gathers his people together and shows mercy to them. Then the Lord will bring these things to light again, and the glory of the Lord will appear with the cloud, as it was seen both in the time of Moses and when Solomon 9 prayed that the shrine might be worthily consecrated.'

10 It was also related that Solomon, having the gift of wisdom, offered the dedication sacrifice at the completion of the temple; and that, just as Moses 11 prayed to the Lord and fire came down from heaven and burnt up the sacrificial offerings, so Solomon prayed and the fire came down and consumed the whole-offerings. (Moses said: 'The sin-offering was burnt up 12 in the same way because it was not eaten.') Solomon celebrated the feast for eight days.

13 These same facts are set out in the official records and in the memoirs of Nehemiah. Just as Nehemiah collected the chronicles of the kings, the writings of prophets, the works of David, and royal letters about sacred 14 offerings, to found his library, so Judas also has collected all the books that had been scattered as a result of our recent conflict. These are in our possession, and if you need any of them, send messengers for them.

16 As, then, we are about to celebrate the purification of the temple, we are 17 writing to impress upon you the duty of celebrating this festival. God has saved his whole people and granted to all of us the holy land, the kingship, 18 the priesthood, and the consecration, as he promised by the law; and in him we have confidence that he will soon be merciful to us and gather us from every part of the world to the holy temple. For he has delivered us from great evils and purified the temple.

Preface to this abridgement

19 IN FIVE BOOKS Jason of Cyrene has set out the history of Judas Maccabaeus and his brothers, the purification of the great temple, and the dedication of the altar. He has described the battles with Antiochus
20 Epiphanes and with his son Eupator, and the apparitions from heaven which appeared to those who vied with one another in fighting manfully
21 for Judaism. Few though they were, they ravaged the whole country and routed the foreign hordes; they restored the world-renowned temple, 22 freed the city of Jerusalem, and reaffirmed the laws which were in danger of being abolished. All this they achieved because the Lord was merciful and gracious to them.

23 I These five books of Jason I shall try to summarize in a single work; for I was struck by the mass of statistics and the difficulty which the bulk of the material causes to those wishing to grasp the narratives of this history. I 25 have tried to provide for the entertainment of those who read for pleasure, the convenience of students who must commit the facts to memory, and the profit of even the casual reader. The task which I have taken upon myself 26 in making this summary is no easy one. It means toil and late nights, just 27 as it is no light task for the man who plans a dinner-party and aims to satisfy his guests. Nevertheless, I will gladly undergo this hard labour for the benefit of ^a readers in general. I shall leave to the original author the minute 28 discussion of every detail, and concentrate on the main points of my outline. As the architect of a new house must concern himself with the whole 29 of the structure, while the man who paints in encaustic on the walls needs to discover only what is necessary for the ornamentation, so, I judge, it is with me also. It is the province of the original author of a history to take 30 possession of the field, to spread himself in discussion, and to inquire closely into particular questions. The man who makes a paraphrase must 31 be allowed to aim at conciseness of expression and to omit a full treatment of the subject-matter.

Here, then, without adding anything further, I begin my narrative. It 32 would be absurd to make a lengthy introduction to the history and cut short the history itself.

Syrian oppression of the Jews

DURING THE RULE of the high priest Onias, the holy city enjoyed 3 complete peace and prosperity, and the laws were still observed most scrupulously, because he was a pious man and hated wickedness. The 2 kings themselves held the sanctuary in honour and used to embellish the temple with the most splendid gifts; even Seleucus, king of Asia, bore all 3 the expenses of the sacrificial worship from his own revenues.

But a certain Simon, of the clan Bilgah,^b who had been appointed 4 administrator of the temple, quarrelled with the high priest about the regulation of the city market. Unable to get the better of Onias, he went to 5 Apollonius son of Thrasaeus, then governor of Coele-syria and Phoenicia, and alleged that the treasury at Jerusalem was full of untold riches— 6 indeed the total of the accumulated balances was incalculable and did not correspond with the account for the sacrifices; he suggested that these balances might be brought under the control of the king. When Apollonius 7 met the king, he reported what he had been told about the riches. The king selected Heliodorus, his chief minister, and sent him with orders to remove these treasures.

Heliodorus set off at once, ostensibly to make a tour of inspection of the 8 cities of Coele-syria and Phoenicia, but in fact to carry out the purpose of the king. When he arrived at Jerusalem and had been courteously received 9 by the high priest and the citizens, he explained why he had come: he told them about the allegations and asked if they were in fact true. The high 10 priest intimated that the deposits were held in trust for widows and orphans, apart from what belonged to Hyrcanus son of Tobias, a man of very high standing; the matter was being misrepresented by the impious Simon. In all there were four hundred talents of silver and two hundred of gold. It was unthinkable, he said, that wrong should be done to those who had relied on the sanctity of the place, on the dignity and inviolability of the world-famous temple. But Heliodorus, in virtue of the king's orders, replied that these deposits must without question be handed over to the royal treasury.

He fixed a day and went into the temple to make an inventory. At this there was great distress throughout the whole city. The priests, prostrating themselves in their vestments before the altar, prayed to Heaven, to the Lawgiver who had made deposits sacred, to keep them intact for their rightful owners. The high priest's looks pierced every beholder to the heart, for his face and its changing colour betrayed the anguish of his soul. Alarm and shuddering gripped him, and the pain he felt was clearly apparent to the onlookers. The people rushed pell-mell from their houses to join together in supplication because of the dishonour which threatened the holy place. Women in sackcloth, their breasts bare, filled the streets; unmarried girls who were kept in seclusion ran to the gates or walls of their houses, while others leaned out from the windows; all with outstretched hands made solemn entreaty to Heaven. It was pitiful to see the crowd all lying prostrate in utter confusion, and the high priest in an agony of apprehension.

While the people were calling upon the Lord Almighty to keep the deposits intact and safe for those who had deposited them, Heliodorus proceeded to carry out his decision. But at the very moment when he arrived with his bodyguard at the treasury, the Ruler of spirits and of all powers produced a mighty apparition, so that all who had the audacity to accompany Heliodorus were faint with terror, stricken with panic at the power of God. They saw a horse, splendidly caparisoned, with a rider of terrible aspect; it rushed fiercely at Heliodorus and, rearing up, attacked him with its hooves. The rider was wearing golden armour. There also appeared to Heliodorus two young men of surpassing strength and glorious beauty, splendidly dressed. They stood on either side of him and scourged him, raining ceaseless blows upon him. He fell suddenly to the ground, overwhelmed by a great darkness, and his men snatched him up and put him on a litter. This man, who so recently had entered the treasury with a great throng and his whole bodyguard, was now borne off by them quite helpless, publicly compelled to acknowledge the sovereignty of God. ^a While he lay speechless, deprived by this divine act of all hope of recovery, the Jews were praising the Lord for the miracle he had performed in his own house. The temple, which a short time before was full of alarm and confusion, now overflowed with joy and festivity, because the Lord Almighty had appeared.

Some of Heliodorus's companions hastily begged Onias to pray to the ^a was now . . . of God: so some witnesses; others read they, recognizing the sovereignty of God, now bore off quite helpless.

Most High, and so to spare the life of their master now lying at his very last gasp. The high priest, fearing that the king might suspect that Heliodorus had met with foul play at the hands of the Jews, brought a sacrifice for the man's recovery. As the high priest was making the expiation, the same young men, dressed as before, again appeared to Heliodorus. They stood over him and said: 'Be very grateful to Onias the high priest; for his sake the Lord has spared your life. You have been scourged by God; now tell all men of his mighty power.' When they had said this, they vanished.

Heliodorus offered a sacrifice and made lavish vows to the Lord who had spared his life; then, after taking friendly leave of Onias, he led his troops back to the king. He bore witness to everyone of the miracles of the supreme God which he had seen with his own eyes.

When the king asked him what sort of man would be suitable to send to Jerusalem another time, Heliodorus replied: 'If you have an enemy or someone plotting against your government, that is the place to send him; you will receive him back soundly flogged, if he survives at all, for beyond doubt there is a divine power surrounding the temple. He whose habitation is in heaven watches over it himself and gives it his aid; those who approach the place with evil intent he strikes and destroys.'

So runs the story of Heliodorus and the preservation of the treasury.

BUT THE SIMON MENTIONED EARLIER, the man who had made allegations against his country about the money, slandered Onias, alleging that he had attacked Heliodorus and had been the author of these troubles. He had the effrontery to accuse him of conspiracy against the government—this benefactor of the holy city, this protector of his fellow-Jews, this zealot for the laws. The enmity grew so great that one of Simon's trusted followers even resorted to murder. Onias, realizing that Simon's rivalry was dangerous and that Apollonius son of Menestheus, governor of Coele-syria and Phoenicia, was encouraging his evil ways, paid a visit to the king. He did not appear as an accuser of his fellow-citizens, but as concerned for the interests of all the Jews, both as a nation and as individuals. For he saw that unless the king intervened there could not possibly be peace in public affairs, nor could Simon be stopped in his mad course.

But when Seleucus was dead and had been succeeded by Antiochus, known as Epiphanes, Jason, Onias's brother, obtained the high-priesthood by corrupt means. He petitioned the king and promised him three hundred and sixty talents in silver coin immediately, and eighty talents from future revenue. In addition he undertook to pay another hundred and fifty talents for the authority to institute a sports-stadium, to arrange for the education of young men there, and to enrol in Jerusalem a group to be known as the 'Antiochenes'.^a The king agreed, and, as soon as he had seized the high-priesthood, Jason made the Jews conform to the Greek way of life.

He set aside the royal privileges established for the Jews through the agency of John, the father of that Eupolemus who negotiated a treaty of friendship and alliance with the Romans. He abolished the lawful way of ^a Or enrol the inhabitants of Jerusalem as citizens of Antioch.

12 life and introduced practices which were against the law. He lost no time in 13 establishing a sports-stadium at the foot of the citadel itself, and he made 14 the most outstanding of the young men assume the Greek athlete's hat. So 15 Hellenism reached a high point with the introduction of foreign customs 16 through the boundless wickedness of the impious Jason, no true high 17 priest. As a result, the priests no longer had any enthusiasm for their duties 18 at the altar, but despised the temple and neglected the sacrifices; and in 19 defiance of the law they eagerly contributed to the expenses of the wrestling-20 school whenever the opening gong called them. They placed no value on 21 their hereditary dignities, but cared above everything for Hellenic honours.
22 Because of this, grievous misfortunes beset them, and the very men whose 23 way of life they strove after, and tried so hard to imitate, turned out to be 24 their vindictive enemies. To act profanely against God's laws is no light 25 matter, as will become clear in due time.

18 When the quinquennial games were being held at Tyre in the presence 19 of the king, the blackguard Jason sent, as envoys to represent Jerusalem, 20 Antiochenes carrying three hundred drachmas in cash for the sacrifice to 21 Hercules. Even the bearers thought it improper that this money should be 22 used for a sacrifice, and considered that it should be spent otherwise. So, 23 thanks to the bearers, the money designed by the sender for the sacrifice to 24 Hercules went to fit out the triremes.

21 When Apollonius son of Menestheus was sent to Egypt for the enthronement
22 of King Philometor, Antiochus learnt that Philometor was now hostile
23 to his state, and became anxious for his own security. So he went to Joppa, 24 and then on to Jerusalem, where he was lavishly welcomed by Jason and the 25 city and received with torch-light and ovations. After this, he quartered his 26 army in Phoenicia.

23 Three years later, Jason sent Menelaus, brother of the Simon mentioned 24 above, to convey money to the king and to carry out his directions about 25 urgent business. But Menelaus established his position with the king by 26 acting as if he were a person of great authority, outbid Jason by three 27 hundred talents in silver, and so diverted the high-priesthood to himself.
28 He arrived back with the royal mandate, but with nothing else to make him
29 worthy of the high-priesthood; he still had the temper of a cruel tyrant 30 and the fury of a savage beast. Jason, who had supplanted his own brother, 31 was now supplanted in his turn and forced to flee to Ammonite territory.
32 As for Menelaus, he continued to hold the high-priesthood but without 33 ever paying any of the money he had promised the king, although it was 34 demanded by Sostratus, the commander of the citadel, who was responsible 35 for collecting the revenues. In consequence they were both summoned by 36 the king. As their deputies, Menelaus left his brother Lysimachus, and 37 Sostratus left Crates, the commander of the Cypriots.

30 It was at this point that the inhabitants of Tarsus and Mallus revolted, 31 because their cities had been handed over as a gift to the king's concubine
32 Antiochis. The king hastened off to restore order, leaving as regent 33 Andronicus, one of his ministers. Menelaus, thinking he had obtained a 34 favourable opportunity, made a present to Andronicus of some of the gold 35 plate belonging to the temple which he had appropriated. He had already sold some of it to Tyre and to the neighbouring cities. When Onias heard this on good authority, he withdrew to sanctuary at Daphne near Antioch and denounced him. As a result, Menelaus approached Andronicus privately and urged him to kill Onias. The regent went to Onias bent on treachery; he greeted him, gave him assurances on oath, and persuaded him, though still suspicious, to leave the sanctuary. Then at once, with no respect for justice, he made away with him.

His murder filled not only Jews, but many from other nations as well, with alarm and anger. So when the king returned from Cilicia, the Jews of Antioch sent him a petition about the senseless killing of Onias, the Gentiles sharing in their detestation of the crime. Antiochus was deeply grieved, and was moved to pity and tears as he thought of the prudence and disciplined habits of the dead man. In a burning fury, he immediately stripped Andronicus of the purple, tore off his clothes, led him round the whole city to that very place where he had committed sacrilege against Onias, and there disposed of the murderer. Thus the Lord repaid him with the retribution he deserved.

Lysimachus committed many acts of sacrilegious plunder in Jerusalem with the connivance of Menelaus. When the news of them became public and the people heard that much of the gold plate had been disposed of, they banded together against Lysimachus. Since the crowds were seething with rage and getting out of hand, Lysimachus armed some three thousand men and began to launch a vicious attack, led by a certain Auranus, a man advanced in years and no less in folly. Realizing that the attack came from Lysimachus, some of the crowd seized stones and others blocks of wood, while others again took handfuls of the ashes that were lying round, and there was complete confusion as they all hurled them at Lysimachus and his men. As a result, they wounded many, killed some, and routed them all; the sacrilegious man himself they dispatched near the treasury.

An action was brought against Menelaus in connection with this incident. When the king came to Tyre, the three men sent by the Jewish senate pleaded the case before him. Menelaus's cause was as good as lost; but he promised a large sum of money to Ptolemaeus son of Dorymenes to win over the king. So Ptolemaeus led the king aside into a colonnade, as if to take the air, and persuaded him to change his mind. The king acquitted Menelaus, the cause of all the mischief, dismissed the charges brought against him, and condemned his unfortunate accusers to death, men who would have been discharged as entirely innocent had they appeared even before Scythians. Without more ado those who had pleaded for their city, their people, and their sacred vessels, suffered the unjust penalty. At this, even some of the Tyrians showed their detestation of the crime by providing a splendid funeral for the victims. Menelaus, thanks to the greed of those in power, remained in office. He went from bad to worse, this arch-plotter against his own fellow-citizens.

About this time Antiochus undertook his second invasion of Egypt. Apparitions were seen in the sky all over Jerusalem for nearly forty days: galloping horsemen in golden armour, companies of spearmen standing to arms, swords unsheathed, cavalry divisions in battle order. Charges and countercharges were made on each side, shields were shaken, spears massed and javelins hurled; breastplates and golden ornaments of every kind 4 shone brightly. All men prayed that this apparition might portend good.

5 Upon a false report of Antiochus's death, Jason collected no less than a thousand men and made a surprise attack on Jerusalem. The defenders on the wall were driven back and the city was finally taken; Menelaus took 6 refuge in the citadel, and Jason continued to massacre his fellow-citizens without pity. He little knew that success against one's own kindred is the greatest of failures, and he imagined that the trophies he raised marked the 7 defeat of enemies, not of fellow-countrymen. He did not, however, gain control of the government; he gained only dishonour as the result of his 8 plot, and returned again as a fugitive to Ammonite territory. His career came to a miserable end; for, after being imprisoned by Aretas the ruler of the Arabs, he fled from city to city, hunted by all, hated as a rebel against the laws, and detested as the executioner of his country and his fellow-9 citizens, and finally was driven to take refuge in Egypt. In the end the man who had banished so many from their native land himself died in exile after setting sail for Sparta, where he had hoped to obtain shelter because 10 of the Spartans' kinship with the Jews. He who had cast out many to lie unburied was himself unburied; he had no funeral of any kind, no resting-place in the grave of his ancestors.

11 When news of this reached the king, it became clear to him that Judaea was in a state of rebellion. So he set out from Egypt in savage mood, took 12 Jerusalem by storm, and ordered his troops to cut down without mercy everyone they met and to slaughter those who took refuge in the houses.
13 Young and old were murdered, women and children massacred, girls and 14 infants butchered. At the end of three days their losses had amounted to eighty thousand: forty thousand killed in action, and as many sold into slavery.

15 Not satisfied with this, the king had the audacity to enter the holiest temple on earth, guided by Menelaus, who had turned traitor both to his 16 religion and his country. He laid impious hands on the sacred vessels; his desecrating hands swept together the votive offerings which other kings had set up to enhance the splendour and fame of the shrine.

17 The pride of Antiochus passed all bounds. He did not understand that the sins of the people of Jerusalem had angered the Lord for a short time, 18 and that this was why he left the temple to its fate. If they had not already been guilty of many sinful acts, Antiochus would have fared like Heliodorus who was sent by King Seleucus to inspect the treasury; like him he 19 would have been scourged and his insolent plan foiled at once. But the Lord did not choose the nation for the sake of the sanctuary; he chose the 20 sanctuary for the sake of the nation. Therefore even the sanctuary itself first had its part in the misfortunes that overtook the nation, and afterwards shared its good fortune. It was abandoned when the Lord Almighty was angry, but restored again in all its splendour when he became reconciled.

21 Antiochus, then, carried off eighteen hundred talents from the temple and hastened back to Antioch. In his arrogance he was rash enough to think that he could make ships sail on dry land and men walk over the sea. He 22 left commissioners behind to oppress the Hebrews: in Jerusalem Philip, 23 by race a Phrygian, by disposition more barbarous than his master, and in Mount Gerizim, Andronicus, to say nothing of Menelaus, who was more brutally overbearing to the citizens than the others. Such was the king's hostility towards the Jews that he sent Apollonius, the general of the 24 Mysian mercenaries, with an army of twenty-two thousand men, and ordered him to kill all the adult males and to sell the women and boys into slavery. When Apollonius arrived at Jerusalem, he posed as a man of peace; 25 he waited until the holy sabbath day and, finding the Jews abstaining from work, he ordered a review of his troops. All who came out to see the parade 26 he put to the sword; then, charging into the city with his soldiers, he killed a great number of people.

BUT JUDAS, also called Maccabaeus, with about nine others, escaped 27 into the desert, where he and his companions lived in the mountains, fending for themselves like the wild animals. They remained there living on what vegetation they found, so as to have no share in the pollution.

Shortly afterwards King Antiochus sent an elderly Athenian to force 6 the Jews to abandon their ancestral customs and no longer regulate their lives according to the laws of God. He was also commissioned to pollute 2 the temple at Jerusalem and dedicate it to Olympian Zeus, and to dedicate the sanctuary on Mount Gerizim to Zeus God of Hospitality, following the practice of the local inhabitants.

This evil hit them hard and was a severe trial. The Gentiles filled the 3 4 temple with licentious revelry: they took their pleasure with prostitutes and had intercourse with women in the sacred precincts. They also brought forbidden things inside, and heaped the altar with impure offerings pro- 5 hibited by the law. It was forbidden either to observe the sabbath or to 6 keep the traditional festivals, or to admit to being a Jew at all. On the 7 monthly celebration of the king's birthday, the Jews were driven by brute force to eat the entrails of the sacrificial victims; and on the feast of Dionysus they were forced to wear ivy-wreaths and join the procession in his honour. At the instigation of the inhabitants of Ptolemais^a an order was 8 published in the neighbouring Greek cities to the effect that they should 9 adopt the same policy of compelling the Jews to eat the entrails and should kill those who refused to change over to Greek ways.

Their miserable fate was there for all to see. For instance, two women 10 were brought to trial for having had their children circumcised. They were paraded through the city, with their babies hanging at their breasts, and then flung down from the fortifications. Other Jews had assembled in 11 caves near Jerusalem to keep the sabbath in secret; they were denounced to Philip and were burnt alive, since they scrupled to defend themselves out of regard for the holiness of the day.

Now I beg my readers not to be disheartened by these calamities, but to 12 reflect that such penalties were inflicted for the discipline of our race and not for its destruction. It is a sign of great kindness that acts of impiety 13 should not be let alone for long but meet their due recompense at once.

^a Some witnesses read At the instigation of Ptolemaeus . . .

14 The Lord did not see fit to deal with us as he does with the other nations:
with them he patiently holds his hand until they have reached the full 15 extent of their sins, but upon us he inflicted retribution before our sins 16 reached their height. So he never withdraws his mercy from us; though he 17 disciplines his people by calamity, he never deserts them. Let it be enough for me to have recalled this truth; after this short digression, I must continue with my story.

18 There was Eleazar, one of the leading teachers of the law, a man of great age and distinguished bearing. He was being forced to open his mouth and 19 eat pork, but preferring an honourable death to an unclean life, he spat it 20 out and voluntarily submitted to the flogging, as indeed men should act who have the courage to refuse to eat forbidden food even for love of life.
21 For old acquaintance' sake, the officials in charge of this sacrilegious feast had a word with Eleazar in private; they urged him to bring meat which he was permitted to eat and had himself prepared, and only pretend to be eat-22 ing the sacrificial meat as the king had ordered. In that way he would escape death and take advantage of the clemency which their long-standing friend-23 ship merited. But Eleazar made an honourable decision, one worthy of his years and the authority of old age, worthy of the grey hairs he had attained to and wore with such distinction, worthy of his perfect conduct from child-24 hood up, but above all, worthy of the holy and God-given law. So he answered at once: 'Send me quickly to my grave. If I went through with this pretence at my time of life, many of the young might believe that at the age 25 of ninety Eleazar had turned apostate. If I practised deceit for the sake of a brief moment of life, I should lead them astray and bring stain and pollu-26 tion on my old age. I might for the present avoid man's punishment, but,
27 alive or dead, I shall never escape from the hand of the Almighty. So if I 28 now die bravely, I shall show that I have deserved my long life and leave the young a fine example, to teach them how to die a good death, gladly and nobly, for our revered and holy laws.'

When he had finished speaking, he was immediately dragged away to be 29 flogged. Those who a little while before had shown him friendship now became his enemies because, in their view, what he had said was madness.
30 When he was almost dead from the blows, Eleazar sighed deeply and said:
'To the Lord belongs all holy knowledge. He knows what terrible agony I endure in my body from this flogging, though I could have escaped death; yet he knows also that in my soul I suffer gladly, because I stand in awe of him.'

31 So he died; and by his death he left a heroic example and a glorious memory, not only for the young but also for the great body of the nation.

7 Again, seven brothers with their mother had been arrested, and were being tortured by the king with whips and thongs to force them to eat pork, 2 when one of them, speaking for all, said: 'What do you expect to learn by interrogating us? We are ready to die rather than break the laws of our 3 fathers.' The king was enraged and ordered great pans and cauldrons to be 4 heated up, and this was done at once. Then he gave orders that the spokes-man's tongue should be cut out and that he should be scalped and mutilated before the eyes of his mother and his six brothers. This wreck of a man the king ordered to be taken, still breathing, to the fire and roasted in one of the pans. As the smoke from it streamed out far and wide, the mother and her sons encouraged each other to die nobly. 'The Lord God is watching', they said, 'and without doubt has compassion on us. Did not Moses tell Israel to their faces in the song denouncing apostasy: "He will have compassion on his servants"?' 5 6

After the first brother had died in this way, the second was subjected to the same brutality. The skin and hair of his head were torn off, and he was asked: 'Will you eat, before we tear you limb from limb?' He replied in his native language, 'Never!', and so he in turn underwent the torture. With his last breath, he said: 'Fiend though you are, you are setting us free from this present life, and, since we die for his laws, the King of the universe will raise us up to a life everlastingly made new.' 7 8 9

After him the third was tortured. When the question was put to him, he at once showed his tongue, boldly held out his hands, and said courageously: 'The God of heaven gave me these. His laws mean far more to me than they do, and it is from him that I trust to receive them back.' When they heard this, the king and his followers were amazed at the young man's spirit and his utter disregard for suffering. 10 11 12

When he too was dead, they tortured the fourth in the same cruel way. At the point of death, he said to the king: 'Better to be killed by men and cherish God's promise to raise us again. There will be no resurrection to life for you!' 13 14

Then the fifth was dragged forward for torture. Looking at the king, he said: 'You have authority over men, mortal as you are, and can do as you please. But do not imagine that God has abandoned our race. Wait and see how his great power will torment you and your descendants.' 15 16 17

Next the sixth was brought and said with his dying breath: 'Do not delude yourself. It is our own fault that we suffer these things; we have sinned against our God and brought these appalling disasters upon ourselves. But do not suppose you will escape the consequences of trying to fight against God.' 18 19

The mother was the most remarkable of all, and deserves to be remembered with special honour. She watched her seven sons all die in the space of a single day, yet she bore it bravely because she put her trust in the Lord. She encouraged each in turn in her native language. Filled with noble resolution, her woman's thoughts fired by a manly spirit, she said to them: 'You appeared in my womb, I know not how; it was not I who gave you life and breath and set in order your bodily frames. It is the Creator of the universe who moulds man at his birth and plans the origin of all things. Therefore he, in his mercy, will give you back life and breath again, since now you put his laws above all thought of self.' 20 21 22 23

Antiochus felt that he was being treated with contempt and suspected an insult in her words. The youngest brother was still left, and the king, not content with appealing to him, even assured him on oath that the moment he abandoned his ancestral customs he would make him rich and prosperous, by enrolling him as a King's Friend and entrusting him with high 24

25 office. Since the young man paid no attention to him, the king summoned 26 the mother and urged her to advise the lad to save his life. After much 27 urging from the king, she agreed to persuade her son. She leaned towards him, and flouting the cruel tyrant, she said in their native language: 'My son, take pity on me. I carried you nine months in the womb, suckled you 28 three years, reared you and brought you up to your present age. I beg you, child, look at the sky and the earth; see all that is in them and realize that God made them out of nothing, and that man comes into being in the 29 same way. Do not be afraid of this butcher; accept death and prove yourself worthy of your brothers, so that by God's mercy I may receive you back again along with them.'

30 She had barely finished when the young man spoke out: 'What are you all waiting for? I will not submit to the king's command; I obey the com-31 mand of the law given by Moses to our ancestors. And you, King Antiochus, who have devised all kinds of harm for the Hebrews, you will not 32 33 escape God's hand. We are suffering for our own sins, and though to correct and discipline us our living Lord is angry for a short time, yet he will 34 again be reconciled to his servants. But you, impious man, foulest of the human race, do not indulge vain hopes or be carried away by delusions of 35 greatness, you who lay hands on God's servants. You are not yet safe from 36 the judgement of the almighty, all-seeing God. My brothers have now fallen in loyalty to God's covenant, after brief pain leading to eternal life;^a but 37 you will pay the just penalty of your insolence by the verdict of God. I, like my brothers, surrender my body and my life for the laws of our fathers. I appeal to God to show mercy speedily to his people and by whips and 38 scourges to bring you to admit that he alone is God. With me and my brothers may the Almighty's anger, which has justly fallen on all our race, be ended!'

39 The king, exasperated by these scornful words, was beside himself with 40 rage. So he treated him worse than the others, and the young man died, putting his whole trust in the Lord, without having incurred defilement.
 41 Then finally, after her sons, the mother died.

42 This, then, must conclude our account of the eating of the entrails and the monstrous outrages that accompanied it.

The revolt of Judas Maccabaeus

8 MEANWHILE JUDAS, also called Maccabaeus, and his companions were making their way into the villages unobserved. They summoned their kinsmen and enlisted others who had remained faithful to Judaism, 2 until they had collected about six thousand men. They invoked the Lord to look down and help his people, whom all were trampling under foot, to 3 take pity on the temple profaned by impious men, and to have mercy on Jerusalem, which was being destroyed and would soon be levelled to the lasting life.

ground. They prayed him also to give ear to the blood that cried to him for vengeance, to remember the infamous massacre of innocent children and the deeds of blasphemy against his name, and to show his hatred of wickedness. 4

Once his band of partisans was organized, Maccabaeus proved invincible to the Gentiles, for the Lord's anger had changed to mercy. He came on towns and villages without warning and burnt them; he occupied the key positions, and inflicted many severe reverses on the enemy, choosing the night-time as being especially favourable for these attacks. His heroism^a was talked about everywhere. When Philip realized that the small gains made by Judas were occurring with growing frequency, he wrote to Ptolemaeus, the governor of Coele-syria and Phoenicia, asking for his help in protecting the royal interests. Ptolemaeus immediately selected Nicanor, son of Patroclus, a member of the highest order of King's Friends, and sent him at the head of at least twenty thousand troops of various nationalities to exterminate the entire Jewish race. With him Ptolemaeus associated Gorgias, a general of wide experience. Nicanor determined to pay off the two thousand talents due from the king as tribute to the Romans, by the sale of the Jews he would take prisoner; and he at once made an offer of Jewish slaves to the coastal towns, undertaking to deliver them at the price of ninety to the talent. But he did not expect the vengeance of the Almighty, which was soon to be at his heels. 5 6 7 8 9 10 11

Word of Nicanor's advance reached Judas, and he informed his men that the enemy was at hand. The cowards who doubted God's justice took themselves off and fled. But the rest disposed of their remaining possessions, and they prayed together to the Lord to save them from the impious Nicanor, who had sold them even before they met in battle; and if they could not ask this for their own merits, they did so on the ground of the covenants God had made with their ancestors, and of his holy and majestic Name which they bore. Maccabaeus assembled his followers, six thousand in number, and appealed to them not to flee in panic before the enemy nor to be afraid of the great host which was attacking them without just cause. Rather they should fight nobly, having before their eyes the wicked crimes of the Gentiles against the temple, their callous outrage upon Jerusalem, and, further, their suppression of the traditional Jewish way of life. 'They rely on their weapons and their audacity,' he said, 'but we rely on God Almighty, who is able to overthrow with a nod our present assailants and, if need be, the whole world.' He went on to recount to them the occasions when God had helped their ancestors: how, in Sennacherib's time, one hundred and eighty-five thousand of the enemy had perished, and also how, on the occasion of the battle against the Galatians in Babylonia, all the Jews engaged in the combat had numbered no more than eight thousand, with four thousand Macedonians, yet, when the Macedonians were hard pressed, the eight thousand through heaven's aid had destroyed one hundred and twenty thousand and taken much booty. 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19 20

His words put them in good heart and made them ready to die for their laws and for their country. He then divided the army into four and gave 21 22

^a Or His numerous force.

23 each of his brothers, Simon, Josephus, and Jonathan, command of a division of fifteen hundred men. Besides this, he appointed Eleazar to read the holy book aloud,^a and giving the signal for battle with the cry 'God is 24 our help', and taking command of the leading division in person, he engaged Nicanor. The Almighty fought on their side, and they slaughtered over nine thousand of the enemy, wounded and disabled the greater part of 25 Nicanor's forces, and routed them completely. They seized the money of those who had come to buy them as slaves. After chasing the enemy a con-26 siderable distance, they were forced to break off because it was late; for it was the day before the sabbath, and for that reason they called off the pur-27 suit. When they had collected the enemy's weapons and stripped the dead, they turned to keep the sabbath. They offered thanks and praises loud and long to the Lord who had kept the first drops of his mercy to shed on them 28 that day.^b After the sabbath was over, they distributed some of the spoils among the victims of persecution and the widows and orphans; the 29 remainder they divided among themselves. This done, all together made supplication to the merciful Lord, praying him to be fully reconciled with his servants.

30 The Jews now engaged the forces of Timotheus and Bacchides and killed over twenty thousand of them. They gained complete control of some high strongholds, and divided the immense booty, giving shares equal to their own to the victims of persecution, to the widows and 31 orphans, and to the old men as well. They carefully collected all the enemy's weapons and stored them at strategic points; the remainder of 32 the spoils they brought into Jerusalem. They killed the officer commanding the forces of Timotheus, an utterly godless man who had caused the Jews 33 great suffering. During the victory celebrations in their capital, they burnt alive the men who had set fire to the sacred gates, including Callisthenes, who had taken refuge in a small house; he thus received the due reward of his impiety.

34-35 Thus, by the Lord's help, Nicanor, that double-dyed villain who had brought the thousand merchants to buy the Jewish captives, was humiliated by the very people whom he despised above all others. He threw off his magnificent uniform, and all alone like a runaway slave made his escape through the interior, and was, indeed, very lucky to reach Antioch after 36 losing his whole army. So the man who had undertaken to secure tribute for the Romans by taking prisoner the inhabitants of Jerusalem showed the world that the Jews had a champion and were therefore invulnerable, because they kept the laws he had given them.

9 It so happened that, about this time, Antiochus had returned in dis-2 order from Persia. He had entered the city of Persepolis and attempted to plunder its temples and assume control. But the populace rose and rushed to arms in their defence, with the result that Antiochus was routed by 3 civilians and forced to beat a humiliating retreat. When he was near Ecbatana, news reached him of what had happened to Nicanor and the forces of Timotheus. Transported with fury, he conceived the idea of making the Jews pay for the injury inflicted by those who had put him to flight, and so he ordered his charioteer to drive without stopping until the journey was finished. 4

But riding with him was the divine judgement! For in his arrogance he said: 'When I reach Jerusalem, I will make it a common graveyard for the Jews.' But the all-seeing Lord, the God of Israel, struck him a fatal and invisible blow. As soon as he had said the words, he was seized with incurable pain in his bowels and with sharp internal torments—a punishment entirely fitting for one who had inflicted many unheard-of torments on the bowels of others. Still he did not in the least abate his insolence; more arrogant than ever, he breathed fiery threats against the Jews. After he had given orders to speed up the journey, it happened that he fell out of his chariot as it hurtled along, and so violent was his fall that every joint in his body was dislocated. He, who in his pretension to be more than man had just been thinking that he could command the waves of the sea and weigh high mountains on the scales, was brought to the ground and had to be carried in a litter, thus making God's power^a manifest to all. Worms swarmed even from the eyes of this godless man and, while he was still alive and in agony, his flesh rotted off, and the whole army was disgusted by the stench of his decay. It was so unbearably offensive that nobody could escort the man who only a short time before had seemed to touch the stars in the sky. 5 6 7 8 9 10

In this broken state, Antiochus began to abate his great arrogance. Under God's lash, and racked with continual pain, he began to see things in their true light. He could not endure his own stench and said, 'It is right to submit oneself to God and, being mortal, not to think oneself equal to him.' Then the villain made a solemn promise to the Lord, who had no intention of sparing him any longer, and it was to this effect: Jerusalem the holy city, which he had been hurrying to level to the ground and to transform into a graveyard, he would now declare a free city; to all the Jews, whom he had not considered worthy of burial but only fit to be thrown out with their children as prey for birds and beasts, he would give privileges equal to those enjoyed by the citizens of Athens. The holy temple which he had earlier plundered he would adorn with the most splendid gifts; he would replace all the sacred utensils on a much more lavish scale; he would meet the cost of the sacrifices from his own revenues. In addition to all this, he would even turn Jew and visit every inhabited place to proclaim God's might. 11 12 13 14 15 16 17

When his pains in no way abated, because the just judgement of God had fallen on him, he was in despair and, as a kind of olive branch, wrote to the Jews the letter here copied: 18

To my worthy citizens, the Jews, warm greetings and good wishes for their health and prosperity from Antiochus, King and Chief Magistrate.

May you and your children flourish and your affairs go as you wish. 20

^a Some witnesses read litter. God made his power . . .

21 Having my hope in heaven, I keep an affectionate remembrance of your regards and goodwill.

As I was returning from Persia, I suffered a tiresome illness, and so I have judged it necessary to provide for the general safety of you all. Not that I despair of my condition—on the contrary I have good hopes of recovery—but I observed that my father, whenever he made an expedition east of the Euphrates, appointed a successor, so that, if anything unexpected should happen or if some tiresome report should spread, his subjects would not be disturbed, since they would know to whom the empire had been left. Further, I know well that the neighbouring princes on the frontiers of my kingdom are watching for an opportunity and waiting on events. So I have designated as king my son Antiochus, whom I frequently entrusted and recommended to most of you during my regular visits to the satrapies beyond the Euphrates. I have written to him what is here copied. Wherefore I pray and entreat each one of you to maintain your existing goodwill towards myself and my son, remembering the services I have rendered to you both as a community and as individuals. For I am sure my son will follow my own policy of moderation and benevolence and will accommodate himself to your wishes.

28 Thus this murderer and blasphemer, suffering the worst of agonies, such as he had made others suffer, met a pitiable end in the mountains of a foreign land. His body was brought back by Philip, his intimate friend; but he was afraid of Antiochus's son and went over to Ptolemy Philometor in Egypt.

10 Maccabaeus with his men, led by the Lord, recovered the temple and city of Jerusalem. He demolished the altars erected by the heathen in the public square, and their sacred precincts as well. When they had purified the sanctuary, they constructed another altar; then, striking fire from flints, they offered a sacrifice for the first time for two whole years, and restored the incense, the lights, and the Bread of the Presence. This done, they prostrated themselves and prayed the Lord not to let them fall any more into such disasters, but, should they ever happen to sin, to discipline them himself with clemency and not hand them over to blasphemous and barbarous Gentiles. The sanctuary was purified on the twenty-fifth of Kislev, the same day of the same month as that on which foreigners had profaned it. The joyful celebration lasted for eight days; it was like the Feast of Tabernacles, for they recalled how, only a short time before, they had kept that feast while they were living like wild animals in the mountains and caves; and so they carried garlanded wands and branches with their fruits, as well as palm-fronds, and they chanted hymns to the One who had so triumphantly achieved the purification of his own temple. A measure was passed by the public assembly to the effect that the entire Jewish race should keep these days every year.

The campaign against Eupator

WE HAVE ALREADY RECOUNTED the end of Antiochus called Epiphanes. Now we will describe what happened under that godless man's son, Antiochus Eupator, in a brief summary of the principal evils brought about by his wars. At his accession, Eupator appointed as vicegerent a man called Lysias who had succeeded Ptolemaeus Macron as governor-general of Coele-syria and Phoenicia. For Ptolemaeus had taken the lead in reversing the former unjust treatment of the Jews and had attempted to maintain peaceful relations with them, and as a result he was denounced by the King's Friends to Eupator. On every side he was called traitor, because he had already abandoned Cyprus, entrusted to him by Philometor, and had gone over to Antiochus Epiphanes. He still enjoyed power, but no longer respect, and in despair he ended his life by poison.

When Gorgias became governor, he engaged mercenaries and took every opportunity of attacking the Jews. At the same time the Idumaeans, who were in control of strategic fortresses, were also harassing them; they harboured the fugitives from Jerusalem and tried to carry on the war. Maccabaeus and his men made public supplication and prayed God to fight on their side. They made an assault on the Idumaeen fortresses, pressed the attack vigorously, and captured them; they drove off all who were manning the walls, and killed all they met, to the number of at least twenty thousand.

Nine thousand or more of the enemy took refuge in two towers, very strongly fortified and fully equipped against a siege. Maccabaeus himself set out for the places which were being hard pressed, but left Simon and Josephus behind, with Zacchaeus and his men, enough to prosecute the siege. But Simon's men were too fond of money, and when they were bribed with seventy thousand drachmas by some of those in the towers, they let them slip through their lines. When Maccabaeus was informed of this, he assembled the leaders of the army and denounced these men for having sold their brothers for money by letting their enemies escape. Then he executed the men who had turned traitor, and immediately the two towers fell to him. His military operations were completely successful; in the two fortresses he destroyed over twenty thousand of the enemy.

After his previous defeat by the Jews, Timotheus collected a huge force of mercenaries and Asian cavalry, and advanced to take Judaea by storm. As he approached, Maccabaeus and his men made their prayer to God. They sprinkled dust on their heads and put sackcloth round their waists; they prostrated themselves on the altar-step and begged God to favour them, 'to be an enemy of their enemies and an opponent of their opponents', as the law clearly states.

When they had finished their prayer, they took up their weapons, advanced a good distance from Jerusalem, and halted near the enemy. At first light the two armies joined battle. For the Jews, success and victory were guaranteed not only because of their bravery but even more because the Lord was their refuge, whereas the Gentiles had only their own fury to lead them into battle. As the fighting grew hot, the enemy saw in the sky

30 five magnificent figures riding horses with golden bridles, who placed themselves at the head of the Jews, formed a circle round Maccabaeus, and kept him invulnerable under the protection of their armour. They launched arrows and thunderbolts at the enemy, who, confused and blinded, broke 31 up in complete disorder. Twenty thousand five hundred of the infantry, as well as six hundred cavalry, were slaughtered.

32 Timotheus himself fled to a fortress called Gazara, commanded by 33 Chaereas and strongly garrisoned. Maccabaeus and his men welcomed this, and for four days they laid siege to the place. The garrison, confident in the 34 strength of their position, hurled horrible and impious blasphemies at them, until, at dawn on the fifth day, twenty young men from the force of 35 Maccabaeus, burning with rage at the blasphemy, courageously stormed the wall and in savage anger cut down all they met. Under cover of this distraction others got up the same way, attacked the defenders, set light to the 36 towers, and started fires on which they burnt the blasphemers alive. Others broke down the gates and let in the rest of the army, and thus the 37 city was occupied. Timotheus had hidden himself in a cistern, but he was 38 killed along with his brother Chaereas and Apollophanes. To celebrate their achievement, the Jews praised with hymns and thanksgivings the Lord who showers blessings on Israel and gives them the victory.

11 Very shortly afterwards, Lysias the vicegerent, the king's guardian and
2 relative, angered by these events, collected about eighty thousand troops, in addition to his entire cavalry, and advanced on the Jews. He reckoned
3 on making Jerusalem a settlement for Gentiles, subjecting the temple to taxation like all gentile shrines, and putting up the high-priesthood for sale
4 annually. He reckoned not at all with the might of God, but was elated with his myriads of infantry, his thousands of cavalry, his eighty elephants.
5 Penetrating into Judaea, he approached Bethsura, a fortified place about twenty miles from Jerusalem, and closely invested it.

6 When Maccabaeus and his men learnt that Lysias was besieging their fortresses, they and all the people, wailing and weeping, prayed the Lord
7 to send a good angel to deliver Israel. Maccabaeus was the first to arm himself, and he urged the rest to share his danger and come to the help of their
8 brothers. One and all, they set out eagerly. They were still in the neighbourhood of Jerusalem when there appeared at their head a horseman arrayed
9 in white, brandishing his golden weapons. Then with one voice they praised their merciful God and felt so strong in spirit that they could have 10 attacked not only men but also the most savage animals, and even walls of iron. They came on fully armed, with their heavenly ally, under the mercy
11 of the Lord. They hurled themselves like lions against the enemy, cut down eleven thousand of them, as well as sixteen hundred cavalry, and 12 put all the rest to flight. Most of those who escaped lost their weapons and were wounded, and Lysias saved his life only by running away.

13 Lysias was no fool, and as he took stock of the defeat he had suffered he realized that the Hebrews were invincible, because the mighty God 14 fought on their side. So he proposed a settlement on terms entirely acceptable, promising also to win the king over by putting pressure on him to 15 show friendship to the Jews. Maccabaeus agreed to all the proposals of Lysias out of regard for the general welfare, for the king had accepted all the proposals from the Jewish side which Maccabaeus had forwarded to Lysias in writing.

The letter of Lysias to the Jews ran as follows: 16

Lysias to the Jewish community, greeting.

Your representatives John and Absalom have handed to me the document here copied and have asked me to ratify what is contained in it. Whatever needed to be brought to the king's knowledge, I have communicated to him, and what was within my own competence, I have granted. If, therefore, you maintain your goodwill towards the empire, I for my part will endeavour to promote your welfare for the future. I have ordered your representatives and mine to confer with you about the details. Farewell. 17

The king's letter ran as follows: 22

King Antiochus to his brother Lysias, greeting.

Now that our royal father has gone to join the gods, we desire that our subjects be undisturbed in the conduct of their own affairs. We have learnt that the Jews do not consent to adopt Greek ways, as our father wished, but prefer their own mode of life and request that they be allowed to observe their own laws. We choose, therefore, that this nation like the rest should be left undisturbed, and decree that their temple be restored to them and that they shall regulate their lives in accordance with their ancestral customs. Have the goodness, therefore, to inform them of this and ratify it, so that, knowing what our intentions are, they may settle down confidently and quietly to manage their own affairs. 23

To the people the king's letter ran thus: 27

King Antiochus to the Jewish Senate and people, greeting.

We hope that you prosper. We too are in good health. Menelaus has informed us of your desire to return to your own homes. Therefore we declare an amnesty for all who return before the thirtieth of Xanthicus. The Jews may follow their own food-laws as heretofore, and none of them shall be charged with any previous infringement. I am sending Menelaus to reassure you. Farewell. 28 29

The Romans also sent the Jews the following letter: 34

Quintus Memmius and Titus Manius, Roman legates, to the Jewish people, greeting.

We give our assent to all that Lysias, the king's relative, has granted you. But examine carefully the questions which he reserved for reference to the king; then send someone immediately, so that we may make suitable proposals, for we are proceeding to Antioch. Send messengers therefore without delay, so that we also may know what your opinion is. Farewell. 35

12 When these agreements had been concluded, Lysias went off to the king, 2 and the Jews returned to their farming. But some of the governors in the region, Timotheus and Apollonius son of Gennaëus and also Hieronymus and Demophon, and in addition Nicanor, chief of the Cypriot mercenaries, would not allow them to enjoy security and live in quiet.

3 I MUST NOW DESCRIBE an atrocity committed by the inhabitants of Joppa. They invited the Jews living in the town to embark with their wives and children in boats which they provided, with no indication of any ill 4 will towards them. As it was a public decision by the whole town, and because they wished to live in peace and suspected nothing, they accepted;
 but when they were out at sea, the people of Joppa sank the boats, drowning
 5 no fewer than two hundred of them. When Judas learnt of this brutal 6 treatment of his fellow-countrymen, he alerted his troops, invoked God, the just judge, and fell upon their murderers. He set the harbour of Joppa on fire by night, burnt the shipping, and put to the sword those who had 7 taken refuge there. But finding the town gates closed, he withdrew, mean-
 8 ing however to return and root out the entire community. When he learnt that the people of Jamnia intended to do the same to the Jews who lived 9 among them, he attacked Jamnia by night and set fire to its harbour and fleet; the light of the flames was visible in Jerusalem thirty miles away.

10 When they had marched more than a mile further in their advance against Timotheus, they were set upon by not less than five thousand Arabs, 11 with five hundred cavalry. A violent combat ensued, in which by divine help Judas and his men were victorious. The defeated nomads begged Judas to make an alliance with them, and promised to supply him with 12 cattle and to give the Jews every other kind of help. Judas realized that they could indeed be useful in many ways; so he agreed to make peace with them, and, after receiving assurances from him, they went back to their tents.

13 Judas also attacked Caspin, a walled town, strongly fortified and 14 inhabited by a motley crew of Gentiles. Confident in the strength of their walls and in their store of provisions, the defenders behaved provocatively towards Judas and his men, abusing them and also uttering the most 15 wicked blasphemies. But they invoked the world's great Sovereign who in the days of Joshua threw down the walls of Jericho without battering-rams 16 or siege-engines. They attacked the wall fiercely and, by the will of God, captured the town. The carnage was indescribable; the adjacent lake, a quarter of a mile wide, appeared to be overflowing with blood.

17 Advancing about ninety-five miles from there, they reached Charax, 18 which is inhabited by the Tubian Jews, as they are called. They did not find Timotheus there; he had by that time left the district, having had no success, but in one place he had left behind an extremely strong garrison.
 19 Dositheus and Sosipater, Maccabæus's generals, set out and destroyed 20 the garrison, which consisted of over ten thousand men. Maccabæus for his part grouped his army in several divisions, appointed commanders for them,^a and hurried after Timotheus, whose forces numbered a hundred and twenty thousand infantry and two thousand five hundred cavalry. When he learnt of Judas's approach, Timotheus sent off the women and children with all the baggage to a town called Carnaim, this being an inaccessible place, hard to storm because all the approaches to it were narrow. But when Judas's first division appeared, terror and panic seized the enemy at the manifestation of the all-seeing One. In their flight they rushed headlong in every direction, so that frequently they were injured by their comrades and were run through by the points of their swords. Judas pressed the pursuit vigorously and put thirty thousand of these criminals to the sword. Timotheus himself was taken prisoner by the troops of Dositheus and Sosipater. With much cunning, he begged them to let him go in safety, pointing out that most of them had parents, and some of them brothers, who were in his hands, and might never be heard of again. He pledged himself over and over again to restore these hostages safe and sound; and so they let him go in order to save their relatives.

Judas moved on Carnaim and the sanctuary of Atargatis, and killed twenty-five thousand people there. After this victory and destruction he next marched on Ephron, a fortified town inhabited by a mixed population.^a Stalwart young men took up their position in front of the walls and fought vigorously, while inside there was a great supply of engines of war and ammunition. But the Jews invoked the Sovereign whose might shatters all the strength of the enemy. They made themselves masters of the town and killed twenty-five thousand of the defenders. Leaving that place, they advanced to Scythopolis, some seventy-five miles from Jerusalem. The Jews who lived there testified to the goodwill shown them by the people of Scythopolis and the kindness with which they had treated them in their bad times; so Judas and his men thanked them, and charged them to be equally friendly to the Jewish race for the future. They returned to Jerusalem in time for the Feast of Weeks.

After celebrating Pentecost, as it is called, they advanced to attack Gorgias, the general in charge of Idumaea, who met them with three thousand infantry and four hundred cavalry. When the ranks joined battle, a small number of the Jews fell. But a cavalryman of great strength called Dositheus, one of the Tubian Jews, had hold of Gorgias by his cloak and was dragging the villain off by main force, with the object of taking him alive, when a Thracian horseman bore down on him and chopped off his arm; so Gorgias escaped to Marisa.

Esdrias and his men had been fighting for a long time and were exhausted. But Judas invoked the Lord to show himself their ally and leader in battle. Striking up hymns in his native language as a battle-cry, he put the forces of Gorgias to flight by a surprise attack.

Regrouping his forces, he led them to the town of Adullam. The seventh day was coming on, so they purified themselves, as custom dictated, and kept the sabbath there. Next day they went, as had by now become necessary, to collect the bodies of the fallen in order to bury them with their relatives in the ancestral graves. But on every one of the dead, they found, under the tunic, amulets sacred to the idols of Jamnia, objects which the law forbids to Jews. It was evident to all that here was the reason why these 41 men had fallen. Therefore they praised the work of the Lord, the just 42 judge, who reveals what is hidden; and, turning to prayer, they asked that this sin might be entirely blotted out. The noble Judas called on the people 43 to keep themselves free from sin, for they had seen with their own eyes what had happened to the fallen because of their sin. He levied a contribution from each man, and sent the total of two thousand silver drachmas 44 to Jerusalem for a sin-offering—a fit and proper act in which he took due account of the resurrection. For if he had not been expecting the fallen to rise again, it would have been foolish and superfluous to pray for the dead.

 45 But since he had in view the wonderful reward reserved for those who die a godly death, his purpose was a holy and pious one. And this was why he offered an atoning sacrifice to free the dead from their sin.

13 In the year 149,^a information reached Judas and his men that Antiochus 2 Eupator was advancing on Judaea with a large army; he was accompanied by Lysias, his guardian and vicegerent, bringing in addition a Greek force, consisting of one hundred and ten thousand infantry, five thousand three hundred cavalry, twenty-two elephants, and three hundred chariots armed with scythes.

3 Menelaus also joined them and urged Antiochus on; this he did most disingenuously, not for his country's good, but because he believed he 4 would be maintained in office. However, the King of kings aroused the rage of Antiochus against Menelaus: Lysias produced evidence that this criminal was responsible for all Antiochus's troubles, and so the king ordered him to be taken to Beroea and there to be executed in the manner 5 customary at that place. Now in Beroea there is a tower some seventy-five feet^b high, filled with ashes; it has a circular device sloping down sheer on 6 all sides into the ashes. This is where the citizens take anyone guilty of sacrilege or any other notorious crime, and thrust him to his doom; and 7 such was the fate of the law-breaker Menelaus, who was not even allowed 8 burial—a fate he richly deserved. Many a time he had desecrated the hallowed ashes of the altar-fire, and by ashes he met his death.

9 So the king came on with the barbarous intention of inflicting on the 10 Jews sufferings far worse than his father had inflicted. When Judas heard this he ordered the people to invoke the Lord day and night and pray that now more than ever he would come to their aid, since they were on the 11 point of losing law, country, and temple; and that he would not allow them, just when they had begun to breathe again, to fall into the hands of 12 blaspheming Gentiles. They all obeyed his orders: for three days without respite they prayed to their merciful Lord, they wailed, they fasted, they prostrated themselves. Then Judas urged them to action and called upon them to stand by him.

13 After holding a council of war with the elders, he decided not to wait until the royal army invaded Judaea and took Jerusalem, but to march out and 14 with God's help to bring things to a decision. He entrusted the outcome to the Creator of the world; his troops he charged to fight bravely to the death for the law, for the temple and for Jerusalem, for their country and their way of life. He pitched camp near Modin, and giving his men the signal for battle with the cry 'God's victory!', he made a night attack on the royal pavilion with a picked force of the bravest young men. He killed as many as two thousand in the enemy camp, and his men stabbed to death^a the leading elephant and its driver. In the end they reduced the whole camp to panic and confusion, and withdrew victorious. It was all over by daybreak, through the help and protection which Judas had received from the Lord.

Now that he had had a taste of Jewish daring, the king tried stratagems in attacking their strong-points. He advanced on Bethsura, one of their powerful forts; he was repulsed; he attacked, he was beaten. Judas sent in supplies to the garrison, but a soldier in the Jewish ranks, Rhodocus by name, betrayed their secrets to the enemy. However, he was tracked down, arrested, and put away. The king parleyed for the second time with the inhabitants of Bethsura, and, when he had given and received guarantees, he withdrew; he then attacked Judas and his men, but had the worst of it. He now received news that Philip, whom he had left in charge of state affairs in Antioch, had gone out of his mind. In dismay he summoned the Jews, agreed to their terms, took an oath to respect all their rights, and, after this settlement, offered a sacrifice, paid honour to the sanctuary and its precincts, and received Maccabaeus graciously. He left behind Hegemonides as governor of the region from Ptolemais to Gerra, and went himself to Ptolemais. Its inhabitants were furious at the treaty he had made, and in their alarm wanted to repudiate it. Lysias mounted the rostrum, made the best defence he could, won the people over, calmed them down, and, having thus gained their support, left for Antioch.

Such was the course of the king's offensive and retreat.

The victory of Maccabaeus over Nicanor

AFTER AN INTERVAL of three years, information reached Judas and his men that Demetrius son of Seleucus had sailed into the harbour of Tripolis with a powerful army and fleet, and, after disposing of Antiochus and his guardian Lysias, had taken possession of the country.

There was a man called Alcimus, who had formerly been high priest but had submitted voluntarily to pollutions at the time of the secession. This man, realizing that there was not now the slightest guarantee of his safety, or any possibility of access to the holy altar, came to King Demetrius, about the year 151,^b and presented him with a gold crown and palm, and also some of the customary olive branches from the temple. On that particular occasion he kept quiet; but he found a chance of forwarding his own mad scheme when Demetrius summoned him to his council and questioned him about the attitude and plans of the Jews. He replied: 'Those of the Jews who are called Hasidaeans and are led by Judas Maccabaeus are keeping the war alive and fomenting sedition, refusing to leave the kingdom in peace. Thus, although I have been deprived of my hereditary dignity—I

8 mean the high-priesthood—I am here today from two motives: first, a 9 genuine concern for the king's rights; and secondly, a regard for my 10 fellow-citizens, since our whole race is suffering considerable hardship as 11 a result of the folly of the people I have just mentioned. I would advise 12 your majesty to acquaint yourself with every one of these matters and then 13 make provision for our country and our beleaguered nation, as befits your 14 universal kindness and goodwill. For the empire will enjoy no peace so 15 long as Judas remains alive.⁷

16 When he had spoken to this effect, the other Friends, who were hostile
17 to Judas, immediately inflamed Demetrius still more. The king at once 18 selected Nicanor, commander of the elephant corps, gave him command
19 of Judaea, and sent him off with a commission to dispose of Judas himself
20 and disperse his forces, and to install Alcimus as high priest of the great 21 temple. The gentile population of Judaea, refugees from the attacks of 22 Judas, now flocked to Nicanor, thinking that defeat and misfortune for the 23 Jews would mean prosperity for themselves.

24 When they learnt of Nicanor's offensive and the gentile attack, the Jews 25 sprinkled dust over themselves and prayed to the One who established his 26 people for ever, who never fails to manifest himself when his chosen are in 27 need of help. At their leader's command, they immediately struck camp 28 and joined battle with the enemy at the village of Adasa.^a Simon, the brother of Judas, had fought an engagement with Nicanor, but, because the enemy came up^b unexpectedly, he had suffered a slight reverse. In spite of this, when Nicanor learnt how brave Judas and his troops were and how courageously they fought for their country, he shrank from deciding the issue in battle. So he sent Posidonius, Theodotus, and Mattathias to negotiate a settlement.

29 After a lengthy consideration of the proposals, Judas informed his men 30 of them; they were unanimous in agreeing to make peace. A day was fixed 31 for a private meeting of the leaders. A chariot advanced from each of the 32 two lines, and seats were placed for them; but Judas posted armed men at 33 strategic points ready to deal with any unforeseen treachery on the enemy's 34 part. The discussion between the two leaders was harmonious. Nicanor 35 stayed some time in Jerusalem and behaved correctly; he dismissed the 36 crowds that had flocked round him, and kept Judas always close to himself.
37 He had acquired a real affection for him, and urged him to marry and start 38 a family. So Judas married and settled down to the quiet life of an ordinary 39 citizen.

40 Alcimus noticed their friendliness and got hold of a copy of the agree-41 ment they had concluded. He went to Demetrius and said that Nicanor 42 was pursuing a policy detrimental to the interests of the empire, by ap-43 pointing that traitor Judas King's Friend designate. The king was furious 44 and was provoked by these villainous slanders to write to Nicanor express-45 ing his dissatisfaction with the agreement and ordering him to arrest
46 Maccabaeus and send him at once to Antioch. This message filled Nicanor 47 with dismay; he took it hard that he should have to break his agreement although the man had committed no offence, but since there was no going against the king, he watched for a favourable opportunity of carrying out the order by means of some stratagem. Maccabaeus, however, observed that Nicanor had become less friendly towards him and no longer showed him the same civility. He realized that this unfriendliness boded no good, so he collected a large number of his followers and went into hiding from Nicanor.

When Nicanor recognized that he had been outmanœuvred by the resolute action of Judas, he went to the great and holy temple at the time when the priests were offering the regular sacrifices, and ordered them to surrender Judas to him. The priests declared on oath that they did not know the whereabouts of the wanted man. But Nicanor stretched out his right hand towards the shrine and swore this oath: 'Unless you surrender Judas into my custody, I will raze God's sanctuary to the ground, I will destroy the altar, and on this spot I will build a temple to Dionysus for all the world to see.' With these words he left; but the priests with outstretched hands prayed to Heaven, the constant champion of our race:
'Lord, thou hast no need of anything in the world, yet it was thy pleasure that among us there should be a shrine for thy dwelling-place. Now, Lord, who alone art holy, keep this house, so newly purified, for ever free from defilement.'

A man called Razis, a member of the Jerusalem senate, was denounced to Nicanor. He was very highly spoken of, a patriot who for his loyalty was known as 'Father of the Jews'. In the early days of the secession he had stood his trial for practising Judaism, and with the utmost eagerness had risked life and limb for that cause. Nicanor wished to give clear proof of his hostility towards the Jews, and sent more than five hundred soldiers to arrest Razis; he reckoned that his arrest would be a severe blow to the Jews.
The troops were on the point of capturing the tower where Razis was, and were trying to force the outer door. Then an order was given to set the door on fire, and Razis, hemmed in on all sides, turned his sword on himself. He preferred to die nobly rather than fall into the hands of criminals and be subjected to gross humiliation. In his haste and anxiety he mis-judged the blow, and with the troops pouring through the doors he ran without hesitation on to the wall and heroically threw himself down into the crowd. The crowd hurriedly gave way and he fell in the space they left.
He was still breathing, still on fire with courage; so, streaming with blood and severely wounded, he picked himself up and dashed through the crowd. Finally, standing on a sheer rock, and now completely drained of blood, he took his entrails in both hands and flung them at the crowd. And thus, invoking the Lord of life and breath to give these entrails back to him again, he died.

Nicanor received information that Judas and his men were in the region of Samaria, and he determined to attack them on their day of rest, when it could be done without any danger. Those Jews who were forced to accompany his army said, 'Do not carry out such a savage and barbarous massacre, but respect the day singled out and made holy by the all-seeing One.' The double-dyed villain retorted, 'Is there a ruler in the sky who has 4 ordered the sabbath day to be observed?' The Jews declared, 'The living Lord himself is ruler in the sky, and he ordered the seventh day to be kept 5 holy.' 'But I', replied Nicanor, 'am a ruler on earth, and I order you to take your arms and do your duty to the king.' However, he did not succeed in carrying out his cruel plan.

6 Now Nicanor, in his pretentious and extravagant conceit, had resolved
7 upon erecting a public trophy from the spoils of Judas's forces. But Macca-baeus's confidence never wavered, and he had not the least doubt that he 8 would obtain help from the Lord. He urged his men not to be afraid of the gentile attack, but to bear in mind the aid they had received from heaven 9 in the past and so look to the Almighty for the victory which he would send this time also. He drew encouragement for them from the law and the 10 prophets and, by reminding them of the struggles they had already come through, filled them with a fresh enthusiasm. When he had roused their courage, he gave them their orders, reminding them at the same time of the 11 Gentiles' broken faith and perjury. He armed each one of them, not so much with the security of shield and spear, as with the encouragement that brave words bring; and he also told them of a trustworthy dream he had had, a sort of waking vision, which put them all in good heart.

12 What he had seen was this: the former high priest Onias appeared to him, that great gentleman of modest bearing and mild disposition, apt speaker, and exponent from childhood of the good life. With outstretched 13 hands he was praying earnestly for the whole Jewish community. Next there appeared in the same attitude a figure of great age and dignity, whose wonderful air of authority marked him as a man of the utmost distinction.
14 Then Onias said, 'This is God's prophet Jeremiah, who loves his fellow-15 Jews and offers many prayers for our people and for the holy city.' Jeremiah extended his right hand and delivered to Judas a golden sword, saying as 16 he did so, 'Take this holy sword, the gift of God, and with it crush your enemies.'

17 The eloquent words of Judas had the power of stimulating everyone to bravery and making men out of boys. Encouraged by them, the Jews made up their minds not to remain in camp, but to take the offensive manfully and fight hand to hand with all their strength until the issue was decided.
18 This they did because Jerusalem, their religion, and their temple were in danger. Their fear was not chiefly for their wives and children, not to mention brothers and relatives, but first and foremost for the sacred shrine.
19 The distress of those shut up in Jerusalem was no less, for they were anxious at the prospect of a battle on open ground.

20 All were waiting for the decisive struggle which lay ahead. The enemy had already concentrated his forces; his army was drawn up in order of battle, the elephants stationed in a favourable position and the cavalry 21 ranged on the flank. When Maccabaeus observed the deployment of the troops, the variety of their equipment, and the ferocity of the elephants, with hands upraised he invoked the Lord, the worker of miracles; for he knew that God grants victory to those who deserve it, not because of their 22 military strength but as he himself decides. This was his prayer: 'Master, thou didst send thy angel in the days of Hezekiah king of Judah, and he killed as many as a hundred and eighty-five thousand men in Sennacherib's camp. Now, Ruler of heaven, send once again a good angel to go in front of us spreading fear and panic. May they be struck down by thy strong arm, these blasphemers who are coming to attack thy holy people!' Thus he ended.

Nicanor and his forces advanced with trumpets and war-songs, but Judas and his men joined battle with invocations and prayers. Fighting with their hands and praying to God in their hearts, they killed no fewer than thirty-five thousand men, and were greatly cheered by the divine intervention.

The action was over, and they were joyfully disbanding, when they recognized Nicanor lying dead in his armour. Then with tumultuous shouts they praised their Master in their native language. Judas their leader, who had always fought body and soul on behalf of his fellow-Jews, never losing his youthful patriotism, now ordered Nicanor's head to be cut off, also his hand and arm, and taken to Jerusalem. On arrival there he summoned all the people and stationed the priests before the altar. Then he sent for the men in the citadel, and showed them the head of the blackguardly Nicanor and the hand which this bragging blasphemer had extended against the Almighty's holy temple. He cut out the tongue of the impious Nicanor, and said he would give it to the birds bit by bit; and he gave orders that the evidence of what Nicanor's folly had brought upon him should be hung up opposite the shrine. They all made the sky ring with the praises of the Lord who had shown his power: 'Praise to him who has preserved his own sanctuary from defilement!' Judas hung Nicanor's head from the citadel, a clear proof of the Lord's help, for all to see. It was unanimously decreed that this day should never pass unnoticed but be regularly celebrated. It is the thirteenth of the twelfth month, called Adar in Aramaic, the day before Mordecai's Day. Such, then, was the fate of Nicanor, and from that time Jerusalem has remained in the possession of the Hebrews.

AT THIS POINT I will bring my work to an end. If it is found well written and aptly composed, that is what I myself hoped for; if cheap and mediocre, I could only do my best. For, just as it is disagreeable to drink wine alone or water alone, whereas the mixing of the two gives a pleasant and delightful taste, so too variety of style in a literary work charms the ear of the reader. Let this then be my final word.

the 1990s, the number of people aged 65 and over has increased from 10.7 million to 15.6 million.

As a result of the increase in the number of people aged 65 and over, the number of people aged 65 and over who are dependent on others has also increased. In 1990, there were 1.2 million people aged 65 and over who were dependent on others, but this number has increased to 2.1 million in 2000.

INTRODUCTION

TO THE NEW TESTAMENT

THIS TRANSLATION of the New Testament was undertaken with the object of providing English readers, whether familiar with the Bible or not, with a faithful rendering of the best available Greek text into the current speech of our own time, and a rendering which should harvest the gains of recent biblical scholarship.

It is now some three centuries and a half since King James's men put out what we have come to know as the Authorized Version. Two hundred and seventy years later the New Testament was revised. The Revised Version of the New Testament, which appeared in 1881, marked a new departure especially in that it abandoned the so-called Received Text, which had reigned ever since printed editions of the New Testament began, but which the advance of textual criticism had antiquated. The Revisers no longer followed (as their predecessors had done) the text of the majority of manuscripts, which, being for the most part of late date, had been exposed not only to the accidental corruptions of long-continued copying, but also in part to deliberate correction and 'improvement'. Instead, they followed a very small group of manuscripts, the earliest, and in their judgement the best, of those which had survived. During the years which have passed since their time, textual criticism has not stood still. Manuscripts have been discovered of substantially earlier date than any which the Revisers knew. Other important sources of evidence have been either freshly discovered or made more fully available. Meanwhile the methods of textual criticism have themselves been refined and estimates of the value of particular manuscripts have sometimes been reconsidered. The problem of restoring a form of text as near as possible to the vanished autographs now appears less simple than it did to our predecessors. There is not at the present time any critical text which would command the same degree of general acceptance as the Revisers' text did in its day. Nor has the time come, in the judgement of most scholars, to construct such a text, since new material constantly comes to light, and the debate continues. The present translators therefore could do no other than consider variant readings on their merits, and, having weighed the evidence for themselves, select for translation in each passage the reading which to the best of their judgement seemed most likely to represent what the author wrote. Where other readings seemed to deserve serious consideration they have been recorded in footnotes. In assessing the evidence, the translators have taken into account (a) ancient manuscripts of the New Testament in Greek, (b) manuscripts of early translations into other languages, and (c) quotations from the New Testament by early Christian writers. These three sources of evidence are collectively referred to as 'witnesses'. A large number of variants, however, are such as could make no appreciable difference to the meaning so far as it could be represented in translation, and these have been passed over in silence. The translators are well aware that their judgement is at best provisional, but they believe the text they have followed to be an improvement on that underlying the earlier translations. This text can now be read in The Greek New Testament, edited by R. V. G. Tasker (Oxford and Cambridge University Presses, 1964).

So much for the text. The next step was the effort to understand the original as accurately as possible, as a preliminary to turning it into English. The Revisers of 1881 believed that a better knowledge of the Greek language made it possible to correct a number of mistranslations in the older version, though in doing so they were somewhat limited by the instruction 'to introduce as few alterations as possible . . . consistently with faithfulness'. Since their time the study of the Greek language has no more stood still than has textual criticism. In particular, our knowledge of the kind of Greek used by most of the New Testament writers has been greatly enriched since 1881 by the discovery of many thousands of papyrus documents in popular or non-literary Greek of about the same period as the New Testament. It would be wrong to suggest that they lead to any far-reaching change in our understanding of the Greek of the New Testament period, but they have often made possible a better appreciation of the finer shades of idiom, which sometimes clarifies the meaning of passages in the New Testament. Its language is indeed in many respects more flexible and easy-going than the Revisers were ready to allow, and invites the translator to use a larger freedom.

Our task, however, differed in an important respect from that of the Revisers of 1881. They were instructed not only to introduce as few alterations as possible, but also 'to limit, as far as possible, the expression of such alterations to the language of the Authorised and earlier English Versions'. The present translators were subject to no such limitation. In accordance with the original decision of the Joint Committee they were to make the attempt to use consistently the idiom of contemporary English to convey the meaning of the Greek.

The older translators, on the whole, considered that fidelity to the original demanded that they should reproduce, as far as possible, characteristic features of the language in which it was written, such as the syntactical order of words, the structure and division of sentences, and even such irregularities of grammar as were indeed natural enough to authors writing in the easy idiom of popular Hellenistic Greek, but less natural when turned into English. The present translators were enjoined to replace Greek constructions and idioms by those of contemporary English.

This meant a different theory and practice of translation, and one which laid a heavier burden on the translators. Fidelity in translation was not to mean keeping the general framework of the original intact while replacing Greek words by English words more or less equivalent. A word, indeed, in one language is seldom the exact equivalent of a word in a different language. Each word is the centre of a whole cluster of meanings and associations, and in different languages these clusters overlap but do not often coincide. The place of a word in the clause or sentence, or even in a larger unit of thought, will determine what aspect of its total meaning is in the foreground. The translator can hardly hope to convey in another language every shade of meaning that attaches to the word in the original, but if he is free to exploit a wide range of English words covering a similar area of meaning and association he may hope to carry over the meaning of the sentence as a whole. Thus we have not felt obliged (as did the Revisers of 1881) to make an effort to render the same Greek word everywhere by the same English word. We have in this respect returned to the wholesome practice of King James's men, who (as they expressly state in their preface) recognized no such obligation.

We have conceived our task to be that of understanding the original as precisely as we could (using all available aids), and then saying again in our own native idiom what we believed the author to be saying in his. We have found that in practice this frequently compelled us to make decisions where the older method of translation allowed a comfortable ambiguity. In such places we have been aware that we take a risk, but we have thought it our duty to take the risk rather than remain on the fence.

In doing our work, we have constantly striven to follow our instructions and render the Greek, as we understood it, into the English of the present day, that is, into the natural vocabulary, constructions, and rhythms of contemporary speech. We have sought to avoid archaism, jargon, and all that is either stilted or slipshod.

It should be said that our intention has been to offer a translation in the strict sense, and not a paraphrase, and we have not wished to encroach on the field of the commentator. But if the best commentary is a good translation, it is also true that every intelligent translation is in a sense a paraphrase. The line between translation and paraphrase is a fine one. But we have had recourse to deliberate paraphrase with great caution, and only in a few passages where without it we could see no way to attain our aim of making the meaning as clear as it could be made. Taken as a whole, our version claims to be a translation, free, it may be, rather than literal, but a faithful translation nevertheless, so far as we could compass it.

For this edition, the translation of the New Testament has been given a careful revision, in which account has been taken of numerous criticisms and suggestions which have come in from various quarters. It is hoped that the modifications introduced, mostly in minor details and seldom reflecting any substantial change of view about the meaning of a passage, will be found to be in the direction of improvement.

In the course of revision, consideration has been given to passages from the Old Testament quoted in the New. These have now been harmonized with the present version of the Old Testament, where this seemed desirable, and practicable. But the quotations are in Greek, and the Greek is by no means always an exact equivalent of the Hebrew. Where it is not, we have deemed it our duty to render the Greek as it lay before us, and not to attempt to reproduce the underlying Hebrew. On this point there has been consultation between representatives of the Old and the New Testament panels.

The translators are as conscious as anyone can be of the limitations and imperfections of their work. No one who has not tried it can know how impossible an art translation is. Only those who have meditated long upon the Greek original are aware of the richness and subtlety of meaning that may lie even within the most apparently simple sentence, or know the despair that attends all efforts to bring it out through the medium of a different language. Yet we may hope that we have been able to convey to our readers something at least of what the New Testament has said to us during these years of work, and trust that under the providence of Almighty God this translation may open the truth of the Scriptures to many who have been hindered in their approach to it by barriers of language.

MARGINAL NUMBERS

THE conventional verse divisions in the New Testament date only from 1551 and have no basis in the manuscripts. Any system of division into numbered verses is foreign to the spirit of this translation, which is intended to convey the meaning in continuous natural English rather than to correspond sentence by sentence with the Greek.

For purposes of reference, and of comparison with other translations, verse numbers are placed in the margin opposite the line in which the first word belonging to the verse in question appears. Sometimes, however, successive verses are combined in a continuous English sentence, so that the precise point where a new verse begins cannot be fixed; occasionally in the interests of clarity the order of successive verses is reversed (e.g. at John 4. 7, 8).

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO MATTHEW

The coming of Christ

A TABLE OF THE DESCENT of Jesus Christ, son of David, 1 son of Abraham.

Abraham was the father of Isaac, Isaac of Jacob, Jacob of Judah 2 and his brothers, Judah of Perez and Zarah (their mother was Tamar), 3 Perez of Hezron, Hezron of Ram, Ram of Amminadab, Amminadab of 4
Nahshon, Nahshon of Salma, Salma of Boaz (his mother was Rahab), 5 Boaz of Obed (his mother was Ruth), Obed of Jesse; and Jesse was the 6 father of King David.

David was the father of Solomon (his mother had been the wife of 7 Uriah), Solomon of Rehoboam, Rehoboam of Abijah, Abijah of Asa, 8
Asa of Jehoshaphat, Jehoshaphat of Joram, Joram of Azariah, Azariah of 9
Jotham, Jotham of Ahaz, Ahaz of Hezekiah, Hezekiah of Manasseh, 10 Manasseh of Amon, Amon of Josiah; and Josiah was the father of Jeconiah 11 and his brothers at the time of the deportation to Babylon.

After the deportation Jeconiah was the father of Shealtiel, Shealtiel of 12
Zerubbabel, Zerubbabel of Abiud, Abiud of Eliakim, Eliakim of Azor, 13
Azor of Zadok, Zadok of Achim, Achim of Eliud, Eliud of Eleazar, Eleazar 14 15 of Matthan, Matthan of Jacob, Jacob of Joseph, the husband of Mary, who 16 gave birth to^a Jesus called Messiah.

There were thus fourteen generations in all from Abraham to David, 17 fourteen from David until the deportation to Babylon, and fourteen from the deportation until the Messiah.

THIS IS THE STORY of the birth of the Messiah. Mary his mother was 18 betrothed to Joseph; before their marriage she found that she was with 19 child by the Holy Spirit. Being a man of principle, and at the same time wanting to save her from exposure, Joseph desired to have the marriage contract set aside quietly. He had resolved on this, when an angel of 20 the Lord appeared to him in a dream. 'Joseph son of David,' said the angel,
'do not be afraid to take Mary home with you as your wife. It is by the Holy Spirit that she has conceived this child. She will bear a son; and you 21 shall give him the name Jesus (Saviour), for he will save his people from their sins.' All this happened in order to fulfil what the Lord declared 22 through the prophet: 'The virgin will conceive and bear a son, and he 23

^a Some witnesses read Joseph, to whom was betrothed Mary, a virgin, who gave birth to . . . ; one witness has Joseph, and Joseph, to whom Mary, a virgin, was betrothed, was the father of . . .

24 shall be called Emmanuel', a name which means 'God is with us'. Rising from sleep Joseph did as the angel had directed him; he took Mary home 25 to be his wife, but had no intercourse with her until her son was born. And he named the child Jesus.

2 JESUS WAS BORN at Bethlehem in Judaea during the reign of Herod.
2 After his birth astrologers from the east arrived in Jerusalem, asking, 'Where is the child who is born to be king of the Jews?'^a We observed the rising of 3 his star, and we have come to pay him homage.' King Herod was greatly 4 perturbed when he heard this; and so was the whole of Jerusalem. He called a meeting of the chief priests and lawyers of the Jewish people, and put before them the question: 'Where is it that the Messiah is to be born?'
5 'At Bethlehem in Judaea', they replied; and they referred him to the 6 prophecy which reads: 'Bethlehem in the land of Judah, you are far from least in the eyes of^b the rulers of Judah; for out of you shall come a leader to be the shepherd of my people Israel.'

7 Herod next called the astrologers to meet him in private, and ascertained 8 from them the time when the star had appeared. He then sent them on to Bethlehem, and said, 'Go and make a careful inquiry for the child. When you have found him, report to me, so that I may go myself and pay him homage.'

9 They set out at the king's bidding; and the star which they had seen at its rising went ahead of them until it stopped above the place where the 10 11 child lay. At the sight of the star they were overjoyed. Entering the house, they saw the child with Mary his mother, and bowed to the ground in homage to him; then they opened their treasures and offered him gifts:
12 gold, frankincense, and myrrh. And being warned in a dream not to go back to Herod, they returned home another way.

13 After they had gone, an angel of the Lord appeared to Joseph in a dream, and said to him, 'Rise up, take the child and his mother and escape with them to Egypt, and stay there until I tell you; for Herod 14 is going to search for the child to do away with him.' So Joseph rose from sleep, and taking mother and child by night he went away with 15 them to Egypt, and there he stayed till Herod's death. This was to fulfil what the Lord had declared through the prophet: 'I called my son out of Egypt.'

16 When Herod saw how the astrologers had tricked him he fell into a passion, and gave orders for the massacre of all children in Bethlehem and its neighbourhood, of the age of two years or less, corresponding with 17 the time he had ascertained from the astrologers. So the words spoken 18 through Jeremiah the prophet were fulfilled: 'A voice was heard in Rama, wailing and loud laments; it was Rachel weeping for her children, and refusing all consolation, because they were no more.'

19 The time came that Herod died; and an angel of the Lord appeared in 20 a dream to Joseph in Egypt and said to him, 'Rise up, take the child and his mother, and go with them to the land of Israel, for the men who threatened 21 the child's life are dead.' So he rose, took mother and child with him, and came to the land of Israel. Hearing, however, that Archelaus had succeeded 22 his father Herod as king of Judaea, he was afraid to go there. And being warned by a dream, he withdrew to the region of Galilee; there he settled in 23 a town called Nazareth. This was to fulfil the words spoken through the prophets: 'He shall be called a Nazarene.'

ABOUT THAT TIME John the Baptist appeared as a preacher in the 3 Judaeen wilderness; his theme was: 'Repent; for the kingdom of Heaven is upon you!' It is of him that the prophet Isaiah spoke when he said, 2
'A voice crying aloud in the wilderness, "Prepare a way for the Lord; clear a straight path for him."' 3

John's clothing was a rough coat of camel's hair, with a leather belt 4 round his waist, and his food was locusts and wild honey. They flocked to 5 him from Jerusalem, from all Judaea, and the whole Jordan valley, and 6 were baptized by him in the River Jordan, confessing their sins.

When he saw many of the Pharisees and Sadducees coming for baptism 7 he said to them: 'You vipers' brood! Who warned you to escape from the coming retribution? Then prove your repentance by the fruit it bears; 8 and do not presume to say to yourselves, "We have Abraham for our father." I tell you that God can make children for Abraham out of these 9 stones here. Already the axe is laid to the roots of the trees; and every tree 10 that fails to produce good fruit is cut down and thrown on the fire. I baptize 11 you with water, for repentance; but the one who comes after me is mightier than I. I am not fit to take off his shoes. He will baptize you with the Holy 12 Spirit and with fire. His shovel is ready in his hand and he will winnow his threshing-floor; the wheat he will gather into his granary, but he will burn the chaff on a fire that can never go out.'

Then Jesus arrived at the Jordan from Galilee, and came to John to be 13 baptized by him. John tried to dissuade him. 'Do you come to me?' he 14 said; 'I need rather to be baptized by you.' Jesus replied, 'Let it be so for the present; we do well to conform in this way with all that God requires.' 15 John then allowed him to come. After baptism Jesus came up out of the water at once, and at that moment heaven opened; he saw the Spirit of 16
God descending like a dove to alight upon him; and a voice from heaven was heard saying, 'This is my Son, my Beloved,^a on whom my favour 17 rests.'

JESUS WAS THEN LED AWAY by the Spirit into the wilderness, to be 4 tempted by the devil.

For forty days and nights he fasted, and at the end of them he was 2 famished. The tempter approached him and said, 'If you are the Son of God, tell these stones to become bread.' Jesus answered, 'Scripture says, 3
"Man cannot live on bread alone; he lives on every word that God utters."' 4

The devil then took him to the Holy City and set him on the parapet of 5 the temple. 'If you are the Son of God,' he said, 'throw yourself down; for Scripture says, "He will put his angels in charge of you, and they will 6 support you in their arms, for fear you should strike your foot against

^a Or This is my only Son.

- 7 a stone.” Jesus answered him, ‘Scripture says again, “You are not to put the Lord your God to the test.”’
- 8 Once again, the devil took him to a very high mountain, and showed him
9 all the kingdoms of the world in their glory. ‘All these’, he said, ‘I will give 10 you, if you will only fall down and do me homage.’ But Jesus said, ‘Begone, Satan! Scripture says, “You shall do homage to the Lord your God and worship him alone.”’
- 11 Then the devil left him; and angels appeared and waited on him.
- 12 When he heard that John had been arrested, Jesus withdrew to Galilee;
13 and leaving Nazareth he went and settled at Capernaum on the Sea of 14 Galilee, in the district of Zebulun and Naphtali. This was to fulfil the pas-15 sage in the prophet Isaiah which tells of ‘the land of Zebulun, the land of Naphtali, the Way of the Sea, the land beyond Jordan, heathen Galilee’, and says:
- 16 ‘The people that lived in darkness saw a great light;
light dawned on the dwellers in the land of death’s dark shadow.’
- 17 From that day Jesus began to proclaim the message: ‘Repent; for ^a the kingdom of Heaven is upon you.’

- 18 JESUS WAS WALKING by the Sea of Galilee when he saw two brothers, 19 Simon called Peter and his brother Andrew, casting a net into the lake;
20 for they were fishermen. Jesus said to them, ‘Come with me, and I will 21 make you fishers of men.’ And at once they left their nets and followed him.
- 22 He went on, and saw another pair of brothers, James son of Zebedee 23 and his brother John; they were in the boat with their father Zebedee, 24 overhauling their nets. He called them, and at once they left the boat and 25 their father, and followed him.
- 26 He went round the whole of Galilee, teaching in the synagogues, preaching the gospel of the Kingdom, and curing whatever illness or infirmity 27 there was among the people. His fame reached the whole of Syria; and 28 sufferers from every kind of illness, racked with pain, possessed by devils, 29 epileptic, or paralysed, were all brought to him, and he cured them. Great 30 crowds also followed him, from Galilee and the Ten Towns, ^b from Jerusalem and Judaea, and from Transjordan.

The Sermon on the Mount

- 5 WHEN HE SAW the crowds he went up the hill. There he took his seat, 2 and when his disciples had gathered round him he began to address them. And this is the teaching he gave:
- 3 ‘How blest are those who know their need of God;
the kingdom of Heaven is theirs.
- 4 How blest are the sorrowful;
they shall find consolation.

^a Some witnesses omit Repent; for.

^b Greek Decapolis.

How blest are those of a gentle spirit ; 5
 they shall have the earth for their possession.
 How blest are those who hunger and thirst to see right prevail ; ^a 6 they shall be satisfied.
 How blest are those who show mercy ; 7 mercy shall be shown to them.
 How blest are those whose hearts are pure ; 8
 they shall see God.
 How blest are the peacemakers ; 9
 God shall call them his sons.
 How blest are those who have suffered persecution for the cause of right ; 10
 the kingdom of Heaven is theirs.

'How blest you are, when you suffer insults and persecution and every 11 kind of calumny for my sake. Accept it with gladness and exultation, for 12 you have a rich reward in heaven ; in the same way they persecuted the prophets before you.

'You are salt to the world. And if salt becomes tasteless, how is its salt- 13 ness to be restored? It is now good for nothing but to be thrown away and trodden underfoot.

'You are light for all the world. A town that stands on a hill cannot be 14 hidden. When a lamp is lit, it is not put under the meal-tub, but on the 15 lamp-stand, where it gives light to everyone in the house. And you, like 16 the lamp, must shed light among your fellows, so that, when they see the good you do, they may give praise to your Father in heaven.

'DO NOT SUPPOSE that I have come to abolish the Law and the prophets ; 17
 I did not come to abolish, but to complete. I tell you this : so long as heaven 18 and earth endure, not a letter, not a stroke, will disappear from the Law until all that must happen has happened. ^b If any man therefore sets aside 19 even the least of the Law's demands, and teaches others to do the same, he will have the lowest place in the kingdom of Heaven, whereas anyone who keeps the Law, and teaches others so, will stand high in the kingdom of Heaven. I tell you, unless you show yourselves far better men than the 20 Pharisees and the doctors of the law, you can never enter the kingdom of Heaven.

'You have learned that our forefathers were told, "Do not commit 21 murder ; anyone who commits murder must be brought to judgement."
 But what I tell you is this : Anyone who nurses anger against his brother ^c 22 must be brought to judgement. If he abuses his brother he must answer for it to the court ; if he sneers at him he will have to answer for it in the fires of hell.

'If, when you are bringing your gift to the altar, you suddenly remember 23 that your brother has a grievance against you, leave your gift where it is 24 before the altar. First go and make your peace with your brother, and only then come back and offer your gift.

^a Or to do what is right. ^b Or before all that it stands for is achieved. ^c Some 25 'If someone sues you, come to terms with him promptly while you are 26 both on your way to court; otherwise he may hand you over to the judge, and the judge to the constable, and you will be put in jail. I tell you, once you are there you will not be let out till you have paid the last farthing.

27 'You have learned that they were told, "Do not commit adultery."
28 But what I tell you is this: If a man looks on a woman with a lustful eye, he has already committed adultery with her in his heart.

29 'If your right eye is your undoing, tear it out and fling it away; it is better for you to lose one part of your body than for the whole of it to be thrown 30 into hell. And if your right hand is your undoing, cut it off and fling it away; it is better for you to lose one part of your body than for the whole of it to go to hell.

31 'They were told, "A man who divorces his wife must give her a note of 32 dismissal." But what I tell you is this: If a man divorces his wife for any cause other than unchastity he involves her in adultery; and anyone who marries a divorced woman commits adultery.

33 'Again, you have learned that our forefathers were told, "Do not break 34 your oath", and, "Oaths sworn to the Lord must be kept." But what I tell you is this: You are not to swear at all—not by heaven, for it is God's 35 throne, nor by earth, for it is his footstool, nor by Jerusalem, for it is the 36 city of the great King, nor by your own head, because you cannot turn 37 one hair of it white or black. Plain "Yes" or "No" is all you need to say; anything beyond that comes from the devil.

38 'You have learned that they were told, "Eye for eye, tooth for tooth."
39 But what I tell you is this: Do not set yourself against the man who wrongs
you. If someone slaps you on the right cheek, turn and offer him your left.
40 If a man wants to sue you for your shirt, let him have your coat as well.
42 If a man in authority makes you go one mile, go with him two. Give when you are asked to give; and do not turn your back on a man who wants to borrow.

43 'You have learned that they were told, "Love your neighbour, hate your 44 enemy." But what I tell you is this: Love your enemies^a and pray for your 45 persecutors;^b only so can you be children of your heavenly Father, who makes his sun rise on good and bad alike, and sends the rain on the honest 46 and the dishonest. If you love only those who love you, what reward can 47 you expect? Surely the tax-gatherers do as much as that. And if you greet only your brothers, what is there extraordinary about that? Even the 48 heathen do as much. There must be no limit to your goodness, as your heavenly Father's goodness knows no bounds.

6 'BE CAREFUL not to make a show of your religion before men; if you do, no reward awaits you in your Father's house in heaven.

2 'Thus, when you do some act of charity, do not announce it with a flourish of trumpets, as the hypocrites do in synagogue and in the streets to win 3 admiration from men. I tell you this: they have their reward already. No; when you do some act of charity, do not let your left hand know what your right is doing; your good deed must be secret, and your Father who sees 4 what is done in secret will reward you.^a

'Again, when you pray, do not be like the hypocrites; they love to say 5 their prayers standing up in synagogue and at the street-corners, for everyone to see them. I tell you this: they have their reward already. But 6 when you pray, go into a room by yourself, shut the door, and pray to your Father who is there in the secret place; and your Father who sees what is secret will reward you.^a

'In your prayers do not go babbling on like the heathen, who imagine 7 that the more they say the more likely they are to be heard. Do not imitate 8 them. Your Father knows what your needs are before you ask him.

'This is how you should pray: 9

"Our Father in heaven,
thy name be hallowed;
thy kingdom come,
thy will be done,
on earth as in heaven.
Give us today our daily bread.^b
Forgive us the wrong we have done,
as we have forgiven those who have wronged us.
And do not bring us to the test,
but save us from the evil one."^{c d}

For if you forgive others the wrongs they have done, your heavenly Father 14 will also forgive you; but if you do not forgive others, then the wrongs you 15 have done will not be forgiven by your Father.

'So too when you fast, do not look gloomy like the hypocrites: they make 16 their faces unsightly so that other people may see that they are fasting.
I tell you this: they have their reward already. But when you fast, anoint 17 your head and wash your face, so that men may not see that you are fasting, 18 but only your Father who is in the secret place; and your Father who sees what is secret will give you your reward.

'DO NOT STORE UP for yourselves treasure on earth, where it grows rusty 19 and moth-eaten, and thieves break in to steal it. Store up treasure in 20 heaven, where there is no moth and no rust to spoil it, no thieves to break in and steal. For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also. 21

'The lamp of the body is the eye. If your eyes are sound, you will have 22 light for your whole body; if the eyes are bad, your whole body will be in 23 darkness. If then the only light you have is darkness, the darkness is doubly dark.

'No servant can be the slave of two masters; for either he will hate the 24
first and love the second, or he will be devoted to the first and think nothing of the second. You cannot serve God and Money.

'Therefore I bid you put away anxious thoughts about food and drink 25 to keep you alive, and clothes to cover your body. Surely life is more than 26 food, the body more than clothes. Look at the birds of the air; they do not sow and reap and store in barns, yet your heavenly Father feeds them. You 27 are worth more than the birds! Is there a man of you who by anxious 28 thought can add a foot to his height^a? And why be anxious about clothes?

 Consider how the lilies grow in the fields; they do not work, they do not 29 spin;^b and yet, I tell you, even Solomon in all his splendour was not 30 attired like one of these. But if that is how God clothes the grass in the fields, which is there today, and tomorrow is thrown on the stove, will he 31 not all the more clothe you? How little faith you have! No, do not ask anxiously, "What are we to eat? What are we to drink? What shall we 32 wear?" All these are things for the heathen to run after, not for you, 33 because your heavenly Father knows that you need them all. Set your mind on God's kingdom and his justice before everything else, and all the 34 rest will come to you as well. So do not be anxious about tomorrow; tomorrow will look after itself. Each day has troubles enough of its own.

- 1 2 'PASS NO JUDGEMENT, and you will not be judged. For as you judge others, so you will yourselves be judged, and whatever measure you deal 3 out to others will be dealt back to you. Why do you look at the speck of sawdust in your brother's eye, with never a thought for the great plank in 4 your own? Or how can you say to your brother, "Let me take the speck out
 5 of your eye", when all the time there is that plank in your own? You hypocrite! First take the plank out of your own eye, and then you will see clearly to take the speck out of your brother's.
- 6 'Do not give dogs what is holy; do not throw your pearls to the pigs:
 they will only trample on them, and turn and tear you to pieces.
- 7 'Ask, and you will receive; seek, and you will find; knock, and the door 8 will be opened. For everyone who asks receives, he who seeks finds, and to him who knocks, the door will be opened.
- 9 'Is there a man among you who will offer his son a stone when he asks o 11 for bread, or a snake when he asks for fish? If you, then, bad as you are, know how to give your children what is good for them, how much more will your heavenly Father give good things to those who ask him!
- 12 'Always treat others as you would like them to treat you: that is the Law and the prophets.
- 13 'Enter by the narrow gate. The gate is wide that leads to perdition, 14 there is plenty of room on the road,^c and many go that way; but the gate that leads to life is small and the road is narrow,^d and those who find it are few.
- 15 'Beware of false prophets, men who come to you dressed up as sheep 16 while underneath they are savage wolves. You will recognize them by the fruits they bear. Can grapes be picked from briars, or figs from thistles?
 17 In the same way, a good tree always yields good fruit, and a poor tree bad fruit. A good tree cannot bear bad fruit, or a poor tree good fruit. And when a tree does not yield good fruit it is cut down and burnt. That is why I say you will recognize them by their fruits. 18 19 20

'Not everyone who calls me "Lord, Lord" will enter the kingdom of Heaven, but only those who do the will of my heavenly Father. When that day comes, many will say to me, "Lord, Lord, did we not prophesy in your name, cast out devils in your name, and in your name perform many miracles?" Then I will tell them to their face, "I never knew you; out of my sight, you and your wicked ways!"' 21 22 23

'What then of the man who hears these words of mine and acts upon them? He is like a man who had the sense to build his house on rock. The rain came down, the floods rose, the wind blew, and beat upon that house; but it did not fall, because its foundations were on rock. But what of the man who hears these words of mine and does not act upon them? He is like a man who was foolish enough to build his house on sand. The rain came down, the floods rose, the wind blew, and beat upon that house; down it fell with a great crash.' 24 25 26 27

When Jesus had finished this discourse the people were astounded at his teaching; unlike their own teachers he taught with a note of authority. 28 29

Teaching and healing

AFTER HE HAD COME DOWN from the hill he was followed by a great crowd. And now a leper^a approached him, bowed low, and said, 'Sir, if only you will, you can cleanse me.' Jesus stretched out his hand, touched him, and said, 'Indeed I will; be clean again.' And his leprosy was cured immediately. Then Jesus said to him, 'Be sure you tell nobody; but go and show yourself to the priest, and make the offering laid down by Moses for your cleansing; that will certify the cure.' 8 2 3 4

When he had entered Capernaum a centurion came up to ask his help. 'Sir,' he said, 'a boy of mine lies at home paralysed and racked with pain.' Jesus said, 'I will come and cure him.'^b But the centurion replied, 'Sir, who am I to have you under my roof? You need only say the word and the boy will be cured. I know, for I am myself under orders, with soldiers under me. I say to one, "Go", and he goes; to another, "Come here", and he comes; and to my servant, "Do this", and he does it.' Jesus heard him with astonishment, and said to the people who were following him, 'I tell you this: nowhere, even in Israel, have I found such faith.' 5 6 7 8 9 10

'Many, I tell you, will come from east and west to feast with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob in the kingdom of Heaven. But those who were born to the kingdom will be driven out into the dark, the place of wailing and grinding of teeth.' 11 12

Then Jesus said to the centurion, 'Go home now; because of your faith, so let it be.' At that moment the boy recovered. 13

^a The words leper, leprosy, as used in this translation, refer to some disfiguring skin disease which entailed ceremonial defilement. It is different from what is now called leprosy.

^b Or Am I to come and cure him?

14 Jesus then went to Peter's house and found Peter's mother-in-law in bed 15 with fever. So he took her by the hand; the fever left her, and she got up and waited on him.

16 When evening fell, they brought to him many who were possessed by devils; and he drove the spirits out with a word and healed all who were 17 sick, to fulfil the prophecy of Isaiah: 'He took away our illnesses and lifted our diseases from us.'^a

18 AT THE SIGHT of the crowds surrounding him Jesus gave word to cross 19 to the other shore. A doctor of the law came up, and said, 'Master, I will 20 follow you wherever you go.' Jesus replied, 'Foxes have their holes, the birds their roosts; but the Son of Man has nowhere to lay his head.'

21 Another man, one of his disciples, said to him, 'Lord, let me go and bury 22 my father first.' Jesus replied, 'Follow me, and leave the dead to bury their dead.'

24 Jesus then got into the boat, and his disciples followed. All at once a great storm arose on the lake, till the waves were breaking right over the 25 boat; but he went on sleeping. So they came and woke him up, crying:
26 'Save us, Lord; we are sinking!' 'Why are you such cowards?' he said;
'how little faith you have!' Then he stood up and rebuked the wind and the 27 sea, and there was a dead calm. The men were astonished at what had happened, and exclaimed, 'What sort of man is this? Even the wind and the sea obey him.'

28 When he reached the other side, in the country of the Gadarenes, he was met by two men who came out from the tombs; they were possessed 29 by devils, and so violent that no one dared pass that way. 'You son of God,' they shouted, 'what do you want with us? Have you come here to torment 30 us before our time?' In the distance a large herd of pigs was feeding;
31 and the devils begged him: 'If you drive us out, send us into that herd 32 of pigs.' 'Begone!' he said. Then they came out and went into the pigs; the whole herd rushed over the edge into the lake, and perished in the water.

33 The men in charge of them took to their heels, and made for the town, where they told the whole story, and what had happened to the madmen.
34 Thereupon all the town came out to meet Jesus; and when they saw him 9 they begged him to leave the district and go. So he got into the boat and crossed over, and came to his own town.

2 And now some men brought him a paralysed man lying on a bed. Seeing their faith Jesus said to the man, 'Take heart, my son; your sins are for-3 given.' At this some of the lawyers said to themselves, 'This is blasphemous
4 talk.' Jesus knew what they were thinking, and said, 'Why do you harbour
5 these evil thoughts? Is it easier to say, "Your sins are forgiven", or to say,
6 "Stand up and walk"? But to convince you that the Son of Man has the right on earth to forgive sins'—he turned to the paralysed man—'stand up, take 7 your bed, and go home.' Thereupon the man got up, and went off home.
8 The people were filled with awe at the sight, and praised God for granting such authority to men.

^a Or and bore the burden of our diseases.

AS HE PASSED ON from there Jesus saw a man named Matthew at his seat 9 in the custom-house, and said to him, 'Follow me'; and Matthew rose and followed him.

When Jesus was at table in the house, many bad characters—tax- 10 gatherers and others—were seated with him and his disciples. The 11 Pharisees noticed this, and said to his disciples, 'Why is it that your master eats with tax-gatherers and sinners?' Jesus heard it and said, 'It is not the 12 healthy that need a doctor, but the sick. Go and learn what that text means, 13
"I require mercy, not sacrifice." I did not come to invite virtuous people, but sinners.'

Then John's disciples came to him with the question: 'Why do we and 14 the Pharisees fast, but your disciples do not?' Jesus replied, 'Can you 15 expect the bridegroom's friends to go mourning while the bridegroom is with them? The time will come when the bridegroom will be taken away from them; that will be the time for them to fast.

'No one sews a patch of unshrunk cloth on to an old coat; for then the 16 patch tears away from the coat, and leaves a bigger hole. Neither do you 17 put new wine into old wine-skins; if you do, the skins burst, and then the wine runs out and the skins are spoilt. No, you put new wine into fresh skins; then both are preserved.'

EVEN AS HE SPOKE, there came a president of the synagogue, who bowed 18 low before him and said, 'My daughter has just died; but come and lay your hand on her, and she will live.' Jesus rose and went with him, and so 19 did his disciples.

Then a woman who had suffered from haemorrhages for twelve years 20 came up from behind, and touched the edge of his cloak; for she said to 21 herself, 'If I can only touch his cloak, I shall be cured.' But Jesus turned and 22 saw her, and said, 'Take heart, my daughter; your faith has cured you.'
And from that moment she recovered.

When Jesus arrived at the president's house and saw the flute-players 23 and the general commotion, he said, 'Be off! The girl is not dead: she is 24 asleep'; and they only laughed at him. But, when everyone had been turned 25 out, he went into the room and took the girl by the hand, and she got up.
This story became the talk of all the country round. 26

As he passed on Jesus was followed by two blind men, who cried out, 27
'Son of David, have pity on us!' And when he had gone indoors they came 28 to him. Jesus asked, 'Do you believe that I have the power to do what you want?' 'Yes, sir', they said. Then he touched their eyes, and said, 'As you 29 have believed, so let it be'; and their sight was restored. Jesus said to them 30 sternly, 'See that no one hears about this.' But as soon as they had gone out 31 they talked about him all over the country-side.

They were on their way out when a man was brought to him, who was 32 dumb and possessed by a devil; the devil was cast out and the patient 33 recovered his speech. Filled with amazement the onlookers said, 'Nothing like this has ever been seen in Israel.' ^a

^a Some witnesses add (34) But the Pharisees said, 'He casts out devils by the prince of devils.'

35 SO JESUS WENT ROUND all the towns and villages teaching in their synagogues, announcing the good news of the Kingdom, and curing every kind 36 of ailment and disease. The sight of the people moved him to pity: they 37 were like sheep without a shepherd, harassed and helpless; and he said to 38 his disciples, 'The crop is heavy, but labourers are scarce; you must therefore bring the owner to send labourers to harvest his crop.'

10 Then he called his twelve disciples to him and gave them authority to cast out unclean spirits and to cure every kind of ailment and disease.

2 These are the names of the twelve apostles: first Simon, also called Peter, and his brother Andrew; James son of Zebedee, and his brother
 3 John; Philip and Bartholomew, Thomas and Matthew the tax-gatherer, 4 James son of Alphaeus, Lebbaeus,^a Simon, a member of the Zealot party, and Judas Iscariot, the man who betrayed him.

5 These twelve Jesus sent out with the following instructions: 'Do not take the road to gentile lands, and do not enter any Samaritan town; but
 6 go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. And as you go proclaim 8 the message: "The kingdom of Heaven is upon you." Heal the sick, raise the dead, cleanse lepers, cast out devils. You received without cost; give without charge.

9 10 'Provide no gold, silver, or copper to fill your purse, no pack for the road, no second coat, no shoes, no stick; the worker earns his keep.

11 'When you come to any town or village, look for some worthy person in it, and make your home there until you leave. Wish the house peace as you enter it, so that, if it is worthy, your peace may descend on it; if it is not
 13 worthy, your peace can come back to you. If anyone will not receive you or listen to what you say, then as you leave that house or that town shake 15 the dust of it off your feet. I tell you this: on the day of judgement it will be more bearable for the land of Sodom and Gomorrah than for that town.

16 'Look, I send you out like sheep among wolves; be wary as serpents, innocent as doves.

17 'And be on your guard, for men will hand you over to their courts, they
 18 will flog you in the synagogues, and you will be brought before governors and kings, for my sake, to testify before them and the heathen. But when you are arrested, do not worry about what you are to say; when the time comes, the words you need will be given you; for it is not you who will be speaking: it will be the Spirit of your Father speaking in you.

21 'Brother will betray brother to death, and the father his child; children will turn against their parents and send them to their death. All will hate you for your allegiance to me; but the man who holds out to the end will be saved. When you are persecuted in one town, take refuge in another; I tell you this: before you have gone through all the towns of Israel the Son of Man will have come.

24 'A pupil does not rank above his teacher, or a servant above his master.
 25 The pupil should be content to share his teacher's lot, the servant to share his master's. If the master has been called Beelzebub, how much more his household!

26 'So do not be afraid of them. There is nothing covered up that will not be uncovered, nothing hidden that will not be made known. What I say 27 to you in the dark you must repeat in broad daylight; what you hear 28 whispered you must shout from the house-tops. Do not fear those who kill the body, but cannot kill the soul. Fear him rather who is able to destroy both soul and body in hell.

^a Some witnesses read Thaddaeus.

'Are not sparrows two a penny? Yet without your Father's leave not 29 one of them can fall to the ground. As for you, even the hairs of your head 30 have all been counted. So have no fear; you are worth more than any 31 number of sparrows.

'Whoever then will acknowledge me before men, I will acknowledge 32 him before my Father in heaven; and whoever disowns me before men, 33
I will disown him before my Father in heaven.

'You must not think that I have come to bring peace to the earth; I have 34 not come to bring peace, but a sword. I have come to set a man against his 35 father, a daughter against her mother, a son's wife against her mother-in-law; and a man will find his enemies under his own roof. 36

'No man is worthy of me who cares more for father or mother than for 37 me; no man is worthy of me who cares more for son or daughter; no man 38 is worthy of me who does not take up his cross and walk in my footsteps.
By gaining his life a man will lose it; by losing his life for my sake, he will 39 gain it.

'To receive you is to receive me, and to receive me is to receive the One 40 who sent me. Whoever receives a prophet as a prophet will be given a 41 prophet's reward, and whoever receives a good man because he is a good man will be given a good man's reward. And if anyone gives so much as a cup 42 of cold water to one of these little ones, because he is a disciple of mine,
I tell you this: that man will assuredly not go unrewarded.'

When Jesus had finished giving his twelve disciples their instructions, 11 he left that place and went to teach and preach in the neighbouring towns.

JOHN, WHO WAS IN PRISON, heard what Christ was doing, and sent his 2 own disciples to him with this message: 'Are you the one who is to come, or 3 are we to expect some other?' Jesus answered, 'Go and tell John what you 4 hear and see: the blind recover their sight, the lame walk, the lepers are 5 made clean, the deaf hear, the dead are raised to life, the poor are hearing the good news—and happy is the man who does not find me a stumbling- 6 block.'

When the messengers were on their way back, Jesus began to speak to 7 the people about John: 'What was the spectacle that drew you to the 8 wilderness? A reed-bed swept by the wind? No? Then what did you go out to see? A man dressed in silks and satins? Surely you must look in 9 palaces for that. But why did you go out? To see a prophet? Yes indeed, 10 and far more than a prophet. He is the man of whom Scripture says,

"Here is my herald, whom I send on ahead of you,
and he will prepare your way before you."

I tell you this: never has there appeared on earth a mother's son greater 11 than John the Baptist, and yet the least in the kingdom of Heaven is greater than he.

12 'Ever since the coming of John the Baptist the kingdom of Heaven has 13 been subjected to violence and violent men^a are seizing it. For all the 14 prophets and the Law foretold things to come until John appeared, and 15 John is the destined Elijah, if you will but accept it. If you have ears, then hear.

16 'How can I describe this generation? They are like children sitting in the market-place and shouting at each other,

17 "We piped for you and you would not dance."

"We wept and wailed, and you would not mourn."

18 For John came, neither eating nor drinking, and they say, "He is possessed."
19 The Son of Man came eating and drinking, and they say, "Look at him! a glutton and a drinker, a friend of tax-gatherers and sinners!"
And yet God's wisdom is proved right by its results.'

20 THEN HE SPOKE of the towns in which most of his miracles had been performed, and denounced them for their impenitence. 'Alas for you, Chorazin!' he said; 'alas for you, Bethsaida! If the miracles that were performed in you had been performed in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented long ago in sackcloth and ashes. But it will be more bearable, 22 I tell you, for Tyre and Sidon on the day of judgement than for you. And as for you, Capernaum, will you be exalted to the skies? No, brought down to the depths! For if the miracles had been performed in Sodom which 24 were performed in you, Sodom would be standing to this day. But it will be more bearable, I tell you, for the land of Sodom on the day of judgement than for you.'

25 At that time Jesus spoke these words: 'I thank thee, Father, Lord of heaven and earth, for hiding these things from the learned and wise, and revealing them to the simple. Yes, Father, such^b was thy choice. Everything is entrusted to me by my Father; and no one knows the Son but the Father, and no one knows the Father but the Son and those to whom the Son may choose to reveal him.

28 'Come to me, all whose work is hard, whose load is heavy; and I will give 29 you relief. Bend your necks to my yoke, and learn from me, for I am gentle and humble-hearted; and your souls will find relief. For my yoke is good to bear, my load is light.'

Controversy

12 ○NCE ABOUT THAT TIME Jesus went through the cornfields on the Sabbath; and his disciples, feeling hungry, began to pluck some ears
2 of corn and eat them. The Pharisees noticed this, and said to him, 'Look, your disciples are doing something which is forbidden on the Sabbath.'

^a Or has been forcing its way forward, and men of force . . .

^b Or Yes, I thank thee, Father, that such . . .

He answered, 'Have you not read what David did when he and his men were hungry? He went into the House of God and ate the sacred bread, though neither he nor his men had a right to eat it, but only the priests. Or have you not read in the Law that on the Sabbath the priests in the temple break the Sabbath and it is not held against them? I tell you, there is something greater than the temple here. If you had known what that text means, "I require mercy, not sacrifice", you would not have condemned the innocent. For the Son of Man is sovereign over the Sabbath.'

He went on to another place, and entered their synagogue. A man was there with a withered arm, and they asked Jesus, 'Is it permitted to heal on the Sabbath?' (They wanted to frame a charge against him.) But he said to them, 'Suppose you had one sheep, which fell into a ditch on the Sabbath; is there one of you who would not catch hold of it and lift it out? And surely a man is worth far more than a sheep! It is therefore permitted to do good on the Sabbath.' Turning to the man he said, 'Stretch out your arm.' He stretched it out, and it was made sound again like the other. But the Pharisees, on leaving the synagogue, laid a plot to do away with him.

Jesus was aware of it and withdrew. Many followed, and he cured all who were ill; and he gave strict injunctions that they were not to make him known. This was to fulfil Isaiah's prophecy:

'Here is my servant, whom I have chosen,
my beloved, on whom my favour rests;
I will put my Spirit upon him,
and he will proclaim judgement among the nations.
He will not strive, he will not shout,
nor will his voice be heard in the streets.
He will not snap off the broken reed,
nor snuff out the smouldering wick,
until he leads justice on to victory.
In him the nations shall place their hope.'

THEN THEY BROUGHT HIM a man who was possessed; he was blind and dumb; and Jesus cured him, restoring both speech and sight. The bystanders were all amazed, and the word went round: 'Can this be the Son of David?' But when the Pharisees heard it they said, 'It is only by Beelzebub prince of devils that this man drives the devils out.'

He knew what was in their minds; so he said to them, 'Every kingdom divided against itself goes to ruin; and no town, no household, that is divided against itself can stand. And if it is Satan who casts out Satan, Satan is divided against himself; how then can his kingdom stand? And if it is by Beelzebub that I cast out devils, by whom do your own people drive them out? If this is your argument, they themselves will refute you. But if it is by the Spirit of God that I drive out the devils, then be sure the kingdom of God has already come upon you.'

'Or again, how can anyone break into a strong man's house and make off with his goods, unless he has first tied the strong man up before ransacking the house?'

30 'He who is not with me is against me, and he who does not gather with me scatters.

31 'And so I tell you this: no sin, no slander, is beyond forgiveness for men, except slander spoken against the Spirit, and that will not be forgiven.

32 Any man who speaks a word against the Son of Man will be forgiven; but if anyone speaks against the Holy Spirit, for him there is no forgiveness, either in this age or in the age to come.

33 'Either make the tree good and its fruit good, or make the tree bad and its fruit bad; you can tell a tree by its fruit. You vipers' brood! How can your words be good when you yourselves are evil? For the words that the mouth utters come from the overflowing of the heart. A good man produces good from the store of good within himself; and an evil man from evil within produces evil.

36 'I tell you this: there is not a thoughtless word that comes from men's lips but they will have to account for it on the day of judgement. For out of your own mouth you will be acquitted; out of your own mouth you will be condemned.'

38 At this some of the doctors of the law and the Pharisees said, 'Master, we should like you to show us a sign.' He answered: 'It is a wicked, godless generation that asks for a sign; and the only sign that will be given it is the sign of the prophet Jonah. Jonah was in the sea-monster's belly for three days and three nights, and in the same way the Son of Man will be three days and three nights in the bowels of the earth. At the Judgement, when this generation is on trial, the men of Nineveh will appear against it^a and ensure its condemnation, for they repented at the preaching of Jonah; and what is here is greater than Jonah. The Queen of the South will appear at the Judgement when this generation is on trial,^b and ensure its condemnation, for she came from the ends of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon; and what is here is greater than Solomon.

43 'When an unclean spirit comes out of a man it wanders over the deserts seeking a resting-place, and finds none. Then it says, "I will go back to the home I left." So it returns and finds the house unoccupied, swept clean, 45 and tidy. Off it goes and collects seven other spirits more wicked than itself, and they all come in and settle down; and in the end the man's plight is worse than before. That is how it will be with this wicked generation.'

46 He was still speaking to the crowd when his mother and brothers 47 appeared; they stood outside, wanting to speak to him. Someone said, 'Your mother and your brothers are here outside; they want to speak to you.' Jesus turned to the man who brought the message, and said, 'Who 49 is my mother? Who are my brothers?'; and pointing to the disciples, he 50 said, 'Here are my mother and my brothers. Whoever does the will of my heavenly Father is my brother, my sister, my mother.'

2 THAT SAME DAY Jesus went out and sat by the lake-side, where so many people gathered round him that he had to get into a boat. He sat there, and ^a Or will rise again together with it.

^b Or At the Judgement the Queen of the South will be raised to life together with this generation.

all the people stood on the shore. He spoke to them in parables, at some length. 3

He said: 'A sower went out to sow. And as he sowed, some seed fell along the footpath; and the birds came and ate it up. Some seed fell on rocky ground, where it had little soil, and it sprouted quickly because it had no depth of earth; but when the sun rose the young corn was scorched, and as it had no root it withered away. Some seed fell among thistles; and the thistles shot up, and choked the corn. And some of the seed fell into good soil, where it bore fruit, yielding a hundredfold or, it might be, sixtyfold or thirtyfold. If you have ears, then hear.' 4 5 6 7 8 9

The disciples went up to him and asked, 'Why do you speak to them in parables?' He replied, 'It has been granted to you to know the secrets of the kingdom of Heaven; but to those others it has not been granted. For the man who has will be given more, till he has enough and to spare; and the man who has not will forfeit even what he has. That is why I speak to them in parables; for they look without seeing, and listen without hearing or understanding. There is a prophecy of Isaiah which is being fulfilled for them: "You may hear and hear, but you will never understand; you may look and look, but you will never see. For this people's mind has become gross; their ears are dulled, and their eyes are closed. Otherwise, their eyes might see, their ears hear, and their mind understand, and then they might turn again, and I would heal them." 10 11 12 13 14 15

'But happy are your eyes because they see, and your ears because they hear! Many prophets and saints, I tell you, desired to see what you now see, yet never saw it; to hear what you hear, yet never heard it. 16 17

'You, then, may hear the parable of the sower. When a man hears the word that tells of the Kingdom but fails to understand it, the evil one comes and carries off what has been sown in his heart. There you have the seed sown along the footpath. The seed sown on rocky ground stands for the man who, on hearing the word, accepts it at once with joy; but as it strikes no root in him he has no staying-power, and when there is trouble or persecution on account of the word he falls away at once. The seed sown among thistles represents the man who hears the word, but worldly cares and the false glamour of wealth choke it, and it proves barren. But the seed that fell into good soil is the man who hears the word and understands it, who accordingly bears fruit, and yields a hundredfold or, it may be, sixtyfold or thirtyfold.' 18 19 20 21 22 23

Here is another parable that he put before them: 'The kingdom of Heaven is like this. A man sowed his field with good seed; but while everyone was asleep his enemy came, sowed darnel among the wheat, and made off. When the corn sprouted and began to fill out, the darnel could be seen among it. The farmer's men went to their master and said, "Sir, was it not good seed that you sowed in your field? Then where has the darnel come from?" "This is an enemy's doing", he replied. "Well then," they said, "shall we go and gather the darnel?" "No," he answered; "in gathering it you might pull up the wheat at the same time. Let them both grow together till harvest; and at harvest-time I will tell the reapers, 'Gather the darnel first, and tie it in bundles for burning; then collect the wheat into my barn.'"' 24 25 26 27 28 29 30

And this is another parable that he put before them: 'The kingdom of Heaven is like a mustard-seed, which a man took and sowed in his field. As a seed, mustard is smaller than any other; but when it has grown it is bigger than any garden-plant; it becomes a tree, big enough for the birds to come and roost among its branches.'

He told them also this parable: 'The kingdom of Heaven is like yeast, which a woman took and mixed with half a hundredweight of flour till it was all leavened.'

In all this teaching to the crowds Jesus spoke in parables; in fact he never spoke to them without a parable. This was to fulfil the prophecy of Isaiah: ^a

'I will open my mouth in parables;
I will utter things kept secret since the world was made.'

He then dismissed the people, and went into the house, where his disciples came to him and said, 'Explain to us the parable of the darnel in the field.' And this was his answer: 'The sower of the good seed is the Son of Man. The field is the world; the good seed stands for the children of the Kingdom, the darnel for the children of the evil one. The enemy who sowed the darnel is the devil. The harvest is the end of time. The reapers are angels. As the darnel, then, is gathered up and burnt, so at the end of time the Son of Man will send out his angels, who will gather out of his kingdom whatever makes men stumble, and all whose deeds are evil, and these will be thrown into the blazing furnace, the place of wailing and grinding of teeth. And then the righteous will shine as brightly as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. If you have ears, then hear.'

'The kingdom of Heaven is like treasure lying buried in a field. The man who found it, buried it again; and for sheer joy went and sold everything he had, and bought that field.'

'Here is another picture of the kingdom of Heaven. A merchant looking out for fine pearls found one of very special value; so he went and sold everything he had, and bought it.'

'Again the kingdom of Heaven is like a net let down into the sea, where fish of every kind were caught in it. When it was full, it was dragged ashore. Then the men sat down and collected the good fish into pails and threw the worthless away. That is how it will be at the end of time. The angels will go forth, and they will separate the wicked from the good, and throw them into the blazing furnace, the place of wailing and grinding of teeth.'

'Have you understood all this?' he asked; and they answered, 'Yes.' He said to them, 'When, therefore, a teacher of the law has become a farmer in the kingdom of Heaven, he is like a householder who can produce out of his store both the new and the old.'

WHEN HE HAD FINISHED these parables Jesus left that place, and came to his home town, where he taught the people in their synagogue. In amazement they asked, 'Where does he get this wisdom from, and these miraculous powers? Is he not the carpenter's son? Is not his mother called Mary, his brothers James, Joseph, Simon, and Judas? And are not all his sisters here with us? Where then has he got all this from?' So they fell 57 foul of him, and this led him to say, 'A prophet will always be held in 58 honour, except in his home town, and in his own family.' And he did not work many miracles there: such was their want of faith.

It was at that time that reports about Jesus reached the ears of Prince 14
Herod. 'This is John the Baptist,' he said to his attendants; 'John has been 2 raised to life, and that is why these miraculous powers are at work in him.'

NOW HEROD had arrested John, put him in chains, and thrown him into 3 prison, on account of Herodias, his brother Philip's wife; for John had told 4 him: 'You have no right to her.' Herod would have liked to put him to 5 death, but he was afraid of the people, in whose eyes John was a prophet.
But at his birthday celebrations the daughter of Herodias danced before the 6 guests, and Herod was so delighted that he took an oath to give her any- 7 thing she cared to ask. Prompted by her mother, she said, 'Give me here 8 on a dish the head of John the Baptist.' The king was distressed when he 9 heard it; but out of regard for his oath and for his guests, he ordered the request to be granted, and had John beheaded in prison. The head was 10 11 brought in on a dish and given to the girl; and she carried it to her mother.
Then John's disciples came and took away the body, and buried it; and 12
they went and told Jesus.

WHEN HE HEARD what had happened Jesus withdrew privately by boat 13 to a lonely place; but people heard of it, and came after him in crowds by 14 land from the towns. When he came ashore, he saw a great crowd; his 15 heart went out to them, and he cured those of them who were sick. When it grew late the disciples came up to him and said, 'This is a lonely place, and the day has gone; send the people off to the villages to buy themselves 16 food.' He answered, 'There is no need for them to go; give them something to eat yourselves.' 'All we have here', they said, 'is five loaves and two 17 fishes.' 'Let me have them', he replied. So he told the people to sit down on 18 19 the grass; then, taking the five loaves and the two fishes, he looked up to heaven, said the blessing, broke the loaves, and gave them to the disciples; and the disciples gave them to the people. They all ate to their hearts' 20 content; and the scraps left over, which they picked up, were enough to fill twelve great baskets. Some five thousand men shared in this meal, to 21 say nothing of women and children.

Then he made the disciples embark and go on ahead to the other side, 22
while he sent the people away; after doing that, he went up the hill-side to 23 pray alone. It grew late, and he was there by himself. The boat was already 24 some furlongs from the shore,^a battling with a head-wind and a rough sea.
Between three and six in the morning he came to them, walking over the 25 lake. When the disciples saw him walking on the lake they were so shaken 26 that they cried out in terror: 'It is a ghost!' But at once he spoke to them: 27
'Take heart! It is I; do not be afraid.'

Peter called to him: 'Lord, if it is you, tell me to come to you over the 28 water.' 'Come', said Jesus. Peter stepped down from the boat, and walked 29

^a Some witnesses read already well out on the water.

30 over the water towards Jesus. But when he saw the strength of the gale he was seized with fear; and beginning to sink, he cried, 'Save me, Lord.'
 31 Jesus at once reached out and caught hold of him, and said, 'Why did you 32 hesitate? How little faith you have!' They then climbed into the boat;
 33 and the wind dropped. And the men in the boat fell at his feet, exclaiming, 'Truly you are the Son of God.'

34 35 So they finished the crossing and came to land at Gennesaret. There Jesus was recognized by the people of the place, who sent out word to all 36 the country round. And all who were ill were brought to him, and he was begged to allow them simply to touch the edge of his cloak. And everyone who touched it was completely cured.

15 THEN JESUS WAS APPROACHED by a group of Pharisees and lawyers
 2 from Jerusalem, with the question: 'Why do your disciples break the 3 ancient tradition? They do not wash their hands before meals.' He answered them: 'And what of you? Why do you break God's commandment in the 4 interest of your tradition? For God said, "Honour your father and mother", 5 and, "The man who curses his father or mother must suffer death." But you say, "If a man says to his father or mother, 'Anything of mine which might 6 have been used for your benefit is set apart for God', then he must not honour his father or his mother." You have made God's law null and void 7 out of respect for your tradition. What hypocrisy! Isaiah was right when he 8 prophesied about you: "This people pays me lip-service, but their heart 9 is far from me; their worship of me is in vain, for they teach as doctrines the commandments of men."'

10 He called the crowd and said to them, 'Listen to me, and understand 11 this: a man is not defiled by what goes into his mouth, but by what comes out of it.'

12 Then the disciples came to him and said, 'Do you know that the Phari-13 sees have taken great offence at what you have been saying?' His answer was: 'Any plant that is not of my heavenly Father's planting will be rooted 14 up. Leave them alone; they are blind guides,^a and if one blind man guides another they will both fall into the ditch.'

15 16 Then Peter said, 'Tell us what that parable means.' Jesus answered, 17 'Are you still as dull as the rest? Do you not see that whatever goes in by the mouth passes into the stomach and so is discharged into the drain?
 18 But what comes out of the mouth has its origins in the heart; and that is 19 what defiles a man. Wicked thoughts, murder, adultery, fornication, theft, 20 perjury, slander—these all proceed from the heart; and these are the things that defile a man; but to eat without first washing his hands, that cannot defile him.'

Jesus and his disciples

JESUS THEN LEFT that place and withdrew to the region of Tyre and Sidon. And a Canaanite woman from those parts came crying out, 'Sir! have pity on me, Son of David; my daughter is tormented by a devil.' But he said not a word in reply. His disciples came and urged him: 'Send her away; see how she comes shouting after us.' Jesus replied, 'I was sent to the lost sheep of the house of Israel, and to them alone.' But the woman came and fell at his feet and cried, 'Help me, sir.' To this Jesus replied, 'It is not right to take the children's bread and throw it to the dogs.' 'True, sir,' she answered; 'and yet the dogs eat the scraps that fall from their masters' table.' Hearing this Jesus replied, 'Woman, what faith you have! Be it as you wish!' And from that moment her daughter was restored to health.

After leaving that region Jesus took the road by the Sea of Galilee and went up to the hills. When he was seated there, crowds flocked to him, bringing with them the lame, blind, dumb, and crippled, and many other sufferers; they threw them down at his feet, and he healed them. Great was the amazement of the people when they saw the dumb speaking, the crippled strong, the lame walking, and sight restored to the blind; and they gave praise to the God of Israel.

Jesus called his disciples and said to them, 'I feel sorry for all these people; they have been with me now for three days and have nothing to eat. I do not want to send them away unfed; they might turn faint on the way.' The disciples replied, 'Where in this lonely place can we find bread enough to feed such a crowd?' 'How many loaves have you?' Jesus asked. 'Seven,' they replied; 'and there are a few small fishes.' So he ordered the people to sit down on the ground; then he took the seven loaves and the fishes, and after giving thanks to God he broke them and gave to the disciples, and the disciples gave to the people. They all ate to their hearts' content; and the scraps left over, which they picked up, were enough to fill seven baskets. Four thousand men shared in this meal, to say nothing of women and children. He then dismissed the crowds, got into a boat, and went to the neighbourhood of Magadan.

The Pharisees and Sadducees came, and to test him they asked him to show them a sign from heaven. His answer was: ^a 'It is a wicked generation that asks for a sign; and the only sign that will be given it is the sign of Jonah.' So he went off and left them.

In crossing to the other side the disciples had forgotten to take bread with them. So, when Jesus said to them, 'Beware, be on your guard against the leaven of the Pharisees and Sadducees', they began to say among themselves, 'It is because we have brought no bread!' Knowing what was in their minds, Jesus said to them: 'Why do you talk about bringing no bread? Where is your faith? Do you not understand even yet? Do you not remember the five loaves for the five thousand, and how many basketfuls you

^a Some witnesses here insert 'In the evening you say, "It will be fine weather, for the sky is red"; (3) and in the morning you say, "It will be stormy today; the sky is red and lowering." You know how to interpret the appearance of the sky; can you not interpret the signs of the times?'

10 picked up? Or the seven loaves for the four thousand, and how many 11 basketfuls you picked up? How can you fail to see that I was not speaking about bread? Be on your guard, I said, against the leaven of the Pharisees 12 and Sadducees.' Then they understood: they were to be on their guard, not against baker's leaven, but against the teaching of the Pharisees and Sadducees.

13 WHEN HE CAME to the territory of Caesarea Philippi, Jesus asked his 14 disciples, 'Who do men say that the Son of Man is^a?' They answered, 'Some say John the Baptist, others Elijah, others Jeremiah, or one of the 15 16 prophets.' 'And you,' he asked, 'who do you say I am?' Simon Peter 17 answered: 'You are the Messiah, the Son of the living God.' Then Jesus said: 'Simon son of Jonah, you are favoured indeed! You did not learn 18 that from mortal man; it was revealed to you by my heavenly Father. And I say this to you: You are Peter, the Rock; and on this rock I will build my 19 church, and the powers of death shall never conquer it.^b I will give you the keys of the kingdom of Heaven; what you forbid on earth shall be for-bidden in heaven, and what you allow on earth shall be allowed in heaven.'
 20 He then gave his disciples strict orders not to tell anyone that he was the Messiah.

21 From that time Jesus began to make it clear to his disciples that he had to go to Jerusalem, and there to suffer much from the elders, chief priests, and doctors of the law; to be put to death and to be raised again on the third 22 day. At this Peter took him by the arm and began to rebuke him: 'Heaven 23 forbid!' he said. 'No, Lord, this shall never happen to you.' Then Jesus turned and said to Peter, 'Away with you, Satan; you are a stumbling-block to me. You think as men think, not as God thinks.'

24 Jesus then said to his disciples, 'If anyone wishes to be a follower of mine, he must leave self behind; he must take up his cross and come with me.
 25 Whoever cares for his own safety is lost; but if a man will let himself be lost 26 for my sake, he will find his true self. What will a man gain by winning the whole world, at the cost of his true self? Or what can he give that will 27 buy that self back? For the Son of Man is to come in the glory of his Father with his angels, and then he will give each man the due reward for what 28 he has done. I tell you this: there are some of those standing here who will not taste death before they have seen the Son of Man coming in his kingdom.'

17 SIX DAYS LATER Jesus took Peter, James, and John the brother of James,
 2 and led them up a high mountain where they were alone; and in their presence he was transfigured; his face shone like the sun, and his clothes
 3 became white as the light. And they saw Moses and Elijah appear, con-4 versing with him. Then Peter spoke: 'Lord,' he said, 'how good it is that we are here! If you wish it, I will make three shelters here, one for you, 5 one for Moses, and one for Elijah.' While he was still speaking, a bright cloud suddenly overshadowed them, and a voice called from the cloud:

^a Some witnesses read that I, the Son of Man, am.

^b Or the gates of death shall never close upon it.

'This is my Son, my Beloved,^a on whom my favour rests; listen to him.'

At the sound of the voice the disciples fell on their faces in terror. Jesus then came up to them, touched them, and said, 'Stand up; do not be afraid.' And when they raised their eyes they saw no one, but only Jesus.

On their way down the mountain, Jesus enjoined them not to tell anyone of the vision until the Son of Man had been raised from the dead. The disciples put a question to him: 'Why then do our teachers say that Elijah must come first?' He replied, 'Yes, Elijah will come and set everything right. But I tell you that Elijah has already come, and they failed to recognize him, and worked their will upon him; and in the same way the Son of Man is to suffer at their hands.' Then the disciples understood that he meant John the Baptist.

When they returned to the crowd, a man came up to Jesus, fell on his knees before him, and said, 'Have pity, sir, on my son: he is an epileptic and has bad fits, and he keeps falling about, often into the fire, often into water. I brought him to your disciples, but they could not cure him.' Jesus answered, 'What an unbelieving and perverse generation! How long shall I be with you? How long must I endure you? Bring him here to me.' Jesus then spoke sternly to the boy; the devil left him, and from that moment he was cured.

Afterwards the disciples came to Jesus and asked him privately, 'Why could not we cast it out?' He answered, 'Your faith is too small. I tell you this: if you have faith no bigger even than a mustard-seed, you will say to this mountain, "Move from here to there!", and it will move; nothing will prove impossible for you.'^b

THEY WERE GOING about together in Galilee when Jesus said to them, 'The Son of Man is to be given up into the power of men, and they will kill him; then on the third day he will be raised again.' And they were filled with grief.

On their arrival at Capernaum the collectors of the temple-tax came up to Peter and asked, 'Does your master not pay temple-tax?' 'He does', said Peter. When he went indoors Jesus forestalled him by asking, 'What do you think about this, Simon? From whom do earthly monarchs collect tax or toll? From their own people, or from aliens?' 'From aliens', said Peter. 'Why then,' said Jesus, 'their own people are exempt! But as we do not want to cause offence, go and cast a line in the lake; take the first fish that comes to the hook, open its mouth, and you will find a silver coin; take that and pay it in; it will meet the tax for us both.'

At that time the disciples came to Jesus and asked, 'Who is the greatest in the kingdom of Heaven?' He called a child, set him in front of them, and said, 'I tell you this: unless you turn round and become like children, you will never enter the kingdom of Heaven. Let a man humble himself till he is like this child, and he will be the greatest in the kingdom of Heaven. Whoever receives one such child in my name receives me. But if a man is a cause of stumbling to one of these little ones who have faith in me, it

^a Or This is my only Son.

^b Some witnesses add (21) But there is no means of casting out this sort but prayer and fasting.

7 would be better for him to have a millstone hung round his neck and be drowned in the depths of the sea. Alas for the world that such causes of stumbling arise! Come they must, but woe betide the man through whom they come!

8 'If your hand or your foot is your undoing, cut it off and fling it away; it is better for you to enter into life maimed or lame, than to keep two hands
9 or two feet and be thrown into the eternal fire. If it is your eye that is your undoing, tear it out and fling it away; it is better to enter into life with one eye than to keep both eyes and be thrown into the fires of hell.

10 'Never despise one of these little ones; I tell you, they have their guardian angels in heaven, who look continually on the face of my heavenly Father. ^a

12 'What do you think? Suppose a man has a hundred sheep. If one of them strays, does he not leave the other ninety-nine on the hillside and go in 13 search of the one that strayed? And if he should find it, I tell you this: he is more delighted over that sheep than over the ninety-nine that never 14 strayed. In the same way, it is not your heavenly Father's will that one of these little ones should be lost.

15 'If your brother commits a sin, ^b go and take the matter up with him, strictly between yourselves, and if he listens to you, you have won your 16 brother over. If he will not listen, take one or two others with you, so that all facts may be duly established on the evidence of two or three witnesses.
17 If he refuses to listen to them, report the matter to the congregation; and if he will not listen even to the congregation, you must then treat him as you would a pagan or a tax-gatherer.

18 'I tell you this: whatever you forbid on earth shall be forbidden in heaven, and whatever you allow on earth shall be allowed in heaven.

19 'Again I tell you this: if two of you agree on earth about any request you have to make, that request will be granted by my heavenly Father. For 20 where two or three have met together in my name, I am there among them.'

21 Then Peter came up and asked him, 'Lord, how often am I to forgive
22 my brother if he goes on wronging me? As many as seven times?' Jesus replied, 'I do not say seven times; I say seventy times seven. ^c

23 'The kingdom of Heaven, therefore, should be thought of in this way: There was once a king who decided to settle accounts with the men who 24 served him. At the outset there appeared before him a man whose debt ran into millions. ^d Since he had no means of paying, his master ordered him
25 to be sold to meet the debt, with his wife, his children, and everything he had. The man fell prostrate at his master's feet. "Be patient with me," he 26 said, "and I will pay in full"; and the master was so moved with pity that he let the man go and remitted the debt. But no sooner had the man gone 27 out than he met a fellow-servant who owed him a few pounds; ^e and catching hold of him he gripped him by the throat and said, "Pay me what you owe."
28 The man fell at his fellow-servant's feet, and begged him, "Be patient with 29 me, and I will pay you"; but he refused, and had him jailed until he should 30 pay the debt. The other servants were deeply distressed when they saw what had happened, and they went to their master and told him the whole story. He accordingly sent for the man. "You scoundrel!" he said to him; 32

 "I remitted the whole of your debt when you appealed to me; were you 33 not bound to show your fellow-servant the same pity as I showed you?"
 And so angry was the master that he condemned the man to torture until 34 he should pay the debt in full. And that is how my heavenly Father will 35 deal with you, unless you each forgive your brother from your hearts.'

WHEN JESUS HAD FINISHED this discourse he left Galilee and came into 19 the region of Judaea across Jordan. Great crowds followed him, and he 2 healed them there.

Some Pharisees came and tested him by asking, 'Is it lawful for a man to 3 divorce his wife on any and every ground?'^a He asked in return, 'Have you 4 never read that the Creator made them from the beginning male and 5 female?'; and he added, 'For this reason a man shall leave his father and 6 mother, and be made one with his wife; and the two shall become one flesh. 7
 It follows that they are no longer two individuals: they are one flesh. What 8
 God has joined together, man must not separate.' 'Why then', they objected, 9
 'did Moses lay it down that a man might divorce his wife by note of 10 dismissal?' He answered, 'It was because your minds were closed that 11 Moses gave you permission to divorce your wives; but it was not like that 12 when all began. I tell you, if a man divorces his wife for any cause other 13 than unchastity, and marries another, he commits adultery.'^b

The disciples said to him, 'If that is the position with husband and wife, 14 it is better not to marry.' To this he replied, 'That is something which not 15 everyone can accept, but only those for whom God has appointed it. For 16 while some are incapable of marriage because they were born so, or were 17 made so by men, there are others who have themselves renounced marriage 18 for the sake of the kingdom of Heaven. Let those accept it who can.'

They brought children for him to lay his hands on them with prayer. 19
 The disciples rebuked them, but Jesus said to them, 'Let the children come 20 to me; do not try to stop them; for the kingdom of Heaven belongs to such 21 as these.' And he laid his hands on the children, and went his way.

And now a man came up and asked him, 'Master, what good must I do 22 to gain eternal life?' 'Good?' said Jesus. 'Why do you ask me about that? 23
 One alone is good. But if you wish to enter into life, keep the command- 24 ments.' 'Which commandments?' he asked. Jesus answered, 'Do not 25 murder; do not commit adultery; do not steal; do not give false evidence; honour your father and mother; and love your neighbour as yourself.'
 The young man answered, 'I have kept all these. Where do I still fall short?'
 Jesus said to him, 'If you wish to go the whole way, go, sell your possessions, and give to the poor, and then you will have riches in heaven; and come, follow me.' When the young man heard this, he went away with a heavy heart; for he was a man of great wealth.

Jesus said to his disciples, 'I tell you this: a rich man will find it hard to 26 enter the kingdom of Heaven. I repeat, it is easier for a camel to pass through 27

^a Or Is there any ground on which it is lawful for a man to divorce his wife?

^b Some witnesses add And the man who marries a woman so divorced commits adultery.

the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God.'

25 The disciples were amazed to hear this. 'Then who can be saved?' they 26 asked. Jesus looked at them, and said, 'For men this is impossible; but everything is possible for God.'

27 At this Peter said, 'We here have left everything to become your fol-
28 lowers. What will there be for us?' Jesus replied, 'I tell you this: in the world that is to be, when the Son of Man is seated on his throne in heavenly splendour, you my followers will have thrones of your own, where you will sit 29 as judges of the twelve tribes of Israel. And anyone who has left brothers or sisters, father, mother, or children, land or houses for the sake of my 30 name will be repaid many times over, and gain eternal life. But many who are first will be last, and the last first.

20 'The kingdom of Heaven is like this. There was once a landowner who 2 went out early one morning to hire labourers for his vineyard; and after 3 agreeing to pay them the usual day's wage^a he sent them off to work. Going 4 out three hours later he saw some more men standing idle in the market-
5 place. "Go and join the others in the vineyard," he said, "and I will pay 6 you a fair wage"; so off they went. At midday he went out again, and at 7 three in the afternoon, and made the same arrangement as before. An hour 8 before sunset he went out and found another group standing there; so he 9 said to them, "Why are you standing about like this all day with nothing
10 to do?" "Because no one has hired us", they replied; so he told them, "Go 11 and join the others in the vineyard." When evening fell, the owner of the 12 vineyard said to his steward, "Call the labourers and give them their pay, 13 beginning with those who came last and ending with the first." Those who 14 had started work an hour before sunset came forward, and were paid the 15 full day's wage.^b When it was the turn of the men who had come first, 16 they expected something extra, but were paid the same amount as the 17 others. As they took it, they grumbled at their employer: "These late-18 comers have done only one hour's work, yet you have put them on a level 19 with us, who have sweated the whole day long in the blazing sun!" The 20 owner turned to one of them and said, "My friend, I am not being unfair 21 to you. You agreed on the usual wage for the day,^c did you not? Take your 22 pay and go home. I choose to pay the last man the same as you. Surely I am 23 free to do what I like with my own money. Why be jealous because I am 24 kind?" Thus will the last be first, and the first last.'

Challenge to Jerusalem

17 JESUS WAS JOURNEYING towards Jerusalem, and on the way he took 18 the Twelve aside, and said to them, 'We are now going to Jerusalem, and 19 the Son of Man will be given up to the chief priests and the doctors of the 20 law; they will condemn him to death and hand him over to the foreign 21 power, to be mocked and flogged and crucified, and on the third day he 22 will be raised to life again.'

^a Literally one denarius for the day.

^b Literally one denarius each.

^c Literally You agreed on a denarius.

The mother of Zebedee's sons then came before him, with her sons. She bowed low and begged a favour. 'What is it you wish?' asked Jesus. 'I want you', she said, 'to give orders that in your kingdom my two sons here may sit next to you, one at your right, and the other at your left.' Jesus turned to the brothers and said, 'You do not understand what you are asking. Can you drink the cup that I am to drink?' 'We can', they replied. Then he said to them, 'You shall indeed share my cup; but to sit at my right or left is not for me to grant; it is for those to whom it has already been assigned by my Father.'

When the other ten heard this, they were indignant with the two brothers. So Jesus called them to him and said, 'You know that in the world, rulers lord it over their subjects, and their great men make them feel the weight of authority; but it shall not be so with you. Among you, whoever wants to be great must be your servant, and whoever wants to be first must be the willing slave of all—like the Son of Man; he did not come to be served, but to serve, and to give up his life as a ransom for many.'

As they were leaving Jericho he was followed by a great crowd of people. At the roadside sat two blind men. When they heard it said that Jesus was passing they shouted, 'Have pity on us, Son of David.' The people told them sharply to be quiet. But they shouted all the more, 'Sir, have pity on us; have pity on us, Son of David.' Jesus stopped and called the men. 'What do you want me to do for you?' he asked. 'Sir,' they answered, 'we want our sight.' Jesus was deeply moved, and touched their eyes. At once their sight came back, and they followed him.

THEY WERE NOW nearing Jerusalem; and when they reached Bethphage at the Mount of Olives, Jesus sent two disciples with these instructions: 'Go to the village opposite, where you will at once find a donkey tethered with her foal beside her; untie them, and bring them to me. If anyone speaks to you, say, "Our Master needs them"; and he will let you take them at once.'^a This was to fulfil the prophecy which says, 'Tell the daughter of Zion, "Here is your king, who comes to you in gentleness, riding on an ass, riding on the foal of a beast of burden."'

The disciples went and did as Jesus had directed, and brought the donkey and her foal; they laid their cloaks on them and Jesus mounted. Crowds of people carpeted the road with their cloaks, and some cut branches from the trees to spread in his path. Then the crowd that went ahead and the others that came behind raised the shout: 'Hosanna to the Son of David! Blessings on him who comes in the name of the Lord! Hosanna in the heavens!'

When he entered Jerusalem the whole city went wild with excitement. 'Who is this?' people asked, and the crowd replied, 'This is the prophet Jesus, from Nazareth in Galilee.'

Jesus then went into the temple and drove out all who were buying and selling in the temple precincts; he upset the tables of the money-changers and the seats of the dealers in pigeons; and said to them, 'Scripture says, "My house shall be called a house of prayer"; but you are making it a robbers' cave.'

^a Or "Our Master needs them and will send them back straight away."

14 In the temple blind men and cripples came to him, and he healed them.
15 The chief priests and doctors of the law saw the wonderful things he did, and heard the boys in the temple shouting, 'Hosanna to the Son of David!';
16 and they asked him indignantly, 'Do you hear what they are saying?'
Jesus answered, 'I do; have you never read that text, "Thou hast made 17 children and babes at the breast sound aloud thy praise?"' Then he left them and went out of the city to Bethany, where he spent the night.

18 19 Next morning on his way to the city he felt hungry; and seeing a fig-tree at the roadside he went up to it, but found nothing on it but leaves. He said to the tree, 'You shall never bear fruit any more!'; and the tree withered 20 away at once. The disciples were amazed at the sight. 'How is it', they asked, 21 'that the tree has withered so suddenly?' Jesus answered them, 'I tell you this: if only you have faith and have no doubts, you will do what has been done to the fig-tree; and more than that, you need only say to this mountain, "Be lifted from your place and hurled into the sea", and what you 22 say will be done. And whatever you pray for in faith you will receive.'

23 He entered the temple, and the chief priests and elders of the nation came to him with the question: 'By what authority are you acting like this?
24 Who gave you this authority?' Jesus replied, 'I have a question to ask you too; answer it, and I will tell you by what authority I act. The baptism of 25 John: was it from God, or from men?' This set them arguing among themselves: 'If we say, "from God", he will say, "Then why did you not 26 believe him?" But if we say, "from men", we are afraid of the people, for they all take John for a prophet.' So they answered, 'We do not know.'
27 And Jesus said: 'Then neither will I tell you by what authority I act.'

28 'But what do you think about this? A man had two sons. He went to the 29 first, and said, "My boy, go and work today in the vineyard." "I will, sir", 30 the boy replied; but he never went. The father came to the second and said the same. "I will not", he replied, but afterwards he changed his mind 31 and went. Which of these two did as his father wished?' 'The second', they said. Then Jesus answered, 'I tell you this: tax-gatherers and prostitutes 32 are entering the kingdom of God ahead of you. For when John came to show you the right way to live, you did not believe him, but the tax-gatherers and prostitutes did; and even when you had seen that, you did not change your minds and believe him.'

33 'Listen to another parable. There was a landowner who planted a vineyard: he put a wall round it, hewed out a winepress, and built a watch-34 tower; then he let it out to vine-growers and went abroad. When the vintage season approached, he sent his servants to the tenants to collect 35 the produce due to him. But they took his servants and thrashed one, 36 killed another, and stoned a third. Again, he sent other servants, this time 37 a larger number; and they did the same to them. At last he sent to them his 38 son. "They will respect my son", he said. But when they saw the son the tenants said to one another, "This is the heir; come on, let us kill him, and 39 get his inheritance." And they took him, flung him out of the vineyard, and killed him. When the owner of the vineyard comes, how do you think 41 he will deal with those tenants?' 'He will bring those bad men to a bad end', they answered, 'and hand the vineyard over to other tenants, who will let him have his share of the crop when the season comes.' Then Jesus said 42 to them, 'Have you never read in the scriptures: "The stone which the builders rejected has become the main corner-stone. This is the Lord's doing, and it is wonderful in our eyes"? Therefore, I tell you, the kingdom 43 of God will be taken away from you, and given to a nation that yields the proper fruit.'^a

When the chief priests and Pharisees heard his parables, they saw that 45
he was referring to them; they wanted to arrest him, but they were afraid 46 of the people, who looked on Jesus as a prophet.

THEN JESUS SPOKE to them again in parables: 'The kingdom of Heaven 22 1 2 is like this. There was a king who prepared a feast for his son's wedding; but when he sent his servants to summon the guests he had invited, they 3 would not come. He sent others again, telling them to say to the guests, 4
"See now! I have prepared this feast for you. I have had my bullocks and fatted beasts slaughtered; everything is ready; come to the wedding at once." But they took no notice; one went off to his farm, another to his 5 business, and the others seized the servants, attacked them brutally, and 6 killed them. The king was furious; he sent troops to kill those murderers 7 and set their town on fire. Then he said to his servants, "The wedding-feast 8 is ready; but the guests I invited did not deserve the honour. Go out to the 9 main thoroughfares, and invite everyone you can find to the wedding."
The servants went out into the streets, and collected all they could find, 10 good and bad alike. So the hall was packed with guests.

'When the king came in to see the company at table, he observed one 11 man who was not dressed for a wedding. "My friend," said the king, "how 12 do you come to be here without your wedding clothes?" He had nothing to say. The king then said to his attendants, "Bind him hand and foot; 13 turn him out into the dark, the place of wailing and grinding of teeth." For 14 though many are invited, few are chosen.'

THEN THE PHARISEES went away and agreed on a plan to trap him in his 15 own words. Some of their followers were sent to him in company with men 16 of Herod's party. They said, 'Master, you are an honest man, we know; you teach in all honesty the way of life that God requires, truckling to no man, whoever he may be. Give us your ruling on this: are we or are we not per- 17 mitted to pay taxes to the Roman Emperor?' Jesus was aware of their 18 malicious intention and said to them, 'You hypocrites! Why are you trying to catch me out? Show me the money in which the tax is paid.' They 19 handed him a silver piece. Jesus asked, 'Whose head is this, and whose 20 inscription?' 'Caesar's', they replied. He said to them, 'Then pay Caesar 21 what is due to Caesar, and pay God what is due to God.' This answer took 22 them by surprise, and they went away and left him alone.

The same day Sadducees came to him, maintaining that there is no 23 resurrection. Their question was this: 'Master, Moses said, "If a man 24 should die childless, his brother shall marry the widow and carry on his

^a Some witnesses add (44) Any man who falls on this stone will be dashed to pieces; and if it falls on a man he will be crushed by it.

25 brother's family." Now we knew of seven brothers. The first married and 26 died, and as he was without issue his wife was left to his brother. The same thing happened with the second, and the third, and so on with all seven.
 27 28 Last of all the woman died. At the resurrection, then, whose wife will she 29 be, for they had all married her?' Jesus answered: 'You are mistaken, 30 because you know neither the scriptures nor the power of God. At the resurrection men and women do not marry; they are like angels in heaven.

31 'But about the resurrection of the dead, have you never read what God 32 himself said to you: "I am the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the 33 God of Jacob"? He is not God of the dead but of the living.' The people heard what he said, and were astounded at his teaching.

34 Hearing that he had silenced the Sadducees, the Pharisees met together;
 35 36 and one of their number^a tested him with this question: 'Master, which is 37 the greatest commandment in the Law?' He answered, "Love the Lord 38 your God with all your heart, with all your soul, with all your mind." That 39 is the greatest commandment. It comes first. The second is like it: "Love 40 your neighbour as yourself." Everything in the Law and the prophets hangs on these two commandments.'

41 42 Turning to the assembled Pharisees Jesus asked them, 'What is your opinion about the Messiah? Whose son is he?' 'The son of David', they 43 replied. 'How then is it', he asked, 'that David by inspiration calls him 44 "Lord"? For he says, "The Lord said to my Lord, "Sit at my right hand 45 until I put your enemies under your feet."' If David calls him "Lord", 46 how can he be David's son?' Not a man could say a word in reply; and from that day forward no one dared ask him another question.

23 1 2 JESUS THEN ADDRESSED the people and his disciples in these words:
 3 'The doctors of the law and the Pharisees sit in the chair of Moses; therefore do what they tell you; pay attention to their words. But do not follow their 4 practice; for they say one thing and do another. They make up heavy packs and pile them on men's shoulders, but will not raise a finger to lift the load 5 themselves. Whatever they do is done for show. They go about with broad 6 phylacteries^b and with large tassels on their robes; they like to have places 7 of honour at feasts and the chief seats in synagogues, to be greeted respectfully in the street, and to be addressed as "rabbi".

8 'But you must not be called "rabbi"; for you have one Rabbi, and you are 9 all brothers. Do not call any man on earth "father"; for you have one Father, 10 and he is in heaven. Nor must you be called "teacher"; you have one 11 12 Teacher, the Messiah. The greatest among you must be your servant. For whoever exalts himself will be humbled; and whoever humbles himself will be exalted.

13 'Alas, alas for you, lawyers and Pharisees, hypocrites that you are! You shut the door of the kingdom of Heaven in men's faces; you do not enter yourselves, and when others are entering, you stop them. ^c

^a Some witnesses insert a lawyer.

^b See Deuteronomy 6. 8-9 and Exodus 13. 9.

^c Some witnesses add (14) Alas for you, lawyers and Pharisees, hypocrites! You eat up the property of widows, while you say long prayers for appearance' sake. You will receive the severest sentence.

'Alas for you, lawyers and Pharisees, hypocrites! You travel over sea 15 and land to win one convert; and when you have won him you make him twice as fit for hell as you are yourselves.

'Alas for you, blind guides! You say, "If a man swears by the sanctuary, 16 that is nothing; but if he swears by the gold in the sanctuary, he is bound by his oath." Blind fools! Which is the more important, the gold, or the 17 sanctuary which sanctifies the gold? Or you say, "If a man swears by the 18 altar, that is nothing; but if he swears by the offering that lies on the altar, he is bound by his oath." What blindness! Which is the more important, the 19 offering, or the altar which sanctifies it? To swear by the altar, then, is to 20 swear both by the altar and by whatever lies on it; to swear by the sanctuary 21 is to swear both by the sanctuary and by him who dwells there; and to swear 22 by heaven is to swear both by the throne of God and by him who sits upon it.

'Alas for you, lawyers and Pharisees, hypocrites! You pay tithes of mint 23 and dill and cummin; but you have overlooked the weightier demands of the Law, justice, mercy, and good faith. It is these you should have practised, 24 without neglecting the others. Blind guides! You strain off a midge, yet gulp down a camel!

'Alas for you, lawyers and Pharisees, hypocrites! You clean the outside of 25 cup and dish, which you have filled inside by robbery and self-indulgence!
Blind Pharisee! Clean the inside of the cup first; then the outside will be 26 clean also.

'Alas for you, lawyers and Pharisees, hypocrites! You are like tombs 27 covered with whitewash; they look well from outside, but inside they are full of dead men's bones and all kinds of filth. So it is with you: outside you 28 look like honest men, but inside you are brim-full of hypocrisy and crime.

'Alas for you, lawyers and Pharisees, hypocrites! You build up the tombs 29 of the prophets and embellish the monuments of the saints, and you say, 30
"If we had been alive in our fathers' time, we should never have taken part with them in the murder of the prophets." So you acknowledge that you 31 are the sons of the men who killed the prophets. Go on then, finish off what 32 your fathers began!^a

'You snakes, you vipers' brood, how can you escape being condemned 33 to hell? I send you therefore prophets, sages, and teachers; some of them 34 you will kill and crucify, others you will flog in your synagogues and hound from city to city. And so, on you will fall the guilt of all the innocent blood 35 spilt on the ground, from innocent Abel to Zechariah son of Berachiah, whom you murdered between the sanctuary and the altar. Believe me, this 36 generation will bear the guilt of it all.

'O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, the city that murders the prophets and stones 37 the messengers sent to her! How often have I longed to gather your children, as a hen gathers her brood under her wings; but you would not 38 let me. Look, look! there is your temple, forsaken by God.^{b c} And I tell 39 you, you shall never see me until the time when you say, "Blessings on him who comes in the name of the Lord."'

Prophecies and warnings

24 JESUS WAS LEAVING the temple when his disciples came and pointed to 2 the temple buildings. He answered, 'Yes, look at it all. I tell you this:
 not one stone will be left upon another; all will be thrown down.'

3 When he was sitting on the Mount of Olives the disciples came to speak to him privately. 'Tell us,' they said, 'when will this happen? And what will be the signal for your coming and the end of the age?'

4 5 Jesus replied: 'Take care that no one misleads you. For many will come claiming my name and saying, "I am the Messiah"; and many will be 6 misled by them. The time is coming when you will hear the noise of battle near at hand and the news of battles far away; see that you are not alarmed.
 7 Such things are bound to happen; but the end is still to come. For nation will make war upon nation, kingdom upon kingdom; there will be famines 8 and earthquakes in many places. With all these things the birth-pangs of the new age begin.

9 'You will then be handed over for punishment and execution; and men 10 of all nations will hate you for your allegiance to me. Many will fall from 11 their faith; they will betray one another and hate one another. Many false 12 prophets will arise, and will mislead many; and as lawlessness spreads, 13 men's love for one another will grow cold. But the man who holds out to the 14 end will be saved. And this gospel of the Kingdom will be proclaimed throughout the earth as a testimony to all nations; and then the end will come.

15 'So when you see "the abomination of desolation", of which the prophet 16 Daniel spoke, standing in the holy place (let the reader understand), then 17 those who are in Judaea must take to the hills. If a man is on the roof, he 18 must not come down to fetch his goods from the house; if in the field, he 19 must not turn back for his coat. Alas for women with child in those days, 20 and for those who have children at the breast! Pray that it may not be 21 winter when you have to make your escape, or Sabbath. It will be a time of great distress; there has never been such a time from the beginning of the 22 world until now, and will never be again. If that time of troubles were not cut short, no living thing could survive; but for the sake of God's chosen it will be cut short.

23 'Then, if anyone says to you, "Look, here is the Messiah", or, "There he 24 is", do not believe it. Impostors will come claiming to be messiahs or prophets, and they will produce great signs and wonders to mislead even 25 God's chosen, if such a thing were possible. See, I have forewarned you.
 26 If they tell you, "He is there in the wilderness", do not go out; or if they 27 say, "He is there in the inner room", do not believe it. Like lightning from the east, flashing as far as the west, will be the coming of the Son of Man.

28 'Wherever the corpse is, there the vultures will gather.

29 'As soon as the distress of those days has passed, the sun will be darkened, the moon will not give her light, the stars will fall from the sky, the celestial 30 powers will be shaken. Then will appear in heaven the sign that heralds

the Son of Man. All the peoples of the world will make lamentation, and they will see the Son of Man coming on the clouds of heaven with great power and glory. With a trumpet blast he will send out his angels, and they will gather his chosen from the four winds, from the farthest bounds of heaven on every side. 31

‘Learn a lesson from the fig-tree. When its tender shoots appear and are breaking into leaf, you know that summer is near. In the same way, when you see all these things, you may know that the end is near,^a at the very door. I tell you this: the present generation will live to see it all. Heaven and earth will pass away; my words will never pass away. 32 33 34 35

‘But about that day and hour no one knows, not even the angels in heaven, not even the Son; only the Father. 36

‘As things were in Noah’s days, so will they be when the Son of Man comes. In the days before the flood they ate and drank and married, until the day that Noah went into the ark, and they knew nothing until the flood came and swept them all away. That is how it will be when the Son of Man comes. Then there will be two men in the field; one will be taken, the other left; two women grinding at the mill; one will be taken, the other left. 37 38 39 40 41

‘Keep awake, then; for you do not know on what day your Lord is to come. Remember, if the householder had known at what time of night the burglar was coming, he would have kept awake and not have let his house be broken into. Hold yourselves ready, therefore, because the Son of Man will come at the time you least expect him. 42 43 44

‘Who is the trusty servant, the sensible man charged by his master to manage his household staff and issue their rations at the proper time? Happy that servant who is found at his task when his master comes! I tell you this: he will be put in charge of all his master’s property. But if he is a bad servant and says to himself, “The master is a long time coming”, and begins to bully the other servants and to eat and drink with his drunken friends, then the master will arrive on a day that servant does not expect, at a time he does not know, and will cut him in pieces. Thus he will find his place among the hypocrites, where there is wailing and grinding of teeth. 45 46 47 48 49 50 51

‘When that day comes, the kingdom of Heaven will be like this. There were ten girls, who took their lamps and went out to meet the bridegroom. Five of them were foolish, and five prudent; when the foolish ones took their lamps, they took no oil with them, but the others took flasks of oil with their lamps. As the bridegroom was late in coming they all dozed off to sleep. But at midnight a cry was heard: “Here is the bridegroom! Come out to meet him.” With that the girls all got up and trimmed their lamps. The foolish said to the prudent, “Our lamps are going out; give us some of your oil.” “No,” they said; “there will never be enough for all of us. You had better go to the shop and buy some for yourselves.” While they were away the bridegroom arrived; those who were ready went in with him to the wedding; and the door was shut. And then the other five came back. “Sir, sir,” they cried, “open the door for us.” But he answered, “I declare, I do not know you.” Keep awake then; for you never know the day or the hour. 25 26 27 28 29 30 31 32 33 34 35 36 37 38 39 40 41 42 43 44 45 46 47 48 49 50 51 52 53 54 55

^a Or that he is near.

14 'It is like a man going abroad, who called his servants and put his capital
15 in their hands; to one he gave five bags of gold, to another two, to another 16 one, each according to his capacity. Then he left the country. The man who 17 had the five bags went at once and employed them in business, and made 18 a profit of five bags, and the man who had the two bags made two. But the 19 man who had been given one bag of gold went off and dug a hole in the 20 ground, and hid his master's money. A long time afterwards their master 21 returned, and proceeded to settle accounts with them. The man who had 22 been given the five bags of gold came and produced the five he had made:
23 "Master," he said, "you left five bags with me; look, I have made five more."
24 "Well done, my good and trusty servant!" said the master. "You have 25 proved trustworthy in a small way; I will now put you in charge of some-26 thing big. Come and share your master's delight." The man with the two 27 bags then came and said, "Master, you left two bags with me; look, I have 28 made two more." "Well done, my good and trusty servant!" said the 29 master. "You have proved trustworthy in a small way; I will now put you 30 in charge of something big. Come and share your master's delight." Then 31 the man who had been given one bag came and said, "Master, I knew you 32 to be a hard man: you reap where you have not sown, you gather where you 33 have not scattered; so I was afraid, and I went and hid your gold in the 34 ground. Here it is—you have what belongs to you." "You lazy rascal!"
35 said the master. "You knew that I reap where I have not sown, and gather 36 where I have not scattered? Then you ought to have put my money on 37 deposit, and on my return I should have got it back with interest. Take the 38 bag of gold from him, and give it to the one with the ten bags. For the man 39 who has will always be given more, till he has enough and to spare; and 40 the man who has not will forfeit even what he has. Fling the useless servant
41 out into the dark, the place of weeping and grinding of teeth!"
42 "When the Son of Man comes in his glory and all the angels with him, 43 he will sit in state on his throne, with all the nations gathered before him.
44 He will separate men into two groups, as a shepherd separates the sheep
45 from the goats, and he will place the sheep on his right hand and the goats 46 on his left. Then the king will say to those on his right hand, "You have my 47 Father's blessing; come, enter and possess the kingdom that has been 48 ready for you since the world was made. For when I was hungry, you gave 49 me food; when thirsty, you gave me drink; when I was a stranger you took 50 me into your home, when naked you clothed me; when I was ill you came 51 to my help, when in prison you visited me." Then the righteous will reply, 52 "Lord, when was it that we saw you hungry and fed you, or thirsty and 53 gave you drink, a stranger and took you home, or naked and clothed you?
54 When did we see you ill or in prison, and come to visit you?" And the king 55 will answer, "I tell you this: anything you did for one of my brothers here, 56 however humble, you did for me." Then he will say to those on his left 57 hand, "The curse is upon you; go from my sight to the eternal fire that is 58 ready for the devil and his angels. For when I was hungry you gave me
59 nothing to eat, when thirsty nothing to drink; when I was a stranger you 60 gave me no home, when naked you did not clothe me; when I was ill and in 61 prison you did not come to my help." And they too will reply, "Lord, when was it that we saw you hungry or thirsty or a stranger or naked or ill or in prison, and did nothing for you?" And he will answer, "I tell you this: anything you did not do for one of these, however humble, you did not do for me." And they will go away to eternal punishment, but the righteous will enter eternal life.'

The final conflict

WHEN JESUS HAD FINISHED this discourse he said to his disciples, 'You know that in two days' time it will be Passover, and the Son of Man is to be handed over for crucifixion.'

Then the chief priests and the elders of the nation met in the palace of the High Priest, Caiaphas; and there they conferred together on a scheme to have Jesus arrested by some trick and put to death. 'It must not be during the festival,' they said, 'or there may be rioting among the people.'

JESUS WAS AT BETHANY in the house of Simon the leper, when a woman came to him with a small bottle of fragrant oil, very costly; and as he sat at table she began to pour it over his head. The disciples were indignant when they saw it. 'Why this waste?' they said; 'it could have been sold for a good sum and the money given to the poor.' Jesus was aware of this, and said to them, 'Why must you make trouble for the woman? It is a fine thing she has done for me. You have the poor among you always; but you will not always have me. When she poured this oil on my body it was her way of preparing me for burial. I tell you this: wherever in all the world this gospel is proclaimed, what she has done will be told as her memorial.'

THEN ONE OF THE TWELVE, the man called Judas Iscariot, went to the chief priests and said, 'What will you give me to betray him to you?' They weighed him out^a thirty silver pieces. From that moment he began to look out for an opportunity to betray him.

On the first day of Unleavened Bread the disciples came to ask Jesus, 'Where would you like us to prepare for your Passover supper?' He answered, 'Go to a certain man in the city, and tell him, "The Master says, "My appointed time is near; I am to keep Passover with my disciples at your house."'" The disciples did as Jesus directed them and prepared for Passover.

In the evening he sat down with the twelve disciples; and during supper he said, 'I tell you this: one of you will betray me.' In great distress they exclaimed one after the other, 'Can you mean me, Lord?' He answered, 'One who has dipped his hand into this bowl with me will betray me. The Son of Man is going the way appointed for him in the scriptures; but alas for that man by whom the Son of Man is betrayed! It would be better for that man if he had never been born.' Then Judas spoke, the one who was to betray him: 'Rabbi, can you mean me?' Jesus replied, 'The words are yours.'^b

^a Or agreed to pay him . . .

^b Or It is as you say.

26 During supper Jesus took bread, and having said the blessing he broke it and gave it to the disciples with the words: 'Take this and eat; this is my 27 body.' Then he took a cup, and having offered thanks to God he gave it to 28 them with the words: 'Drink from it, all of you. For this is my blood, the 29 blood of the covenant, shed for many for the forgiveness of sins. I tell you, never again shall I drink from the fruit of the vine until that day when I drink it new with you in the kingdom of my Father.'

30 After singing the Passover Hymn, they went out to the Mount of Olives.
31 Then Jesus said to them, 'Tonight you will all fall from your faith on my account; for it stands written: "I will strike the shepherd down and the 32 sheep of his flock will be scattered." But after I am raised again, I will go on 33 before you into Galilee.' Peter replied, 'Everyone else may fall away on 34 your account, but I never will.' Jesus said to him, 'I tell you, tonight before 35 the cock crows you will disown me three times.' Peter said, 'Even if I must die with you, I will never disown you.' And all the disciples said the same.

36 JESUS THEN CAME with his disciples to a place called Gethsemane. He 37 said to them, 'Sit here while I go over there to pray.' He took with him
Peter and the two sons of Zebedee. Anguish and dismay came over him, 38 and he said to them, 'My heart is ready to break with grief. Stop here, and 39 stay awake with me.' He went on a little, fell on his face in prayer, and said, 'My Father, if it is possible, let this cup pass me by. Yet not as I will, but as thou wilt.'

40 He came to the disciples and found them asleep; and he said to Peter, 41 'What! Could none of you stay awake with me one hour? Stay awake, and pray that you may be spared the test. The spirit is willing, but the flesh is weak.'

42 He went away a second time, and prayed: 'My Father, if it is not possible
43 for this cup to pass me by without my drinking it, thy will be done.' He came 44 again and found them asleep, for their eyes were heavy. So he left them and went away again; and he prayed the third time, using the same words as before.

45 Then he came to the disciples and said to them, 'Still sleeping? Still taking your ease? The hour has come! The Son of Man is betrayed to 46 sinful men. Up, let us go forward; the traitor is upon us.'

47 While he was still speaking, Judas, one of the Twelve, appeared; with him was a great crowd armed with swords and cudgels, sent by the chief 48 priests and the elders of the nation. The traitor gave them this sign: 'The 49 one I kiss is your man; seize him'; and stepping forward at once, he said, 50 'Hail, Rabbi!', and kissed him. Jesus replied, 'Friend, do what you are here to do.'^a They then came forward, seized Jesus, and held him fast.

51 At that moment one of those with Jesus reached for his sword and drew 52 it, and he struck at the High Priest's servant and cut off his ear. But Jesus said to him, 'Put up your sword. All who take the sword die by the sword.
53 Do you suppose that I cannot appeal to my Father, who would at once 54 send to my aid more than twelve legions of angels? But how then could the scriptures be fulfilled, which say that this must be?'

^a Or Friend, what are you here for?

At the same time Jesus spoke to the crowd: 'Do you take me for a bandit, 55 that you have come out with swords and cudgels to arrest me? Day after 56 day I sat teaching in the temple, and you did not lay hands on me. But this has all happened to fulfil what the prophets wrote.'

Then the disciples all deserted him and ran away.

JESUS WAS LED OFF under arrest to the house of Caiaphas the High Priest, 57 where the lawyers and elders were assembled. Peter followed him at a 58 distance till he came to the High Priest's courtyard, and going in he sat down there among the attendants, meaning to see the end of it all.

The chief priests and the whole Council tried to find some allegation 59 against Jesus on which a death-sentence could be based; but they failed 60 to find one, though many came forward with false evidence. Finally two men alleged that he had said, 'I can pull down the temple of God, and 61 rebuild it in three days.' At this the High Priest rose and said to him, 'Have 62 you no answer to the charge that these witnesses bring against you?' But 63 Jesus kept silence. The High Priest then said, 'By the living God I charge you to tell us: Are you the Messiah, the Son of God?' Jesus replied, 'The 64 words are yours.^a But I tell you this: from now on, you will see the Son of Man seated at the right hand of God^b and coming on the clouds of heaven.'
At these words the High Priest tore his robes and exclaimed, 'Blasphemy! 65 Need we call further witnesses? You have heard the blasphemy. What is 66 your opinion?' 'He is guilty,' they answered; 'he should die.'

Then they spat in his face and struck him with their fists; and others 67 said, as they beat him, 'Now, Messiah, if you are a prophet, tell us who 68 hit you.'

Meanwhile Peter was sitting outside in the courtyard when a serving- 69 maid accosted him and said, 'You were there too with Jesus the Galilean.' 70
Peter denied it in face of them all. 'I do not know what you mean', he said.
He then went out to the gateway, where another girl, seeing him, said to 71 the people there, 'This fellow was with Jesus of Nazareth.' Once again he 72 denied it, saying with an oath, 'I do not know the man.' Shortly afterwards 73
the bystanders came up and said to Peter, 'Surely you are another of them; your accent gives you away!' At this he broke into curses and declared 74 with an oath: 'I do not know the man.' At that moment a cock crew; and 75 Peter remembered how Jesus had said, 'Before the cock crows you will disown me three times.' He went outside, and wept bitterly.

WHEN MORNING CAME, the chief priests and the elders of the nation met 27 in conference to plan the death of Jesus. They then put him in chains and 2 led him away, to hand him over to Pilate, the Roman Governor.

When Judas the traitor saw that Jesus had been condemned, he was 3 seized with remorse, and returned the thirty silver pieces to the chief priests and elders. 'I have sinned,' he said; 'I have brought an innocent 4 man to his death.' But they said, 'What is that to us? See to that yourself.'
So he threw the money down in the temple and left them, and went and 5 hanged himself.

^a Or It is as you say.

^b Literally of the Power.

6 Taking up the money, the chief priests argued: 'This cannot be put into 7 the temple fund; it is blood-money.' So after conferring they used it to 8 buy the Potter's Field, as a burial-place for foreigners. This explains the 9 name 'Blood Acre', by which that field has been known ever since; and in 10 this way fulfilment was given to the prophetic utterance of Jeremiah:
11 "They took^a the thirty silver pieces, the price set on a man's head (for that 12 was his price among the Israelites), and gave the money for the potter's field, 13 as the Lord directed me.'

11 Jesus was now brought before the Governor; and as he stood there the 12 Governor asked him, 'Are you the king of the Jews?' 'The words are 13 yours',^b said Jesus; and to the charges laid against him by the chief priests
14 and elders he made no reply. Then Pilate said to him, 'Do you not hear all 15 this evidence that is brought against you?'; but he still refused to answer
16 one word, to the Governor's great astonishment.

15 At the festival season it was the Governor's custom to release one 16 prisoner chosen by the people. There was then in custody a man of some 17 notoriety, called Jesus^c Bar-Abbas. When they were assembled Pilate 18 said to them, 'Which would you like me to release to you—Jesus^c Bar-19 Abbas, or Jesus called Messiah?' For he knew that it was out of malice 20 that they had brought Jesus before him.

19 While Pilate was sitting in court a message came to him from his wife:
20 'Have nothing to do with that innocent man; I was much troubled on his 21 account in my dreams last night.'

20 Meanwhile the chief priests and elders had persuaded the crowd to ask 21 for the release of Bar-Abbas and to have Jesus put to death. So when the 22 Governor asked, 'Which of the two do you wish me to release to you?',
23 they said, 'Bar-Abbas.' 'Then what am I to do with Jesus called Messiah?'
24 asked Pilate; and with one voice they answered, 'Crucify him!' 'Why, 25 what harm has he done?' Pilate asked; but they shouted all the louder, 26 'Crucify him!'

24 Pilate could see that nothing was being gained, and a riot was starting;
25 so he took water and washed his hands in full view of the people, saying, 26 'My hands are clean of this man's blood; see to that yourselves.' And with 27 one voice the people cried, 'His blood be on us, and on our children.' He 28 then released Bar-Abbas to them; but he had Jesus flogged, and handed 29 him over to be crucified.

27 PILATE'S SOLDIERS then took Jesus into the Governor's headquarters, 28 where they collected the whole company round him. They stripped him 29 and dressed him in a scarlet mantle; and plaiting a crown of thorns they 30 placed it on his head, with a cane in his right hand. Falling on their knees 31 before him they jeered at him: 'Hail, King of the Jews!' They spat on him, 32 and used the cane to beat him about the head. When they had finished their 33 mockery, they took off the mantle and dressed him in his own clothes.

32 Then they led him away to be crucified. On their way out they met a man 33 from Cyrene, Simon by name, and pressed him into service to carry his 34 cross.

^a Or I took.^b Or It is as you say.^c Some witnesses omit Jesus.

So they came to a place called Golgotha (which means 'Place of a skull') 33 and there he was offered a draught of wine mixed with gall; but when he 34 had tasted it he would not drink.

After fastening him to the cross they divided his clothes among them by 35 casting lots, and then sat down there to keep watch. Over his head was 36 37 placed the inscription giving the charge: 'This is Jesus the king of the Jews.'

Two bandits were crucified with him, one on his right and the other on 38 his left.

The passers-by hurled abuse at him: they wagged their heads and cried, 39 40
'You would pull the temple down, would you, and build it in three days?
Come down from the cross and save yourself, if you are indeed the Son of God.' So too the chief priests with the lawyers and elders mocked at him: 41
'He saved others,' they said, 'but he cannot save himself. King of Israel, 42 indeed! Let him come down now from the cross, and then we will believe him. Did he trust in God? Let God rescue him, if he wants him—for he 43 said he was God's Son.' Even the bandits who were crucified with him 44 taunted him in the same way.

From midday a darkness fell over the whole land, which lasted until 45 three in the afternoon; and about three Jesus cried aloud, 'Eli, Eli, lema 46 sabachthani?', which means, 'My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?' Some of the bystanders, on hearing this, said, 'He is calling Elijah.' 47
One of them ran at once and fetched a sponge, which he soaked in sour 48 wine, and held it to his lips on the end of a cane. But the others said, 49
'Let us see if Elijah will come to save him.'

Jesus again gave a loud cry, and breathed his last. At that moment the 50 51 curtain of the temple was torn in two from top to bottom. There was an earthquake, the rocks split and the graves opened, and many of God's 52 saints were raised from sleep; and coming out of their graves after his 53 resurrection they entered the Holy City, where many saw them. And when 54 the centurion and his men who were keeping watch over Jesus saw the earthquake and all that was happening, they were filled with awe, and they said, 'Truly this man was a son of God.'^a

A NUMBER OF WOMEN were also present, watching from a distance; they 55 had followed Jesus from Galilee and waited on him. Among them were 56 Mary of Magdala, Mary the mother of James and Joseph, and the mother of the sons of Zebedee.

When evening fell, there came a man of Arimathaea, Joseph by name, 57 who was a man of means, and had himself become a disciple of Jesus. He 58 approached Pilate, and asked for the body of Jesus; and Pilate gave orders that he should have it. Joseph took the body, wrapped it in a clean linen 59 sheet, and laid it in his own unused tomb, which he had cut out of the rock; 60 he then rolled a large stone against the entrance, and went away. Mary of 61
Magdala was there, and the other Mary, sitting opposite the grave.

Next day, the morning after that Friday, the chief priests and the 62
Pharisees came in a body to Pilate. 'Your Excellency,' they said, 'we recall 63 how that impostor said while he was still alive, "I am to be raised again

^a Or the Son of God.

64 after three days." So will you give orders for the grave to be made secure until the third day? Otherwise his disciples may come, steal the body, and then tell the people that he has been raised from the dead; and the final
65 deception will be worse than the first.' 'You may have your guard,' said
66 Pilate; 'go and make it secure as best you can.' So they went and made the grave secure; they sealed the stone, and left the guard in charge.

28 THE SABBATH WAS OVER, and it was about daybreak on Sunday, when
2 Mary of Magdala and the other Mary came to look at the grave. Suddenly there was a violent earthquake; an angel of the Lord descended from heaven; he came to the stone and rolled it away, and sat himself down on it.
3 4 His face shone like lightning; his garments were white as snow. At the sight of him the guards shook with fear and lay like the dead.

5 The angel then addressed the women: 'You', he said, 'have nothing to 6 fear. I know you are looking for Jesus who was crucified. He is not here; he has been raised again, as he said he would be. Come and see the place where 7 he was laid, and then go quickly and tell his disciples: "He has been raised from the dead and is going on before you into Galilee; there you will see him." That is what I had to tell you.'

8 They hurried away from the tomb in awe and great joy, and ran to tell
9 the disciples. Suddenly Jesus was there in their path. He gave them his greeting, and they came up and clasped his feet, falling prostrate before 10 him. Then Jesus said to them, 'Do not be afraid. Go and take word to my brothers that they are to leave for Galilee. They will see me there.'

11 The women had started on their way when some of the guard went into the city and reported to the chief priests everything that had happened.
12 After meeting with the elders and conferring together, the chief priests offered the soldiers a substantial bribe and told them to say, 'His disciples
13 came by night and stole the body while we were asleep.' They added, 'If this should reach the Governor's ears, we will put matters right with him 14 and see that you do not suffer.' So they took the money and did as they were told. This story became widely known, and is current in Jewish circles to 15 this day.

16 The eleven disciples made their way to Galilee, to the mountain where 17 Jesus had told them to meet him. When they saw him, they fell prostrate before him, though some were doubtful. Jesus then came up and spoke to 18 them. He said: 'Full authority in heaven and on earth has been committed to me. Go forth therefore and make all nations my disciples; baptize men 19 everywhere in the name of the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit, and teach them to observe all that I have commanded you. And be assured, 20 I am with you always, to the end of time.'

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO MARK

The coming of Christ

HERE BEGINS THE GOSPEL of Jesus Christ the Son 1 of God.^a

In the prophet Isaiah it stands written: 'Here is my herald 2 whom I send on ahead of you, and he will prepare your way. A voice crying 3 aloud in the wilderness, "Prepare a way for the Lord; clear a straight path for him."' And so it was that John the Baptist appeared in the wilderness 4 proclaiming a baptism in token of repentance, for the forgiveness of sins; 5 and they flocked to him from the whole Judæan country-side and the city of Jerusalem, and were baptized by him in the River Jordan, confessing their sins.

John was dressed in a rough coat of camel's hair, with a leather belt 6 round his waist, and he fed on locusts and wild honey. His proclamation 7 ran: 'After me comes one who is mightier than I. I am not fit to unfasten his shoes. I have baptized you with water; he will baptize you with the 8
Holy Spirit.'

It happened at this time that Jesus came from Nazareth in Galilee and 9 was baptized in the Jordan by John. At the moment when he came up out 10 of the water, he saw the heavens torn open and the Spirit, like a dove, descending upon him. And a voice spoke from heaven: 'Thou art my Son, 11 my Beloved; ^b on thee my favour rests.'

Thereupon the Spirit sent him away into the wilderness, and there he 12 13 remained for forty days tempted by Satan. He was among the wild beasts;
and the angels waited on him.

In Galilee: success and opposition

AFTER JOHN HAD BEEN ARRESTED, Jesus came into Galilee proclaim- 14
ing the Gospel of God: 'The time has come; the kingdom of God is 15 upon you; repent, and believe the Gospel.'

Jesus was walking by the Sea of Galilee when he saw Simon and his 16 brother Andrew on the lake at work with a casting-net; for they were fishermen. Jesus said to them, 'Come with me, and I will make you fishers 17 of men.' And at once they left their nets and followed him. 18

When he had gone a little further he saw James son of Zebedee and his 19 brother John, who were in the boat overhauling their nets. He called them; 20

^a Some witnesses omit the Son of God.

^b Or Thou art my only Son.

and, leaving their father Zebedee in the boat with the hired men, they went off to follow him.

21 They came to Capernaum, and on the Sabbath he went to synagogue and 22 began to teach. The people were astounded at his teaching, for, unlike the 23 doctors of the law, he taught with a note of authority. Now there was a man 24 in the synagogue possessed by an unclean spirit. He shrieked: 'What do you want with us, Jesus of Nazareth? Have you ^a come to destroy us?
 25 I know who you are—the Holy One of God.' Jesus rebuked him: 'Be silent', 26 he said, 'and come out of him.' And the unclean spirit threw the man into 27 convulsions and with a loud cry left him. They were all dumbfounded and began to ask one another, 'What is this? A new kind of teaching! He speaks with authority. When he gives orders, even the unclean spirits submit.' 28 The news spread rapidly, and he was soon spoken of all over the district of Galilee.

29 On leaving the synagogue they went straight to the house of Simon and 30 Andrew; and James and John went with them. Simon's mother-in-law 31 was ill in bed with fever. They told him about her at once. He came forward, took her by the hand, and helped her to her feet. The fever left her and she waited upon them.

32 That evening after sunset they brought to him all who were ill or pos-33 34 sessed by devils; and the whole town was there, gathered at the door. He healed many who suffered from various diseases, and drove out many devils. He would not let the devils speak, because they knew who he was.

35 Very early next morning he got up and went out. He went away to a lonely 36 spot and remained there in prayer. But Simon and his companions searched 37 38 him out, found him, and said, 'They are all looking for you.' He answered, 'Let us move on to the country towns in the neighbourhood; I have to 39 proclaim my message there also; that is what I came out to do.' So all through Galilee he went, preaching in the synagogues and casting out the devils.

40 Once he was approached by a leper, who knelt before him begging his 41 help. 'If only you will,' said the man, 'you can cleanse me.' In warm indignation Jesus stretched out his hand, ^b touched him, and said, 'Indeed 42 I will; be clean again.' The leprosy left him immediately, and he was clean.
 43 44 Then he dismissed him with this stern warning: 'Be sure you say nothing to anybody. Go and show yourself to the priest, and make the offering 45 laid down by Moses for your cleansing; that will certify the cure.' But the man went out and made the whole story public; he spread it far and wide, until Jesus could no longer show himself in any town, but stayed outside in the open country. Even so, people kept coming to him from all quarters.

2 When after some days he returned to Capernaum, the news went round 2 that he was at home; and such a crowd collected that the space in front of the door was not big enough to hold them. And while he was proclaiming 3 the message to them, a man was brought who was paralysed. Four men 4 were carrying him, but because of the crowd they could not get him near.
 So they opened up the roof over the place where Jesus was, and when they

^a Or You have.

had broken through they lowered the stretcher on which the paralysed man was lying. When Jesus saw their faith, he said to the paralysed man, 'My son, your sins are forgiven.'

Now there were some lawyers sitting there and they thought to themselves, 'Why does the fellow talk like that? This is blasphemy! Who but God alone can forgive sins?' Jesus knew in his own mind that this was what they were thinking, and said to them: 'Why do you harbour thoughts like these? Is it easier to say to this paralysed man, "Your sins are forgiven", or to say, "Stand up, take your bed, and walk"? But to convince you that the Son of Man has the right on earth to forgive sins—he turned to the paralysed man—"I say to you, stand up, take your bed, and go home." And he got up, and at once took his stretcher and went out in full view of them all, so that they were astounded and praised God. 'Never before', they said, 'have we seen the like.'

Once more he went away to the lake-side. All the crowd came to him, and he taught them there. As he went along, he saw Levi son of Alphaeus at his seat in the custom-house, and said to him, 'Follow me'; and Levi rose and followed him.

When Jesus was at table in his house, many bad characters—tax-gatherers and others—were seated with him and his disciples; for there were many who followed him. Some doctors of the law who were Pharisees noticed him eating in this bad company, and said to his disciples, 'He eats with tax-gatherers and sinners!' Jesus heard it and said to them, 'It is not the healthy that need a doctor, but the sick; I did not come to invite virtuous people, but sinners.'

Once, when John's disciples and the Pharisees were keeping a fast, some people came to him and said, 'Why is it that John's disciples and the disciples of the Pharisees are fasting, but yours are not?' Jesus said to them, 'Can you expect the bridegroom's friends to fast while the bridegroom is with them? As long as they have the bridegroom with them, there can be no fasting. But the time will come when the bridegroom will be taken away from them, and on that day they will fast.'

'No one sews a patch of unshrunk cloth on to an old coat; if he does, the patch tears away from it, the new from the old, and leaves a bigger hole. No one puts new wine into old wine-skins; if he does, the wine will burst the skins, and then wine and skins are both lost. Fresh skins for new wine!'

One Sabbath he was going through the cornfields; and his disciples, as they went, began to pluck ears of corn. The Pharisees said to him, 'Look, why are they doing what is forbidden on the Sabbath?' He answered, 'Have you never read what David did when he and his men were hungry and had nothing to eat? He went into the House of God, in the time of Abiathar the High Priest, and ate the sacred bread, though no one but a priest is allowed to eat it, and even gave it to his men.'

He also said to them, 'The Sabbath was made for the sake of man and not man for the Sabbath: therefore the Son of Man is sovereign even over the Sabbath.'

On another occasion when he went to synagogue, there was a man in the congregation who had a withered arm; and they were watching to see whether Jesus would cure him on the Sabbath, so that they could bring a charge against him. He said to the man with the withered arm, 'Come and stand out here.' Then he turned to them: 'Is it permitted to do good or to do evil on the Sabbath, to save life or to kill?' They had nothing to say; and, looking round at them with anger and sorrow at their obstinate stupidity, he said to the man, 'Stretch out your arm.' He stretched it out and his arm was restored. But the Pharisees, on leaving the synagogue, began plotting against him with the partisans of Herod to see how they could make away with him.

JESUS WENT AWAY to the lake-side with his disciples. Great numbers from Galilee, Judaea and Jerusalem, Idumaea and Transjordan, and the neighbourhood of Tyre and Sidon, heard what he was doing and came to see him. So he told his disciples to have a boat ready for him, to save him from being crushed by the crowd. For he cured so many that sick people of all kinds came crowding in upon him to touch him. The unclean spirits too, when they saw him, would fall at his feet and cry aloud, 'You are the Son of God'; but he insisted that they should not make him known.

He then went up into the hill-country and called the men he wanted; and they went and joined him. He appointed twelve as his companions, whom he would send out to proclaim the Gospel, with a commission to drive out devils. So he appointed the Twelve: to Simon he gave the name Peter; then came the sons of Zebedee, James and his brother John, to whom he gave the name Boanerges, Sons of Thunder; then Andrew and Philip and Bartholomew and Matthew and Thomas and James the son of Alphaeus and Thaddaeus and Simon, a member of the Zealot party, and Judas Iscariot, the man who betrayed him.

He entered a house; and once more such a crowd collected round them that they had no chance to eat. When his family heard of this, they set out to take charge of him; for people were saying that he was out of his mind.^a

The doctors of the law, too, who had come down from Jerusalem, said, 'He is possessed by Beelzebub', and, 'He drives out devils by the prince of devils.' So he called them to come forward, and spoke to them in parables: 'How can Satan drive out Satan? If a kingdom is divided against itself, that kingdom cannot stand; if a household is divided against itself, that household will never stand; and if Satan is in rebellion against himself, he is divided and cannot stand; and that is the end of him.

'On the other hand, no one can break into a strong man's house and make off with his goods unless he has first tied the strong man up; then he can ransack the house.

'I tell you this: no sin, no slander, is beyond forgiveness for men; but whoever slanders the Holy Spirit can never be forgiven; he is guilty of eternal sin.' He said this because they had declared that he was possessed by an unclean spirit.

Then his mother and his brothers arrived, and remaining outside sent in a message asking him to come out to them. A crowd was sitting round and word was brought to him: 'Your mother and your brothers are outside asking for you.' He replied, 'Who is my mother? Who are my brothers?' 33

^a Or of him. 'He is out of his mind', they said.

 And looking round at those who were sitting in the circle about him he said, 34
 'Here are my mother and my brothers. Whoever does the will of God is 35 my brother, my sister, my mother.'

ON ANOTHER OCCASION he began to teach by the lake-side. The crowd 4 that gathered round him was so large that he had to get into a boat on the lake, and there he sat, with the whole crowd on the beach right down to the water's edge. And he taught them many things by parables. 2

As he taught he said:

'Listen! A sower went out to sow. And it happened that as he sowed, 3 4 some seed fell along the footpath; and the birds came and ate it up. Some 5 seed fell on rocky ground, where it had little soil, and it sprouted quickly because it had no depth of earth; but when the sun rose the young corn was 6 scorched, and as it had no root it withered away. Some seed fell among 7 thistles; and the thistles shot up and choked the corn, and it yielded no crop. And some of the seed fell into good soil, where it came up and grew, 8 and bore fruit; and the yield was thirtyfold, sixtyfold, even a hundredfold.'
 He added, 'If you have ears to hear, then hear.' 9

When he was alone, the Twelve and others who were round him ques- 10 tioned him about the parables. He replied, 'To you the secret of the 11 kingdom of God has been given; but to those who are outside everything comes by way of parables, so that (as Scripture says) they may look and 12 look, but see nothing; they may hear and hear, but understand nothing;
 otherwise they might turn to God and be forgiven.'

So he said, 'You do not understand this parable? How then are you 13 understand any parable? The sower sows the word. Those along the foot- 14 15 path are people in whom the word is sown, but no sooner have they heard it than Satan comes and carries off the word which has been sown in them.
 It is the same with those who receive the seed on rocky ground; as soon as 16 they hear the word, they accept it with joy, but it strikes no root in them; 17 they have no staying-power; then, when there is trouble or persecution on account of the word, they fall away at once. Others again receive the seed 18 among thistles; they hear the word, but worldly cares and the false glamour of wealth and all kinds of evil desire come in and choke the word, and it 19 proves barren. And there are those who receive the seed in good soil; they 20 hear the word and welcome it; and they bear fruit thirtyfold, sixtyfold, or a hundredfold.'

He said to them, 'Do you bring in the lamp to put it under the meal-tub, 21 or under the bed? Surely it is brought to be set on the lamp-stand. For 22 nothing is hidden unless it is to be disclosed, and nothing put under cover unless it is to come into the open. If you have ears to hear, then hear.' 23

He also said, 'Take note of what you hear; the measure you give is the 24 measure you will receive, with something more besides. For the man who 25 has will be given more, and the man who has not will forfeit even what he has.'

He said, 'The kingdom of God is like this. A man scatters seed on the land; 26
 he goes to bed at night and gets up in the morning, and the seed sprouts 27

28 and grows—how, he does not know. The ground produces a crop by itself, 29 first the blade, then the ear, then full-grown corn in the ear; but as soon as the crop is ripe, he plies the sickle, because harvest-time has come.'

30 He said also, 'How shall we picture the kingdom of God, or by what 31 parable shall we describe it? It is like the mustard-seed, which is smaller 32 than any seed in the ground at its sowing. But once sown, it springs up and grows taller than any other plant, and forms branches so large that the birds can settle in its shade.'

33 With many such parables he would give them his message, so far as they 34 were able to receive it. He never spoke to them except in parables; but privately to his disciples he explained everything.

Miracles of Christ

35 THAT DAY, in the evening, he said to them, 'Let us cross over to the other 36 side of the lake.' So they left the crowd and took him with them in the boat where he had been sitting; and there were other boats accompanying 37 him. A heavy squall came on and the waves broke over the boat until it 38 was all but swamped. Now he was in the stern asleep on a cushion; they 39 roused him and said, 'Master, we are sinking! Do you not care?' He awoke, rebuked the wind, and said to the sea, 'Hush! Be still!' The wind dropped 40 and there was a dead calm. He said to them, 'Why are you such cowards?
41 Have you no faith even now?' They were awestruck and said to one another, 'Who can this be? Even the wind and the sea obey him.'

5 So they came to the other side of the lake, into the country of the Gera-
2 senes. As he stepped ashore, a man possessed by an unclean spirit came up
3 to him from among the tombs where he had his dwelling. He could no 4 longer be controlled; even chains were useless; he had often been fettered and chained up, but he had snapped his chains and broken the fetters. No 5 one was strong enough to master him. And so, unceasingly, night and day, he would cry aloud among the tombs and on the hill-sides and cut himself
6 with stones. When he saw Jesus in the distance, he ran and flung himself
7 down before him, shouting loudly, 'What do you want with me, Jesus, son 8 of the Most High God? In God's name do not torment me.' (For Jesus was 9 already saying to him, 'Out, unclean spirit, come out of this man!') Jesus asked him, 'What is your name?' 'My name is Legion,' he said, 'there are 10 so many of us.' And he begged hard that Jesus would not send them out of the country.

11 Now there happened to be a large herd of pigs feeding on the hill-side, 12 and the spirits begged him, 'Send us among the pigs and let us go into 13 them.' He gave them leave; and the unclean spirits came out and went into the pigs; and the herd, of about two thousand, rushed over the edge into the lake and were drowned.

14 The men in charge of them took to their heels and carried the news to the town and country-side; and the people came out to see what had happened.
15 They came to Jesus and saw the madman who had been possessed by the legion of devils, sitting there clothed and in his right mind; and they were afraid. The spectators told them how the madman had been cured and what had happened to the pigs. Then they begged Jesus to leave the district. 16 17

As he was stepping into the boat, the man who had been possessed begged to go with him. Jesus would not allow it, but said to him, 'Go home to your own folk and tell them what the Lord in his mercy has done for you.' 18 19
The man went off and spread the news in the Ten Towns ^a of all that Jesus had done for him; and they were all amazed. 20

As soon as Jesus had returned by boat to the other shore, a great crowd once more gathered round him. While he was by the lake-side, the president of one of the synagogues came up, Jairus by name, and, when he saw him, threw himself down at his feet and pleaded with him. 'My little daughter', he said, 'is at death's door. I beg you to come and lay your hands on her to cure her and save her life.' So Jesus went with him, accompanied by a great crowd which pressed upon him. 21

Among them was a woman who had suffered from haemorrhages for twelve years; and in spite of long treatment by many doctors, on which she had spent all she had, there had been no improvement; on the contrary, she had grown worse. She had heard what people were saying about Jesus, so she came up from behind in the crowd and touched his cloak; for she said to herself, 'If I touch even his clothes, I shall be cured.' And there and then the source of her haemorrhages dried up and she knew in herself that she was cured of her trouble. At the same time Jesus, aware that power had gone out of him, turned round in the crowd and asked, 'Who touched my clothes?' His disciples said to him, 'You see the crowd pressing upon you and yet you ask, "Who touched me?"' Meanwhile he was looking round to see who had done it. And the woman, trembling with fear when she grasped what had happened to her, came and fell at his feet and told him the whole truth. He said to her, 'My daughter, your faith has cured you. Go in peace, free for ever from this trouble.' 25

While he was still speaking, a message came from the president's house, 'Your daughter is dead; why trouble the Rabbi further?' But Jesus, overhearing the message as it was delivered, said to the president of the synagogue, 'Do not be afraid; only have faith.' After this he allowed no one to accompany him except Peter and James and James's brother John. They came to the president's house, where he found a great commotion, with loud crying and wailing. So he went in and said to them, 'Why this crying and commotion? The child is not dead: she is asleep'; and they only laughed at him. But after turning all the others out, he took the child's father and mother and his own companions and went in where the child was lying. Then, taking hold of her hand, he said to her, 'Talitha cum', which means, 'Get up, my child.' Immediately the girl got up and walked about—she was twelve years old. At that they were beside themselves with amazement. He gave them strict orders to let no one hear about it, and told them to give her something to eat. 35

He left that place and went to his home town accompanied by his disciples. When the Sabbath came he began to teach in the synagogue; and the large congregation who heard him were amazed and said, 'Where 6

does he get it from?', and, 'What wisdom is this that has been given him?', 3 and, 'How does he work such miracles? Is not this the carpenter, the son of Mary,^a the brother of James and Joseph and Judas and Simon? And 4 are not his sisters here with us?' So they fell foul of him. Jesus said to them,
 'A prophet will always be held in honour except in his home town, and 5 among his kinsmen and family.' He could work no miracle there, except 6 that he put his hands on a few sick people and healed them; and he was taken aback by their want of faith.

7 ON ONE OF HIS TEACHING JOURNEYS round the villages he summoned the Twelve and sent them out in pairs on a mission. He gave them authority 8 over unclean spirits, and instructed them to take nothing for the journey
 9 beyond a stick: no bread, no pack, no money in their belts. They might wear 10 sandals, but not a second coat. 'When you are admitted to a house', he 11 added, 'stay there until you leave those parts. At any place where they will not receive you or listen to you, shake the dust off your feet as you leave, 12 as a warning to them.' So they set out and called publicly for repentance.
 13 They drove out many devils, and many sick people they anointed with oil and cured.

14 Now King Herod heard of it, for the fame of Jesus had spread; and people were saying,^b 'John the Baptist has been raised to life, and that is 15 why these miraculous powers are at work in him.' Others said, 'It is Elijah.'
 16 Others again, 'He is a prophet like one of the old prophets.' But Herod, when he heard of it, said, 'This is John, whom I beheaded, raised from the dead.'

17 For this same Herod had sent and arrested John and put him in prison on account of his brother Philip's wife, Herodias, whom he had married.
 18 19 John had told Herod, 'You have no right to your brother's wife.' Thus Herodias nursed a grudge against him and would willingly have killed him, 20 but she could not; for Herod went in awe of John, knowing him to be a good and holy man; so he kept him in custody. He liked to listen to him, although the listening left him greatly perplexed.

21 Herodias found her opportunity when Herod on his birthday gave a banquet to his chief officials and commanders and the leading men of 22 Galilee. Her daughter came in^c and danced, and so delighted Herod and his guests that the king said to the girl, 'Ask what you like and I will give it 23 you.' And he swore an oath to her: 'Whatever you ask I will give you, up 24 to half my kingdom.' She went out and said to her mother, 'What shall I ask 25 for?' She replied, 'The head of John the Baptist.' The girl hastened back at once to the king with her request: 'I want you to give me here and now, on 26 a dish, the head of John the Baptist.' The king was greatly distressed, but out of regard for his oath and for his guests he could not bring himself to 27 refuse her. So the king sent a soldier of the guard with orders to bring 28 John's head. The soldier went off and beheaded him in the prison, brought the head on a dish, and gave it to the girl; and she gave it to her mother.

When John's disciples heard the news, they came and took his body away and laid it in a tomb. 29

The apostles now rejoined Jesus and reported to him all that they had done and taught. He said to them, 'Come with me, by yourselves, to some lonely place where you can rest quietly.' (For they had no leisure even to eat, so many were coming and going.) Accordingly, they set off privately by boat for a lonely place. But many saw them leave and recognized them, and came round by land, hurrying from all the towns towards the place, and arrived there first. When he came ashore, he saw a great crowd; and his heart went out to them, because they were like sheep without a shepherd; and he had much to teach them. As the day wore on, his disciples came up to him and said, 'This is a lonely place and it is getting very late; send the people off to the farms and villages round about, to buy themselves something to eat.' 'Give them something to eat yourselves', he answered. They replied, 'Are we to go and spend twenty pounds^a on bread to give them a meal?' 'How many loaves have you?' he asked; 'go and see.' They found out and told him, 'Five, and two fishes also.' He ordered them to make the people sit down in groups on the green grass, and they sat down in rows, a hundred rows of fifty each. Then, taking the five loaves and the two fishes, he looked up to heaven, said the blessing, broke the loaves, and gave them to the disciples to distribute. He also divided the two fishes among them. They all ate to their hearts' content; and twelve great basketfuls of scraps were picked up, with what was left of the fish. Those who ate the loaves numbered five thousand men. 30 31 32 33 34 35 36 37 38 39 40 41 42 43 44

As soon as it was over he made his disciples embark and cross to Bethsaida ahead of him, while he himself sent the people away. After taking leave of them, he went up the hill-side to pray. It grew late and the boat was already well out on the water, while he was alone on the land. Somewhere between three and six in the morning, seeing them labouring at the oars against a head-wind, he came towards them, walking on the lake. He was going to pass them by; but when they saw him walking on the lake, they thought it was a ghost and cried out; for they all saw him and were terrified. But at once he spoke to them: 'Take heart! It is I; do not be afraid.' Then he climbed into the boat beside them, and the wind dropped. At this they were completely dumbfounded, for they had not understood the incident of the loaves; their minds were closed. 45 46 47 48 49 50 51 52

So they finished the crossing and came to land at Gennesaret, where they made fast. When they came ashore, he was immediately recognized; and the people scoured that whole country-side and brought the sick on stretchers to any place where he was reported to be. Wherever he went, to farmsteads, villages, or towns, they laid out the sick in the market-places and begged him to let them simply touch the edge of his cloak; and all who touched him were cured. 53 54 55 56

Growing tension

7 A GROUP OF PHARISEES, with some doctors of the law who had come
 2 from Jerusalem, met him and noticed that some of his disciples were 3 eating their food with 'defiled' hands—in other words, without washing
 4 the hands,^a in obedience to an old-established tradition; and on coming 5 from the market-place they never eat without first washing. And there are 6 many other points on which they have a traditional rule to maintain, for 7 example, washing of cups and jugs and copper bowls.) Accordingly, these 8 Pharisees and the lawyers asked him, 'Why do your disciples not conform 9 to the ancient tradition, but eat their food with defiled hands?' He answered, 10 'Isaiah was right when he prophesied about you hypocrites in these words:
 11 "This people pays me lip-service, but their heart is far from me: their 12 worship of me is in vain, for they teach as doctrines the commandments of 13 men." You neglect the commandment of God, in order to maintain the 14 tradition of men.'

9 He also said to them, 'How well you set aside the commandment of God
 10 in order to maintain^b your tradition! Moses said, "Honour your father 11 and your mother", and, "The man who curses his father or mother must 12 suffer death." But you hold that if a man says to his father or mother, 13 "Anything of mine which might have been used for your benefit is Cor-14 ban"' (meaning, set apart for God), 'he is no longer permitted to do any-15 thing for his father or mother. Thus by your own tradition, handed down 16 among you, you make God's word null and void. And many other things 17 that you do are just like that.'

14 On another occasion he called the people and said to them, 'Listen to 15 me, all of you, and understand this: nothing that goes into a man from 16 outside can defile him; no, it is the things that come out of him that defile
 17 a man.'^c

17 When he had left the people and gone indoors, his disciples questioned 18 him about the parable. He said to them, 'Are you as dull as the rest? Do you 19 not see that nothing that goes from outside into a man can defile him, 20 because it does not enter into his heart but into his stomach, and so passes 21 out into the drain?' Thus he declared all foods clean. He went on, 'It is 22 what comes out of a man that defiles him. For from inside, out of a man's 23 heart, come evil thoughts, acts of fornication, of theft, murder, adultery, 24 ruthless greed, and malice; fraud, indecency, envy, slander, arrogance, and 25 folly; these evil things all come from inside, and they defile the man.'

24 Then he left that place and went away into the territory of Tyre. He 25 found a house to stay in, and he would have liked to remain unrecognized, 26 but this was impossible. Almost at once a woman whose young daughter 27 was possessed by an unclean spirit heard of him, came in, and fell at his 28 feet. (She was a Gentile, a Phoenician of Syria by nationality.) She begged 29 him to drive the spirit out of her daughter. He said to her, 'Let the children be satisfied first; it is not fair to take the children's bread and throw it to the dogs.' 'Sir,' she answered, 'even the dogs under the table eat the children's scraps.' He said to her, 'For saying that, you may go home content; the unclean spirit has gone out of your daughter.' And when she returned home, she found the child lying in bed; the spirit had left her.

On his return journey from Tyrian territory he went by way of Sidon to the Sea of Galilee through the territory of the Ten Towns. ^a They brought to him a man who was deaf and had an impediment in his speech, with the request that he would lay his hand on him. He took the man aside, away from the crowd, put his fingers into his ears, spat, and touched his tongue. Then, looking up to heaven, he sighed, and said to him, 'Ephphatha', which means 'Be opened.' With that his ears were opened, and at the same time the impediment was removed and he spoke plainly. Jesus forbade them to tell anyone; but the more he forbade them, the more they published it. Their astonishment knew no bounds: 'All that he does, he does well,' they said; 'he even makes the deaf hear and the dumb speak.'

THERE WAS ANOTHER OCCASION about this time when a huge crowd had collected, and, as they had no food, Jesus called his disciples and said to them, 'I feel sorry for all these people; they have been with me now for three days and have nothing to eat. If I send them home unfed, they will turn faint on the way; some of them have come from a distance.' The disciples answered, 'How can anyone provide all these people with bread in this lonely place?' 'How many loaves have you?' he asked; and they answered, 'Seven.' So he ordered the people to sit down on the ground; then he took the seven loaves, and, after giving thanks to God, he broke the bread and gave it to his disciples to distribute; and they served it out to the people. They had also a few small fishes, which he blessed and ordered them to distribute. They all ate to their hearts' content, and seven baskets were filled with the scraps that were left. The people numbered about four thousand. Then he dismissed them; and, without delay, got into the boat with his disciples and went to the district of Dalmanutha. ^b

Then the Pharisees came out and engaged him in discussion. To test him they asked him for a sign from heaven. He sighed deeply to himself and said, 'Why does this generation ask for a sign? I tell you this: no sign shall be given to this generation.' With that he left them, re-embarked, and went off to the other side of the lake.

Now they had forgotten to take bread with them; they had no more than one loaf in the boat. He began to warn them: 'Beware,' he said, 'be on your guard against the leaven of the Pharisees and the leaven of Herod.' They said among themselves, 'It is because we have no bread.' Knowing what was in their minds, he asked them, 'Why do you talk about having no bread? Have you no inkling yet? Do you still not understand? Are your minds closed? You have eyes: can you not see? You have ears: can you not hear? Have you forgotten? When I broke the five loaves among five thousand, how many basketfuls of scraps did you pick up?' 'Twelve', they said. 'And how many when I broke the seven loaves among four

21 thousand?' They answered, 'Seven.' He said, 'Do you still not understand?'

22 They arrived at Bethsaida. There the people brought a blind man to 23 Jesus and begged him to touch him. He took the blind man by the hand 24 and led him away out of the village. Then he spat on his eyes, laid his 25 hands upon him, and asked whether he could see anything. The man's 26 sight began to come back, and he said, 'I see men; they look like trees, but they are walking about.' Jesus laid his hands on his eyes again; he looked hard, and now he was cured so that he saw everything clearly. Then Jesus sent him home, saying, 'Do not tell anyone in the village.'^a 27 JESUS AND HIS DISCIPLES set out for the villages of Caesarea Philippi.

 28 On the way he asked his disciples, 'Who do men say I am?' They answered,
 'Some say John the Baptist, others Elijah, others one of the prophets.'
 29 'And you,' he asked, 'who do you say I am?' Peter replied: 'You are the 30 Messiah.' Then he gave them strict orders not to tell anyone about him;
 31 and he began to teach them that the Son of Man had to undergo great sufferings, and to be rejected by the elders, chief priests, and doctors of 32 the law; to be put to death, and to rise again three days afterwards. He spoke about it plainly. At this Peter took him by the arm and began to rebuke him.
 33 But Jesus turned round, and, looking at his disciples, rebuked Peter. 'Away with you, Satan,' he said; 'you think as men think, not as God thinks.'

34 Then he called the people to him, as well as his disciples, and said to 35 them, 'Anyone who wishes to be a follower of mine must leave self behind;
 he must take up his cross, and come with me. Whoever cares for his own safety is lost; but if a man will let himself be lost for my sake and for the 36 Gospel, that man is safe. What does a man gain by winning the whole world 37 38 at the cost of his true self? What can he give to buy that self back? If anyone is ashamed of me and mine^b in this wicked and godless age, the Son of Man will be ashamed of him, when he comes in the glory of his Father and of the holy angels.'^c

9 He also said, 'I tell you this: there are some of those standing here who will not taste death before they have seen the kingdom of God already come in power.'

2 Six days later Jesus took Peter, James, and John with him and led them up a high mountain where they were alone; and in their presence he was 3 transfigured; his clothes became dazzling white, with a whiteness no 4 bleacher on earth could equal. They saw Elijah appear, and Moses with 5 him, and there they were, conversing with Jesus. Then Peter spoke:
 'Rabbi,' he said, 'how good it is that we are here! Shall we make three 6 shelters, one for you, one for Moses, and one for Elijah?' (For he did not 7 know what to say; they were so terrified.) Then a cloud appeared, casting its shadow over them, and out of the cloud came a voice: 'This is my Son, 8 my Beloved;^d listen to him.' And now suddenly, when they looked around, there was nobody to be seen but Jesus alone with themselves.

On their way down the mountain, he enjoined them not to tell anyone 9 what they had seen until the Son of Man had risen from the dead. They 10 seized upon those words, and discussed among themselves what this 'rising from the dead' could mean. And they put a question to him: 'Why 11 do our teachers say that Elijah must come first?' He replied, 'Yes, Elijah 12 does come first to set everything right. Yet how is it ^a that the scriptures say of the Son of Man that he is to endure great sufferings and to be treated with contempt? However, I tell you, Elijah has already come and they have 13 worked their will upon him, as the scriptures say of him.'

When they came back to the disciples they saw a large crowd surrounding 14 them and lawyers arguing with them. As soon as they saw Jesus the whole 15 crowd were overcome with awe, and they ran forward to welcome him.
 He asked them, 'What is this argument about?' A man in the crowd spoke 16 17 up: 'Master, I brought my son to you. He is possessed by a spirit which makes him speechless. Whenever it attacks him, it dashes him to the 18 ground, and he foams at the mouth, grinds his teeth, and goes rigid. I asked your disciples to cast it out, but they failed.' Jesus answered: 'What an 19 unbelieving and perverse generation! How long shall I be with you? How long must I endure you? Bring him to me.' So they brought the boy to him; 20 and as soon as the spirit saw him it threw the boy into convulsions, and he fell on the ground and rolled about foaming at the mouth. Jesus asked his 21 father, 'How long has he been like this?' 'From childhood,' he replied;
 'often it has tried to make an end of him by throwing him into the fire or 22 into water. But if it is at all possible for you, take pity upon us and help us.'
 'If it is possible!' said Jesus. 'Everything is possible to one who has 23 faith.' 'I have faith,' cried the boy's father; 'help me where faith falls short.' Jesus saw then that the crowd was closing in upon them, so he 25 rebuked the unclean spirit. 'Deaf and dumb spirit,' he said, 'I command you, come out of him and never go back!' After crying aloud and racking 26 him fiercely, it came out; and the boy looked like a corpse; in fact, many said, 'He is dead.' But Jesus took his hand and raised him to his feet, and 27 he stood up.

Then Jesus went indoors, and his disciples asked him privately, 'Why 28 could not we cast it out?' He said, 'There is no means of casting out this 29 sort but prayer.'^b

THEY NOW LEFT that district and made a journey through Galilee. Jesus 30 wished it to be kept secret; for he was teaching his disciples, and telling 31 them, 'The Son of Man is now to be given up into the power of men, and they will kill him, and three days after being killed, he will rise again.'
 But they did not understand what he said, and were afraid to ask. 32

So they came to Capernaum; and when he was indoors, he asked them, 33
 'What were you arguing about on the way?' They were silent, because on 34 the way they had been discussing who was the greatest. He sat down, 35 called the Twelve, and said to them, 'If anyone wants to be first, he must make himself last of all and servant of all.' Then he took a child, set him 36

37 in front of them, and put his arm round him. 'Whoever receives one of these children in my name', he said, 'receives me; and whoever receives me, receives not me but the One who sent me.'

38 John said to him, 'Master, we saw a man driving out devils in your name, and as he was not one of us, we tried to stop him.' Jesus said, 'Do not stop him; no one who does a work of divine power in my name will be able the next moment to speak evil of me. For he who is not against us is on our side. I tell you this: if anyone gives you a cup of water to drink because you are followers of the Messiah, that man assuredly will not go unrewarded.'

42 'As for the man who is a cause of stumbling to one of these little ones who have faith, it would be better for him to be thrown into the sea with a millstone round his neck. If your hand is your undoing, cut it off; it is better for you to enter into life maimed than to keep both hands and go to hell and the unquenchable fire.^a And if your foot is your undoing, cut it off; it is better to enter into life a cripple than to keep both your feet and be thrown into hell.^b And if it is your eye, tear it out; it is better to enter into the kingdom of God with one eye than to keep both eyes and be thrown into hell, where the devouring worm never dies and the fire is not quenched.'

49 'For everyone will be salted with fire.'

50 'Salt is a good thing; but if the salt loses its saltiness, what will you season it with?

'Have salt in yourselves; and be^c at peace with one another.'

10 ON LEAVING THOSE PARTS he came into the regions of Judaea and Trans-jordan; and when a crowd gathered round him once again, he followed his usual practice and taught them. The question was put to him:^d 'Is it lawful for a man to divorce his wife?' This was to test him. He asked in return, 'What did Moses command you?' They answered, 'Moses permitted a man to divorce his wife by note of dismissal.' Jesus said to them, 'It was because your minds were closed that he made this rule for you; but in the beginning, at the creation, God made them male and female. For this reason a man shall leave his father and mother, and be made one with his wife;^e and the two shall become one flesh. It follows that they are no longer two individuals: they are one flesh. What God has joined together, man must not separate.'

10 When they were indoors again the disciples questioned him about this matter; he said to them, 'Whoever divorces his wife and marries another commits adultery against her: so too, if she divorces her husband and marries another, she commits adultery.'

13 They brought children for him to touch. The disciples rebuked them, but when Jesus saw this he was indignant, and said to them, 'Let the children come to me; do not try to stop them; for the kingdom of God belongs to such as these. I tell you, whoever does not accept the kingdom of God like a child will never enter it.' And he put his arms round them, laid his hands upon them, and blessed them.

As he was starting out on a journey, a stranger ran up, and, kneeling before him, asked, 'Good Master, what must I do to win eternal life?' Jesus said to him, 'Why do you call me good? No one is good except God alone. You know the commandments: "Do not murder; do not commit adultery; do not steal; do not give false evidence; do not defraud; honour your father and mother."' 'But, Master,' he replied, 'I have kept all these since I was a boy.' Jesus looked straight at him; his heart warmed to him, and he said, 'One thing you lack: go, sell everything you have, and give to the poor, and you will have riches in heaven; and come, follow me.' At these words his face fell and he went away with a heavy heart; for he was a man of great wealth.

Jesus looked round at his disciples and said to them, 'How hard it will be for the wealthy to enter the kingdom of God!' They were amazed that he should say this, but Jesus insisted, 'Children, how hard it is^a to enter the kingdom of God! It is easier for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God.' They were more astonished than ever, and said to one another, 'Then who can be saved?' Jesus looked at them and said, 'For men it is impossible, but not for God; everything is possible for God.'

At this Peter spoke. 'We here', he said, 'have left everything to become your followers.' Jesus said, 'I tell you this: there is no one who has given up home, brothers or sisters, mother, father or children, or land, for my sake and for the Gospel, who will not receive in this age a hundred times as much—houses, brothers and sisters, mothers and children, and land—and persecutions besides; and in the age to come eternal life. But many who are first will be last and the last first.'

THEY WERE ON THE ROAD, going up to Jerusalem, Jesus leading the way; and the disciples were filled with awe, while those who followed behind were afraid. He took the Twelve aside and began to tell them what was to happen to him. 'We are now going to Jerusalem,' he said; 'and the Son of Man will be given up to the chief priests and the doctors of the law; they will condemn him to death and hand him over to the foreign power. He will be mocked and spat upon, flogged and killed; and three days afterwards, he will rise again.'

James and John, the sons of Zebedee, approached him and said, 'Master, we should like you to do us a favour.' 'What is it you want me to do?' he asked. They answered, 'Grant us the right to sit in state with you, one at your right and the other at your left.' Jesus said to them, 'You do not understand what you are asking. Can you drink the cup that I drink, or be baptized with the baptism I am baptized with?' 'We can', they answered. Jesus said, 'The cup that I drink you shall drink, and the baptism I am baptized with shall be your baptism; but to sit at my right or left is not for me to grant; it is for those to whom it has already been assigned.'^a

When the other ten heard this, they were indignant with James and John. Jesus called them to him and said, 'You know that in the world the recognized rulers lord it over their subjects, and their great men make them feel the weight of authority. That is not the way with you; among you, whoever wants to be great must be your servant, and whoever wants to be first must be the willing slave of all. For even the Son of Man did not come to be served but to serve, and to give up his life as a ransom for many.'

They came to Jericho; and as he was leaving the town, with his disciples and a large crowd, Bartimaeus son of Timaeus, a blind beggar, was seated at the roadside. Hearing that it was Jesus of Nazareth, he began to shout, 'Son of David, Jesus, have pity on me!' Many of the people told him to hold his tongue; but he shouted all the more, 'Son of David, have pity on me.' Jesus stopped and said, 'Call him'; so they called the blind man and said, 'Take heart; stand up; he is calling you.' At that he threw off his cloak, sprang up, and came to Jesus. Jesus said to him, 'What do you want me to do for you?' 'Master,' the blind man answered, 'I want my sight back.' Jesus said to him, 'Go; your faith has cured you.' And at once he recovered his sight and followed him on the road.

11 THEY WERE NOW APPROACHING Jerusalem, and when they reached Bethphage and Bethany, at the Mount of Olives, he sent two of his disciples with these instructions: 'Go to the village opposite, and, just as you enter, you will find tethered there a colt which no one has yet ridden. Untie it and bring it here. If anyone asks, "Why are you doing that?," say, "Our Master^b needs it, and will send it back here without delay."' So they went off, and found the colt tethered at a door outside in the street. They were untying it when some of the bystanders asked, 'What are you doing, untying that colt?' They answered as Jesus had told them, and were then allowed to take it. So they brought the colt to Jesus and spread their cloaks on it, and he mounted. And people carpeted the road with their cloaks, while others spread brushwood which they had cut in the fields; and those who went ahead and the others who came behind shouted, 'Hosanna! Blessings on him who comes in the name of the Lord! Blessings on the coming kingdom of our father David! Hosanna in the heavens!'

He entered Jerusalem and went into the temple, where he looked at the whole scene; but, as it was now late, he went out to Bethany with the Twelve.

12 13 On the following day, after they had left Bethany, he felt hungry, and, noticing in the distance a fig-tree in leaf, he went to see if he could find anything on it. But when he came there he found nothing but leaves; for 14 it was not the season for figs. He said to the tree, 'May no one ever again eat fruit from you!' And his disciples were listening.

15 So they came to Jerusalem, and he went into the temple and began driving out those who bought and sold in the temple. He upset the tables of the money-changers and the seats of the dealers in pigeons; and he would not allow anyone to use the temple court as a thoroughfare for carrying goods. Then he began to teach them, and said, 'Does not Scripture say, "My house shall be called a house of prayer for all the nations"? But you have made it a robbers' cave.' The chief priests and the doctors of the law heard of this and sought some means of making away with him; for they were afraid of him, because the whole crowd was spellbound by his teaching. And when evening came he went out of the city.

Early next morning, as they passed by, they saw that the fig-tree had withered from the roots up; and Peter, recalling what had happened, said to him, 'Rabbi, look, the fig-tree which you cursed has withered.' Jesus answered them, 'Have faith in God. I tell you this: if anyone says to this mountain, "Be lifted from your place and hurled into the sea", and has no inward doubts, but believes that what he says is happening, it will be done for him. I tell you, then, whatever you ask for in prayer, believe that you have received it and it will be yours.

'And when you stand praying, if you have a grievance against anyone, forgive him, so that your Father in heaven may forgive you the wrongs you have done.'^a

THEY CAME ONCE MORE to Jerusalem. And as he was walking in the temple court the chief priests, lawyers, and elders came to him and said, 'By what authority are you acting like this? Who gave you authority to act in this way?' Jesus said to them, 'I have a question to ask you too; and if you give me an answer, I will tell you by what authority I act. The baptism of John: was it from God, or from men? Answer me.' This set them arguing among themselves: 'What shall we say? If we say, "from God", he will say, "Then why did you not believe him?" Shall we say, "from men"?—but they were afraid of the people, for all held that John was in fact a prophet. So they answered, "We do not know.'" And Jesus said to them, 'Then neither will I tell you by what authority I act.'

He went on to speak to them in parables: 'A man planted a vineyard and put a wall round it, hewed out a winepress, and built a watch-tower; then he let it out to vine-growers and went abroad. When the season came, he sent a servant to the tenants to collect from them his share of the produce. But they took him, thrashed him, and sent him away empty-handed. Again, he sent them another servant, whom they beat about the head and treated outrageously. So he sent another, and that one they killed; and many more besides, of whom they beat some, and killed others. He had now only one left to send, his own dear son.^b In the end he sent him. "They will respect my son", he said. But the tenants said to one another, "This is the heir; come on, let us kill him, and the property will be ours." So they seized him and killed him, and flung his body out of the vineyard. What will the owner of the vineyard do? He will come and put the tenants to death and give the vineyard to others.

'Can it be that you have never read this text: "The stone which the

- 11 builders rejected has become the main corner-stone. This is the Lord's doing, and it is wonderful in our eyes"?)
- 12 Then they began to look for a way to arrest him, for they saw that the parable was aimed at them; but they were afraid of the people, so they left him alone and went away.
- 13 A NUMBER OF PHARISEES and men of Herod's party were sent to trap him with a question. They came and said, 'Master, you are an honest man, we know, and truckle to no one, whoever he may be; you teach in all honesty the way of life that God requires. Are we or are we not permitted
- 15 to pay taxes to the Roman Emperor? Shall we pay or not?' He saw how crafty their question was, and said, 'Why are you trying to catch me out? Fetch me a silver piece, and let me look at it.' They brought one, and he said to them, 'Whose head is this, and whose inscription?' 'Caesar's', they replied. Then Jesus said, 'Pay Caesar what is due to Caesar, and pay God what is due to God.' And they heard him with astonishment.
- 18 Next Sadducees came to him. (It is they who say that there is no resurrection.) Their question was this: 'Master, Moses laid it down for us that if there are brothers, and one dies leaving a wife but no child, then the next
- 20 should marry the widow and carry on his brother's family. Now there were seven brothers. The first took a wife and died without issue. Then the second married her, and he too died without issue. So did the third.
- 22 Eventually the seven of them died, all without issue. Finally the woman died. At the resurrection, when they come back to life, whose wife will she be, since all seven had married her?' Jesus said to them, 'You are mistaken, and surely this is the reason: you do not know either the scriptures or the
- 25 power of God. When they rise from the dead, men and women do not marry; they are like angels in heaven.
- 26 'But about the resurrection of the dead, have you never read in the Book of Moses, in the story of the burning bush, how God spoke to him and said, "I am the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob"?
- 27 God is not God of the dead but of the living. You are greatly mistaken.'
- 28 Then one of the lawyers, who had been listening to these discussions and had noted how well he answered, came forward and asked him, 'Which commandment is first of all?' Jesus answered, 'The first is, "Hear, O Israel: the Lord our God is the only Lord; love the Lord your God with all your heart, with all your soul, with all your mind, and with all your
- 31 strength." The second is this: "Love your neighbour as yourself." There is no other commandment greater than these.' The lawyer said to him, 'Well said, Master. You are right in saying that God is one and beside him there
- 33 is no other. And to love him with all your heart, all your understanding, and all your strength, and to love your neighbour as yourself—that is far more than any burnt offerings or sacrifices.' When Jesus saw how sensibly he answered, he said to him, 'You are not far from the kingdom of God.'
- 35 After that nobody ventured to put any more questions to him; and Jesus went on to say, as he taught in the temple, 'How can the teachers of the law maintain that the Messiah is "Son of David"?' David himself said, when inspired by the Holy Spirit, "The Lord said to my Lord, 'Sit at my right hand until I put your enemies under your feet.'” David himself calls him “Lord”; how can he also be David’s son?” 37

There was a great crowd and they listened eagerly.^a He said as he taught them, ‘Beware of the doctors of the law, who love to walk up and down in long robes, receiving respectful greetings in the street; and to have the chief seats in synagogues, and places of honour at feasts. These are the men who eat up the property of widows, while they say long prayers for appearance’ sake, and they will receive the severest sentence.’^b 38 39 40

Once he was standing opposite the temple treasury, watching as people dropped their money into the chest. Many rich people were giving large sums. Presently there came a poor widow who dropped in two tiny coins, together worth a farthing. He called his disciples to him. ‘I tell you this,’ he said: ‘this poor widow has given more than any of the others; for those others who have given had more than enough, but she, with less than enough, has given all that she had to live on.’ 41 42 43 44

AS HE WAS LEAVING the temple, one of his disciples exclaimed, ‘Look, Master, what huge stones! What fine buildings!’ Jesus said to him, ‘You see these great buildings? Not one stone will be left upon another; all will be thrown down.’ 13 2

When he was sitting on the Mount of Olives facing the temple he was questioned privately by Peter, James, John, and Andrew. ‘Tell us,’ they said, ‘when will this happen? What will be the sign when the fulfilment of all this is at hand?’ 3 4

Jesus began: ‘Take care that no one misleads you. Many will come claiming my name, and saying, “I am he”; and many will be misled by them.’ 5 6

‘When you hear the noise of battle near at hand and the news of battles far away, do not be alarmed. Such things are bound to happen; but the end is still to come. For nation will make war upon nation, kingdom upon kingdom; there will be earthquakes in many places; there will be famines. With these things the birth-pangs of the new age begin.’ 7 8

‘As for you, be on your guard. You will be handed over to the courts. You will be flogged in synagogues. You will be summoned to appear before governors and kings on my account to testify in their presence. But before the end the Gospel must be proclaimed to all nations. So when you are arrested and taken away, do not worry beforehand about what you will say, but when the time comes say whatever is given you to say; for it is not you who will be speaking, but the Holy Spirit. Brother will betray brother to death, and the father his child; children will turn against their parents and send them to their death. All will hate you for your allegiance to me; but the man who holds out to the end will be saved.’ 9 10 11 12 13

‘But when you see “the abomination of desolation” usurping a place which is not his (let the reader understand), then those who are in Judaea must take to the hills. If a man is on the roof, he must not come down into 14 15

^a Or The mass of the people listened eagerly.

 17 coat. Alas for women with child in those days, and for those who have 18 19 children at the breast! Pray that it may not come in winter. For those days will bring distress such as never has been until now since the beginning 20 of the world which God created—and will never be again. If the Lord had not cut short that time of troubles, no living thing could survive. However, for the sake of his own, whom he has chosen, he has cut short the time.

21 'Then, if anyone says to you, "Look, here is the Messiah", or, "Look, 22 there he is", do not believe it. Impostors will come claiming to be messiahs or prophets, and they will produce signs and wonders to mislead God's 23 chosen, if such a thing were possible. But you be on your guard; I have forewarned you of it all.

24 'But in those days, after that distress, the sun will be darkened, the moon
 25 will not give her light; the stars will come falling from the sky, the celestial 26 powers will be shaken. Then they will see the Son of Man coming in the 27 clouds with great power and glory, and he will send out the angels and gather his chosen from the four winds, from the farthest bounds of earth to the farthest bounds of heaven.

28 'Learn a lesson from the fig-tree. When its tender shoots appear and are 29 breaking into leaf, you know that summer is near. In the same way, when you see all this happening, you may know that the end is near,^a at the very 30 31 door. I tell you this: the present generation will live to see it all. Heaven and earth will pass away; my words will never pass away.

32 'But about that day or that hour no one knows, not even the angels in heaven, not even the Son; only the Father.

33 34 'Be alert, be wakeful.^b You do not know when the moment comes. It is like a man away from home: he has left his house and put his servants in charge, each with his own work to do, and he has ordered the door-keeper 35 to stay awake. Keep awake, then, for you do not know when the master of the house is coming. Evening or midnight, cock-crow or early dawn—36 37 if he comes suddenly, he must not find you asleep. And what I say to you,
 I say to everyone: Keep awake.'

The final conflict

14 NOW THE FESTIVAL of Passover and Unleavened Bread was only two 2 days off; and the chief priests and the doctors of the law were trying to devise some cunning plan to seize him and put him to death. 'It must not be during the festival,' they said, 'or we should have rioting among the people.'

3 Jesus was at Bethany, in the house of Simon the leper. As he sat at table, a woman came in carrying a small bottle of very costly perfume, pure oil 4 of nard. She broke it open and poured the oil over his head. Some of those 5 present said to one another angrily, 'Why this waste? The perfume might have been sold for thirty pounds^c and the money given to the poor'; and they turned upon her with fury. But Jesus said, 'Let her alone. Why must you make trouble for her? It is a fine thing she has done for me. You have the poor among you always, and you can help them whenever you like; but you will not always have me. She has done what lay in her power; she is beforehand with anointing my body for burial. I tell you this: wherever in all the world the Gospel is proclaimed, what she has done will be told as her memorial.'

^a Or that he is near.

Then Judas Iscariot, one of the Twelve, went to the chief priests to betray him to them. When they heard what he had come for, they were greatly pleased, and promised him money; and he began to look for a good opportunity to betray him.

NOW ON THE FIRST DAY of Unleavened Bread, when the Passover lambs were being slaughtered, his disciples said to him, 'Where would you like us to go and prepare for your Passover supper?' So he sent out two of his disciples with these instructions: 'Go into the city, and a man will meet you carrying a jar of water. Follow him, and when he enters a house give this message to the householder: "The Master says, "Where is the room reserved for me to eat the Passover with my disciples?"' He will show you a large room upstairs, set out in readiness. Make the preparations for us there.' Then the disciples went off, and when they came into the city they found everything just as he had told them. So they prepared for Passover.

In the evening he came to the house with the Twelve. As they sat at supper Jesus said, 'I tell you this: one of you will betray me—one who is eating with me.' At this they were dismayed; and one by one they said to him, 'Not I, surely?' 'It is one of the Twelve', he said, 'who is dipping into the same bowl with me. The Son of Man is going the way appointed for him in the scriptures; but alas for that man by whom the Son of Man is betrayed! It would be better for that man if he had never been born.'

During supper he took bread, and having said the blessing he broke it and gave it to them, with the words: 'Take this; this is my body.' Then he took a cup, and having offered thanks to God he gave it to them; and they all drank from it. And he said, 'This is my blood, the blood of the covenant, shed for many. I tell you this: never again shall I drink from the fruit of the vine until that day when I drink it new in the kingdom of God.'

After singing the Passover Hymn, they went out to the Mount of Olives. And Jesus said, 'You will all fall from your faith; for it stands written: "I will strike the shepherd down and the sheep will be scattered." Nevertheless, after I am raised again I will go on before you into Galilee.' Peter answered, 'Everyone else may fall away, but I will not.' Jesus said, 'I tell you this: today, this very night, before the cock crows twice, you yourself will disown me three times.' But he insisted and repeated: 'Even if I must die with you, I will never disown you.' And they all said the same.

WHEN THEY REACHED a place called Gethsemane, he said to his disciples, 'Sit here while I pray.' And he took Peter and James and John with him. Horror and dismay came over him, and he said to them, 'My heart is ready

35 to break with grief; stop here, and stay awake.' Then he went forward a 36 little, threw himself on the ground, and prayed that, if it were possible, this hour might pass him by. 'Abba, Father,' he said, 'all things are possible to thee; take this cup away from me. Yet not what I will, but what thou wilt.'

37 He came back and found them asleep; and he said to Peter, 'Asleep, 38 Simon? Were you not able to stay awake for one hour? Stay awake, all of you; and pray that you may be spared the test. The spirit is willing, but the 39 40 flesh is weak.' Once more he went away and prayed. ^a On his return he found them asleep again, for their eyes were heavy; and they did not know how to answer him.

41 The third time he came and said to them, 'Still sleeping? Still taking your ease? Enough!^b The hour has come. The Son of Man is betrayed to sinful men. Up, let us go forward! My betrayer is upon us.'

43 Suddenly, while he was still speaking, Judas, one of the Twelve, appeared, and with him was a crowd armed with swords and cudgels, sent by the chief priests, lawyers, and elders. Now the traitor had agreed with them upon a signal: 'The one I kiss is your man; seize him and get him safely away.' When he reached the spot, he stepped forward at once and said to 44 Jesus, 'Rabbi', and kissed him. Then they seized him and held him fast.

47 One of the party ^c drew his sword, and struck at the High Priest's servant, cutting off his ear. Then Jesus spoke: 'Do you take me for a bandit, that 48 you have come out with swords and cudgels to arrest me? Day after day I was within your reach as I taught in the temple, and you did not lay hands
 49 on me. But let the scriptures be fulfilled.' Then the disciples all deserted him and ran away.

51 Among those following was a young man with nothing on but a linen cloth. They tried to seize him; but he slipped out of the linen cloth and ran away naked.

53 THEN THEY LED Jesus away to the High Priest's house, where the chief 54 priests, elders, and doctors of the law were all assembling. Peter followed him at a distance right into the High Priest's courtyard; and there he remained, sitting among the attendants, warming himself at the fire.

55 The chief priests and the whole Council tried to find some evidence 56 against Jesus to warrant a death-sentence, but failed to find any. Many 57 gave false evidence against him, but their statements did not tally. Some 58 stood up and gave false evidence against him to this effect: 'We heard him say, "I will pull down this temple, made with human hands, and in three 59 days I will build another, not made with hands."' But even on this point their evidence did not agree.

60 Then the High Priest stood up in his place and questioned Jesus: 'Have 61 you no answer to the charges that these witnesses bring against you?' But he kept silence; he made no reply.

62 Again the High Priest questioned him: 'Are you the Messiah, the Son of the Blessed One?' Jesus said, 'I am; and you will see the Son of Man seated at the right hand of God^a and coming with the clouds of heaven.' Then the High Priest tore his robes and said, 'Need we call further witnesses? You have heard the blasphemy. What is your opinion?' Their judgement was unanimous: that he was guilty and should be put to death.

Some began to spit on him, blindfolded him, and struck him with their fists, crying out, 'Prophesy!'^b And the High Priest's men set upon him with blows.

Meanwhile Peter was still below in the courtyard. One of the High Priest's serving-maids came by and saw him there warming himself. She looked into his face and said, 'You were there too, with this man from Nazareth, this Jesus.' But he denied it: 'I know nothing,' he said; 'I do not understand what you mean.' Then he went outside into the porch; and the maid saw him there again and began to say to the bystanders, 'He is one of them'; and again he denied it.

Again, a little later, the bystanders said to Peter, 'Surely you are one of them. You must be; you are a Galilean.' At this he broke out into curses, and with an oath he said, 'I do not know this man you speak of.' Then the cock crew a second time; and Peter remembered how Jesus had said to him, 'Before the cock crows twice you will disown me three times.' And he burst into tears.

AS SOON AS MORNING CAME, the chief priests, having made their plan with the elders and lawyers in full council, put Jesus in chains; then they led him away and handed him over to Pilate. Pilate asked him, 'Are you the king of the Jews?' He replied, 'The words are yours.'^d And the chief priests brought many charges against him. Pilate questioned him again: 'Have you nothing to say in your defence? You see how many charges they are bringing against you.' But, to Pilate's astonishment, Jesus made no further reply.

At the festival season the Governor used to release one prisoner at the people's request. As it happened, the man known as Barabbas was then in custody with the rebels who had committed murder in the rising. When the crowd appeared^e asking for the usual favour, Pilate replied, 'Do you wish me to release for you the king of the Jews?' For he knew it was out of malice that they had brought Jesus before him. But the chief priests incited the crowd to ask him to release Barabbas rather than Jesus. Pilate spoke to them again: 'Then what shall I do with the man you call king of the Jews?' They shouted back, 'Crucify him!' 'Why, what harm has he done?' Pilate asked; but they shouted all the louder, 'Crucify him!' So Pilate, in his desire to satisfy the mob, released Barabbas to them; and he had Jesus flogged and handed him over to be crucified.

Then the soldiers took him inside the courtyard (the Governor's headquarters^f) and called together the whole company. They dressed him in purple, and plaiting a crown of thorns, placed it on his head. Then they began to salute him with, 'Hail, King of the Jews!' They beat him about the 21 THEN THEY TOOK HIM OUT to crucify him. A man called Simon, from Cyrene, the father of Alexander and Rufus, was passing by on his way in from the country, and they pressed him into service to carry his cross.

22 They brought him to the place called Golgotha, which means 'Place
23 24 of a skull'. He was offered drugged wine, but he would not take it. Then they fastened him to the cross. They divided his clothes among them, casting lots to decide what each should have.

25 26 The hour of the crucifixion was nine in the morning, and the inscription
27 giving the charge against him read, 'The king of the Jews.' Two bandits were crucified with him, one on his right and the other on his left.^a

29 The passers-by hurled abuse at him: 'Aha!' they cried, wagging their heads, 'you would pull the temple down, would you, and build it in three 30 31 days? Come down from the cross and save yourself!' So too the chief priests and lawyers jested with one another: 'He saved others,' they said, 'but he cannot save himself. Let the Messiah, the king of Israel, come down 32 now from the cross. If we see that, we shall believe.' Even those who were crucified with him taunted him.

33 At midday a darkness fell over the whole land, which lasted till three in 34 the afternoon; and at three Jesus cried aloud, 'Eli, Eli, lema sabachthani?', 35 which means, 'My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?'^b Some of 36 the bystanders, on hearing this, said, 'Hark, he is calling Elijah.' A man ran and soaked a sponge in sour wine and held it to his lips on the end of a cane. 'Let us see', he said, 'if Elijah will come to take him down.' Then 37 Jesus gave a loud cry and died. And the curtain of the temple was torn in 38 two from top to bottom. And when the centurion who was standing opposite 39 him saw how he died,^c he said, 'Truly this man was a son of God.'^d

40 A NUMBER OF WOMEN were also present, watching from a distance. Among them were Mary of Magdala, Mary the mother of James the 41 younger and of Joseph, and Salome, who had all followed him and waited on him when he was in Galilee, and there were several others who had come up to Jerusalem with him.

42 By this time evening had come; and as it was Preparation-day (that is,
43 the day before the Sabbath), Joseph of Arimathaea, a respected member of the Council, a man who looked forward to the kingdom of God, bravely
44 went in to Pilate and asked for the body of Jesus. Pilate was surprised to hear that he was already dead; so he sent for the centurion and asked him
45 whether it was long since he died. And when he heard the centurion's 46 report, he gave Joseph leave to take the dead body. So Joseph bought a linen sheet, took him down from the cross, and wrapped him in the sheet.

^d Or the Son of God.

Then he laid him in a tomb cut out of the rock, and rolled a stone against the entrance. And Mary of Magdala and Mary the mother of Joseph were watching and saw where he was laid. 47

When the Sabbath was over, Mary of Magdala, Mary the mother of James, and Salome bought ^a aromatic oils intending to go and anoint him; and very early on the Sunday morning, just after sunrise, they came to the tomb. They were wondering among themselves who would roll away the stone for them from the entrance to the tomb, when they looked up and saw that the stone, huge as it was, had been rolled back already. They went into the tomb, where they saw a youth sitting on the right-hand side, wearing a white robe; and they were dumbfounded. But he said to them, 'Fear nothing; you are looking for Jesus of Nazareth, who was crucified. He has been raised again; he is not here; look, there is the place where they laid him. But go and give this message to his disciples and Peter: "He is going on before you into Galilee; there you will see him, as he told you." ' Then they went out and ran away from the tomb, beside themselves with terror. They said nothing to anybody, for they were afraid. ^b 16

And they delivered all these instructions briefly to Peter and his companions. Afterwards Jesus himself sent out by them from east to west the sacred and imperishable message of eternal salvation. ^c

When he had risen from the dead early on Sunday morning he appeared first to Mary of Magdala, from whom he had formerly cast out seven devils. She went and carried the news to his mourning and sorrowful followers, but when they were told that he was alive and that she had seen him they did not believe it. 9

Later he appeared in a different guise to two of them as they were walking, on their way into the country. These also went and took the news to the others, but again no one believed them. 10

Afterwards while the Eleven were at table he appeared to them and reproached them for their incredulity and dullness, because they had not believed those who had seen him after he was raised from the dead. Then he said to them: 'Go forth to every part of the world, and proclaim the Good News to the whole creation. Those who believe it and receive baptism will find salvation; those who do not believe will be condemned. Faith will bring with it these miracles: believers will cast out devils in my name and speak in strange tongues; if they handle snakes or drink any deadly poison, they will come to no harm; and the sick on whom they lay their hands will recover.' 11

So after talking with them the Lord Jesus was taken up into heaven, and he took his seat at the right hand of God; but they went out to make their proclamation everywhere, and the Lord worked with them and confirmed their words by the miracles that followed. ^d 12

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO LUKE

1 THE AUTHOR TO THEOPHILUS: Many writers have undertaken to draw up an account of the events that have hap-
2 pened among us, following the traditions handed down to us by 3 the original eyewitnesses and servants of the Gospel. And so I in my turn, your Excellency, as one who has gone over the whole course of these events 4 in detail, have decided to write a connected narrative for you, so as to give you authentic knowledge about the matters of which you have been informed.

The coming of Christ

5 IN THE DAYS of Herod king of Judaea there was a priest named Zechariah, of the division of the priesthood called after Abijah. His wife also was of 6 priestly descent; her name was Elizabeth. Both of them were upright and devout, blamelessly observing all the commandments and ordinances of 7 the Lord. But they had no children, for Elizabeth was barren, and both were well on in years.

8 Once, when it was the turn of his division and he was there to take part
9 in divine service, it fell to his lot, by priestly custom, to enter the sanctuary 10 of the Lord and offer the incense; and the whole congregation was at prayer outside. It was the hour of the incense-offering. There appeared to 11 him an angel of the Lord, standing on the right of the altar of incense. At 12 this sight, Zechariah was startled, and fear overcame him. But the angel 13 said to him, 'Do not be afraid, Zechariah; your prayer has been heard:
your wife Elizabeth will bear you a son, and you shall name him John. Your 14 heart will thrill with joy and many will be glad that he was born; for he will 15 be great in the eyes of the Lord. He shall never touch wine or strong drink.
16 From his very birth he will be filled with the Holy Spirit; and he will bring 17 back many Israelites to the Lord their God. He will go before him as forerunner,^a possessed by the spirit and power of Elijah, to reconcile father and child, to convert the rebellious to the ways of the righteous, to prepare a people that shall be fit for the Lord.'

18 Zechariah said to the angel, 'How can I be sure of this? I am an old man and my wife is well on in years.'

19 The angel replied, 'I am Gabriel; I stand in attendance upon God, and 20 I have been sent to speak to you and bring you this good news. But now listen: you will lose your power of speech, and remain silent until the day

^a Or In his sight he will go forth.

when these things happen to you, because you have not believed me, though at their proper time my words will be proved true.'

Meanwhile the people were waiting for Zechariah, surprised that he was staying so long inside. When he did come out he could not speak to them, and they realized that he had had a vision in the sanctuary. He stood there making signs to them, and remained dumb.

When his period of duty was completed Zechariah returned home. After this his wife Elizabeth conceived, and for five months she lived in seclusion, thinking, 'This is the Lord's doing; now at last he has deigned to take away my reproach among men.'

In the sixth month the angel Gabriel was sent from God to a town in Galilee called Nazareth, with a message for a girl betrothed to a man named Joseph, a descendant of David; the girl's name was Mary. The angel went in and said to her, 'Greetings, most favoured one! The Lord is with you.' But she was deeply troubled by what he said and wondered what this greeting might mean. Then the angel said to her, 'Do not be afraid, Mary, for God has been gracious to you; you shall conceive and bear a son, and you shall give him the name Jesus. He will be great; he will bear the title "Son of the Most High"; the Lord God will give him the throne of his ancestor David, and he will be king over Israel^a for ever; his reign shall never end.' 'How can this be?' said Mary; 'I am still a virgin.' The angel answered, 'The Holy Spirit will come upon you, and the power of the Most High will overshadow you; and for that reason the holy child to be born will be called "Son of God".^b Moreover your kinswoman Elizabeth has herself conceived a son in her old age; and she who is reputed barren is now in her sixth month, for God's promises can never fail.'^c 'Here am I,' said Mary; 'I am the Lord's servant; as you have spoken, so be it.' Then the angel left her.

About this time Mary set out and went straight to a town in the uplands of Judah. She went to Zechariah's house and greeted Elizabeth. And when Elizabeth heard Mary's greeting, the baby stirred in her womb. Then Elizabeth was filled with the Holy Spirit and cried aloud, 'God's blessing is on you above all women, and his blessing is on the fruit of your womb. Who am I, that the mother of my Lord should visit me? I tell you, when your greeting sounded in my ears, the baby in my womb leapt for joy. How happy is she who has had faith that the Lord's promise would be fulfilled!'

And Mary^d said:

'Tell out, my soul, the greatness of the Lord,
rejoice, rejoice, my spirit, in God my saviour;
so tenderly has he looked upon his servant,
humble as she is.

For, from this day forth,
all generations will count me blessed,
so wonderfully has he dealt with me,
the Lord, the Mighty One.

 the arrogant of heart and mind he has put to rout, 52 he has brought down monarchs from their thrones,
 but the humble have been lifted high.
 53 The hungry he has satisfied with good things,
 the rich sent empty away.
 54 He has ranged himself at the side of Israel his servant;
 55 firm in his promise to our forefathers,
 he has not forgotten to show mercy to Abraham and his children's children, for ever.^a

56 Mary stayed with her about three months and then returned home.

57 NOW THE TIME CAME for Elizabeth's child to be born, and she gave birth 58 to a son. When her neighbours and relatives heard what great favour the 59 Lord had shown her, they were as delighted as she was. Then on the eighth 60 day they came to circumcise the child; and they were going to name him 61 Zechariah after his father. But his mother spoke up and said, 'No! he is to 62 be called John.' 'But', they said, 'there is nobody in your family who has 63 that name.' They inquired of his father by signs what he would like him to 64 be called. He asked for a writing-tablet and to the astonishment of all wrote 65 down, 'His name is John.' Immediately his lips and tongue were freed and 66 he began to speak, praising God. All the neighbours were struck with awe, and everywhere in the uplands of Judaea the whole story became common 67 talk. All who heard it were deeply impressed and said, 'What will this child become?' For indeed the hand of the Lord was upon him.^a 67 And Zechariah his father was filled with the Holy Spirit and uttered this prophecy:

68 'Praise to the God of Israel!
 For he has turned to his people, saved them and set them free, 69 and has raised up a deliverer of victorious power from the house of his servant David.
 70 So he promised: age after age he proclaimed by the lips of his holy prophets, 71 that he would deliver us from our enemies,
 out of the hands of all who hate us;
 72 that he would deal mercifully with our fathers, calling to mind his solemn covenant.
 73 Such was the oath he swore to our father Abraham,
 74 to rescue us from enemy hands,

^a Some witnesses read 'What will this child become, for indeed the hand of the Lord is upon him?'

and grant us, free from fear, to worship him with a holy worship, with uprightness of heart, in his presence, our whole life long. 75

And you, my child, you shall be called Prophet of the Highest, 76 for you will be the Lord's forerunner, to prepare his way and lead his people to salvation through knowledge of him, 77
by the forgiveness of their sins:

for in the tender compassion of our God 78
the morning sun from heaven will rise ^a upon us, to shine on those who live in darkness, under the cloud of death, 79 and to guide our feet into the way of peace.'

As the child grew up he became strong in spirit; he lived out in the wilds 80 until the day when he appeared publicly before Israel.

IN THOSE DAYS a decree was issued by the Emperor Augustus for a 2 registration to be made throughout the Roman world. This was the first 2 registration of its kind; it took place when Quirinius ^b was governor of Syria. For this purpose everyone made his way to his own town; and so 3 4
Joseph went up to Judaea from the town of Nazareth in Galilee, to register 5 at the city of David, called Bethlehem, because he was of the house of David by descent; and with him went Mary who was betrothed to him.
She was expecting a child, and while they were there the time came for her 6 baby to be born, and she gave birth to a son, her first-born. She wrapped 7 him in his swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger, because there was no room for them to lodge in the house.

Now in this same district there were shepherds out in the fields, keeping 8 watch through the night over their flock, when suddenly there stood before 9 them an angel of the Lord, and the splendour of the Lord shone round them. They were terror-stricken, but the angel said, 'Do not be afraid; 10
I have good news for you: there is great joy coming to the whole people.
Today in the city of David a deliverer has been born to you—the Messiah, 11
the Lord.^c And this is your sign: you will find a baby lying wrapped in 12 his swaddling clothes, in a manger.' All at once there was with the angel 13 a great company of the heavenly host, singing the praises of God:

'Glory to God in highest heaven, 14
and on earth his peace for men on whom his favour rests.' ^d

After the angels had left them and gone into heaven the shepherds said 15 to one another, 'Come, we must go straight to Bethlehem and see this thing that has happened, which the Lord has made known to us.' So they went 16 with all speed and found their way to Mary and Joseph; and the baby was lying in the manger. When they saw him, they recounted what they had 17 been told about this child; and all who heard were astonished at what the shepherds said. But Mary treasured up all these things and pondered over 19

^a Some witnesses read has risen.

^b Or This was the first registration carried out while Quirinius . . .

20 them. Meanwhile the shepherds returned glorifying and praising God for what they had heard and seen; it had all happened as they had been told.

21 Eight days later the time came to circumcise him, and he was given the name Jesus, the name given by the angel before he was conceived.

22 Then, after their purification had been completed in accordance with the Law of Moses, they brought him up to Jerusalem to present him to the Lord (as prescribed in the law of the Lord: 'Every first-born male shall be deemed to belong to the Lord'), and also to make the offering as stated in the law: 'A pair of turtle doves or two young pigeons.'

25 There was at that time in Jerusalem a man called Simeon. This man was upright and devout, one who watched and waited for the restoration of Israel, and the Holy Spirit was upon him. It had been disclosed to him by the Holy Spirit that he would not see death until he had seen the Lord's Messiah. Guided by the Spirit he came into the temple; and when the parents brought in the child Jesus to do for him what was customary under the Law, he took him in his arms, praised God, and said:

29 'This day, Master, thou givest thy servant his discharge in peace;
now thy promise is fulfilled.

30 For I have seen with my own eyes
31 the deliverance which thou hast made ready in full view of all the nations:
32 a light that will be a revelation to the heathen,
and glory to thy people Israel.'

33 The child's father and mother were full of wonder at what was being said about him. Simeon blessed them and said to Mary his mother, 'This child is destined to be a sign which men reject; and you too shall be pierced to the heart. Many in Israel will stand or fall^a because of him, and thus the secret thoughts of many will be laid bare.'

36 There was also a prophetess, Anna the daughter of Phanuel, of the tribe of Asher. She was a very old woman, who had lived seven years with her husband after she was first married, and then alone as a widow to the age of eighty-four.^b She never left the temple, but worshipped day and night, fasting and praying. Coming up at that very moment, she returned thanks to God; and she talked about the child to all who were looking for the liberation of Jerusalem.

39 When they had done everything prescribed in the law of the Lord, they returned to Galilee to their own town of Nazareth. The child grew big and strong and full of wisdom; and God's favour was upon him.

41 Now it was the practice of his parents to go to Jerusalem every year for the Passover festival; and when he was twelve, they made the pilgrimage as usual. When the festive season was over and they started for home, the boy Jesus stayed behind in Jerusalem. His parents did not know of this; but thinking that he was with the party they journeyed on for a whole day, and only then did they begin looking for him among their friends and relations. As they could not find him they returned to Jerusalem to look for him; and after three days they found him sitting in the temple surrounded by the teachers, listening to them and putting questions; and all who heard 47 him were amazed at his intelligence and the answers he gave. His parents 48 were astonished to see him there, and his mother said to him, 'My son, why have you treated us like this? Your father and I have been searching for you in great anxiety.' 'What made you search?' he said. 'Did you not know that 49

I was bound to be in my Father's house?' But they did not understand what 50 he meant. Then he went back with them to Nazareth, and continued to be 51 under their authority; his mother treasured up all these things in her heart.
As Jesus grew up he advanced in wisdom and in favour with God and men. 52

IN THE FIFTEENTH YEAR of the Emperor Tiberius, when Pontius Pilate 3 was governor of Judaea, when Herod was prince of Galilee, his brother Philip prince of Ituraea and Trachonitis, and Lysanias prince of Abilene, during the high-priesthood of Annas and Caiaphas, the word of God came 2 to John son of Zechariah in the wilderness. And he went all over the Jordan 3 valley proclaiming a baptism in token of repentance for the forgiveness of sins, as it is written in the book of the prophecies of Isaiah: 4

'A voice crying aloud in the wilderness,
'Prepare a way for the Lord;
clear a straight path for him.
Every ravine shall be filled in, 5
and every mountain and hill levelled;
the corners shall be straightened,
and the rugged ways made smooth;
and all mankind shall see God's deliverance.' 6

Crowds of people came out to be baptized by him, and he said to them: 7
'You vipers' brood! Who warned you to escape from the coming retribution? 8
Then prove your repentance by the fruit it bears; and do not begin saying to yourselves, "We have Abraham for our father." I tell you that 9 God can make children for Abraham out of these stones here. Already the axe is laid to the roots of the trees; and every tree that fails to produce good fruit is cut down and thrown on the fire.'

The people asked him, 'Then what are we to do?' He replied, 'The man 10 11 with two shirts must share with him who has none, and anyone who has food must do the same.' Among those who came to be baptized were tax- 12 gatherers, and they said to him, 'Master, what are we to do?' He told them, 13
'Exact no more than the assessment.' Soldiers on service also asked him, 14
'And what of us?' To them he said, 'No bullying; no blackmail; make do with your pay!'

The people were on the tiptoe of expectation, all wondering about John, 15 whether perhaps he was the Messiah, but he spoke out and said to them 16
all: 'I baptize you with water; but there is one to come who is mightier than I. I am not fit to unfasten his shoes. He will baptize you with the Holy Spirit and with fire. His shovel is ready in his hand, to winnow his threshing- 17 floor and gather the wheat into his granary; but he will burn the chaff on a fire that can never go out.'

In this and many other ways he made his appeal to the people and 18

19 announced the good news. But Prince Herod, when he was rebuked by 20 him over the affair of his brother's wife Herodias and for his other misdeeds, crowned them all by shutting John up in prison.

21 DURING A GENERAL BAPTISM of the people, when Jesus too had been 22 baptized and was praying, heaven opened and the Holy Spirit descended on him in bodily form like a dove; and there came a voice from heaven,
 'Thou art my Son, my Beloved; ^a on thee my favour rests.'^b

23 When Jesus began his work he was about thirty years old, the son, as 24 people thought, of Joseph, son of Heli, son of Matthat, son of Levi, son of 25 Melchi, son of Jannai, son of Joseph, son of Mattathiah, son of Amos,
 26 son of Nahum, son of Esli, son of Naggai, son of Maath, son of Mattathiah,

 30 of Jorim, son of Matthat, son of Levi, son of Symeon, son of Judah, son of 31 Joseph, son of Jonam, son of Eliakim, son of Melea, son of Menna, son 32 of Mattatha, son of Nathan, son of David, son of Jesse, son of Obed, son of 33 Boaz, son of Salmon, son of Nahshon, son of Amminadab, ^c son of Arni, ^d 34 son of Hezron, son of Perez, son of Judah, son of Jacob, son of Isaac, son of 35 Abraham, son of Terah, son of Nahor, son of Serug, son of Reu, son of 36 Peleg, son of Eber, son of Shelah, son of Cainan, son of Arpachshad, son 37 of Shem, son of Noah, son of Lamech, son of Methuselah, son of Enoch, 38 son of Jared, son of Mahalaleel, son of Cainan, son of Enosh, son of Seth, son of Adam, son of God.

4 1 2 Full of the Holy Spirit, Jesus returned from the Jordan, and for forty days was led by the Spirit up and down the wilderness and tempted by the devil.

All that time he had nothing to eat, and at the end of it he was famished.
 3 The devil said to him, 'If you are the Son of God, tell this stone to become 4 bread.' Jesus answered, 'Scripture says, "Man cannot live on bread alone."'

5 Next the devil led him up and showed him in a flash all the kingdoms of 6 the world. 'All this dominion will I give to you,' he said, 'and the glory that goes with it; for it has been put in my hands and I can give it to anyone 7 8 I choose. You have only to do homage to me and it shall all be yours.' Jesus answered him, 'Scripture says, "You shall do homage to the Lord your God and worship him alone."'

9 The devil took him to Jerusalem and set him on the parapet of the temple.
 10 'If you are the Son of God,' he said, 'throw yourself down; for Scripture 11 says, "He will give his angels orders to take care of you", and again, "They will support you in their arms for fear you should strike your foot against 12 a stone."' Jesus answered him, 'It has been said, "You are not to put the Lord your God to the test."'

13 So, having come to the end of all his temptations, the devil departed, biding his time.

In Galilee : success and opposition

THEN JESUS, armed with the power of the Spirit, returned to Galilee; 14 and reports about him spread through the whole country-side. He 15 taught in their synagogues and all men sang his praises.

So he came to Nazareth, where he had been brought up, and went to 16 synagogue on the Sabbath day as he regularly did. He stood up to read the 17 lesson and was handed the scroll of the prophet Isaiah. He opened the scroll and found the passage which says,

'The spirit of the Lord is upon me because he has anointed me; 18
he has sent me to announce good news to the poor, to proclaim release for prisoners and recovery of sight for the blind;
to let the broken victims go free,
to proclaim the year of the Lord's favour.' 19

He rolled up the scroll, gave it back to the attendant, and sat down; and all 20 eyes in the synagogue were fixed on him.

He began to speak: 'Today', he said, 'in your very hearing this text has 21 come true.'^a There was a general stir of admiration; they were surprised 22 that words of such grace should fall from his lips. 'Is not this Joseph's son?' they asked. Then Jesus said, 'No doubt you will quote the proverb 23 to me, "Physician, heal yourself!", and say, "We have heard of all your doings at Capernaum; do the same here in your own home town." I tell 24 you this,' he went on: 'no prophet is recognized in his own country. There 25 were many widows in Israel, you may be sure, in Elijah's time, when for three years and six months the skies never opened, and famine lay hard 26 over the whole country; yet it was to none of those that Elijah was sent, but to a widow at Sarepta in the territory of Sidon. Again, in the time 27 of the prophet Elisha there were many lepers in Israel, and not one of them was healed, but only Naaman, the Syrian.' At these words the whole 28 congregation were infuriated. They leapt up, threw him out of the town, 29 and took him to the brow of the hill on which it was built, meaning to hurl him over the edge. But he walked straight through them all, and went 30 away.

Coming down to Capernaum, a town in Galilee, he taught the people on 31
the Sabbath, and they were astounded at his teaching, for what he said had 32 the note of authority. Now there was a man in the synagogue possessed by 33 a devil, an unclean spirit. He shrieked at the top of his voice, 'What do you 34 want with us, Jesus of Nazareth? Have you ^b come to destroy us? I know who you are—the Holy One of God.' Jesus rebuked him: 'Be silent', he 35 said, 'and come out of him.' Then the devil, after throwing the man down in front of the people, left him without doing him any injury. Amazement 36 fell on them all and they said to one another: 'What is there in this man's words? He gives orders to the unclean spirits with authority and power, and out they go.' So the news spread, and he was the talk of the whole 37 district.

^a Or 'Today', he said, 'this text which you have just heard has come true.'

^b Or You have.

38 On leaving the synagogue he went to Simon's house. Simon's mother-39 in-law was in the grip of a high fever; and they asked him to help her. He came and stood over her and rebuked the fever. It left her, and she got up at once and waited on them.

40 At sunset all who had friends suffering from one disease or another brought them to him; and he laid his hands on them one by one and cured 41 them. Devils also came out of many of them, shouting, 'You are the Son of God.' But he rebuked them and forbade them to speak, because they knew that he was the Messiah.

42 When day broke he went out and made his way to a lonely spot. But the people went in search of him, and when they came to where he was they 43 pressed him not to leave them. But he said, 'I must give the good news of the kingdom of God to the other towns also, for that is what I was sent 44 to do.' So he proclaimed the Gospel in the synagogues of Judaea. ^a

5 One day as he stood by the Lake of Gennesaret, and the people crowded 2 upon him to listen to the word of God, he noticed two boats lying at the water's edge; the fishermen had come ashore and were washing their nets.
3 He got into one of the boats, which belonged to Simon, and asked him to put out a little way from the shore; then he went on teaching the crowds 4 from his seat in the boat. When he had finished speaking, he said to Simon, 5 'Put out into deep water and let down your nets for a catch.' Simon answered, 'Master, we were hard at work all night and caught nothing at all;
6 but if you say so, I will let down the nets.' They did so and made a big haul 7 of fish; and their nets began to split. So they signalled to their partners in the other boat to come and help them. This they did, and loaded both boats 8 to the point of sinking. When Simon saw what had happened he fell at 9 Jesus's knees and said, 'Go, Lord, leave me, sinner that I am!' For he and 10 all his companions were amazed at the catch they had made; so too were his partners James and John, Zebedee's sons. 'Do not be afraid,' said Jesus to 11 Simon; 'from now on you will be catching men.' As soon as they had brought the boats to land, they left everything and followed him.

12 He was once in a certain town where there happened to be a man covered with leprosy; seeing Jesus, he bowed to the ground and begged his help.
13 'Sir,' he said, 'if only you will, you can cleanse me.' Jesus stretched out his hand, touched him, and said, 'Indeed I will; be clean again.' The leprosy 14 left him immediately. Jesus then ordered him not to tell anybody. 'But go,' he said, 'show yourself to the priest, and make the offering laid down by 15 Moses for your cleansing; that will certify the cure.' But the talk about him spread all the more; great crowds gathered to hear him and to be cured of 16 their ailments. And from time to time he would withdraw to lonely places for prayer.

17 One day he was teaching, and Pharisees and teachers of the law were sitting round. People had come from every village of Galilee and from Judaea and Jerusalem, ^b and the power of the Lord was with him to heal the 18 sick. Some men appeared carrying a paralysed man on a bed. They tried to bring him in and set him down in front of Jesus, but finding no way to do so because of the crowd, they went up on to the roof and let him down through the tiling, bed and all, into the middle of the company in front of Jesus. When Jesus saw their faith, he said, 'Man, your sins are forgiven you.'

The lawyers and the Pharisees began saying to themselves, 'Who is this fellow with his blasphemous talk? Who but God alone can forgive sins?' But Jesus knew what they were thinking and answered them: 'Why do you harbour thoughts like these? Is it easier to say, "Your sins are forgiven you", or to say, "Stand up and walk"? But to convince you that the Son of Man has the right on earth to forgive sins'—he turned to the paralysed man—'I say to you, stand up, take your bed, and go home.' And at once he rose to his feet before their eyes, took up the bed he had been lying on, and went home praising God. They were all lost in amazement and praised God; filled with awe they said, 'You would never believe the things we have seen today.'

Later, when he went out, he saw a tax-gatherer, Levi by name, at his seat in the custom-house, and said to him, 'Follow me'; and he rose to his feet, left everything behind, and followed him.

Afterwards Levi held a big reception in his house for Jesus; among the guests was a large party of tax-gatherers and others. The Pharisees and the lawyers of their sect complained to his disciples: 'Why do you eat and drink', they said, 'with tax-gatherers and sinners?' Jesus answered them: 'It is not the healthy that need a doctor, but the sick; I have not come to invite virtuous people, but to call sinners to repentance.'

Then they said to him, 'John's disciples are much given to fasting and the practice of prayer, and so are the disciples of the Pharisees; but yours eat and drink.' Jesus replied, 'Can you make the bridegroom's friends fast while the bridegroom is with them? But a time will come: the bridegroom will be taken away from them, and that will be the time for them to fast.'

He told them this parable also: 'No one tears a piece from a new cloak to patch an old one; if he does, he will have made a hole in the new cloak, and the patch from the new will not match the old. Nor does anyone put new wine into old wine-skins; if he does, the new wine will burst the skins, the wine will be wasted, and the skins ruined. Fresh skins for new wine! And no one after drinking old wine wants new; for he says, "The old wine is good."'

One Sabbath he was going through the cornfields, and his disciples were plucking the ears of corn, rubbing them in their hands, and eating them. Some of the Pharisees said, 'Why are you doing what is forbidden on the Sabbath?' Jesus answered, 'So you have not read what David did when he and his men were hungry? He went into the House of God and took the sacred bread to eat and gave it to his men, though priests alone are allowed to eat it, and no one else.' He also said, 'The Son of Man is sovereign even over the Sabbath.'

On another Sabbath he had gone to synagogue and was teaching. There happened to be a man in the congregation whose right arm was withered; and the lawyers and the Pharisees were on the watch to see whether Jesus would cure him on the Sabbath, so that they could find a charge to bring

8 against him. But he knew what was in their minds and said to the man with the withered arm, 'Get up and stand out here.' So he got up and stood there.
9 Then Jesus said to them, 'I put the question to you: is it permitted to do
10 good or to do evil on the Sabbath, to save life or to destroy it?' He looked round at them all and then said to the man, 'Stretch out your arm.' He 11 did so, and his arm was restored. But they were beside themselves with anger, and began to discuss among themselves what they could do to Jesus.

12 During this time he went out one day into the hills to pray, and spent the 13 night in prayer to God. When day broke he called his disciples to him, and 14 from among them he chose twelve and named them Apostles: Simon, to whom he gave the name of Peter, and Andrew his brother, James and 15 John, Philip and Bartholomew, Matthew and Thomas, James son of 16 Alphaeus, and Simon who was called the Zealot, Judas son of James, and Judas Iscariot who turned traitor.

17 He came down the hill with them and took his stand on level ground. There was a large concourse of his disciples and great numbers of people from Jerusalem and Judaea and from the seaboard of Tyre and Sidon, who had come to listen to him, and to be cured of their diseases. Those who were troubled with unclean spirits were cured; and everyone in the crowd was trying to touch him, because power went out from him and cured them all.

20 THEN TURNING TO HIS DISCIPLES he began to speak:

'How blest are you who are in need; the kingdom of God is yours.

21 'How blest are you who now go hungry; your hunger shall be satisfied.

'How blest are you who weep now; you shall laugh.

22 'How blest you are when men hate you, when they outlaw you and insult you, and ban your very name as infamous, because of the Son of Man.

23 On that day be glad and dance for joy; for assuredly you have a rich reward in heaven; in just the same way did their fathers treat the prophets.

24 'But alas for you who are rich; you have had your time of happiness.

25 'Alas for you who are well-fed now; you shall go hungry.

'Alas for you who laugh now; you shall mourn and weep.

26 'Alas for you when all speak well of you; just so did their fathers treat the false prophets.

27 'But to you who hear me I say:

28 'Love your enemies; do good to those who hate you; bless those who curse you; pray for those who treat you spitefully. When a man hits you on the cheek, offer him the other cheek too; when a man takes your coat, let 30 him have your shirt as well. Give to everyone who asks you; when a man takes what is yours, do not demand it back. Treat others as you would like them to treat you.

32 'If you love only those who love you, what credit is that to you? Even 33 sinners love those who love them. Again, if you do good only to those who do good to you, what credit is that to you? Even sinners do as much. And 34 if you lend only where you expect to be repaid, what credit is that to you?

35 Even sinners lend to each other to be repaid in full. But you must love your enemies and do good; and lend without expecting any return;^a and you will have a rich reward: you will be sons of the Most High, because he himself is kind to the ungrateful and wicked. Be compassionate as your Father is compassionate. 36

'Pass no judgement, and you will not be judged; do not condemn, and you will not be condemned; acquit, and you will be acquitted; give, and gifts will be given you. Good measure, pressed down, shaken together, and running over, will be poured into your lap; for whatever measure you deal out to others will be dealt to you in return.' 37 38

He also offered them a parable: 'Can one blind man be guide to another? Will they not both fall into the ditch? A pupil is not superior to his teacher; but everyone, when his training is complete, will reach his teacher's level. 39 40

'Why do you look at the speck of sawdust in your brother's eye, with never a thought for the great plank in your own? How can you say to your brother, "My dear brother, let me take the speck out of your eye", when you are blind to the plank in your own? You hypocrite! First take the plank out of your own eye, and then you will see clearly to take the speck out of your brother's. 41 42

'There is no such thing as a good tree producing worthless fruit, nor yet a worthless tree producing good fruit. For each tree is known by its own fruit: you do not gather figs from thistles, and you do not pick grapes from brambles. A good man produces good from the store of good within himself; and an evil man from evil within produces evil. For the words that the mouth utters come from the overflowing of the heart. 43 44 45

'Why do you keep calling me "Lord, Lord"—and never do what I tell you? Everyone who comes to me and hears what I say, and acts upon it—I will show you what he is like. He is like a man who, in building his house, dug deep and laid the foundations on rock. When the flood came, the river burst upon that house, but could not shift it, because it had been soundly built. But he who hears and does not act is like a man who built his house on the soil without foundations. As soon as the river burst upon it, the house collapsed, and fell with a great crash.' 46 47 48 49

WHEN HE HAD FINISHED addressing the people, he went to Capernaum. 7
A centurion there had a servant whom he valued highly; this servant was ill and near to death. Hearing about Jesus, he sent some Jewish elders with the request that he would come and save his servant's life. They approached Jesus and pressed their petition earnestly: 'He deserves this favour from you,' they said, 'for he is a friend of our nation and it is he who built us our synagogue.' Jesus went with them; but when he was not far from the house, the centurion sent friends with this message: 'Do not trouble further, sir; it is not for me to have you under my roof, and that is why I did not presume to approach you in person. But say the word and my servant will be cured. I know, for in my position I am myself under orders, with soldiers under me. I say to one, "Go", and he goes; to another, "Come here", and he comes; and to my servant, "Do this", and he does it.' When Jesus heard this, he admired the man, and, turning to the crowd that was 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9

^a Or without ever giving up hope; some witnesses read without giving up hope of anyone.

10 following him, he said, 'I tell you, nowhere, even in Israel, have I found faith like this.' And the messengers returned to the house and found the servant in good health.

11 Afterwards^a Jesus went to a town called Nain, accompanied by his 12 disciples and a large crowd. As he approached the gate of the town he met a funeral. The dead man was the only son of his widowed mother; and 13 many of the townspeople were there with her. When the Lord saw her his 14 heart went out to her, and he said, 'Weep no more.' With that he stepped forward and laid his hand on the bier; and the bearers halted. Then he 15 spoke: 'Young man, rise up!' The dead man sat up and began to speak; 16 and Jesus gave him back to his mother. Deep awe fell upon them all, and they praised God. 'A great prophet has arisen among us', they said, and 17 again, 'God has shown his care for his people.' The story of what he had done ran through all parts of Judaea and the whole neighbourhood.

18 19 John too was informed of all this by his disciples. Summoning two of their number he sent them to the Lord with this message: 'Are you the one 20 who is to come, or are we to expect some other?' The messengers made their way to Jesus and said, 'John the Baptist has sent us to you: he asks, 21 "Are you the one who is to come, or are we to expect some other?"' There and then he cured many sufferers from diseases, plagues, and evil spirits; 22 and on many blind people he bestowed sight. Then he gave them his answer:
'Go', he said, 'and tell John what you have seen and heard: how the blind 23 recover their sight, the lame walk, the lepers are made clean, the deaf hear, the dead are raised to life, the poor are hearing the good news—and happy is the man who does not find me a stumbling-block.'

24 After John's messengers had left, Jesus began to speak about him to the crowds: 'What was the spectacle that drew you to the wilderness? A reed-25 bed swept by the wind? No? Then what did you go out to see? A man dressed in silks and satins? Surely you must look in palaces for grand 26 clothes and luxury. But what did you go out to see? A prophet? Yes indeed, 27 and far more than a prophet. He is the man of whom Scripture says,

"Here is my herald, whom I send on ahead of you,
and he will prepare your way before you."

28 I tell you, there is not a mother's son greater than John, and yet the least in the kingdom of God is greater than he.'

29 When they heard him, all the people, including the tax-gatherers, 30 praised God, for they had accepted John's baptism; but the Pharisees and lawyers, who refused his baptism, had rejected^b God's purpose for themselves.

31 'How can I describe the people of this generation? What are they like?
32 They are like children sitting in the market-place and shouting at each other,

"We piped for you and you would not dance."

"We wept and wailed, and you would not mourn."

^a Some witnesses read On the next day.

^b Or '... greater than he. And all the people, including the tax-gatherers, when they heard him, accepted John's baptism and acknowledged the righteous dealing of God; but the Pharisees and lawyers, by refusing his baptism, rejected ...'

For John the Baptist came neither eating bread nor drinking wine, and you say, "He is possessed." The Son of Man came eating and drinking, and you say, "Look at him! a glutton and a drinker, a friend of tax-gatherers and sinners!" And yet God's wisdom is proved right by all who are her children.'

One of the Pharisees invited him to eat with him; he went to the Pharisee's house and took his place at table. A woman who was living an immoral life in the town had learned that Jesus was at table in the Pharisee's house and had brought oil of myrrh in a small flask. She took her place behind him, by his feet, weeping. His feet were wetted with her tears and she wiped them with her hair, kissing them and anointing them with the myrrh. When his host the Pharisee saw this he said to himself, 'If this fellow were a real prophet, he would know who this woman is that touches him, and what sort of woman she is, a sinner.' Jesus took him up and said, 'Simon, I have something to say to you.' 'Speak on, Master', said he. 'Two men were in debt to a money-lender: one owed him five hundred silver pieces, the other fifty. As neither had anything to pay with he let them both off. Now, which will love him most?' Simon replied, 'I should think the one that was let off most.' 'You are right', said Jesus. Then turning to the woman, he said to Simon, 'You see this woman? I came to your house: you provided no water for my feet; but this woman has made my feet wet with her tears and wiped them with her hair. You gave me no kiss; but she has been kissing my feet ever since I came in. You did not anoint my head with oil; but she has anointed my feet with myrrh. And so, I tell you, her great love proves that her many sins have been forgiven; where little has been forgiven, little love is shown.' Then he said to her, 'Your sins are forgiven.' The other guests began to ask themselves, 'Who is this, that he can forgive sins?' But he said to the woman, 'Your faith has saved you; go in peace.'

AFTER THIS he went journeying from town to town and village to village, proclaiming the good news of the kingdom of God. With him were the Twelve and a number of women who had been set free from evil spirits and infirmities: Mary, known as Mary of Magdala, from whom seven devils had come out, Joanna, the wife of Chuza a steward of Herod's, Susanna, and many others. These women provided for them out of their own resources.

People were now gathering in large numbers, and as they made their way to him from one town after another, he said in a parable: 'A sower went out to sow his seed. And as he sowed, some seed fell along the foot-path, where it was trampled on, and the birds ate it up. Some seed fell on rock and, after coming up, withered for lack of moisture. Some seed fell in among thistles, and the thistles grew up with it and choked it. And some of the seed fell into good soil, and grew, and yielded a hundredfold.' As he said this he called out, 'If you have ears to hear, then hear.'

His disciples asked him what this parable meant, and he said, 'It has been granted to you to know the secrets of the kingdom of God; but the others have only parables, so that they may look but see nothing, hear but understand nothing.'

11 12 'This is what the parable means. The seed is the word of God. Those along the footpath are the men who hear it, and then the devil comes and carries off the word from their hearts for fear they should believe and be 13 saved. The seed sown on rock stands for those who receive the word with joy when they hear it, but have no root; they are believers for a while, but 14 in the time of testing they desert. That which fell among thistles represents those who hear, but their further growth is choked by cares and wealth 15 and the pleasures of life, and they bring nothing to maturity. But the seed in good soil represents those who bring a good and honest heart to the hearing of the word, hold it fast, and by their perseverance yield a harvest.

16 'Nobody lights a lamp and then covers it with a basin or puts it under the bed. On the contrary, he puts it on a lamp-stand so that those who come in 17 may see the light. For there is nothing hidden that will not become public, nothing under cover that will not be made known and brought into the open.

18 'Take care, then, how you listen; for the man who has will be given more, and the man who has not will forfeit even what he thinks he has.'

19 His mother and his brothers arrived but could not get to him for the crowd. He was told, 'Your mother and brothers are standing outside, and 21 they want to see you.' He replied, 'My mother and my brothers—they are those who hear the word of God and act upon it.'

22 One day he got into a boat with his disciples and said to them, 'Let us 23 cross over to the other side of the lake.' So they put out; and as they sailed along he went to sleep. Then a heavy squall struck the lake; they began to 24 ship water and were in grave danger. They went to him, and roused him, crying, 'Master, Master, we are sinking!' He awoke, and rebuked the wind and the turbulent waters. The storm subsided and all was calm.
25 'Where is your faith?' he asked. In fear and astonishment they said to one another, 'Who can this be? He gives his orders to wind and waves, and they obey him.'

26 So they landed in the country of the Gergesenes,^a which is opposite 27 Galilee. As he stepped ashore he was met by a man from the town who was possessed by devils. For a long time he had neither worn clothes nor lived 28 in a house, but stayed among the tombs. When he saw Jesus he cried out, and fell at his feet shouting, 'What do you want with me, Jesus, son of the Most High God? I implore you, do not torment me.'

29 For Jesus was already ordering the unclean spirit to come out of the man.
Many a time it had seized him, and then, for safety's sake, they would secure him with chains and fetters; but each time he broke loose, and with the devil in charge made off to the solitary places.

30 Jesus asked him, 'What is your name?' 'Legion', he replied. This was 31 because so many devils had taken possession of him. And they begged him not to banish them to the Abyss.

32 There happened to be a large herd of pigs nearby, feeding on the hill; and the spirits begged him to let them go into these pigs. He gave them 33 leave; the devils came out of the man and went into the pigs, and the herd rushed over the edge into the lake and were drowned.

^a Some witnesses read Gerasenes; others read Gadarenes.

The men in charge of them saw what had happened, and, taking to their heels, they carried the news to the town and country-side; and the people came out to see for themselves. When they came to Jesus, and found the man from whom the devils had gone out sitting at his feet clothed and in his right mind, they were afraid. The spectators told them how the madman had been cured. Then the whole population of the Gergesene ^a district asked him to go, for they were in the grip of a great fear. So he got into the boat and returned. The man from whom the devils had gone out begged leave to go with him; but Jesus sent him away: 'Go back home,' he said, 'and tell them everything that God has done for you.' The man went all over the town spreading the news of what Jesus had done for him.

When Jesus returned, the people welcomed him, for they were all expecting him. Then a man appeared—Jairus was his name and he was president of the synagogue. Throwing himself down at Jesus's feet he begged him to come to his house, because he had an only daughter, about twelve years old, who was dying. And while Jesus was on his way he could hardly breathe for the crowds.

Among them was a woman who had suffered from haemorrhages for twelve years; and ^b nobody had been able to cure her. She came up from behind and touched the edge of ^c his cloak, and at once her haemorrhage stopped. Jesus said, 'Who was it that touched me?' All disclaimed it, and Peter and his companions said, 'Master, the crowds are hemming you in and pressing upon you!' But Jesus said, 'Someone did touch me, for I felt that power had gone out from me.' Then the woman, seeing that she was detected, came trembling and fell at his feet. Before all the people she explained why she had touched him and how she had been instantly cured. He said to her, 'My daughter, your faith has cured you. Go in peace.'

While he was still speaking, a man came from the president's house with the message, 'Your daughter is dead; trouble the Rabbi no further.' But Jesus heard, and interposed. 'Do not be afraid,' he said; 'only show faith and she will be well again.' On arrival at the house he allowed no one to go in with him except Peter, John, and James, and the child's father and mother. And all were weeping and lamenting for her. He said, 'Weep no more; she is not dead: she is asleep'; and they only laughed at him, well knowing that she was dead. But Jesus took hold of her hand and called her: 'Get up, my child.' Her spirit returned, she stood up immediately, and he told them to give her something to eat. Her parents were astounded; but he forbade them to tell anyone what had happened.

HE NOW CALLED the Twelve together and gave them power and authority to overcome all the devils and to cure diseases, and sent them to proclaim the kingdom of God and to heal. 'Take nothing for the journey,' he told them, 'neither stick nor pack, neither bread nor money; nor are you each to have a second coat. When you are admitted to a house, stay there, and go on from there. As for those who will not receive you, when you leave their town shake the dust off your feet as a warning to them.' So they set out and travelled from village to village, and everywhere they told the good news and healed the sick.

7 Now Prince Herod heard of all that was happening, and did not know what to make of it; for some were saying that John had been raised from the dead, others that Elijah had appeared, others again that one of the old prophets had come back to life. Herod said, 'As for John, I beheaded him myself; but who is this I hear such talk about?' And he was anxious to see him.

10 On their return the apostles told Jesus all they had done; and he took them with him and withdrew privately to a town called Bethsaida. But the crowds found out and followed him. He welcomed them, and spoke to them about the kingdom of God, and cured those who were in need of healing. When evening was drawing on, the Twelve came up to him and said, 'Send these people away; then they can go into the villages and farms round about to find food and lodging; for we are in a lonely place here.' 13 'Give them something to eat yourselves', he replied. But they said, 'All we have is five loaves and two fishes, nothing more—unless perhaps we ourselves are to go and buy provisions for all this company.' (There were about five thousand men.) He said to his disciples, 'Make them sit down in groups of fifty or so.' 15 16 They did so and got them all seated. Then, taking the five loaves and the two fishes, he looked up to heaven, said the blessing over them, broke them, and gave them to the disciples to distribute to the people. They all ate to their hearts' content; and when the scraps they left were picked up, they filled twelve great baskets.

18 One day when he was praying alone in the presence of his disciples, he asked them, 'Who do the people say I am?' They answered, 'Some say John the Baptist, others Elijah, others that one of the old prophets has come back to life.' 'And you,' he said, 'who do you say I am?' Peter answered, 21 'God's Messiah.' Then he gave them strict orders not to tell this to anyone. 22 And he said, 'The Son of Man has to undergo great sufferings, and to be rejected by the elders, chief priests, and doctors of the law, to be put to death and to be raised again on the third day.'

23 And to all he said, 'If anyone wishes to be a follower of mine, he must leave self behind; day after day he must take up his cross, and come with me. 24 Whoever cares for his own safety is lost; but if a man will let himself be lost for my sake, that man is safe. What will a man gain by winning the whole world, at the cost of his true self? For whoever is ashamed of me and mine, 26 the Son of Man will be ashamed of him, when he comes in his glory and the glory of the Father and the holy angels. And I tell you this: there are some of those standing here who will not taste death before they have seen the kingdom of God.'

28 About eight days after this conversation he took Peter, John, and James with him and went up into the hills to pray. And while he was praying the appearance of his face changed and his clothes became dazzling white. 30 Suddenly there were two men talking with him; these were Moses and Elijah, who appeared in glory and spoke of his departure, the destiny he 31 was to fulfil in Jerusalem. Meanwhile Peter and his companions had been 32 in a deep sleep; but when they awoke, they saw his glory and the two men who stood beside him. And as these were moving away from Jesus, Peter said to him, 'Master, how good it is that we are here! Shall we make three shelters, one for you, one for Moses, and one for Elijah?'; but he spoke without knowing what he was saying. The words were still on his lips, when there came a cloud which cast a shadow over them; they were afraid as they entered the cloud, and from it came a voice: 'This is my Son, my Chosen; listen to him.' When the voice had spoken, Jesus was seen to be alone. The disciples kept silence and at that time told nobody anything of what they had seen.

Next day when they came down from the hills he was met by a large crowd. All at once there was a shout from a man in the crowd: 'Master, look at my son, I implore you, my only child. From time to time a spirit seizes him, gives a sudden scream, and throws him into convulsions with foaming at the mouth, and it keeps on mauling him and will hardly let him go. I asked your disciples to cast it out, but they could not.' Jesus answered, 'What an unbelieving and perverse generation! How long shall I be with you and endure you all? Bring your son here.' But before the boy could reach him the devil dashed him to the ground and threw him into convulsions. Jesus rebuked the unclean spirit, cured the boy, and gave him back to his father. And they were all struck with awe at the majesty of God.

Amid the general wonder and admiration at all he was doing, Jesus said to his disciples, 'What I now say is for you: ponder my words. The Son of Man is to be given up into the power of men.' But they did not understand this saying; it had been hidden from them, so that they should not ^a grasp its meaning, and they were afraid to ask him about it.

A dispute arose among them: which of them was the greatest? Jesus knew what was passing in their minds, so he took a child by the hand and stood him at his side, and said, 'Whoever receives this child in my name receives me; and whoever receives me receives the One who sent me. For the least among you all—he is the greatest.'

'Master,' said John, 'we saw a man driving out devils in your name, but as he is not one of us we tried to stop him.' Jesus said to him, 'Do not stop him, for he who is not against you is on your side.'

Journeys and encounters

AS THE TIME APPROACHED when he was to be taken up to heaven, he set his face resolutely towards Jerusalem, and sent messengers ahead. They set out and went into a Samaritan village to make arrangements for him; but the villagers would not have him because he was making for Jerusalem. When the disciples James and John saw this they said, 'Lord, may we call down fire from heaven to burn them up ^b?' But he turned and rebuked them, ^c and they went on to another village.

^a Or it was so obscure to them that they could not . . . ^b Some witnesses add as Elijah did. ^c Some witnesses insert 'You do not know', he said, 'to what spirit you belong; (56) for the Son of Man did not come to destroy men's lives but to save them.'

57 As they were going along the road a man said to him, 'I will follow you 58 wherever you go.' Jesus answered, 'Foxes have their holes, the birds their 59 roosts; but the Son of Man has nowhere to lay his head.' To another he said, 'Follow me', but the man replied, 'Let me go and bury my father 60 first.' Jesus said, 'Leave the dead to bury their dead; you must go and announce the kingdom of God.'

61 Yet another said, 'I will follow you, sir; but let me first say good-bye to my 62 people at home.' To him Jesus said, 'No one who sets his hand to the plough and then keeps looking back ^a is fit for the kingdom of God.'

10 After this the Lord appointed a further seventy-two ^b and sent them on 2 ahead in pairs to every town and place he was going to visit himself. He said to them: 'The crop is heavy, but labourers are scarce; you must there-3 fore beg the owner to send labourers to harvest his crop. Be on your way.
4 And look, I am sending you like lambs among wolves. Carry no purse or 5 pack, and travel barefoot. Exchange no greetings on the road. When you 6 go into a house, let your first words be, "Peace to this house." If there is a man of peace there, your peace will rest upon him; if not, it will return and 7 rest upon you. Stay in that one house, sharing their food and drink; for the 8 worker earns his pay. Do not move from house to house. When you come into a town and they make you welcome, eat the food provided for you;
9 heal the sick there, and say, "The kingdom of God has come close to you."
10 When you enter a town and they do not make you welcome, go out into its 11 streets and say, "The very dust of your town that clings to our feet we wipe off to your shame. Only take note of this: the kingdom of God has come 12 close." I tell you, it will be more bearable for Sodom on the great Day than for that town.

13 'Alas for you, Chorazin! Alas for you, Bethsaida! If the miracles that were performed in you had been performed in Tyre and Sidon, they would 14 have repented long ago, sitting in sackcloth and ashes. But it will be more 15 bearable for Tyre and Sidon at the Judgement than for you. And as for you, Capernaum, will you be exalted to the skies? No, brought down to the depths!

16 'Whoever listens to you listens to me; whoever rejects you rejects me.
And whoever rejects me rejects the One who sent me.'

17 The seventy-two ^b came back jubilant. 'In your name, Lord,' they said, 18 'even the devils submit to us.' He replied, 'I watched how Satan fell, like 19 lightning, out of the sky. And now you see that I have given you the power to tread underfoot snakes and scorpions and all the forces of the enemy, 20 and nothing will ever harm you. ^c Nevertheless, what you should rejoice over is not that the spirits submit to you, but that your names are enrolled in heaven.'

21 At that moment Jesus exulted in the Holy ^d Spirit and said, 'I thank thee, Father, Lord of heaven and earth, for hiding these things from the learned and wise, and revealing them to the simple. Yes, Father, such ^e was thy choice.' Then turning to his disciples he said,^a 'Everything is entrusted to me by my Father; and no one knows who the Son is but the Father, or who the Father is but the Son, and those to whom the Son may choose to reveal him.'

Turning to his disciples in private he said, 'Happy the eyes that see what you are seeing! I tell you, many prophets and kings wished to see what you now see, yet never saw it; to hear what you hear, yet never heard it.'

ON ONE OCCASION a lawyer came forward to put this test question to him: 'Master, what must I do to inherit eternal life?' Jesus said, 'What is written in the Law? What is your reading of it?' He replied, 'Love the Lord your God with all your heart, with all your soul, with all your strength, and with all your mind; and your neighbour as yourself.' 'That is the right answer,' said Jesus; 'do that and you will live.'

But he wanted to vindicate himself, so he said to Jesus, 'And who is my neighbour?' Jesus replied, 'A man was on his way from Jerusalem down to Jericho when he fell in with robbers, who stripped him, beat him, and went off leaving him half dead. It so happened that a priest was going down by the same road; but when he saw him, he went past on the other side. So too a Levite came to the place, and when he saw him went past on the other side. But a Samaritan who was making the journey came upon him, and when he saw him was moved to pity. He went up and bandaged his wounds, bathing them with oil and wine. Then he lifted him on to his own beast, brought him to an inn, and looked after him there. Next day he produced two silver pieces and gave them to the innkeeper, and said, "Look after him; and if you spend any more, I will repay you on my way back." Which of these three do you think was neighbour to the man who fell into the hands of the robbers?' He answered, 'The one who showed him kindness.' Jesus said, 'Go and do as he did.'

While they were on their way Jesus came to a village where a woman named Martha made him welcome in her home. She had a sister, Mary, who seated herself at the Lord's feet and stayed there listening to his words. Now Martha was distracted by her many tasks, so she came to him and said, 'Lord, do you not care that my sister has left me to get on with the work by myself? Tell her to come and lend a hand.' But the Lord answered, 'Martha, Martha, you are fretting and fussing about so many things; but one thing is necessary.^b The part that Mary has chosen is best; and it shall not be taken away from her.'

Once, in a certain place, Jesus was at prayer. When he ceased, one of his disciples said, 'Lord, teach us to pray, as John taught his disciples.' He answered, 'When you pray, say,

"Father,^c thy name be hallowed;
thy kingdom come.^d

5 Then he said to them, ‘Suppose one of you has a friend who comes to 6 him in the middle of the night and says, “My friend, lend me three loaves, 7 for a friend of mine on a journey has turned up at my house, and I have 8 nothing to offer him”; and he replies from inside, “Do not bother me. The door is shut for the night; my children and I have gone to bed; and I can-9 not get up and give you what you want.” I tell you that even if he will not provide for him out of friendship, the very shamelessness of the request 10 will make him get up and give him all he needs. And so I say to you, ask, and you will receive; seek, and you will find; knock, and the door will be opened. For everyone who asks receives, he who seeks finds, and to him who knocks, the door will be opened.

11 ‘Is there a father among you who will offer his son^c a snake when he asks the heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit^d to those who ask him!’

14 HE WAS DRIVING OUT a devil which was dumb; and when the devil had come out, the dumb man began to speak. The people were astonished, 15 but some of them said, ‘It is by Beelzebub prince of devils that he drives 16 the devils out.’ Others, by way of a test, demanded of him a sign from 17 heaven. But he knew what was in their minds, and said, ‘Every kingdom 18 divided against itself goes to ruin, and a divided household falls. Equally if Satan is divided against himself, how can his kingdom stand?—since, 19 as you would have it, I drive out the devils by Beelzebub. If it is by Beelzebub that I cast out devils, by whom do your own people drive them out?
 20 If this is your argument, they themselves will refute you. But if it is by the finger of God that I drive out the devils, then be sure the kingdom of God has already come upon you.

While he was speaking thus, a woman in the crowd called out, 'Happy 27

'No, happy are those who hear the word of God and keep it.'

With the crowds swarming round him he went on to say: 'This is a 29 wicked generation. It demands a sign, and the only sign that will be given 30 it is the sign of Jonah. For just as Jonah was a sign to the Ninevites, so will 31 the Son of Man be to this generation. At the Judgement, when the men of this generation are on trial, the Queen of the South will appear against ^a them and ensure their condemnation, for she came from the ends of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon; and what is here is greater than Solomon. The men of Nineveh will appear at the Judgement when this 32

the preaching of Jonah; and what is here is greater than Jonah.

but when the eyes are bad, you are in darkness. See to it then that the light 35 you have is not darkness. If you have light for your whole body with no 36

WHEN HE HAD FINISHED SPEAKING, a Pharisee invited him to a meal. 37
He came in and sat down. The Pharisee noticed with surprise that he had 38 not begun by washing before the meal. But the Lord said to him, 'You 39 Pharisees! You clean the outside of cup and plate; but inside you there is nothing but greed and wickedness. You fools! Did not he who made the 40

In reply to this one of the lawyers said, 'Master, when you say things 45

52 'Alas for you lawyers! You have taken away the key of knowledge. You did not go in yourselves, and those who were on their way in, you stopped.'

53 After he had left the house, the lawyers and Pharisees began to assail
 54 him fiercely and to ply him with a host of questions, laying snares to catch him with his own words.

12 MEANWHILE, WHEN A CROWD of many thousands had gathered, packed so close that they were treading on one another, he began to speak first to his disciples: 'Beware of the leaven of the Pharisees; I mean their
 2 hypocrisy. There is nothing covered up that will not be uncovered,
 3 nothing hidden that will not be made known. You may take it, then, that everything you have said in the dark will be heard in broad daylight, and what you have whispered behind closed doors will be shouted from the house-tops.

4 'To you who are my friends I say: Do not fear those who kill the body and after that have nothing more they can do. I will warn you whom to fear: fear him who, after he has killed, has authority to cast into hell. Believe me, he is the one to fear.

6 'Are not sparrows five for twopence? And yet not one of them is overlooked by God. More than that, even the hairs of your head have all been counted. Have no fear; you are worth more than any number of sparrows.

8 'I tell you this: everyone who acknowledges me before men, the Son of 9 Man will acknowledge before the angels of God; but he who disowns me before men will be disowned before the angels of God.

10 'Anyone who speaks a word against the Son of Man will receive forgiveness; but for him who slanders the Holy Spirit there will be no forgiveness.

11 'When you are brought before synagogues and state authorities, do not begin worrying about how you will conduct your defence or what you will say. For when the time comes the Holy Spirit will instruct you what to say.'

13 A man in the crowd said to him, 'Master, tell my brother to divide the family property with me.' He replied, 'My good man, who set me over you to judge or arbitrate?'^a Then he said to the people, 'Beware! Be on your guard against greed of every kind, for even when a man has more than 16 enough, his wealth does not give him life.' And he told them this parable:
 17 'There was a rich man whose land yielded heavy crops. He debated with himself: "What am I to do? I have not the space to store my produce. This is what I will do," said he: "I will pull down my storehouses and build them
 19 bigger. I will collect in them all my corn and other goods, and then say to myself, 'Man, you have plenty of good things laid by, enough for many 20 years: take life easy, eat, drink, and enjoy yourself.'" But God said to him, "You fool, this very night you must surrender your life; you have 21 made your money—who will get it now?" That is how it is with the man who amasses wealth for himself and remains a pauper in the sight of God.^a

'Therefore', he said to his disciples, 'I bid you put away anxious thoughts about food to keep you alive and clothes to cover your body. Life is more than food, the body more than clothes. Think of the ravens: they neither sow nor reap; they have no storehouse or barn; yet God feeds them. You are worth far more than the birds! Is there a man among you who by anxious thought can add a foot to his height^b? If, then, you cannot do even a very little thing, why are you anxious about the rest?'

'Think of the lilies: they neither spin nor weave;^c yet I tell you, even Solomon in all his splendour was not attired like one of these. But if that is how God clothes the grass, which is growing in the field today, and tomorrow is thrown on the stove, how much more will he clothe you! How little faith you have! And so you are not to set your mind on food and drink; you are not to worry. For all these are things for the heathen to run after; but you have a Father who knows that you need them. No, set your mind upon his kingdom, and all the rest will come to you as well.

'Have no fear, little flock; for your Father has chosen to give you the Kingdom. Sell your possessions and give in charity. Provide for yourselves purses that do not wear out, and never-failing treasure in heaven, where no thief can get near it, no moth destroy it. For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.

'Be ready for action, with belts fastened and lamps alight. Be like men who wait for their master's return from a wedding-party, ready to let him in the moment he arrives and knocks. Happy are those servants whom the master finds on the alert when he comes. I tell you this: he will fasten his belt, seat them at table, and come and wait on them. Even if it is the middle of the night or before dawn when he comes, happy they if he finds them alert. And remember, if the householder had known what time the burglar was coming he would not have let his house be broken into. Hold yourselves ready, then, because the Son of Man will come at the time you least expect him.'

Peter said, 'Lord, do you intend this parable specially for us or is it for everyone?' The Lord said, 'Well, who is the trusty and sensible man whom his master will appoint as his steward, to manage his servants and issue their rations at the proper time? Happy that servant who is found at his task when his master comes! I tell you this: he will be put in charge of all his master's property. But if that servant says to himself, "The master is a long time coming", and begins to bully the menservants and maids, and eat and drink and get drunk; then the master will arrive on a day that servant does not expect, at a time he does not know, and will cut him in pieces. Thus he will find his place among the faithless.

'The servant who knew his master's wishes, yet made no attempt to carry them out, will be flogged severely. But one who did not know them and earned a beating will be flogged less severely. Where a man has been given much, much will be expected of him; and the more a man has had entrusted to him the more he will be required to repay.

49 'I have come to set fire to the earth, and how I wish it were already 50 kindled! I have a baptism to undergo, and what constraint I am under until 51 the ordeal is over! Do you suppose I came to establish peace on earth? No 52 indeed, I have come to bring division. For from now on, five members of a 53 family will be divided, three against two and two against three; father against son and son against father, mother against daughter and daughter against mother, mother against son's wife and son's wife against her mother-in-law.'

54 He also said to the people, 'When you see cloud banking up in the west, 55 you say at once, "It is going to rain", and rain it does. And when the wind is 56 from the south, you say, "There will be a heat-wave", and there is. What hypocrites you are! You know how to interpret the appearance of earth and sky; how is it you cannot interpret this fateful hour?

57 'And why can you not judge for yourselves what is the right course?
58 When you are going with your opponent to court, make an effort to settle with him while you are still on the way; otherwise he may drag you before the judge, and the judge hand you over to the constable, and the constable 59 put you in jail. I tell you, you will not come out till you have paid the last farthing.'

13 AT THAT VERY TIME there were some people present who told him about 2 the Galileans whose blood Pilate had mixed with their sacrifices. He answered them: 'Do you imagine that, because these Galileans suffered this fate, they must have been greater sinners than anyone else in Galilee?
3 I tell you they were not; but unless you repent, you will all of you come to 4 the same end. Or the eighteen people who were killed when the tower fell on them at Siloam—do you imagine they were more guilty than all the 5 other people living in Jerusalem? I tell you they were not; but unless you repent, you will all of you come to the same end.'

6 He told them this parable: 'A man had a fig-tree growing in his vineyard;
7 and he came looking for fruit on it, but found none. So he said to the vinedresser, "Look here! For the last three years I have come looking for fruit on this fig-tree without finding any. Cut it down. Why should it go on 8 using up the soil?" But he replied, "Leave it, sir, this one year while I dig 9 round it and manure it. And if it bears next season, well and good; if not, you shall have it down.''

10 11 One Sabbath he was teaching in a synagogue, and there was a woman there possessed by a spirit that had crippled her for eighteen years. She 12 was bent double and quite unable to stand up straight. When Jesus saw her 13 he called her and said, 'You are rid of your trouble.' Then he laid his hands 14 on her, and at once she straightened up and began to praise God. But the president of the synagogue, indignant with Jesus for healing on the Sabbath, intervened and said to the congregation, 'There are six working-15 days: come and be cured on one of them, and not on the Sabbath.' The Lord gave him his answer: 'What hypocrites you are!' he said. 'Is there a single one of you who does not loose his ox or his donkey from the manger and take it out to water on the Sabbath? And here is this woman, a daughter of Abraham, who has been kept prisoner by Satan for eighteen long years: was it wrong for her to be freed from her bonds on the Sabbath?' At these words all his opponents were covered with confusion, while the mass of the people were delighted at all the wonderful things he was doing.

'What is the kingdom of God like?' he continued. 'What shall I compare it with? It is like a mustard-seed which a man took and sowed in his garden; and it grew to be a tree and the birds came to roost among its branches.'

Again he said, 'The kingdom of God, what shall I compare it with? It is like yeast which a woman took and mixed with half a hundredweight of flour till it was all leavened.'

HE CONTINUED HIS JOURNEY through towns and villages, teaching as he made his way towards Jerusalem. Someone asked him, 'Sir, are only a few to be saved?' His answer was: 'Struggle to get in through the narrow door; for I tell you that many will try to enter and not be able.'

'When once the master of the house has got up and locked the door, you may stand outside and knock, and say, "Sir, let us in!" but he will only answer, "I do not know where you come from." Then you will begin to say, "We sat at table with you and you taught in our streets." But he will repeat, "I tell you, I do not know where you come from. Out of my sight, all of you, you and your wicked ways!" There will be wailing and grinding of teeth there, when you see Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets, in the kingdom of God, and yourselves thrown out. From east and west people will come, from north and south, for the feast in the kingdom of God. Yes, and some who are now last will be first, and some who are first will be last.'

At that time a number of Pharisees came to him and said, 'You should leave this place and go on your way; Herod is out to kill you.' He replied, 'Go and tell that fox, "Listen: today and tomorrow I shall be casting out devils and working cures; on the third day I reach my goal." However, I must be on my way today and tomorrow and the next day, because it is unthinkable for a prophet to meet his death anywhere but in Jerusalem.'

'O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, the city that murders the prophets and stones the messengers sent to her! How often have I longed to gather your children, as a hen gathers her brood under her wings; but you would not let me. Look, look! there is your temple, forsaken by God. And I tell you, you shall never see me until the time comes when you say, "Blessings on him who comes in the name of the Lord!"'

ONE SABBATH he went to have a meal in the house of a leading Pharisee; and they were watching him closely. There, in front of him, was a man suffering from dropsy. Jesus asked the lawyers and the Pharisees: 'Is it permitted to cure people on the Sabbath or not?' They said nothing. So he took the man, cured him, and sent him away. Then he turned to them and said, 'If one of you has a donkey^a or an ox and it falls into a well, will

- 6 he hesitate to haul it up on the Sabbath day?' To this they could find no reply.
- 7 When he noticed how the guests were trying to secure the places of 8 honour, he spoke to them in a parable: 'When you are asked by someone to 9 a wedding-feast, do not sit down in the place of honour. It may be that some 10 person more distinguished than yourself has been invited; and the host 11 will come and say to you, "Give this man your seat." Then you will look 12 foolish as you begin to take the lowest place. No, when you receive an 13 invitation, go and sit down in the lowest place, so that when your host 14 comes he will say, "Come up higher, my friend." Then all your fellow-15 guests will see the respect in which you are held. For everyone who exalts 16 himself will be humbled; and whoever humbles himself will be exalted.'
- 17 Then he said to his host, 'When you are having a party for lunch or 18 supper, do not invite your friends, your brothers or other relations, or 19 your rich neighbours; they will only ask you back again and so you will 20 be repaid. But when you give a party, ask the poor, the crippled, the lame, 21 and the blind; and so find happiness. For they have no means of repaying 22 you; but you will be repaid on the day when good men rise from the dead.'
- 23 One of the company, after hearing all this, said to him, 'Happy the man 24 who shall sit at the feast in the kingdom of God!' Jesus answered, 'A man
25 was giving a big dinner party and had sent out many invitations. At dinner-26 time he sent his servant with a message for his guests, "Please come, every-27 thing is now ready." They began one and all to excuse themselves. The first 28 said, "I have bought a piece of land, and I must go and look over it; please 29 accept my apologies." The second said, "I have bought five yoke of oxen, 30 and I am on my way to try them out; please accept my apologies." The 31 next said, "I have just got married and for that reason I cannot come."
- 32 When the servant came back he reported this to his master. The master of the 33 house was angry and said to him, "Go out quickly into the streets and alleys of the town, and bring me in the poor, the crippled, the blind, and the lame." The servant said, "Sir, your orders have been carried out and there is still room." The master replied, "Go out on to the highways and along the hedgerows and make them come in; I want my house to be full. I tell you that not one of those who were invited shall taste my banquet."
- 34 Once when great crowds were accompanying him, he turned to them
35 and said: 'If anyone comes to me and does not hate his father and mother, 36 wife and children, brothers and sisters, even his own life, he cannot be a 37 disciple of mine. No one who does not carry his cross and come with me 38 can be a disciple of mine. Would any of you think of building a tower with-39 out first sitting down and calculating the cost, to see whether he could 40 afford to finish it? Otherwise, if he has laid its foundation and then is not 41 able to complete it, all the onlookers will laugh at him. "There is the man", 42 they will say, "who started to build and could not finish." Or what king 43 will march to battle against another king, without first sitting down to con-
44 sider whether with ten thousand men he can face an enemy coming to meet
45 him with twenty thousand? If he cannot, then, long before the enemy 46 approaches, he sends envoys, and asks for terms. So also none of you can 47 be a disciple of mine without parting with all his possessions.'

'Salt is a good thing; but if salt itself becomes tasteless, what will you use to season it? It is useless either on the land or on the dung-heap: it can only be thrown away. If you have ears to hear, then hear.'

ANOTHER TIME, the tax-gatherers and other bad characters were all crowding in to listen to him; and the Pharisees and the doctors of the law began grumbling among themselves: 'This fellow', they said, 'welcomes sinners and eats with them.' He answered them with this parable: 'If one of you has a hundred sheep and loses one of them, does he not leave the ninety-nine in the open pasture and go after the missing one until he has found it? How delighted he is then! He lifts it on to his shoulders, and home he goes to call his friends and neighbours together. "Rejoice with me!" he cries. "I have found my lost sheep." In the same way, I tell you, there will be greater joy in heaven over one sinner who repents than over ninety-nine righteous people who do not need to repent.'

'Or again, if a woman has ten silver pieces and loses one of them, does she not light the lamp, sweep out the house, and look in every corner till she has found it? And when she has, she calls her friends and neighbours together, and says, "Rejoice with me! I have found the piece that I lost." In the same way, I tell you, there is joy among the angels of God over one sinner who repents.'

Again he said: 'There was once a man who had two sons; and the younger said to his father, "Father, give me my share of the property." So he divided his estate between them. A few days later the younger son turned the whole of his share into cash and left home for a distant country, where he squandered it in reckless living. He had spent it all, when a severe famine fell upon that country and he began to feel the pinch. So he went and attached himself to one of the local landowners, who sent him on to his farm to mind the pigs. He would have been glad to fill his belly with^a the pods that the pigs were eating; and no one gave him anything. Then he came to his senses and said, "How many of my father's paid servants have more food than they can eat, and here am I, starving to death! I will set off and go to my father, and say to him, "Father, I have sinned, against God and against you; I am no longer fit to be called your son; treat me as one of your paid servants." So he set out for his father's house. But while he was still a long way off his father saw him, and his heart went out to him. He ran to meet him, flung his arms round him, and kissed him. The son said, "Father, I have sinned, against God and against you; I am no longer fit to be called your son."^b But the father said to his servants, "Quick! fetch a robe, my best one, and put it on him; put a ring on his finger and shoes on his feet. Bring the fatted calf and kill it, and let us have a feast to celebrate the day. For this son of mine was dead and has come back to life; he was lost and is found." And the festivities began.'

'Now the elder son was out on the farm; and on his way back, as he approached the house, he heard music and dancing. He called one of the servants and asked what it meant. The servant told him, "Your brother

^a Some witnesses read to have his fill of . . .

^b Some witnesses add treat me as one of your paid servants.

28 has come home, and your father has killed the fatted calf because he has 29 him back safe and sound.” But he was angry and refused to go in. His 30 father came out and pleaded with him; but he retorted, “You know how 31 I have slaved for you all these years; I never once disobeyed your orders; 32 and you never gave me so much as a kid, for a feast with my friends. But now that this son of yours turns up, after running through your money with his women, you kill the fatted calf for him.” “My boy,” said the father, “you are always with me, and everything I have is yours. How could we help celebrating this happy day? Your brother here was dead and has come back to life, was lost and is found.”

16 He said to his disciples, ‘There was a rich man who had a steward, and he 2 received complaints that this man was squandering the property. So he sent for him, and said, “What is this that I hear? Produce your accounts, 3 for you cannot be manager here any longer.” The steward said to himself, 4 “What am I to do now that my employer is dismissing me? I am not strong enough to dig, and too proud to beg. I know what I must do, to make sure that, when I have to leave, there will be people to give me house and home.”
5 He summoned his master’s debtors one by one. To the first he said, “How 6 much do you owe my master?” He replied, “A thousand gallons of olive oil.” He said, “Here is your account. Sit down and make it five hundred; 7 and be quick about it.” Then he said to another, “And you, how much do you owe?” He said, “A thousand bushels of wheat”, and was told, “Take 8 your account and make it eight hundred.” And the master applauded the dishonest steward for acting so astutely. For the worldly are more astute than the other-worldly in dealing with their own kind.

9 ‘So I say to you, use your worldly wealth to win friends for yourselves, so that when money is a thing of the past you may be received into an eternal home.

10 ‘The man who can be trusted in little things can be trusted also in great;
and the man who is dishonest in little things is dishonest also in great 11 things. If, then, you have not proved trustworthy with the wealth of this 12 world, who will trust you with the wealth that is real? And if you have proved untrustworthy with what belongs to another, who will give you what is your own?

13 ‘No servant can be the slave of two masters; for either he will hate the first and love the second, or he will be devoted to the first and think nothing of the second. You cannot serve God and Money.’

14 15 The Pharisees, who loved money, heard all this and scoffed at him. He said to them, ‘You are the people who impress your fellow-men with your righteousness; but God sees through you; for what sets itself up to be admired by men is detestable in the sight of God.

16 ‘Until John, it was the Law and the prophets: since then, there is the good news of the kingdom of God, and everyone forces his way in.

17 ‘It is easier for heaven and earth to come to an end than for one dot or stroke of the Law to lose its force.

18 ‘A man who divorces his wife and marries another commits adultery; and anyone who marries a woman divorced from her husband commits adultery.

'There was once a rich man, who dressed in purple and the finest linen, 19 and feasted in great magnificence every day. At his gate, covered with sores, 20 lay a poor man named Lazarus, who would have been glad to satisfy his 21 hunger with the scraps from the rich man's table. Even the dogs used to come and lick his sores. One day the poor man died and was carried away 22 by the angels to be with Abraham. The rich man also died and was buried, and in Hades, where he was in torment, he looked up; and there, far away, 23 was Abraham with Lazarus close beside him. "Abraham, my father," he 24 called out, "take pity on me! Send Lazarus to dip the tip of his finger in water, to cool my tongue, for I am in agony in this fire." But Abraham said, 25
 "Remember, my child, that all the good things fell to you while you were alive, and all the bad to Lazarus; now he has his consolation here and it is 26 you who are in agony. But that is not all: there is a great chasm fixed between us; no one from our side who wants to reach you can cross it, and none may pass from your side to us." "Then, father," he replied, "will 27 you send him to my father's house, where I have five brothers, to warn 28 them, so that they too may not come to this place of torment?" But Abraham 29 said, "They have Moses and the prophets; let them listen to them." "No, 30 father Abraham," he replied, "but if someone from the dead visits them, they will repent." Abraham answered, "If they do not listen to Moses and 31 the prophets they will pay no heed even if someone should rise from the dead."

HE SAID TO HIS DISCIPLES, 'Causes of stumbling are bound to arise; 17 but woe betide the man through whom they come. It would be better for 2 him to be thrown into the sea with a millstone round his neck than to cause one of these little ones to stumble. Keep watch on yourselves. 3

'If your brother wrongs you, reprove him; and if he repents, forgive 4
 him. Even if he wrongs you seven times in a day and comes back to you seven times saying, "I am sorry", you are to forgive him.'

The apostles said to the Lord, 'Increase our faith'; and the Lord 5 6 replied, 'If you had faith no bigger even than a mustard-seed, you could say to this mulberry-tree, "Be rooted up and replanted in the sea"; and it would at once obey you.

'Suppose one of you has a servant ploughing or minding sheep. When 7 he comes back from the fields, will the master say, "Come along at once and sit down"? Will he not rather say, "Prepare my supper, fasten your 8 belt, and then wait on me while I have my meal; you can have yours afterwards"? Is he grateful to the servant for carrying out his orders? So with 9 10 you: when you have carried out all your orders, you should say, "We are servants and deserve no credit; we have only done our duty."

In the course of his journey to Jerusalem he was travelling through the 11 borderlands of Samaria and Galilee. As he was entering a village he was met by ten men with leprosy. They stood some way off and called out to 12 him, 'Jesus, Master, take pity on us.' When he saw them he said, 'Go and 14 show yourselves to the priests'; and while they were on their way, they were made clean. One of them, finding himself cured, turned back praising 15
 God aloud. He threw himself down at Jesus's feet and thanked him. And 16

17 he was a Samaritan. At this Jesus said: 'Were not all ten cleansed? The 18 other nine, where are they? Could none be found to come back and give 19 praise to God except this foreigner?' And he said to the man, 'Stand up and go on your way; your faith has cured you.'

20 THE PHARISEES ASKED HIM, 'When will the kingdom of God come?'
He said, 'You cannot tell by observation when the kingdom of God comes.
21 There will be no saying, "Look, here it is!" or "there it is!"; for in fact the kingdom of God is among you.'^a 22 He said to the disciples, 'The time will come when you will long to see 23 one of the days of the Son of Man, but you will not see it. They will say to you, "Look! There!" and "Look! Here!" Do not go running off in pursuit.

24 For like the lightning-flash that lights up the earth from end to end, will 25 the Son of Man be when his day comes. But first he must endure much suffering and be repudiated by this generation.

26 'As things were in Noah's days, so will they be in the days of the Son of 27 Man. They ate and drank and married, until the day that Noah went into 28 the ark and the flood came and made an end of them all. As things were in 29 Lot's days, also: they ate and drank; they bought and sold; they planted and built; but the day that Lot went out from Sodom, it rained fire and 30 sulphur from the sky and made an end of them all—it will be like that on the day when the Son of Man is revealed.

31 'On that day the man who is on the roof and his belongings in the house
32 must not come down to pick them up; he, too, who is in the fields must not 33 go back. Remember Lot's wife. Whoever seeks to save his life will lose it; and whoever loses it will save it, and live.

34 'I tell you, on that night there will be two men in one bed: one will be 35 taken, the other left. There will be two women together grinding corn: one 37 will be taken, the other left.'^b When they heard this they asked, 'Where,
Lord?' He said, 'Where the corpse is, there the vultures will gather.'

18 HE SPOKE TO THEM in a parable to show that they should keep on praying
2 and never lose heart: 'There was once a judge who cared nothing for God
3 or man, and in the same town there was a widow who constantly came 4 before him demanding justice against her opponent. For a long time he 5 refused; but in the end he said to himself, "True, I care nothing for God
6 or man; but this widow is so great a nuisance that I will see her righted
7 before she wears me out with her persistence."' The Lord said, 'You 8 hear what the unjust judge says; and will not God vindicate his chosen, who cry out to him day and night, while he listens patiently to them?'^c 9 I tell you, he will vindicate them soon enough. But when the Son of Man comes, will he find faith on earth?'

9 And here is another parable that he told. It was aimed at those who were 10 sure of their own goodness and looked down on everyone else. 'Two men

^a Or for in fact the kingdom of God is within you, or for in fact the kingdom of God is within your grasp, or for suddenly the kingdom of God will be among you.

^b Some witnesses add (36) two men in the fields: one will be taken, the other left.

^c Or delays to help them.

went up to the temple to pray, one a Pharisee and the other a tax-gatherer. The Pharisee stood up and prayed thus: ^a "I thank thee, O God, that I am not like the rest of men, greedy, dishonest, adulterous; or, for that matter, like this tax-gatherer. I fast twice a week; I pay tithes on all that I get." But the other kept his distance and would not even raise his eyes to heaven, but beat upon his breast, saying, "O God, have mercy on me, sinner that I am." It was this man, I tell you, and not the other, who went home acquitted of his sins. For everyone who exalts himself will be humbled; and whoever humbles himself will be exalted.'

They even brought babies for him to touch. When the disciples saw them they rebuked them, but Jesus called for the children and said, 'Let the little ones come to me; do not try to stop them; for the kingdom of God belongs to such as these. I tell you that whoever does not accept the kingdom of God like a child will never enter it.'

A man of the ruling class put this question to him: 'Good Master, what must I do to win eternal life?' Jesus said to him, 'Why do you call me good? No one is good except God alone. You know the commandments: "Do not commit adultery; do not murder; do not steal; do not give false evidence; honour your father and mother."' The man answered, 'I have kept all these since I was a boy.' On hearing this Jesus said, 'There is still one thing lacking: sell everything you have and distribute to the poor, and you will have riches in heaven; and come, follow me.' At these words his heart sank; for he was a very rich man. When Jesus saw it he said, 'How hard it is for the wealthy to enter the kingdom of God! It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God.' Those who heard asked, 'Then who can be saved?' He answered, 'What is impossible for men is possible for God.'

Peter said, 'We here have left our belongings to become your followers.' Jesus said, 'I tell you this: there is no one who has given up home, or wife, brothers, parents, or children, for the sake of the kingdom of God, who will not be repaid many times over in this age, and in the age to come have eternal life.'

Challenge to Jerusalem

HE TOOK THE TWELVE ASIDE and said, 'We are now going up to Jerusalem; and all that was written by the prophets will come true for the Son of Man. He will be handed over to the foreign power. He will be mocked, maltreated, and spat upon. They will flog him and kill him. And on the third day he will rise again.' But they understood nothing of all this; they did not grasp what he was talking about; its meaning was concealed from them.

As he approached Jericho a blind man sat at the roadside begging. Hearing a crowd going past, he asked what was happening. They told him, 'Jesus of Nazareth is passing by.' Then he shouted out, 'Jesus, Son of ^a Some witnesses read stood up by himself and prayed thus; others read stood up and prayed thus privately.

39 David, have pity on me.' The people in front told him to hold his tongue;
40 but he called out all the more, 'Son of David, have pity on me.' Jesus stopped and ordered the man to be brought to him. When he came up he 41 asked him, 'What do you want me to do for you?' 'Sir, I want my sight 42 back', he answered. Jesus said to him, 'Have back your sight; your faith 43 has cured you.' He recovered his sight instantly; and he followed Jesus, praising God. And all the people gave praise to God for what they had seen.

19 1 2 Entering Jericho he made his way through the city. There was a man
3 there named Zacchaeus; he was superintendent of taxes and very rich. He was eager to see what Jesus looked like; but, being a little man, he could 4 not see him for the crowd. So he ran on ahead and climbed a sycamore-5 tree in order to see him, for he was to pass that way. When Jesus came to the place, he looked up and said, 'Zacchaeus, be quick and come down; I 6 must come and stay with you today.' He climbed down as fast as he could 7 and welcomed him gladly. At this there was a general murmur of dis-8 approval. 'He has gone in', they said, 'to be the guest of a sinner.' But Zacchaeus stood there and said to the Lord, 'Here and now, sir, I give half my possessions to charity; and if I have cheated anyone, I am ready to 9 repay him four times over.' Jesus said to him, 'Salvation has come to this 10 house today!—for this man too is a son of Abraham, and the Son of Man has come to seek and save what is lost.'

11 While they were listening to this, he went on to tell them a parable, because he was now close to Jerusalem and they thought the reign of God 12 might dawn at any moment. He said, 'A man of noble birth went on a long 13 journey abroad, to be appointed king and then return. But first he called ten of his servants and gave them a pound each, saying, "Trade with this 14 while I am away." His fellow-citizens hated him, and they sent a delega-15 tion on his heels to say, "We do not want this man as our king." However, back he came as king, and sent for the servants to whom he had given the 16 money, to see what profit each had made. The first came and said, "Your 17 pound, sir, has made ten more." "Well done," he replied; "you are a good servant. You have shown yourself trustworthy in a very small matter, and 18 you shall have charge of ten cities." The second came and said, "Your 19 pound, sir, has made five more"; and he also was told, "You too, take 20 charge of five cities." The third came and said, "Here is your pound, sir;
21 I kept it put away in a handkerchief. I was afraid of you, because you are a hard man: you draw out what you never put in and reap what you did not 22 sow." "You rascal!" he replied; "I will judge you by your own words.
You knew, did you, that I am a hard man, that I draw out what I never put 23 in, and reap what I did not sow? Then why did you not put my money on deposit, and I could have claimed it with interest when I came back?" 24 Turning to his attendants he said, "Take the pound from him and give it 25 26 to the man with ten." "But, sir," they replied, "he has ten already." "I tell you," he went on, "the man who has will always be given more; but the 27 man who has not will forfeit even what he has. But as for those enemies of mine who did not want me for their king, bring them here and slaughter them in my presence."

WITH THAT JESUS WENT FORWARD and began the ascent to Jerusalem. 28
 As he approached Bethphage and Bethany at the hill called Olivet, he sent 29 two of the disciples with these instructions: 'Go to the village opposite; 30 as you enter it you will find tethered there a colt which no one has yet ridden. Untie it and bring it here. If anyone asks why you are untying it, 31 say, "Our Master needs it." The two went on their errand and found it 32 as he had told them; and while they were untying the colt, its owners asked, 33
 'Why are you untying that colt?' They answered, 'Our Master needs it.' 34
 So they brought the colt to Jesus. 35

Then they threw their cloaks on the colt, for Jesus to mount, and 36 they carpeted the road with them as he went on his way. And now, as he 37 approached the descent from the Mount of Olives, the whole company of his disciples in their joy began to sing aloud the praises of God for all the great things they had seen:

'Blessings on him who comes as king in the name of the Lord! 38
 Peace in heaven, glory in highest heaven!'

Some Pharisees who were in the crowd said to him, 'Master, reprimand 39 your disciples.' He answered, 'I tell you, if my disciples keep silence the 40 stones will shout aloud.'

When he came in sight of the city, he wept over it and said, 'If only you 41 42 had known, on this great day, the way that leads to peace! But no; it is hidden from your sight. For a time will come upon you, when your enemies 43 will set up siege-works against you; they will encircle you and hem you in at every point; they will bring you to the ground, you and your children 44 within your walls, and not leave you one stone standing on another, because you did not recognize God's moment when it came.'

Then he went into the temple and began driving out the traders, with 45 46 these words: 'Scripture says, "My house shall be a house of prayer"; but you have made it a robbers' cave.'

Day by day he taught in the temple. And the chief priests and lawyers 47 were bent on making an end of him, with the support of the leading citizens, but found they were helpless, because the people all hung upon 48 his words.

ONE DAY, as he was teaching the people in the temple and telling them 20
 the good news, the priests and lawyers, and the elders with them, came upon him and accosted him. 'Tell us', they said, 'by what authority you are 2 acting like this; who gave you this authority?' He answered them, 'I have 3 a question to ask you too: tell me, was the baptism of John from God or 4 from men?' This set them arguing among themselves: 'If we say, "from 5 God", he will say, "Why did you not believe him?" And if we say, "from 6 men", the people will all stone us, for they are convinced that John was a prophet.' So they replied that they could not tell. And Jesus said to them, 7 8
 'Then neither will I tell you by what authority I act.'

He went on to tell the people this parable: 'A man planted a vineyard, 9 let it out to vine-growers, and went abroad for a long time. When the 10 season came, he sent a servant to the tenants to collect from them his share of the produce; but the tenants thrashed him and sent him away empty-handed. He tried again and sent a second servant; but he also was thrashed, outrageously treated, and sent away empty-handed. He tried once more with a third; this one too they wounded and flung out. Then the owner of the vineyard said, "What am I to do? I will send my own dear son;^a perhaps they will respect him." But when the tenants saw him they talked it over together. "This is the heir," they said; "let us kill him so that the property may come to us." So they flung him out of the vineyard and killed him. What then will the owner of the vineyard do to them? He will come and put these tenants to death and let the vineyard to others.'

When they heard this, they said, 'God forbid!' But he looked straight at them and said, 'Then what does this text of Scripture mean: "The stone which the builders rejected has become the main corner-stone"? Any man who falls on that stone will be dashed to pieces; and if it falls on a man he will be crushed by it.'

The lawyers and chief priests wanted to lay hands on him there and then, for they saw that this parable was aimed at them; but they were afraid of the people. So they watched their opportunity and sent secret agents in the guise of honest men, to seize upon some word of his as a pretext for handing him over to the authority and jurisdiction of the Governor. They put a question to him: 'Master,' they said, 'we know that what you speak and teach is sound; you pay deference to no one, but teach in all honesty the way of life that God requires. Are we or are we not permitted to pay taxes to the Roman Emperor?' He saw through their trick and said, 'Show me a silver piece. Whose head does it bear, and whose inscription?' 'Caesar's', they replied. 'Very well then,' he said, 'pay Caesar what is due to Caesar, and pay God what is due to God.' Thus their attempt to catch him out in public failed, and, astonished by his reply, they fell silent.

Then some Sadducees came forward. They are the people who deny that there is a resurrection. Their question was this: 'Master, Moses laid it down for us that if there are brothers, and one dies leaving a wife but no child, then the next should marry the widow and carry on his brother's family. Now, there were seven brothers: the first took a wife and died childless; then the second married her, then the third. In this way the seven of them died leaving no children. Afterwards the woman also died. At the resurrection whose wife is she to be, since all seven had married her?' Jesus said to them, 'The men and women of this world marry; but those who have been judged worthy of a place in the other world and of the resurrection from the dead, do not marry, for they are not subject to death any longer. They are like angels; they are sons of God, because they share in the resurrection. That the dead are raised to life again is shown by Moses himself in the story of the burning bush, when he calls the Lord, "the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob". God is not God of the dead but of the living; for him all are ^b alive.'

At this some of the lawyers said, 'Well spoken, Master.' For there was no further question that they ventured to put to him.

He said to them, 'How can they say that the Messiah is son of David?

^a Or my only son.

^b Or they are all.

For David himself says in the Book of Psalms: "The Lord said to my Lord, 'Sit at my right hand until I make your enemies your footstool.'" 42
 Thus David calls him "Lord"; how then can he be David's son? 43
 44

In the hearing of all the people Jesus said to his disciples: 'Beware of the doctors of the law who love to walk up and down in long robes, and have a great liking for respectful greetings in the street, the chief seats in our synagogues, and places of honour at feasts. These are the men who eat up the property of widows, while they say long prayers for appearance' sake; and they will receive the severest sentence.' 45 46
 47

He looked up and saw the rich people dropping their gifts into the chest of the temple treasury; and he noticed a poor widow putting in two tiny coins. 'I tell you this,' he said: 'this poor widow has given more than any of them; for those others who have given had more than enough, but she, with less than enough, has given all she had to live on.' 21

SOME PEOPLE WERE TALKING about the temple and the fine stones and votive offerings with which it was adorned. He said, 'These things which you are gazing at—the time will come when not one stone of them will be left upon another; all will be thrown down.' 'Master,' they asked, 'when will it all come about? What will be the sign when it is due to happen?' 5

He said, 'Take care that you are not misled. For many will come claiming my name and saying, "I am he", and, "The Day is upon us." Do not follow them. And when you hear of wars and insurrections, do not fall into a panic. These things are bound to happen first; but the end does not follow immediately.' Then he added, 'Nation will make war upon nation, kingdom upon kingdom; there will be great earthquakes, and famines and plagues in many places; in the sky terrors and great portents.' 8

'But before all this happens they will set upon you and persecute you. You will be brought before synagogues and put in prison; you will be haled before kings and governors for your allegiance to me. This will be your opportunity to testify; so make up your minds not to prepare your defence beforehand, because I myself will give you power of utterance and a wisdom which no opponent will be able to resist or refute. Even your parents and brothers, your relations and friends, will betray you. Some of you will be put to death; and all will hate you for your allegiance to me. But not a hair of your head shall be lost. By standing firm you will win true life for yourselves.' 12

'But when you see Jerusalem encircled by armies, then you may be sure that her destruction is near. Then those who are in Judaea must take to the hills; those who are in the city itself must leave it, and those who are out in the country must not enter; because this is the time of retribution, when all that stands written is to be fulfilled. Alas for women who are with child in those days, or have children at the breast! For there will be great distress in the land and a terrible judgement upon this people. They will fall at the sword's point; they will be carried captive into all countries; and Jerusalem will be trampled down by foreigners until their day has run its course.' 20

- 25 'Portents will appear in sun, moon, and stars. On earth nations will 26 stand helpless, not knowing which way to turn from the roar and surge of 27 the sea; men will faint with terror at the thought of all that is coming 28 upon the world; for the celestial powers will be shaken. And then they will see the Son of Man coming on a cloud with great power and glory.
 28 When all this begins to happen, stand upright and hold your heads high, because your liberation is near.'
- 9 30 He told them this parable: 'Look at the fig-tree, or any other tree. As 31 soon as it buds, you can see for yourselves that summer is near. In the same way, when you see all this happening, you may know that the kingdom of God is near.
- 2 33 'I tell you this: the present generation will live to see it all. Heaven and earth will pass away; my words will never pass away.
- 34 'Keep a watch on yourselves; do not let your minds be dulled by dissipa-35 tion and drunkenness and worldly cares so that the great Day closes upon 36 you suddenly like a trap; for that day will come on all men, wherever they are, the whole world over. Be on the alert, praying at all times for strength to pass safely through all these imminent troubles and to stand in the presence of the Son of Man.'
- 37 His days were given to teaching in the temple; and then he would leave 38 the city and spend the night on the hill called Olivet. And in the early morning the people flocked to listen to him in the temple. ^a

The final conflict

- 22 NOW THE FESTIVAL of Unleavened Bread, known as Passover, was 2 approaching, and the chief priests and the doctors of the law were trying to devise some means of doing away with him; for they were afraid of the people.
- 3 Then Satan entered into Judas Iscariot, who was one of the Twelve;
 4 and Judas went to the chief priests and officers of the temple police to 5 discuss ways and means of putting Jesus into their power. They were 6 greatly pleased and undertook to pay him a sum of money. He agreed, and began to look out for an opportunity to betray him to them without collecting a crowd.
- 7 Then came the day of Unleavened Bread, on which the Passover victim 8 had to be slaughtered, and Jesus sent Peter and John with these instruc-9 tions: 'Go and prepare for our Passover supper.' 'Where would you like 10 us to make the preparations?' they asked. He replied, 'As soon as you set foot in the city a man will meet you carrying a jar of water. Follow him into 11 the house that he enters and give this message to the householder: "The Master says, 'Where is the room in which I may eat the Passover with my 12 disciples?'" He will show you a large room upstairs all set out: make the 13 preparations there.' They went and found everything as he had said. So they prepared for Passover.
- 14 When the time came he took his place at table, and the apostles with him; and he said to them, 'How I have longed^a to eat this Passover with you before my death! For I tell you, never again shall I^b eat it until the time when it finds its fulfilment in the kingdom of God.'

Then he took a cup, and after giving thanks he said, 'Take this and share it among yourselves; for I tell you, from this moment I shall drink from the fruit of the vine no more until the time when the kingdom of God comes.' And he took bread, gave thanks, and broke it; and he gave it to them, with the words: 'This is my body.'^c

'But mark this—my betrayer is here, his hand with mine on the table. For the Son of Man is going his appointed way; but alas for that man by whom he is betrayed!' At this they began to ask among themselves which of them it could possibly be who was to do this thing.

Then a jealous dispute broke out: who among them should rank highest? But he said, 'In the world, kings lord it over their subjects; and those in authority are called their country's "Benefactors". Not so with you: on the contrary, the highest among you must bear himself like the youngest, the chief of you like a servant. For who is greater—the one who sits at table or the servant who waits on him? Surely the one who sits at table. Yet here am I among you like a servant.

'You are the men who have stood firmly by me in my times of trial; and now I vest in you the kingship which my Father vested in me; you shall eat and drink at my table in my kingdom and sit^d on thrones as judges of the twelve tribes of Israel.

'Simon, Simon, take heed: Satan has been given leave to sift all of you like wheat; but for you I have prayed that your faith may not fail; and when you have come to yourself, you must lend strength to your brothers.' 'Lord,' he replied, 'I am ready to go with you to prison and death.' Jesus said, 'I tell you, Peter, the cock will not crow tonight until you have three times over denied that you know me.'

He said to them, 'When I sent you out barefoot without purse or pack, were you ever short of anything?' 'No', they answered. 'It is different now,' he said; 'whoever has a purse had better take it with him, and his pack too; and if he has no sword, let him sell his cloak to buy one. For Scripture says, "And he was counted among the outlaws", and these words, I tell you, must find fulfilment in me; indeed, all that is written of me is being fulfilled.' 'Look, Lord,' they said, 'we have two swords here.' 'Enough, enough!' he replied.

THEN HE WENT OUT and made his way as usual to the Mount of Olives, accompanied by the disciples. When he reached the place he said to them, 'Pray that you may be spared the hour of testing.' He himself withdrew from them about a stone's throw, knelt down, and began to pray: 'Father, ^d Or trial; and as my Father gave me the right to reign, so I give you the right to eat and to drink . . . and to sit . . .

if it be thy will, take this cup away from me. Yet not my will but thine be done.'

43 And now there appeared to him an angel from heaven bringing him
44 strength, and in anguish of spirit he prayed the more urgently; and his sweat was like clots of blood falling to the ground.^a

45 When he rose from prayer and came to the disciples he found them
46 asleep, worn out by grief. 'Why are you sleeping?' he said. 'Rise and pray that you may be spared the test.'

47 WHILE HE WAS STILL SPEAKING a crowd appeared with the man called Judas, one of the Twelve, at their head. He came up to Jesus to 48 kiss him; but Jesus said, 'Judas, would you betray the Son of Man with a kiss?'

49 When his followers saw what was coming, they said, 'Lord, shall we use
50 our swords?' And one of them struck at the High Priest's servant, cutting 51 off his right ear. But Jesus answered, 'Let them have their way.' Then he touched the man's ear and healed him.^b

52 Turning to the chief priests, the officers of the temple police, and the elders, who had come to seize him, he said, 'Do you take me for a bandit, 53 that you have come out with swords and cudgels to arrest me? Day after day, when I was in the temple with you, you kept your hands off me. But this is your moment—the hour when darkness reigns.'

54 Then they arrested him and led him away. They brought him to the 55 High Priest's house, and Peter followed at a distance. They lit a fire in the middle of the courtyard and sat round it, and Peter sat among them. A serving-maid who saw him sitting in the firelight stared at him and said, 57 'This man was with him too.' But he denied it: 'Woman,' he said, 'I do
58 not know him.' A little later someone else noticed him and said, 'You also are one of them.' But Peter said to him, 'No, I am not.' About an hour
59 passed and another spoke more strongly still: 'Of course this fellow was with him. He must have been; he is a Galilean.' But Peter said, 'Man, I do
60 not know what you are talking about.' At that moment, while he was still speaking, a cock crew; and the Lord turned and looked at Peter. And Peter 61 remembered the Lord's words, 'Tonight before the cock crows you will disown me three times.'^c

62 The men who were guarding Jesus mocked at him. They beat him, they 63 blindfolded him, and they kept asking him, 'Now, prophet, who hit you?
64 Tell us that.' And so they went on heaping insults upon him.

66 WHEN DAY BROKE, the elders of the nation, chief priests, and doctors
67 of the law assembled, and he was brought before their Council. 'Tell us,' they said, 'are you the Messiah?' 'If I tell you,' he replied, 'you will not 68 69 believe me; and if I ask questions, you will not answer. But from now on, the Son of Man will be seated at the right hand of Almighty God.'^d 'You 70 are the Son of God, then?' they all said, and he replied, 'It is you who say I am.’^a They said, ‘Need we call further witnesses? We have heard it ourselves from his own lips.’ 71

With that the whole assembly rose, and they brought him before Pilate. 23
They opened the case against him by saying, ‘We found this man subverting 2
our nation, opposing the payment of taxes to Caesar, and claiming to be 3 Messiah, a king.’^b Pilate asked him, ‘Are you the king of the Jews?’ He 3 replied, ‘The words are yours.’^c Pilate then said to the chief priests and 4 the crowd, ‘I find no case for this man to answer.’ But they insisted: ‘His 5 teaching is causing disaffection among the people all through Judaea. It 5 started from Galilee and has spread as far as this city.’

When Pilate heard this, he asked if the man was a Galilean, and on 6 7 learning that he belonged to Herod’s jurisdiction he remitted the case to 8 him, for Herod was also in Jerusalem at that time. When Herod saw Jesus 8 he was greatly pleased; having heard about him, he had long been wanting 9 to see him, and had been hoping to see some miracle performed by him. 9 10
He questioned him at some length without getting any reply; but the chief 9 10 priests and lawyers appeared and pressed the case against him vigorously. 11
Then Herod and his troops treated him with contempt and ridicule, and 11 sent him back to Pilate dressed in a gorgeous robe. That same day Herod 12 and Pilate became friends; till then there had been a standing feud between 12 them.

Pilate now called together the chief priests, councillors, and people, and 13 14 said to them, ‘You brought this man before me on a charge of subversion. 13 14
But, as you see, I have myself examined him in your presence and found 15 nothing in him to support your charges. No more did Herod, for he has 15 referred him back to us. Clearly he has done nothing to deserve death. I 16 therefore propose to let him off with a flogging.’ But ^d there was a general 18 outcry, ‘Away with him! Give us Barabbas.’ (This man had been put in 19 prison for a rising that had taken place in the city, and for murder.) Pilate 20 addressed them again, in his desire to release Jesus, but they shouted back, 21 ‘Crucify him, crucify him!’ For the third time he spoke to them: ‘Why, 22 what wrong has he done? I have not found him guilty of any capital offence. 22
I will therefore let him off with a flogging.’ But they insisted on their 23 demand, shouting that Jesus should be crucified. Their shouts prevailed 23 and Pilate decided that they should have their way. He released the man 24 25 they asked for, the man who had been put in prison for insurrection and 24 25 murder, and gave Jesus up to their will.

AS THEY LED HIM AWAY to execution they seized upon a man called 26
Simon, from Cyrene, on his way in from the country, put the cross on his 26 back, and made him walk behind Jesus carrying it.

Great numbers of people followed, many women among them, who 27 mourned and lamented over him. Jesus turned to them and said, ‘Daugh- 28 ters of Jerusalem, do not weep for me; no, weep for yourselves and your 28 children. For the days are surely coming when they will say, “Happy are 29 the barren, the wombs that never bore a child, the breasts that never fed one." Then they will start saying to the mountains, "Fall on us", and to the hills, "Cover us." For if these things are done when the wood is green, what will happen when it is dry?

There were two others with him, criminals who were being led away to execution; and when they reached the place called The Skull, they crucified him there, and the criminals with him, one on his right and the other on his left. Jesus said, 'Father, forgive them; they do not know what they are doing.'^a

They divided his clothes among them by casting lots. The people stood looking on, and their rulers jeered at him: 'He saved others: now let him save himself, if this is God's Messiah, his Chosen.' The soldiers joined in the mockery and came forward offering him their sour wine. 'If you are the king of the Jews,' they said, 'save yourself.' There was an inscription above his head which ran: 'This is the king of the Jews.'

One of the criminals who hung there with him taunted him: 'Are not you the Messiah? Save yourself, and us.' But the other rebuked him: 'Have you no fear of God? You are under the same sentence as he. For us it is plain justice; we are paying the price for our misdeeds; but this man has done nothing wrong.' And he said, 'Jesus, remember me when you come to your throne.'^b He answered, 'I tell you this: today you shall be with me in Paradise.'

By now it was about midday and a darkness fell over the whole land, which lasted until three in the afternoon; the sun's light failed. And the curtain of the temple was torn in two. Then Jesus gave a loud cry and said, 'Father, into thy hands I commit my spirit'; and with these words he died. The centurion saw it all, and gave praise to God. 'Beyond all doubt', he said, 'this man was innocent.'

The crowd who had assembled for the spectacle, when they saw what had happened, went home beating their breasts.

HIS FRIENDS had all been standing at a distance; the women who had accompanied him from Galilee stood with them and watched it all.

Now there was a man called Joseph, a member of the Council, a good, upright man, who had dissented from their policy and the action they had taken. He came from the Judaeian town of Arimathaea, and he was one who looked forward to the kingdom of God. This man now approached Pilate and asked for the body of Jesus. Taking it down from the cross, he wrapped it in a linen sheet, and laid it in a tomb cut out of the rock, in which no one had been laid before. It was Friday, and the Sabbath was about to begin.

The women who had accompanied him from Galilee followed; they took note of the tomb and observed how his body was laid. Then they went home and prepared spices and perfumes; and on the Sabbath they rested in obedience to the commandment. But on the Sunday morning very early they came to the tomb bringing the spices they had prepared. Finding that the stone had been rolled away from the tomb, they went inside; but the body was not to be found. While they stood utterly at a loss, all of a sudden two men in dazzling garments were at their side. They were terrified, and stood with eyes cast down, but the men said, 'Why search among the dead for one who lives?'^a Remember what he told you while he was still in Galilee, about the Son of Man: how he must be given up into the power of sinful men and be crucified, and must rise again on the third day.' Then they recalled his words and, returning from the tomb, they reported all this to the Eleven and all the others.

The women were Mary of Magdala, Joanna, and Mary the mother ^b of James, and they, with the other women, told the apostles. But the story appeared to them to be nonsense, and they would not believe them. ^c

THAT SAME DAY TWO of them were on their way to a village called Emmaus, which lay about seven miles from Jerusalem, and they were talking together about all these happenings. As they talked and discussed it with one another, Jesus himself came up and walked along with them; but something kept them from seeing who it was. He asked them, 'What is it you are debating as you walk?' They halted, their faces full of gloom, and one, called Cleopas, answered, 'Are you the only person staying in Jerusalem not to know ^d what has happened there in the last few days?' 'What do you mean?' he said. 'All this about Jesus of Nazareth,' they replied, 'a prophet powerful in speech and action before God and the whole people; how our chief priests and rulers handed him over to be sentenced to death, and crucified him. But we had been hoping that he was the man to liberate Israel. What is more, this is the third day since it happened, and now some women of our company have astounded us: they went early to the tomb, but failed to find his body, and returned with a story that they had seen a vision of angels who told them he was alive. So some of our people went to the tomb and found things just as the women had said; but him they did not see.'

'How dull you are!' he answered. 'How slow to believe all that the prophets said! Was the Messiah not bound to suffer thus before entering upon his glory?' Then he began with Moses and all the prophets, and explained to them the passages which referred to himself in every part of the scriptures.

By this time they had reached the village to which they were going, and he made as if to continue his journey, but they pressed him: 'Stay with us, for evening draws on, and the day is almost over.' So he went in to stay with them. And when he had sat down with them at table, he took bread and said the blessing; he broke the bread, and offered it to them. Then their eyes were opened, and they recognized him; and he vanished from their sight. They said to one another, 'Did we not feel our hearts on fire as he talked with us on the road and explained the scriptures to us?'

^a Some witnesses insert He is not here: he has been raised.

^b Or wife, or daughter.

^c Some witnesses add (12) Peter, however, got up and ran to the tomb, and, peering in, saw the wrappings and nothing more; and he went home amazed at what had happened.

^d Or Have you been staying by yourself in Jerusalem, that you do not know . . .

33 Without a moment's delay they set out and returned to Jerusalem. There 34 they found that the Eleven and the rest of the company had assembled, and were saying, 'It is true: the Lord has risen; he has appeared to Simon.' 35 Then they gave their account of the events of their journey and told how he had been recognized by them at the breaking of the bread.

36 As they were talking about all this, there he was, standing among them.^a 37 38 Startled and terrified, they thought they were seeing a ghost. But he said,
 'Why are you so perturbed? Why do questionings arise in your minds?
 39 Look at my hands and feet. It is I myself. Touch me and see; no ghost has 41 flesh and bones as you can see that I have.^b They were still unconvinced, still wondering, for it seemed too good to be true. So he asked them, 'Have 42 you anything here to eat?' They offered him a piece of fish they had cooked, 43 which he took and ate before their eyes.

44 And he said to them, 'This is what I meant by saying, while I was still with you, that everything written about me in the Law of Moses and in the 45 prophets and psalms was bound to be fulfilled.' Then he opened their 46 minds to understand the scriptures. 'This', he said, 'is what is written:
 47 that the Messiah is to suffer death and to rise from the dead on the third 48 day, and that in his name repentance bringing the forgiveness of sins is to 49 be proclaimed to all nations. Begin from Jerusalem; it is you who are the witnesses to it all. And mark this: I am sending upon you my Father's promised gift; so stay here in this city until you are armed with the power from above.'

50 Then he led them out as far as Bethany, and blessed them with uplifted
 51 52 hands; and in the act of blessing he parted from them.^c And they^d returned 53 to Jerusalem with great joy, and spent all their time in the temple praising God.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO JOHN

The coming of Christ

1 WHEN ALL THINGS BEGAN, the Word already was.^e
 2 The Word dwelt with God, and what God was, the Word was.
 3 The Word, then, was with God at the beginning, and through him all things came to be; no single thing was created without him. All 4 that came to be was alive with his life,^f and that life was the light of men.
 5 The light shines on in the dark, and the darkness has never mastered it.

thing came into being without him. There was life in him . . .

There appeared a man named John, sent from God; he came as a witness to testify to the light, that all might become believers through him. He was not himself the light; he came to bear witness to the light. The real light which enlightens every man was even then coming into the world. ^a

He was in the world; ^b but the world, though it owed its being to him, did not recognize him. He entered his own realm, and his own would not receive him. But to all who did receive him, to those who have yielded him their allegiance, he gave the right to become children of God, not born of any human stock, or by the fleshly desire of a human father, but the offspring of God himself. So the Word became flesh; he came to dwell among us, and we saw his glory, such glory as befits the Father's only Son, full of grace and truth.

Here is John's testimony to him: he cried aloud, 'This is the man I meant when I said, "He comes after me, but takes rank before me"; for before I was born, he already was.'

Out of his full store we have all received grace upon grace; for while the Law was given through Moses, grace and truth came through Jesus Christ. No one has ever seen God; but God's only Son, he who is nearest to the Father's heart, he has made him known. ^c

THIS IS THE TESTIMONY which John gave when the Jews of Jerusalem sent a deputation of priests and Levites to ask him who he was. He confessed without reserve and avowed, 'I am not the Messiah.' 'What then? Are you Elijah?' 'No', he replied. 'Are you the prophet we await?' He answered 'No.' 'Then who are you?' they asked. 'We must give an answer to those who sent us. What account do you give of yourself?' He answered in the words of the prophet Isaiah: 'I am a voice crying aloud in the wilderness, "Make the Lord's highway straight."'

Some Pharisees who were in the deputation asked him, 'If you are not the Messiah, nor Elijah, nor the prophet, why then are you baptizing?' 'I baptize in water,' John replied, 'but among you, though you do not know him, stands the one who is to come after me. I am not good enough to unfasten his shoes.' This took place at Bethany beyond Jordan, where John was baptizing.

The next day he saw Jesus coming towards him. 'Look,' he said, 'there is the Lamb of God; it is he who takes away the sin of the world. This is he of whom I spoke when I said, "After me a man is coming who takes rank before me"; for before I was born, he already was. I myself did not know who he was; but the very reason why I came, baptizing in water, was that he might be revealed to Israel.'

John testified further: 'I saw the Spirit coming down from heaven like a dove and resting upon him. I did not know him, but he who sent me to baptize in water had told me, "When you see the Spirit coming down upon someone and resting upon him, you will know that this is he who is to 35 36 The next day again John was standing with two of his disciples when Jesus passed by. John looked towards him and said, 'There is the Lamb 37 38 of God.' The two disciples heard him say this, and followed Jesus. When he turned and saw them following him, he asked, 'What are you looking for?' They said, 'Rabbi' (which means a teacher), 'where are you staying?' 39 'Come and see', he replied. So they went and saw where he was staying, and spent the rest of the day with him. It was then about four in the afternoon.

40 One of the two who followed Jesus after hearing what John said was 41 Andrew, Simon Peter's brother. The first thing he did was to find^b his brother Simon. He said to him, 'We have found the Messiah' (which is the 42 Hebrew for 'Christ'). He brought Simon to Jesus, who looked at him and said, 'You are Simon son of John. You shall be called Cephas' (that is, Peter, the Rock).

43 44 The next day Jesus decided to leave for Galilee. He met Philip, who, like Andrew and Peter, came from Bethsaida, and said to him, 'Follow me.' 45 Philip went to find Nathanael, and told him, 'We have met the man spoken of by Moses in the Law, and by the prophets: it is Jesus son of Joseph, from 46 Nazareth.' 'Nazareth!' Nathanael exclaimed; 'can anything good come 47 from Nazareth?' Philip said, 'Come and see.' When Jesus saw Nathanael coming, he said, 'Here is an Israelite worthy of the name; there is nothing 48 false in him.' Nathanael asked him, 'How do you come to know me?' Jesus 49 replied, 'I saw you under the fig-tree before Philip spoke to you.' 'Rabbi,' 50 said Nathanael, 'you are the Son of God; you are king of Israel.' Jesus answered, 'Is this the ground of your faith, that I told you I saw you under 51 the fig-tree? You shall see greater things than that.' Then he added, 'In truth, in very truth I tell you all, you shall see heaven wide open, and God's angels ascending and descending upon the Son of Man.'

Christ the giver of life

2 ON THE THIRD DAY there was a wedding at Cana-in-Galilee. The 2 mother of Jesus was there, and Jesus and his disciples were guests
3 also. The wine gave out, so Jesus's mother said to him, 'They have no wine 4 left.' He answered, 'Your concern, mother, is not mine. My hour has not
5 yet come.' His mother said to the servants, 'Do whatever he tells you.'
6 There were six stone water-jars standing near, of the kind used for Jewish 7 rites of purification; each held from twenty to thirty gallons. Jesus said
8 to the servants, 'Fill the jars with water', and they filled them to the brim.
9 'Now draw some off', he ordered, 'and take it to the steward of the feast'; and they did so. The steward tasted the water now turned into wine, not knowing its source; though the servants who had drawn the water knew.
10 He hailed the bridegroom and said, 'Everyone serves the best wine first, and waits until the guests have drunk freely before serving the poorer sort ; but you have kept the best wine till now.'

This deed at Cana-in-Galilee is the first of the signs by which Jesus revealed his glory and led his disciples to believe in him. 11

AFTER THIS he went down to Capernaum in company with his mother, his brothers, and his disciples, but they did not stay there long. As it was near the time of the Jewish Passover, Jesus went up to Jerusalem. There he found in the temple the dealers in cattle, sheep, and pigeons, and the money-changers seated at their tables. Jesus made a whip of cords and drove them out of the temple, sheep, cattle, and all. He upset the tables of the money-changers, scattering their coins. Then he turned on the dealers in pigeons: 'Take them out,' he said ; 'you must not turn my Father's house into a market.' His disciples recalled the words of Scripture, 'Zeal for thy house will destroy me.' The Jews challenged Jesus: 'What sign', they asked, 'can you show as authority for your action?' 'Destroy this temple,' Jesus replied, 'and in three days I will raise it again.' They said, 'It has taken forty-six years to build this temple. Are you going to raise it again in three days?' But the temple he was speaking of was his body. After his resurrection his disciples recalled what he had said, and they believed the Scripture and the words that Jesus had spoken. 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22

WHILE HE WAS in Jerusalem for Passover many gave their allegiance to him when they saw the signs that he performed. But Jesus for his part would not trust himself to them. He knew men so well, all of them, that he needed no evidence from others about a man, for he himself could tell what was in a man. 23 24 25

THERE WAS ONE of the Pharisees named Nicodemus, a member of the Jewish Council, who came to Jesus by night. 'Rabbi,' he said, 'we know that you are a teacher sent by God ; no one could perform these signs of yours unless God were with him.' Jesus answered, 'In truth, in very truth I tell you, unless a man has been born over again he cannot see the kingdom of God.' 'But how is it possible', said Nicodemus, 'for a man to be born when he is old? Can he enter his mother's womb a second time and be born?' Jesus answered, 'In truth I tell you, no one can enter the kingdom of God without being born from water and spirit. Flesh can give birth only to flesh ; it is spirit that gives birth to spirit. You ought not to be astonished, then, when I tell you that you must be born over again. The wind ^a blows where it wills ; you hear the sound of it, but you do not know where it comes from, or where it is going. So with everyone who is born from spirit ^a.' 3 2 3 4 5 6 7 8

Nicodemus replied, 'How is this possible?' 'What!' said Jesus. 'Is this famous teacher of Israel ignorant of such things? In very truth I tell you, we speak of what we know, and testify to what we have seen, and yet you all reject our testimony. If you disbelieve me when I talk to you about things on earth, how are you to believe if I should talk about the things of heaven?' 9 10 11 12

^a wind and spirit are translations of the same Greek word, which has both meanings.

13 'No one ever went up into heaven except the one who came down from 14 heaven, the Son of Man whose home is in heaven. ^a This Son of Man must 15 be lifted up as the serpent was lifted up by Moses in the wilderness, so that everyone who has faith in him may in him possess eternal life.

16 'God loved the world so much that he gave his only Son, that everyone 17 who has faith in him may not die but have eternal life. It was not to judge the world that God sent his Son into the world, but that through him the world might be saved.

18 'The man who puts his faith in him does not come under judgement; 19 but the unbeliever has already been judged in that he has not given his allegiance to God's only Son. Here lies the test: the light has come into the world, but men preferred darkness to light because their deeds were evil.
20 Bad men all hate the light and avoid it, for fear their practices should be 21 shown up. The honest man comes to the light so that it may be clearly seen that God is in all he does.'

22 AFTER THIS, Jesus went into Judaea with his disciples, stayed there with 23 them, and baptized. John too was baptizing at Aenon, near to Salim, because water was plentiful in that region; and people were constantly 24 coming for baptism. This was before John's imprisonment.

25 Some of John's disciples had fallen into a dispute with Jews about puri-26 fication; so they came to him and said, 'Rabbi, there was a man with you on the other side of the Jordan, to whom you bore your witness. Here he is, 27 baptizing, and crowds are flocking to him.' John's answer was: 'A man 28 can have only what God gives him. You yourselves can testify that I said, 29 "I am not the Messiah; I have been sent as his forerunner." It is the bridegroom to whom the bride belongs. The bridegroom's friend, who stands 30 by and listens to him, is overjoyed at hearing the bridegroom's voice. This joy, this perfect joy, is now mine. As he grows greater, I must grow less.'

31 He who comes from above is above all others; he who is from the earth belongs to the earth and uses earthly speech. He who comes from heaven ^b 32 bears witness to what he has seen and heard, yet no one accepts his witness.
34 To accept his witness is to attest that God speaks the truth; for he whom God sent utters the words of God, so measureless is God's gift of the Spirit.
36 The Father loves the Son and has entrusted him with all authority. He who puts his faith in the Son has hold of eternal life, but he who disobeys the Son shall not see that life; God's wrath rests upon him.

4 A REPORT NOW REACHED the Pharisees: 'Jesus is winning and baptizing
2 more disciples than John'; although, in fact, it was only the disciples who 3 were baptizing and not Jesus himself. When Jesus learned this, he left 4 Judaea and set out once more for Galilee. He had to pass through Samaria, 5 and on his way came to a Samaritan town called Sychar, near the plot of 6 ground which Jacob gave to his son Joseph and the spring called Jacob's well. It was about noon, and Jesus, tired after his journey, sat down by the well.

^a Some witnesses omit whose home is in heaven.
all and . . .

The disciples had gone away to the town to buy food. Meanwhile a Samaritan woman came to draw water. Jesus said to her, 'Give me a drink.' The Samaritan woman said, 'What! You, a Jew, ask a drink of me, a Samaritan woman?' (Jews and Samaritans, it should be noted, do not use vessels in common.^a) Jesus answered her, 'If only you knew what God gives, and who it is that is asking you for a drink, you would have asked him and he would have given you living water.' 'Sir,' the woman said, 'you have no bucket and this well is deep. How can you give me "living water"? Are you a greater man than Jacob our ancestor, who gave us the well, and drank from it himself, he and his sons, and his cattle too?' Jesus said, 'Everyone who drinks this water will be thirsty again, but whoever drinks the water that I shall give him will never suffer thirst any more. The water that I shall give him will be an inner spring always welling up for eternal life.' 'Sir,' said the woman, 'give me that water, and then I shall not be thirsty, nor have to come all this way to draw.'

Jesus replied, 'Go home, call your husband and come back.' She answered, 'I have no husband.' 'You are right', said Jesus, 'in saying that you have no husband, for, although you have had five husbands, the man with whom you are now living is not your husband; you told me the truth there.' 'Sir,' she replied, 'I can see that you are a prophet. Our fathers worshipped on this mountain, but you Jews say that the temple where God should be worshipped is in Jerusalem.' 'Believe me,' said Jesus, 'the time is coming when you will worship the Father neither on this mountain, nor in Jerusalem. You Samaritans worship without knowing what you worship, while we worship what we know. It is from the Jews that salvation comes. But the time approaches, indeed it is already here, when those who are real worshippers will worship the Father in spirit and in truth. Such are the worshippers whom the Father wants. God is spirit, and those who worship him must worship in spirit and in truth.' The woman answered, 'I know that Messiah' (that is Christ) 'is coming. When he comes he will tell us everything.' Jesus said, 'I am he, I who am speaking to you now.'

At that moment his disciples returned, and were astonished to find him talking with a woman; but none of them said, 'What do you want?' or, 'Why are you talking with her?' The woman put down her water-jar and went away to the town, where she said to the people, 'Come and see a man who has told me everything I ever did. Could this be the Messiah?' They came out of the town and made their way towards him.

Meanwhile the disciples were urging him, 'Rabbi, have something to eat.' But he said, 'I have food to eat of which you know nothing.' At this the disciples said to one another, 'Can someone have brought him food?' But Jesus said, 'It is meat and drink for me to do the will of him who sent me until I have finished his work.'

'Do you not say, "Four months more and then comes harvest"? But look, I tell you, look round on the fields; they are already white, ripe for harvest. The reaper is drawing his pay and gathering a crop for eternal life, so that sower and reaper may rejoice together. That is how the saying comes

^a Or Jews, it should be noted, are not on familiar terms with Samaritans; some witnesses omit these words.

38 true: "One sows, and another reaps." I sent you to reap a crop for which you have not toiled. Others toiled and you have come in for the harvest of their toil.'

39 Many Samaritans of that town came to believe in him because of the 40 woman's testimony: 'He told me everything I ever did.' So when these Samaritans had come to him they pressed him to stay with them; and he 41 stayed there two days. Many more became believers because of what they 42 heard from his own lips. They told the woman, 'It is no longer because of what you said that we believe, for we have heard him ourselves; and we know that this is in truth the Saviour of the world.'

43 44 WHEN THE TWO DAYS were over he set out for Galilee; for Jesus himself
45 declared that a prophet is without honour in his own country. On his arrival in Galilee the Galileans gave him a welcome, because they had seen all that he did at the festival in Jerusalem; they had been at the festival themselves.

46 Once again he visited Cana-in-Galilee, where he had turned the water into wine. An officer in the royal service was there, whose son was lying ill at Capernaum. When he heard that Jesus had come from Judaea into Galilee, he came to him and begged him to go down and cure his son, who 47 was at the point of death. Jesus said to him, 'Will none of you ever believe without seeing signs and portents?' The officer pleaded with him, 'Sir, come down before my boy dies.' Then Jesus said, 'Return home; your son will live.' The man believed what Jesus said and started for home. When he was on his way down his servants met him with the news, 'Your boy is 48 going to live.' So he asked them what time it was when he began to recover.
49 They said, 'Yesterday at one in the afternoon the fever left him.' The father noted that this was the exact time when Jesus had said to him, 'Your son will live', and he and all his household became believers.

54 This was now the second sign which Jesus performed after coming down from Judaea into Galilee.

5 LATER ON Jesus went up to Jerusalem for one of the Jewish festivals.^a 2 Now at the Sheep-Pool in Jerusalem there is a place with five colonnades.
3 Its name in the language of the Jews is Bethesda. In these colonnades there
5 lay a crowd of sick people, blind, lame, and paralysed.^b Among them was 6 a man who had been crippled for thirty-eight years. When Jesus saw him lying there and was aware that he had been ill a long time, he asked him,
7 'Do you want to recover?' 'Sir,' he replied, 'I have no one to put me in the pool when the water is disturbed, but while I am moving, someone else
8 is in the pool before me.' Jesus answered, 'Rise to your feet, take up your bed and walk.' The man recovered instantly, took up his stretcher, and began to walk.

10 That day was a Sabbath. So the Jews said to the man who had been cured, 'It is the Sabbath. You are not allowed to carry your bed on the Sabbath.' He answered, 'The man who cured me said, "Take up your bed and walk." ' They asked him, 'Who is the man who told you to take up your bed and walk?' But the cripple who had been cured did not know; for the place was crowded and Jesus had slipped away. A little later Jesus found him in the temple and said to him, 'Now that you are well again, leave your sinful ways, or you may suffer something worse.' The man went away and told the Jews that it was Jesus who had cured him.

It was works of this kind done on the Sabbath that stirred the Jews to persecute Jesus. He defended himself by saying, 'My Father has never yet ceased his work, and I am working too.' This made the Jews still more determined to kill him, because he was not only breaking the Sabbath, but, by calling God his own Father, he claimed equality with God.

To this charge Jesus replied, 'In truth, in very truth I tell you, the Son can do nothing by himself; he does only what he sees the Father doing: what the Father does, the Son does. For the Father loves the Son and shows him all his works, and will show greater yet, to fill you with wonder. As the Father raises the dead and gives them life, so the Son gives life to men, as he determines. And again, the Father does not judge anyone, but has given full jurisdiction to the Son; it is his will that all should pay the same honour to the Son as to the Father. To deny honour to the Son is to deny it to the Father who sent him.

'In very truth, anyone who gives heed to what I say and puts his trust in him who sent me has hold of eternal life, and does not come up for judgement, but has already passed from death to life. In truth, in very truth I tell you, a time is coming, indeed it is already here, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and all who hear shall come to life. For as the Father has life-giving power in himself, so has the Son, by the Father's gift.

'As Son of Man, he has also been given the right to pass judgement. Do not wonder at this, because the time is coming when all who are in the grave shall hear his voice and come out: those who have done right will rise to life; those who have done wrong will rise to hear their doom. I cannot act by myself; I judge as I am bidden, and my sentence is just, because my aim is not my own will, but the will of him who sent me.

'If I testify on my own behalf, that testimony does not hold good. There is another who bears witness for me, and I know that his testimony holds. Your messengers have been to John; you have his testimony to the truth. Not that I rely on human testimony, but I remind you of it for your own salvation. John was a lamp, burning brightly, and for a time you were ready to exult in his light. But I rely on a testimony higher than John's. There is enough to testify that the Father has sent me, in the works my Father gave me to do and to finish—the very works I have in hand. This testimony to me was given by the Father who sent me, although you never heard his voice, or saw his form. But his word has found no home in you, for you do not believe the one whom he sent. You study the scriptures diligently, supposing that in having them you have eternal life; yet, although their testimony points to me, you refuse to come to me for that life.

1 42 'I do not look to men for honour. But with you it is different, as I know 43 well, for you have no love for God in you. I have come accredited by my 44 Father, and you have no welcome for me; if another comes self-accredited 45 you will welcome him. How can you have faith so long as you receive 46 honour from one another, and care nothing for the honour that comes from 47 him who alone is God? Do not imagine that I shall be your accuser at the Father's tribunal. Your accuser is Moses, the very Moses on whom you have set your hope. If you believed Moses you would believe what I tell you, for it was about me that he wrote. But if you do not believe what he wrote, how are you to believe what I say?'

6 SOME TIME LATER Jesus withdrew to the farther shore of the Sea of 2 Galilee (or Tiberias), and a large crowd of people followed who had seen
 3 the signs he performed in healing the sick. Then Jesus went up the hill-4 side and sat down with his disciples. It was near the time of Passover, the 5 great Jewish festival. Raising his eyes and seeing a large crowd coming towards him, Jesus said to Philip, 'Where are we to buy bread to feed these 6 people?' This he said to test him; Jesus himself knew what he meant to do.
 7 Philip replied, 'Twenty pounds^a would not buy enough bread for every 8 one of them to have a little.' One of his disciples, Andrew, the brother of 9 Simon Peter, said to him, 'There is a boy here who has five barley loaves 10 and two fishes; but what is that among so many?' Jesus said, 'Make the 11 people sit down.' There was plenty of grass there, so the men sat down, 12 about five thousand of them. Then Jesus took the loaves, gave thanks, and 13 distributed them to the people as they sat there. He did the same with the 14 fishes, and they had as much as they wanted. When everyone had had enough, he said to his disciples, 'Collect the pieces left over, so that nothing 15 may be lost.' This they did, and filled twelve baskets with the pieces left uneaten of the five barley loaves.

14 When the people saw the sign Jesus had performed, the word went round, 'Surely this must be the prophet that was to come into the world.'
 15 Jesus, aware that they meant to come and seize him to proclaim him king, withdrew again to the hills by himself.

6 17 At nightfall his disciples went down to the sea, got into their boat, and pushed off to cross the water to Capernaum. Darkness had already fallen, 18 and Jesus had not yet joined them. By now a strong wind was blowing and 19 the sea grew rough. When they had rowed about three or four miles they saw 20 Jesus walking on the sea and approaching the boat. They were terrified, but 21 he called out, 'It is I; do not be afraid.' Then they were ready to take him aboard, and immediately the boat reached the land they were making for.

22 NEXT MORNING the crowd was standing on the opposite shore. They had seen only one boat there, and Jesus, they knew, had not embarked 23 with his disciples, who had gone away without him. Boats from Tiberias, however, came ashore ^b near the place where the people had eaten the 24 bread over which the Lord gave thanks. ^c When the people saw that neither

^a Literally 200 denarii.

^b Some witnesses read Other boats from Tiberias came ashore . . .

^c Some witnesses omit over which . . . thanks.

Jesus nor his disciples were any longer there, they themselves went aboard these boats and made for Capernaum in search of Jesus. They found him on the other side. 'Rabbi,' they said, 'when did you come here?' Jesus replied, 'In very truth I know that you have not come looking for me because you saw signs, but because you ate the bread and your hunger was satisfied. You must work, not for this perishable food, but for the food that lasts, the food of eternal life.

'This food the Son of Man will give you, for he it is upon whom God the Father has set the seal of his authority.' 'Then what must we do,' they asked him, 'if we are to work as God would have us work?' Jesus replied, 'This is the work that God requires: believe in the one whom he has sent.'

They said, 'What sign can you give us to see, so that we may believe you? What is the work you do? Our ancestors had manna to eat in the desert; as Scripture says, "He gave them bread from heaven to eat."' Jesus answered, 'I tell you this: the truth is, not that Moses gave you the bread from heaven, but that my Father gives you the real bread from heaven. The bread that God gives comes down^a from heaven and brings life to the world.' They said to him, 'Sir, give us this bread now and always.' Jesus said to them, 'I am the bread of life. Whoever comes to me shall never be hungry, and whoever believes in me shall never be thirsty. But you, as I said, do not believe although you have seen.^b All that the Father gives me will come to me, and the man who comes to me I will never turn away. I have come down from heaven, not to do my own will, but the will of him who sent me. It is his will that I should not lose even one of all that he has given me, but raise them all up on the last day. For it is my Father's will that everyone who looks upon the Son and puts his faith in him shall possess eternal life; and I will raise him up on the last day.'

At this the Jews began to murmur disapprovingly because he said, 'I am the bread which came down from heaven.' They said, 'Surely this is Jesus son of Joseph; we know his father and mother. How can he now say, "I have come down from heaven"?' Jesus answered, 'Stop murmuring among yourselves. No man can come to me unless he is drawn by the Father who sent me; and I will raise him up on the last day. It is written in the prophets: "And they shall all be taught by God." Everyone who has listened to the Father and learned from him comes to me.

'I do not mean that anyone has seen the Father. He who has come from God has seen the Father, and he alone. In truth, in very truth I tell you, the believer possesses eternal life. I am the bread of life. Your forefathers ate the manna in the desert and they are dead. I am speaking of the bread that comes down from heaven, which a man may eat, and never die. I am that living bread which has come down from heaven; if anyone eats this bread he shall live for ever. Moreover, the bread which I will give is my own flesh; I give it for the life of the world.'

This led to a fierce dispute among the Jews. 'How can this man give us his flesh to eat?' they said. Jesus replied, 'In truth, in very truth I tell you, unless you eat the flesh of the Son of Man and drink his blood you can have no life in you. Whoever eats my flesh and drinks my blood possesses eternal

^a Or is he who comes down . . .

55 life, and I will raise him up on the last day. My flesh is real food; my blood 56 is real drink. Whoever eats my flesh and drinks my blood dwells continually 57 in me and I dwell in him. As the living Father sent me, and I live because 58 of the Father, so he who eats me shall live because of me. This is the bread which came down from heaven; and it is not like the bread which our fathers ate: they are dead, but whoever eats this bread shall live for ever.'

59 THIS WAS SPOKEN in synagogue when Jesus was teaching in Capernaum.
 60 Many of his disciples on hearing it exclaimed, 'This is more than we can 61 stomach! Why listen to such talk?' Jesus was aware that his disciples were 62 murmuring about it and asked them, 'Does this shock you? What if you 63 see the Son of Man ascending to the place where he was before? The spirit alone gives life; the flesh is of no avail; the words which I have spoken to 64 you are both spirit and life. And yet there are some of you who have no faith.' For Jesus knew all along who were without faith and who was to 65 betray him. So he said, 'This is why I told you that no one can come to me unless it has been granted to him by the Father.'

66 From that time on, many of his disciples withdrew and no longer went 67 about with him. So Jesus asked the Twelve, 'Do you also want to leave me?'
 68 Simon Peter answered him, 'Lord, to whom shall we go? Your words are 69 words of eternal life. We have faith, and we know that you are the Holy 70 One of God.' Jesus answered, 'Have I not chosen you, all twelve? Yet one 71 of you is a devil.' He meant Judas, son of Simon Iscariot. He it was who would betray him, and he was one of the Twelve.

The great controversy

7 AFTERWARDS JESUS went about in Galilee. He wished to avoid Judaea
 2 because the Jews were looking for a chance to kill him. As the Jewish 3 Feast of Tabernacles was close at hand, his brothers said to him, 'You should leave this district and go into Judaea, so that your disciples there 4 may see the great things you are doing. Surely no one can hope to be in the public eye if he works in seclusion. If you really are doing such things as 5 these, show yourself to the world.' For even his brothers had no faith in 6 him. Jesus said to them, 'The right time for me has not yet come, but any 7 time is right for you. The world cannot hate you; but it hates me for 8 exposing the wickedness of its ways. Go to the festival yourselves. I am not^a going up to this festival because the right time for me has not yet 9 come.' With this answer he stayed behind in Galilee.

10 Later, when his brothers had gone to the festival, he went up himself, 11 not publicly, but almost in secret. The Jews were looking for him at the 12 festival and asking, 'Where is he?', and there was much whispering about him in the crowds. 'He is a good man', said some. 'No,' said others, 'he is 13 leading the people astray.' However, no one talked about him openly, for fear of the Jews.

^a Some witnesses read not yet.

WHEN THE FESTIVAL was already half over, Jesus went up to the temple and began to teach. The Jews were astonished: 'How is it', they said, 'that this untrained man has such learning?' Jesus replied, 'The teaching that I give is not my own; it is the teaching of him who sent me. Whoever has the will to do the will of God shall know whether my teaching comes from him or is merely my own. Anyone whose teaching is merely his own, aims at honour for himself. But if a man aims at the honour of him who sent him he is sincere, and there is nothing false in him.

'Did not Moses give you the Law? Yet you all break it. Why are you trying to kill me?' The crowd answered, 'You are possessed! Who wants to kill you?' Jesus replied, 'Once only have I done work on the Sabbath, and you are all taken aback. But consider: Moses gave you the law of circumcision (not that it originated with Moses but with the patriarchs) and you circumcise on the Sabbath. Well then, if a child is circumcised on the Sabbath to avoid breaking the Law of Moses, why are you indignant with me for giving health on the Sabbath to the whole of a man's body? Do not judge superficially, but be just in your judgements.'

At this some of the people of Jerusalem began to say, 'Is not this the man they want to put to death? And here he is, speaking openly, and they have not a word to say to him. Can it be that our rulers have actually decided that this is the Messiah? And yet we know where this man comes from, but when the Messiah appears no one is to know where he comes from.' Thereupon Jesus cried aloud as he taught in the temple, 'No doubt you know me; no doubt you know where I come from.^a Yet I have not come of my own accord. I was sent by the One who truly is, and him you do not know. I know him because I come from him and he it is who sent me.' At this they tried to seize him, but no one laid a hand on him because his appointed hour had not yet come. Yet among the people many believed in him. 'When the Messiah comes,' they said, 'is it likely that he will perform more signs than this man?'

The Pharisees overheard these mutterings of the people about him, so the chief priests and the Pharisees sent temple police to arrest him. Then Jesus said, 'For a little longer I shall be with you; then I am going away to him who sent me. You will look for me, but you will not find me. Where I am, you cannot come.' So the Jews said to one another, 'Where does he intend to go, that we should not be able to find him? Will he go to the Dispersion among the Greeks, and teach the Greeks? What did he mean by saying, "You will look for me, but you will not find me. Where I am, you cannot come"?'^b

ON THE LAST and greatest day of the festival Jesus stood and cried aloud, 'If anyone is thirsty let him come to me; whoever believes in me, let him drink.' As Scripture says, 'Streams of living water shall flow out from within him.'^c He was speaking of the Spirit which believers in him would

^a Or Do you know me? And do you know where I come from? ^b Some witnesses here insert the passage printed on p. 143.

^c Or 'If any man is thirsty let him come to me and drink. He who believes in me, as Scripture says, streams of living water shall flow out from within him.'

receive later; for the Spirit had not yet been given, because Jesus had not yet been glorified.

40 On hearing this some of the people said, 'This must certainly be the 41 expected prophet.' Others said, 'This is the Messiah.' Others again, 'Surely 42 the Messiah is not to come from Galilee? Does not Scripture say that the 43 Messiah is to be of the family of David, from David's village of Bethlehem?' 44 Thus he caused a split among the people. Some were for seizing him, but no one laid hands on him.

45 The temple police came back to the chief priests and Pharisees, who 46 asked, 'Why have you not brought him?' 'No man', they answered, 'ever 47 spoke as this man speaks.' The Pharisees retorted, 'Have you too been 48 misled? Is there a single one of our rulers who has believed in him, or of 49 the Pharisees? As for this rabble, which cares nothing for the Law, a curse 50 is on them.' Then one of their number, Nicodemus (the man who had 51 once visited Jesus), intervened. 'Does our law', he asked them, 'permit us to pass judgement on a man unless we have first given him a hearing and 52 learned the facts?' 'Are you a Galilean too?' they retorted. 'Study the scriptures and you will find that prophets do not come from Galilee.' ^a 12 ONCE AGAIN JESUS addressed the people: 'I am the light of the world.

No follower of mine shall wander in the dark; he shall have the light of life.'
13 The Pharisees said to him, 'You are witness in your own cause; your 14 testimony is not valid.' Jesus replied, 'My testimony is valid, even though I do bear witness about myself; because I know where I come from, and where I am going. You do not know either where I come from or where I 15 am going. You judge by worldly standards. I pass judgement on no man, 16 but if I do judge, my judgement is valid because it is not I alone who 17 judge, but I and he who sent me. In your own law it is written that the 18 testimony of two witnesses is valid. Here am I, a witness in my own cause, 19 and my other witness is the Father who sent me.' They asked, 'Where is your father?' Jesus replied, 'You know neither me nor my Father; if you knew me you would know my Father as well.'

20 These words were spoken by Jesus in the treasury as he taught in the temple. Yet no one arrested him, because his hour had not yet come.

21 Again he said to them, 'I am going away. You will look for me, but you 22 will die in your sin; where I am going you cannot come.' The Jews then said, 'Perhaps he will kill himself; is that what he means when he says, 23 "Where I am going you cannot come"?' So Jesus continued, 'You belong to this world below, I to the world above. Your home is in this world, mine 24 is not. That is why I told you that you would die in your sins. If you do not 25 believe that I am what I am, you will die in your sins.' They asked him, 26 'Who are you?' Jesus answered, 'Why should I speak to you at all? ^b I have much to say about you—and in judgement. But he who sent me speaks the truth, and what I heard from him I report to the world.'

27 They did not understand that he was speaking to them about the Father.
28 So Jesus said to them, 'When you have lifted up the Son of Man you will know that I am what I am. I do nothing on my own authority, but in all that I say, I have been taught by my Father. He who sent me is present with me, and has not left me alone; for I always do what is acceptable to him.' As he said this, many put their faith in him. 29

Turning to the Jews who had believed him, Jesus said, 'If you dwell within the revelation I have brought, you are indeed my disciples; you shall know the truth, and the truth will set you free.' They replied, 'We are Abraham's descendants; we have never been in slavery to any man. What do you mean by saying, "You will become free men"?' 'In very truth I tell you', said Jesus, 'that everyone who commits sin is a slave. The slave has no permanent standing in the household, but the son belongs to it for ever. If then the Son sets you free, you will indeed be free. 30

'I know that you are descended from Abraham, but you are bent on killing me because my teaching makes no headway with you. I am revealing in words what I saw in my Father's presence; and you are revealing in action what you learned from your father.' They retorted, 'Abraham is our father.' 'If you were Abraham's children', Jesus replied, 'you would do as Abraham did.^a As it is, you are bent on killing me, a man who told you the truth, as I heard it from God. That is not how Abraham acted. You are doing your own father's work.' 36

They said, 'We are not base-born; God is our father, and God alone.' Jesus said, 'If God were your father, you would love me, for God is the source of my being, and from him I come. I have not come of my own accord; he sent me. Why do you not understand my language? It is because my revelation is beyond your grasp. 42

'Your father is the devil and you choose to carry out your father's desires. He was a murderer from the beginning, and is not rooted in the truth; there is no truth in him. When he tells a lie he is speaking his own language, for he is a liar and the father of lies. But I speak the truth and therefore you do not believe me. Which of you can prove me in the wrong?^b If what I say is true, why do you not believe me? He who has God for his father listens to the words of God. You are not God's children; that is why you do not listen.' 44

The Jews answered, 'Are we not right in saying that you are a Samaritan, and that you are possessed?' 'I am not possessed,' said Jesus; 'I am honouring my Father, but you dishonour me. I do not care about my own glory; there is one who does care, and he is judge. In very truth I tell you, if anyone obeys my teaching he shall never know what it is to die.' 48

The Jews said, 'Now we are certain that you are possessed. Abraham is dead; the prophets are dead; and yet you say, "If anyone obeys my teaching he shall not know what it is to die." Are you greater than our father Abraham, who is dead? The prophets are dead too. What do you claim to be?' 52

Jesus replied, 'If I glorify myself, that glory of mine is worthless. It is the Father who glorifies me, he of whom you say, "He is our God", though you do not know him. But I know him; if I said that I did not 54 know him I should be a liar like you. But in truth I know him and obey his word.

56 'Your father Abraham was overjoyed to see my day; he saw it and was 57 glad.' The Jews protested, 'You are not yet fifty years old. How can you 58 have seen Abraham?'^a Jesus said, 'In very truth I tell you, before Abraham was born, I am.'

59 They picked up stones to throw at him, but Jesus was not to be seen;
and he left the temple.^b

9 12 AS HE WENT on his way Jesus saw a man blind from his birth. His disciples put the question, 'Rabbi, who sinned, this man or his parents? Why was 3 he born blind?' 'It is not that this man or his parents sinned,' Jesus answered; 'he was born blind so that God's power might be displayed in 4 curing him. While daylight lasts we^c must carry on the work of him who 5 sent me; night comes, when no one can work. While I am in the world I am the light of the world.'

6 With these words he spat on the ground and made a paste with the 7 spittle; he spread it on the man's eyes, and said to him, 'Go and wash in the pool of Siloam.' (The name means 'sent'.) The man went away and washed, and when he returned he could see.

8 His neighbours and those who were accustomed to see him begging said, 9 'Is not this the man who used to sit and beg?' Others said, 'Yes, this is the man.' Others again said, 'No, but it is someone like him.' The man himself 10 11 said, 'I am the man.' They asked him, 'How were your eyes opened?' He replied, 'The man called Jesus made a paste and smeared my eyes with it, and told me to go to Siloam and wash. I went and washed, and gained my 12 sight.' 'Where is he?' they asked. He answered, 'I do not know.'

13 14 THE MAN who had been blind was brought before the Pharisees. As it was 15 a Sabbath day when Jesus made the paste and opened his eyes, the Pharisees now asked him by what means he had gained his sight. The man told them, 16 'He spread a paste on my eyes; then I washed, and now I can see.' Some of the Pharisees said, 'This fellow is no man of God; he does not keep the Sabbath.' Others said, 'How could such signs come from a sinful man?' 17 So they took different sides. Then they continued to question him: 'What have you to say about him? It was your eyes he opened.' He answered,
'He is a prophet.'

18 The Jews would not believe that the man had been blind and had gained 19 his sight, until they had summoned his parents and questioned them: 'Is this man your son? Do you say that he was born blind? How is it that he 20 can see now?' The parents replied, 'We know that he is our son, and that 21 he was born blind. But how it is that he can now see, or who opened his eyes, we do not know. Ask him; he is of age; he will speak for himself.'

22 His parents gave this answer because they were afraid of the Jews; for the Jewish authorities had already agreed that anyone who acknowledged Jesus as Messiah should be banned from the synagogue. That is why the parents 23 said, 'He is of age; ask him.'

So for the second time they summoned the man who had been blind, 24 and said, 'Speak the truth before God. We know that this fellow is a sinner.'
'Whether or not he is a sinner, I do not know', the man replied. 'All I know 25 is this: once I was blind, now I can see.' 'What did he do to you?' they asked. 26
'How did he open your eyes?' 'I have told you already,' he retorted, 'but 27 you took no notice. Why do you want to hear it again? Do you also want to become his disciples?' Then they became abusive. 'You are that man's 28 disciple,' they said, 'but we are disciples of Moses. We know that God 29 spoke to Moses, but as for this fellow, we do not know where he comes from.'

The man replied, 'What an extraordinary thing! Here is a man who has 30 opened my eyes, yet you do not know where he comes from! It is common 31 knowledge that God does not listen to sinners; he listens to anyone who is devout and obeys his will. To open the eyes of a man born blind—it is un- 32 heard of since time began. If that man had not come from God he could 33 have done nothing.' 'Who are you to give us lessons,' they retorted, 'born 34 and bred in sin as you are?' Then they expelled him from the synagogue.

Jesus heard that they had expelled him. When he found him he asked, 35
'Have you faith in the Son of Man^a?' The man answered, 'Tell me who he 36 is, sir, that I should put my faith in him.' 'You have seen him,' said Jesus; 37
'indeed, it is he who is speaking to you.' 'Lord, I believe', he said, and 38 bowed before him.

Jesus said, 'It is for judgement that I have come into this world—to give 39 sight to the sightless and to make blind those who see.' Some Pharisees in 40 his company asked, 'Do you mean that we are blind?' 'If you were blind,' 41 said Jesus, 'you would not be guilty, but because you say "We see", your guilt remains.'

10
'IN TRUTH I tell you, in very truth, the man who does not enter the sheep-fold by the door, but climbs in some other way, is nothing but a thief or a robber. The man who enters by the door is the shepherd in charge of the sheep. The door-keeper admits him, and the sheep hear his voice; he calls his own sheep by name, and leads them out. When he has brought them all out, he goes ahead and the sheep follow, because they know his voice. They will not follow a stranger; they will run away from him, because they do not recognize the voice of strangers.'

This was a parable that Jesus told them, but they did not understand 6 what he meant by it.

So Jesus spoke again: 'In truth, in very truth I tell you, I am the door of 7 the sheepfold. The sheep paid no heed to any who came before me, for 8 these were all thieves and robbers. I am the door; anyone who comes into 9 the fold through me shall be safe. He shall go in and out and shall find pasturage.'

'The thief comes only to steal, to kill, to destroy; I have come that men 10 may have life, and may have it in all its fullness. I am the good shepherd; 11

^a Some witnesses read Son of God.

12 the good shepherd lays down his life for the sheep. The hireling, when he sees the wolf coming, abandons the sheep and runs away, because he is no shepherd and the sheep are not his. Then the wolf harries the flock and scatters the sheep. The man runs away because he is a hireling and cares nothing for the sheep.

14 'I am the good shepherd; I know my own sheep and my sheep know me—15 as the Father knows me and I know the Father—and I lay down my life for 16 the sheep. But there are other sheep of mine, not belonging to this fold, whom I must bring in; and they too will listen to my voice. There will then 17 be one flock, one shepherd. The Father loves me because I lay down my 18 life, to receive it back again. No one has robbed me of it; I am laying it down of my own free will. I have the right to lay it down, and I have the right to receive it back again; this charge I have received from my Father.'

19 20 These words once again caused a split among the Jews. Many of them 21 said, 'He is possessed, he is raving. Why listen to him?' Others said, 'No one possessed by an evil spirit could speak like this. Could an evil spirit open blind men's eyes?'

22 IT WAS WINTER, and the festival of the Dedication was being held in 23 Jerusalem. Jesus was walking in the temple precincts, in Solomon's 24 Portico. The Jews gathered round him and asked: 'How long must you 25 keep us in suspense? If you are the Messiah say so plainly.' 'I have told you,' said Jesus, 'but you do not believe. My deeds done in my Father's 26 name are my credentials, but because you are not sheep of my flock you 27 do not believe. My own sheep listen to my voice; I know them and they 28 follow me. I give them eternal life and they shall never perish; no one shall 29 snatch them from my care. My Father who has given them to me is greater 30 than all, and no one can snatch them ^a out of the Father's care. My Father and I are one.'

31 32 Once again the Jews picked up stones to stone him. At this Jesus said to them, 'I have set before you many good deeds, done by my Father's 33 power; for which of these would you stone me?' The Jews replied, 'We are not going to stone you for any good deed, but for your blasphemy. You, 34 a mere man, claim to be a god.'^b Jesus answered, 'Is it not written in your 35 own Law, "I said: You are gods"? Those are called gods to whom the word 36 of God was delivered—and Scripture cannot be set aside. Then why do you charge me with blasphemy because I, consecrated and sent into the world by the Father, said, "I am God's son"?' 37 38 'If I am not acting as my Father would, do not believe me. But if I am, accept the evidence of my deeds, even if you do not believe me, so that you may recognize and know that the Father is in me, and I in the Father.'

39 This provoked them to one more attempt to seize him. But he escaped from their clutches.

Victory over death

JESUS WITHDREW AGAIN across the Jordan, to the place where John 40 had been baptizing earlier. There he stayed, while crowds came to him. 41
 They said, 'John gave us no miraculous sign, but all that he said about this man was true.' Many came to believe in him there. 42

There was a man named Lazarus who had fallen ill. His home was at 11 Bethany, the village of Mary and her sister Martha. (This Mary, whose 2 brother Lazarus had fallen ill, was the woman who anointed the Lord with ointment and wiped his feet with her hair.) The sisters sent a message to 3 him: 'Sir, you should know that your friend lies ill.' When Jesus heard 4 this he said, 'This illness will not end in death; it has come for the glory of God, to bring glory to the Son of God.' And therefore, though he loved 5
 Martha and her sister and Lazarus, after hearing of his illness Jesus waited 6 for two days in the place where he was.

After this, he said to his disciples, 'Let us go back to Judaea.' 'Rabbi,' 7 8 his disciples said, 'it is not long since the Jews there were wanting to stone you. Are you going there again?' Jesus replied, 'Are there not twelve hours 9 of daylight? Anyone can walk in day-time without stumbling, because he sees the light of this world. But if he walks after nightfall he stumbles, 10 because the light fails him.'

After saying this he added, 'Our friend Lazarus has fallen asleep, but I 11 shall go and wake him.' The disciples said, 'Master, if he has fallen asleep 12 he will recover.' Jesus, however, had been speaking of his death, but they thought that he meant natural sleep. Then Jesus spoke out plainly: 14
 'Lazarus is dead. I am glad not to have been there; it will be for your good 15 and for the good of your faith. But let us go to him.' Thomas, called 'the 16
 Twin', said to his fellow-disciples, 'Let us also go, that we may die with him.'

ON HIS ARRIVAL Jesus found that Lazarus had already been four days 17 in the tomb. Bethany was just under two miles from Jerusalem, and many 18 19 of the people had come from the city to Martha and Mary to condole with them on their brother's death. As soon as she heard that Jesus was on his 20 way, Martha went to meet him, while Mary stayed at home.

Martha said to Jesus, 'If you had been here, sir, my brother would not 21 have died. Even now I know that whatever you ask of God, God will grant 22 you.' Jesus said, 'Your brother will rise again.' 'I know that he will rise 23 24 again', said Martha, 'at the resurrection on the last day.' Jesus said, 'I am the resurrection and I am life.^a If a man has faith in me, even though he die, 25
 he shall come to life; and no one who is alive and has faith shall ever die. 26
 Do you believe this?' 'Lord, I do,' she answered; 'I now believe that you 27 are the Messiah, the Son of God who was to come into the world.'

With these words she went to call her sister Mary, and taking her aside, 28 she said, 'The Master is here; he is asking for you.' When Mary heard this 29 she rose up quickly and went to him. Jesus had not yet reached the village, 30 but was still at the place where Martha had met him. The Jews who were in 31

^a Some witnesses omit and I am life.

the house condoling with Mary, when they saw her start up and leave the house, went after her, for they supposed that she was going to the tomb to weep there.

32 So Mary came to the place where Jesus was. As soon as she caught sight 33 of him she fell at his feet and said, 'O sir, if you had only been here my 34 brother would not have died.' When Jesus saw her weeping and the Jews 35 her companions weeping, he sighed heavily and was deeply moved. 'Where 36 37 have you laid him?' he asked. They replied, 'Come and see, sir.' Jesus wept.
The Jews said, 'How dearly he must have loved him!' But some of them said, 'Could not this man, who opened the blind man's eyes, have done something to keep Lazarus from dying?'

38 Jesus again sighed deeply; then he went over to the tomb. It was a cave, 39 with a stone placed against it. Jesus said, 'Take away the stone.' Martha, the dead man's sister, said to him, 'Sir, by now there will be a stench; he 40 has been there four days.' Jesus said, 'Did I not tell you that if you have 41 faith you will see the glory of God?' So they removed the stone.

42 Then Jesus looked upwards and said, 'Father, I thank thee; thou hast heard me. I knew already that thou always hearest me, but I spoke for the sake of the people standing round, that they might believe that thou didst send me.'

43 44 Then he raised his voice in a great cry: 'Lazarus, come forth.' The dead man came out, his hands and feet swathed in linen bands, his face wrapped in a cloth. Jesus said, 'Loose him; let him go.'

45 NOW MANY of the Jews who had come to visit Mary and had seen what 46 Jesus did, put their faith in him. But some of them went off to the Pharisees and reported what he had done.

47 Thereupon the chief priests and the Pharisees convened a meeting of the Council. 'What action are we taking?' they said. 'This man is performing 48 many signs. If we leave him alone like this the whole populace will believe in him. Then the Romans will come and sweep away our temple and our 49 nation.' But one of them, Caiaphas, who was High Priest that year, said, 50 'You know nothing whatever; you do not use your judgement; it is more to your interest that one man should die for the people, than that the whole 51 nation should be destroyed.' He did not say this of his own accord, but as the High Priest in office that year, he was prophesying that Jesus would 52 die for the nation—would die not for the nation alone but to gather 53 together the scattered children of God. So from that day on they plotted his death.

54 Accordingly Jesus no longer went about publicly in Judaea, but left that region for the country bordering on the desert, and came to a town called Ephraim, where he stayed with his disciples.

55 THE JEWISH PASSOVER was now at hand, and many people went up from the country to Jerusalem to purify themselves before the festival.
56 They looked out for Jesus, and as they stood in the temple they asked one another, 'What do you think? Perhaps he is not coming to the festival.' 57 Now the chief priests and the Pharisees had given orders that anyone who knew where he was should give information, so that they might arrest him.

SIX DAYS BEFORE the Passover festival Jesus came to Bethany, where Lazarus lived whom he had raised from the dead. There a supper was given in his honour, at which Martha served, and Lazarus sat among the guests with Jesus. Then Mary brought a pound of very costly perfume, pure oil of nard, and anointed the feet of Jesus and wiped them with her hair, till the house was filled with the fragrance. At this, Judas Iscariot, a disciple of his—the one who was to betray him—said, ‘Why was this perfume not sold for thirty pounds^a and given to the poor?’ He said this, not out of any care for the poor, but because he was a thief; he used to pilfer the money put into the common purse, which was in his charge. ‘Leave her alone’, said Jesus. ‘Let her keep it till the day when she prepares for my burial; for you have the poor among you always, but you will not always have me.’^b

A great number of the Jews heard that he was there, and came not only to see Jesus but also Lazarus whom he had raised from the dead. The chief priests then resolved to do away with Lazarus as well, since on his account many Jews were going over to Jesus and putting their faith in him.

THE NEXT DAY the great body of pilgrims who had come to the festival, hearing that Jesus was on the way to Jerusalem, took palm branches and went out to meet him, shouting, ‘Hosanna! Blessings on him who comes in the name of the Lord! God bless the king of Israel!’ Jesus found a donkey and mounted it, in accordance with the text of Scripture: ‘Fear no more, daughter of Zion; see, your king is coming, mounted on an ass’s colt.’

At the time his disciples did not understand this, but after Jesus had been glorified they remembered that this had been written about him, and that this had happened to him. The people who were present when he called Lazarus out of the tomb and raised him from the dead told what they had seen and heard. That is why the crowd went to meet him; they had heard of this sign that he had performed. The Pharisees said to one another, ‘You see you are doing no good at all; why, all the world has gone after him!’

AMONG THOSE who went up to worship at the festival were some Greeks. They came to Philip, who was from Bethsaida in Galilee, and said to him, ‘Sir, we should like to see Jesus.’ So Philip went and told Andrew, and the two of them went to tell Jesus. Then Jesus replied: ‘The hour has come for the Son of Man to be glorified. In truth, in very truth I tell you, a grain of wheat remains a solitary grain unless it falls into the ground and dies; but if it dies, it bears a rich harvest. The man who loves himself is lost, but he who hates himself in this world will be kept safe for eternal life. If anyone serves me, he must follow me; where I am, my servant will be. Whoever serves me will be honoured by my Father.

‘Now my soul is in turmoil, and what am I to say? Father, save me from ^a Literally for 300 denarii.

^b Some witnesses omit for you have . . . have me.

28 this hour.^a No, it was for this that I came to this hour. Father, glorify thy 29 name.' A voice sounded from heaven: 'I have glorified it, and I will glorify 30 it again.' The crowd standing by said it was thunder, while others said, 31 'An angel has spoken to him.' Jesus replied, 'This voice spoke for your sake, 32 not mine. Now is the hour of judgement for this world; now shall the Prince 33 of this world be driven out. And I shall draw all men to myself, when I am lifted up from the earth.' This he said to indicate the kind of death he was to die.

34 The people answered, 'Our Law teaches us that the Messiah continues 35 for ever. What do you mean by saying that the Son of Man must be lifted up? What Son of Man is this?' Jesus answered them: 'The light is among you still, but not for long. Go on your way while you have the light, so that darkness may not overtake you. He who journeys in the dark does not know 36 where he is going. While you have the light, trust to the light, so that you may become men of light.' After these words Jesus went away from them into hiding.

37 IN SPITE OF the many signs which Jesus had performed in their presence 38 they would not believe in him, for the prophet Isaiah's utterance had to be fulfilled: 'Lord, who has believed what we reported, and to whom has the 39 Lord's power been revealed?' So it was that they could not believe, for 40 there is another saying of Isaiah's: 'He has blinded their eyes and dulled their minds, lest they should see with their eyes, and perceive with their 41 minds, and turn to me to heal them.' Isaiah said this because ^b he saw his glory and spoke about him.

42 For all that, even among those in authority a number believed in him, but would not acknowledge him on account of the Pharisees, for fear of 43 being banned from the synagogue. For they valued their reputation with men rather than the honour which comes from God.

44 SO JESUS CRIED ALOUD: 'When a man believes in me, he believes in him 45 46 who sent me rather than in me; seeing me, he sees him who sent me. I have come into the world as light, so that no one who has faith in me should 47 remain in darkness. But if anyone hears my words and pays no regard to them, I am not his judge; I have not come to judge the world, but to save the 48 world. There is a judge for the man who rejects me and does not accept my 49 words; the word that I spoke will be his judge on the last day. I do not speak on my own authority, but the Father who sent me has himself commanded 50 me what to say and how to speak. I know that his commands are eternal life.
What the Father has said to me, therefore—that is what I speak.'

^a Or . . . turmoil. Shall I say, "Father, save me from this hour"?

Farewell discourses

IT WAS BEFORE the Passover festival. Jesus knew that his hour had come 13 and he must leave this world and go to the Father. He had always loved his own who were in the world, and now he was to show the full extent of his love.

The devil had already put it into the mind of Judas son of Simon Iscariot 2 to betray him. During supper, Jesus, well aware that the Father had 3 entrusted everything to him, and that he had come from God and was going back to God, rose from table, laid aside his garments, and taking a 4 towel, tied it round him. Then he poured water into a basin, and began to 5 wash his disciples' feet and to wipe them with the towel.

When it was Simon Peter's turn, Peter said to him, 'You, Lord, washing 6 my feet?' Jesus replied, 'You do not understand now what I am doing, but 7 one day you will.' Peter said, 'I will never let you wash my feet.' 'If I do 8 not wash you,' Jesus replied, 'you are not in fellowship with me.' 'Then, 9 Lord,' said Simon Peter, 'not my feet only; wash my hands and head as well!'

Jesus said, 'A man who has bathed needs no further washing; ^a he is 10 altogether clean; and you are clean, though not every one of you.' He 11 added the words 'not every one of you' because he knew who was going to betray him.

After washing their feet and taking his garments again, he sat down. 12
'Do you understand what I have done for you?' he asked. 'You call me 13
"Master" and "Lord", and rightly so, for that is what I am. Then if I, 14 your Lord and Master, have washed your feet, you also ought to wash one another's feet. I have set you an example: you are to do as I have done for 15
you. In very truth I tell you, a servant is not greater than his master, nor 16 a messenger than the one who sent him. If you know this, happy are you 17 if you act upon it.

'I am not speaking about all of you; I know whom I have chosen. But 18
there is a text of Scripture to be fulfilled: "He who eats bread with me has 19 turned against me."^b I tell you this now, before the event, so that when it 20 happens you may believe that I am what I am. In very truth I tell you, he who receives any messenger of mine receives me; receiving me, he receives the One who sent me.'

After saying this, Jesus exclaimed in deep agitation of spirit, 'In truth, 21 in very truth I tell you, one of you is going to betray me.' The disciples 22 looked at one another in bewilderment: whom could he be speaking of?
One of them, the disciple he loved, was reclining close beside Jesus. So 23 24
Simon Peter nodded to him and said, 'Ask who it is he means.' That 25 disciple, as he reclined, leaned back close to Jesus and asked, 'Lord, who is it?' Jesus replied, 'It is the man to whom I give this piece of bread when 26
I have dipped it in the dish.' Then, after dipping it in the dish, he took it out and gave it to Judas son of Simon Iscariot. As soon as Judas had received 27 it Satan entered him. Jesus said to him, 'Do quickly what you have to do.'

28 29 No one at the table understood what he meant by this. Some supposed that, as Judas was in charge of the common purse, Jesus was telling him to buy what was needed for the festival, or to make some gift to the poor.
30 As soon as Judas had received the bread he went out. It was night.

31 WHEN HE HAD GONE OUT Jesus said, 'Now the Son of Man is glorified, and in him God is glorified. If God is glorified in him,^a God will also glorify him in himself; and he will glorify him now. My children, for a little longer I am with you; then you will look for me, and, as I told the 34 Jews, I tell you now, where I am going you cannot come. I give you a new commandment: love one another; as I have loved you, so you are to love

35 one another. If there is this love among you, then all will know that you are my disciples.'

36 Simon Peter said to him, 'Lord, where are you going?' Jesus replied, 'Where I am going you cannot follow me now, but one day you will.'
37 Peter said, 'Lord, why cannot I follow you now? I will lay down my life for you.' Jesus answered, 'Will you indeed lay down your life for me? I tell 38 you in very truth, before the cock crows you will have denied me three times.

14 'Set your troubled hearts at rest. Trust in God always; trust also in me.

2 There are many dwelling-places in my Father's house; if it were not so I should have told you; for I am going there on purpose to prepare a place
3 for you.^b And if I go and prepare a place for you, I shall come again and receive you to myself, so that where I am you may be also; and my way
4 there is known to you.'^c Thomas said, 'Lord, we do not know where you
5 are going, so how can we know the way?' Jesus replied, 'I am the way;
6 I am the truth and I am life; no one comes to the Father except by me.

7 'If you knew me you would know my Father too.^d From now on you do
8 know him; you have seen him.' Philip said to him, 'Lord, show us the 9 Father and we ask no more.' Jesus answered, 'Have I been all this time with you, Philip, and you still do not know me? Anyone who has seen me
10 has seen the Father. Then how can you say, "Show us the Father"? Do you not believe that I am in the Father, and the Father in me? I am not
11 myself the source of the words I speak to you: it is the Father who dwells in me doing his own work. Believe me when I say that I am in the Father
12 and the Father in me; or else accept the evidence of the deeds themselves. In truth, in very truth I tell you, he who has faith in me will do what I am 13 doing; and he will do greater things still because I am going to the Father. Indeed anything you ask in my name I will do, so that the Father may be 14 glorified in the Son. If you ask^e anything in my name I will do it.

15 16 'If you love me you will obey my commands; and I will ask the Father, and he will give you another to be your Advocate, who will be with you for

and is^d in you. I will not leave you bereft; I am coming back to you. In a little while the world will see me no longer, but you will see me; because I live, you too will live; then you will know that I am in my Father, and you in me and I in you. The man who has received my commands and obeys them—he it is who loves me; and he who loves me will be loved by my Father; and I will love him and disclose myself to him. 18 19 20 21

Judas asked him—the other Judas, not Iscariot—“Lord, what can have happened, that you mean to disclose yourself to us alone and not to the world?” Jesus replied, “Anyone who loves me will heed what I say; then my Father will love him, and we will come to him and make our dwelling with him; but he who does not love me does not heed what I say. And the word you hear is not mine: it is the word of the Father who sent me. I have told you all this while I am still here with you; but your Advocate, the Holy Spirit whom the Father will send in my name, will teach you everything, and will call to mind all that I have told you. 22 23 24 25 26

“Peace is my parting gift to you, my own peace, such as the world cannot give. Set your troubled hearts at rest, and banish your fears. You heard me say, “I am going away, and coming back to you.” If you loved me you would have been glad to hear that I was going to the Father; for the Father is greater than I. I have told you now, beforehand, so that when it happens you may have faith. 27 28 29

“I shall not talk much longer with you, for the Prince of this world approaches. He has no rights over me; but the world must be shown that I love the Father, and do exactly as he commands; so up, let us go forward! ^b 30 31

“I AM THE REAL VINE, and my Father is the gardener. Every barren branch of mine he cuts away; and every fruiting branch he cleans, to make it more fruitful still. You have already been cleansed by the word that I spoke to you. Dwell in me, as I in you. No branch can bear fruit by itself, but only if it remains united with the vine; no more can you bear fruit, unless you remain united with me. 15 1 2 3 4

“I am the vine, and you the branches. He who dwells in me, as I dwell in him, bears much fruit; for apart from me you can do nothing. He who does not dwell in me is thrown away like a withered branch. The withered branches are heaped together, thrown on the fire, and burnt. 5 6

“If you dwell in me, and my words dwell in you, ask what you will, and you shall have it. This is my Father’s glory, that you may bear fruit in plenty and so be my disciples. ^c As the Father has loved me, so I have loved you. Dwell in my love. If you heed my commands, you will dwell in my love, as I have heeded my Father’s commands and dwell in his love. 7 8 9 10

“I have spoken thus to you, so that my joy may be in you, and your joy complete. ^d This is my commandment: love one another, as I have loved you. There is no greater love than this, that a man should lay down his life 11 12 13

^a Some witnesses read shall be. ^b Or for the Prince of this world is coming, though he has nothing in common with me. But he is coming so that the world may recognize that I love the Father, and do exactly as he commands. 14 15 for his friends. You are my friends, if you do what I command you. I call you servants no longer; a servant does not know what his master is about.
 I have called you friends, because I have disclosed to you everything that I 16 heard from my Father. You did not choose me: I chose you. I appointed you to go on and bear fruit, fruit that shall last; so that the Father may give 17 you all that you ask in my name. This is my commandment to you: love one another.

18 19 'If the world hates you, it hated me first, as you know well. ^a If you belonged to the world, the world would love its own; but because you do not belong to the world, because I have chosen you out of the world, for that 20 reason the world hates you. Remember what I said: "A servant is not greater than his master." As they persecuted me, they will persecute you; 21 they will follow your teaching as little as they have followed mine. It is on my account that they will treat you thus, because they do not know the One who sent me.

22 'If I had not come and spoken to them, they would not be guilty of sin;
 23 but now they have no excuse for their sin: he who hates me, hates my 24 Father. If I had not worked among them and accomplished what no other man has done, they would not be guilty of sin; but now they have both 25 seen and hated both me and my Father. ^b However, this text in their Law had to come true: ^c "They hated me without reason."

26 'But when your Advocate has come, whom I will send you from the Father—the Spirit of truth that issues from the Father—he will bear 27 witness to me. And you also are my witnesses, because you have been with me from the first.

16 'I have told you all this to guard you against the breakdown of your 2 faith. They will ban you from the synagogue; indeed, the time is coming when anyone who kills you will suppose that he is performing a religious 3 duty. They will do these things because they do not know either the Father
 4 or me. I have told you all this so that when the time comes for it to happen you may remember my warning. I did not tell you this at first, because 5 then I was with you; but now I am going away to him who sent me. None
 6 of you asks me "Where are you going?" Yet you are plunged into grief 7 because of what I have told you. Nevertheless I tell you the truth: it is for your good that I am leaving you. If I do not go, your Advocate will not 8 come, whereas if I go, I will send him to you. When he comes, he will con-9 fute the world, and show where wrong and right and judgement lie. He will 10 convict them of wrong, by their refusal to believe in me; he will convince them that right is on my side, by showing that I go to the Father when I 11 pass from your sight; and he will convince them of divine judgement, by showing that the Prince of this world stands condemned.

12 'There is still much that I could say to you, but the burden would be too 13 great for you now. However, when he comes who is the Spirit of truth, he will guide you into all the truth; for he will not speak on his own authority, but will tell only what he hears; and he will make known to you the things that are coming. He will glorify me, for everything that he makes known to you he will draw from what is mine. All that the Father has is mine, and that is why I said, "Everything that he makes known to you he will draw from what is mine."

^a Or bear in mind that it hated me first.

^b Or but now they have indeed seen my work and yet have hated both me and my Father.

^c Or let this text in their Law come true.

'A LITTLE WHILE, and you see me no more; again a little while, and you will see me.' Some of his disciples said to one another, "What does he mean by this: "A little while, and you will not see me, and again a little while, and you will see me", and by this: "Because I am going to my Father"?" So they asked, "What is this "little while" that he speaks of? We do not know what he means.'

Jesus knew that they were wanting to question him, and said, 'Are you discussing what I said: "A little while, and you will not see me, and again a little while, and you will see me"? In very truth I tell you, you will weep and mourn, but the world will be glad. But though you will be plunged in grief, your grief will be turned to joy. A woman in labour is in pain because her time has come; but when the child is born she forgets the anguish in her joy that a man has been born into the world. So it is with you: for the moment you are sad at heart; but I shall see you again, and then you will be joyful, and no one shall rob you of your joy. When that day comes you will ask nothing of me. In very truth I tell you, if you ask the Father for anything in my name, he will give it you.^a So far you have asked nothing in my name. Ask and you will receive, that your joy may be complete.

'Till now I have been using figures of speech; a time is coming when I shall no longer use figures, but tell you of the Father in plain words. When that day comes you will make your request in my name, and I do not say that I shall pray to the Father for you, for the Father loves you himself, because you have loved me and believed that I came from God. I came from the Father and have come into the world. Now I am leaving the world again and going to the Father.' His disciples said, 'Why, this is plain speaking; this is no figure of speech. We are certain now that you know everything, and do not need to be questioned; because of this we believe that you have come from God.'

Jesus answered, 'Do you now believe? Look,^b the hour is coming, has indeed already come, when you are all to be scattered, each to his home, leaving me alone. Yet I am not alone, because the Father is with me. I have told you all this so that in me you may find peace. In the world you will have trouble. But courage! The victory is mine; I have conquered the world.'

AFTER THESE WORDS Jesus looked up to heaven and said:

'Father, the hour has come. Glorify thy Son, that the Son may glorify thee. For thou hast made him sovereign over all mankind, to give eternal life to all whom thou hast given him. This is eternal life: to know thee who alone art truly God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent.

'I have glorified thee on earth by completing the work which thou gavest

^a Some witnesses read if you ask the Father for anything, he will give it you in my name.

^b Or At the moment you believe; but look . . .

5 me to do; and now, Father, glorify me in thy own presence with the glory which I had with thee before the world began.

6 'I have made thy name known to the men whom thou didst give me out of the world. They were thine, thou gavest them to me, and they have
7 obeyed thy command. Now they know that all thy gifts have come to me
8 from thee; for I have taught them all that I learned from thee, and they have received it: they know with certainty that I came from thee; they have had faith to believe that thou didst send me.

9 'I pray for them; I am not praying for the world but for those whom 10 thou hast given me, because they belong to thee. All that is mine is thine, and what is thine is mine; and through them has my glory shone.

11 'I am to stay no longer in the world, but they are still in the world, and I am on my way to thee. Holy Father, protect by the power of thy name those 12 whom thou hast given me,^a that they may be one, as we are one. When I was with them, I protected by the power of thy name those whom thou 13 hast given me,^b and kept them safe. Not one of them is lost except the man who must be lost, for Scripture has to be fulfilled.

14 'And now I am coming to thee; but while I am still in the world I speak these words, so that they may have my joy within them in full measure.
15 I have delivered thy word to them, and the world hates them because they are strangers in the world, as I am. I pray thee, not to take them out of the 16 world, but to keep them from the evil one. They are strangers in the world,
17 as I am. Consecrate them by the truth;^c thy word is truth. As thou hast
18 sent me into the world, I have sent them into the world, and for their sake I now consecrate myself, that they too may be consecrated by the truth.^c

20 'But it is not for these alone that I pray, but for those also who through 21 their words put their faith in me; may they all be one: as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, so also may they be in us, that the world may believe 22 that thou didst send me. The glory which thou gavest me I have given to 23 them, that they may be one, as we are one; I in them and thou in me, may they be perfectly one. Then the world will learn that thou didst send me, 24 that thou didst love them as thou didst me.

25 'Father, I desire that these men, who are thy gift to me, may be with me where I am, so that they may look upon my glory, which thou hast given me
26 because thou didst love me before the world began. O righteous Father, although the world does not know thee, I know thee, and these men know 27 that thou didst send me. I made thy name known to them, and will make it known, so that the love thou hadst for me may be in them, and I may be in them.'

^a Or keep in loyalty to thee those whom thou hast given me; some witnesses read protect them by the power of thy name which thou hast given me.

^c Or in truth.

The final conflict

AFTER THESE WORDS, Jesus went out with his disciples, and crossed 18 the Kedron ravine. There was a garden there, and he and his disciples went into it. The place was known to Judas, his betrayer, because Jesus had often met there with his disciples. So Judas took a detachment of 2 soldiers, and police provided by the chief priests and the Pharisees, 3 equipped with lanterns, torches, and weapons, and made his way to the garden. Jesus, knowing all that was coming upon him, went out to them 4 and asked, 'Who is it you want?' 'Jesus of Nazareth', they answered. Jesus said, 'I am he.' And there stood Judas the traitor with them. When he said, 5
 'I am he', they drew back and fell to the ground. Again Jesus asked, 'Who 6 is it you want?' 'Jesus of Nazareth', they answered. Then Jesus said, 'I have 7 told you that I am he. If I am the man you want, let these others go.' (This 8 was to make good his words, 'I have not lost one of those whom thou gavest 9 me.') Thereupon Simon Peter drew the sword he was wearing and struck 10 at the High Priest's servant, cutting off his right ear. (The servant's name was Malchus.) Jesus said to Peter, 'Sheathe your sword. This is the cup 11
 the Father has given me; shall I not drink it?'

THE TROOPS with their commander, and the Jewish police, now arrested 12
 Jesus and secured him. They took him first to Annas.^a Annas was father- 13 in-law of Caiaphas, the High Priest for that year^a—the same Caiaphas 14 who had advised the Jews that it would be to their interest if one man died for the whole people. Jesus was followed by Simon Peter and another 15 disciple. This disciple, who was acquainted with the High Priest, 16 went with Jesus into the High Priest's courtyard, but Peter halted at the door outside. So the other disciple, the High Priest's acquaintance, 17 went out again and spoke to the woman at the door, and brought Peter 18 in. The maid on duty at the door said to Peter, 'Are you another of this man's disciples?' 'I am not', he said. The servants and the police had 19 made a charcoal fire, because it was cold, and were standing round it 20 warming themselves. And Peter too was standing with them, sharing the warmth.

The High Priest questioned Jesus about his disciples and about what 19 he taught. Jesus replied, 'I have spoken openly to all the world; I have 20 always taught in synagogue and in the temple, where all Jews congregate;
 I have said nothing in secret. Why question me? Ask my hearers what I 21 told them; they know what I said.' When he said this, one of the police 22 who was standing next to him struck him on the face, exclaiming, 'Is that the way to answer the High Priest?' Jesus replied, 'If I spoke amiss, state 23 it in evidence; if I spoke well, why strike me?'

So Annas sent him bound to Caiaphas the High Priest. ^b 24

Meanwhile Simon Peter stood warming himself. The others asked, 'Are 25 you another of his disciples?' But he denied it: 'I am not', he said. One of 26
 the High Priest's servants, a relation of the man whose ear Peter had cut 27 off, insisted, 'Did I not see you with him in the garden?' Peter denied again; and just then a cock crew.

28 FROM CAIAPHAS Jesus was led into the Governor's headquarters. It was now early morning, and the Jews themselves stayed outside the headquarters to avoid defilement, so that they could eat the Passover meal. ^a So Pilate went out to them and asked, 'What charge do you bring against this man?' 'If he were not a criminal,' they replied, 'we should not have brought him before you.' Pilate said, 'Take him away and try him by your own law.'

32 The Jews answered, 'We are not allowed to put any man to death.' Thus they ensured the fulfilment of the words by which Jesus had indicated the manner of his death.

33 Pilate then went back into his headquarters and summoned Jesus. 'Are you the king of the Jews?' he asked. ^b Jesus said, 'Is that your own idea, or have others suggested it to you?' 'What! am I a Jew?' said Pilate. 'Your own nation and their chief priests have brought you before me. What have you done?' Jesus replied, 'My kingdom does not belong to this world. If it did, my followers would be fighting to save me from arrest by the Jews. My kingly authority comes from elsewhere.' 'You are a king, then?' said Pilate. Jesus answered, "'King" is your word. My task is to bear witness to the truth. For this was I born; for this I came into the world, and all who are not deaf to truth listen to my voice.' Pilate said, 'What is truth?', and with those words went out again to the Jews. 'For my part,' he said, 'I find no case against him. But you have a custom that I release one prisoner for you at Passover. Would you like me to release the king of the Jews?' Again the clamour rose: 'Not him; we want Barabbas!' (Barabbas was a bandit.)

19 1 2 Pilate now took Jesus and had him flogged; and the soldiers plaited a crown of thorns and placed it on his head, and robbed him in a purple cloak.

3 Then time after time they came up to him, crying, 'Hail, King of the Jews!', and struck him on the face.

4 Once more Pilate came out and said to the Jews, 'Here he is; I am bringing him out to let you know that I find no case against him'; and Jesus came out, wearing the crown of thorns and the purple cloak. 'Behold the Man!' said Pilate. The chief priests and their henchmen saw him and shouted, 'Crucify! crucify!' 'Take him and crucify him yourselves,' said Pilate; 'for my part I find no case against him.' The Jews answered, 'We have a law; and by that law he ought to die, because he has claimed to be Son of God.'

8 9 When Pilate heard that, he was more afraid than ever, and going back into his headquarters he asked Jesus, 'Where have you come from?' But Jesus gave him no answer. 'Do you refuse to speak to me?' said Pilate. 'Surely you know that I have authority to release you, and I have authority to crucify you?' 'You would have no authority at all over me', Jesus replied, 'if it had not been granted you from above; and therefore the deeper guilt lies with the man who handed me over to you.'

^a Or could share in the offerings of the Passover season.

^b Or 'You are king of the Jews, I take it', he said.

From that moment Pilate tried hard to release him; but the Jews kept shouting, 'If you let this man go, you are no friend to Caesar; any man who claims to be a king is defying Caesar.' When Pilate heard what they were saying, he brought Jesus out and took his seat on the tribunal at the place known as 'The Pavement' ('Gabbatha' in the language of the Jews). It was the eve of Passover,^a about noon. Pilate said to the Jews, 'Here is your king.' They shouted, 'Away with him! Away with him! Crucify him!' 'Crucify your king?' said Pilate. 'We have no king but Caesar', the Jews replied. Then at last, to satisfy them, he handed Jesus over to be crucified.

JESUS WAS NOW TAKEN in charge and, carrying his own cross, went out to the Place of the Skull, as it is called (or, in the Jews' language, 'Golgotha'), where they crucified him, and with him two others, one on the right, one on the left, and Jesus between them.

And Pilate wrote an inscription to be fastened to the cross; it read, 'Jesus of Nazareth King of the Jews.' This inscription was read by many Jews, because the place where Jesus was crucified was not far from the city, and the inscription was in Hebrew, Latin, and Greek. Then the Jewish chief priests said to Pilate, 'You should not write "King of the Jews"; write, "He claimed to be king of the Jews."' Pilate replied, 'What I have written, I have written.'

The soldiers, having crucified Jesus, took possession of his clothes, and divided them into four parts, one for each soldier, leaving out the tunic. The tunic was seamless, woven in one piece throughout; so they said to one another, 'We must not tear this; let us toss for it'; and thus the text of Scripture came true: 'They shared my garments among them, and cast lots for my clothing.'

That is what the soldiers did. But meanwhile near the cross where Jesus hung stood his mother, with her sister, Mary wife of Clopas, and Mary of Magdala. Jesus saw his mother, with the disciple whom he loved standing beside her. He said to her, 'Mother, there is your son'; and to the disciple, 'There is your mother'; and from that moment the disciple took her into his home.

After that, Jesus, aware that all had now come to its appointed end, said in fulfilment of Scripture, 'I thirst.' A jar stood there full of sour wine; so they soaked a sponge with the wine, fixed it on a javelin,^b and held it up to his lips. Having received the wine, he said, 'It is accomplished!' He bowed his head and gave up his spirit.^c

Because it was the eve of Passover,^d the Jews were anxious that the bodies should not remain on the cross for the coming Sabbath, since that Sabbath was a day of great solemnity; so they requested Pilate to have the legs broken and the bodies taken down. The soldiers accordingly came to the first of his fellow-victims and to the second, and broke their legs; but when they came to Jesus, they found that he was already dead, so they did not break his legs. But one of the soldiers stabbed his side with a lance, and at once there was a flow of blood and water. This is vouched for by an eyewitness, whose evidence is to be trusted. He knows that he speaks the 36 truth, so that you too may believe; for this happened in fulfilment of the 37 text of Scripture: 'No bone of his shall be broken.' And another text says,

 'They shall look on him whom they pierced.'

38 AFTER THAT, PILATE was approached by Joseph of Arimathaea, a disciple of Jesus, but a secret disciple for fear of the Jews, who ^a asked to be allowed to remove the body of Jesus. Pilate gave the permission; so Joseph came 39 and took the body away. He was joined by Nicodemus (the man who had first visited Jesus by night), who brought with him a mixture of myrrh 40 and aloes, more than half a hundredweight. They took the body of Jesus and wrapped it, with the spices, in strips of linen cloth according to Jewish 41 burial-customs. Now at the place where he had been crucified there was a 42 garden, and in the garden a new tomb, not yet used for burial. There, because the tomb was near at hand and it was the eve of the Jewish Sabbath, they laid Jesus.

20 EARLY ON THE SUNDAY MORNING, while it was still dark, Mary of Magdala came to the tomb. She saw that the stone had been moved away 2 from the entrance, and ran to Simon Peter and the other disciple, the one whom Jesus loved. 'They have taken the Lord out of his tomb,' she cried, 3 'and we do not know where they have laid him.' So Peter and the other set 4 out and made their way to the tomb. They were running side by side, but 5 the other disciple outran Peter and reached the tomb first. He peered in 6 and saw the linen wrappings lying there, but did not enter. Then Simon Peter came up, following him, and he went into the tomb. He saw the linen 7 wrappings lying, and the napkin which had been over his head, not lying 8 with the wrappings but rolled together in a place by itself. Then the disciple who had reached the tomb first went in too, and he saw and 9 believed; until then they had not understood the scriptures, which showed that he must rise from the dead.

10 So the disciples went home again; but Mary stood at the tomb outside, 11 weeping. As she wept, she peered into the tomb; and she saw two angels in 12 white sitting there, one at the head, and one at the feet, where the body of 13 Jesus had lain. They said to her, 'Why are you weeping?' She answered,
 'They have taken my Lord away, and I do not know where they have laid 14 him.' With these words she turned round and saw Jesus standing there, 15 but did not recognize him. Jesus said to her, 'Why are you weeping? Who is it you are looking for?' Thinking it was the gardener, she said, 'If it is you, sir, who removed him, tell me where you have laid him, and I will 16 take him away.' Jesus said, 'Mary!' She turned to him and said, 'Rabbuni!' 17 (which is Hebrew for 'My Master'). Jesus said, 'Do not cling to me, ^b for I have not yet ascended to the Father. But go to my brothers, and tell them that I am now ascending ^c to my Father and your Father, my God and your 18 God.' Mary of Magdala went to the disciples with her news: 'I have seen the Lord!' she said, and gave them his message.

Late that Sunday evening, when the disciples were together behind 19 locked doors, for fear of the Jews, Jesus came and stood among them. 'Peace 20 be with you!' he said, and then showed them his hands and his side. So 21 when the disciples saw the Lord, they were filled with joy. Jesus repeated, 21
 'Peace be with you!', and said, 'As the Father sent me, so I send you.' 22
 Then he breathed on them, saying, 'Receive the Holy Spirit! If you 22 23 forgive any man's sins, they stand forgiven; if you pronounce them unforgiven, unforgiven they remain.'

One of the Twelve, Thomas, that is 'the Twin', was not with the rest 24 when Jesus came. So the disciples told him, 'We have seen the Lord.' 25
 He said, 'Unless I see the mark of the nails on his hands, unless I put my finger into the place where the nails were, and my hand into his side, I will not believe it.'

A week later his disciples were again in the room, and Thomas was with 26 them. Although the doors were locked, Jesus came and stood among them, saying, 'Peace be with you!' Then he said to Thomas, 'Reach your finger 27 here; see my hands. Reach your hand here and put it into my side. Be unbelieving no longer, but believe.' Thomas said, 'My Lord and my 28 God!' Jesus said, 'Because you have seen me you have found faith. Happy 29 are they who never saw me and yet have found faith.'

There were indeed many other signs that Jesus performed in the pre- 30 sence of his disciples, which are not recorded in this book. Those here 31 written have been recorded in order that you may hold the faith^a that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that through this faith you may possess life by his name.

SOME TIME LATER, Jesus showed himself to his disciples once again, by 21 the Sea of Tiberias; and in this way. Simon Peter and Thomas 'the Twin' 2 were together with Nathanael of Cana-in-Galilee. The sons of Zebedee 3 and two other disciples were also there. Simon Peter said, 'I am going out fishing.' 'We will go with you', said the others. So they started and got into 3 the boat. But that night they caught nothing.

Morning came, and there stood Jesus on the beach, but the disciples 4 did not know that it was Jesus. He called out to them, 'Friends, have you 5 caught anything?' They answered 'No.' He said, 'Shoot the net to star- 6 board, and you will make a catch.' They did so, and found they could not haul the net aboard, there were so many fish in it. Then the disciple 7 whom Jesus loved said to Peter, 'It is the Lord!' When Simon Peter heard that, he wrapped his coat about him (for he had stripped) and plunged into the sea. The rest of them came on in the boat, towing the 8 net full of fish; for they were not far from land, only about a hundred yards.

When they came ashore, they saw a charcoal fire there, with fish laid on 9 it, and some bread. Jesus said, 'Bring some of your catch.' Simon Peter 10 11 went aboard and dragged the net to land, full of big fish, a hundred and fifty-three of them; and yet, many as they were, the net was not torn. Jesus 12 said, 'Come and have breakfast.' None of the disciples dared to ask 'Who

^a Some witnesses read that you may come to believe . . .

- 13 are you?' They knew it was the Lord. Jesus now came up, took the bread, and gave it to them, and the fish in the same way.
- 14 This makes the third time that Jesus appeared to his disciples after his resurrection from the dead.
- 15 After breakfast, Jesus said to Simon Peter, 'Simon son of John, do you love me more than all else^a?' 'Yes, Lord,' he answered, 'you know that I love you.'^b 'Then feed my lambs', he said. A second time he asked, 'Simon son of John, do you love me?' 'Yes, Lord, you know I love you.'^b 'Then tend my sheep.' A third time he said, 'Simon son of John, do you love me^c?' Peter was hurt that he asked him a third time, 'Do you love me?'^d 'Lord,' he said, 'you know everything; you know I love you.'^b Jesus said, 'Feed my sheep.'
- 18 'And further, I tell you this in very truth: when you were young you fastened your belt about you and walked where you chose; but when you are old you will stretch out your arms, and a stranger will bind you fast, and carry you where you have no wish to go.' He said this to indicate the manner of death by which Peter was to glorify God. Then he added, 'Follow me.'
- 20 Peter looked round, and saw the disciple whom Jesus loved following—the one who at supper had leaned back close to him to ask the question, 'Lord, who is it that will betray you?' When he caught sight of him, Peter asked, 'Lord, what will happen to him?' Jesus said, 'If it should be my will that he wait until I come, what is it to you? Follow me.'
- 23 That saying of Jesus became current in the brotherhood, and was taken to mean that that disciple would not die. But in fact Jesus did not say that he would not die; he only said, 'If it should be my will that he wait until I come, what is it to you?'
- 24 It is this same disciple who attests what has here been written. It is in fact he who wrote it, and we know that his testimony is true.^e
- 25 There is much else that Jesus did. If it were all to be recorded in detail, I suppose the whole world could not hold the books that would be written.

^a Or more than they do. ^b Or that I am your friend. ^c Or are you my friend.

*An incident in the temple

AND THEY WENT each to his home, and Jesus to the Mount of Olives. 53 1 *
 At daybreak he appeared again in the temple, and all the people 2 gathered round him. He had taken his seat and was engaged in teaching them when the doctors of the law and the Pharisees brought in a woman 3 caught committing adultery. Making her stand out in the middle they said 4 to him, 'Master, this woman was caught in the very act of adultery. In the 5 Law Moses has laid down that such women are to be stoned. What do you say about it?' They put the question as a test, hoping to frame a charge 6 against him. Jesus bent down and wrote with his finger on the ground.
 When they continued to press their question he sat up straight and said, 7
 'That one of you who is faultless shall throw the first stone.' Then once 8 again he bent down and wrote on the ground. When they heard what he 9 said, one by one they went away,^a the eldest first; and Jesus was left alone, with the woman still standing there. Jesus again sat up and ^b said to the 10 woman, 'Where are they? Has no one condemned you?' She answered, 'No 11 one, sir.' Jesus said, 'Nor do I condemn you. You may go; do not sin again.'

ACTS OF THE APOSTLES

The beginnings of the church

IN THE FIRST PART of my work, Theophilus, I wrote of all that 1
Jesus did and taught from the beginning until the day when, after 2 giving instructions through the Holy Spirit to the apostles whom he 3 had chosen, he was taken up to heaven. He showed himself to these men 4 after his death, and gave ample proof that he was alive: over a period of 5
forty days he appeared to them and taught them about the kingdom of 6
God. While he was in their company he told them not to leave Jerusalem. 7
'You must wait', he said, 'for the promise made by my Father, about which 8
you have heard me speak: John, as you know, baptized with water, but you 9 will be baptized with the Holy Spirit, and within the next few days.'

So, when they were all together, they asked him, 'Lord, is this the time 10 when you are to establish once again the sovereignty of Israel?' He 11 answered, 'It is not for you to know about dates or times, which the Father 12 has set within his own control. But you will receive power when the Holy 13 Spirit comes upon you; and you will bear witness for me in Jerusalem, and 14 all over Judaea and Samaria, and away to the ends of the earth.'

When he had said this, as they watched, he was lifted up, and a cloud 15 removed him from their sight. As he was going, and as they were gazing 16 intently into the sky, all at once there stood beside them two men in white 17 who said, 'Men of Galilee, why stand there looking up into the sky? This 18
Jesus, who has been taken away from you up to heaven, will come in the 19 same way as you have seen him go.'

Then they returned to Jerusalem from the hill called Olivet, which is 20 near Jerusalem, no farther than a Sabbath day's journey. Entering the city 21 they went to the room upstairs where they were lodging: Peter and John 22 and James and Andrew, Philip and Thomas, Bartholomew and Matthew, 23 James son of Alphaeus and Simon the Zealot, and Judas son of James. All 24 these were constantly at prayer together, and with them a group of women, 25 including Mary the mother of Jesus, and his brothers.

It was during this time that Peter stood up before the assembled brother- 26 hood, about one hundred and twenty in all, and said: 'My friends, the 27 prophecy in Scripture was bound to come true, which the Holy Spirit, 28 through the mouth of David, uttered about Judas who acted as guide to 29 those who arrested Jesus. For he was one of our number and had his place 30 in this ministry.' (This Judas, be it noted, after buying a plot of land with 31 the price of his villainy, fell forward on the ground, and burst open, so that 32 his entrails poured out. This became known to everyone in Jerusalem, and 33

they named the property in their own language Akeldama, which means 20 'Blood Acre'. 'The text I have in mind', Peter continued, 'is in the Book of Psalms: "Let his homestead fall desolate; let there be none to inhabit it"; 21 and again, "Let another take over his charge." Therefore one of those who bore us company all the while we had the Lord Jesus with us, coming 22 and going, from John's ministry of baptism until the day when he was taken up from us—one of those must now join us as a witness to his resurrection.'

23 Two names were put forward: Joseph, who was known as Barsabbas, 24 and bore the added name of Justus; and Matthias. Then they prayed and said, 'Thou, Lord, who knowest the hearts of all men, declare which of 25 these two thou hast chosen to receive this office of ministry and apostleship 26 which Judas abandoned to go where he belonged.' They drew lots and the lot fell on Matthias, who was then assigned a place among the twelve apostles.^a

2 WHILE THE DAY of Pentecost was running its course they were all
2 together in one place, when suddenly there came from the sky a noise like that of a strong driving wind, which filled the whole house where they were 3 sitting. And there appeared to them tongues like flames of fire, dispersed 4 among them and resting on each one. And they were all filled with the Holy Spirit and began to talk in other tongues, as the Spirit gave them power of utterance.

5 Now there were living in Jerusalem devout Jews^b drawn from every 6 nation under heaven; and at this sound the crowd gathered, all bewildered 7 because each one heard his own language spoken. They were amazed and in their astonishment exclaimed, 'Why, they are all Galileans, are they not,
8 these men who are speaking? How is it then that we hear them, each of us 9 in his own native language? Parthians, Medes, Elamites; inhabitants of 10 Mesopotamia, of Judaea and Cappadocia, of Pontus and Asia, of Phrygia and Pamphylia, of Egypt and the districts of Libya around Cyrene; visitors 11 from Rome, both Jews and proselytes, Cretans and Arabs, we hear them 12 telling in our own tongues the great things God has done.' And they were all amazed and perplexed, saying to one another, 'What can this mean?'
13 Others said contemptuously, 'They have been drinking!'

14 But Peter stood up with the Eleven, raised his voice, and addressed them:
15 'Fellow Jews, and all you who live in Jerusalem, mark this and give me a 16 17 hearing. These men are not drunk, as you imagine; for it is only nine in the morning. No, this is what the prophet spoke of: "God says, 'This will happen in the last days: I will pour out upon everyone a portion of my spirit; and your sons and daughters shall prophesy; your young men shall 18 see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams. Yes, I will endue even my slaves, both men and women, with a portion of my spirit, and they shall 19 prophesy. And I will show portents in the sky above, and signs on the earth 20 below—blood and fire and drifting smoke. The sun shall be turned to darkness, and the moon to blood, before that great, resplendent day, the day of the Lord, shall come. And then, everyone who invokes the name of the Lord shall be saved.’” 21

‘Men of Israel, listen to me: I speak of Jesus of Nazareth, a man singled out by God and made known to you through miracles, portents, and signs, which God worked among you through him, as you well know. When he had been given up to you, by the deliberate will and plan of God, you used heathen men to crucify and kill him. But God raised him to life again, setting him free from the pangs of death, because it could not be that death should keep him in its grip. 22

‘For David says of him: 25

“I foresaw that the presence of the Lord would be with me always, for he is at my right hand so that I may not be shaken; therefore my heart was glad and my tongue spoke my joy; moreover, my flesh shall dwell in hope, for thou wilt not abandon my soul to death, nor let thy loyal servant suffer corruption. Thou hast shown me the ways of life, thou wilt fill me with gladness by thy presence.” 26
27
28

‘Let me tell you plainly, my friends, that the patriarch David died and was buried, and his tomb is here to this very day. It is clear therefore that he spoke as a prophet, who knew that God had sworn to him that one of his own direct descendants should sit on his throne; and when he said he was not abandoned to death, and his flesh never suffered corruption, he spoke with foreknowledge of the resurrection of the Messiah. The Jesus we speak of has been raised by God, as we can all bear witness. Exalted thus with^a God’s right hand, he received the Holy Spirit from the Father, as was promised, and all that you now see and hear flows from him. For it was not David who went up to heaven; his own words are: “The Lord said to my Lord, ‘Sit at my right hand until I make your enemies your footstool.’” Let all Israel then accept as certain that God has made this Jesus, whom you crucified, both Lord and Messiah.’ 29 30
31 32 33 34 35
36

When they heard this they were cut to the heart, and said to Peter and the apostles, ^b ‘Friends, what are we to do?’ ‘Repent,’ said Peter, ‘repent and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of Jesus the Messiah for the forgiveness of your sins; and you will receive the gift of the Holy Spirit. For the promise is to you, and to your children, and to all who are far away, everyone whom the Lord our God may call.’ 37
38
39

In these and many other words he pressed his case and pleaded with them: ‘Save yourselves’, he said, ‘from this crooked age.’ Then those who accepted his word were baptized, and some three thousand were added to their number that day. 40
41

They met constantly to hear the apostles teach, and to share the common life, to break bread, and to pray. A sense of awe was everywhere, and many marvels and signs were brought about through the apostles. All whose faith had drawn them together held everything in common: ^c they would 42

46 sell their property and possessions and make a general distribution as the 47 need of each required. With one mind they kept up their daily attendance at the temple, and, breaking bread in private houses, shared their meals with unaffected joy, as they praised God and enjoyed the favour of the whole people. And day by day the Lord added to their number those whom he was saving.

3 ONE DAY at three in the afternoon, the hour of prayer, Peter and John
2 were on their way up to the temple. Now a man who had been a cripple 3 from birth used to be carried there and laid every day by the gate of the temple called 'Beautiful Gate', to beg from people as they went in. When he saw Peter and John on their way into the temple he asked for charity.
4 But Peter fixed his eyes on him, as John did also, and said, 'Look at us.'
5 6 Expecting a gift from them, the man was all attention. And Peter said, 'I have no silver or gold; but what I have I give you: in the name of Jesus 7 Christ of Nazareth, walk.' Then he grasped him by the right hand and 8 pulled him up; and at once his feet and ankles grew strong; he sprang up, stood on his feet, and started to walk. He entered the temple with them, 9 leaping and praising God as he went. Everyone saw him walking and 10 praising God, and when they recognized him as the man who used to sit begging at Beautiful Gate, they were filled with wonder and amazement at what had happened to him.

11 And as he was clutching Peter and John all the people came running in 12 astonishment towards them in Solomon's Portico, as it is called. Peter saw them coming and met them with these words: 'Men of Israel, why be surprised at this? Why stare at us as if we had made this man walk by some 13 power or godliness of our own? The God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, the God of our fathers, has given the highest honour to his servant Jesus, 14 whom you committed for trial and repudiated in Pilate's court—repudiated the one who was holy and righteous when Pilate had decided to release him.
15 You begged as a favour the release of a murderer, and killed him who has led the way to life. But God raised him from the dead; of that we are 16 witnesses. And the name of Jesus, by awakening faith, has strengthened this man, whom you see and know, and this faith has made him completely well, as you can all see for yourselves.

17 'And now, my friends, I know quite well that you acted in ignorance, 18 and so did your rulers; but this is how God fulfilled what he had foretold in the utterances of all the prophets: that his Messiah should suffer.
19 Repent then and turn to God, so that your sins may be wiped out. Then 20 the Lord may grant you a time of recovery and send you the Messiah he has already appointed, that is, Jesus. He must be received into heaven until 21 the time of universal restoration comes, of which God spoke by his holy 22 prophets.^a Moses said, "The Lord God will raise up a prophet for you from among yourselves as he raised me; ^b you shall listen to everything 23 he says to you, and anyone who refuses to listen to that prophet must 24 be extirpated from Israel." And so said all the prophets, from Samuel onwards; with one voice they all predicted this present time.

^a Some witnesses add from the beginning of the world.

^b Or like me.

'You are the heirs of the prophets; you are within the covenant which God made with your fathers, when he said to Abraham, "And in your offspring all the families on earth shall find blessing." When God raised up his Servant, he sent him to you first, to bring you blessing by turning every one of you from your wicked ways.'

They were still addressing the people when the chief^a priests came upon them, together with the Controller of the Temple and the Sadducees, exasperated at their teaching the people and proclaiming the resurrection from the dead—the resurrection of Jesus. They were arrested and put in prison for the night, as it was already evening. But many of those who had heard the message became believers. The number of men now reached about five thousand.

Next day the Jewish rulers, elders, and doctors of the law met in Jerusalem. There were present Annas the High Priest, Caiaphas, Jonathan, Alexander, and all who were of the high-priestly family. They brought the apostles before the court and began the examination. 'By what power', they asked, 'or by what name have such men as you done this?' Then Peter, filled with the Holy Spirit, answered, 'Rulers of the people and elders, if the question put to us today is about help given to a sick man, and we are asked by what means he was cured, here is the answer, for all of you and for all the people of Israel: it was by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom you crucified, whom God raised from the dead; it is by his name^c that this man stands here before you fit and well. This Jesus is the stone rejected by the builders which has become the keystone—and you are the builders. There is no salvation in anyone else at all,^d for there is no other name under heaven granted to men, by which we may receive salvation.'

Now as they observed the boldness of Peter and John, and noted that they were untrained laymen, they began to wonder, then recognized them as former companions of Jesus. And when they saw the man who had been cured standing with them, they had nothing to say in reply. So they ordered them to leave the court, and then discussed the matter among themselves. 'What are we to do with these men?' they said; 'for it is common knowledge in Jerusalem that a notable miracle has come about through them; and we cannot deny it. But to stop this from spreading further among the people, we had better caution them never again to speak to anyone in this name.' They then called them in and ordered them to refrain from all public speaking and teaching in the name of Jesus.

But Peter and John said to them in reply: 'Is it right in God's eyes for us to obey you rather than God? Judge for yourselves. We cannot possibly give up speaking of things we have seen and heard.'

The court repeated the caution and discharged them. They could not see how they were to punish them, because the people were all giving glory to God for what had happened. The man upon whom this miracle of healing had been performed was over forty years old.

As soon as they were discharged they went back to their friends and 24 told them everything that the chief priests and elders had said. When they heard it, they raised their voices as one man and called upon God:

25 'Sovereign Lord, maker of heaven and earth and sea and of everything in them, who by the Holy Spirit,^a through the mouth of David thy servant, didst say,

26 "Why did the Gentiles rage and the peoples lay their plots in vain? The kings of the earth took their stand and the rulers made common cause against the Lord and against his Messiah."

27 They did indeed make common cause in this very city against thy holy servant Jesus whom thou didst anoint as Messiah. Herod and Pontius Pilate conspired with the Gentiles and peoples of Israel to do all the things which, under thy hand and by thy decree, were foreordained. And now, O Lord, mark their threats, and enable thy servants to speak thy word with all boldness. Stretch out thy hand to heal and cause signs and wonders to be done through the name of thy holy servant Jesus.'

31 When they had ended their prayer, the building where they were assembled rocked, and all were filled with the Holy Spirit and spoke the word of God with boldness.

32 THE WHOLE BODY of believers was united in heart and soul. Not a man of them claimed any of his possessions as his own, but everything was held in common, while the apostles bore witness with great power to the resurrection of the Lord Jesus. They were all held in high esteem; for they had never a needy person among them, because all who had property in land or houses sold it, brought the proceeds of the sale, and laid the money at the feet of the apostles; it was then distributed to any who stood in need.

36 For instance, Joseph, surnamed by the apostles Barnabas (which means 37 'Son of Exhortation'), a Levite, by birth a Cypriot, owned an estate, which he sold; he brought the money, and laid it at the apostles' feet.

5 But there was another man, called Ananias, with his wife Sapphira, who 2 sold a property. With the full knowledge of his wife he kept back part of the 3 purchase-money, and part he brought and laid at the apostles' feet. But Peter said, 'Ananias, how was it that Satan so possessed your mind that you 4 lied to the Holy Spirit, and kept back part of the price of the land? While it remained, did it not remain yours? When it was turned into money, was it not still at your own disposal? What made you think of doing this thing? 5 You have lied not to men but to God.' When Ananias heard these words he 6 dropped dead; and all the others who heard were awestruck. The younger men rose and covered his body, then carried him out and buried him.

7 About three hours passed, and then his wife came in, unaware of what 8 had happened. Peter turned to her and said, 'Tell me, were you paid such 9 and such a price for the land?' 'Yes,' she said, 'that was the price.' Then Peter said, 'Why did you both conspire to put the Spirit of the Lord to the test? Hark! there at the door are the footsteps of those who buried your 10 husband; and they will carry you away.' And suddenly she dropped dead at his feet. When the young men came in, they found her dead; and they carried her out and buried her beside her husband. And a great awe fell upon the whole church, and upon all who heard of these events; and many remarkable and wonderful things took place among the people at the hands of the apostles.

THEY USED TO MEET by common consent in Solomon's Portico, no one from outside their number venturing to join with them. But people in general spoke highly of them,^a and more than that, numbers of men and women were added to their ranks as believers in the Lord.^b In the end the sick were actually carried out into the streets and laid there on beds and stretchers, so that even the shadow of Peter might fall on one or another as he passed by; and the people from the towns round Jerusalem flocked in, bringing those who were ill or harassed by unclean spirits, and all of them were cured.

Then the High Priest and his colleagues, the Sadducean party as it then was, were goaded into action by jealousy. They proceeded to arrest the apostles, and put them in official custody. But an angel of the Lord opened the prison doors during the night, brought them out, and said, 'Go, take your place in the temple and speak to the people, and tell them about this new life and all it means.' Accordingly they entered the temple at day-break and went on with their teaching.

When the High Priest arrived with his colleagues they summoned the 'Sanhedrin', that is, the full senate of the Israelite nation, and sent to the jail to fetch the prisoners. But the police who went to the prison failed to find them there, so they returned and reported, 'We found the jail securely locked at every point, with the warders at their posts by the doors, but when we opened them we found no one inside.' When they heard this, the Controller of the Temple and the chief priests were wondering what could have become of them,^c and then a man arrived with the report, 'Look! the men you put in prison are there in the temple teaching the people.' At that the Controller went off with the police and fetched them, but without using force for fear of being stoned by the people.

So they brought them and stood them before the Council; and the High Priest began his examination. 'We expressly ordered you', he said, 'to desist from teaching in that name; and what has happened? You have filled Jerusalem with your teaching, and you are trying to make us responsible for that man's death.' Peter replied for himself and the apostles: 'We must obey God rather than men. The God of our fathers raised up Jesus whom you had done to death^d by hanging him on a gibbet. He it is whom God has exalted with his own right hand^e as leader and saviour, to grant Israel repentance and forgiveness of sins. And we are witnesses to all this, and so is the Holy Spirit given by God to those who are obedient to him.'

^d Or . . . Jesus, and you did him to death . . .

^e Or at his right hand.

- 33 This touched them on the raw, and they wanted to put them to death.
 34 But a member of the Council rose to his feet, a Pharisee called Gamaliel, a teacher of the law held in high regard by all the people. He moved that the 35 men be put outside for a while. Then he said, 'Men of Israel, be cautious in 36 deciding what to do with these men. Some time ago Theudas came forward, claiming to be somebody, and a number of men, about four hundred, 37 joined him. But he was killed and his whole following was broken up and disappeared. After him came Judas the Galilean at the time of the census;
 he induced some people to revolt under his leadership, but he too perished 38 and his whole following was scattered. And so now: keep clear of these men,
 I tell you; leave them alone. For if this idea of theirs or its execution is of 39 human origin, it will collapse; but if it is from God, you will never be able to put them down, and you risk finding yourselves at war with God.' 40 They took his advice. They sent for the apostles and had them flogged;
 then they ordered them to give up speaking in the name of Jesus, and dis-41 charged them. So the apostles went out from the Council rejoicing that they 42 had been found worthy to suffer indignity for the sake of the Name. And every day they went steadily on with their teaching in the temple and in private houses, telling the good news of Jesus the Messiah.^a

The church moves outwards

- 6 DURING THIS PERIOD, when disciples were growing in number, there was disagreement between those of them who spoke Greek^b and those who spoke the language of the Jews.^c The former party com-2 plained that their widows were being overlooked in the daily distribution.
 So the Twelve called the whole body of disciples together and said, 'It
 3 would be a grave mistake for us to neglect the word of God in order to wait at table. Therefore, friends, look out seven men of good reputation from 4 your number, men full of the Spirit and of wisdom, and we will appoint them to deal with these matters, while we devote ourselves to prayer and 5 to the ministry of the Word.' This proposal proved acceptable to the whole body. They elected Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Spirit, Philip, Prochorus, Nicanor, Timon, Parmenas, and Nicolas of Antioch, 6 a former convert to Judaism. These they presented to the apostles, who prayed and laid their hands on them.
 7 The word of God now spread more and more widely; the number of disciples in Jerusalem went on increasing rapidly, and very many of the priests adhered to the Faith.
 8 Stephen, who was full of grace and power, began to work great miracles 9 and signs among the people. But some members of the synagogue called the Synagogue of Freedmen, comprising Cyrenians and Alexandrians and people from Cilicia and Asia, came forward and argued with Stephen, 10 but could not hold their own against the inspired wisdom with which he 11 spoke. They then put up men who alleged that they had heard him make blasphemous statements against Moses and against God. They stirred up 12 the people and the elders and doctors of the law, set upon him and seized him, and brought him before the Council. They produced false witnesses 13 who said, 'This man is for ever saying things against this holy place and against the Law. For we have heard him say that Jesus of Nazareth will 14 destroy this place and alter the customs handed down to us by Moses.' And 15 all who were sitting in the Council fixed their eyes on him, and his face appeared to them like the face of an angel.

Then the High Priest asked, 'Is this so?' And he said, 'My brothers, 7 1 2 fathers of this nation, listen to me. The God of glory appeared to Abraham our ancestor while he was in Mesopotamia, before he had settled in Harran, and said: "Leave your country and your kinsfolk and come away to a land 3 that I will show you." Thereupon he left the land of the Chaldaeans and 4 settled in Harran. From there, after his father's death, God led him to migrate to this land where you now live. He gave him nothing in it to call 5 his own, not one yard; but promised to give it in possession to him and his descendants after him, though he was then childless. God spoke in these 6 terms: "Abraham's descendants shall live as aliens in a foreign land, held in slavery and oppression for four hundred years. And I will pass judge- 7 ment", said God, "on the nation whose slaves they are; and after that they shall come out free, and worship me in this place." He then gave him the 8 covenant of circumcision, and so, after Isaac was born, he circumcised him on the eighth day; and Isaac begot Jacob, and Jacob the twelve patriarchs.

'The patriarchs out of jealousy sold Joseph into slavery in Egypt, but 9 God was with him and rescued him from all his troubles. He also gave him a presence and powers of mind which so commended him to Pharaoh king 10 of Egypt, that he appointed him chief administrator for Egypt and the whole of the royal household.

'But famine struck all Egypt and Canaan, and caused great hardship; 11 and our ancestors could find nothing to eat. But Jacob heard that there was food in Egypt and sent our fathers there. This was their first visit. On 12 the second visit Joseph was recognized by his brothers, and his family con- 13 nections were disclosed to Pharaoh. So Joseph sent an invitation to his father Jacob and all his relatives, seventy-five persons altogether; and Jacob went 14 down into Egypt. There he ended his days, as also our forefathers did. 15
Their remains were later removed to Shechem and buried in the tomb which Abraham had bought and paid for from the clan of Emmor at 16 Shechem.

'Now as the time approached for God to fulfil the promise he had made 17 to Abraham, our nation in Egypt grew and increased in numbers. At length another king, who knew nothing of Joseph, ascended the throne of Egypt. 18
He made a crafty attack on our race, and cruelly forced our ancestors to expose their children so that they should not survive. At this time Moses 19 was born. He was a fine child, and pleasing to God. For three months he was nursed in his father's house, and when he was exposed, Pharaoh's 21 daughter herself adopted him and brought him up as her own son. So 22 Moses was trained in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, a powerful speaker and a man of action.

23 'He was approaching the age of forty, when it occurred to him to look 24 into the conditions of his fellow-countrymen the Israelites. He saw one of 25 them being ill-treated, so he went to his aid, and avenged the victim by 26 striking down the Egyptian. He thought his fellow-countrymen would 27 understand that God was offering them deliverance through him, but they 28 did not understand. The next day he came upon two of them fighting, and 29 tried to bring them to make up their quarrel. "My men," he said, "you are 30 brothers; why are you ill-treating one another?" But the man who was at 31 fault pushed him away. "Who set you up as a ruler and judge over us?"
32 he said. "Are you going to kill me as you killed the Egyptian yesterday?"
33 At this Moses fled the country and settled in Midianite territory. There 34 two sons were born to him.

30 'After forty years had passed, an angel appeared to him in the flame of a 31 burning bush in the desert near Mount Sinai. Moses was amazed at the 32 sight. But as he approached to look closely, the voice of the Lord was heard:
33 "I am the God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob."
34 Moses was terrified and dared not look. Then the Lord said to him, "Take 35 off your shoes; the place where you are standing is holy ground. I have indeed seen how my people are oppressed in Egypt and have heard their groans; and I have come down to rescue them. Up, then; let me send you to Egypt."

35 'This Moses, whom they had rejected with the words, "Who made you 36 ruler and judge?"—this very man was commissioned as ruler and liberator 37 by God himself, speaking through the angel who appeared to him in the 38 bush. It was Moses who led them out, working miracles and signs in Egypt, 39 at the Red Sea, and for forty years in the desert. It was he again who said
40 to the Israelites, "God will raise up a prophet for you from among yourselves 41 as he raised me."^a He it was who, when they were assembled there in the 42 desert, conversed with the angel who spoke to him on Mount Sinai, and 43 with our forefathers; he received the living utterances of God, to pass 44 on to us.

39 'But our forefathers would not accept his leadership. They thrust him 40 aside. They wished themselves back in Egypt, and said to Aaron, "Make 41 us gods to go before us. As for that Moses, who brought us out of Egypt, 42 we do not know what has become of him." That was when they made the 43 bull-calf, and offered sacrifice to the idol, and held a feast in honour of the 44 thing their hands had made. But God turned away from them and gave 45 them over to the worship of the host of heaven, as it stands written in the 46 book of the prophets: "Did you bring me victims and offerings those forty 47 years in the desert, you house of Israel? No, you carried aloft the shrine of 48 Moloch and the star of the god Rephan, the images which you had made 49 for your adoration. I will banish you beyond Babylon."

44 'Our forefathers had the Tent of the Testimony in the desert, as God 45 commanded when he told Moses to make it after the pattern which he had 46 seen. Our fathers of the next generation, with Joshua, brought it with them 47 when they dispossessed the nations whom God drove out before them, and 48 there it was until the time of David. David found favour with God and asked to be allowed to provide a dwelling-place for the God of Jacob;^a but it was Solomon who built him a house. However, the Most High does not live in houses made by men: as the prophet says, "Heaven is my throne and earth my footstool. What kind of house will you build for me, says the Lord; where is my resting-place? Are not all these things of my own making?"

'How stubborn you are, heathen still at heart and deaf to the truth! You always fight against the Holy Spirit. Like fathers, like sons. Was there ever a prophet whom your fathers did not persecute? They killed those who foretold the coming of the Righteous One; and now you have betrayed him and murdered him, you who received the Law as God's angels gave it to you, and yet have not kept it.'

This touched them on the raw and they ground their teeth with fury. But Stephen, filled with the Holy Spirit, and gazing intently up to heaven, saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing at God's right hand. 'Look,' he said, 'there is a rift in the sky; I can see the Son of Man standing at God's right hand!' At this they gave a great shout and stopped their ears. Then they made one rush at him and, flinging him out of the city, set about stoning him. The witnesses laid their coats at the feet of a young man named Saul. So they stoned Stephen, and as they did so, he called out, 'Lord Jesus, receive my spirit.' Then he fell on his knees and cried aloud, 'Lord, do not hold this sin against them', and with that he died. And Saul was among those who approved of his murder.

THIS WAS THE BEGINNING of a time of violent persecution for the church in Jerusalem; and all except the apostles were scattered over the country districts of Judaea and Samaria. Stephen was given burial by certain devout men, who made a great lamentation for him. Saul, meanwhile, was harring the church; he entered house after house, seizing men and women, and sending them to prison.

As for those who had been scattered, they went through the country preaching the Word. Philip came down to a city in Samaria and began proclaiming the Messiah to them. The crowds, to a man, listened eagerly to what Philip said, when they heard him and saw the miracles that he performed. For in many cases of possession the unclean spirits came out with a loud cry; and many paralysed and crippled folk were cured; and there was great joy in that city.

A man named Simon had been in the city for some time, and had swept the Samaritans off their feet with his magical arts, claiming to be someone great. All of them, high and low, listened eagerly to him. 'This man', they said, 'is that power of God which is called "The Great Power".' They listened because they had for so long been carried away by his magic. But when they came to believe Philip with his good news about the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, men and women alike. Even Simon himself believed, and was baptized, and thereupon was constantly in Philip's company. He was carried away when he saw the powerful signs and miracles that were taking place.

^a Some witnesses read for the house of Jacob.

14 The apostles in Jerusalem now heard that Samaria had accepted the 15 word of God. They sent off Peter and John, who went down there and prayed for the converts, asking that they might receive the Holy Spirit.
16 For until then the Spirit had not come upon any of them. They had been 17 baptized into the name of the Lord Jesus, that and nothing more. So Peter and John laid their hands on them and they received the Holy Spirit.

18 When Simon saw that the Spirit was bestowed through the laying on of 19 the apostles' hands, he offered them money and said, 'Give me the same power too, so that when I lay my hands on anyone, he will receive the Holy 20 Spirit.' Peter replied, 'Your money go with you to damnation, because you 21 thought God's gift was for sale! You have no part nor lot in this, for you 22 are dishonest with God. Repent of this wickedness and pray the Lord to 23 forgive you for imagining such a thing. I can see that you are doomed to 24 taste the bitter fruit and wear the fetters of sin.'^a Simon answered, 'Pray to the Lord for me yourselves and ask that none of the things you have spoken of may fall upon me.'

25 So, after giving their testimony and speaking the word of the Lord, they took the road back to Jerusalem, bringing the good news to many Samaritan villages on the way.

26 Then the angel of the Lord said to Philip, 'Start out and go south to the road that leads down from Jerusalem to Gaza.' (This is the desert road.) 27 So he set out and was on his way when he caught sight of an Ethiopian.
This man was a eunuch, a high official of the Kandake, or Queen, of Ethiopia, in charge of all her treasure. He had been to Jerusalem on a 28 pilgrimage and was now on his way home, sitting in his carriage and read-29 ing aloud the prophet Isaiah. The Spirit said to Philip, 'Go and join the 30 carriage.' When Philip ran up he heard him reading the prophet Isaiah 31 and said, 'Do you understand what you are reading?' He said, 'How can I understand unless someone will give me the clue?' So he asked Philip to get in and sit beside him.

32 The passage he was reading was this: 'He was led like a sheep to be slaughtered; and like a lamb that is dumb before the shearer, he does 33 not open his mouth. He has been humiliated and has no redress. Who will be able to speak of his posterity? For he is cut off from the world of living men.'

34 'Now', said the eunuch to Philip, 'tell me, please, who it is that the 35 prophet is speaking about here: himself or someone else?' Then Philip 36 began. Starting from this passage, he told him the good news of Jesus. As they were going along the road, they came to some water. 'Look,' said the eunuch, 'here is water: what is there to prevent my being baptized?';^b 38 and he ordered the carriage to stop. Then they both went down into the 39 water, Philip and the eunuch; and he baptized him. When they came up out of the water the Spirit snatched Philip away, and the eunuch saw no 40 more of him, but went happily on his way. Philip appeared at Azotus, and toured the country, preaching in all the towns till he reached Caesarea.

^a Literally you are for gall of bitterness and a fetter of unrighteousness.

^b Some witnesses insert (37) Philip said, 'If you whole-heartedly believe, it is permitted.'
He replied, 'I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God.'

MEANWHILE SAUL was still breathing murderous threats against the disciples of the Lord. He went to the High Priest and applied for letters to the synagogues at Damascus authorizing him to arrest anyone he found, men or women, who followed the new way, and bring them to Jerusalem. While he was still on the road and nearing Damascus, suddenly a light flashed from the sky all around him. He fell to the ground and heard a voice saying, 'Saul, Saul, why do you persecute me?' 'Tell me, Lord,' he said, 'who you are.' The voice answered, 'I am Jesus, whom you are persecuting. But get up and go into the city, and you will be told what you have to do.' Meanwhile the men who were travelling with him stood speechless; they heard the voice but could see no one. Saul got up from the ground, but when he opened his eyes he could not see; so they led him by the hand and brought him into Damascus. He was blind for three days, and took no food or drink.

There was a disciple in Damascus named Ananias. He had a vision in which he heard the voice of the Lord: 'Ananias!' 'Here I am, Lord', he answered. The Lord said to him, 'Go at once to Straight Street, to the house of Judas, and ask for a man from Tarsus named Saul. You will find him at prayer; he has had a vision of a man named Ananias coming in and laying his hands on him to restore his sight.' Ananias answered, 'Lord, I have often heard about this man and all the harm he has done to thy people in Jerusalem. And he is here with authority from the chief priests to arrest all who invoke thy name.' But the Lord said to him, 'You must go, for this man is my chosen instrument to bring my name before the nations and their kings, and before the people of Israel. I myself will show him all that he must go through for my name's sake.'

So Ananias went. He entered the house, laid his hands on him and said, 'Saul, my brother, the Lord Jesus, who appeared to you on your way here, has sent me to you so that you may recover your sight, and be filled with the Holy Spirit.' And immediately it seemed that scales fell from his eyes, and he regained his sight. Thereupon he was baptized, and afterwards he took food and his strength returned.

He stayed some time with the disciples in Damascus. Soon he was proclaiming Jesus publicly in the synagogues: 'This', he said, 'is the Son of God.' All who heard were astounded. 'Is not this the man', they said, 'who was in Jerusalem trying to destroy those who invoke this name? Did he not come here for the sole purpose of arresting them and taking them to the chief priests?' But Saul grew more and more forceful, and silenced the Jews of Damascus with his cogent proofs that Jesus was the Messiah.

As the days mounted up, the Jews hatched a plot against his life; but their plans became known to Saul. They kept watch on the city gates day and night so that they might murder him; but his converts took him one night and let him down by the wall, lowering him in a basket.

26

When he reached Jerusalem he tried to join the body of disciples there; but they were all afraid of him, because they did not believe that he was really a convert. Barnabas, however, took him by the hand and introduced him to the apostles. He described to them how Saul had seen the Lord on his journey, and heard his voice, and how he had spoken out boldly in the 28 name of Jesus at Damascus. Saul now stayed with them, moving about 29 freely in Jerusalem. He spoke out boldly and openly in the name of the Lord, talking and debating with the Greek-speaking Jews.^a But they 30 planned to murder him, and when the brethren learned of this they escorted him to Caesarea and saw him off to Tarsus.

31 MEANWHILE THE CHURCH, throughout Judaea, Galilee, and Samaria, was left in peace to build up its strength. In the fear of the Lord, upheld by the Holy Spirit, it held on its way and grew in numbers.

32 Peter was making a general tour, in the course of which he went down to 33 visit God's people at Lydda. There he found a man named Aeneas who had 34 been bed-ridden with paralysis for eight years. Peter said to him, 'Aeneas, Jesus Christ cures you; get up and make your bed', and immediately he 35 stood up. All who lived in Lydda and Sharon saw him; and they turned to the Lord.

36 In Joppa there was a disciple named Tabitha (in Greek, Dorcas, mean-37 ing a gazelle), who filled her days with acts of kindness and charity. At that time she fell ill and died; and they washed her body and laid it in a room 38 upstairs. As Lydda was near Joppa, the disciples, who had heard that Peter was there, sent two men to him with the urgent request, 'Please come over 39 to us without delay.' Peter thereupon went off with them. When he arrived they took him upstairs to the room, where all the widows came and stood round him in tears, showing him the shirts and coats that Dorcas used to 40 make while she was with them. Peter sent them all outside, and knelt down and prayed. Then, turning towards the body, he said, 'Get up, Tabitha.' 41 She opened her eyes, saw Peter, and sat up. He gave her his hand and helped her to her feet. Then he called the members of the congregation 42 and the widows and showed her to them alive. The news spread all over 43 Joppa, and many came to believe in the Lord. Peter stayed on in Joppa for some time with one Simon, a tanner.

10 At Caesarea there was a man named Cornelius, a centurion in the Italian
2 Cohort, as it was called. He was a religious man, and he and his whole family joined in the worship of God. He gave generously to help the Jewish 3 people, and was regular in his prayers to God. One day about three in the afternoon he had a vision in which he clearly saw an angel of God, who 4 came into his room and said, 'Cornelius!' He stared at him in terror. 'What is it, my lord?' he asked. The angel said, 'Your prayers and acts of charity 5 have gone up to heaven to speak for you before God. And now send to 6 Joppa for a man named Simon, also called Peter: he is lodging with another 7 Simon, a tanner, whose house is by the sea.' So when the angel who was speaking to him had gone, he summoned two of his servants and a military 8 orderly who was a religious man, told them the whole story, and sent them to Joppa.

9 Next day, while they were still on their way and approaching the city, 10 about noon Peter went up on the roof to pray. He grew hungry and wanted something to eat. While they were getting it ready, he fell into a trance.
11 He saw a rift in the sky, and a thing coming down that looked like a great sheet of sail-cloth. It was slung by the four corners, and was being lowered to the ground. In it he saw creatures of every kind, whatever walks or crawls or flies. Then there was a voice which said to him, 'Up, Peter, kill and eat.' But Peter said, 'No, Lord, no: I have never eaten anything profane or unclean.' The voice came again a second time: 'It is not for you to call profane what God counts clean.' This happened three times; and then the thing was taken up again into the sky.

While Peter was still puzzling over the meaning of the vision he had seen, the messengers of Cornelius had been asking the way to Simon's house, and now arrived at the entrance. They called out and asked if Simon Peter was lodging there. But Peter was thinking over the vision, when the Spirit said to him, 'Some ^a men are here looking for you; make haste and go downstairs. You may go with them without any misgiving, for it was I who sent them.' Peter came down to the men and said, 'You are looking for me? Here I am. What brings you here?' 'We are from the centurion Cornelius,' they replied, 'a good and religious man, acknowledged as such by the whole Jewish nation. He was directed by a holy angel to send for you to his house and to listen to what you have to say.' So Peter asked them in and gave them a night's lodging. Next day he set out with them, accompanied by some members of the congregation at Joppa.

The day after that, he arrived at Caesarea. Cornelius was expecting them and had called together his relatives and close friends. When Peter arrived, Cornelius came to meet him, and bowed to the ground in deep reverence. But Peter raised him to his feet and said, 'Stand up; I am a man like anyone else.' Still talking with him he went in and found a large gathering. He said to them, 'I need not tell you that a Jew is forbidden by his religion to visit or associate with a man of another race; yet God has shown me clearly that I must not call any man profane or unclean. That is why I came here without demur when you sent for me. May I ask what was your reason for sending?'

Cornelius said, 'Four days ago, just about this time, I was in the house here saying the afternoon prayers, when suddenly a man in shining robes stood before me. He said: "Cornelius, your prayer has been heard and your acts of charity remembered before God. Send to Joppa, then, to Simon Peter, and ask him to come. He is lodging in the house of Simon the tanner, by the sea." So I sent to you there and then; it was kind of you to come. And now we are all met here before God, to hear all that the Lord has ordered you to say.'

Peter began: 'I now see how true it is that God has no favourites, but that in every nation the man who is godfearing and does what is right is acceptable to him. He sent his word to the Israelites and gave the good news of peace through Jesus Christ, who is Lord of all. I need not tell you what happened lately all over the land of the Jews, starting from Galilee after the baptism proclaimed by John. You know about Jesus of Nazareth, how God anointed him with the Holy Spirit and with power. He went about doing good and healing all who were oppressed by the devil, for God was with him. And we can bear witness to all that he did in the Jewish country-side and in Jerusalem. He was put to death by hanging on a 40 gibbet; but God raised him to life on the third day, and allowed him to 41 appear, not to the whole people, but to witnesses whom God had chosen in advance—to us, who ate and drank with him after he rose from the dead.

42 He commanded us to proclaim him to the people, and affirm that he is the one who has been designated by God as judge of the living and the dead.
43 It is to him that all the prophets testify, declaring that everyone who trusts in him receives forgiveness of sins through his name.⁷

44 Peter was still speaking when the Holy Spirit came upon all who were 45 listening to the message. The believers who had come with Peter, men of Jewish birth, were astonished that the gift of the Holy Spirit should have 46 been poured out even on Gentiles. For they could hear them speaking in tongues of ecstasy and acclaiming the greatness of God. Then Peter spoke:
47 'Is anyone prepared to withhold the water for baptism from these persons, 48 who have received the Holy Spirit just as we did ourselves?' Then he ordered them to be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ. After that they asked him to stay on with them for a time.

11 News came to the apostles and the members of the church in Judaea
2 that Gentiles too had accepted the word of God; and when Peter came up to Jerusalem those who were of Jewish birth raised the question with him.
3 'You have been visiting men who are uncircumcised,' they said, 'and sitting 4 at table with them!' Peter began by laying before them the facts as they had happened.

5 'I was in the city of Joppa', he said, 'at prayer; and while in a trance I had a vision: a thing was coming down that looked like a great sheet of sail-cloth, slung by the four corners and lowered from the sky till it reached me.
6 I looked intently to make out what was in it and I saw four-footed creatures
7 of the earth, wild beasts, and things that crawl or fly. Then I heard a voice
8 saying to me, "Up, Peter, kill and eat." But I said, "No, Lord, no: nothing 9 profane or unclean has ever entered my mouth." A voice from heaven answered a second time, "It is not for you to call profane what God counts 10 clean." This happened three times, and then they were all drawn up again 11 into the sky. At that moment three men, who had been sent to me from 12 Caesarea, arrived at the house where I was^a staying; and the Spirit told me to go with them.^b My six companions here came with me and we went 13 into the man's house. He told us how he had seen an angel standing in his 14 house who said, "Send to Joppa for Simon also called Peter. He will speak 15 words that will bring salvation to you and all your household." Hardly had
I begun speaking, when the Holy Spirit came upon them, just as upon us 16 at the beginning. Then I recalled what the Lord had said: "John baptized 17 with water, but you will be baptized with the Holy Spirit." God gave them no less a gift than he gave us when we put our trust in the Lord Jesus Christ; then how could I possibly stand in God's way?

18 When they heard this their doubts were silenced. They gave praise to God and said, 'This means that God has granted life-giving repentance to the Gentiles also.'

^a Some witnesses read we were.

^b Some witnesses add making no distinctions: others add without any misgiving, as in 10. 20.

MEANWHILE THOSE who had been scattered after the persecution that arose over Stephen made their way to Phoenicia, Cyprus, and Antioch, bringing the message to Jews only and to no others. But there were some natives of Cyprus and Cyrene among them, and these, when they arrived at Antioch, began to speak to Gentiles as well, telling them the good news of the Lord Jesus. The power of the Lord was with them, and a great many became believers, and turned to the Lord.

The news reached the ears of the church in Jerusalem; and they sent Barnabas to Antioch. When he arrived and saw the divine grace at work, he rejoiced, and encouraged them all to hold fast to the Lord with resolute hearts; for he was a good man, full of the Holy Spirit and of faith. And large numbers were won over to the Lord.

He then went off to Tarsus to look for Saul; and when he had found him, he brought him to Antioch. For a whole year the two of them lived in fellowship with the congregation there, and gave instruction to large numbers. It was in Antioch that the disciples first got the name of Christians.

During this period some prophets came down from Jerusalem to Antioch. One of them, Agabus by name, was inspired to stand up and predict a severe and world-wide famine, which in fact occurred in the reign of Claudius. So the disciples agreed to make a contribution, each according to his means, for the relief of their fellow-Christians in Judaea. This they did, and sent it off to the elders, in the charge of Barnabas and Saul.

IT WAS ABOUT THIS TIME that King Herod attacked certain members of the church. He beheaded James, the brother of John, and then, when he saw that the Jews approved, proceeded to arrest Peter also. This happened during the festival of Unleavened Bread. Having secured him, he put him in prison under a military guard, four squads of four men each, meaning to produce him in public after Passover. So Peter was kept in prison under constant watch, while the church kept praying fervently for him to God.

On the very night before Herod had planned to bring him forward, Peter was asleep between two soldiers, secured by two chains, while outside the doors sentries kept guard over the prison. All at once an angel of the Lord stood there, and the cell was ablaze with light. He tapped Peter on the shoulder and woke him. 'Quick! Get up', he said, and the chains fell away from his wrists. The angel then said to him, 'Do up your belt and put your sandals on.' He did so. 'Now wrap your cloak round you and follow me.' He followed him out, with no idea that the angel's intervention was real: he thought it was just a vision. But they passed the first guard-post, then the second, and reached the iron gate leading out into the city, which opened for them of its own accord. And so they came out and walked the length of one street; and the angel left him.

Then Peter came to himself. 'Now I know it is true,' he said; 'the Lord has sent his angel and rescued me from Herod's clutches and from all that the Jewish people were expecting.' When he realized how things stood, he made for the house of Mary, the mother of John Mark, where a large

13 company was at prayer. He knocked at the outer door and a maid called 14 Rhoda came to answer it. She recognized Peter's voice and was so overjoyed that instead of opening the door she ran in and announced that Peter was 15 standing outside. 'You are crazy', they told her; but she insisted that it was so. Then they said, 'It must be his guardian angel.'

16 Meanwhile Peter went on knocking, and when they opened the door and 17 saw him, they were astounded. With a movement of the hand he signed to them to keep quiet, and told them how the Lord had brought him out of prison. 'Report this to James and the members of the church', he said.
 Then he left the house and went off elsewhere.

18 When morning came, there was consternation among the soldiers: what 19 could have become of Peter? Herod made close search, but failed to find him, so he interrogated the guards and ordered their execution.

20 Afterwards he left Judaea to reside for a time at Caesarea. He had for some time been furiously angry with the people of Tyre and Sidon, who now by common agreement presented themselves at his court. There they won over Blastus the royal chamberlain, and sued for peace, because their 21 country drew its supplies from the king's territory. So, on an appointed day, attired in his royal robes and seated on the rostrum, Herod harangued 22 them; and the populace shouted back, 'It is a god speaking, not a man!'
 23 Instantly an angel of the Lord struck him down, because he had usurped the honour due to God; he was eaten up with worms and died.

24 Meanwhile the word of God continued to grow and spread.

25 Barnabas and Saul, their task fulfilled, returned from Jerusalem,^a taking John Mark with them.

The church breaks barriers

13 THERE WERE AT ANTIOCH, in the congregation there, certain prophets and teachers: Barnabas, Simeon called Niger, Lucius of Cyrene, 2 Manaen, who had been at the court of Prince Herod, and Saul. While they were keeping a fast and offering worship to the Lord, the Holy Spirit said, 'Set Barnabas and Saul apart for me, to do the work to which I have called 3 them.' Then, after further fasting and prayer, they laid their hands on them and let them go.

4 So these two, sent out on their mission by the Holy Spirit, came down to 5 Seleucia, and from there sailed to Cyprus. Arriving at Salamis, they declared the word of God in the Jewish synagogues. They had John with 6 them as their assistant. They went through the whole island as far as Paphos, and there they came upon a sorcerer, a Jew who posed as a prophet, 7 Bar-Jesus by name. He was in the retinue of the Governor, Sergius Paulus, an intelligent man, who had sent for Barnabas and Saul and wanted to 8 hear the word of God. This Elymas the sorcerer (so his name may be translated) opposed them, trying to turn the Governor away from the 9 Faith. But Saul, also known as Paul, filled with the Holy Spirit, fixed his eyes on him and said, 'You swindler, you rascal, son of the devil and enemy 10 of all goodness, will you never stop falsifying the straight ways of the Lord?

Look now, the hand of the Lord strikes: you shall be blind, and for a time 11 you shall not see the sunlight.' Instantly mist and darkness came over him and he groped about for someone to lead him by the hand. When the 12 Governor saw what had happened he became a believer, deeply impressed by what he learned about the Lord.

Leaving Paphos, Paul and his companions went by sea to Perga in Pam- 13 phylia; John, however, left them and returned to Jerusalem. From Perga 14 they continued their journey as far as Pisidian Antioch. On the Sabbath they went to synagogue and took their seats; and after the readings from 15 the Law and the prophets, the officials of the synagogue sent this message to them: 'Friends, if you have anything to say to the people by way of exhortation, let us hear it.' Paul rose, made a gesture with his hand, and began: 16

'Men of Israel and you who worship our God, listen to me! The God 17 of this people of Israel chose our fathers. When they were still living as aliens in Egypt he made them into a nation and brought them out of that country with arm outstretched. For some forty years he bore with their 18 conduct^a in the desert. Then in the Canaanite country he overthrew seven nations, whose lands he gave them to be their heritage for some four 19 hundred and fifty years, and afterwards appointed judges for them until the time of the prophet Samuel. 20

'Then they asked for a king and God gave them Saul the son of Kish, 21 a man of the tribe of Benjamin, who reigned for forty years. Then he removed him and set up David as their king, giving him his approval in these words: "I have found David son of Jesse to be a man after my own 22 heart, who will carry out all my purposes." This is the man from whose posterity God, as he promised, has brought Israel a saviour, Jesus. John 23 made ready for his coming by proclaiming baptism as a token of repentance to the whole people of Israel. And when John was nearing the end of 24 his course, he said, "I am not what you think I am. No, after me comes one whose shoes I am not fit to unfasten." 25

'My brothers, you who come of the stock of Abraham, and others 26
among you who revere our God, we are the people to whom the message of this salvation has been sent. The people of Jerusalem and their rulers 27 did not recognize him, or understand the words of the prophets which are read Sabbath by Sabbath; indeed they fulfilled them by condemning him.
Though they failed to find grounds for the sentence of death, they asked 28 Pilate to have him executed. And when they had carried out all that the scriptures said about him, they took him down from the gibbet and laid 29 him in a tomb. But God raised him from the dead; and there was a period 30 31 of many days during which he appeared to those who had come up with him from Galilee to Jerusalem.

'They are now his witnesses before our nation; and we are here to give 32 you the good news that God, who made the promise to the fathers, has fulfilled it for the children^b by raising Jesus from the dead, as indeed it 33 stands written, in the second^a Psalm: "You are my son; this day I have begotten you." Again, that he raised him from the dead, never again to revert to corruption, he declares in these words: "I will give you the blessings promised to David, holy and sure." This is borne out by another passage: "Thou wilt not let thy loyal servant suffer corruption." As for David, when he had served the purpose of God in his own generation, he died, and was gathered to his fathers, and suffered corruption; but the one whom God raised up did not suffer corruption; and you must understand, my brothers, that it is through him that forgiveness of sins is now being proclaimed to you. It is through him that everyone who has faith is acquitted of everything for which there was no acquittal under the Law of Moses. Beware, then, lest you bring down upon yourselves the doom proclaimed by the prophets: "See this, you scoffers, wonder, and begone; for I am doing a deed in your days, a deed which you will never believe when you are told of it."

As they were leaving the synagogue they were asked to come again and speak on these subjects next Sabbath; and after the congregation had dispersed, many Jews and gentile worshippers went along with Paul and Barnabas, who spoke to them and urged them to hold fast to the grace of God.

On the following Sabbath almost the whole city gathered to hear the word of God. When the Jews saw the crowds, they were filled with jealous resentment, and contradicted what Paul said, with violent abuse. But Paul and Barnabas were outspoken in their reply. 'It was necessary', they said, 'that the word of God should be declared to you first. But since you reject it and thus condemn yourselves as unworthy of eternal life, we now turn to the Gentiles. For these are our instructions from the Lord: "I have appointed you to be a light for the Gentiles, and a means of salvation to earth's farthest bounds."' When the Gentiles heard this, they were overjoyed and thankfully acclaimed the word of the Lord, and those who were marked out for eternal life became believers. So the word of the Lord spread far and wide through the region. But the Jews stirred up feeling among the women of standing who were worshippers, and among the leading men of the city; a persecution was started against Paul and Barnabas, and they were expelled from the district. So they shook the dust off their feet in protest against them and went to Iconium. And the converts were filled with joy and with the Holy Spirit.

At Iconium similarly they went^b into the Jewish synagogue and spoke to such purpose that a large body both of Jews and Gentiles became believers. But the unconverted Jews stirred up the Gentiles and poisoned their minds against the Christians. For some time Paul and Barnabas stayed on and spoke boldly and openly in reliance on the Lord; and he confirmed the message of his grace by causing signs and miracles to be worked at their hands. The mass of the townspeople were divided, some siding with the Jews, others with the apostles. But when a move was made by Gentiles and Jews together, with the connivance of the city authorities, to maltreat them and stone them, they got wind of it and made their escape to the

Lycaonian cities of Lystra and Derbe and the surrounding country, where they continued to spread the good news. 7

At Lystra sat a crippled man, lame from birth, who had never walked in his life. This man listened while Paul was speaking. Paul fixed his eyes on him and saw that he had the faith to be cured, so he said to him in a loud voice, 'Stand up straight on your feet'; and he sprang up and started to walk. When the crowds saw what Paul had done, they shouted, in their native Lycaonian, 'The gods have come down to us in human form.' And they called Barnabas Jupiter, and Paul they called Mercury, because he was the spokesman. And the priest of Jupiter, whose temple was just outside the city, brought oxen and garlands to the gates, and he and all the people were about to offer sacrifice. 8 9 10 11 12

But when the apostles Barnabas and Paul heard of it, they tore their clothes and rushed into the crowd shouting, 'Men, what is this that you are doing? We are only human beings, no less mortal than you. The good news we bring tells you to turn from these follies to the living God, who made heaven and earth and sea and everything in them. In past ages he allowed all nations to go their own way; and yet he has not left you without some clue to his nature, in the kindness he shows: he sends you rain from heaven and crops in their seasons, and gives you food and good cheer in plenty.' 14 15 16 17

With these words they barely managed to prevent the crowd from offering sacrifice to them. 18

Then Jews from Antioch and Iconium came on the scene and won over the crowds. They stoned Paul, and dragged him out of the city, thinking him dead. The converts formed a ring round him, and he got to his feet and went into the city. Next day he left with Barnabas for Derbe. 19 20

After bringing the good news to that town, where they gained many converts, they returned to Lystra, then to Iconium, and then to Antioch, heartening the converts and encouraging them to be true to their religion. They warned them that to enter the kingdom of God we must pass through many hardships. They also appointed elders for them in each congregation, and with prayer and fasting committed them to the Lord in whom they had put their faith. 21 22 23

Then they passed through Pisidia and came into Pamphylia. When they had given the message at Perga, they went down to Attalia, and from there set sail for Antioch, where they had originally been commended to the grace of God for the task which they had now completed. When they arrived and had called the congregation together, they reported all that God had done through them, and how he had thrown open the gates of faith to the Gentiles. And they stayed for some time with the disciples there. 24 25 26 27 28

NOW CERTAIN PERSONS who had come down from Judaea began to teach the brotherhood that those who were not circumcised in accordance with Mosaic practice could not be saved. That brought them into fierce dissension and controversy with Paul and Barnabas. And so it was arranged that these two and some others from Antioch should go up to Jerusalem to see the apostles and elders about this question. 15 2

3 They were sent on their way by the congregation, and travelled through Phoenicia and Samaria, telling the full story of the conversion of the Gentiles. The news caused great rejoicing among all the Christians there.

4 When they reached Jerusalem they were welcomed by the church and the apostles and elders, and reported all that God had done through them.
5 Then some of the Pharisaic party who had become believers came forward and said, 'They must be circumcised and told to keep the Law of Moses.'

6 7 The apostles and elders held a meeting to look into this matter; and, after a long debate, Peter rose and addressed them. 'My friends,' he said, 'in the early days, as you yourselves know, God made his choice among you and ordained that from my lips the Gentiles should hear and believe
8 the message of the Gospel. And God, who can read men's minds, showed his approval of them by giving the Holy Spirit to them, as he did to us.
9 He made no difference between them and us; for he purified their hearts
10 by faith. Then why do you now provoke God by laying on the shoulders of these converts a yoke which neither we nor our fathers were able to 11 bear? No, we believe that it is by the grace of the Lord Jesus that we are saved, and so are they.'

12 At that the whole company fell silent and listened to Barnabas and Paul as they told of all the signs and miracles that God had worked among the Gentiles through them.

13 When they had finished speaking, James summed up: 'My friends,' he 14 said, 'listen to me. Simeon has told how it first happened that God took 15 notice of the Gentiles, to choose from among them a people to bear his name; and this agrees with the words of the prophets, as Scripture has it:

16 "Thereafter I will return and rebuild the fallen house of David;
even from its ruins I will rebuild it, and set it up again, 17 that they may seek the Lord—all the rest of mankind,
and the Gentiles, whom I have claimed for my own.
Thus says the Lord, whose work it is,
18 made known long ago."

19 'My judgement therefore is that we should impose no irksome restric-20 tions on those of the Gentiles who are turning to God, but instruct them by letter to abstain from things polluted by contact with idols, from fornication, 21 from anything that has been strangled, and from blood.^a Moses, after all, has never lacked spokesmen in every town for generations past;
he is read in the synagogues Sabbath by Sabbath.'

22 Then the apostles and elders, with the agreement of the whole church, resolved to choose representatives and send them to Antioch with Paul and Barnabas. They chose two leading men in the community, Judas Barsabbas 23 and Silas, and gave them this letter to deliver:

24 'We, the apostles and elders, send greetings as brothers to our brothers of gentile origin in Antioch, Syria, and Cilicia. Forasmuch as we have heard that some of our number, without any instructions from us, have ^b disturbed you with their talk and unsettled your minds, we have resolved 25 unanimously to send to you our chosen representatives with our well- 26 beloved Barnabas and Paul, who have devoted themselves to the cause of 27 our Lord Jesus Christ. We are therefore sending Judas and Silas, who will 28 themselves confirm this by word of mouth. It is the decision of the Holy 29 Spirit, and our decision, to lay no further burden upon you beyond these 30 essentials: you are to abstain from meat that has been offered to idols, from 31 blood, from anything that has been strangled,^a and from fornication.^b If 32 you keep yourselves free from these things you will be doing right. 33

 Farewell.^c

So they were sent off on their journey and travelled down to Antioch, 30 where they called the congregation together, and delivered the letter. 31
 When it was read, they all rejoiced at the encouragement it brought. Judas 31 32 and Silas, who were prophets themselves, said much to encourage and 33 strengthen the members, and, after spending some time there, were dis- 34 missed with the good wishes of the brethren, to return to those who had 35 sent them.^c But Paul and Barnabas stayed on at Antioch, and there, along 36 with many others, they taught and preached the word of the Lord.

Paul leads the advance

AFTER A WHILE Paul said to Barnabas, 'Ought we not to go back now 36 to see how our brothers are faring in the various towns where we 37 proclaimed the word of the Lord?' Barnabas wanted to take John Mark 38 with them; but Paul judged that the man who had deserted them in 39 Pamphylia and had not gone on to share in their work was not the man to 40 take with them now. The dispute was so sharp that they parted company. 41
 Barnabas took Mark with him and sailed for Cyprus, while Paul chose Silas. 42
 He started on his journey, commended by the brothers to the grace of the 43
 Lord, and travelled through Syria and Cilicia bringing new strength to the 44 congregations.

He went on to Derbe and to Lystra, and there he found a disciple named 16
 Timothy, the son of a Jewish Christian mother and a Gentile father. He 2 was well spoken of by the Christians at Lystra and Iconium, and Paul 3 wanted to have him in his company when he left the place. So he took him 4 and circumcised him, out of consideration for the Jews who lived in those 5 parts; for they all knew that his father was a Gentile. As they made their 6 way from town to town they handed on the decisions taken by the apostles 7 and elders in Jerusalem and enjoined their observance. And so, day by day, 8 the congregations grew stronger in faith and increased in numbers.

They travelled through the Phrygian and Galatian region,^d because 6 they were prevented by the Holy Spirit from delivering the message in 7
 the province of Asia; and when they approached the Mysian border they 8

8 tried to enter Bithynia; but the Spirit of Jesus would not allow them, so 9 they skirted^a Mysia and reached the coast at Troas. During the night a 10 vision came to Paul: a Macedonian stood there appealing to him and saying, 'Come across to Macedonia and help us.' After he had seen this vision he had called us to bring them the good news.

11 So we sailed from Troas and made a straight run to Samothrace, the 12 next day to Neapolis, and from there to Philippi, a city of the first rank in that district of Macedonia, and a Roman colony. Here we stayed for some 13 days, and on the Sabbath day we went outside the city gate by the riverside, where we thought there would be a place of prayer,^b and sat down and 14 talked to the women who had gathered there. One of them named Lydia, a dealer in purple fabric from the city of Thyatira, who was a worshipper of God, was listening, and the Lord opened her heart to respond to what 15 Paul said. She was baptized, and her household with her, and then she said to us, 'If you have judged me to be a believer in the Lord, I beg you to come and stay in my house.' And she insisted on our going.

16 Once, when we were on our way to the place of prayer, we met a slave-girl who was possessed by an oracular spirit and brought large profits to 17 her owners by telling fortunes. She followed Paul and the rest of us, shouting, 'These men are servants of the Supreme God, and are declaring to you 18 a way of salvation.' She did this day after day, until Paul could bear it no longer. Rounding on the spirit he said, 'I command you in the name of Jesus Christ to come out of her', and it went out there and then.

19 When the girl's owners saw that their hope of gain had gone, they seized
Paul and Silas and dragged them to the city authorities in the main square; 20 and bringing them before the magistrates, they said, 'These men are causing a disturbance in our city; they are Jews; they are advocating 21 customs which it is illegal for us Romans to adopt and follow.' The mob joined in the attack; and the magistrates tore off the prisoners' clothes and 22 ordered them to be flogged. After giving them a severe beating they flung them into prison and ordered the jailer to keep them under close guard.
23 In view of these orders, he put them in the inner prison and secured their feet in the stocks.

24 About midnight Paul and Silas, at their prayers, were singing praises to 25 God, and the other prisoners were listening, when suddenly there was such a violent earthquake that the foundations of the jail were shaken; all the 26 doors burst open and all the prisoners found their fetters unfastened. The jailer woke up to see the prison doors wide open, and assuming that the 27 prisoners had escaped, drew his sword intending to kill himself. But Paul shouted, 'Do yourself no harm; we are all here.' The jailer called for lights, 28 rushed in and threw himself down before Paul and Silas, trembling with fear. He then escorted them out and said, 'Masters, what must I do to be 30 saved?' They said, 'Put your trust in the Lord Jesus, and you will be saved, 31 you and your household.' Then they spoke the word of the Lord^c to him 32 and to everyone in his house. At that late hour of the night he took them and washed their wounds; and immediately afterwards he and his whole family were baptized. He brought them into his house, set out a meal, and rejoiced with his whole household in his new-found faith in God. 34

When daylight came the magistrates sent their officers with instructions to release the men. The jailer reported the message to Paul: 'The magistrates have sent word that you are to be released. So now you may go free, and blessings on your journey.'^a But Paul said to the officers: 'They gave us a public flogging, though we are Roman citizens and have not been found guilty; they threw us into prison, and are they now to smuggle us out privately? No indeed! Let them come in person and escort us out.' The officers reported his words. The magistrates were alarmed to hear that they were Roman citizens, and came and apologized to them. Then they escorted them out and requested them to go away from the city. On leaving the prison, they went to Lydia's house, where they met their fellow-Christians, and spoke words of encouragement to them; then they departed. 35 36 37 38 39 40

THEY NOW TRAVELLED by way of Amphipolis and Apollonia and came to Thessalonica, where there was a Jewish synagogue. Following his usual practice Paul went to their meetings; and for the next three Sabbaths he argued with them, quoting texts of Scripture which he expounded and applied to show that the Messiah had to suffer and rise from the dead. 'And this Jesus,' he said, 'whom I am proclaiming to you, is the Messiah.' Some of them were convinced and joined Paul and Silas; so did a great number of godfearing Gentiles and a good many influential women.^b 17 2 3 4

But the Jews in their jealousy recruited some low fellows from the dregs of the populace, roused the rabble, and had the city in an uproar. They mobbed Jason's house, with the intention of bringing Paul and Silas before the town assembly. Failing to find them, they dragged Jason himself and some members of the congregation before the magistrates, shouting, 'The men who have made trouble all over the world have now come here; and Jason has harboured them. They all flout the Emperor's laws, and assert that there is a rival king, Jesus.' These words caused a great commotion in the mob, which affected the magistrates also. They bound over Jason and the others, and let them go. 5 6 7 8 9

As soon as darkness fell, the members of the congregation sent Paul and Silas off to Beroea. On arrival, they made their way to the synagogue. The Jews here were more civil than those at Thessalonica: they received the message with great eagerness, studying the scriptures every day to see whether it was as they said. Many of them therefore became believers, and so did a fair number of Gentiles, women of standing as well as men. But when the Thessalonian Jews learned that the word of God had now been proclaimed by Paul in Beroea, they came on there to stir up trouble and rouse the rabble. Thereupon the members of the congregation sent Paul off at once to go down to the coast, while Silas and Timothy both stayed behind. Paul's escort brought him as far as Athens, and came away with instructions for Silas and Timothy to rejoin him with all speed. 10 11 12 13 14 15

16 Now while Paul was waiting for them at Athens he was exasperated to see 17 how the city was full of idols. So he argued in the synagogue with the Jews and gentile worshippers, and also in the city square every day with casual 18 passers-by. And some of the Epicurean and Stoic philosophers joined issue with him. Some said, 'What can this charlatan be trying to say?'; others, 'He would appear to be a propagandist for foreign deities'—this 19 because he was preaching about Jesus and Resurrection. So they took him and brought him before the Court of Areopagus^a and said, 'May we know 20 what this new doctrine is that you propound? You are introducing ideas that sound strange to us, and we should like to know what they mean.' 21 (Now the Athenians in general and the foreigners there had no time for anything but talking or hearing about the latest novelty.)

22 Then Paul stood up before the Court of Areopagus^b and said: 'Men of Athens, I see that in everything that concerns religion you are uncommonly 23 scrupulous. For as I was going round looking at the objects of your worship, I noticed among other things an altar bearing the inscription "To an Unknown God". What you worship but do not know—this is what I now proclaim.

24 'The God who created the world and everything in it, and who is Lord 25 of heaven and earth, does not live in shrines made by men. It is not because he lacks anything that he accepts service at men's hands, for he is himself 26 the universal giver of life and breath and all else. He created every race of men of one stock, to inhabit the whole earth's surface. He fixed the epochs 27 of their history^c and the limits of their territory. They were to seek God, and, it might be, touch and find him; though indeed he is not far from each 28 one of us, for in him we live and move, in him we exist; as some of your own 29 poets^d have said, "We are also his offspring." As God's offspring, then, we ought not to suppose that the deity is like an image in gold or silver or 30 stone, shaped by human craftsmanship and design. As for the times of ignorance, God has overlooked them; but now he commands mankind, all 31 men everywhere, to repent, because he has fixed the day on which he will have the world judged, and justly judged, by a man of his choosing; of this he has given assurance to all by raising him from the dead.'

32 When they heard about the raising of the dead, some scoffed; and others
 33 said, 'We will hear you on this subject some other time.' And so Paul left 34 the assembly. However, some men joined him and became believers, including Dionysius, a member of the Court of Areopagus; also a woman named Damaris, and others besides.

8 1 2 After this he left Athens and went to Corinth. There he fell in with a Jew named Aquila, a native of Pontus, and his wife Priscilla; he had recently arrived from Italy because Claudius had issued an edict that all Jews should 3 leave Rome. Paul approached them and, because he was of the same trade, he made his home with them, and they carried on business together; they 4 were tent-makers. He also held discussions in the synagogue Sabbath by Sabbath, trying to convince both Jews and Gentiles.

5 Then Silas and Timothy came down from Macedonia, and Paul devoted himself entirely to preaching, affirming before the Jews that the Messiah was Jesus. But when they opposed him and resorted to abuse, he shook out the skirts of his cloak and said to them, 'Your blood be on your own heads! My conscience is clear; now I shall go to the Gentiles.' With that he left, and went to the house of a worshipper of God named Titius Justus, who lived next door to the synagogue. Crispus, who held office in the synagogue, now became a believer in the Lord, with all his household; and a number of Corinthians listened and believed, and were baptized. One night in a vision the Lord said to Paul, 'Have no fear: go on with your preaching and do not be silenced, for I am with you and no one shall attempt to do you harm;^a and there are many in this city who are my people.' So he settled down for eighteen months, teaching the word of God among them.

But when Gallio was proconsul of Achaia, the Jews set upon Paul in a body and brought him into court. 'This man', they said, 'is inducing people to worship God in ways that are against the law.' Paul was just about to speak when Gallio said to them, 'If it had been a question of crime or grave misdemeanour, I should, of course, have given you Jews a patient hearing, but if it is some bickering about words and names and your Jewish law, you may see to it yourselves; I have no mind to be a judge of these matters.' And he had them ejected from the court. Then there was a general attack on Sosthenes, who held office in the synagogue, and they gave him a beating in full view of the bench. But all this left Gallio quite unconcerned.

Paul stayed on for some time, and then took leave of the brotherhood and set sail for Syria, accompanied by Priscilla and Aquila. At Cenchreae he had his hair cut off, because he was under a vow. When they reached Ephesus he parted from them and went himself into the synagogue, where he held a discussion with the Jews. He was asked to stay longer, but declined and set out from Ephesus, saying, as he took leave of them, 'I shall come back to you if it is God's will.' On landing at Caesarea, he went up and paid his respects to the church, and then went down to Antioch. After spending some time there, he set out again and made a journey through the Galatian country and on through Phrygia, bringing new strength to all the converts.

NOW THERE ARRIVED at Ephesus a Jew named Apollos, an Alexandrian by birth, an eloquent man,^b powerful in his use of the scriptures. He had been instructed in the way of the Lord and was full of spiritual fervour; and in his discourses he taught accurately the facts about Jesus,^c though he knew only John's baptism. He now began to speak boldly in the synagogue, where Priscilla and Aquila heard him; they took him in hand and expounded the new way^d to him in greater detail. Finding that he wished to go across to Achaia, the brotherhood gave him their support, and wrote to the congregation there to make him welcome. From the time of his arrival, he was very helpful to those who had by God's grace become believers; for he strenuously confuted the Jews, demonstrating publicly from the scriptures that the Messiah is Jesus.

19 While Apollos was at Corinth, Paul travelled through the inland regions
2 till he came to Ephesus. There he found a number of converts, to whom he
3 said, 'Did you receive the Holy Spirit when you became believers?' 'No,' 4 they replied, 'we have not even heard that there is a Holy Spirit.' He said,
5 'Then what baptism were you given?' 'John's baptism', they answered.
6 Paul then said, 'The baptism that John gave was a baptism in token of 7 repentance, and he told the people to put their trust in one who was to 8 come after him, that is, in Jesus.' On hearing this they were baptized into 9 the name of the Lord Jesus; and when Paul had laid his hands on them, the 10 Holy Spirit came upon them and they spoke in tongues of ecstasy and 11 prophesied. Altogether they were about a dozen men.

8 During the next three months he attended the synagogue and, using 9 argument and persuasion, spoke boldly and freely about the kingdom of 10 God. But when some proved obdurate and would not believe, speaking 11 evil of the new way before the whole congregation, he left them, withdrew 12 his converts, and continued to hold discussions daily in the lecture-hall
13 of Tyrannus. This went on for two years, with the result that the whole
14 population of the province of Asia, both Jews and Gentiles, heard the word 15 of the Lord. And through Paul God worked singular miracles: when 16 handkerchiefs and scarves which had been in contact with his skin were 17 carried to the sick, they were rid of their diseases and the evil spirits came 18 out of them.

13 But some strolling Jewish exorcists tried their hand at using the name
14 of the Lord Jesus on those possessed by evil spirits; they would say, 'I 15 adjure you by Jesus whom Paul proclaims.' There were seven sons of 16 Sceva, a Jewish chief priest, who were using this method, when the evil
17 spirit answered back and said, 'Jesus I acknowledge, and I know about 18 Paul, but who are you?' And the man with the evil spirit flew at them, over-19 powered them all, and handled them with such violence that they ran out 20 of the house stripped and battered. This became known to everybody in 21 Ephesus, whether Jew or Gentile; they were all awestruck, and the name 22 of the Lord Jesus gained in honour. Moreover many of those who had 23 become believers came and openly confessed that they had been using 24 magical spells. And a good many of those who formerly practised magic 25 collected their books and burnt them publicly. The total value was reckoned up and it came to fifty thousand pieces of silver. In such ways the word of the Lord showed its power, spreading more and more widely and effectively.

21 When things had reached this stage, Paul made up his mind^a to visit
22 Macedonia and Achaia and then go on to Jerusalem; and he said, 'After I 23 have been there, I must see Rome also.' So he sent two of his assistants, 24 Timothy and Erastus, to Macedonia, while he himself stayed some time
25 longer in the province of Asia.

23 Now about that time, the Christian movement gave rise to a serious dis-24 turbance. There was a man named Demetrius, a silversmith who made 25 silver shrines of Diana and provided a great deal of employment for the craftsmen. He called a meeting of these men and the workers in allied trades, and addressed them. 'Men,' he said, 'you know that our high standard of living depends on this industry. And you see and hear how this fellow Paul with his propoganda has perverted crowds of people, not only at Ephesus but also in practically the whole of the province of Asia. He is telling them that gods made by human hands are not gods at all. There is danger for us here; it is not only that our line of business will be discredited, but also that the sanctuary of the great goddess Diana will cease to command respect; and then it will not be long before she who is worshipped by all Asia and the civilized world is brought down from her divine pre-eminence.'

^a Or Paul, led by the Spirit, resolved . . .

When they heard this they were roused to fury and shouted, 'Great is Diana of the Ephesians!' The whole city was in confusion; they seized Paul's travelling-companions, the Macedonians Gaius and Aristarchus, and made a concerted rush with them into the theatre. Paul wanted to appear before the assembly but the other Christians would not let him. Even some of the dignitaries of the province, who were friendly towards him, sent and urged him not to venture into the theatre. Meanwhile some were shouting one thing, some another; for the assembly was in confusion and most of them did not know what they had all come for. But some of the crowd explained the trouble to Alexander, whom the Jews had pushed to the front, and he, motioning for silence, attempted to make a defence before the assembly. But when they recognized that he was a Jew, a single cry arose from them all: for about two hours they kept on shouting, 'Great is Diana of the Ephesians!'

The town clerk, however, quieted the crowd. 'Men of Ephesus,' he said, 'all the world knows that our city of Ephesus is temple-warden of the great Diana and of that symbol of her which fell from heaven. Since these facts are beyond dispute, your proper course is to keep quiet and do nothing rash. These men whom you have brought here as culprits have committed no sacrilege and uttered no blasphemy against our goddess. If therefore Demetrius and his craftsmen have a case against anyone, assizes are held and there are such people as proconsuls; let the parties bring their charges and countercharges. If, on the other hand, you have some further question to raise, it will be dealt with in the statutory assembly. We certainly run the risk of being charged with riot for this day's work. There is no justification for it, and if the issue is raised we shall be unable to give any explanation of this uproar.' With that he dismissed the assembly.

WHEN THE DISTURBANCE had ceased, Paul sent for the disciples and, after encouraging them, said good-bye and set out on his journey to Macedonia. He travelled through those parts of the country, often speaking words of encouragement to the Christians there, and so came into Greece. When he had spent three months there and was on the point of embarking for Syria, a plot was laid against him by the Jews, so he decided to return by way of Macedonia. He was accompanied by Sopater son of Pyrrhus, from Beroea, the Thessalonians Aristarchus and Secundus, Gaius the Doberian^a and Timothy, and the Asians Tychicus and Trophimus. These 6 went ahead and waited for us at Troas; we ourselves set sail from Philippi after the Passover season,^a and in five days reached them at Troas, where we spent a week.

7 On the Saturday night, in our assembly for the breaking of bread, Paul, who was to leave next day, addressed them, and went on speaking until mid-
8 night. Now there were many lamps in the upper room where we were 9 assembled; and a youth named Eutychus, who was sitting on the window-ledge, grew more and more sleepy as Paul went on talking. At last he was 10 completely overcome by sleep, fell from the third storey to the ground, and was picked up for dead. Paul went down, threw himself upon him, 11 seizing him in his arms, and said to them, 'Stop this commotion; there is still life in him.' He then went upstairs, broke bread and ate, and after 12 much conversation, which lasted until dawn, he departed. And they took the boy away alive and were immensely comforted.

13 We went ahead to the ship and sailed for Assos, where we were to take Paul aboard. He had made this arrangement, as he was going to travel by 14 road. When he met us at Assos, we took him aboard and went on to Mity-15 lene. Next day we sailed from there and arrived opposite Chios, and on the second day we made Samos. On the following day^b we reached Miletus.
16 For Paul had decided to pass by Ephesus and so avoid having to spend time in the province of Asia; he was eager to be in Jerusalem, if he possibly 17 could, on the day of Pentecost. He did, however, send from Miletus to 18 Ephesus and summon the elders of the congregation; and when they joined him, he spoke as follows:

'You know how, from the day that I first set foot in the province of Asia, 19 for the whole time that I was with you, I served the Lord in all humility amid the sorrows and trials that came upon me through the machinations 20 of the Jews. You know that I kept back nothing that was for your good: I delivered the message to you; I taught you, in public and in your homes; 21 with Jews and Gentiles alike I insisted on repentance before God and trust in our Lord Jesus. And now, as you see, I am on my way to Jerusalem, 22 under the constraint of the Spirit.^c Of what will befall me there I know nothing, except that in city after city the Holy Spirit assures me that 23 imprisonment and hardships await me. For myself, I set no store by life;
I only want to finish the race, and complete the task which the Lord Jesus 24 assigned to me, of bearing my testimony to the gospel of God's grace.

25 'One word more: I have gone about among you proclaiming the King-26 dom, but now I know that none of you will see my face again. That being so, I here and now declare that no man's fate can be laid at my door; for 27 I have kept back nothing; I have disclosed to you the whole purpose of 28 God. Keep watch over yourselves and over all the flock of which the Holy Spirit has given you charge, as shepherds of the church of the Lord,^d 29 which he won for himself by his own blood.^e I know that when I am gone, 30 savage wolves will come in among you and will not spare the flock. Even from your own body there will be men coming forward who will distort the truth to induce the disciples to break away and follow them. So be on the alert; remember how for three years, night and day, I never ceased to counsel each of you, and how I wept over you. 31

'And now I commend you to God and to his gracious word, which has power to build you up and give you your heritage among all who are dedicated to him. I have not wanted anyone's money or clothes for myself; you all know that these hands of mine earned enough for the needs of myself and my companions. I showed you that it is our duty to help the weak in this way, by hard work, and that we should keep in mind the words of the Lord Jesus, who himself said, "Happiness lies more in giving than in receiving."'

As he finished speaking, he knelt down with them all and prayed. Then there were loud cries of sorrow from them all, as they folded Paul in their arms and kissed him. What distressed them most was his saying that they would never see his face again. So they escorted him to his ship. 36 37 38

When we had parted from them and set sail, we made a straight run and came to Cos; next day to Rhodes, and thence to Patara.^a There we found a ship bound for Phoenicia, so we went aboard and sailed in her. We came in sight of Cyprus, and leaving it to port, we continued our voyage to Syria, and put in at Tyre, for there the ship was to unload her cargo. We went and found the disciples and stayed there a week; and they, warned by the Spirit, urged Paul to abandon his visit to Jerusalem. But when our time ashore was ended, we left and continued our journey; and they and their wives and children all escorted us out of the city. We knelt down on the beach and prayed, then bade each other good-bye; we went aboard, and they returned home. 21 2 3 4 5 6

We made the passage from Tyre and reached Ptolemais, where we greeted the brotherhood and spent one day with them. Next day we left and came to Caesarea. We went to the home of Philip the evangelist, who was one of the Seven, and stayed with him. He had four unmarried daughters, who possessed the gift of prophecy. When we had been there several days, a prophet named Agabus arrived from Judaea. He came to us, took Paul's belt, bound his own feet and hands with it, and said, 'These are the words of the Holy Spirit: Thus will the Jews in Jerusalem bind the man to whom this belt belongs, and hand him over to the Gentiles.' When we heard this, we and the local people begged and implored Paul to abandon his visit to Jerusalem. Then Paul gave his answer: 'Why all these tears? Why are you trying to weaken my resolution? For my part I am ready not merely to be bound but even to die at Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus.' So, as he would not be persuaded, we gave up and said, 'The Lord's will be done.' 7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14

At the end of our stay we packed our baggage and took the road up to Jerusalem. Some of the disciples from Caesarea came along with us, bringing a certain Mnason of Cyprus, a Christian from the early days, with whom we were to lodge. So we reached Jerusalem, where the brotherhood welcomed us gladly. 15 16 17

^a Some witnesses add and Myra.

18 Next day Paul paid a visit to James ; we were with him, and all the elders 19 attended. He greeted them, and then described in detail all that God had 20 done among the Gentiles through his ministry. When they heard this, they gave praise to God. Then they said to Paul: 'You see, brother, how 21 many thousands of converts we have among the Jews, all of them staunch upholders of the Law. Now they have been given certain information about you: it is said that you teach all the Jews in the gentile world to turn 22 their backs on Moses, telling them to give up circumcising their children and following our way of life. What is the position, then? They are sure to 23 hear that you have arrived. You must therefore do as we tell you. We have 24 four men here who are under a vow ; take them with you and go through the ritual of purification with them, paying their expenses, after which they may shave their heads. Then everyone will know that there is nothing in the stories they were told about you, but that you are a practising Jew 25 and keep the Law yourself. As for the gentile converts, we sent them our decision that they must abstain from meat that has been offered to idols, from blood, from anything that has been strangled,^a and from fornication.' 26 So Paul took the four men, and next day, after going through the ritual of purification with them, he went into the temple to give notice of the date when the period of purification would end and the offering be made for each one of them.

From Jerusalem to Rome

27 BUT JUST BEFORE the seven days were up, the Jews from the province of Asia saw him in the temple. They stirred up the whole crowd, and 28 seized him, shouting, 'Men of Israel, help, help! This is the fellow who spreads his doctrine all over the world, attacking our people, our law, and this sanctuary. On top of all this he has brought Gentiles into the temple 29 and profaned this holy place.' For they had previously seen Trophimus the Ephesian with him in the city, and assumed that Paul had brought him into the temple.

30 The whole city was in a turmoil, and people came running from all directions. They seized Paul and dragged him out of the temple ; and at 31 once the doors were shut. While they were clamouring for his death, a report reached the officer commanding the cohort, that all Jerusalem was in 32 an uproar. He immediately took a force of soldiers with their centurions and came down on the rioters at the double. As soon as they saw the 33 commandant and his troops, they stopped beating Paul. The commandant stepped forward, arrested him, and ordered him to be shackled with two 34 chains ; he then asked who the man was and what he had been doing. Some in the crowd shouted one thing, some another. As he could not get at the truth because of the hubbub, he ordered him to be taken into barracks.
35 When Paul reached the steps, he had to be carried by the soldiers because 36 of the violence of the mob. For the whole crowd were at their heels yelling, 'Kill him!'

^a Some witnesses omit from anything that has been strangled.

Just before Paul was taken into the barracks he said to the commandant, 37
'May I have a word with you?' The commandant said, 'So you speak 38 Greek, do you? Then you are not the Egyptian who started a revolt some time ago and led a force of four thousand terrorists out into the wilds?'
Paul replied, 'I am a Jew, a Tarsian from Cilicia, a citizen of no mean city. 39
I ask your permission to speak to the people.' When permission had been 40 given, Paul stood on the steps and with a gesture called for the attention of the people. As soon as quiet was restored, he addressed them in the Jewish language:

'Brothers and fathers, give me a hearing while I make my defence before 22 you.' When they heard him speaking to them in their own language, they 2 listened the more quietly. 'I am a true-born Jew,' he said, 'a native of 3 Tarsus in Cilicia. I was brought up in this city, and as a pupil of Gamaliel
I was thoroughly trained in every point of our ancestral law. I have always been ardent in God's service, as you all are today. And so I began to per- 4 secute this movement to the death, arresting its followers, men and women alike, and putting them in chains. For this I have as witnesses the 5 High Priest and the whole Council of Elders. I was given letters from them to our fellow-Jews at Damascus, and had started out to bring the Christians there to Jerusalem as prisoners for punishment; and this is what happened. 6
I was on the road and nearing Damascus, when suddenly about midday a great light flashed from the sky all around me, and I fell to the ground. 7
Then I heard a voice saying to me, "Saul, Saul, why do you persecute me?"
I answered, "Tell me, Lord, who you are." "I am Jesus of Nazareth," he 8 said, "whom you are persecuting." My companions saw the light, but did not hear the voice that spoke to me. "What shall I do, Lord?" I said, and 9 the Lord replied, "Get up and continue your journey to Damascus; there you will be told of all the tasks that are laid upon you." As I had been 10 blinded by the brilliance of that light, my companions led me by the hand, and so I came to Damascus. 11

'There, a man called Ananias, a devout observer of the Law and well 12 spoken of by all the Jews of that place, came and stood beside me and said, 13
"Saul, my brother, recover your sight." Instantly I recovered my sight and saw him. He went on: "The God of our fathers appointed you to know his 14 will and to see the Righteous One and to hear his very voice, because you 15 are to be his witness before the world, and testify to what you have seen and heard. And now why delay? Be baptized at once, with invocation of 16 his name, and wash away your sins."

'After my return to Jerusalem, I was praying in the temple when I fell 17 into a trance and saw him there, speaking to me. "Make haste", he said, 18
"and leave Jerusalem without delay, for they will not accept your testimony about me." "Lord," I said, "they know that I imprisoned those who believe 19 in thee, and flogged them in every synagogue; and when the blood of Stephen thy witness was shed I stood by, approving, and I looked after 20 the clothes of those who killed him." But he said to me, "Go, for I am send- 21 ing you far away to the Gentiles."

Up to this point they had given him a hearing; but now they began 22 shouting, 'Down with him! A scoundrel like that is better dead!' And as 23

24 they were yelling and waving their cloaks and flinging dust in the air, the commandant ordered him to be brought into the barracks and gave instructions to examine him by flogging, and find out what reason there 25 was for such an outcry against him. But when they tied him up for the lash,^a Paul said to the centurion who was standing there, 'Can you legally 26 flog a man who is a Roman citizen, and moreover has not been found guilty?' When the centurion heard this, he went and reported it to the commandant. 'What do you mean to do?' he said. 'This man is a Roman 27 citizen.' The commandant came to Paul. 'Tell me, are you a Roman 28 citizen?' he asked. 'Yes', said he. The commandant rejoined, 'It cost me a large sum to acquire this citizenship.' Paul said, 'But it was mine by birth.' 29 Then those who were about to examine him withdrew hastily, and the commandant himself was alarmed when he realized that Paul was a Roman citizen and that he had put him in irons.

30 THE FOLLOWING DAY, wishing to be quite sure what charge the Jews were bringing against Paul, he released him and ordered the chief priests and the entire Council to assemble. He then took Paul down and stood him before them.

23 Paul fixed his eyes on the Council and said, 'My brothers, I have lived all my life, and still live today, with a perfectly clear conscience before God.'
2 At this the High Priest Ananias ordered his attendants to strike him on the 3 mouth. Paul retorted, 'God will strike you, you whitewashed wall! You sit there to judge me in accordance with the Law; and then in defiance of 4 the Law you order me to be struck!' The attendants said, 'Would you insult 5 God's High Priest?' 'My brothers,' said Paul, 'I had no idea that he was High Priest; Scripture, I know, says: "You must not abuse the ruler of your people."'

6 Now Paul was well aware that one section of them were Sadducees and the other Pharisees, so he called out in the Council, 'My brothers, I am a Pharisee, a Pharisee born and bred; and the true issue in this trial is our 7 hope of the resurrection of the dead.' At these words the Pharisees and Sadducees fell out among themselves, and the assembly was divided.
8 (The Sadducees deny that there is any resurrection, or angel, or spirit, but 9 the Pharisees accept them.) So a great uproar broke out; and some of the doctors of the law belonging to the Pharisaic party openly took sides and declared, 'We can find no fault with this man; perhaps an angel or spirit 10 has spoken to him.' The dissension was mounting, and the commandant was afraid that Paul would be torn in pieces, so he ordered the troops to go down, pull him out of the crowd, and bring him into the barracks.

11 The following night the Lord appeared to him and said, 'Keep up your courage; you have affirmed the truth about me in Jerusalem, and you must do the same in Rome.'

12 When day broke, the Jews banded together and took an oath not to eat 13 or drink until they had killed Paul. There were more than forty in this 14 conspiracy. They came to the chief priests and elders and said, 'We have bound ourselves by a solemn oath not to taste food until we have killed

^a Or tied him up with thongs.

Paul. It is now for you, acting with the Council, to apply to the commandant to bring him down to you, on the pretext of a closer investigation of his case; and we have arranged to do away with him before he arrives.' 15

But the son of Paul's sister heard of the ambush; he went to the barracks, obtained entry, and reported it to Paul. Paul called one of the centurions and said, 'Take this young man to the commandant; he has something to report.' The centurion took him and brought him to the commandant. 'The prisoner Paul', he said, 'sent for me and asked me to bring this young man to you; he has something to tell you.' The commandant took him by the arm, drew him aside, and asked him, 'What is it you have to report?' He said, 'The Jews have made a plan among themselves and will request you to bring Paul down to the Council tomorrow, on the pretext of obtaining more precise information about him. Do not listen to them; for a party more than forty strong are lying in wait for him. They have sworn not to eat or drink until they have done away with him; they are now ready, and wait only for your consent.' So the commandant dismissed the young man, with orders not to let anyone know that he had given him this information. 16 17 18 19 20 21 22

Then he called a couple of his centurions and issued these orders: 'Get ready two hundred infantry to proceed to Caesarea, together with seventy cavalrymen and two hundred light-armed troops;^a parade three hours after sunset. Provide also mounts for Paul so that he may ride through under safe escort to Felix the Governor.' And he wrote a letter to this effect: 23 24 25

'Claudius Lysias to His Excellency the Governor Felix. Your Excellency: This man was seized by the Jews and was on the point of being murdered when I intervened with the troops and removed him, because I discovered that he was a Roman citizen. As I wished to ascertain the charge on which they were accusing him, I took him down to their Council. I found that the accusation had to do with controversial matters in their law, but there was no charge against him meriting death or imprisonment. However, I have now been informed of an attempt to be made on the man's life, so I am sending him to you at once, and have also instructed his accusers to state their case against him before you.'^b 26 27 28 29 30

Acting on their orders, the infantry took Paul and brought him by night to Antipatris. Next day they returned to their barracks, leaving the cavalry to escort him the rest of the way. The cavalry entered Caesarea, delivered the letter to the Governor, and handed Paul over to him. He read the letter, asked him what province he was from, and learned that he was from Cilicia. 'I will hear your case', he said, 'when your accusers arrive.' He then ordered him to be held in custody at his headquarters in Herod's palace. 31 32 33 34 35

FIVE DAYS LATER the High Priest Ananias came down, accompanied by some of the elders and an advocate named Tertullus, and they laid an information against Paul before the Governor. When the prisoner was called, Tertullus opened the case. 24 2

'Your Excellency,' he said, 'we owe it to you that we enjoy unbroken peace. It is due to your provident care that, in all kinds of ways and in all sorts of places, improvements are being made for the good of this province.

^a Or two hundred spearmen (the meaning of the Greek word is uncertain).

^b Some witnesses read '... before you. Farewell.'

3 4 We welcome this, sir, most gratefully. And now, not to take up too much 5 of your time, I crave your indulgence for a brief statement of our case. We 6 have found this man to be a perfect pest, a fomenter of discord among the 7 Jews all over the world, a ringleader of the sect of the Nazarenes. He even 8 made an attempt to profane the temple; and then we arrested him. ^a If you 9 will examine him yourself you can ascertain from him the truth of all the charges we bring.' The Jews supported the attack, alleging that the facts were as he stated.

10 Then the Governor motioned to Paul to speak, and he began his reply:
11 'Knowing as I do that for many years you have administered justice in this 12 province, I make my defence with confidence. You can ascertain the facts 13 for yourself. It is not more than twelve days since I went up to Jerusalem 14 on a pilgrimage. They did not find me arguing with anyone, or collecting 15 a crowd, either in the temple or in the synagogues or up and down the city;
16 and they cannot make good the charges they bring against me. But this much I will admit: I am a follower of the new way (the "sect" they speak of),
and it is in that manner that I worship the God of our fathers; for I believe 15 all that is written in the Law and the prophets, and in reliance on God I hold the hope, which my accusers too accept, that there is to be a resur-16 rection of good and wicked alike. Accordingly I, no less than they, train myself to keep at all times a clear conscience before God and man.

17 'After an absence of several years I came to bring charitable gifts to my 18 nation and to offer sacrifices. They found me in the temple ritually purified and engaged in this service. I had no crowd with me, and there was no 19 disturbance. But some Jews from the province of Asia were there, and if they had any charge against me it is they who ought to have been in court 20 to state it. Failing that, it is for these persons here present to say what 21 crime they discovered when I was brought before the Council, apart from this one open assertion which I made as I stood there: "The true issue in my trial before you today is the resurrection of the dead."'

22 Then Felix, who happened to be well informed about the Christian movement, adjourned the hearing. 'When Lysias the commanding officer 23 comes down', he said, 'I will go into your case.' He gave orders to the centurion to keep Paul under open arrest and not to prevent any of his friends from making themselves useful to him.

24 Some days later Felix came with his wife Drusilla, who was a Jewess, and sending for Paul he let him talk to him about faith in Christ Jesus.
25 But when the discourse turned to questions of morals, self-control, and the coming judgement, Felix became alarmed and exclaimed, 'That will do for the present; when I find it convenient I will send for you again.'
26 At the same time he had hopes of a bribe from Paul; and for this reason he 27 sent for him very often and talked with him. When two years had passed, Felix was succeeded by Porcius Festus. Wishing to curry favour with the Jews, Felix left Paul in custody.

^a Some witnesses insert It was our intention to try him under our law; (7) but Lysias the commandant intervened and took him by force out of our hands, (8) ordering his accusers to come before you.

THREE DAYS AFTER taking up his appointment Festus went up from 25
Caesarea to Jerusalem, where the chief priests and the Jewish leaders 2 brought before him the case against Paul. They asked Festus to favour 3 them against him, and pressed for him to be brought up to Jerusalem, for 4 they were planning an ambush to kill him on the way. Festus, however, 4 replied, 'Paul is in safe custody at Caesarea, and I shall be leaving Jeru- 5 salem shortly myself; so let your leading men come down with me, and if 5 there is anything wrong, let them prosecute him.'

After spending eight or ten days at most in Jerusalem, he went down to 6
Caesarea, and next day he took his seat in court and ordered Paul to be 6 brought up. When he appeared, the Jews who had come down from 7 Jerusalem stood round bringing many grave charges, which they were 7 unable to prove. Paul's plea was: 'I have committed no offence, either 8 against the Jewish law, or against the temple, or against the Emperor.' 8 Festus, anxious to ingratiate himself with the Jews, turned to Paul and 9 asked, 'Are you willing to go up to Jerusalem and stand trial on these 9 charges before me there?' But Paul said, 'I am now standing before the 10 Emperor's tribunal, and that is where I must be tried. Against the Jews I 10 have committed no offence, as you very well know. If I am guilty of any 11 capital crime, I do not ask to escape the death penalty; but if there is no 11 substance in the charges which these men bring against me, it is not open 12 to anyone to hand me over as a sop to them. I appeal to Caesar!' Then 12
Festus, after conferring with his advisers, replied, 'You have appealed to 12
Caesar: to Caesar you shall go.'

After an interval of some days King Agrippa and Bernice arrived at 13 Caesarea on a courtesy visit to Festus. They spent several days there, and 14 during this time Festus laid Paul's case before the king. 'We have a man', 14
he said, 'left in custody by Felix; and when I was in Jerusalem the chief 15 priests and elders of the Jews laid an information against him, demanding 15 his condemnation. I answered them, "It is not Roman practice to hand over 16 any accused man before he is confronted with his accusers and given an 16 opportunity of answering the charge." So when they had come here with 17 me I lost no time; the very next day I took my seat in court and ordered the 17 man to be brought up. But when his accusers rose to speak, they brought 18 none of the charges I was expecting; they merely had certain points of dis- 18 agreement with him about their peculiar religion, and about someone 19 called Jesus, a dead man whom Paul alleged to be alive. Finding myself 20 out of my depth in such discussions, I asked if he was willing to go to 20 Jerusalem and stand his trial there on these issues. But Paul appealed to 21 be remanded in custody for His Imperial Majesty's decision, and I ordered 21 him to be detained until I could send him to the Emperor.' Agrippa said to 22 Festus, 'I should rather like to hear the man myself.' 'Tomorrow', he 22 answered, 'you shall hear him.'

So next day Agrippa and Bernice came in full state and entered the 23 audience-chamber accompanied by high-ranking officers and prominent 23 citizens; and on the orders of Festus Paul was brought up. Then Festus 24 said, 'King Agrippa, and all you gentlemen here present with us, you see 24 this man: the whole body of the Jews approached me both in Jerusalem

- 25 and here, loudly insisting that he had no right to remain alive. But it was 26 clear to me that he had committed no capital crime, and when he himself appealed to His Imperial Majesty, I decided to send him. But I have nothing definite about him to put in writing for our Sovereign. Accordingly I have brought him up before you all and particularly before you, King Agrippa, so that as a result of this preliminary inquiry I may have 27 something to report. There is no sense, it seems to me, in sending on a prisoner without indicating the charges against him.'
- 26 Agrippa said to Paul, 'You have our permission to speak for yourself.'
Then Paul stretched out his hand and began his defence:
- 2 'I consider myself fortunate, King Agrippa, that it is before you that I am to make my defence today upon all the charges brought against me by 3 the Jews, particularly as you are expert in all Jewish matters, both our customs and our disputes. And therefore I beg you to give me a patient hearing.
- 4 'My life from my youth up, the life I led from the beginning among my 5 people and in Jerusalem, is familiar to all Jews. Indeed they have known me long enough and could testify, if they only would, that I belonged to the 6 strictest group in our religion: I lived as a Pharisee. And it is for a hope kindled by God's promise to our forefathers that I stand in the dock today.
7 Our twelve tribes hope to see the fulfilment of that promise, worshipping with intense devotion day and night; and for this very hope I am im-8 peached, and impeached by Jews, Your Majesty. Why is it considered incredible among you that God should raise dead men to life?
- 9 'I myself once thought it my duty to work actively against the name of 10 Jesus of Nazareth; and I did so in Jerusalem. It was I who imprisoned many of God's people by authority obtained from the chief priests; and when they 11 were condemned to death, my vote was cast against them. In all the synagogues I tried by repeated punishment to make them renounce their faith; indeed my fury rose to such a pitch that I extended my persecution to foreign cities.
- 12 'On one such occasion I was travelling to Damascus with authority and 13 commission from the chief priests; and as I was on my way, Your Majesty, in the middle of the day I saw a light from the sky, more brilliant than the 14 sun, shining all around me and my travelling-companions. We all fell to the ground, and then I heard a voice saying to me in the Jewish language,
"Saul, Saul, why do you persecute me? It is hard for you, this kicking 15 against the goad." I said, "Tell me, Lord, who you are"; and the Lord 16 replied, "I am Jesus, whom you are persecuting. But now, rise to your feet and stand upright. I have appeared to you for a purpose: to appoint you my servant and witness, to testify both to what you have seen and to what 17 you shall yet see of me. I will rescue you from this people and from the 18 Gentiles to whom I am sending you. I send you to open their eyes and turn them from darkness to light, from the dominion of Satan to God, so that, by trust in me, they may obtain forgiveness of sins, and a place with those whom God has made his own."
- 20 'And so, King Agrippa, I did not disobey the heavenly vision. I turned first to the inhabitants of Damascus, and then to Jerusalem and all the country of Judaea, and to the Gentiles, and sounded the call to repent and turn to God, and to prove their repentance by deeds. That is why the Jews seized me in the temple and tried to do away with me. But I had God's help, and so to this very day I stand and testify to great and small alike. I assert nothing beyond what was foretold by the prophets and by Moses: that the Messiah must suffer, and that he, the first to rise from the dead, would announce the dawn to Israel and to the Gentiles.'

While Paul was thus making his defence, Festus shouted at the top of his voice, 'Paul, you are raving; too much study is driving you mad.' 'I am not mad, Your Excellency,' said Paul; 'what I am saying is sober truth. The king is well versed in these matters, and to him I can speak freely. I do not believe that he can be unaware of any of these facts, for this has been no hole-and-corner business. King Agrippa, do you believe the prophets? I know you do.' Agrippa said to Paul, 'You think it will not take much to win me over and make a Christian of me.' 'Much or little,' said Paul, 'I wish to God that not only you, but all those also who are listening to me today, might become what I am, apart from these chains.'

With that the king rose, and with him the Governor, Bernice, and the rest of the company, and after they had withdrawn they talked it over. 'This man', they said, 'is doing nothing that deserves death or imprisonment.' Agrippa said to Festus, 'The fellow could have been discharged, if he had not appealed to the Emperor.'

WHEN IT WAS DECIDED that we should sail for Italy, Paul and some other prisoners were handed over to a centurion named Julius, of the Augustan Cohort. We embarked in a ship of Adramyttium, bound for ports in the province of Asia, and put out to sea. In our party was Aristarchus, a Macedonian from Thessalonica. Next day we landed at Sidon; and Julius very considerately allowed Paul to go to his friends to be cared for. Leaving Sidon we sailed under the lee of Cyprus because of the headwinds, then across the open sea off the coast of Cilicia and Pamphylia, and so reached Myra in Lycia.

There the centurion found an Alexandrian vessel bound for Italy and put us aboard. For a good many days we made little headway, and we were hard put to it to reach Cnidus. Then, as the wind continued against us, off Salmone we began to sail under the lee of Crete, and, hugging the coast, struggled on to a place called Fair Havens, not far from the town of Lasea.

By now much time had been lost, the Fast was already over, and it was risky to go on with the voyage. Paul therefore gave them this advice: 'I can see, gentlemen,' he said, 'that this voyage will be disastrous: it will mean grave loss, loss not only of ship and cargo but also of life.' But the centurion paid more attention to the captain and to the owner of the ship than to what Paul said; and as the harbour was unsuitable for wintering, the majority were in favour of putting out to sea, hoping, if they could get so far, to winter at Phoenix, a Cretan harbour exposed south-west and north-west. So when a southerly breeze sprang up, they thought that their purpose was as good as achieved, and, weighing anchor, they sailed along the coast of Crete hugging the land. But before very long a fierce wind, the 15 'North-easter' as they call it, tore down from the landward side. It caught 16 the ship and, as it was impossible to keep head to wind, we had to give way 17 and run before it. We ran under the lee of a small island called Cauda, and with a struggle managed to get the ship's boat under control. When they had hoisted it aboard, they made use of tackle and undergirded the ship.

18 Then, because they were afraid of running on to the shallows of Syrtis, 19 they lowered the mainsail and let her drive. Next day, as we were making 20 very heavy weather, they began to lighten the ship; and on the third day they jettisoned the ship's gear with their own hands. For days on end there was no sign of either sun or stars, a great storm was raging, and our last hopes of coming through alive began to fade.

21 When they had gone for a long time without food, Paul stood up among them and said, 'You should have taken my advice, gentlemen, not to sail 22 from Crete; then you would have avoided this damage and loss. But now 23 I urge you not to lose heart; not a single life will be lost, only the ship. For last night there stood by me an angel of the God whose I am and whom I 24 worship. "Do not be afraid, Paul," he said; "it is ordained that you shall appear before the Emperor; and, be assured, God has granted you the 25 lives of all who are sailing with you." So keep up your courage: I trust in 26 God that it will turn out as I have been told; though we have to be cast ashore on some island.'

27 The fourteenth night came and we were still drifting in the Sea of Adria.
In the middle of the night the sailors felt that land was getting nearer.
28 They sounded and found twenty fathoms. Sounding again after a short 29 interval they found fifteen fathoms; and fearing that we might be cast ashore on a rugged coast they dropped four anchors from the stern and 30 prayed for daylight to come. The sailors tried to abandon ship; they had already lowered the ship's boat, pretending they were going to lay out 31 anchors from the bows, when Paul said to the centurion and the soldiers, 32 'Unless these men stay on board you can none of you come off safely.' So the soldiers cut the ropes of the boat and let her drop away.

33 Shortly before daybreak Paul urged them all to take some food. 'For the last fourteen days', he said, 'you have lived in suspense and gone 34 hungry; you have eaten nothing whatever. So I beg you to have something to eat; your lives depend on it. Remember, not a hair of your heads will be 35 lost.' With these words, he took bread, gave thanks to God in front of them 36 all, broke it, and began eating. Then they all plucked up courage, and took 37 food themselves. There were on board two hundred and seventy-six of us 38 in all. When they had eaten as much as they wanted they lightened the ship by dumping the corn in the sea.

39 When day broke they could not recognize the land, but they noticed a bay with a sandy beach, on which they planned, if possible, to run the 40 ship ashore. So they slipped the anchors and let them go; at the same time they loosened the lashings of the steering-paddles, set the foresail to the 41 wind, and let her drive to the beach. But they found themselves caught between cross-currents and ran the ship aground, so that the bow stuck fast and remained immovable, while the stern was being pounded to pieces 42 by the breakers. The soldiers thought they had better kill the prisoners for fear that any should swim away and escape; but the centurion wanted to bring Paul safely through and prevented them from carrying out their plan. He gave orders that those who could swim should jump overboard first and get to land; the rest were to follow, some on planks, some on parts of the ship. And thus it was that all came safely to land.

Once we had made our way to safety we identified the island as Malta. The rough islanders treated us with uncommon kindness: because it was cold and had started to rain, they lit a bonfire and made us all welcome. Paul had got together an armful of sticks and put them on the fire, when a viper, driven out by the heat, fastened on his hand. The islanders, seeing the snake hanging on to his hand, said to one another, 'The man must be a murderer; he may have escaped from the sea, but divine justice has not let him live.' Paul, however, shook off the snake into the fire and was none the worse. They still expected that any moment he would swell up or drop down dead, but after waiting a long time without seeing anything extraordinary happen to him, they changed their minds and now said, 'He is a god.'

In the neighbourhood of that place there were lands belonging to the chief magistrate of the island, whose name was Publius. He took us in and entertained us hospitably for three days. It so happened that this man's father was in bed suffering from recurrent bouts of fever and dysentery. Paul visited him and, after prayer, laid his hands upon him and healed him; whereupon the other sick people on the island came also and were cured. They honoured us with many marks of respect, and when we were leaving they put on board provision for our needs.

Three months had passed when we set sail in a ship which had wintered in the island; she was the Castor and Pollux of Alexandria. We put in at Syracuse and spent three days there; then we sailed round and arrived at Rhegium. After one day a south wind sprang up and we reached Puteoli in two days. There we found fellow-Christians and were invited to stay a week with them. And so to Rome. The Christians there had had news of us and came out to meet us as far as Appii Forum and Tres Tabernae, and when Paul saw them, he gave thanks to God and took courage.

WHEN WE ENTERED ROME Paul was allowed to lodge by himself with a soldier in charge of him. Three days later he called together the local Jewish leaders; and when they were assembled, he said to them: 'My brothers, I, who never did anything against our people or the customs of our forefathers, am here as a prisoner; I was handed over to the Romans at Jerusalem. They examined me and would have liked to release me because there was no capital charge against me; but the Jews objected, and I had no option but to appeal to the Emperor; not that I had any accusation to bring against my own people. That is why I have asked to see you and talk to you, because it is for the sake of the hope of Israel that I am in chains, as you see.' They replied, 'We have had no communication from Judaea, nor has any countryman of ours arrived with any report or gossip to your discredit. We should like to hear from you what your views are; all we know about this sect is that no one has a good word to say for it.'

23 So they fixed a day, and came in large numbers as his guests. He dealt at length with the whole matter; he spoke urgently of the kingdom of God 24 and sought to convince them about Jesus by appealing to the Law of Moses and the prophets. This went on from dawn to dusk. Some were won over 25 by his arguments; others remained sceptical. Without reaching any agreement among themselves they began to disperse, but not before Paul had said one thing more: 'How well the Holy Spirit spoke to your fathers 26 through the prophet Isaiah when he said, "Go to this people and say: You may hear and hear, but you will never understand; you may look and look, 27 but you will never see. For this people's mind has become gross; their ears are dulled, and their eyes are closed. Otherwise, their eyes might see, their ears hear, and their mind understand, and then they might turn again, and 28 I would heal them." Therefore take notice that this salvation of God has been sent to the Gentiles; the Gentiles will listen.' ^a 30 He stayed there two full years at his own expense, with a welcome for all 31 who came to him, proclaiming the kingdom of God and teaching the facts about the Lord Jesus Christ quite openly and without hindrance.

^a Some witnesses add (29) After he had spoken, the Jews went away, arguing vigorously among themselves.

LETTERS

THE LETTER OF PAUL TO THE ROMANS

The Gospel according to Paul

FROM PAUL, SERVANT of Christ Jesus, apostle by God's call, 1 set apart for the service of the Gospel.

This gospel God announced beforehand in sacred scriptures 2 through his prophets. It is about his Son: on the human level he was born 3 of David's stock, but on the level of the spirit—the Holy Spirit—he was 4 declared Son of God by a mighty act in that he rose from the dead:^a it is 5 about Jesus Christ our Lord. Through him I received the privilege of a 6 commission in his name to lead to faith and obedience men in all nations, yourselves among them, you who have heard the call and belong to Jesus Christ.

I send greetings to all of you in Rome whom God loves and has called 7 to be his dedicated people. Grace and peace to you from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

Let me begin by thanking my God, through Jesus Christ, for you all, 8 because all over the world they are telling the story of your faith. God is 9 my witness, the God to whom I offer the humble service of my spirit by preaching the gospel of his Son: God knows how continually I make mention of you in my prayers, and am always asking that by his will I may, 10 somehow or other, succeed at long last in coming to visit you. For I long to 11 see you; I want to bring you some spiritual gift to make you strong; or 12 rather, I want to be among you to be myself encouraged by your faith as well as you by mine.

But I should like you to know,^b my brothers, that I have often planned 13 to come, though so far without success, in the hope of achieving something among you, as I have in other parts of the world. I am under obligation to 14 Greek and non-Greek, to learned and simple; hence my eagerness to declare the Gospel to you in Rome as well as to others. For I am not 15 ashamed of the Gospel. It is the saving power of God for everyone who 16 has faith—the Jew first, but the Greek also—because here is revealed 17 God's way of righting wrong, a way that starts from faith and ends in faith;^c as Scripture says, 'he shall gain life who is justified through faith'.

^a Or declared Son of God with full powers from the time when he rose from the dead.

^b Some witnesses read I believe you know.

^c Or . . . wrong. It is based on faith and addressed to faith.

18 FOR WE SEE divine retribution revealed from heaven and falling upon all 19 the godless wickedness of men. In their wickedness they are stifling the 20 truth. For all that may be known of God by men lies plain before their eyes; indeed God himself has disclosed it to them. His invisible attributes, that is to say his everlasting power and deity, have been visible, ever since the world began, to the eye of reason, in the things he has made. There is 21 therefore no possible defence for their conduct; knowing God, they have refused to honour him as God, or to render him thanks. Hence all their thinking has ended in futility, and their misguided minds are plunged in 22 darkness. They boast of their wisdom, but they have made fools of them-23 selves, exchanging the splendour of immortal God for an image shaped like mortal man, even for images like birds, beasts, and creeping things.

24 For this reason God has given them up to the vileness of their own 25 desires, and the consequent degradation of their bodies, because they have bartered away the true God for a false one,^a and have offered reverence and worship to created things instead of to the Creator, who is blessed for ever; amen.

26 In consequence, I say, God has given them up to shameful passions.
 27 Their women have exchanged natural intercourse for unnatural, and their men in turn, giving up natural relations with women, burn with lust for one another; males behave indecently with males, and are paid in their own persons the fitting wage of such perversion.

28 Thus, because they have not seen fit to acknowledge God, he has given them up to their own depraved reason. This leads them to break all rules 29 of conduct. They are filled with every kind of injustice, mischief, rapacity, and malice; they are one mass of envy, murder, rivalry, treachery, and 30 malevolence; whisperers and scandal-mongers, hateful to God, insolent, arrogant, and boastful; they invent new kinds of mischief, they show no 31 loyalty to parents, no conscience, no fidelity to their plighted word; they 32 are without natural affection and without pity. They know well enough the just decree of God, that those who behave like this deserve to die, and yet they do it; not only so, they actually applaud such practices.

2 You therefore have no defence—you who sit in judgement, whoever you may be—for in judging your fellow-man you condemn yourself, since 2 you, the judge, are equally guilty. It is admitted that God's judgement is 3 rightly passed upon all who commit such crimes as these; and do you imagine—you who pass judgement on the guilty while committing the same crimes yourself—do you imagine that you, any more than they, will 4 escape the judgement of God? Or do you think lightly of his wealth of kindness, of tolerance, and of patience, without recognizing that God's 5 kindness is meant to lead you to a change of heart? In the rigid obstinacy of your heart you are laying up for yourself a store of retribution for the 6 day of retribution, when God's just judgement will be revealed, and he will 7 pay every man for what he has done. To those who pursue glory, honour, and immortality by steady persistence in well-doing, he will give eternal 8 life; but for those who are governed by selfish ambition, who refuse obedience to the truth and take the wrong for their guide, there will be the fury of retribution. There will be trouble and distress for every human 9 being who is an evil-doer, for the Jew first and for the Greek also; and for 10 every well-doer there will be glory, honour, and peace, for the Jew first and also for the Greek.

^a Or the truth of God for the lie.

For God has no favourites: those who have sinned outside the pale of 11 12
 the Law of Moses will perish outside its pale, and all who have sinned under that law will be judged by the law. It is not by hearing the law, but 13 by doing it, that men will be justified before God. When Gentiles who do 14 not possess the law carry out its precepts by the light of nature, then, although they have no law, they are their own law, for they display the 15 effect of the law inscribed on their hearts. Their conscience is called as witness, and their own thoughts argue the case on either side, against them or even for them, on the day when God judges the secrets of human hearts 16 through Christ Jesus. So my gospel declares.

But as for you—you may bear the name of Jew; you rely upon the law 17 and are proud of your God; you know his will; instructed by the law, you 18 know right from wrong; you are confident that you are the one to guide 19
 the blind, to enlighten the benighted, to train the stupid, and to teach the 20 immature, because in the law you see the very shape of knowledge and truth. You, then, who teach your fellow-man, do you fail to teach your- 21 self? You proclaim, 'Do not steal'; but are you yourself a thief? You say, 22
 'Do not commit adultery'; but are you an adulterer? You abominate false gods; but do you rob their shrines? While you take pride in the law, you 23 dishonour God by breaking it. For, as Scripture says, 'Because of you the 24 name of God is dishonoured among the Gentiles.'

Circumcision has value, provided you keep the law; but if you break the 25 law, then your circumcision is as if it had never been. Equally, if an un- 26 circumcised man keeps the precepts of the law, will he not count as cir- 27 cumcised? He may be uncircumcised in his natural state, but by fulfilling the law he will pass judgement on you who break it, for all your written 28 code and your circumcision. The true Jew is not he who is such in externals, neither is the true circumcision the external mark in the flesh. The true 29 Jew is he who is such inwardly, and the true circumcision is of the heart, directed not by written precepts but by the Spirit; such a man receives his commendation not from men but from God.

Then what advantage has the Jew? What is the value of circumcision? 3 Great, in every way. In the first place, the Jews were entrusted with the 2 oracles of God. What if some of them were unfaithful? Will their faithless- 3 ness cancel the faithfulness of God? Certainly not! God must be true 4 though every man living were a liar; for we read in Scripture, 'When thou speakest thou shalt be vindicated, and win the verdict when thou art on trial.'

Another question: if our injustice serves to bring out God's justice, what 5 are we to say? Is it unjust of God (I speak of him in human terms) to bring 6 retribution upon us? Certainly not! If God were unjust, how could he judge the world?

Again, if the truth of God brings him all the greater honour because of 7 my falsehood, why should I any longer be condemned as a sinner? Why 8 not indeed 'do evil that good may come', as some libellously report me as saying? To condemn such men as these is surely no injustice.

9 What then? Are we Jews any better off?^a No, not at all!^b For we have already drawn up the accusation that Jews and Greeks alike are all under the power of sin. This has scriptural warrant:

11 'There is no just man, not one;
no one who understands, no one who seeks God.
12 All have swerved aside, all alike have become debased;
there is no one to show kindness; no, not one.

13 Their throat is an open grave,
they use their tongues for treachery,
adders' venom is on their lips,
14 and their mouth is full of bitter curses.

15 Their feet hasten to shed blood,
16 ruin and misery lie along their paths,
17 they are strangers to the high-road of peace,
18 and reverence for God does not enter their thoughts.'

19 Now all the words of the law are addressed, as we know, to those who are within the pale of the law, so that no one may have anything to say in self-defence, but the whole world may be exposed to the judgement of God. For (again from Scripture) 'no human being can be justified in the sight of God' for having kept the law: law brings only the consciousness of sin.

21 BUT NOW, quite independently of law, God's justice has been brought to light. The Law and the prophets both bear witness to it: it is God's way of righting wrong, effective through faith in Christ for all who have such 23 faith—all, without distinction. For all alike have sinned, and are deprived 24 of the divine splendour, and all are justified by God's free grace alone,
25 through his act of liberation in the person of Christ Jesus. For God designed him to be the means of expiating sin by his sacrificial death, effective through faith. God meant by this to demonstrate his justice,
26 because in his forbearance he had overlooked the sins of the past—to demonstrate his justice now in the present, showing that he is himself just and also justifies any man who puts his faith in Jesus.

27 What room then is left for human pride? It is excluded. And on what principle? The keeping of the law would not exclude it, but faith does.
28 For our argument is that a man is justified by faith quite apart from success in keeping the law.

29 Do you suppose God is the God of the Jews alone? Is he not the God of 30 Gentiles also? Certainly, of Gentiles also, if it be true that God is one. And he will therefore justify both the circumcised in virtue of their faith, and 31 the uncircumcised through their faith. Does this mean that we are using faith to undermine law? By no means: we are placing law itself on a firmer footing.

^a Or Are we Jews any worse off?

^b Or Not in all respects.

WHAT, THEN, are we to say about Abraham, our ancestor in the natural line? If Abraham was justified by anything he had done, then he has ground for pride. But he has no such ground before God; for what does Scripture say? 'Abraham put his faith in God, and that faith was counted to him as righteousness.' Now if a man does a piece of work, his wages are not 'counted' as a favour; they are paid as debt. But if without any work to his credit he simply puts his faith in him who acquits the guilty, then his faith is indeed 'counted as righteousness'. In the same sense David speaks of the happiness of the man whom God 'counts' as just, apart from any specific acts of justice: 'Happy are they', he says, 'whose lawless deeds are forgiven, whose sins are buried away; happy is the man whose sins the Lord does not count against him.' Is this happiness confined to the circumcised, or is it for the uncircumcised also? Consider: we say, 'Abraham's faith was counted as righteousness'; in what circumstances was it so counted? Was he circumcised at the time, or not? He was not yet circumcised, but uncircumcised; and he later received the symbolic rite of circumcision as the hall-mark of the righteousness which faith had given him when he was still uncircumcised. Consequently, he is the father of all who have faith when uncircumcised, so that righteousness is 'counted' to them; and at the same time he is the father of such of the circumcised as do not rely upon their circumcision alone, but also walk in the footprints of the faith which our father Abraham had while he was yet uncircumcised.

For it was not through law that Abraham, or his posterity, was given the promise that the world should be his inheritance, but through the righteousness that came from faith. For if those who hold by the law, and they alone, are heirs, then faith is empty and the promise goes for nothing, because law can bring only retribution; but where there is no law there can be no breach of law. The promise was made on the ground of faith, in order that it might be a matter of sheer grace, and that it might be valid for all Abraham's posterity, not only for those who hold by the law, but for those also who have the faith of Abraham. For he is the father of us all, as Scripture says: 'I have appointed you to be father of many nations.' This promise, then, was valid before God, the God in whom he put his faith, the God who makes the dead live and summons things that are not yet in existence as if they already were. When hope seemed hopeless, his faith was such that he became 'father of many nations', in agreement with the words which had been spoken to him: 'Thus shall your descendants be.' Without any weakening of faith he contemplated his own body, as good as dead (for he was about a hundred years old), and the deadness of Sarah's womb, and never doubted God's promise in unbelief, but, strong in faith, gave honour to God, in the firm conviction of his power to do what he had promised. And that is why Abraham's faith was 'counted to him as righteousness'.

Those words were written, not for Abraham's sake alone, but for our sake too: it is to be 'counted' in the same way to us who have faith in the God who raised Jesus our Lord from the dead; for he was given up to death for our misdeeds, and raised to life to justify us. ^a

^a Or raised to life because we were now justified.

5 THEREFORE, NOW THAT we have been justified through faith, let us
 2 continue at peace ^a with God through our Lord Jesus Christ, through whom we have been allowed to enter the sphere of God's grace, where we now stand. Let us exult ^b in the hope of the divine splendour that is to be 3 ours. More than this: let us even exult ^c in our present sufferings, because 4 we know that suffering trains us to endure, and endurance brings proof
 5 that we have stood the test, and this proof is the ground of hope. Such a hope is no mockery, because God's love has flooded our inmost heart through the Holy Spirit he has given us.

6 For at the very time when we were still powerless, then Christ died for 7 the wicked. Even for a just man one of us would hardly die, though perhaps 8 for a good man one might actually brave death; but Christ died for us while we were yet sinners, and that is God's own proof of his love towards us.
 9 And so, since we have now been justified by Christ's sacrificial death, we shall all the more certainly be saved through him from final retribution.
 10 For if, when we were God's enemies, we were reconciled to him through the death of his Son, how much more, now that we are reconciled, shall 11 we be saved by his life! But that is not all: we also exult in God through our Lord Jesus, through whom we have now been granted reconciliation.

12 Mark what follows. It was through one man that sin entered the world, and through sin death, and thus death pervaded the whole human race, 13 inasmuch as all men have sinned. For sin was already in the world before there was law, though in the absence of law no reckoning is kept of sin.
 14 But death held sway from Adam to Moses, even over those who had not sinned as Adam did, by disobeying a direct command—and Adam foreshadows the Man who was to come.

15 But God's act of grace is out of all proportion to Adam's wrongdoing.
 For if the wrongdoing of that one man brought death upon so many, its effect is vastly exceeded by the grace of God and the gift that came to so 16 many by the grace of the one man, Jesus Christ. And again, the gift of God is not to be compared in its effect with that one man's sin; for the judicial action, following upon the one offence, issued in a verdict of condemnation, but the act of grace, following upon so many misdeeds, issued in a 17 verdict of acquittal. For if by the wrongdoing of that one man death established its reign, through a single sinner, much more shall those who receive in far greater measure God's grace, and his gift of righteousness, live and reign through the one man, Jesus Christ.

18 It follows, then, that as the issue of one misdeed was condemnation for 19 all men, so the issue of one just act is acquittal and life for all men. For as through the disobedience of the one man the many were made sinners, so through the obedience of the one man the many will be made righteous.

20 Law intruded into this process to multiply law-breaking. But where sin 21 was thus multiplied, grace immeasurably exceeded it, in order that, as sin established its reign by way of death, so God's grace might establish its reign in righteousness, and issue in eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.

^a Some witnesses read we are at peace.
 exult.

^b Or We exult.

^c Or we even exult.

What are we to say, then? Shall we persist in sin, so that there may be 6 all the more grace? No, no! We died to sin: how can we live in it any 2 longer? Have you forgotten that when we were baptized into union with 3 Christ Jesus we were baptized into his death? By baptism we were buried 4 with him, and lay dead, in order that, as Christ was raised from the dead in the splendour of the Father, so also we might set our feet upon the new path of life.

For if we have become incorporate with him in a death like his, we shall 5 also be one with him in a resurrection like his. We know that the man we 6 once were has been crucified with Christ, for the destruction of the sinful 7 self, so that we may no longer be the slaves of sin, since a dead man is no 8 longer answerable for his sin. But if we thus died with Christ, we believe 9 that we shall also come to life with him. We know that Christ, once raised from the dead, is never to die again: he is no longer under the dominion of death. For in dying as he died, he died to sin, once for all, and in living as 10 he lives, he lives to God. In the same way you must regard yourselves as 11 dead to sin and alive to God, in union with Christ Jesus.

So sin must no longer reign in your mortal body, exacting obedience to 12 the body's desires. You must no longer put its several parts at sin's disposal, 13 as implements for doing wrong. No: put yourselves at the disposal of God, 14 as dead men raised to life; yield your bodies to him as implements for doing right; for sin shall no longer be your master, because you are no longer under law, but under the grace of God.

What then? Are we to sin, because we are not under law but under 15 grace? Of course not. You know well enough that if you put yourselves at 16 the disposal of a master, to obey him, you are slaves of the master whom you obey; and this is true whether you serve sin, with death as its result; or obedience, with righteousness as its result. But God be thanked, you, 17 who once were slaves of sin, have yielded whole-hearted obedience to the pattern of teaching to which you were made subject,^a and, emancipated 18 from sin, have become slaves of righteousness (to use words that suit your human weakness)—I mean, as you once yielded your bodies to the service of impurity and lawlessness, making for moral anarchy, so now you must yield them to the service of righteousness, making for a holy life.

When you were slaves of sin, you were free from the control of righteous- 20 ness; and what was the gain? Nothing but what now makes you ashamed, 21 for the end of that is death. But now, freed from the commands of sin, and 22 bound to the service of God, your gains are such as make for holiness, and the end is eternal life. For sin pays a wage, and the wage is death, but God 23 gives freely, and his gift is eternal life, in union with Christ Jesus our Lord.

You cannot be unaware, my friends—I am speaking to those who have 7 some knowledge of law—that a person is subject to the law so long as he is alive, and no longer. For example, a married woman is by law bound to her 2 husband while he lives; but if her husband dies, she is discharged from the obligations of the marriage-law. If, therefore, in her husband's lifetime 3 she consorts with another man, she will incur the charge of adultery; but ^a Or which was handed on to you.

if her husband dies she is free of the law, and she does not commit adultery 4 by consorting with another man. So you, my friends, have died to the law by becoming identified with the body of Christ, and accordingly you have found another husband in him who rose from the dead, so that we may 5 bear fruit for God. While we lived on the level of our lower nature, the sinful passions evoked by the law worked in our bodies, to bear fruit for death.
 6 But now, having died to that which held us bound, we are discharged from the law, to serve God in a new way, the way of the spirit, in contrast to the old way, the way of a written code.

7 What follows? Is the law identical with sin? Of course not. But except through law I should never have become acquainted with sin. For example,
 I should never have known what it was to covet, if the law had not said, 8 'Thou shalt not covet.' Through that commandment sin found its opportunity, and produced in me all kinds of wrong desires. In the absence of 9 law, sin is a dead thing. There was a time when, in the absence of law, I was fully alive; but when the commandment came, sin sprang to life and 10 I died. The commandment which should have led to life proved in my experience to lead to death, because sin found its opportunity in the com-11 mandment, seduced me, and through the commandment killed me.

12 Therefore the law is in itself holy, and the commandment is holy and 13 just and good. Are we to say then that this good thing was the death of me?
 By no means. It was sin that killed me, and thereby sin exposed its true character: it used a good thing to bring about my death, and so, through the commandment, sin became more sinful than ever.

14 We know that the law is spiritual; but I am not: I am unspiritual, the 15 purchased slave of sin. I do not even acknowledge my own actions as mine, 16 for what I do is not what I want to do, but what I detest. But if what I do is against my will, it means that I agree with the law and hold it to be 17 admirable. But as things are, it is no longer I who perform the action, but 18 sin that lodges in me. For I know that nothing good lodges in me—in my unspiritual nature, I mean—for though the will to do good is there, the 19 deed is not. The good which I want to do, I fail to do; but what I do is the 20 wrong which is against my will; and if what I do is against my will, clearly it is no longer I who am the agent, but sin that has its lodging in me.

21 I discover this principle, then: that when I want to do the right, only 22 the wrong is within my reach. In my inmost self I delight in the law of God, 23 but I perceive that there is in my bodily members a different law, fighting against the law that my reason approves and making me a prisoner under 24 the law^a that is in my members, the law of sin. Miserable creature that I 25 am, who is there to rescue me out of this body doomed to death^b? God alone, through Jesus Christ our Lord! Thanks be to God! In a word then,
 I myself, subject to God's law as a rational being, am yet,^c in my unspiritual nature, a slave to the law of sin.

8 The conclusion of the matter is this: there is no condemnation for those 2 who are united with Christ Jesus, because in Christ Jesus the life-giving 3 law of the Spirit has set you free from the law of sin and death. What the law could never do, because our lower nature robbed it of all potency, God has done: by sending his own Son in a form like that of our own sinful nature, and as a sacrifice for sin,^a he has passed judgement against sin within that very nature, so that the commandment of the law may find fulfilment in us, whose conduct, no longer under the control of our lower nature, is directed by the Spirit.

Those who live on the level of our lower nature have their outlook formed by it, and that spells death; but those who live on the level of the spirit have the spiritual outlook, and that is life and peace. For the outlook of the lower nature is enmity with God; it is not subject to the law of God; indeed it cannot be: those who live on such a level cannot possibly please God.

But that is not how you live. You are on the spiritual level, if only God's Spirit dwells within you; and if a man does not possess the Spirit of Christ, he is no Christian. But if Christ is dwelling within you, then although the body is a dead thing because you sinned, yet the spirit is life itself because you have been justified.^b Moreover, if the Spirit of him who raised Jesus from the dead dwells within you, then the God who raised Christ Jesus from the dead will also give new life to your mortal bodies through his indwelling Spirit.

It follows, my friends, that our lower nature has no claim upon us; we are not obliged to live on that level. If you do so, you must die. But if by the Spirit you put to death all the base pursuits of the body, then you will live.

For all who are moved by the Spirit of God are sons of God. The Spirit you have received is not a spirit of slavery leading you back into a life of fear, but a Spirit that makes us sons, enabling us to cry 'Abba! Father!' In that cry the Spirit of God joins with our spirit in testifying that we are God's children; and if children, then heirs. We are God's heirs and Christ's fellow-heirs, if we share his sufferings now in order to share his splendour hereafter.

For I reckon that the sufferings we now endure bear no comparison with the splendour, as yet unrevealed, which is in store for us. For the created universe waits with eager expectation for God's sons to be revealed. It was made the victim of frustration, not by its own choice, but because of him who made it so;^c yet always there was hope, because^d the universe itself is to be freed from the shackles of mortality and enter upon the liberty and splendour of the children of God. Up to the present, we know, the whole created universe groans in all its parts as if in the pangs of childbirth. Not only so, but even we, to whom the Spirit is given as firstfruits of the harvest to come, are groaning inwardly while we wait for God to make us his sons and^e set our whole body free. For we have been saved, though only in hope. Now to see is no longer to hope: why should a man endure and wait^f for what he already sees? But if we hope for something we do not yet see, then, in waiting for it, we show our endurance.

^a Or and to deal with sin.

^c Or because

God subjected it.

^d Or with the hope that . . .

^e Some witnesses omit make us his sons and.

^f Some witnesses read why should a man hope . . .

26 In the same way the Spirit comes to the aid of our weakness. We do not 27 even know how we ought to pray,^a but through our inarticulate groans the 28 Spirit himself is pleading for us, and God who searches our inmost being 29 knows what the Spirit means, because he pleads for God's people in God's 30 own way; and in everything, as we know, he co-operates for good with those 31 who love God^b and are called according to his purpose. For God knew his 32 own before ever they were, and also ordained that they should be shaped 33 to the likeness of his Son, that he might be the eldest among a large family 34 of brothers; and it is these, so fore-ordained, whom he has also called. And 35 those whom he called he has justified, and to those whom he justified he 36 has also given his splendour.

37 With all this in mind, what are we to say? If God is on our side, who is 38 against us? He did not spare his own Son, but gave him up for us all; and 39 with this gift how can he fail to lavish upon us all he has to give? Who will 40 be the accuser of God's chosen ones? It is God who pronounces acquittal; 41 then who can condemn? It is Christ—Christ who died, and, more than that,
 42 was raised from the dead—who is at God's right hand, and indeed pleads 43 our cause.^c Then what can separate us from the love of Christ? Can 44 affliction or hardship? Can persecution, hunger, nakedness, peril, or the 45 sword? 'We are being done to death for thy sake all day long,' as Scripture 46 says; 'we have been treated like sheep for slaughter'—and yet, in spite of 47 all, overwhelming victory is ours through him who loved us. For I am 48 convinced that there is nothing in death or life, in the realm of spirits or 49 superhuman powers, in the world as it is or the world as it shall be, in the 50 forces of the universe, in heights or depths—nothing in all creation that can 51 separate us from the love of God in Christ Jesus our Lord.

The purpose of God in history

9 I AM SPEAKING the truth as a Christian, and my own conscience,
 10 enlightened by the Holy Spirit, assures me it is no lie: in my heart there 11 is great grief and unceasing sorrow. For I could even pray to be outcast 12 from Christ myself for the sake of my brothers, my natural kinsfolk. They 13 are Israelites: they were made God's sons; theirs is the splendour of the 14 divine presence, theirs the covenants, the law, the temple worship, and the 15 promises. Theirs are the patriarchs, and from them, in natural descent, 16 sprang the Messiah.^d May God, supreme above all, be blessed for ever!^e 17 Amen.

18 It is impossible that the word of God should have proved false. For not 19 all descendants of Israel are truly Israel, nor, because they are Abraham's

^a Or what it is right to pray for.

^b Or and, as we know, all things work together for good for those who love God; some witnesses read and we know God himself co-operates for good with those who love God.

^c Or Who will be the accuser of God's chosen ones? Will it be God himself? No, he it is who pronounces acquittal. Who will be the judge to condemn? Will it be Christ—he who died, and, more than that, . . . right hand? No, he it is who pleads our cause.

^d Greek Christ.
^e Or sprang the Messiah, supreme above all, God blessed for ever; or sprang the Messiah, who is supreme above all. Blessed be God for ever!

offspring, are they all his true children; ^a but, in the words of Scripture, 'Through the line of Isaac your descendants shall be traced.'^b That is to say, it is not those born in the course of nature who are children of God; it is the children born through God's promise who are reckoned as Abraham's descendants. For the promise runs: 'At the time fixed I will come, and Sarah shall have a son.'

But that is not all, for Rebekah's children had one and the same father, our ancestor Isaac; and yet, in order that God's selective purpose might stand, based not upon men's deeds but upon the call of God, she was told, even before they were born, when they had as yet done nothing, good or ill, 'The elder shall be servant to the younger'; and that accords with the text of Scripture, 'Jacob I loved and Esau I hated.'

What shall we say to that? Is God to be charged with injustice? By no means. For he says to Moses, 'Where I show mercy, I will show mercy, and where I pity, I will pity.' Thus it does not depend on man's will or effort, but on God's mercy. For Scripture says to Pharaoh, 'I have raised you up for this very purpose, to exhibit my power in my dealings with you, and to spread my fame over all the world.' Thus he not only shows mercy as he chooses, but also makes men stubborn as he chooses.

You will say, 'Then why does God blame a man? For who can resist his will?' Who are you, sir, to answer God back? Can the pot speak to the potter and say, 'Why did you make me like this?'' Surely the potter can do what he likes with the clay. Is he not free to make out of the same lump two vessels, one to be treasured, the other for common use?

But what if God, desiring to exhibit ^c his retribution at work and to make his power known, tolerated very patiently those vessels which were objects of retribution due for destruction, and did so in order to make known the full wealth of his splendour upon vessels which were objects of mercy, and which from the first had been prepared for this splendour?

Such vessels are we, whom he has called from among Gentiles as well as Jews, as it says in the Book of Hosea: 'Those who were not my people I will call My People, and the unloved nation I will call My Beloved. For in the very place where they were told "you are no people of mine", they shall be called Sons of the living God.' But Isaiah makes this proclamation about Israel: 'Though the Israelites be countless as the sands of the sea, only a remnant shall be saved; for the Lord's sentence on the land will be summary and final'; as also he said previously, 'If the Lord of Hosts had not left us the mere germ of a nation, we should have become like Sodom, and no better than Gomorrah.'

Then what are we to say? That Gentiles, who made no effort after righteousness, nevertheless achieved it, a righteousness based on faith; whereas Israel made great efforts after a law of righteousness, but never attained to it. Why was this? Because their efforts were not based on faith, but (as they supposed) on deeds. They fell over the 'stone' mentioned in Scripture: 'Here I lay in Zion a stone to trip over, a rock to stumble against; but he who has faith in him will not be put to shame.'

^a Or all children of God. ^b Or God's call shall be for your descendants in the line of Isaac. ^c Or although he had the will to exhibit . . .

10 BROTHERS, MY DEEPEST DESIRE and my prayer to God is for their
 2 salvation. To their zeal for God I can testify; but it is an ill-informed zeal.
 3 For they ignore God's way of righteousness, and try to set up their own, and 4 therefore they have not submitted themselves to God's righteousness. For Christ ends the law and brings righteousness for everyone who has faith.^a

5 Of legal righteousness Moses writes, 'The man who does this shall gain 6 life by it.' But the righteousness that comes by faith says, 'Do not say to yourself, "Who can go up to heaven?"' (that is to bring Christ down), 7 'or, "Who can go down to the abyss?"' (to bring Christ up from the dead).
 8 But what does it say? 'The word is near you: it is upon your lips and in your 9 heart.' This means the word of faith which we proclaim. If on your lips is the confession, 'Jesus is Lord', and in your heart the faith that God raised 10 him from the dead, then you will find salvation. For the faith that leads to righteousness is in the heart, and the confession that leads to salvation is upon the lips.

11 Scripture says, 'Everyone who has faith in him will be saved from shame' 12 —everyone: there is no distinction between Jew and Greek, because the same Lord is Lord of all, and is rich enough for the need of all who invoke 13 him. For everyone, as it says again—'everyone who invokes the name of the 14 Lord will be saved'. How could they invoke one in whom they had no faith?
 And how could they have faith in one they had never heard of? And how 15 hear without someone to spread the news? And how could anyone spread the news without a commission to do so? And that is what Scripture affirms: 'How welcome are the feet of the messengers of good news!'

16 But not all have responded to the good news. For Isaiah says, 'Lord, 17 who has believed our message?' We conclude that faith is awakened by the message, and the message that awakens it comes through the word of Christ.

18 But, I ask, can it be that they never heard it? Of course they did: 'Their voice has sounded all over the earth, and their words to the bounds of the 19 inhabited world.' But, I ask again, can it be that Israel failed to recognize the message? In reply, I first cite Moses, who says, 'I will use a nation that is no nation to stir your envy, and a foolish nation to rouse your anger.' 20 But Isaiah is still more daring: 'I was found', he says, 'by those who were not looking for me; I was clearly shown to those who never asked about me'; 21 while to Israel he says, 'All day long I have stretched out my hands to an unruly and defiant people.'

11 I ASK THEN, has God rejected his people? I cannot believe it! I am an 2 Israelite myself, of the stock of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin. No!
 God has not rejected the people which he acknowledged of old as his own.
 You know (do you not?) what Scripture says in the story of Elijah—how 3 Elijah pleads with God against Israel: 'Lord, they have killed thy prophets, they have torn down thine altars, and I alone am left, and they are seeking 4 my life.' But what does the divine voice say to him? 'I have left myself 5 seven thousand men who have not knelt to Baal.' In just the same way at the present time a 'remnant' has come into being, selected by the grace of ^a Or Christ is the end of the law as a way to righteousness for everyone who has faith.

God. But if it is by grace, then it does not rest on deeds done, or grace 6 would cease to be grace.

What follows? What Israel sought, Israel has not achieved, but the 7 selected few have achieved it. The rest were made blind to the truth, exactly as it stands written: 'God brought upon them a numbness of 8 spirit; he gave them blind eyes and deaf ears, and so it is still.' Similarly 9 David says:

'May their table be a snare and a trap,
both stumbling-block and retribution!
May their eyes become so dim that they lose their sight! 10
Bow down their backs unceasingly!'

I now ask, did their failure mean complete downfall? Far from it! 11
Because they offended, salvation has come to the Gentiles, to stir Israel to emulation. But if their offence means the enrichment of the world, and 12 if their falling-off means the enrichment of the Gentiles, how much more their coming to full strength!

But I have something to say to you Gentiles. I am a missionary to the 13 Gentiles, and as such I give all honour to that ministry when I try to stir emulation in the men of my own race, and so to save some of them. For if 14 their rejection has meant the reconciliation of the world, what will their acceptance mean? Nothing less than life from the dead! If the first portion 15 of dough is consecrated, so is the whole lump. If the root is consecrated, so are the branches. But if some of the branches have been lopped off, and 16 you, a wild olive, have been grafted in among them, and have come to share the same root and sap as the olive, do not make yourself superior to 17 the branches. If you do so, remember that it is not you who sustain the root: the root sustains you. 18

You will say, 'Branches were lopped off so that I might be grafted in.' 19 Very well: they were lopped off for lack of faith, and by faith you hold your place. Put away your pride, and be on your guard; for if God did not spare 20 the native branches, no more will he spare you. Observe the kindness and the severity of God—severity to those who fell away, divine kindness to you, if only you remain within its scope; otherwise you too will be cut off, whereas they, if they do not continue faithless, will be grafted in; for it is 23 in God's power to graft them in again. For if you were cut from your native wild olive and against all nature grafted into the cultivated olive, how much more readily will they, the natural olive-branches, be grafted into their native stock! 24

For there is a deep truth here, my brothers, of which I want you to take 25 account, so that you may not be complacent about your own discernment:
this partial blindness has come upon Israel only until the Gentiles have been admitted in full strength; when that has happened, the whole of 26 Israel will be saved, in agreement with the text of Scripture:

'From Zion shall come the Deliverer;
he shall remove wickedness from Jacob.
And this is the covenant I will grant them, 27
when I take away their sins.'

- 28 In the spreading of the Gospel they are treated as God's enemies for your sake; but God's choice stands, and they are his friends for the sake of the
- 29 patriarchs. For the gracious gifts of God and his calling are irrevocable.
- 30 Just as formerly you were disobedient to God, but now have received mercy
- 31 in the time of their disobedience, so now, when you receive mercy, they have proved disobedient, but only in order that they too may receive mercy.
- 32 For in making all mankind prisoners to disobedience, God's purpose was to show mercy to all mankind.
- 33 O depth of wealth, wisdom, and knowledge in God! How unsearchable
- 34 his judgements, how untraceable his ways! Who knows the mind of the
- 35 Lord? Who has been his counsellor? Who has ever made a gift to him, to
- 36 receive a gift in return? Source, Guide, and Goal of all that is—to him be glory for ever! Amen.

Christian behaviour

- 12 THEREFORE, MY BROTHERS, I implore you by God's mercy to offer your very selves to him: a living sacrifice, dedicated and fit for his
- 2 acceptance, the worship offered by mind and heart.^a Adapt yourselves no longer to the pattern of this present world, but let your minds be remade and your whole nature thus transformed. Then you will be able to discern the will of God, and to know what is good, acceptable, and perfect.
- 3 In virtue of the gift that God in his grace has given me I say to everyone among you: do not be conceited or think too highly of yourself; but think your way to a sober estimate based on the measure of faith that God has dealt
- 4 to each of you. For just as in a single human body there are many limbs and
- 5 organs, all with different functions, so all of us, united with Christ, form one body, serving individually as limbs and organs to one another.
- 6 The gifts we possess differ as they are allotted to us by God's grace, and must be exercised accordingly: the gift of inspired utterance, for
- 7 example, in proportion to a man's faith; or the gift of administration, in
- 8 administration. A teacher should employ his gift in teaching, and one who has the gift of stirring speech should use it to stir his hearers. If you give to charity, give with all your heart; if you are a leader, exert yourself to lead; if you are helping others in distress, do it cheerfully.
- 10 Love in all sincerity, loathing evil and clinging to the good. Let love for our brotherhood breed warmth of mutual affection. Give pride of place to one another in esteem.
- 11 With unflagging energy, in ardour of spirit, serve the Lord.^b
- 12 Let hope keep you joyful; in trouble stand firm; persist in prayer.
- 13 Contribute to the needs of God's people, and practise hospitality.
- 14 Call down blessings on your persecutors—blessings, not curses.
- 15 With the joyful be joyful, and mourn with the mourners.
- 16 Care as much about each other as about yourselves. Do not be haughty, but go about with humble folk. Do not keep thinking how wise you are.
- ^a Or . . . acceptance, for such is the worship which you, as rational creatures, should offer.
- ^b Some witnesses read meet the demands of the hour.

Never pay back evil for evil. Let your aims be such as all men count 17 honourable. If possible, so far as it lies with you, live at peace with all men. 18
My dear friends, do not seek revenge, but leave a place for divine retribu- 19 tion; for there is a text which reads, 'Justice is mine, says the Lord, I will repay.' But there is another text: 'If your enemy is hungry, feed him; if he 20 is thirsty, give him a drink; by doing this you will heap live coals on his head.' Do not let evil conquer you, but use good to defeat evil. 21

Every person must submit to the supreme authorities. There is no 13 authority but by act of God, and the existing authorities are instituted by him; consequently anyone who rebels against authority is resisting a divine 2 institution, and those who so resist have themselves to thank for the punishment they will receive. For government, a terror to crime, has no 3 terrors for good behaviour. You wish to have no fear of the authorities?
Then continue to do right and you will have their approval, for they are 4 God's agents working for your good. But if you are doing wrong, then you will have cause to fear them; it is not for nothing that they hold the power of the sword, for they are God's agents of punishment, for retribution on the offender. That is why you are obliged to submit. It is an obligation 5 imposed not merely by fear of retribution but by conscience. That is also 6 why you pay taxes. The authorities are in God's service and to these duties they devote their energies.

Discharge your obligations to all men; pay tax and toll, reverence and 7 respect, to those to whom they are due. Leave no claim outstanding against 8 you, except that of mutual love. He who loves his neighbour has satisfied every claim of the law. For the commandments, 'Thou shalt not commit 9 adultery, thou shalt not kill, thou shalt not steal, thou shalt not covet', and any other commandment there may be, are all summed up in the one rule, 'Love your neighbour as yourself.' Love cannot wrong a neighbour; 10 therefore the whole law is summed up in love. ^a

In all this, remember how critical the moment is. It is time for you to 11 wake out of sleep, for deliverance is nearer to us now than it was when first we believed. It is far on in the night; day is near. Let us therefore throw off 12 the deeds of darkness and put on our armour as soldiers of the light. Let us behave with decency as befits the day: no revelling or drunkenness, no 13 debauchery or vice, no quarrels or jealousies! Let Christ Jesus himself be 14 the armour that you wear; give no more thought to satisfying the bodily appetites.

IF A MAN IS WEAK in his faith you must accept him without attempting 14 to settle doubtful points. For instance, one man will have faith enough to 2 eat all kinds of food, while a weaker man eats only vegetables. The man who eats must not hold in contempt the man who does not, and he who does 3 not eat must not pass judgement on the one who does; for God has accepted him. Who are you to pass judgement on someone else's servant? Whether 4 he stands or falls is his own Master's business; and stand he will, because his Master has power to enable him to stand.

Again, this man regards one day more highly than another, while that 5

^a Or the whole law is fulfilled by love.

man regards all days alike. On such a point everyone should have reached 6 conviction in his own mind. He who respects the day has the Lord in mind in doing so, and he who eats meat has the Lord in mind when he eats, since he gives thanks to God; and he who abstains has the Lord in mind no less, since he too gives thanks to God.

7 For no one of us lives, and equally no one of us dies, for himself alone.
 8 If we live, we live for the Lord; and if we die, we die for the Lord. Whether 9 therefore we live or die, we belong to the Lord. This is why Christ died 10 and came to life again, to establish his lordship over dead and living. You, sir, why do you pass judgement on your brother? And you, sir, why do you hold your brother in contempt? We shall all stand before God's tribunal.
 11 For Scripture says, 'As I live, says the Lord, to me every knee shall bow and 12 every tongue acknowledge God.' So, you see, each of us will have to answer for himself.

13 Let us therefore cease judging one another, but rather make this simple judgement: that no obstacle or stumbling-block be placed in a brother's 14 way. I am absolutely convinced, as a Christian,^a that nothing is impure in itself; only, if a man considers a particular thing impure, then to him it is 15 impure. If your brother is outraged by what you eat, then your conduct is no longer guided by love. Do not by your eating bring disaster to a man for 16 whom Christ died! What for you is a good thing must not become an occa-
 17 sion for slanderous talk; for the kingdom of God is not eating and drink-18 ing, but justice, peace, and joy, inspired by the Holy Spirit. He who thus shows himself a servant of Christ is acceptable to God and approved by men.

19 Let us then pursue the things that make for peace and build up the 20 common life. Do not ruin the work of God for the sake of food. Everything is pure in itself, but anything is bad for the man who by his eating causes 21 another to fall. It is a fine thing to abstain from eating meat or drinking 22 wine, or doing anything which causes your brother's downfall. If you have a clear conviction, apply it to yourself in the sight of God. Happy is the 23 man who can make his decision with a clear conscience!^b But a man who has doubts is guilty if he eats, because his action does not arise from his conviction, and anything which does not arise from conviction is sin.^c 15 Those of us who have a robust conscience must accept as our own burden
 2 the tender scruples of weaker men, and not consider ourselves. Each of us must consider his neighbour and think what is for his good and will build 3 up the common life. For Christ too did not consider himself, but might have said, in the words of Scripture, 'The reproaches of those who re-4 proached thee fell upon me.' For all the ancient scriptures were written for our own instruction, in order that through the encouragement they give 5 us we may maintain our hope with fortitude. And may God, the source of all fortitude and all encouragement, grant that you may agree with one 6 another after the manner of Christ Jesus, so that with one mind and one voice you may praise the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ.

7 In a word, accept one another as Christ accepted us, to the glory of God.

^a Or on the authority of the Lord Jesus.
 upon himself by what he approves!

^b Or who does not bring judgement

^c See p. 209, note c.

I mean that Christ became a servant of the Jewish people to maintain the truth of God by making good his promises to the patriarchs, and at the same time to give the Gentiles cause to glorify God for his mercy. As Scripture says, 'Therefore I will praise thee among the Gentiles and sing hymns to thy name'; and again, 'Gentiles, make merry together with his own people'; and yet again, 'All Gentiles, praise the Lord; let all peoples praise him.' Once again, Isaiah says, 'There shall be the Scion of Jesse, the one raised up to govern the Gentiles; on him the Gentiles shall set their hope.' And may the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace by your faith in him, until, by the power of the Holy Spirit, you overflow with hope.

MY FRIENDS, I have no doubt in my own mind that you yourselves are quite full of goodness and equipped with knowledge of every kind, well able to give advice to one another; nevertheless I have written to refresh your memory, and written somewhat boldly at times, in virtue of the gift I have from God. His grace has made me a minister of Christ Jesus to the Gentiles; my priestly service is the preaching of the gospel of God, and it falls to me to offer the Gentiles to him as ^a an acceptable sacrifice, consecrated by the Holy Spirit.

Thus in the fellowship of Christ Jesus I have ground for pride in the service of God. I will venture to speak of those things alone in which I have been Christ's instrument to bring the Gentiles into his allegiance, by word and deed, by the force of miraculous signs and by the power of the Holy Spirit. As a result I have completed the preaching of the gospel of Christ from Jerusalem as far round as Illyricum. It is my ambition to bring the Gospel to places where the very name of Christ has not been heard, for I do not want to build on another man's foundation; but, as Scripture says,

'They who had no news of him shall see,
and they who never heard of him shall understand.'

That is why I have been prevented all this time from coming to you. But now I have no further scope in these parts, and I have been longing for many years to visit you on my way to Spain; for I hope to see you as I travel through, and to be sent there with your support after having enjoyed your company for a while. But at the moment I am on my way to Jerusalem, on an errand to God's people there. For Macedonia and Achaia have resolved to raise a common fund for the benefit of the poor among God's people at Jerusalem. They have resolved to do so, and indeed they are under an obligation to them. For if the Jewish Christians shared their spiritual treasures with the Gentiles, the Gentiles have a clear duty to contribute to their material needs. So when I have finished this business and delivered the proceeds under my own seal, I shall set out for Spain by way of your city, and I am sure that when I arrive I shall come to you with a full measure of the blessing of Christ.

I implore you by our Lord Jesus Christ and by the love that the Spirit inspires, be my allies in the fight; pray to God for me that I may be saved from unbelievers in Judaea and that my errand to Jerusalem may find

32 acceptance with God's people, so that by his will I may come to you in a 33 happy frame of mind and enjoy a time of rest with you. The God of peace be with you all. Amen.^a 16 I COMMEND TO YOU PHOEBE, a fellow-Christian who holds office in the 2 congregation at Cenchreae. Give her, in the fellowship of the Lord, a welcome worthy of God's people, and stand by her in any business in which she may need your help, for she has herself been a good friend to many, including myself.

3 Give my greetings to Prisca and Aquila, my fellow-workers in Christ 4 Jesus. They risked their necks to save my life, and not I alone but all the 5 gentile congregations are grateful to them. Greet also the congregation at their house.

6 Give my greetings to my dear friend Epænetus, the first convert to 7 Christ in Asia, and to Mary, who toiled hard for you. Greet Andronicus and Junias^b my fellow-countrymen and comrades in captivity. They are eminent among the apostles, and they were Christians before I was.

8 Greetings to Ampliatus, my dear friend in the fellowship of the Lord, to 10 Urban my comrade in Christ, and to my dear Stachys. My greetings to 11 Apelles, well proved in Christ's service, to the household of Aristobulus, and my countryman Herodion, and to those of the household of Narcissus 12 who are in the Lord's fellowship. Greet Tryphaena and Tryphosa, who toil in the Lord's service, and dear Persis who has toiled in his service so 13 long. Give my greetings to Rufus, an outstanding follower of the Lord, 14 and to his mother, whom I call mother too. Greet Asyncritus, Phlegon, 15 Hermes, Patrobas, Hermas, and all friends in their company. Greet Philologus and Julia,^c Nereus and his sister, and Olympas, and all God's people associated with them.

16 Greet one another with the kiss of peace. All Christ's congregations send you their greetings.

17 I implore you, my friends, keep your eye on those who stir up quarrels and lead others astray, contrary to the teaching you received. Avoid them, 18 for such people are servants not of Christ our Lord but of their own appetites, and they seduce the minds of innocent people with smooth and 19 specious words. The fame of your obedience has spread everywhere. This makes me happy about you; yet I should wish you to be experts in goodness 20 but simpletons in evil; and the God of peace will soon crush Satan beneath your feet. The grace of our Lord Jesus be with you!^d

21 Greetings to you from my colleague Timothy, and from Lucius, Jason, 22 and Sosipater my fellow-countrymen. (I Tertius, who took this letter 23 down, add my Christian greetings.) Greetings also from Gaius, my host and host of the whole congregation, and from Erastus, treasurer of this city, and our brother Quartus.^e disclosed, and through prophetic scriptures by eternal God's command 27 made known to all nations, to bring them to faith and obedience—to God 27 who alone is wise, through Jesus Christ,^a be glory for endless ages! Amen.^{b c}

THE FIRST LETTER OF PAUL TO THE CORINTHIANS

Unity and order in the church

FROM PAUL, APOSTLE of Jesus Christ at God's call and by 1
 God's will, together with our colleague Sosthenes, to the congrega- 2
 tion of God's people at Corinth, dedicated to him in Christ Jesus, 2 claimed by him as his own, along with all men everywhere who invoke the 3 name of our Lord Jesus Christ—their Lord as well as ours.

Grace and peace to you from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ. 3

I am always thanking God for you. I thank him for his grace given to 4 you in Christ Jesus. I thank him for all the enrichment that has come to 5 you in Christ. You possess full knowledge and you can give full expression 5 to it, because in you the evidence for the truth of Christ has found con- 6 firmation. There is indeed no single gift you lack, while you wait expect- 7 tantly for our Lord Jesus Christ to reveal himself. He will keep you firm 8 to the end, without reproach on the Day of our Lord Jesus. It is God him- 9 self who called you to share in the life of his Son Jesus Christ our Lord; 9 and God keeps faith.

I appeal to you, my brothers, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ: 10 agree among yourselves, and avoid divisions; be firmly joined in unity of 10 mind and thought. I have been told, my brothers, by Chloe's people that 11 there are quarrels among you. What I mean is this: each of you is saying, 12
 'I am Paul's man', or 'I am for Apollos'; 'I follow Cephas', or 'I am 13 Christ's.' Surely Christ has not been divided among you! Was it Paul who 13 was crucified for you? Was it in the name of Paul that you were baptized? 14 Thank God, I never baptized one of you—except Crispus and Gaius. So 14 15 no one can say you were baptized in my name.—Yes, I did baptize the 16 altogether.

17 household of Stephanas; I cannot think of anyone else. Christ did not send me to baptize, but to proclaim the Gospel; and to do it without relying on the language of worldly wisdom, so that the fact of Christ on his cross might have its full weight.

18 This doctrine of the cross is sheer folly to those on their way to ruin,
19 but to us who are on the way to salvation it is the power of God. Scripture says, 'I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and bring to nothing the cleverness of the clever.' Where is your wise man now, your man of learning, or your subtle debater—limited, all of them, to this passing age?
20 God has made the wisdom of this world look foolish. As God in his wisdom ordained, the world failed to find him by its wisdom, and he chose to save 22 those who have faith by the folly of the Gospel. Jews call for miracles, 23 Greeks look for wisdom; but we proclaim Christ—yes, Christ nailed to the cross; and though this is a stumbling-block to Jews and folly to Greeks, 24 yet to those who have heard his call, Jews and Greeks alike, he is the power of God and the wisdom of God.

25 Divine folly is wiser than the wisdom of man, and divine weakness
26 stronger than man's strength. My brothers, think what sort of people you are, whom God has called. Few of you are men of wisdom, by any human 27 standard; few are powerful or highly born. Yet, to shame the wise, God has chosen what the world counts folly, and to shame what is strong, God 28 has chosen what the world counts weakness. He has chosen things low and 29 contemptible, mere nothings, to overthrow the existing order. And so 30 there is no place for human pride in the presence of God. You are in Christ Jesus by God's act, for God has made him our wisdom; he is our righteousness; in him we are consecrated and set free. And so (in the words of 31 Scripture), 'If a man must boast, let him boast of the Lord.'

2 As for me, brothers, when I came to you, I declared the attested truth of 2 God^a without display of fine words or wisdom. I resolved that while I was with you I would think of nothing but Jesus Christ—Christ nailed to the 3 4 cross. I came before you weak, nervous, and shaking with fear. The word I spoke, the gospel I proclaimed, did not sway you with subtle arguments;
5 it carried conviction by spiritual power, so that your faith might be built not upon human wisdom but upon the power of God.

6 And yet I do speak words of wisdom to those who are ripe for it, not a wisdom belonging to this passing age, nor to any of its governing powers,
7 which are declining to their end; I speak God's hidden wisdom, his secret
8 purpose framed from the very beginning to bring us to our full glory. The powers that rule the world have never known it; if they had, they would 9 not have crucified the Lord of glory. But, in the words of Scripture, 'Things beyond our seeing, things beyond our hearing, things beyond our 10 imagining, all prepared by God for those who love him', these it is that God has revealed to us through the Spirit.

For the Spirit explores everything, even the depths of God's own 11 nature. Among men, who knows what a man is but the man's own spirit within him? In the same way, only the Spirit of God knows what God is.
12 This is the Spirit that we have received from God, and not the spirit of the world, so that we may know all that God of his own grace has given us; and, because we are interpreting spiritual truths to those who have the Spirit, we speak of these gifts of God in words found for us not by our human wisdom but by the Spirit. A man who is unspiritual refuses what belongs to the Spirit of God; it is folly to him; he cannot grasp it, because it needs to be judged in the light of the Spirit. A man gifted with the Spirit can judge the worth of everything, but is not himself subject to judgement by his fellow-men. For (in the words of Scripture) 'who knows the mind of the Lord? Who can advise him?' We, however, possess the mind of Christ.

FOR MY PART, my brothers, I could not speak to you as I should speak to people who have the Spirit. I had to deal with you on the merely natural plane, as infants in Christ. And so I gave you milk to drink, instead of solid food, for which you were not yet ready. Indeed, you are still not ready for it, for you are still on the merely natural plane. Can you not see that while there is jealousy and strife among you, you are living on the purely human level of your lower nature? When one says, 'I am Paul's man', and another, 'I am for Apollos', are you not all too human?

After all, what is Apollos? What is Paul? We are simply God's agents in bringing you to the faith. Each of us performed the task which the Lord allotted to him: I planted the seed, and Apollos watered it; but God made it grow. Thus it is not the gardeners with their planting and watering who count, but God, who makes it grow. Whether they plant or water, they work as a team,^a though each will get his own pay for his own labour. We are God's fellow-workers;^b and you are God's garden.

Or again, you are God's building. I am like a skilled master-builder who by God's grace laid the foundation, and someone else is putting up the building. Let each take care how he builds. There can be no other foundation beyond that which is already laid; I mean Jesus Christ himself. If anyone builds on that foundation with gold, silver, and fine stone, or with wood, hay, and straw, the work that each man does will at last be brought to light; the day of judgement will expose it. For that day dawns in fire, and the fire will test the worth of each man's work. If a man's building stands, he will be rewarded; if it burns, he will have to bear the loss; and yet he will escape with his life, as one might from a fire. Surely you know that you are God's temple, where the Spirit of God dwells. Anyone who destroys God's temple will himself be destroyed^c by God, because the temple of God is holy; and that temple you are.

Make no mistake about this: if there is anyone among you who fancies himself wise—wise, I mean, by the standards of this passing age—he must become a fool to gain true wisdom. For the wisdom of this world is folly in God's sight. Scripture says, 'He traps the wise in their own cunning', and again, 'The Lord knows that the arguments of the wise are futile.' So never make mere men a cause for pride. For though everything belongs to you—Paul, Apollos, and Cephas, the world, life, and death, the present and the

^a Or Whether they plant or water, it is all the same. ^b Or We are fellow-workers in God's service. ^c Some witnesses read is himself destroyed.

23 future, all of them belong to you—yet you belong to Christ, and Christ to God.

4 We must be regarded as Christ's subordinates and as stewards of the 2 secrets of God. Well then, stewards are expected to show themselves trust-
 3 worthy. For my part, if I am called to account by you or by any human court of judgement, it does not matter to me in the least. Why, I do not even pass 4 judgement on myself, for I have nothing on my conscience; but that does 5 not mean I stand acquitted. My judge is the Lord. So pass no premature judgement; wait until the Lord comes. For he will bring to light what darkness hides, and disclose men's inward motives; then will be the time for each to receive from God such praise as he deserves.

6 Into this general picture, my friends, I have brought Apollos and myself on your account, so that you may take our case as an example, and learn to 'keep within the rules', as they say, and may not be inflated with pride 7 as you patronize one and flout the other. Who makes you, my friend, so important? What do you possess that was not given you? If then you really received it all as a gift, why take the credit to yourself?

8 All of you, no doubt, have everything you could desire. You have come into your fortune already. You have come into your kingdom—and left us out. How I wish you had indeed won your kingdom; then you might 9 share it with us! For it seems to me God has made us apostles the most abject of mankind. We are like men condemned to death in the arena, a 10 spectacle to the whole universe—angels as well as men. We are fools for Christ's sake, while you are such sensible Christians. We are weak; you are so powerful. We are in disgrace; you are honoured. To this day we go 11 hungry and thirsty and in rags; we are roughly handled; we wander from 12 place to place; we wear ourselves out working with our own hands. They 13 curse us, and we bless; they persecute us, and we submit to it; they slander us, and we humbly make our appeal. We are treated as the scum of the earth, the dregs of humanity, to this very day.

14 I am not writing thus to shame you, but to bring you to reason; for you 15 are my dear children. You may have ten thousand tutors in Christ, but you have only one father. For in Christ Jesus you are my offspring, and 16 mine alone, through the preaching of the Gospel. I appeal to you there-17 fore to follow my example. That is the very reason why I have sent Timothy, who is a dear son to me and a most trustworthy Christian; he will remind you of the way of life in Christ which I follow, and which I teach every-18 where in all our congregations. There are certain persons who are filled 19 with self-importance because they think I am not coming to Corinth. I shall come very soon, if the Lord will; and then I shall take the measure of these self-important people, not by what they say, but by what power is in them.
 20 21 The kingdom of God is not a matter of talk, but of power. Choose, then: am
 I to come to you with a rod in my hand, or in love and a gentle spirit?

5 I ACTUALLY HEAR REPORTS of sexual immorality among you, immorality such as even pagans do not tolerate: the union of a man with his 2 father's wife. And you can still be proud of yourselves! You ought to have gone into mourning; a man who has done such a deed should have been rooted out of your company. For my part, though I am absent in body, I am present in spirit, and my judgement upon the man who did this thing is already given, as if I were indeed present: you all being assembled in the name of our Lord Jesus, and I with you in spirit, with the power of our Lord Jesus over us, this man is to be consigned to Satan for the destruction of the body, so that his spirit may be saved on the Day of the Lord.

Your self-satisfaction ill becomes you. Have you never heard the saying, 'A little leaven leavens all the dough'? The old leaven of corruption is working among you. Purge it out, and then you will be bread of a new baking. As Christians you are unleavened Passover bread; for indeed our Passover has begun; the sacrifice is offered—Christ himself. So we who observe the festival must not use the old leaven, the leaven of corruption and wickedness, but only the unleavened bread which is sincerity and truth.

In my letter I wrote that you must have nothing to do with loose livers. I was not, of course, referring to pagans who lead loose lives or are grabbers and swindlers or idolaters. To avoid them you would have to get out of the world altogether. I now write that you must have nothing to do with any so-called Christian who leads a loose life, or is grasping, or idolatrous, a slanderer, a drunkard, or a swindler. You should not even eat with any such person. What business of mine is it to judge outsiders? God is their judge. You are judges within the fellowship. Root out the evil-doer from your community.

IF ONE OF YOUR NUMBER has a dispute with another, has he the face to take it to pagan law-courts instead of to the community of God's people? It is God's people who are to judge the world; surely you know that. And if the world is to come before you for judgement, are you incompetent to deal with these trifling cases? Are you not aware that we are to judge angels? How much more, mere matters of business! If therefore you have such business disputes, how can you entrust jurisdiction to outsiders, men who count for nothing in our community? I write this to shame you. Can it be that there is not a single wise man among you able to give a decision in a brother-Christian's cause? Must brother go to law with brother—and before unbelievers? Indeed, you already fall below your standard in going to law with one another at all. Why not rather suffer injury? Why not rather let yourself be robbed? So far from this, you actually injure and rob—injure and rob your brothers! Surely you know that the unjust will never come into possession of the kingdom of God. Make no mistake: no fornicator or idolater, none who are guilty either of adultery or of homosexual perversion, no thieves or grabbers or drunkards or slanderers or swindlers, will possess the kingdom of God. Such were some of you. But you have been through the purifying waters; you have been dedicated to God and justified through the name of the Lord Jesus and the Spirit of our God.

'I am free to do anything', you say. Yes, but not everything is for my good. No doubt I am free to do anything, but I for one will not let anything make free with me. 'Food is for the belly and the belly for food', you say. True; and one day God will put an end to both. But it is not true that the 14 body is for lust; it is for the Lord—and the Lord for the body. God not 15 only raised our Lord from the dead; he will also raise us by his power. Do you not know that your bodies are limbs and organs of Christ? Shall I then take from Christ his bodily parts and make them over to a harlot? Never!

 16 You surely know that anyone who links himself with a harlot becomes physically one with her (for Scripture says, ‘The pair shall become one 17 flesh’); but he who links himself with Christ is one with him, spiritually.
 18 Shun fornication. Every other sin that a man can commit is outside the 19 body; but the fornicator sins against his own body. Do you not know that your body is a shrine of the indwelling Holy Spirit, and the Spirit is God’s 20 gift to you? You do not belong to yourselves; you were bought at a price.
 Then honour God in your body.

The Christian in a pagan society

7 AND NOW for the matters you wrote about.
 It is a good thing for a man to have nothing to do with women;^a 2 but because there is so much immorality, let each man have his own wife
 3 and each woman her own husband. The husband must give the wife what 4 is due to her, and the wife equally must give the husband his due. The wife cannot claim her body as her own; it is her husband’s. Equally, the husband 5 cannot claim his body as his own; it is his wife’s. Do not deny yourselves to one another, except when you agree upon a temporary abstinence in order to devote yourselves to prayer; afterwards you may come together again;
 otherwise, for lack of self-control, you may be tempted by Satan.
 6 7 All this I say by way of concession, not command. I should like you all to be as I am myself; but everyone has the gift God has granted him, one this gift and another that.
 8 To the unmarried and to widows I say this: it is a good thing if they stay
 9 as I am myself; but if they cannot control themselves, they should marry.
 Better be married than burn with vain desire.
 10 To the married I give this ruling, which is not mine but the Lord’s: a 11 wife must not separate herself from her husband; if she does, she must either remain unmarried or be reconciled to her husband; and the husband must not divorce his wife.
 12 To the rest I say this, as my own word, not as the Lord’s: if a Christian has a heathen wife, and she is willing to live with him, he must not divorce 13 her; and a woman who has a heathen husband willing to live with her must 14 not divorce her husband. For the heathen husband now belongs to God through his Christian wife, and the heathen wife through her Christian husband. Otherwise your children would not belong to God, whereas in 15 fact they do. If on the other hand the heathen partner wishes for a separation, let him have it. In such cases the Christian husband or wife is under 16 no compulsion; but God’s call is a call to live in peace. Think of it: as a wife you may be your husband’s salvation; as a husband you may be your wife’s salvation.

^a Or You say, ‘It is a good thing . . . women’; . . .

However that may be, each one must order his life according to the gift the Lord has granted him and his condition when God called him. That is what I teach in all our congregations. Was a man called with the marks of circumcision on him? Let him not remove them. Was he uncircumcised when he was called? Let him not be circumcised. Circumcision or uncircumcision is neither here nor there; what matters is to keep God's commands. Every man should remain in the condition in which he was called.
 Were you a slave when you were called? Do not let that trouble you; but if a chance of liberty should come, take it.^d For the man who as a slave received the call to be a Christian is the Lord's freedman, and, equally, the free man who received the call is a slave in the service of Christ. You were bought at a price; do not become slaves of men. Thus each one, my friends, is to remain before God in the condition in which he received his call.

On the question of celibacy, I have no instructions from the Lord, but I give my judgement as one who by God's mercy is fit to be trusted.

It is my opinion, then, that in a time of stress like the present this is the best way for a man to live—it is best for a man to be as he is. Are you bound in marriage? Do not seek a dissolution. Has your marriage been dissolved?
 Do not seek a wife. If, however, you do marry, there is nothing wrong in it; and if a virgin marries, she has done no wrong. But those who marry will have pain and grief in this bodily life, and my aim is to spare you.

What I mean, my friends, is this. The time we live in will not last long.
 While it lasts, married men should be as if they had no wives; mourners should be as if they had nothing to grieve them, the joyful as if they did not rejoice; buyers must not count on keeping what they buy, nor those who use the world's wealth on using it to the full. For the whole frame of this world is passing away.

I want you to be free from anxious care. The unmarried man cares for the Lord's business; his aim is to please the Lord. But the married man cares for worldly things; his aim is to please his wife; and he has a divided mind. The unmarried or celibate woman cares^b for the Lord's business; her aim is to be dedicated to him in body as in spirit; but the married woman cares for worldly things; her aim is to please her husband.

In saying this I have no wish to keep you on a tight rein. I am thinking simply of your own good, of what is seemly, and of your freedom to wait upon the Lord without distraction.

But if a man has a partner in celibacy^c and feels that he is not behaving properly towards her, if, that is, his instincts are too strong for him,^d and something must be done, he may do as he pleases; there is nothing wrong in it; let them marry.^e But if a man is steadfast in his purpose, being under no compulsion, and has complete control of his own choice; and if he has decided in his own mind to preserve his partner^f in her virginity, he will

^a Or but even if a chance of liberty should come, choose rather to make good use of your servitude.

^e Or let the girl and her lover marry.

38 do well. Thus, he who marries his partner ^a does well, and he who does not will do better.

39 A wife is bound to her husband as long as he lives. But if the husband die, she is free to marry whom she will, provided the marriage is within the 40 Lord's fellowship. But she is better off as she is; that is my opinion, and I believe that I too have the Spirit of God.

8 NOW ABOUT FOOD consecrated to heathen deities.

Of course we all 'have knowledge', as you say. This 'knowledge' breeds
2 conceit; it is love that builds. If anyone fancies that he knows, he knows
3 nothing yet, in the true sense of knowing. But if a man loves, ^b he is acknowledged by God. ^c

4 Well then, about eating this consecrated food: of course, as you say,
'a false god has no existence in the real world. There is no god but one.'
5 For indeed, if there be so-called gods, whether in heaven or on earth—as 6 indeed there are many 'gods' and many 'lords'—yet for us there is one God, the Father, from whom all being comes, towards whom we move; and there is one Lord, Jesus Christ, through whom all things came to be, and we through him.

7 But not everyone knows this. There are some who have been so accustomed to idolatry ^d that even now they eat this food with a sense of its heathen consecration, and their conscience, being weak, is polluted by the 8 eating. Certainly food will not bring us into God's presence: if we do not 9 eat, we are none the worse, and if we eat, we are none the better. But be careful that this liberty of yours does not become a pitfall for the weak. If
10 a weak character sees you sitting down to a meal in a heathen temple—you, who 'have knowledge'—will not his conscience be emboldened to eat food
11 consecrated to the heathen deity? This 'knowledge' of yours is utter 12 disaster to the weak, the brother for whom Christ died. In thus sinning against your brothers and wounding their conscience, ^e you sin against 13 Christ. And therefore, if food be the downfall of my brother, I will never eat meat any more, for I will not be the cause of my brother's downfall.

9 AM I NOT A FREE MAN? Am I not an apostle? Did I not see Jesus our
2 Lord? Are not you my own handiwork, in the Lord? If others do not accept me as an apostle, you at least are bound to do so, for you are yourselves the very seal of my apostolate, in the Lord.

34 To those who put me in the dock this is my answer: Have I no right to 5 eat and drink? Have I no right to take a Christian wife about with me, like 6 the rest of the apostles and the Lord's brothers, and Cephas? Or are 7 Barnabas and I alone bound to work for our living? Did you ever hear of a man serving in the army at his own expense? or planting a vineyard without 8 eating the fruit of it? or tending a flock without using its milk? Do not 9 suppose I rely on these human analogies, for the law says the same; in the of the false god is so persistent . . .

^b Some witnesses read loves God.

^d Some witnesses read in whom the consciousness

^e Some witnesses insert weak as it is.

Law of Moses we read, 'You shall not muzzle a threshing ox.' Do you suppose God's concern is with oxen? Or is the reference clearly to ourselves? Of course it refers to us, in the sense that the ploughman should plough and the thresher thresh in the hope of getting some of the produce. If we have sown a spiritual crop for you, is it too much to expect from you a material harvest? If you allow others these rights, have not we a stronger claim?

But I have availed myself of no such right. On the contrary, I put up with all that comes my way rather than offer any hindrance to the gospel of Christ. You know (do you not?) that those who perform the temple service eat the temple offerings, and those who wait upon the altar claim their share of the sacrifice. In the same way the Lord gave instructions that those who preach the Gospel should earn their living by the Gospel. But I have never taken advantage of any such right, nor do I intend to claim it in this letter. I had rather die! No one shall make my boast an empty boast. Even if I preach the Gospel, I can claim no credit for it; I cannot help myself; it would be misery to me not to preach. If I did it of my own choice, I should be earning my pay; but since I do it apart from my own choice, I am simply discharging a trust.^a Then what is my pay? The satisfaction of preaching the Gospel without expense to anyone; in other words, of waiving the rights which my preaching gives me.

I am a free man and own no master; but I have made myself every man's servant, to win over as many as possible. To Jews I became like a Jew, to win Jews; as they are subject to the Law of Moses, I put myself under that law to win them, although I am not myself subject to it. To win Gentiles, who are outside the Law, I made myself like one of them, although I am not in truth outside God's law, being under the law of Christ. To the weak I became weak, to win the weak. Indeed, I have become everything in turn to men of every sort, so that in one way or another I may save some. All this I do for the sake of the Gospel, to bear my part in proclaiming it.

You know (do you not?) that at the sports all the runners run the race, though only one wins the prize. Like them, run to win! But every athlete goes into strict training. They do it to win a fading wreath; we, a wreath that never fades. For my part, I run with a clear goal before me; I am like a boxer who does not beat the air; I bruise my own body and make it know its master, for fear that after preaching to others I should find myself rejected.

You should understand, my brothers, that our ancestors were all under the pillar of cloud, and all of them passed through the Red Sea; and so they all received baptism into the fellowship of Moses in cloud and sea. They all ate the same supernatural food, and all drank the same supernatural drink; I mean, they all drank from the supernatural rock that accompanied their travels—and that rock was Christ. And yet, most of them were not accepted by God, for the desert was strewn with their corpses.

These events happened as symbols to warn us not to set our desires on evil things, as they did. Do not be idolaters, like some of them; as Scripture

^a Or If I do it willingly I am earning my pay; if I did it unwillingly I should still have a trust laid upon me.

8 has it, 'the people sat down to feast and rose up to revel'. Let us not com-9 mit fornication, as some of them did—and twenty-three thousand died in 10 one day. Let us not put the power of the Lord^a to the test, as some of them 11 did—and were destroyed by serpents. Do not grumble against God, as 12 some of them did—and were destroyed by the Destroyer.

11 All these things that happened to them were symbolic, and were recorded 12 for our benefit as a warning. For upon us the fulfilment of the ages has 13 come. If you feel sure that you are standing firm, beware! You may fall.
 14 So far you have faced no trial beyond what man can bear. God keeps faith, 15 and he will not allow you to be tested above your powers, but when the 16 test comes he will at the same time provide a way out, by enabling you to 17 sustain it.

14 15 SO THEN, DEAR FRIENDS, shun idolatry. I speak to you as men of sense.
 16 Form your own judgement on what I say. When we bless 'the cup of bless-17 ing', is it not a means of sharing in the blood of Christ? When we break 18 the bread, is it not a means of sharing in the body of Christ? Because there 19 is one loaf, we, many as we are, are one body; ^b for it is one loaf of which we 20 all partake.

21 Look at the Jewish people. Are not those who partake in the sacrificial 22 meal sharers in the altar? What do I imply by this? that an idol is anything 23 but an idol? or food offered to it anything more than food? No; but the 24 sacrifices the heathen offer are offered (in the words of Scripture) 'to 25 demons and to that which is not God'; and I will not have you become 26 partners with demons. You cannot drink the cup of the Lord and the cup 27 of demons. You cannot partake of the Lord's table and the table of demons.
 28 Can we defy the Lord? Are we stronger than he?

29 'We are free to do anything', you say. Yes, but is everything good for us?
 30 'We are free to do anything', but does everything help the building of the 31 community? Each of you must regard, not his own interests, but the other 32 man's.

33 You may eat anything sold in the meat-market without raising questions
 34 of conscience; for the earth is the Lord's and everything in it.

35 If an unbeliever invites you to a meal and you care to go, eat whatever is 36 put before you, without raising questions of conscience. But if somebody 37 says to you, 'This food has been offered in sacrifice', then, out of con-38 sideration for him, and for conscience' sake, do not eat it—not your con-39 science, I mean, but the other man's.

40 'What?' you say, 'is my freedom to be called in question by another 41 man's conscience? If I partake with thankfulness, why am I blamed for 42 eating food over which I have said grace?' Well, whether you eat or drink, 43 or whatever you are doing, do all for the honour of God: give no offence 44 to Jews, or Greeks, or to the church of God. For my part I always try 45 to meet everyone half-way, regarding not my own good but the good 46 of the many, so that they may be saved. Follow my example as I follow 47 Christ's.

^a Some witnesses read of Christ.

^b Or For we, many as we are, are one loaf, one body.

I COMMEND YOU for always keeping me in mind, and maintaining the tradition I handed on to you. But I wish you to understand that, while every man has Christ for his Head, woman's head is man,^a as Christ's Head is God. A man who keeps his head covered when he prays or prophesies brings shame on his head; a woman, on the contrary, brings shame on her head if she prays or prophesies bare-headed; it is as bad as if her head were shaved. If a woman is not to wear a veil she might as well have her hair cut off; but if it is a disgrace for her to be cropped and shaved, then she should wear a veil. A man has no need to cover his head, because man is the image of God, and the mirror of his glory, whereas woman reflects the glory of man.^b For man did not originally spring from woman, but woman was made out of man; and man was not created for woman's sake, but woman for the sake of man; and therefore it is woman's duty to have a sign of authority^c on her head, out of regard for the angels.^d And yet, in Christ's fellowship woman is as essential to man as man to woman. If woman was made out of man, it is through woman that man now comes to be; and God is the source of all.

Judge for yourselves: is it fitting for a woman to pray to God bare-headed? Does not Nature herself teach you that while flowing locks disgrace a man, they are a woman's glory? For her locks were given for covering.

However, if you insist on arguing, let me tell you, there is no such custom among us, or in any of the congregations of God's people.

In giving you these injunctions I must mention a practice which I cannot commend: your meetings tend to do more harm than good. To begin with, I am told that when you meet as a congregation you fall into sharply divided groups; and I believe there is some truth in it (for dissensions are necessary if only to show which of your members are sound). The result is that when you meet as a congregation, it is impossible for you to eat the Lord's Supper, because each of you is in such a hurry to eat his own, and while one goes hungry another has too much to drink. Have you no homes of your own to eat and drink in? Or are you so contemptuous of the church of God that you shame its poorer members? What am I to say? Can I commend you? On this point, certainly not!

For the tradition which I handed on to you came to me from the Lord himself: that the Lord Jesus, on the night of his arrest, took bread and, after giving thanks to God, broke it and said: 'This is my body, which is for you; do this as a memorial of me.' In the same way, he took the cup after supper, and said: 'This cup is the new covenant sealed by my blood. Whenever you drink it, do this as a memorial of me.' For every time you eat this bread and drink the cup, you proclaim the death of the Lord, until he comes.

It follows that anyone who eats the bread or drinks the cup of the Lord unworthily will be guilty of desecrating the body and blood of the Lord. A man must test himself before eating his share of the bread and drinking

^a Or a woman's head is her husband.

^b Or a woman reflects her husband's glory.

^c Some witnesses read to have a veil.

^d Or and therefore a woman should keep her dignity on her head, for fear of the angels.

29 from the cup. For he who eats and drinks eats and drinks judgement on 30 himself if he does not discern the Body. That is why many of you are feeble 31 and sick, and a number have died. But if we examined ourselves, we should 32 not thus fall under judgement. When, however, we do fall under the Lord's judgement, he is disciplining us, to save us from being condemned with the rest of the world.

33 Therefore, my brothers, when you meet for a meal, wait for one another.
 34 If you are hungry, eat at home, so that in meeting together you may not fall under judgement. The other matters I will arrange when I come.

Spiritual gifts

12 ABOUT GIFTS OF THE SPIRIT, there are some things of which I do not wish you to remain ignorant.

2 You know how, in the days when you were still pagan, you were swept 3 off to those dumb heathen gods, however you happened to be led.^a For this reason I must impress upon you that no one who says 'A curse on Jesus!' can be speaking under the influence of the Spirit of God. And no one can say 'Jesus is Lord!' except under the influence of the Holy Spirit.

4 5 There are varieties of gifts, but the same Spirit. There are varieties of 6 service, but the same Lord. There are many forms of work, but all of them,
 7 in all men, are the work of the same God. In each of us the Spirit is mani-8 fested in one particular way, for some useful purpose. One man, through the Spirit, has the gift of wise speech, while another, by the power of the 9 same Spirit, can put the deepest knowledge into words. Another, by the same Spirit, is granted faith; another, by the one Spirit, gifts of healing, 10 and another miraculous powers; another has the gift of prophecy, and another ability to distinguish true spirits from false; yet another has the gift of ecstatic utterance of different kinds, and another the ability to 11 interpret it. But all these gifts are the work of one and the same Spirit, distributing them separately to each individual at will.

12 For Christ is like a single body with its many limbs and organs, which, 13 many as they are, together make up one body. For indeed we were all brought into one body by baptism, in the one Spirit, whether we are Jews or Greeks, whether slaves or free men, and that one Holy Spirit was poured out for all of us to drink.

14 15 A body is not one single organ, but many. Suppose the foot should say,
 'Because I am not a hand, I do not belong to the body', it does belong to the 16 body none the less. Suppose the ear were to say, 'Because I am not an eye, 17 I do not belong to the body', it does still belong to the body. If the body were all eye, how could it hear? If the body were all ear, how could it smell?
 18 But, in fact, God appointed each limb and organ to its own place in the 19 body, as he chose. If the whole were one single organ, there would not be 20 a body at all; in fact, however, there are many different organs, but one 21 body. The eye cannot say to the hand, 'I do not need you'; nor the head to

^a Or . . . pagan, you would be seized by some power which drove you to those dumb heathen gods.

the feet, 'I do not need you.' Quite the contrary: those organs of the body 22 which seem to be more frail than others are indispensable, and those parts 23 of the body which we regard as less honourable are treated with special honour. To our unseemly parts is given a more than ordinary seemliness, whereas our seemly parts need no adorning. But God has combined the 24 various parts of the body, giving special honour to the humbler parts, so 25 that there might be no sense of division in the body, but that all its organs might feel the same concern for one another. If one organ suffers, they all 26 suffer together. If one flourishes, they all rejoice together.

Now you are Christ's body, and each of you a limb or organ of it. Within 27 28 our community God has appointed, in the first place apostles, in the second place prophets, thirdly teachers; then miracle-workers, then those who have gifts of healing, or ability to help others or power to guide them, or the gift of ecstatic utterance of various kinds. Are all apostles? all prophets? 29 all teachers? Do all work miracles? Have all gifts of healing? Do all speak 30 in tongues of ecstasy? Can all interpret them? The higher gifts are those 31 you should aim at.

And now I will show you the best way of all.

I may speak in tongues of men or of angels, but if I am without love, I 13 am a sounding gong or a clanging cymbal. I may have the gift of prophecy, and know every hidden truth; I may have faith strong enough to move mountains; but if I have no love, I am nothing. I may dole out all I possess, 3 or even give my body to be burnt,^a but if I have no love, I am none the better.

Love is patient; love is kind and envies no one. Love is never boastful, 4 nor conceited, nor rude; never selfish, not quick to take offence. Love keeps 5 no score of wrongs; does not gloat over other men's sins, but delights in the 6 truth. There is nothing love cannot face; there is no limit to its faith, its 7 hope, and its endurance.

Love will never come to an end. Are there prophets? their work will be 8 over. Are there tongues of ecstasy? they will cease. Is there knowledge?
 it will vanish away; for our knowledge and our prophecy alike are partial, 9 and the partial vanishes when wholeness comes. When I was a child, my 10 11 speech, my outlook, and my thoughts were all childish. When I grew up, I had finished with childish things. Now we see only puzzling reflections in a mirror, but then we shall see face to face. My knowledge now is partial; then it will be whole, like God's knowledge of me. In a word, there are three 13 things that last for ever: faith, hope, and love; but the greatest of them all is love.

Put love first; but there are other gifts of the Spirit at which you should 14 aim also, and above all prophecy. When a man is using the language of ecstasy he is talking with God, not with men, for no man understands him; he is no doubt inspired, but he speaks mysteries. On the other hand, when 3 a man prophesies, he is talking to men, and his words have power to build;
 they stimulate and they encourage. The language of ecstasy is good for the 4 speaker himself, but it is prophecy that builds up a Christian community.
 I should be pleased for you all to use the tongues of ecstasy, but better 5

^a Some witnesses read even seek glory by self-sacrifice.

pleased for you to prophesy. The prophet is worth more than the man of ecstatic speech—unless indeed he can explain its meaning, and so help to 6 build up the community. Suppose, my friends, that when I come to you I use ecstatic language: what good shall I do you, unless what I say contains something by way of revelation, or enlightenment, or prophecy, or instruction?

7 Even with inanimate things that produce sounds—a flute, say, or a lyre—unless their notes mark definite intervals, how can you tell what tune is 8 being played? Or again, if the trumpet-call is not clear, who will prepare 9 for battle? In the same way if your ecstatic utterance yields no precise meaning, how can anyone tell what you are saying? You will be talking into 10 the air. How many different kinds of sound there are, or may be, in the 11 world! Nothing is altogether soundless. Well then, if I do not know the meaning of the sound the speaker makes, his words will be gibberish to me, and mine to him. You are, I know, eager for gifts of the Spirit; then aspire 12 above all to excel in those which build up the church.

13 I say, then, that the man who falls into ecstatic utterance should pray
14 for the ability to interpret. If I use such language in my prayer, the Spirit in me prays, but my intellect lies fallow. What then? I will pray as I am 15 inspired to pray, but I will also pray intelligently. I will sing hymns as 16 I am inspired to sing, but I will sing intelligently too. Suppose you are praising God in the language of inspiration: how will the plain man who is present be able to say 'Amen' to your thanksgiving, when he does not know 17 what you are saying? Your prayer of thanksgiving may be all that could be desired, but it is no help to the other man. Thank God, I am more gifted in 18 ecstatic utterance than any of you,^a but in the congregation I would rather speak five intelligible words, for the benefit of others as well as myself, than thousands of words in the language of ecstasy.

20 Do not be childish, my friends. Be as innocent of evil as babes, but at 21 least be grown-up in your thinking. We read in the Law: 'I will speak to this nation through men of strange tongues, and by the lips of foreigners;
22 and even so they will not heed me, says the Lord.' Clearly then these 'strange tongues' are not intended as a sign for believers, but for unbelievers, whereas prophecy is designed not for unbelievers but for those 23 who hold the faith. So if the whole congregation is assembled and all are using the 'strange tongues' of ecstasy, and some uninstructed persons or 24 unbelievers should enter, will they not think you are mad? But if all are uttering prophecies, the visitor, when he enters, hears from everyone
25 something that searches his conscience and brings conviction, and the secrets of his heart are laid bare. So he will fall down and worship God, crying, 'God is certainly among you!'

26 To sum up, my friends: when you meet for worship, each of you contributes a hymn, some instruction, a revelation, an ecstatic utterance, or the interpretation of such an utterance. All of these must aim at one thing:
27 to build up the church. If it is a matter of ecstatic utterance, only two should 28 speak, or at most three, one at a time, and someone must interpret. If there is no interpreter, the speaker had better not address the meeting at ^a Or . . . man. I say the thanksgiving; I use ecstatic speech more than any of you.

all, but speak to himself and to God. Of the prophets, two or three may speak, while the rest exercise their judgement upon what is said. If someone else, sitting in his place, receives a revelation, let the first speaker stop.
 You can all prophesy, one at a time, so that the whole congregation may receive instruction and encouragement. It is for prophets to control prophetic inspiration, for the God who inspires them is not a God of disorder but of peace.

As in all congregations of God's people, women^a should not address the meeting. They have no licence to speak, but should keep their place as the law directs. If there is something they want to know, they can ask their own husbands at home. It is a shocking thing that a woman should address the congregation.

Did the word of God originate with you? Or are you the only people to whom it came? If anyone claims to be inspired or a prophet, let him recognize that what I write has the Lord's authority. If he does not acknowledge this, God does not acknowledge him.^b

In short, my friends, be eager to prophesy; do not forbid ecstatic utterance; but let all be done decently and in order.

Life after death

AND NOW, MY BROTHERS, I must remind you of the gospel that I preached to you; the gospel which you received, on which you have taken your stand, and which is now bringing you salvation. Do you still hold fast the Gospel as I preached it to you? If not, your conversion was in vain.^c

First and foremost, I handed on to you the facts which had been imparted to me: that Christ died for our sins, in accordance with the scriptures; that he was buried; that he was raised to life on the third day, according to the scriptures; and that he appeared to Cephas, and afterwards to the Twelve. Then he appeared to over five hundred of our brothers at once, most of whom are still alive, though some have died. Then he appeared to James, and afterwards to all the apostles.

In the end he appeared even to me. It was like an abnormal birth; I had persecuted the church of God and am therefore inferior to all other apostles—indeed not fit to be called an apostle. However, by God's grace
 I am what I am, nor has his grace been given to me in vain; on the contrary, in my labours I have outdone them all—not I, indeed, but the grace of God working with me. But what matter, I or they? This is what we all proclaim, and this is what you believed.

Now if this is what we proclaim, that Christ was raised from the dead, how can some of you say there is no resurrection of the dead? If there be no resurrection, then Christ was not raised; and if Christ was not raised,

^a Or of peace, as in all communities of God's people. Women . . .
 witnesses read If he refuses to recognize this, let him refuse!

^b Some
^c Or Do you remember the terms in which I preached the Gospel to you?—for I assume you did not accept it thoughtlessly.

15 then our gospel is null and void, and so is your faith; and we turn out to be 16 lying witnesses for God, because we bore witness that he raised Christ to 17 life, whereas, if the dead are not raised, he did not raise him. For if the dead 18 are not raised, it follows that Christ was not raised; and if Christ was not 19 raised, your faith has nothing in it and you are still in your old state of sin.
 20 It follows also that those who have died within Christ's fellowship are 21 utterly lost. If it is for this life only that Christ has given us hope,^a we of all 22 men are most to be pitied.

23 But the truth is, Christ was raised to life—the firstfruits of the harvest
 24 of the dead. For since it was a man who brought death into the world, a 25 man also brought resurrection of the dead. As in Adam all men die, so in 26 Christ all will be brought to life; but each in his own proper place: Christ
 27 the firstfruits, and afterwards, at his coming, those who belong to Christ.
 28 Then comes the end, when he delivers up the kingdom to God the Father, 29 after abolishing every kind of domination, authority, and power. For he is 30 destined to reign until God has put all enemies under his feet; and the last 31 enemy to be abolished is death.^b Scripture says, 'He has put all things in 32 subjection under his feet.' But in saying 'all things', it clearly means to 33 exclude God who subordinates them; and when all things are thus subject 34 to him, then the Son himself will also be made subordinate to God who 35 made all things subject to him, and thus God will be all in all.

36 Again, there are those who receive baptism on behalf of the dead. Why 37 should they do this? If the dead are not raised to life at all, what do they 38 mean by being baptized on their behalf?

39 And we ourselves—why do we face these dangers hour by hour? Every 40 day I die: I swear it by my pride in you, my brothers—for in Christ Jesus 41 our Lord I am proud of you. If, as the saying is, I 'fought wild beasts' at 42 Ephesus, what have I gained by it? ^c If the dead are never raised to life, 'let 43 us eat and drink, for tomorrow we die'.

44 Make no mistake: 'Bad company is the ruin of a good character.' Come 45 back to a sober and upright life and leave your sinful ways. There are some 46 who know nothing of God; to your shame I say it.

47 But, you may ask, how are the dead raised? In what kind of body?
 48 How foolish! The seed you sow does not come to life unless it has first 49 died; and what you sow is not the body that shall be, but a naked grain, 50 perhaps of wheat, or of some other kind; and God clothes it with the body of 51 his choice, each seed with its own particular body. All flesh is not the same 52 flesh: there is flesh of men, flesh of beasts, of birds, and of fishes—all dif-53 ferent. There are heavenly bodies and earthly bodies; and the splendour of 54 the heavenly bodies is one thing, the splendour of the earthly, another. The 55 sun has a splendour of its own, the moon another splendour, and the stars
 56 another, for star differs from star in brightness. So it is with the resurrection 57 of the dead. What is sown in the earth as a perishable thing is raised

^a Or If it is only an uncertain hope that our life in Christ has given us . . . ^b Or Then at the end, when . . . power (for he . . . feet), the last enemy, death, will imperishable. Sown in humiliation, it is raised in glory; sown in weakness, 43 it is raised in power; sown as an animal body, it is raised as a spiritual body. 44

If there is such a thing as an animal body, there is also a spiritual body. 45
It is in this sense that Scripture says, 'The first man, Adam, became an 46 animate being', whereas the last Adam has become a life-giving spirit. 47 Observe, the spiritual does not come first; the animal body comes first, and 48 then the spiritual. The first man was made 'of the dust of the earth': the 49 second man is from heaven. The man made of dust is the pattern of all men of dust, and the heavenly man is the pattern of all the heavenly. As we have worn the likeness of the man made of dust, so we shall wear the likeness of the heavenly man.

What I mean, my brothers, is this: flesh and blood can never possess 50
the kingdom of God, and the perishable cannot possess immortality. 51 Listen! I will unfold a mystery: we shall not all die, but we shall all be 52 changed in a flash, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trumpet-call. For 53 the trumpet will sound, and the dead will rise immortal, and we shall be 54 changed. This perishable being must be clothed with the imperishable, 55 and what is mortal must be clothed with immortality. And when ^a our 56 mortality has been clothed with immortality, then the saying of Scripture 57 will come true: 'Death is swallowed up; victory is won!' 'O Death, where is your victory? O Death, where is your sting?' The sting of death is sin, and sin gains its power from the law; but, God be praised, he gives us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.

Therefore, my beloved brothers, stand firm and immovable, and work for 58 the Lord always, work without limit, since you know that in the Lord your labour cannot be lost.

Christian giving

AND NOW about the collection in aid of God's people: you should 16 follow my directions to our congregations in Galatia. Every Sunday 2 each of you is to put aside and keep by him a sum in proportion to his gains, so that there may be no collecting when I come. When I arrive, I will give 3 letters of introduction to persons approved by you, and send them to carry your gift to Jerusalem. If it should seem worth while for me to go as well, 4 they shall go with me.

I shall come to Corinth after passing through Macedonia—for I am 5 travelling by way of Macedonia—and I may stay with you, perhaps even 6 for the whole winter, and then you can help me on my way wherever I go next. I do not want this to be a flying visit; I hope to spend some time with 7 you, if the Lord permits. But I shall remain at Ephesus until Whitsuntide, 8 for a great opportunity has opened for effective work, and there is much 9 opposition.

If Timothy comes, see that you put him at his ease; for it is the Lord's 10 work that he is engaged upon, as I am myself; so no one must slight him. 11

^a Some witnesses insert our perishable nature has been clothed with the imperishable,

12 Send him happily on his way to join me, since I am waiting for him with our friends. As for our friend Apollos, I urged him strongly to go to Corinth with the others, but he was quite determined not to go^a at present; he will go when opportunity offers.

13 14 Be alert; stand firm in the faith; be valiant and strong. Let all you do be done in love.

15 I have a request to make of you, my brothers. You know that the Stephanas family were the first converts in Achaia, and have laid themselves out to serve God's people. I wish you to give their due position to such persons, and indeed to everyone who labours hard at our common task. 16 It is a great pleasure to me that Stephanas, Fortunatus, and Achaicus have 17 arrived, because they have done what you had no chance to do; they have 18 relieved my mind—and no doubt yours too. Such men deserve recognition.

19 Greetings from the congregations in Asia. Many greetings in the Lord 20 from Aquila and Prisca and the congregation at their house. Greetings from all the brothers. Greet one another with the kiss of peace.

21 This greeting is in my own hand—PAUL.

22 If anyone does not love the Lord, let him be outcast.

Marana tha—Come, O Lord!

23 The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ be with you.

24 My love to you all in Christ Jesus. Amen.

THE SECOND LETTER OF PAUL TO THE CORINTHIANS

Personal religion and the ministry

1 FROM PAUL, APOSTLE of Christ Jesus by God's will, and 2 our colleague Timothy, to the congregation of God's people at 3 Corinth, together with all who are dedicated to him throughout the 4 whole of Achaia.

5 Grace and peace to you from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

6 Praise be to the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the all-merciful Father, the God whose consolation never fails us! He comforts us in all our troubles, so that we in turn may be able to comfort others in any trouble of theirs and to share with them the consolation we ourselves receive from God. As Christ's cup of suffering overflows, and we suffer with him, so also through Christ our consolation overflows. If distress be our lot, it is the price we pay for your consolation, for your salvation; if our

^a Or but it was by no means the will of God that he should go . . .

lot be consolation, it is to help us to bring you comfort, and strength to face with fortitude the same sufferings we now endure. And our hope for you is firmly grounded;^a for we know that if you have part in the suffering, you have part also in the divine consolation. 7

In saying this, we should like you to know, dear friends, how serious was the trouble that came upon us in the province of Asia. The burden of it was far too heavy for us to bear, so heavy that we even despaired of life. Indeed, we felt in our hearts that we had received a death-sentence. This was meant to teach us not to place reliance on ourselves, but on God who raises the dead. From such mortal peril God delivered us; and he will deliver us again,^b he on whom our hope is fixed. Yes, he will continue to deliver us, if you will co-operate by praying for us. Then, with so many people praying for our deliverance, there will be many to give thanks on our behalf for the gracious favour God has shown towards us. 8 9 10 11

There is one thing we are proud of: our conscience assures us that in our dealings with our fellow-men, and above all in our dealings with you, our conduct has been governed by a devout and godly sincerity,^c by the grace of God and not by worldly wisdom. There is nothing in our letters to you but what you can read for yourselves, and understand too. Partial as your present knowledge of us is, you will I hope come to understand fully that you have as much reason to be proud of us, as we of you, on the Day of our Lord Jesus. 12 13 14

It was because I felt so confident about all this that I had intended to come first of all to you^d and give you the benefit of a double visit: I meant to visit you on my way to Macedonia, and after leaving Macedonia, to return to you, and you would then send me on my way to Judaea. That was my intention; did I lightly change my mind?^e Or do I, when I frame my plans, frame them as a worldly man might, so that it should rest with me to say 'yes' and 'yes', or 'no' and 'no'? As God is true, the language in which we address you is not an ambiguous blend of Yes and No. The Son of God, Christ Jesus, proclaimed among you by us (by Silvanus and Timothy, I mean, as well as myself), was never a blend of Yes and No. With him it was, and is, Yes. He is the Yes pronounced upon God's promises, every one of them. That is why, when we give glory to God, it is through Christ Jesus that we say 'Amen'. And if you and we belong to Christ, guaranteed as his and anointed, it is all God's doing; it is God also who has set his seal upon us, and as a pledge of what is to come has given the Spirit to dwell in our hearts. 15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22

I appeal to God to witness what I am going to say; I stake my life upon it: it was out of consideration for you that I did not after all come to Corinth. Do not think we are dictating the terms of your faith; your hold on the faith is secure enough. We are working with you for your own happiness. So I made up my mind that my next visit to you must not be another painful one. If I cause pain to you, who is left to cheer me up, except you, whom I have offended? This is precisely the point I made in my letter: I did not 23 24 2 2 3

^a Some witnesses give these clauses If distress . . . firmly grounded in different sequence.

^b Some witnesses read and he still delivers us. ^c Some witnesses read by sincere and godly singleness of mind.

^d Or had originally intended to come to you . . .

^e Or In forming this intention, did I act irresponsibly?

want, I said, to come and be made miserable by the very people who ought to have made me happy; and I had sufficient confidence in you all to know that for me to be happy is for all of you to be happy. That letter I sent you came out of great distress and anxiety; how many tears I shed as I wrote it! But I never meant to cause you pain; I wanted you rather to know the love, the more than ordinary love, that I have for you.

Any injury that has been done, has not been done to me; to some extent, not to labour the point, it has been done to you all. The penalty on which the general meeting has agreed has met the offence well enough. Something very different is called for now: you must forgive the offender and put heart into him; the man's sorrow must not be made so severe as to overwhelm him. I urge you therefore to assure him of your love for him by a formal act. I wrote, I may say, to see how you stood the test, whether you fully accepted my authority. But anyone who has your forgiveness has mine too; and when I speak of forgiving (so far as there is anything for me to forgive), I mean that as the representative of Christ I have forgiven him for your sake.^a For Satan must not be allowed to get the better of us; we know his wiles all too well.

Then when I came to Troas, where I was to preach the gospel of Christ, and where an opening awaited me for the Lord's work, I still found no relief of mind, for my colleague Titus was not there to meet me; so I took leave of the people there and went off to Macedonia. But thanks be to God, who continually leads us about, captives in Christ's triumphal procession, and everywhere uses us to reveal and spread abroad the fragrance of the knowledge of himself! We are indeed the incense offered by Christ to God, both for those who are on the way to salvation, and for those who are on the way to perdition: to the latter it is a deadly fume that kills, to the former a vital fragrance that brings life. Who is equal to such a calling? At least we do not go hawking the word of God about, as so many do; when we declare the word we do it in sincerity, as from God and in God's sight, as members of Christ.

ARE WE BEGINNING all over again to produce our credentials? Do we, like some people, need letters of introduction to you, or from you? No, you are all the letter we need, a letter written on our heart; any man can see it for what it is and read it for himself. And as for you, it is plain that you are a letter that has come from Christ, given to us to deliver: a letter written not with ink but with the Spirit of the living God, written not on stone tablets but on the pages of the human heart.

It is in full reliance upon God, through Christ, that we make such claims. There is no question of our being qualified in ourselves: we cannot claim anything as our own. The qualification we have comes from God; it is he who has qualified us to dispense his new covenant—a covenant expressed not in a written document, but in a spiritual bond; for the written law condemns to death, but the Spirit gives life.

The law, then, engraved letter by letter upon stone, dispensed death, and yet it was inaugurated with divine splendour. That splendour, though it was soon to fade, made the face of Moses so bright that the Israelites could not gaze steadily at him. But if so, must not even greater splendour rest upon the divine dispensation of the Spirit? If splendour accompanied the dispensation under which we are condemned, how much richer in splendour must that one be under which we are acquitted! Indeed, the splendour that once was is now no splendour at all; it is outshone by a splendour greater still. For if that which was soon to fade had its moment of splendour, how much greater is the splendour of that which endures!

^a Or that I have forgiven him for your sake, in the presence of Christ.

With such a hope as this we speak out boldly; it is not for us to do as Moses did: he put a veil over his face to keep the Israelites from gazing on that fading splendour until it was gone. But in any case their minds had been made insensitive, for that same veil is there to this very day when the lesson is read from the old covenant; and it is never lifted, because only in Christ is the old covenant abrogated.^a But to this very day, every time the Law of Moses is read, a veil lies over the minds of the hearers. However, as Scripture says of Moses, 'whenever he turns to the Lord the veil is removed'.^b Now the Lord of whom this passage speaks is the Spirit; and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty. And because for us there is no veil over the face, we all reflect as in a mirror the splendour of the Lord; thus we are transfigured into his likeness, from splendour to splendour; such is the influence of the Lord who is Spirit.

SEEING THEN THAT WE have been entrusted with this commission, which we owe entirely to God's mercy, we never lose heart. We have renounced the deeds that men hide for very shame; we neither practise cunning nor distort the word of God; only by declaring the truth openly do we recommend ourselves, and then it is to the common conscience of our fellow-men and in the sight of God. And if indeed our gospel be found veiled, the only people who find it so are those on the way to perdition. Their unbelieving minds are so blinded by the god of this passing age, that the gospel of the glory of Christ, who is the very image of God, cannot dawn upon them and bring them light. It is not ourselves that we proclaim; we proclaim Christ Jesus as Lord, and ourselves as your servants, for Jesus' sake. For the same God who said, 'Out of darkness let light shine', has caused his light to shine within us, to give the light of revelation—the revelation of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ.

We are no better than pots of earthenware to contain this treasure, and this proves that such transcendent power does not come from us, but is God's alone. Hard-pressed on every side, we are never hemmed in; bewildered, we are never at our wits' end; hunted, we are never abandoned to our fate; struck down, we are not left to die. Wherever we go we carry death with us in our body, the death that Jesus died, that in this body also life may reveal itself, the life that Jesus lives. For continually, while still alive, we are being surrendered into the hands of death, for Jesus' sake, so that the life of Jesus also may be revealed in this mortal body of ours. Thus death is at work in us, and life in you.

^a Or in Christ is it abolished.

^b Or as Scripture says, when one turns to the Lord the veil is removed.

13 But Scripture says, 'I believed, and therefore I spoke out', and we too, 14 in the same spirit of faith, believe and therefore speak out; for we know that he who raised the Lord Jesus to life will with Jesus raise us too, and 15 bring us to his presence, and you with us. Indeed, it is for your sake that all things are ordered, so that, as the abounding grace of God is shared by more and more, the greater may be the chorus of thanksgiving that ascends to the glory of God.

16 No wonder we do not lose heart! Though our outward humanity is in 17 decay, yet day by day we are inwardly renewed. Our troubles are slight and short-lived; and their outcome an eternal glory which outweighs them 18 far. Meanwhile our eyes are fixed, not on the things that are seen, but on the things that are unseen: for what is seen passes away; what is unseen is 5 eternal. For we know that if the earthly frame that houses us today should be demolished, we possess a building which God has provided—a house 2 not made by human hands, eternal, and in heaven. In this present body we do indeed groan; we yearn to have our heavenly habitation put on over this 3 one—in the hope that, being thus clothed, we shall not find ourselves naked.
 4 We groan indeed, we who are enclosed within this earthly frame; we are oppressed because we do not want to have the old body stripped off. Rather our desire is to have the new body put on over it, so that our mortal part 5 may be absorbed into life immortal. God himself has shaped us for this very end; and as a pledge of it he has given us the Spirit.

6 Therefore we never cease to be confident. We know that so long as we 7 are at home in the body we are exiles from the Lord; faith is our guide, we do not see him. ^a We are confident, I repeat, and would rather leave our 9 home in the body and go to live with the Lord. We therefore make it our 10 ambition, wherever we are, here or there, to be acceptable to him. For we must all have our lives laid open before the tribunal of Christ, where each must receive what is due to him for his conduct in the body, good or bad.

11 WITH THIS FEAR of the Lord before our eyes we address our appeal to men. To God our lives lie open, as I hope they also lie open to you in your 12 heart of hearts. This is not another attempt to recommend ourselves to you:
 we are rather giving you a chance to show yourselves proud of us; then you will have something to say to those whose pride is all in outward show and 13 not in inward worth. It may be we are beside ourselves, but it is for God;
 14 if we are in our right mind, it is for you. For the love of Christ leaves us no choice, when once we have reached the conclusion that one man died for 15 all and therefore all mankind has died. His purpose in dying for all was that men, while still in life, should cease to live for themselves, and should 16 live for him who for their sake died and was raised to life. With us therefore worldly standards have ceased to count in our estimate of any man; even if once they counted in our understanding of Christ, they do so now no 17 longer. When anyone is united to Christ, there is a new world; ^b the old order has gone, and a new order has already begun. ^c

^a Or faith is our guide and not the things we see.

^b Or a new act of creation.

^c Or When anyone is united to Christ he is a new creature: his old life is over; a new life has already begun.

From first to last this has been the work of God. He has reconciled us men 18 to himself through Christ, and he has enlisted us in this service of reconcili- 19 ation. What I mean is, that God was in Christ reconciling the world to himself,^a no longer holding men's misdeeds against them, and that he has entrusted us with the message of reconciliation. We come therefore as 20 Christ's ambassadors. It is as if God were appealing to you through us: in Christ's name, we implore you, be reconciled to God! Christ was innocent 21 of sin, and yet for our sake God made him one with the sinfulness of men,^b so that in him we might be made one with the goodness of God himself. 6 Sharing in God's work, we urge this appeal upon you: you have received the grace of God; do not let it go for nothing. God's own words are: 2

'In the hour of my favour I gave heed to you;
on the day of deliverance I came to your aid.'

The hour of favour has now come; now, I say, has the day of deliverance dawned.

In order that our service may not be brought into discredit, we avoid giving 3 offence in anything. As God's servants, we try to recommend ourselves 4 in all circumstances by our steadfast endurance: in distress, hardships, and dire straits; flogged, imprisoned, mobbed; overworked, sleepless, 5 starving. We recommend ourselves by the innocence of our behaviour, 6 our grasp of truth, our patience and kindness; by gifts of the Holy Spirit, by sincere love, by declaring the truth, by the power of God. We wield the 7 weapons of righteousness in right hand and left. Honour and dishonour, 8 praise and blame, are alike our lot: we are the impostors who speak the truth, the unknown men whom all men know; dying we still live on; 9 disciplined by suffering, we are not done to death; in our sorrows we 10 have always cause for joy; poor ourselves, we bring wealth to many;
penniless, we own the world.

Men of Corinth, we have spoken very frankly to you; we have opened 11 our heart wide to you all. On our part there is no constraint; any constraint 12 there may be is in yourselves. In fair exchange then (may a father speak so 13 to his children?) open wide your hearts to us.

Problems of church life and discipline

DO NOT UNITE yourselves with unbelievers; they are no fit mates 14 for you. What has righteousness to do with wickedness? Can light 15 consort with darkness? Can Christ agree with Belial, or a believer join hands with an unbeliever? Can there be a compact between the temple of 16 God and the idols of the heathen? And the temple of the living God is what we are. God's own words are: 'I will live and move about among them; I will be their God, and they shall be my people.' And therefore, 17
'come away and leave them, separate yourselves, says the Lord; touch nothing unclean. Then I will accept you, says the Lord, the Ruler of all 18

^a Or God was reconciling the world to himself by Christ.

^b Or and yet God

made him a sin-offering for us.

being; I will be a father to you, and you shall be my sons and daughters.'

7 Such are the promises that have been made to us, dear friends. Let us therefore cleanse ourselves from all that can defile flesh or spirit, and in the fear of God complete our consecration.

2 DO MAKE A PLACE for us in your hearts! We have wronged no one, ruined
3 no one, taken advantage of no one. I do not want to blame you. Why, as I
4 have told you before, the place you have in our heart is such that, come 5 death, come life, we meet it together. I am perfectly frank with you. I have 6 great pride in you. In all our many troubles my cup is full of consolation, 7 and overflows with joy.

5 Even when we reached Macedonia there was still no relief for this poor
6 body of ours; instead, there was trouble at every turn, quarrels all round
7 us, forebodings in our heart. But God, who brings comfort to the downcast, 8 has comforted us by the arrival of Titus, and not merely by his arrival, 9 but by his being so greatly comforted about you. He has told us how you 10 long for me, how sorry you are, and how eager to take my side; and that 11 has made me happier still.

8 Even if I did wound you by the letter I sent, I do not now regret it. I 9 may have been sorry for it when I saw that the letter had caused you pain, 10 even if only for a time; but now I am happy, not that your feelings were 11 wounded but that the wound led to a change of heart. You bore the smart 12 as God would have you bear it, and so you are no losers by what we did.
13 For the wound which is borne in God's way brings a change of heart too 14 salutary to regret; but the hurt which is borne in the world's way brings 15 death. You bore your hurt in God's way, and see what its results have been!
16 It made you take the matter seriously and vindicate yourselves. How 17 angered you were, how apprehensive! How your longing for me awoke, 18 yes, and your devotion and your eagerness to see justice done! At every 19 point you have cleared yourselves of blame in this trouble. And so, although 20 I did send you that letter, it was not the offender or his victim that most 21 concerned me. My aim in writing was to help to make plain to you, in the 22 sight of God, how truly you are devoted to us. That is why we have been so 23 encouraged.

But besides being encouraged ourselves we have also been delighted beyond everything by seeing how happy Titus is: you have all helped to 14 set his mind completely at rest. Anything I may have said to him to show 15 my pride in you has been justified. Every word we ever addressed to you 16 bore the mark of truth; and the same holds of the proud boast we made in 17 the presence of Titus: that also has proved true. His heart warms all the 18 more to you as he recalls how ready you all were to do what he asked, meet-19 ing him as you did in fear and trembling. How happy I am now to have 20 complete confidence in you!

8 WE MUST TELL YOU, friends, about the grace of generosity which God
2 has imparted to^a our congregations in Macedonia. The troubles they have been through have tried them hard, yet in all this they have been so

^a Or how gracious God has been to . . .

exuberantly happy that from the depths of their poverty they have shown themselves lavishly open-handed. Going to the limit of their resources, as I can testify, and even beyond that limit, they begged us most insistently, and on their own initiative, to be allowed to share in this generous service to their fellow-Christians. And their giving surpassed our expectations; they gave their very selves, offering them in the first instance to the Lord, but also, under God, to us. The upshot is that we have asked Titus, who began it all, to visit you and bring this work of generosity also to completion. You are so rich in everything—in faith, speech, knowledge, and zeal of every kind, as well as in the loving regard you have for us^a—surely you should show yourselves equally lavish in this generous service! This is not meant as an order; by telling you how keen others are I am putting your love to the test. For you know how generous our Lord Jesus Christ has been: he was rich, yet for your sake he became poor, so that through his poverty you might become rich.

Here is my considered opinion on the matter. What I ask you to do is in your own interests. You made a good beginning last year both in the work you did and in your willingness to undertake it. Now I want you to go on and finish it: be as eager to complete the scheme as you were to adopt it, and give according to your means. Provided there is an eager desire to give, God accepts what a man has; he does not ask for what he has not. There is no question of relieving others at the cost of hardship to yourselves; it is a question of equality. At the moment your surplus meets their need, but one day your need may be met from their surplus. The aim is equality; as Scripture has it, 'The man who got much had no more than enough, and the man who got little did not go short.'

I thank God that he has made Titus as keen on your behalf as we are! For Titus not only welcomed our request; he is so eager that by his own desire he is now leaving to come to you. With him we are sending one of our company whose reputation is high among our congregations everywhere for his services to the Gospel. Moreover they have duly appointed him to travel with us and help in this beneficent work, by which we do honour to the Lord himself and show our own eagerness to serve. We want to guard against any criticism of our handling of this generous gift; for our aims are entirely honourable, not only in the Lord's eyes, but also in the eyes of men.

With these men we are sending another of our company whose enthusiasm we have had many opportunities of testing, and who is now all the more earnest because of the great confidence he has in you. If there is any question about Titus, he is my partner and my associate in dealings with you; as for the others, they are delegates of our congregations, an honour to Christ.^b Then give them clear expression of your love and justify our pride in you; justify it to them, and through them to the congregations.

About the provision of aid for God's people, it is superfluous for me to write to you. I know how eager you are to help; I speak of it with pride to the Macedonians: I tell them that Achaia had everything ready last year;

^a Some witnesses read the love we have for you, or the love which we have kindled in your hearts.

^b Or they are . . . congregations; they reflect Christ.

3 and most of them have been fired by your zeal. My purpose in sending these friends is to ensure that what we have said about you in this matter should not prove to be an empty boast. By that I mean, I want you to be 4 prepared, as I told them you were; for if I bring with me men from Macedonia and they find you are not prepared, what a disgrace it will be to us, 5 let alone to you, after all the confidence we have shown! I have accordingly thought it necessary to ask these friends to go on ahead to Corinth, to see that your promised bounty is in order before I come; it will then be awaiting me as a bounty indeed, and not as an extortion.

6 Remember: sparse sowing, sparse reaping; sow bountifully, and you will 7 reap bountifully. Each person should give as he has decided for himself;
 there should be no reluctance, no sense of compulsion; God loves a cheer-8 ful giver. And it is in God's power to provide you richly with every good gift; thus you will have ample means in yourselves to meet each and every 9 situation, with enough and to spare for every good cause. Scripture says of such a man: 'He has lavished his gifts on the needy, his benevolence stands 10 fast for ever.' Now he who provides seed for sowing and bread for food will provide the seed for you to sow; he will multiply it and swell the harvest of 11 your benevolence, and you will always be rich enough to be generous.
 12 Through our action such generosity will issue in thanksgiving to God, for as a piece of willing service this is not only a contribution towards the needs of God's people; more than that, it overflows in a flood of thanksgiving to 13 God. For through the proof which this affords, many will give honour to God when they see how humbly you obey him and how faithfully you confess the gospel of Christ; and will thank him for your liberal contribu-14 tion to their need and to the general good. And as they join in prayer on your behalf, their hearts will go out to you because of the richness of the 15 grace which God has imparted to you. Thanks be to God for his gift beyond words!

Trials of a Christian missionary

10 BUT I, PAUL, appeal to you by the gentleness and magnanimity of Christ—I, so feeble (you say) when I am face to face with you, so 2 brave when I am away. Spare me, I beg you, the necessity of such bravery when I come, for I reckon I could put on as bold a face as you please against 3 those who charge us with moral weakness. Weak men we may be, but it is 4 not as such that we fight our battles. The weapons we wield are not merely 5 human,^a but divinely potent to demolish strongholds; we demolish sophistries and all that rears its proud head against the knowledge of God; 6 we compel every human thought to surrender in obedience to Christ; and we are prepared to punish all rebellion when once you have put yourselves in our hands.

7 Look facts in the face. ^b Someone is convinced, is he, that he belongs to ^a Or charge us with worldly standards. We live, no doubt, in the world; but it is not on that level that we fight our battles. The weapons we wield are not those of the world . . .

^b Or You are looking only at what catches the eye.

Christ? Let him think again, and reflect that we belong to Christ as much as he does. Indeed, if I am somewhat over-boastful about our authority—an authority given by the Lord to build you up, not pull you down—I shall make my boast good. So you must not think of me as one who scares you by the letters he writes. 'His letters', so it is said, 'are weighty and powerful;
 but when he appears he has no presence, and as a speaker he is beneath contempt.' People who talk in that way should reckon with this: when I come, my actions will show the same man as my letters showed in my absence.

We should not dare to class ourselves or compare ourselves with any of those who put forward their own claims. What fools they are to measure themselves by themselves, to find in themselves their own standard of comparison!^a With us there will be no attempt to boast beyond our proper sphere; and our sphere is determined by the limit God laid down for us, which permitted us to come as far as Corinth. We are not overstretching our commission, as we should be if it did not extend to you, for we were the first to reach Corinth in preaching the gospel of Christ. And we do not boast of work done where others have laboured, work beyond our proper sphere. Our hope is rather that, as your faith grows, we may attain a position among you greater than ever before, but still within the limits of our sphere. Then we can carry the Gospel to lands that lie beyond you, never priding ourselves on work already done in another man's sphere. If a man must boast, let him boast of the Lord. Not the man who recommends himself, but the man whom the Lord recommends—he and he alone is to be accepted.

I wish you would bear with me in a little of my folly; please do bear with me. I am jealous for you, with a divine jealousy; for I betrothed you to Christ, thinking to present you as a chaste virgin to her true and only husband. But as the serpent in his cunning seduced Eve, I am afraid that your thoughts may be corrupted and you may lose your ^b single-hearted devotion to Christ. For if someone comes who proclaims another Jesus, not the Jesus whom we proclaimed, or if you then receive a spirit different from the Spirit already given to you, or a gospel different from the gospel you have already accepted, you manage to put up with that well enough.
 Have I in any way come short of those superlative apostles? I think not.
 I may be no speaker, but knowledge I have; at all times we have made known to you the full truth.

Or was this my offence, that I made no charge for preaching the gospel of God, lowering myself to help in raising you? It is true that I took toll of other congregations, accepting ^c support from them to serve you. Then, while I was with you, if I ran short I sponged on no one; anything I needed was fully met by our friends who came from Macedonia; I made it a rule, as I always shall, never to be a burden to you. As surely as the truth of Christ is in me, I will preserve my pride in this matter throughout Achaia, and nothing shall stop me. Why? Is it that I do not love you? God knows I do.

^a Some witnesses read On the contrary we measure ourselves by ourselves, by our own standard of comparison. ^b Some witnesses insert purity and . . . ^c Or Did I take toll of other congregations by accepting . . . ?

12 And I shall go on doing as I am doing now, to cut the ground from under those who would seize any chance to put their vaunted apostleship on the 13 same level as ours. Such men are sham-apostles, crooked in all their 14 practices, masquerading as apostles of Christ. There is nothing surprising 15 about that; Satan himself masquerades as an angel of light. It is therefore a simple thing for his agents to masquerade as agents of good. But they will meet the end their deeds deserve.

16 I repeat: let no one take me for a fool; but if you must, then give me the 17 privilege of a fool, and let me have my little boast like others. I am not 18 speaking here as a Christian, but like a fool, if it comes to bragging. So 19 many people brag of their earthly distinctions that I shall do so too. How 20 gladly you bear with fools, being yourselves so wise! If a man tyrannizes over you, exploits you, gets you in his clutches, puts on airs, and hits you 21 in the face, you put up with it. And we, you say, have been weak! I admit the reproach.

But if there is to be bravado (and here I speak as a fool), I can indulge in 22 it too. Are they Hebrews? So am I. Israelites? So am I. Abraham's descen-
23 dants? So am I. Are they servants of Christ? I am mad to speak like this, but I can outdo them. More overworked than they, scourged more severely, 24 more often imprisoned, many a time face to face with death. Five times the 25 Jews have given me the thirty-nine strokes; three times I have been beaten with rods; once I was stoned; three times I have been shipwrecked, and for 26 twenty-four hours I was adrift on the open sea. I have been constantly on the road; I have met dangers from rivers, dangers from robbers, dangers 27 from my fellow-countrymen, dangers from foreigners, dangers in towns, dangers in the country, dangers at sea, dangers from false friends. I have toiled and drudged, I have often gone without sleep; hungry and thirsty, I have often gone fasting; and I have suffered from cold and exposure.

28 Apart from these external things,^a there is the responsibility that weighs 29 on me every day, my anxious concern for all our congregations. If anyone is weak, do I not share his weakness? If anyone is made to stumble, does 30 my heart not blaze with indignation? If boasting there must be, I will boast 31 of the things that show up my weakness. The God and Father of the Lord 32 Jesus (blessed be his name for ever!) knows that what I say is true. When I was in Damascus, the commissioner of King Aretas kept the city under 33 observation so as to have me arrested; and I was let down in a basket, through a window in the wall, and so escaped his clutches.

12 I AM OBLIGED TO BOAST. It does no good; but I shall go on to tell of 2 visions and revelations granted by the Lord. I know a Christian man who fourteen years ago (whether in the body or out of it, I do not know—God 3 knows) was caught up as far as the third heaven. And I know that this same 4 man (whether in the body or out of it, I do not know—God knows) was caught up into paradise, and heard words so secret that human lips may not 5 repeat them. About such a man as that I am ready to boast; but I will not 6 boast on my own account, except of my weaknesses. If I should choose to boast, it would not be the boast of a fool, for I should be speaking the truth. But I refrain, because I should not like anyone to form an estimate of me which goes beyond the evidence of his own eyes and ears. And so, to keep me from being unduly elated by the magnificence of such revelations, I was given^a a sharp physical pain^b which came as Satan's messenger to bruise me; this was to save me from being unduly elated. Three times I begged the Lord to rid me of it, but his answer was: 'My grace is all you need; power comes to its full strength in weakness.' I shall therefore prefer to find my joy and pride in the very things that are my weakness; and then the power of Christ will come and rest upon me. Hence I am well content, for Christ's sake, with weakness, contempt, persecution, hardship, and frustration; for when I am weak, then I am strong.

^a Or Apart from things which I omit.

I AM BEING VERY FOOLISH, but it was you who drove me to it; my credentials should have come from you. In no respect did I fall short of these superlative apostles, even if I am a nobody. The marks of a true apostle were there, in the work I did among you, which called for such constant fortitude, and was attended by signs, marvels, and miracles. Is there anything in which you were treated worse than the other congregations—except this, that I never sponged upon you? How unfair of me! I crave forgiveness.

Here am I preparing to pay you a third visit; and I am not going to sponge upon you. It is you I want, not your money; parents should make provision for their children, not children for their parents. As for me, I will gladly spend what I have for you—yes, and spend myself to the limit. If I love you overmuch, am I to be loved the less? But, granted that I did not prove a burden to you, still I was unscrupulous enough, you say, to use a trick to catch you. Who, of the men I have sent to you, was used by me to defraud you? I begged Titus to visit you, and I sent our friend with him. Did Titus defraud you? Have we not both been guided by the same Spirit, and followed the same course?

Perhaps you think that all this time we have been addressing our defence to you. No; we are speaking in God's sight, and as Christian men. Our whole aim, my own dear people, is to build you up. I fear that when I come I may perhaps find you different from what I wish you to be, and that you may find me also different from what you wish. I fear I may find quarrelling and jealousy, angry tempers and personal rivalries, backbiting and gossip, arrogance and general disorder. I am afraid that, when I come again, my God may humiliate me in your presence, that I may have tears to shed over many of those who have sinned in the past and have not repented of their unclean lives, their fornication and sensuality.

This will be my third visit to you; and all facts must be established by the evidence of two or three witnesses. To those who have sinned in the past, and to everyone else, I repeat the warning I gave before; I gave it in person on my second visit, and I give it now in absence. It is that when I come this time, I will show no leniency. Then you will have the proof you seek of the

^a Some witnesses read . . . ears, and because of the magnificence of the revelations themselves. Therefore to keep me from being unduly elated I was given . . . ^b Or a painful wound to my pride (literally a stake, or thorn, for the flesh).

Christ who speaks through me, the Christ who, far from being weak with you, makes his power felt among you. True, he died on the cross in weakness, but he lives by the power of God; and we who share his weakness shall by the power of God live with him in your service.

Examine yourselves: are you living the life of faith? Put yourselves to the test. Surely you recognize that Jesus Christ is among you?—unless of course you prove unequal to the test. I hope you will come to see that we are not unequal to it. Our prayer to God is that you may do no wrong; we are not concerned to be vindicated ourselves; we want you to do what is right, even if we should seem to be discredited. For we have no power to act against the truth, but only for it. We are well content to be weak at any time if only you are strong. Indeed, my whole prayer is that all may be put right with you. My purpose in writing this letter before I come, is to spare myself, when I come, any sharp exercise of authority—authority which the Lord gave me for building up and not for pulling down.

And now, my friends, farewell. Mend your ways; take our appeal to heart; agree with one another; live in peace; and the God of love and peace will be with you. Greet one another with the kiss of peace. All God's people send you greetings.

The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and fellowship in the Holy Spirit, be with you all.

THE LETTER OF PAUL TO THE GALATIANS

Faith and freedom

FROM PAUL, AN APOSTLE, not by human appointment or human commission, but by commission from Jesus Christ and from God the Father who raised him from the dead. I and the group of friends now with me send greetings to the Christian congregations of Galatia.

Grace and peace to you from God the Father and our Lord Jesus Christ,^a who sacrificed himself for our sins, to rescue us out of this present age of wickedness, as our God and Father willed; to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

I am astonished to find you turning so quickly away from him who called you by grace,^b and following a different gospel. Not that it is in fact

^a Some witnesses read God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

^b Some witnesses read from Christ who called you by grace, or from him who called you by grace of Christ.

another gospel; only there are persons who unsettle your minds by trying to distort the gospel of Christ. But if anyone, if we ourselves or an angel from heaven, should preach a gospel at variance with the gospel we preached to you, he shall be held outcast. I now repeat what I have said before: if anyone preaches a gospel at variance with the gospel which you received, let him be outcast!

Does my language now sound as if I were canvassing for men's support? Whose support do I want but God's alone? Do you think I am currying favour with men? If I still sought men's favour, I should be no servant of Christ.

I must make it clear to you, my friends, that the gospel you heard me preach is no human invention. I did not take it over from any man; no man taught it me; I received it through a revelation of Jesus Christ.

You have heard what my manner of life was when I was still a practising Jew: how savagely I persecuted the church of God, and tried to destroy it; and how in the practice of our national religion I was outstripping many of my Jewish contemporaries in my boundless devotion to the traditions of my ancestors. But then in his good pleasure God, who had set me apart from birth and called me through his grace, chose to reveal his Son to me and through me, in order that I might proclaim him among the Gentiles. When that happened, without consulting any human being, without going up to Jerusalem to see those who were apostles before me, I went off at once to Arabia, and afterwards returned to Damascus.

Three years later I did go up to Jerusalem to get to know Cephas. I stayed with him for a fortnight, without seeing any other of the apostles, except^a James the Lord's brother. What I write is plain truth; before God I am not lying.

Next I went to the regions of Syria and Cilicia, and remained unknown by sight^b to Christ's congregations in Judaea. They only heard it said, 'Our former persecutor is preaching the good news of the faith which once he tried to destroy'; and they praised God for me.

Next, fourteen years later, I went again^c to Jerusalem with Barnabas, taking Titus with us. I went up because it had been revealed by God that I should do so. I laid before them—but at a private interview with the men of repute—the gospel which I am accustomed to preach to the Gentiles, to make sure that the race I had run, and was running, should not be run in vain. Yet even my companion Titus, Greek though he is, was not compelled to be circumcised. That course was urged only as a concession to certain^d sham-Christians, interlopers who had stolen in to spy upon the liberty we enjoy in the fellowship of Christ Jesus. These men wanted to bring us into bondage, but not for one moment did I yield to their dictation; I was determined that the full truth of the Gospel should be maintained for you.^e

^a Or but only.

^b Or unknown personally.

^c Some witnesses omit again.

^d Or The question was later raised because of certain . . .

^e Or, following the reading of some witnesses. Yet even . . . is, was under no absolute compulsion to be circumcised, but for the sake of certain . . . of Christ Jesus, with the intention of bringing us into bondage, I yielded to their demand for the moment, to ensure that gospel truth should not be prevented from reaching you.

6 But as for the men of high reputation (not that their importance matters to me: God does not recognize these personal distinctions)—these men of 7 repute, I say, did not prolong the consultation,^a but on the contrary 8 acknowledged that I had been entrusted with the Gospel for Gentiles as surely as Peter had been entrusted with the Gospel for Jews. For God whose action made Peter an apostle to the Jews, also made me an apostle to the Gentiles.

9 Recognizing, then, the favour thus bestowed upon me, those reputed pillars of our society, James, Cephas, and John, accepted Barnabas and myself as partners, and shook hands upon it, agreeing that we should go 10 to the Gentiles while they went to the Jews. All they asked was that we should keep their poor in mind, which was the very thing I made^b it my business to do.

11 But when Cephas came to Antioch, I opposed him to his face, because 12 he was clearly in the wrong. For until certain persons^c came from James he was taking his meals with gentile Christians; but when they^d came he drew back and began to hold aloof, because he was afraid of the advocates 13 of circumcision. The other Jewish Christians showed the same lack of principle; even Barnabas was carried away and played false like the rest.
14 But when I saw that their conduct did not square with^e the truth of the Gospel, I said to Cephas, before the whole congregation, 'If you, a Jew born and bred, live like a Gentile, and not like a Jew, how can you insist that Gentiles must live like Jews?'

15 16 We ourselves are Jews by birth, not Gentiles and sinners. But we know that no man is ever justified by doing what the law demands, but only through faith in Christ Jesus; so we too have put our faith in Jesus Christ, in order that we might be justified through this faith, and not through deeds dictated by law; for by such deeds, Scripture says, no mortal man shall be justified.

17 If now, in seeking to be justified in Christ, we ourselves no less than the Gentiles turn out to be sinners against the law,^f does that mean that Christ 18 is an abettor of sin? No, never! No, if I start building up again a system which I have pulled down, then it is that I show myself up as a transgressor 19 20 of the law. For through the law I died to law—to live for God. I have been crucified with Christ: the life I now live is not my life, but the life which Christ lives in me; and my present bodily life is lived by faith in the Son of 21 God, who loved me and gave himself up for me. I will not nullify the grace of God; if righteousness comes by law, then Christ died for nothing.

3 YOU STUPID GALATIANS! You must have been bewitched—you before
2 whose eyes Jesus Christ was openly displayed upon his cross! Answer me one question: did you receive the Spirit by keeping the law or by believing 3 the gospel message^g? Can it be that you are so stupid? You started with the spiritual; do you now look to the material to make you perfect? Have all your great experiences been in vain—if vain indeed they should be? I ask then: when God gives you the Spirit and works miracles among you, why is this? Is it because you keep the law, or is it because you have faith in the gospel message? Look at Abraham: he put his faith in God, and that faith was counted to him as righteousness.

You may take it, then, that it is the men of faith who are Abraham's sons. And Scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the Gentiles through faith, declared the Gospel to Abraham beforehand: 'In you all nations shall find blessing.' Thus it is the men of faith who share the blessing with faithful Abraham.

On the other hand those who rely on obedience to the law are under a curse; for Scripture says, 'A curse is on all who do not persevere in doing everything that is written in the Book of the Law.' It is evident that no one is ever justified before God in terms of law; because we read, 'he shall gain life who is justified through faith'. Now law is not at all a matter of having faith: we read, 'he who does this shall gain life by what he does'.

Christ bought us freedom from the curse of the law by becoming for our sake an accursed thing; for Scripture says, 'A curse is on everyone who is hanged on a gibbet.' And the purpose of it all was that the blessing of Abraham should in Jesus Christ be extended to the Gentiles, so that we might receive the promised Spirit through faith.

My brothers, let me give you an illustration. Even in ordinary life, when a man's will and testament has been duly executed, no one else can set it aside or add a codicil. Now the promises were pronounced to Abraham and to his 'issue'. It does not say 'issues' in the plural, but in the singular, 'and to your issue'; and the 'issue' intended is Christ. What I am saying is this: a testament, or covenant, had already been validated by God; it cannot be invalidated, and its promises rendered ineffective, by a law made four hundred and thirty years later. If the inheritance is by legal right, then it is not by promise; but it was by promise that God bestowed it as a free gift on Abraham.

Then what of the law? It was added to make wrongdoing a legal offence. ^a It was a temporary measure pending the arrival of the 'issue' to whom the promise was made. It was promulgated through angels, and there was an intermediary; but an intermediary is not needed for one party acting alone, and God is one.

Does the law, then, contradict the promises? No, never! If a law had been given which had power to bestow life, then indeed righteousness would have come from keeping the law. But Scripture has declared the whole world to be prisoners in subjection to sin, so that faith in Jesus Christ may be the ground on which the promised blessing is given, and given to those who have such faith.

Before this faith came, we were close prisoners in the custody of law, pending the revelation of faith. Thus the law was a kind of tutor in charge of us until Christ should come, ^b when we should be justified through faith; and now that faith has come, the tutor's charge is at an end.

^a Or added because of offences.

^b Or a kind of tutor to conduct us to Christ.

26 For through faith you are all sons of God in union with Christ Jesus.
 27 Baptized into union with him, you have all put on Christ as a garment.
 28 There is no such thing as Jew and Greek, slave and freeman, male and 29 female; for you are all one person in Christ Jesus. But if you thus belong to Christ, you are the 'issue' of Abraham, and so heirs by promise.

4 This is what I mean: so long as the heir is a minor, he is no better off
 2 than a slave, even though the whole estate is his; he is under guardians and 3 trustees until the date fixed by his father. And so it was with us. During 4 our minority we were slaves to the elemental spirits of the universe,^a but when the term was completed, God sent his own Son, born of a woman, 5 born under the law, to purchase freedom for the subjects of the law, in order that we might attain the status of sons.

6 To prove that you are sons, God has sent into our hearts the Spirit of his 7 Son, crying 'Abba! Father!' You are therefore no longer a slave but a son, and if a son, then also by God's own act an heir.

8 Formerly, when you did not acknowledge God, you were the slaves of 9 beings which in their nature are no gods.^b But now that you do acknowledge God—or rather, now that he has acknowledged you—how can you turn back to the mean and beggarly spirits of the elements?^c Why do you 10 propose to enter their service all over again? You keep special days and 11 months and seasons and years. You make me fear that all the pains I spent on you may prove to be labour lost.

12 PUT YOURSELVES in my place, my brothers, I beg you, for I have put 13 myself in yours. It is not that you did me any wrong. As you know, it was 14 bodily illness that originally^d led to my bringing you the Gospel, and you resisted any temptation to show scorn or disgust at the state of my poor body;^e you welcomed me as if I were an angel of God, as you might have 15 welcomed Christ Jesus himself. Have you forgotten how happy you thought yourselves in having me with you? I can say this for you: you would have 16 torn out your very eyes, and given them to me, had that been possible! And have I now made myself your enemy by being frank with you?

17 The persons I have referred to are envious of you, but not with an honest envy:^f what they really want is to bar the door to you so that you 18 may come to envy^g them. It is always a fine thing to deserve an honest 19 envy^h—always, and not only when I am present with you, dear children.
 For my children you are, and I am in travail with you over again until you 20 take the shape of Christ. I wish I could be with you now; then I could modify my tone;ⁱ as it is, I am at my wits' end about you.

21 TELL ME NOW, you who are so anxious to be under law, will you not listen
 22 to what the Law says? It is written there that Abraham had two sons, one by his slave and the other by his free-born wife. The slave-woman's son was born in the course of nature, the free woman's through God's promise. This is an allegory. The two women stand for two covenants. The one bearing children into slavery is the covenant that comes from Mount Sinai: that is Hagar. Sinai is a mountain in Arabia and it represents the Jerusalem of today, for she and her children are in slavery. But the heavenly Jerusalem is the free woman; she is our mother. For Scripture says, 'Rejoice, O barren woman who never bore child; break into a shout of joy, you who never knew a mother's pangs; for the deserted wife shall have more children than she who lives with the husband.'

And you, my brothers, like Isaac, are children of God's promise. But just as in those days the natural-born son persecuted the spiritual son, so it is today. But what does Scripture say? 'Drive out the slave-woman and her son, for the son of the slave shall not share the inheritance with the free woman's son.' You see, then, my brothers, we are no slave-woman's children; our mother is the free woman. Christ set us free, to be free men. ^a Stand firm, then, and refuse to be tied to the yoke of slavery again.

Mark my words: I, Paul, say to you that if you receive circumcision Christ will do you no good at all. Once again, you can take it from me that every man who receives circumcision is under obligation to keep the entire law. When you seek to be justified by way of law, your relation with Christ is completely severed: you have fallen out of the domain of God's grace. For to us, our hope of attaining that righteousness which we eagerly await is the work of the Spirit through faith. If we are in union with Christ Jesus circumcision makes no difference at all, nor does the want of it; the only thing that counts is faith active in love. ^b

You were running well; who was it hindered you from following the truth? Whatever persuasion he used, it did not come from God who is calling you; 'a little leaven', remember, 'leavens all the dough'. United with you in the Lord, I am confident that you will not take the wrong view; but the man who is unsettling your minds, whoever he may be, must bear God's judgement. And I, my friends, if I am still advocating circumcision, why is it I am still persecuted? In that case, my preaching of the cross is a stumbling-block no more. As for these agitators, they had better go the whole way and make eunuchs of themselves!

YOU, MY FRIENDS, were called to be free men; only do not turn your freedom into licence for your lower nature, but be servants to one another in love. For the whole law can be summed up in a single commandment: 'Love your neighbour as yourself.' But if you go on fighting one another, tooth and nail, all you can expect is mutual destruction.

I mean this: if you are guided by the Spirit you will not fulfil the desires of your lower nature. That nature sets its desires against the Spirit, while the Spirit fights against it. They are in conflict with one another so that what you will to do you cannot do. But if you are led by the Spirit, you are not under law.

Anyone can see the kind of behaviour that belongs to the lower nature:

^a Or What Christ has done is to set us free.

^b Or inspired by love.

20 fornication, impurity, and indecency; idolatry and sorcery; quarrels, a 21 contentious temper, envy, fits of rage, selfish ambitions, dissensions, party intrigues, and jealousies; drinking bouts, orgies, and the like. I warn you, as I warned you before, that those who behave in such ways will never inherit the kingdom of God.

22 But the harvest of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, good-23 ness, fidelity, gentleness, and self-control. There is no law dealing with such 24 things as these. And those who belong to Christ Jesus have crucified the 25 lower nature with its passions and desires. If the Spirit is the source of our life, let the Spirit also direct our course.

26 We must not be conceited, challenging one another to rivalry, jealous
 6 of one another. If a man should do something wrong, my brothers, on a sudden impulse,^a you who are endowed with the Spirit must set him right again very gently. Look to yourself, each one of you: you may be tempted 2 too. Help one another to carry these heavy loads, and in this way you will fulfil the law of Christ.

3 For if a man imagines himself to be somebody, when he is nothing, he is 4 deluding himself. Each man should examine his own conduct for himself; then he can measure his achievement by comparing himself with himself
 5 and not with anyone else. For everyone has his own proper burden to bear.

6 When anyone is under instruction in the faith, he should give his teacher a share of all good things he has.

7 Make no mistake about this: God is not to be fooled; a man reaps what 8 he sows. If he sows seed in the field of his lower nature, he will reap from it a harvest of corruption, but if he sows in the field of the Spirit, the Spirit 9 will bring him a harvest of eternal life. So let us never tire of doing good, for if we do not slacken our efforts we shall in due time reap our harvest.
 10 Therefore, as opportunity offers, let us work for the good of all, especially members of the household of the faith.

12 YOU SEE these big letters? I am now writing to you in my own hand. It is all those who want to make a fair outward and bodily show who are trying 13 to force circumcision upon you; their sole object is to escape persecution for the cross of Christ. For even those who do receive circumcision are not 14 thoroughgoing observers of the law; they only want you to be circumcised in order to boast of your having submitted to that outward rite. But God forbid that I should boast of anything but the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, through which^b the world is crucified to me and I to the world!
 15 Circumcision is nothing; uncircumcision is nothing; the only thing that 16 counts is new creation! Whoever they are who take this principle for their guide, peace and mercy be upon them, and upon the whole Israel of God!

17 In future let no one make trouble for me, for I bear the marks of Jesus branded on my body.

18 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit, my brothers.
 Amen.

THE LETTER OF PAUL TO THE EPHESIANS

The glory of Christ in the church

FROM PAUL, APOSTLE of Christ Jesus, commissioned by the will of God, to God's people at Ephesus,^a believers incorporate in Christ Jesus. 1

Grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ. 2
Praise be to the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who has 3 bestowed on us in Christ every spiritual blessing in the heavenly realms. 4
In Christ he chose us before the world was founded, to be dedicated, to be 5 without blemish in his sight, to be full of love; and he^b destined us—such 6 was his will and pleasure—to be accepted as his sons through Jesus Christ, 7 in order that the glory of his gracious gift, so graciously bestowed on us in 8 his Beloved, might redound to his praise. For in Christ our release is 9 secured and our sins are forgiven through the shedding of his blood. 10 Therein lies the richness of God's free grace lavished upon us, imparting 11 full wisdom and insight. He has made known to us his hidden purpose— 12 such was his will and pleasure determined beforehand in Christ—to be 13 put into effect when the time was ripe: namely, that the universe, all in 14 heaven and on earth, might be brought into a unity in Christ. 15

In Christ indeed we have been given our share in the heritage, as was 16 decreed in his design whose purpose is everywhere at work. For it was his 17 will that we, who were the first to set our hope on Christ,^c should cause his 18 glory to be praised. And you too, when you had heard the message of the 19 truth, the good news of your salvation, and had believed it, became in- 20 corporate in Christ and received the seal of the promised Holy Spirit; and 21 that Spirit is the pledge that we shall enter upon our heritage, when God 22 has redeemed what is his own, to his praise and glory. 23

Because of all this, now that I have heard of the faith you have in the 24
Lord Jesus and of the love you bear towards all God's people, I never 25 cease to give thanks for you when I mention you in my prayers. I pray that 26 the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the all-glorious Father, may give you the 27 spiritual powers of wisdom and vision, by which there comes the know- 28 ledge of him. I pray that your inward eyes may be illumined, so that you 29 may know what is the hope to which he calls you, what the wealth and 30

^c Or who already enjoyed the hope of Christ, or whose expectation and hope are in Christ.

19 glory of the share he offers you among his people in their heritage, and how 20 vast the resources of his power open to us who trust in him. They are 21 measured by his strength and the might which he exerted in Christ when 22 he raised him from the dead, when he enthroned him at his right hand in 23 the heavenly realms, far above all government and authority, all power and 24 dominion, and any title of sovereignty that can be named, not only in this 25 age but in the age to come. He put everything in subjection beneath his feet, 26 and appointed him as supreme head to the church, which is his body and 27 as such holds within it the fullness of him who himself receives the entire 28 fullness of God.^a

1 2 TIME WAS when you were dead in your sins and wickedness, when you
3 followed the evil ways of this present age, when you obeyed the com-4 mander of the spiritual powers of the air, the spirit now at work among 5 God's rebel subjects. We too were once of their number: we all lived our 6 lives in sensuality, and obeyed the promptings of our own instincts and 7 notions. In our natural condition we, like the rest, lay under the dreadful
8 judgement of God. But God, rich in mercy, for the great love he bore us, 9 brought us to life with Christ even when we were dead in our sins; it is by 10 his grace you are saved. And in union with Christ Jesus he raised us up and 11 enthroned us with him in the heavenly realms, so that he might display in 12 the ages to come how immense are the resources of his grace, and how great 13 his kindness to us in Christ Jesus. For it is by his grace you are saved, 14 through trusting him; it is not your own doing. It is God's gift, not a 15 reward for work done. There is nothing for anyone to boast of. For we are 16 God's handiwork, created in Christ Jesus to devote ourselves to the good 17 deeds for which God has designed us.

18 Remember then your former condition: you, Gentiles as you are out-19 wardly,^b you, 'the uncircumcised' so called by those who are called 'the 20 circumcised' (but only with reference to an outward rite)—you were at that 21 time separate from Christ, strangers to the community of Israel, outside 22 God's covenants and the promise that goes with them. Your world was a 23 world without hope and without God. But now in union with Christ Jesus 24 you who once were far off have been brought near through the shedding of 25 Christ's blood. For he is himself our peace. Gentiles and Jews, he has made 26 the two one, and in his own body of flesh and blood has broken down the 27 enmity which stood like a dividing wall between them; for he annulled the 28 law with its rules and regulations, so as to create out of the two a single new 29 humanity in himself, thereby making peace. This was his purpose, to 30 reconcile the two in a single body to God through the cross, on which he 31 killed the enmity.^c

32 So he came and proclaimed the good news: peace to you who were far 33 off, and peace to those who were near by; for through him we both alike
34 have access to the Father in the one Spirit. Thus you are no longer aliens in

^a Or as supreme head to the church, which is his body and as such holds within it the fullness of him who fills the universe in all its parts; or as supreme head to the church which is his body, and to be all that he himself is who fills the universe in all its parts.

a foreign land, but fellow-citizens with God's people, members of God's household. You are built upon the foundation laid by the apostles and prophets, and Christ Jesus himself is the foundation-stone.^a In him the whole building^b is bonded together and grows into a holy temple in the Lord. In him you too are being built with all the rest into a spiritual dwelling for God.

WITH THIS IN MIND I make my prayer, I, Paul, who in the cause of you Gentiles am now the prisoner of Christ Jesus—for surely you have heard how God has assigned the gift of his grace to me for your benefit. It was by a revelation that his secret was made known to me. I have already written a brief account of this, and by reading it you may perceive that I understand the secret of Christ. In former generations this was not disclosed to the human race; but now it has been revealed by inspiration to his dedicated apostles and prophets, that through the Gospel the Gentiles are joint heirs with the Jews, part of the same body, sharers together in the promise made in Christ Jesus. Such is the gospel of which I was made a minister, by God's gift, bestowed unmerited on me in the working of his power. To me, who am less than the least of all God's people, he has granted of his grace the privilege of proclaiming to the Gentiles the good news of the unfathomable riches of Christ, and of bringing to light how this hidden purpose was to be put into effect. It was hidden for long ages in God the creator of the universe, in order that now, through the church, the wisdom of God in all its varied forms might be made known to the rulers and authorities in the realms of heaven. This is in accord with his age-long purpose, which he achieved in Christ Jesus our Lord. In him we have access to God with freedom, in the confidence born of trust in him. I beg you, then, not to lose heart over my sufferings for you; indeed, they are your glory.

With this in mind, then, I kneel in prayer to the Father, from whom every family^c in heaven and on earth takes its name, that out of the treasures of his glory he may grant you strength and power through his Spirit in your inner being, that through faith Christ may dwell in your hearts in love. With deep roots and firm foundations, may you be strong to grasp, with all God's people, what is the breadth and length and height and depth of the love of Christ, and to know it, though it is beyond knowledge. So may you attain to fullness of being, the fullness of God himself.^d

Now to him who is able to do immeasurably more than all we can ask or conceive, by the power which is at work among us, to him be glory in the church and in Christ Jesus from generation to generation evermore! Amen.

I ENTREAT YOU, THEN—I, a prisoner for the Lord's sake: as God has called you, live up to your calling. Be humble always and gentle, and patient too. Be forbearing with one another and charitable. Spare no effort to make fast with bonds of peace the unity which the Spirit gives. There is one

^a Or built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, and Christ Jesus himself is the keystone.

^b Or every structure.

^c Or his whole family.

^d Or the fullness which God requires.

body and one Spirit, as there is also one hope held out in God's call to you; one Lord, one faith, one baptism; one God and Father of all, who is over all and through all and in all.

7 But each of us has been given his gift, his due portion of Christ's bounty.
8 Therefore Scripture says:

'He ascended into the heights with captives in his train;
he gave gifts to men.'

9 Now, the word 'ascended' implies that he also descended to the lowest 10 level, down to the very earth.^a He who descended is no other than he who 11 ascended far above all heavens, so that he might fill the universe. And these were his gifts: some to be apostles, some prophets, some evangelists, 12 some pastors and teachers, to equip God's people for work in his service, 13 to the building up of the body of Christ. So shall we all at last attain to the unity inherent in our faith and our knowledge of the Son of God—to mature manhood, measured by nothing less than the full stature of Christ.
14 We are no longer to be children, tossed by the waves and whirled about by every fresh gust of teaching, dupes of crafty rogues and their deceitful 15 schemes. No, let us speak the truth in love; so shall we fully grow up into 16 Christ. He is the head, and on him the whole body depends. Bonded and knit together by every constituent joint, the whole frame grows through the due activity of each part, and builds itself up in love.

17 This then is my word to you, and I urge it upon you in the Lord's name.
18 Give up living like pagans with their good-for-nothing notions. Their wits are beclouded, they are strangers to the life that is in God, because ignor-19 ance prevails among them and their minds have grown hard as stone. Dead to all feeling, they have abandoned themselves to vice, and stop at nothing 20 21 to satisfy their foul desires. But that is not how you learned Christ. For were you not told of him, were you not as Christians taught the truth as it 22 is in Jesus?—that, leaving your former way of life, you must lay aside that old human nature which, deluded by its lusts, is sinking towards death.
23 24 You must be made new in mind and spirit, and put on the new nature of God's creating, which shows itself in the just and devout life called for by the truth.

25 Then throw off falsehood; speak the truth to each other, for all of us are the parts of one body.

26 If you are angry, do not let anger lead you into sin; do not let sunset find 27 you still nursing it; leave no loop-hole for the devil.

28 The thief must give up stealing, and instead work hard and honestly with his own hands, so that he may have something to share with the needy.

29 No bad language must pass your lips, but only what is good and helpful 30 to the occasion, so that it brings a blessing to those who hear it. And do not grieve the Holy Spirit of God, for that Spirit is the seal with which you 31 were marked for the day of our final liberation. Have done with spite and passion, all angry shouting and cursing, and bad feeling of every kind.

^a Or descended to the regions beneath the earth.

Be generous to one another, tender-hearted, forgiving one another as God in Christ forgave you. 32

In a word, as God's dear children, try to be like him, and live in love as Christ loved you, and gave himself up on your behalf as an offering and sacrifice whose fragrance is pleasing to God. 5 1 2

Fornication and indecency of any kind, or ruthless greed, must not be so much as mentioned among you, as befits the people of God. No coarse, stupid, or flippant talk; these things are out of place; you should rather be thanking God. For be very sure of this: no one given to fornication or indecency, or the greed which makes an idol of gain, has any share in the kingdom of Christ and of God. 3 4 5

Let no one deceive you with shallow arguments; it is for all these things that God's dreadful judgement is coming upon his rebel subjects. Have no part or lot with them. For though you were once all darkness, now as Christians you are light. Live like men who are at home in daylight, for where light is, there all goodness springs up, all justice and truth. Try to find out what would please the Lord; take no part in the barren deeds of darkness, but show them up for what they are. The things they do in secret it would be shameful even to mention. But everything, when once the light has shown it up, is illumined, and everything thus illumined is all light.
And so the hymn says: 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14

'Awake, sleeper,
rise from the dead,
and Christ will shine upon you.'

Be most careful then how you conduct yourselves: like sensible men, not like simpletons. Use the present opportunity to the full, for these are evil days. So do not be fools, but try to understand what the will of the Lord is. Do not give way to drunkenness and the dissipation that goes with it, but let the Holy Spirit fill you: speak to one another in psalms, hymns, and^a songs; sing and make music in your hearts to the Lord; and in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ give thanks every day for everything to our God and Father. 15 16 17 18 19 20

Be subject to one another out of reverence for Christ. 21

Wives, be subject to your husbands as to the Lord; for the man is the head of the woman, just as Christ also is the head of the church. Christ is, indeed, the Saviour of the body; but just as the church is subject to Christ, so must women be to their husbands in everything. 22 23 24

Husbands, love your wives, as Christ also loved the church and gave himself up for it, to consecrate it, cleansing it by water and word, so that he might present the church to himself all glorious, with no stain or wrinkle or anything of the sort, but holy and without blemish. In the same way men also are bound to love their wives, as they love their own bodies. In loving his wife a man loves himself. For no one ever hated his own body: on the contrary, he provides and cares for it; and that is how Christ treats the church, because it is his body, of which we are living parts. Thus it is that (in the words of Scripture) 'a man shall leave his father and mother and 30 31

^a Some witnesses insert spiritual, as in Colossians 3. 16.

32 shall be joined to his wife, and the two shall become one flesh'. It is a great 33 truth that is hidden here. I for my part refer it to Christ and to the church, but it applies also individually: each of you must love his wife as his very self; and the woman must see to it that she pays her husband all respect.

6 1 2 Children, obey your parents, for it is right that you should. 'Honour your father and mother' is the first commandment with a promise attached, 3 in the words: 'that it may be well with you and that you may live long in the land'.

4 You fathers, again, must not goad your children to resentment, but give them the instruction, and the correction, which belong to a Christian upbringing.

5 Slaves, obey your earthly masters with fear and trembling, single-6 mindedly, as serving Christ. Do not offer merely the outward show of service, to curry favour with men, but, as slaves of Christ, do whole-7 heartedly the will of God. Give the cheerful service of those who serve the 8 Lord, not men. For you know that whatever good each man may do, slave or free, will be repaid him by the Lord.

9 You masters, also, must do the same by them. Give up using threats; remember you both have the same Master in heaven, and he has no favourites.

10 11 Finally then, find your strength in the Lord, in his mighty power. Put on all the armour which God provides, so that you may be able to stand 12 firm against the devices of the devil. For our fight is not against human foes, but against cosmic powers, against the authorities and potentates of this 13 dark world, against the superhuman forces of evil in the heavens. Therefore, take up God's armour; then you will be able to stand your ground when things are at their worst, to complete every task and still to stand.
 14 Stand firm, I say. Fasten on the belt of truth; for coat of mail put on 15 integrity; let the shoes on your feet be the gospel of peace, to give you firm
 16 footing; and, with all these, take up the great shield of faith, with which you 17 will be able to quench all the flaming arrows of the evil one. Take salvation for helmet; for sword, take that which the Spirit gives you—the words that 18 come from God. Give yourselves wholly to prayer and entreaty; pray on every occasion in the power of the Spirit. To this end keep watch and per-19 severe, always interceding for all God's people; and pray for me, that I may be granted the right words when I open my mouth, and may boldly and 20 freely make known his hidden purpose, for which I am an ambassador—in chains. Pray that I may speak of it boldly, as it is my duty to speak.

21 You will want to know about my affairs, and how I am; Tychicus will give you all the news. He is our dear brother and trustworthy helper in the 22 Lord's work. I am sending him to you on purpose to let you know all about us, and to put fresh heart into you.

23 Peace to the brotherhood and love, with faith, from God the Father 24 and the Lord Jesus Christ. God's grace be with all who love our Lord Jesus Christ, grace and immortality. ^a

THE LETTER OF PAUL TO THE PHILIPPIANS

The apostle and his friends

FROM PAUL AND TIMOTHY, servants of Christ Jesus, to all 1 those of God's people, incorporate in Christ Jesus, who live at Philippi, including their bishops and deacons.

Grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ. 2

I thank my God whenever I think of you; and when I pray for you all, 3 4 my prayers are always joyful, because of the part you have taken in the work of the Gospel from the first day until now. Of one thing I am certain: 5 6 the One who started the good work in you will bring it to completion by the Day of Christ Jesus. It is indeed only right that I should feel like this 7 about you all, because you hold me in such affection, and because, when I lie in prison or appear in the dock to vouch for the truth of the Gospel, you all share in the privilege that is mine.^a God knows how I long for you all, 8 with the deep yearning of Christ Jesus himself. And this is my prayer, that 9 your love may grow ever richer and richer in knowledge and insight of every kind, and may thus bring you the gift of true discrimination.^b Then 10 on the Day of Christ you will be flawless and without blame, reaping the full harvest of righteousness that comes through Jesus Christ, to the glory and praise of God. 11

Friends, I want you to understand that the work of the Gospel has 12 been helped on, rather than hindered, by this business of mine. My im- 13 prisonment in Christ's cause has become common knowledge to all at headquarters^c here, and indeed among the public at large; and it has given 14 confidence to most of our fellow-Christians to speak the word of God fearlessly and with extraordinary courage.

Some, indeed, proclaim Christ in a jealous and quarrelsome spirit; 15 others proclaim him in true goodwill, and these are moved by love for me; 16 they know that it is to defend the Gospel that I am where I am. But the 17 others, moved by personal rivalry, present Christ from mixed motives, meaning to stir up fresh trouble for me as I lie in prison.^d What does it 18 matter? One way or another, in pretence or sincerity, Christ is set forth, and for that I rejoice.

^a Or I am justified in taking this view about you all, because I hold you in closest union, as those who, when I lie . . . of the Gospel, all share in the privilege that is mine.

^b Or may teach you by experience what things are most worth while. ^c Or to all the imperial guard, or to all at the Residency (Greek Praetorium). ^d Or meaning to make use of my imprisonment to stir up fresh trouble.

19 Yes, and rejoice I will, knowing well that the issue of it all will be my 20 deliverance, because you are praying for me and the Spirit of Jesus Christ is given me for support.^a For, as I passionately hope, I shall have no cause to be ashamed, but shall speak so boldly that now as always the greatness of Christ will shine out clearly in my person, whether through my life or 21 22 through my death. For to me life is Christ, and death gain; but what if my living on in the body may serve some good purpose? Which then am I to 23 choose? I cannot tell. I am torn two ways: what I should like is to depart
 24 and be with Christ; that is better by far; but for your sake there is greater 25 need for me to stay on in the body. This indeed I know for certain: I shall stay, and stand by you all to help you forward and to add joy to your faith, 26 so that when I am with you again, your pride in me may be unbounded in Christ Jesus.

27 Only, let your conduct be worthy of the gospel of Christ, so that whether I come and see you for myself or hear about you from a distance, I may know that you are standing firm, one in spirit, one in mind, contending as 28 one man for the gospel faith, meeting your opponents without so much as a tremor. This is a sure sign to them that their doom is sealed, but a sign 29 of your salvation, and one afforded by God himself; for you have been granted the privilege not only of believing in Christ but also of suffering 30 for him. You and I are engaged in the same contest; you saw me in it once, and, as you hear, I am in it still.

2 IF THEN our common life in Christ yields anything to stir the heart, any loving consolation, any sharing of the Spirit, any warmth of affection or 2 compassion, fill up my cup of happiness by thinking and feeling alike, with the same love for one another, the same turn of mind, and a common 3 care for unity. There must be no room for rivalry and personal vanity among you, but you must humbly reckon others better than yourselves.
 4 Look to each other's interest and not merely to your own.

5 Let your bearing towards one another arise out of your life in Christ
 6 Jesus.^b For the divine nature was his from the first; yet he did not think 7 to snatch at equality with God,^c but made himself nothing, assuming the 8 nature of a slave. Bearing the human likeness, revealed in human shape, he humbled himself, and in obedience accepted even death—death on a 9 cross. Therefore God raised him to the heights and bestowed on him the 10 name above all names, that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow—
 11 in heaven, on earth, and in the depths—and every tongue confess, 'Jesus Christ is Lord', to the glory of God the Father.

12 So you too, my friends, must be obedient, as always; even more, now that I am away, than when I was with you. You must work out your own 13 salvation in fear and trembling; for it is God who works in you, inspiring both the will and the deed, for his own chosen purpose.

14 15 Do all you have to do without complaint or wrangling. Show yourselves guileless and above reproach, faultless children of God in a warped and which was also found in Christ Jesus.

 with God.

^b Or Have that bearing towards one another
^c Or yet he did not prize his equality

crooked generation, in which you shine^a like stars in a dark world^b and proffer the word of life.^c Thus you will be my pride on the Day of Christ, proof that I did not run my race in vain, or work in vain. But if my life-blood is to crown that sacrifice which is the offering up of your faith, I am glad of it, and I share my gladness with you all. Rejoice, you no less than I, and let us share our joy.

I HOPE (under the Lord Jesus) to send Timothy to you soon; it will cheer me to hear news of you. There is no one else here who sees things as I do, and takes^d a genuine interest in your concerns; they are all bent on their own ends, not on the cause of Christ Jesus. But Timothy's record is known to you: you know that he has been at my side in the service of the Gospel like a son working under his father. Timothy, then, I hope to send as soon as ever I can see how things are going with me; and I am confident, under the Lord, that I shall myself be coming before long.

I feel also I must send our brother Epaphroditus, my fellow-worker and comrade, whom you commissioned to minister to my needs. He has been missing all of you sadly, and has been distressed that you heard he was ill. (He was indeed dangerously ill, but God was merciful to him, and merciful no less to me, to spare me sorrow upon sorrow.) For this reason I am all the more eager to send him, to give you the happiness of seeing him again, and to relieve my sorrow. Welcome him then in the fellowship of the Lord with whole-hearted delight. You should honour men like him; in Christ's cause he came near to death, risking his life to render me the service you could not give.

And now, friends, farewell; I wish you joy in the Lord.

TO REPEAT what I have written to you before is no trouble to me, and it is a safeguard for you. Beware of those dogs and their malpractices. Beware of those who insist on mutilation—'circumcision' I will not call it; we are the circumcised, we whose worship is spiritual,^e whose pride is in Christ Jesus, and who put no confidence in anything external. Not that I am without grounds myself even for confidence of that kind. If anyone thinks to base his claims on externals, I could make a stronger case for myself: circumcised on my eighth day, Israelite by race, of the tribe of Benjamin, a Hebrew born and bred;^f in my attitude to the law, a Pharisee; in pious zeal, a persecutor of the church; in legal rectitude, faultless. But all such assets I have written off because of Christ. I would say more: I count everything sheer loss, because all is far outweighed by the gain of knowing Christ Jesus my Lord, for whose sake I did in fact lose everything. I count it so much garbage,^g for the sake of gaining Christ and finding myself incorporate in him, with no righteousness of my own, no legal rectitude,

^a Or . . . generation. Shine out among them . . . ^b Or in the firmament.

^c Or as the very principle of its life. ^d Or no one else here like him, who takes . . .

^e Some witnesses read who worship God in the spirit; others read who worship by the Spirit of God. ^f Or a Hebrew-speaking Jew of a Hebrew-speaking family.

10 but the righteousness which comes ^a from faith in Christ, given by God in 11 response to faith. All I care for is to know Christ, to experience the power 12 of his resurrection, and to share his sufferings, in growing conform-13 ity with his death, if only I may finally arrive at the resurrection from 14 the dead.

12 It is not to be thought that I have already achieved all this. I have not yet 13 reached perfection, but I press on, hoping to take hold of that for which 14 Christ once took hold of me. My friends, I do not reckon myself to have got 15 hold of it yet. All I can say is this: forgetting what is behind me, and reach-16 ing out for that which lies ahead, I press towards the goal to win the prize
 17 which is God's call to the life above, in Christ Jesus.

15 Let us then keep to this way of thinking, those of us who are mature. If 16 there is any point on which you think differently, this also God will make 17 plain to you. Only let our conduct be consistent with the level we have 18 already reached.

17 Agree together, my friends, to follow my example. You have us for a 18 model; watch those whose way of life conforms to it. For, as I have often 19 told you, and now tell you with tears in my eyes, there are many whose 20 way of life makes them enemies of the cross of Christ. They are heading for 21 destruction, appetite is their god, and they glory in their shame. Their 22 minds are set on earthly things. We, by contrast, are citizens of heaven, 23 and from heaven we expect our deliverer to come, the Lord Jesus Christ.
 24 He will transfigure the body belonging to our humble state, and give it a 25 form like that of his own resplendent body, by the very power which 26 enables him to make all things subject to himself. Therefore, my friends, 27 beloved friends whom I long for, my joy, my crown, stand thus firm in the 28 Lord, my beloved!

2 I beg Euodia, and I beg Syntyche, to agree together in the Lord's fellow-
 3 ship. Yes, and you too, my loyal comrade, I ask you to help these women, 4 who shared my struggles in the cause of the Gospel, with Clement and my 5 other fellow-workers, whose ^b names are in the roll of the living.

4 Farewell; I wish you all joy in the Lord. I will say it again: all joy be 5 yours.

5 Let your magnanimity be manifest to all.

6 The Lord is near; have no anxiety, but in everything make your requests 7 known to God in prayer and petition with thanksgiving. Then the peace of 8 God, which is beyond our utmost understanding, ^c will keep guard over 9 your hearts and your thoughts, in Christ Jesus.

8 And now, my friends, all that is true, all that is noble, all that is just and 9 pure, all that is lovable and gracious, ^d whatever is excellent and admirable —fill all your thoughts with these things.

9 The lessons I taught you, the tradition I have passed on, all that you 10 heard me say or saw me do, put into practice; and the God of peace will 11 be with you.

^a Or and in him finding that, though I have no righteousness of my own, no legal rectitude, I have the righteousness which comes . . .

IT IS A GREAT JOY to me, in the Lord, that after so long your care for me has now blossomed afresh. You did care about me before for that matter; it was opportunity that you lacked. Not that I am alluding to want, for I have learned to find resources in myself whatever my circumstances. I know what it is to be brought low, and I know what it is to have plenty. I have been very thoroughly initiated into the human lot with all its ups and downs—fullness and hunger, plenty and want. I have strength for anything through him who gives me power. But it was kind of you to share the burden of my troubles.

As you know yourselves, Philippians, in the early days of my mission, when I set out from Macedonia, you alone of all our congregations were my partners in payments and receipts; for even at Thessalonica you contributed to my needs, not once but twice over. Do not think I set my heart upon the gift; all I care for is the profit accruing to you. However, here I give you my receipt for everything—for more than everything; I am paid in full, now that I have received from Epaphroditus what you sent. It is a fragrant offering, an acceptable sacrifice, pleasing to God. And my God will supply all your wants out of the magnificence of his riches in Christ Jesus. To our God and Father be glory for endless ages! Amen.

Give my greetings, in the fellowship of Christ Jesus, to each one of God's people. The brothers who are now with me send their greetings to you, and so do all God's people here, particularly those who belong to the imperial establishment.

The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit.

THE LETTER OF PAUL TO THE COLOSSIANS

The centre of Christian belief

FROM PAUL, APOSTLE of Christ Jesus commissioned by the will of God, and our colleague Timothy, to God's people at Colossae, brothers in the faith, incorporate in Christ.

Grace to you and peace from God our Father.

In all our prayers to God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, we thank him for you, because we have heard of the faith you hold in Christ Jesus, and the love you bear towards all God's people. Both spring from the hope stored up for you in heaven—that hope of which you learned when the message of the true Gospel first came to you. In the same way it is coming to men the whole world over; everywhere it is growing and bearing fruit

7 as it does among you, and has done since the day when you heard of the 8 graciousness of God and recognized it for what in truth it is. You were 9 taught this by Epaphras, our dear fellow-servant, a trusted worker for 10 Christ on our ^a behalf, and it is he who has brought us the news of your 11 God-given love. ^b

12 For this reason, ever since the day we heard of it, we have not ceased to 13 pray for you. We ask God that you may receive from him all wisdom and 14 spiritual understanding for full insight into his will, so that your manner
 15 of life may be worthy of the Lord and entirely pleasing to him. We pray 16 that you may bear fruit in active goodness of every kind, and grow in the 17 knowledge of God. May he strengthen you, in his glorious might, with 18 ample power to meet whatever comes with fortitude, patience, and joy;
 19 and to give thanks ^c to the Father who has made you fit to share the heritage 20 of God's people in the realm of light.

21 He rescued us from the domain of darkness and brought us away into 22 the kingdom of his dear Son, in whom our release is secured and our sins 23 forgiven. He is the image of the invisible God; his is the primacy over ^d all 24 created things. In him everything in heaven and on earth was created, not 25 only things visible but also the invisible orders of thrones, sovereignties, 26 authorities, and powers: the whole universe has been created through him 27 and for him. And he exists before everything, and all things are held to-28 gether in him. He is, moreover, the head of the body, the church. He is its 29 origin, the first to return from the dead, to be in all things alone supreme.
 30 For in him the complete being of God, by God's own choice, came to dwell.
 31 Through him God chose to reconcile the whole universe to himself, making 32 peace through the shedding of his blood upon the cross—to reconcile all 33 things, whether on earth or in heaven, through him alone.

34 Formerly you were yourselves estranged from God; you were his enemies 35 in heart and mind, and your deeds were evil. But now by Christ's death in 36 his body of flesh and blood God has reconciled you to himself, so that he 37 may present you before himself as dedicated men, without blemish and 38 innocent in his sight. Only you must continue in your faith, firm on your 39 foundations, never to be dislodged from the hope offered in the gospel
 40 which you heard. This is the gospel which has been proclaimed in the whole 41 creation under heaven; and I, Paul, have become its minister.

42 It is now my happiness to suffer for you. This is my way of helping to 43 complete, in my poor human flesh, the full tale of Christ's afflictions still 44 to be endured, for the sake of his body which is the church. I became its 45 servant by virtue of the task assigned to me by God for your benefit: to 46 deliver his message in full; to announce the secret hidden for long ages and 47 through many generations, but now disclosed to God's people, to whom it 48 was his will to make it known—to make known how rich and glorious it is 49 among all nations. The secret is this: Christ in ^e you, the hope of a glory to 50 come.

51 He it is whom we proclaim. We admonish everyone without distinction,

^a Some witnesses read your.

we instruct everyone in all the ways of wisdom, so as to present each one of you as a mature member of Christ's body. To this end I am toiling 29 strenuously with all the energy and power of Christ at work in me. For I 2 want you to know how strenuous are my exertions for you and the Laodi-ceans and all who have never set eyes on me. I want them to continue in 2 good heart and in the unity of love, and to come to the full wealth of conviction which understanding brings, and grasp God's secret. That secret is 3 Christ himself; in him lie hidden all God's treasures of wisdom and know- 4 ledge. I tell you this to save you from being talked ^d into error by specious 5 arguments. For though absent in body, I am with you in spirit, and rejoice to see your orderly array and the firm front which your faith in Christ presents.

THEREFORE, SINCE JESUS was delivered to you as Christ and Lord, 6 live your lives in union with him. Be rooted in him; be built in him; be con- 7 solidated in the faith you were taught; ^b let your hearts overflow with thankfulness. Be on your guard; do not let your minds be captured by 8 hollow and delusive speculations, based on traditions of man-made teaching and centred on the elemental spirits of the universe ^c and not on Christ.

For it is in Christ that the complete being of the Godhead dwells 9 embodied, ^d and in him you have been brought to completion. Every power 10 and authority in the universe is subject to him as Head. In him also you were 11 circumcised, not in a physical sense, but by being divested of the lower 12 nature; this is Christ's way of circumcision. For in baptism ^e you were 13 buried with him, in baptism also you were raised to life with him through your faith in the active power of God who raised him from the dead. And 14 although you were dead because of your sins and because you were morally uncircumcised, he has made you alive with Christ. For he has forgiven us all our sins; he has cancelled the bond which pledged us to the decrees of 15 the law. It stood against us, but he has set it aside, nailing it to the cross.
On that cross he discarded the cosmic powers and authorities like a garment; he made a public spectacle of them and led them ^f as captives in his triumphal procession.

ALLOW NO ONE therefore to take you to task about what you eat or drink, 16 or over the observance of festival, new moon, or sabbath. These are no 17 more than a shadow of what was to come; the solid reality is Christ's. You 18 are not to be disqualified by the decision of people who go in for selfmortification and angel-worship, and try to enter into some vision of their own. Such people, bursting with the futile conceit of worldly minds, lose 19 hold upon the Head; yet it is from the Head that the whole body, with all its joints and ligaments, receives its supplies, and thus knit together grows according to God's design.

20 Did you not die with Christ and pass beyond reach of the elemental spirits of the universe^a? Then why behave as though you were still living 21 the life of the world? Why let people dictate to you: 'Do not handle this, 22 do not taste that, do not touch the other'—all of them things that must perish as soon as they are used? That is to follow merely human injunctions 23 and teaching. True, it has an air of wisdom, with its forced piety, its selfmortification, and its severity to the body; but it is of no use at all in combating sensuality.

3 Were you not raised to life with Christ? Then aspire to the realm above,
2 where Christ is, seated at the right hand of God, and let your thoughts
3 dwell on that higher realm, not on this earthly life. I repeat, you died; and 4 now your life lies hidden with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, is manifested, then you too will be manifested with him in glory.

5 Then put to death those parts of you which belong to the earth—fornication, indecency, lust, foul cravings, and the ruthless greed which is 6 nothing less than idolatry. Because of these, God's dreadful judgement is 7 impending; and in the life you once lived these are the ways you yourselves
8 followed. But now you must yourselves lay aside all anger, passion, malice, 9 cursing, filthy talk—have done with them! Stop lying to one another, now 10 that you have discarded the old nature with its deeds and have put on the new nature, which is being constantly renewed in the image of its Creator 11 and brought to know God. There is no question here of Greek and Jew, circumcised and uncircumcised, barbarian, Scythian, slave and freeman;
but Christ is all, and is in all.

12 Then put on the garments that suit God's chosen people, his own, his 13 beloved: compassion, kindness, humility, gentleness, patience. Be forbearing with one another, and forgiving, where any of you has cause for 14 complaint: you must forgive as the Lord forgave you. To crown all, there 15 must be love, to bind all together and complete the whole. Let Christ's peace be arbiter in your hearts; to this peace you were called as members of 16 a single body. And be filled with gratitude. Let the message of Christ dwell among you in all its richness. Instruct and admonish each other with the utmost wisdom. Sing thankfully in your hearts to God,^b with psalms and 17 hymns and spiritual songs. Whatever you are doing, whether you speak or act, do everything in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God the Father through him.

18 WIVES, BE SUBJECT to your husbands; that is your Christian duty.
19 Husbands, love your wives and do not be harsh with them. Children, obey 20 your parents in everything, for that is pleasing to God and is the Christian 21 way. Fathers, do not exasperate your children, for fear they grow dis- 22 heartened. Slaves, give entire obedience to your earthly masters, not merely with an outward show of service, to curry favour with men, but with single-23 mindedness, out of reverence for the Lord. Whatever you are doing, put your whole heart into it, as if you were doing it for the Lord and not for men, knowing that there is a Master who will give you your heritage as a reward for your service. Christ is the Master whose slaves you must be. Dishonesty will be requited, and he has no favourites. Masters, be just and fair to your slaves, knowing that you too have a Master in heaven.

Persevere in prayer, with mind awake and thankful heart; and include a prayer for us, that God may give us an opening for preaching, to tell the secret of Christ; that indeed is why I am now in prison. Pray that I may make the secret plain, as it is my duty to do.

Behave wisely towards those outside your own number; use the present opportunity to the full. Let your conversation be always gracious, and never insipid; study how best to talk with each person you meet.

YOU WILL HEAR all about my affairs from Tychicus, our dear brother and trustworthy helper and fellow-servant in the Lord's work. I am sending him to you on purpose to let you know all about us and to put fresh heart into you. With him comes Onesimus, our trustworthy and dear brother, who is one of yourselves. They will tell you all the news here.

Aristarchus, Christ's captive like myself, sends his greetings; so does Mark, the cousin of Barnabas (you have had instructions about him; if he comes, make him welcome), and Jesus Justus. Of the Jewish Christians, these are the only ones who work with me for the kingdom of God, and they have been a great comfort to me. Greetings from Epaphras, servant of Christ, who is one of yourselves. He prays hard for you all the time, that you may stand fast, ripe in conviction^a and wholly devoted to doing God's will. For I can vouch for him, that he works tirelessly for you and the people at Laodicea and Hierapolis. Greetings to you from our dear friend Luke, the doctor, and from Demas. Give our greetings to the brothers at Laodicea, and Nympha and the congregation at her house.^b And when this letter is read among you, see that it is also read to the congregation at Laodicea, and that you in return read the one from Laodicea. This special word to Archippus: 'Attend to the duty entrusted to you in the Lord's service, and discharge it to the full.'

This greeting is in my own hand—PAUL. Remember I am in prison. God's grace be with you.

THE FIRST LETTER OF PAUL TO THE THESSALONIANS

Hope and discipline

1 FROM PAUL, Silvanus, and Timothy to the congregation of Thessalonians who belong to God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.
Grace to you and peace.

2 We always thank God for you all, and mention you in our prayers con-
3 tinually. We call to mind, before our God and Father, how your faith has 4 shown itself in action, your love in labour, and your hope of our Lord Jesus 5 Christ in fortitude. We are certain, brothers beloved by God, that he has chosen you and that ^a when we brought you the Gospel, we brought it not in mere words but in the power of the Holy Spirit, and with strong conviction, as you know well. That is the kind of men we were at Thessalonica, and it was for your sake.

6 And you, in your turn, followed the example set by us and by the Lord ;
the welcome you gave the message meant grave suffering for you, yet you 7 rejoiced in the Holy Spirit ; thus you have become a model for all believers
8 in Macedonia and in Achaia. From Thessalonica the word of the Lord rang out ; and not in Macedonia and Achaia alone, but everywhere your 9 faith in God has reached men's ears. No words of ours are needed, for they themselves spread the news of our visit to you and its effect : how you turned 10 from idols, to be servants of the living and true God, and to wait expectantly for the appearance from heaven of his Son Jesus, whom he raised from the dead, Jesus our deliverer from the terrors of judgement to come.

2 You know for yourselves, brothers, that our visit to you was not fruitless.
2 Far from it ; after all the injury and outrage which to your knowledge we 3 had suffered at Philippi, we declared the gospel of God to you frankly and 4 fearlessly, by the help of our God. A hard struggle it was. Indeed, the appeal we make never springs from error or base motive ; there is no attempt to 5 deceive ; but God has approved us as fit to be entrusted with the Gospel, and on those terms we speak. We do not curry favour with men ; we seek 6 only the favour of God, who is continually testing our hearts. Our words have never been flattering words, as you have cause to know ; nor, as God 7 is our witness, have they ever been a cloak for greed. We have never sought honour from men, from you or from anyone else, although as Christ's own 8 envoys we might have made our weight felt ; but we were as gentle with you as a nurse caring fondly for her children. With such yearning love we chose to impart to you not only the gospel of God but our very selves, so dear had you become to us. Remember, brothers, how we toiled and drudged. We worked for a living night and day, rather than be a burden to anyone, while we proclaimed before you the good news of God.

^a Or . . . chosen you, because . . .

We call you to witness, yes and God himself, how devout and just and blameless was our behaviour towards you who are believers. As you well know, we dealt with you one by one, as a father deals with his children, appealing to you by encouragement, as well as by solemn injunctions, to live lives worthy of the God who calls you into his kingdom and glory.

This is why we thank God continually, because when we handed on God's message, you received it, not as the word of men, but as what it truly is, the very word of God at work in you who hold the faith. You have fared like the congregations in Judaea, God's people in Christ Jesus. You have been treated by your countrymen as they are treated by the Jews, who killed the Lord Jesus and the prophets and drove us out, the Jews who are heedless of God's will and enemies of their fellow-men, hindering us from speaking to the Gentiles to lead them to salvation. All this time they have been making up the full measure of their guilt, and now retribution has overtaken them for good and all.

MY FRIENDS, when for a short spell you were lost to us—lost to sight, not to our hearts—we were exceedingly anxious to see you again. So we did propose to come to Thessalonica—I, Paul, more than once—but Satan thwarted us. For after all, what hope or joy or crown of pride is there for us, what indeed but you, when we stand before our Lord Jesus at his coming? It is you who are indeed our glory and our joy.

So when we could bear it no longer, we decided to remain alone at Athens, and sent Timothy, our brother and God's fellow-worker in the service of the gospel of Christ, to encourage you to stand firm for the faith and, under all these hardships, not to be shaken; for you know that this is our appointed lot. When we were with you we warned you that we were bound to suffer hardship; and so it has turned out, as you know. And thus it was that when I could bear it no longer, I sent to find out about your faith, fearing that the tempter might have tempted you and my labour might be lost.

But now Timothy has just arrived from Thessalonica, bringing good news of your faith and love. He tells us that you always think kindly of us, and are as anxious to see us as we are to see you. And so in all our difficulties and hardships your faith reassures us about you. It is the breath of life to us that you stand firm in the Lord. What thanks can we return to God for you? What thanks for all the joy you have brought us, making us rejoice before our God while we pray most earnestly night and day to be allowed to see you again and to mend your faith where it falls short?

May our God and Father himself, and our Lord Jesus, bring us direct to you; and may the Lord make your love mount and overflow towards one 13 another and towards all, as our love does towards you. May he make your hearts firm, so that you may stand before our God and Father holy and faultless when our Lord Jesus comes with all those who are his own.

4 AND NOW, MY FRIENDS, we have one thing to beg and pray of you, by our fellowship with the Lord Jesus. We passed on to you the tradition of the way we must live to please God; you are indeed already following it, but we beg you to do so yet more thoroughly.

2 For you know what orders we gave you, in the name of the Lord Jesus. 3 This is the will of God, that you should be holy: you must abstain from 4 fornication; each one of you must learn to gain mastery over his body, to 5 hallow and honour it, not giving way to lust like the pagans who are 6 ignorant of God; and no man must do his brother wrong in this matter, ^a or invade his rights, because, as we told you before with all emphasis, the 7 Lord punishes all such offences. For God called us to holiness, not to 8 impurity. Anyone therefore who flouts these rules is flouting, not man, but God who bestows upon you his Holy Spirit.

9 About love for our brotherhood you need no words of mine, for you are 10 yourselves taught by God to love one another, and you are in fact practising this rule of love towards all your fellow-Christians throughout Macedonia. Yet we appeal to you, brothers, to do better still. Let it be your 11 ambition to keep calm and look after your own business, and to work with 12 your hands, as we ordered you, so that you may command the respect of those outside your own number, and at the same time may never be in want.

13 WE WISH YOU not to remain in ignorance, brothers, about those who sleep in death; you should not grieve like the rest of men, who have no 14 hope. We believe that Jesus died and rose again; and so it will be for those who died as Christians; God will bring them to life with Jesus. ^b

15 For this we tell you as the Lord's word: we who are left alive until the 16 Lord comes shall not forestall those who have died; because at the word of command, at the sound of the archangel's voice and God's trumpet-call, the Lord himself will descend from heaven; first the Christian dead will 17 rise, then we who are left alive shall join them, caught up in clouds to meet the Lord in the air. Thus we shall always be with the Lord. Console one 18 another, then, with these words.

5 1 2 About dates and times, my friends, we need not write to you, for you know perfectly well that the Day of the Lord comes like a thief in the night. 3 While they are talking of peace and security, all at once calamity is upon them, sudden as the pangs that come upon a woman with child; and there 4 will be no escape. But you, my friends, are not in the dark, that the day 5 should overtake you like a thief. ^c You are all children of light, children of 6 day. We do not belong to night or darkness, and we must not sleep like 7 the rest, but keep awake and sober. Sleepers sleep at night, and drunkards 8 are drunk at night, but we, who belong to daylight, must keep sober, armed with faith and love for coat of mail, and the hope of salvation for helmet. For God has not destined us to the terrors of judgement, but to the full attainment of salvation through our Lord Jesus Christ. He died for us so that we, awake or asleep, might live in company with him. Therefore hearten one another, fortify one another—as indeed you do.

WE BEG YOU, BROTHERS, to acknowledge those who are working so hard among you, and in the Lord's fellowship are your leaders and counsellors. Hold them in the highest possible esteem and affection for the work they do.

You must live at peace among yourselves. And we would urge you, brothers, to admonish the careless, encourage the faint-hearted, support the weak, and to be very patient with them all.

See to it that no one pays back wrong for wrong, but always aim at doing the best you can for each other and for all men.

Be always joyful; pray continually; give thanks whatever happens; for this is what God in Christ wills for you.

Do not stifle inspiration, and do not despise prophetic utterances, but bring them all to the test and then keep what is good in them and avoid the bad of whatever kind.^a

May God himself, the God of peace, make you holy in every part, and keep you sound in spirit, soul, and body, without fault when our Lord Jesus Christ comes. He who calls you is to be trusted; he will do it.

Brothers, pray for us also.

Greet all our brothers with the kiss of peace.

I adjure you by the Lord to have this letter read to the whole brotherhood.

The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you!

THE SECOND LETTER OF PAUL TO THE THESSALONIANS

Hope and discipline

FROM PAUL, Silvanus, and Timothy to the congregation of Thessalonians who belong to God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ. Grace to you and peace from God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

Our thanks are always due to God for you, brothers. It is right that we should thank him, because your faith increases mightily, and the love you

^a Or . . . utterances. Put everything to the test; keep hold of what is good and avoid every kind of evil.

4 have, each for all and all for each, grows ever greater. Indeed we boast about you ourselves among the congregations of God's people, because 5 your faith remains so steadfast under all your persecutions, and all the troubles you endure. See how this brings out the justice of God's judgment. It will prove you worthy of the kingdom of God, for which indeed you are suffering.

6 It is surely just that God should balance the account by sending trouble
7 to those who trouble you, and relief to you who are troubled, and to us as well, when our Lord Jesus Christ is revealed from heaven with his 8 mighty angels in blazing fire. Then he will do justice upon those who refuse to acknowledge God and upon those who will not obey ^a the 9 gospel of our Lord Jesus. They will suffer the punishment of eternal ruin, cut off from the presence of the Lord and the splendour of his might, 10 when on that great Day he comes to be glorified among his own and adored among all believers; for you did indeed believe the testimony we brought you.

11 With this in mind we pray for you always, that our God may count you worthy of his calling, and mightily bring to fulfilment every good pur-12 pose and every act inspired by faith, so that the name of our Lord Jesus may be glorified in you, and you in him, according to the grace of our God and the Lord Jesus Christ.

2 AND NOW, BROTHERS, about the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ and 2 his gathering of us to himself: I beg you, do not suddenly lose your heads or alarm yourselves, whether at some oracular utterance, or pronouncemment, or some letter purporting to come from us, alleging that the Day of 3 the Lord is already here. Let no one deceive you in any way whatever. That day cannot come before the final rebellion against God, when wickedness 4 will be revealed in human form, the man doomed to perdition. He is the Enemy. He rises in his pride against every god, so called, every object of men's worship, and even takes his seat in the temple of God claiming to be a god himself.

5 You cannot but remember that I told you this while I was still with you;
6 you must now be aware of the restraining hand which ensures that he shall 7 be revealed only at the proper time. For already the secret power of wickedness is at work, secret only for the present until the Restraint disappears 8 from the scene. And then he will be revealed, that wicked man whom the Lord Jesus will destroy with the breath of his mouth, and annihilate by the 9 radiance of his coming. But the coming of that wicked man is the work of Satan. It will be attended by all the powerful signs and miracles of the Lie, 10 and all the deception that sinfulness can impose on those doomed to destruction. Destroyed they shall be, because they did not open their 11 minds to love of the truth, so as to find salvation. Therefore God puts them 12 under a delusion, which works upon them to believe the lie, so that they may all be brought to judgement, all who do not believe the truth but make sinfulness their deliberate choice.

^a Or justice upon those who refuse . . . and will not obey . . .

BUT WE ARE BOUND to thank God always for you, brothers beloved by the Lord, because from the beginning of time God chose you ^a to find salvation in the Spirit that consecrates you, and in the truth that you believe. It was for this that he called you through the gospel we brought, so that you might possess for your own the splendour of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Stand firm, then, brothers, and hold fast to the traditions which you have learned from us by word or by letter. And may our Lord Jesus Christ himself and God our Father, who has shown us such love, and in his grace has given us such unflinching encouragement and such bright hopes, still encourage and fortify you in every good deed and word!

And now, brothers, pray for us, that the word of the Lord may have everywhere the swift and glorious course that it has had among you, and that we may be rescued from wrong-headed and wicked men; for it is not all who have faith. But the Lord is to be trusted, and he will fortify you and guard you from the evil one. We feel perfect confidence about you, in the Lord, that you are doing and will continue to do what we order. May the Lord direct your hearts towards God's love and the steadfastness of Christ!

These are our orders to you, brothers, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ: hold aloof from every Christian brother who falls into idle habits, and does not follow the tradition you received from us. You know yourselves how you ought to copy our example: we were no idlers among you; we did not accept board and lodging from anyone without paying for it; we toiled and drudged, we worked for a living night and day, rather than be a burden to any of you—not because we have not the right to maintenance, but to set an example for you to imitate. For even during our stay with you we laid down the rule: the man who will not work shall not eat. We mention this because we hear that some of your number are idling their time away, minding everybody's business but their own. To all such we give these orders, and we appeal to them in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ to work quietly for their living.

But you, my friends, must never tire of doing right. If anyone disobeys our instructions given by letter, mark him well, and have no dealings with him until he is ashamed of himself. I do not mean treat him as an enemy, but give him friendly advice, as one of the family. May the Lord of peace himself give you peace at all times and in all ways. ^b The Lord be with you all.

The greeting is in my own hand, signed with my name, PAUL; this authenticates all my letters; this is how I write. The grace ^c of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all.

THE FIRST LETTER OF PAUL TO TIMOTHY

Church order

1 FROM PAUL, APOSTLE of Christ Jesus by command of God
2 our Saviour and Christ Jesus our hope, to Timothy his true-born son in the faith.

Grace, mercy, and peace to you from God the Father and Christ Jesus our Lord.

3 When I was starting for Macedonia, I urged you to stay on at Ephesus.
4 You were to command certain persons to give up teaching erroneous doctrines and studying those interminable myths and genealogies, which 5 issue in mere speculation and cannot make known God's plan for us, which works through faith.^a

6 The aim and object of this command is the love which springs from a clean heart, from a good conscience, and from faith that is genuine.
7 Through falling short of these, some people have gone astray into a wilderness of words. They set out to be teachers of the moral law, without understanding either the words they use or the subjects about which they are so dogmatic.

8 We all know that the law is an excellent thing, provided we treat it as 9 law, recognizing that it is not aimed at good citizens, but at the lawless and unruly, the impious and sinful, the irreligious and worldly; at parricides 10 and matricides, murderers and fornicators, perverts, kidnappers, liars, 11 perjurers—in fact all whose behaviour flouts the wholesome teaching which conforms with the gospel entrusted to me, the gospel which tells of the glory of God in his eternal felicity.

12 I thank him who has made me equal to the task, Christ Jesus our Lord;
I thank him for judging me worthy of this trust and appointing me to his 13 service—although in the past I had met him with abuse and persecution and outrage. But because I acted ignorantly in unbelief I was dealt with 14 mercifully; the grace of our Lord was lavished upon me, with the faith and love which are ours in Christ Jesus.

15 Here are words you may trust, words that merit full acceptance: 'Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners'; and among them I stand first.
16 But I was mercifully dealt with for this very purpose, that Jesus Christ might find in me the first occasion for displaying all his patience, and that I might be typical of all who were in future to have faith in him and gain

^a Or cannot promote the faithful discharge of God's stewardship.

eternal life. Now to the King of all worlds, immortal, invisible, the only 17
God, be honour and glory for ever and ever! Amen.

This charge, son Timothy, I lay upon you, following that prophetic 18 utterance which first pointed you out to me. So fight gallantly, armed with 19 faith and a good conscience. It was through spurning conscience that certain persons made shipwreck of their faith, among them Hymenaeus and 20 Alexander, whom I consigned to Satan, in the hope that through this discipline they might learn not to be blasphemous.

FIRST OF ALL, then, I urge that petitions, prayers, intercessions, and 2 thanksgivings be offered for all men; for sovereigns and all in high office, 2 that we may lead a tranquil and quiet life in full observance of religion and high standards of morality. Such prayer is right, and approved by God our 3 Saviour, whose will it is that all men should find salvation and come to 4 know the truth. For there is one God, and also one mediator between God 5 and men, Christ Jesus, himself man, who sacrificed himself to win freedom 6 for all mankind, so providing, at the fitting time, proof of the divine purpose; of this I was appointed herald and apostle (this is no lie, but the truth), 7 to instruct the nations in the true faith.

It is my desire, therefore, that everywhere prayers be said by the men 8 of the congregation, who shall lift up their hands with a pure intention, excluding angry or quarrelsome thoughts. Women again must dress in 9 becoming manner, modestly and soberly, not with elaborate hair-styles, not decked out with gold or pearls, or expensive clothes, but with good 10 deeds, as befits women who claim to be religious. A woman must be a learner, listening quietly and with due submission. I do not permit a woman 12 to be a teacher, nor must woman domineer over man; she should be quiet.
For Adam was created first, and Eve afterwards; and it was not Adam who 13 14 was deceived; it was the woman who, yielding to deception, fell into sin.
Yet she will be saved through motherhood^a—if only women continue in 15 faith,^b love, and holiness, with a sober mind.

There is a popular saying:^c 'To aspire to leadership is an honourable 3 ambition.' Our leader, therefore, or bishop, must be above reproach, faith- 2 ful to his one wife,^d sober, temperate, courteous, hospitable, and a good teacher; he must not be given to drink, or a brawler, but of a forbearing 3 disposition, avoiding quarrels, and no lover of money. He must be one who 4 manages his own household well and wins obedience from his children, and a man of the highest principles. If a man does not know how to control 5 his own family, how can he look after a congregation of God's people? He 6 must not be a convert newly baptized, for fear the sin of conceit should bring upon him a judgement contrived by the devil.^e He must moreover 7 have a good reputation with the non-Christian public, so that he may not be exposed to scandal and get caught in the devil's snare.

^a Or saved through the Birth of the Child, or brought safely through childbirth.

^b Or if only husband and wife continue in mutual fidelity . . . ^c Some witnesses read Here are words you may trust, which some interpreters attach to the end of the preceding paragraph.

^d Or married to one wife, or married only once. ^e Or the judgement once passed on the devil.

- 8 Deacons, likewise, must be men of high principle, not indulging in double talk, given neither to excessive drinking nor to money-grubbing.
- 9 They must be men who combine a clear conscience with a firm hold on the deep truths of our faith. No less than bishops, they must first undergo a scrutiny, and if there is no mark against them, they may serve. Their wives,^a equally, must be women of high principle, who will not talk scandal, sober and trustworthy in every way. A deacon must be faithful to his one wife,^b and good at managing his children and his own household. For deacons with a good record of service may claim a high standing and the right to speak openly on matters of the Christian faith.
- 15 I am hoping to come to you before long, but I write this in case I am delayed, to let you know how men ought to conduct themselves in God's household, that is, the church of the living God, the pillar and bulwark of the truth. And great beyond all question is the mystery of our religion:

‘He who was manifested in the body, vindicated in the spirit,
seen by angels;
who was proclaimed among the nations,
believed in throughout the world,
glorified in high heaven.’

- 4 THE SPIRIT SAYS expressly that in after times some will desert from the faith and give their minds to subversive doctrines inspired by devils, through the specious falsehoods of men whose own conscience is branded with the devil's sign. They forbid marriage and inculcate abstinence from certain foods, though God created them to be enjoyed with thanksgiving by believers who have inward knowledge of the truth. For everything that God created is good, and nothing is to be rejected when it is taken with thanksgiving, since it is hallowed by God's own word and by prayer.
- 6 By offering such advice as this to the brotherhood you will prove a good servant of Christ Jesus, bred in the precepts of our faith and of the sound instruction which you have followed. Have nothing to do with those godless myths, fit only for old women. Keep yourself in training for the practice of religion. The training of the body does bring limited benefit, but the benefits of religion are without limit, since it holds promise not only for this life but for the life to come. Here are words you may trust, words that merit full acceptance: ‘With this before us we labour and struggle,^c because^d we have set our hope on the living God, who is the Saviour of all men’—the Saviour, above all, of believers.
- 12 Pass on these orders and these teachings. Let no one slight you because you are young, but make yourself an example to believers in speech and behaviour, in love, fidelity, and purity. Until I arrive devote your attention to the public reading of the scriptures, to exhortation, and to teaching.

^a Or . . . serve. Deaconesses . . .

^b Or married to one wife, or married only once.

^c Some witnesses read suffer reproach.

^d Or since ‘It holds promise . . . to come.’

These are words . . . acceptance. For this is the aim of all our labour and struggle, since . . .

Do not neglect the spiritual endowment you possess, which was given you, 14 under the guidance of prophecy, through the laying on of the hands of the elders as a body. ^a

Make these matters your business and your absorbing interest, so that 15 your progress may be plain to all. Persevere in them, keeping close watch 16 on yourself and your teaching; by doing so you will further the salvation of yourself and your hearers.

Never be harsh with an elder; appeal to him as if he were your father. 5
Treat the younger men as brothers, the older women as mothers, and the 2 younger as your sisters, in all purity.

The status of widow is to be granted only to widows who are such in the 3 full sense. But if a widow has children or grandchildren, then they should 4 learn as their first duty to show loyalty to the family and to repay what they owe to their parents and grandparents; for this God approves. A widow, 5 however, in the full sense, one who is alone in the world, has all her hope set on God, and regularly attends the meetings for prayer and worship night and day. But a widow given over to self-indulgence is as good as 6 dead. Add these orders to the rest, so that the widows may be above 7 reproach. But if anyone does not make provision for his relations, and 8 especially for members of his own household, he has denied the faith and is worse than an unbeliever.

A widow should not be put on the roll under sixty years of age. She must 9 have been faithful in marriage to one man, and must produce evidence of 10 good deeds performed, showing whether she has had the care of children, or given hospitality, or washed the feet of God's people, or supported those in distress—in short, whether she has taken every opportunity of doing good.

Younger widows may not be placed on the roll. For when their passions 11 draw them away from Christ, they hanker after marriage and stand con- 12 demned for breaking their troth with him. Moreover, in going round from 13 house to house they learn to be idle, and worse than idle, gossips and busybodies, speaking of things better left unspoken. It is my wish, therefore, 14 that young widows shall marry again, have children, and preside over a home; then they will give no opponent occasion for slander. For there have 15 in fact been some who have taken the wrong turning and gone to the devil.

If a Christian man or woman has widows in the family, he must sup- 16 port them himself; ^b the congregation must be relieved of the burden, so that it may be free to support those who are widows in the full sense of the term.

Elders who do well as leaders should be reckoned worthy of a double 17 stipend, in particular those who labour at preaching and teaching. For 18 Scripture says, 'You shall not muzzle a threshing ox'; and besides, 'the worker earns his pay'.

Do not entertain a charge against an elder unless it is supported by two 19 or three witnesses. Those who commit sins you must expose publicly, to 20 put fear into the others. Before God and Christ Jesus and the angels who 21

^a Or through your ordination as an elder.

^b Some witnesses read If a Christian woman has widows in her family, she must support them herself.

22 are his chosen, I solemnly charge you, maintain these rules, and never pre-judge the issue, but act with strict impartiality. Do not be over-hasty in laying on hands in ordination,^a or you may find yourself responsible for other people's misdeeds; keep your own hands clean.

23 Stop drinking nothing but water; take a little wine for your digestion, for your frequent ailments.

24 While there are people whose offences are so obvious that they run before them into court, there are others whose offences have not yet overtaken them. Similarly, good deeds are obvious, or even if they are not, they cannot be concealed for ever.

6 All who wear the yoke of slavery must count their own masters worthy of all respect, so that the name of God and the Christian teaching are not brought into disrepute. If the masters are believers, the slaves must not respect them any less for being their Christian brothers. Quite the contrary; they must be all the better servants because those who receive the benefit of their service are one with them in faith and love.

3 THIS IS WHAT you are to teach and preach. If anyone is teaching otherwise, and will not give his mind to wholesome precepts—I mean those of our Lord Jesus Christ—and to good religious teaching, I call him a pompous ignoramus. He is morbidly keen on mere verbal questions and quibbles, which give rise to jealousy, quarrelling, slander, base suspicions, and endless wrangles: all typical of men who have let their reasoning powers become atrophied and have lost grip of the truth. They think religion should yield dividends; and of course religion does yield high dividends, but only to the man whose resources are within him. We brought nothing into the world; for that matter we cannot take anything with us when we leave, but if we have food and covering we may rest content. Those who want to be rich fall into temptations and snares and many foolish harmful desires which plunge men into ruin and perdition. 10 The love of money is the root of all evil things, and there are some who in reaching for it have wandered from the faith and spiked themselves on many thorny griefs.

11 But you, man of God, must shun all this, and pursue justice, piety, fidelity, love, fortitude, and gentleness. Run the great race of faith and take hold of eternal life. For to this you were called; and you confessed your faith nobly before many witnesses. Now in the presence of God, who gives life to all things, and of Jesus Christ, who himself made the same noble confession and gave his testimony to it before Pontius Pilate, I charge you to obey your orders irreproachably and without fault until our Lord Jesus Christ appears. That appearance God will bring to pass in his own good time—God who in eternal felicity alone holds sway. He is King of kings and Lord of lords; he alone possesses immortality, dwelling in unapproachable light. No man has ever seen or ever can see him. To him be honour and might for ever! Amen.

17 Instruct those who are rich in this world's goods not to be proud, and not to fix their hopes on so uncertain a thing as money, but upon God, who

^a Or in restoring an offender by the laying on of hands.

endows us richly with all things to enjoy. Tell them to do good and to grow rich in noble actions, to be ready to give away and to share, and so acquire a treasure which will form a good foundation for the future. Thus they will grasp the life which is life indeed.

Timothy, keep safe that which has been entrusted to you. Turn a deaf ear to empty and worldly chatter, and the contradictions of so-called 'knowledge', for many who lay claim to it have shot far wide of the faith.
 Grace be with you all!

THE SECOND LETTER OF PAUL TO TIMOTHY

Character of a Christian minister

FROM PAUL, APOSTLE of Jesus Christ by the will of God, 1 whose promise of life is fulfilled in Christ Jesus, to Timothy his 2 dear son.

Grace, mercy, and peace to you from God the Father and our Lord Jesus Christ.

I thank God—whom I, like my forefathers, worship with a pure inten- 3
 tion—when I mention you in my prayers; this I do constantly night and 4 day. And when I remember the tears you shed, I long to see you again to 5 make my happiness complete. I am reminded of the sincerity of your faith, a faith which was alive in Lois your grandmother and Eunice your mother before you, and which, I am confident, lives in you also.

That is why I now remind you to stir into flame the gift of God which is 6 within you through the laying on of my hands. For the spirit that God gave 7 us is no craven spirit, but one to inspire strength, love, and self-discipline.
 So never be ashamed of your testimony to our Lord, nor of me his prisoner, 8 but take your share of suffering for the sake of the Gospel, in the strength that comes from God. It is he who brought us salvation and called us to a 9 dedicated life, not for any merit of ours but of his own purpose and his own grace, which was granted to us in Christ Jesus from all eternity, but has now at length been brought fully into view by the appearance on earth of our Saviour Jesus Christ. For he has broken the power of death and brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel.

Of this Gospel I, by his appointment, am herald, apostle, and teacher. 11
 That is the reason for my present plight; but I am not ashamed of it, 12 because I know who it is in whom^a I have trusted, and am confident of his

^a Or I know the one whom . . .

power to keep safe what he has put into my charge,^a until the great Day.

13 Keep before you an outline of the sound teaching which^b you heard from 14 me, living by the faith and love which are ours in Christ Jesus. Guard the treasure put into our charge, with the help of the Holy Spirit dwelling within us.

15 As you know, everyone in the province of Asia deserted me, including 16 Phygelus and Hermogenes. But may the Lord's mercy rest on the house of Onesiphorus! He has often relieved me in my troubles. He was not 17 ashamed to visit a prisoner, but took pains to search me out when he came 18 to Rome, and found me. I pray that the Lord may grant him to find mercy from the Lord on the great Day. The many services he rendered at Ephesus you know better than I could tell you.

2 Now therefore, my son, take strength from the grace of God which is ours
2 in Christ Jesus. You heard my teaching in the presence of many witnesses; put that teaching into the charge of men you can trust, such men as will be competent to teach others.

3 4 Take your share of hardship, like a good soldier of Christ Jesus. A soldier on active service will not let himself be involved in civilian affairs;
5 he must be wholly at his commanding officer's disposal. Again, no athlete
6 can win a prize unless he has kept the rules. The farmer who gives his 7 labour has first claim on the crop. Reflect on what I say, for the Lord will help you to full understanding.

8 Remember Jesus Christ, risen from the dead, born of David's line. This 9 is the theme of my gospel, in whose service I am exposed to hardship, even to the point of being shut up like a common criminal; but the word of God 10 is not shut up. And I endure it all for the sake of God's chosen ones, with this end in view, that they too may attain the glorious and eternal salvation which is in Christ Jesus.

11 Here are words you may trust:

12 'If we died with him, we shall live with him;
if we endure, we shall reign with him.
If we deny him, he will deny us.
13 If we are faithless, he keeps faith,
for he cannot deny himself.'

14 GO ON REMINDING people of this, and charge them solemnly before
God to stop disputing about mere words; it does no good, and is the ruin 15 of those who listen. Try hard to show yourself worthy of God's approval, as a labourer who need not be ashamed; be straightforward in your pro-16 clamation of the truth. Avoid empty and worldly chatter; those who 17 indulge in it will stray further and further into godless courses, and the infection of their teaching will spread like a gangrene. Such are Hymenaeus 18 and Philetus; they have shot wide of the truth in saying that our resurrection has already taken place, and are upsetting people's faith. But God has laid 19 a foundation, and it stands firm, with this inscription: 'The Lord knows his

^a Or what I have put into his charge.

^b Or Keep before you as a model of sound teaching that which . . .

own', and, 'Everyone who takes the Lord's name upon his lips must forsake wickedness.' Now in any great house there are not only utensils of gold and silver, but also others of wood or earthenware; the former are valued, the latter held cheap. To be among those which are valued and dedicated, a thing of use to the Master of the house, a man must cleanse himself from all those evil things;^a then he will be fit for any honourable purpose.

Turn from the wayward impulses of youth, and pursue justice, integrity, love, and peace with all who invoke the Lord in singleness of mind. Have nothing to do with foolish and ignorant speculations. You know they breed quarrels, and the servant of the Lord must not be quarrelsome, but kindly towards all. He should be a good teacher, tolerant, and gentle when discipline is needed for the refractory. The Lord may grant them a change of heart and show them the truth, and thus they may come to their senses and escape from the devil's snare, in which they have been caught and held at his will.^b

You must face the fact: the final age of this world is to be a time of troubles. Men will love nothing but money and self; they will be arrogant, boastful, and abusive; with no respect for parents, no gratitude, no piety, no natural affection; they will be implacable in their hatreds, scandal-mongers, intemperate and fierce, strangers to all goodness, traitors, adventurers, swollen with self-importance. They will be men who put pleasure in the place of God, men who preserve the outward form of religion, but are a standing denial of its reality. Keep clear of men like these. They are the sort that insinuate themselves into private houses and there get miserable women into their clutches, women burdened with a sinful past, and led on by all kinds of desires, who are always wanting to be taught, but are incapable of reaching a knowledge of the truth. As Jannes and Jambres defied Moses, so these men defy the truth; they have lost the power to reason, and they cannot pass the tests of faith. But their successes will be short-lived, for, like those opponents of Moses, they will come to be recognized by everyone for the fools they are.

But you, my son, have followed, step by step, my teaching and my manner of life, my resolution, my faith, patience, and spirit of love, and my fortitude under persecutions and sufferings—all that I went through at Antioch, at Iconium, at Lystra, all the persecutions I endured; and the Lord rescued me out of them all. Yes, persecution will come to all who want to live a godly life as Christians, whereas wicked men and charlatans will make progress from bad to worse, deceiving and deceived. But for your part, stand by the truths you have learned and are assured of. Remember from whom you learned them; remember that from early childhood you have been familiar with the sacred writings which have power to make you wise and lead you to salvation through faith in Christ Jesus. Every inspired scripture has its use for teaching the truth and refuting error, or for reformation of manners and discipline in right living, so that the man who belongs to God may be efficient and equipped for good work of every kind.

^a Or must separate himself from these persons.

^b Or escape from the devil's snare, caught now by God and made subject to his will.

Before God, and before Christ Jesus who is to judge men living and dead, I charge you solemnly by his coming appearance and his reign, proclaim the message, press it home on all occasions,^a convenient or inconvenient, use argument, reproof, and appeal, with all the patience that the work of teaching requires. For the time will come when they will not stand wholesome teaching, but will follow their own fancy and gather a crowd of teachers to tickle their ears. They will stop their ears to the truth and turn to mythology. But you yourself must keep calm and sane at all times; face hardship, work to spread the Gospel, and do all the duties of your calling.

AS FOR ME, already my life is being poured out on the altar, and the hour for my departure is upon me. I have run the great race, I have finished the course, I have kept faith. And now the prize awaits me, the garland of righteousness which the Lord, the all-just Judge, will award me on that great Day; and it is not for me alone, but for all who have set their hearts on his coming appearance.

Do your best to join me soon; for Demas has deserted me because his heart was set on this world; he has gone to Thessalonica, Crescens to Galatia,^b Titus to Dalmatia; I have no one with me but Luke. Pick up Mark and bring him with you, for I find him a useful assistant. Tychicus I have sent to Ephesus. When you come, bring the cloak I left with Carpus at Troas, and the books, above all my notebooks.

Alexander the copper-smith did me a great deal of harm. Retribution will fall upon him from the Lord. You had better be on your guard against him too, for he violently opposed everything I said. At the first hearing of my case no one came into court to support me; they all left me in the lurch; I pray that it may not be held against them. But the Lord stood by me and lent me strength, so that I might be his instrument in making the full proclamation of the Gospel for the whole pagan world to hear; and thus I was rescued out of the lion's jaws. And the Lord will rescue me from every attempt to do me harm, and keep me safe until his heavenly reign begins.^c Glory to him for ever and ever! Amen.

Greetings to Prisca and Aquila, and the household of Onesiphorus.

Erastus stayed behind at Corinth, and I left Trophimus ill at Miletus. Do try to get here before winter.

Greetings from Eubulus, Pudens, Linus, and Claudia, and from all the brotherhood here.

The Lord be with your spirit. Grace be with you all!

^a Or be on duty at all times.

^b Or Gaul; some witnesses read Gallia.

^c Or from all that evil can do, and bring me safely into his heavenly kingdom.

THE LETTER OF PAUL TO TITUS

Training for the Christian life

FROM PAUL, SERVANT of God and apostle of Jesus Christ, 1 marked as such by faith and knowledge and hope—the faith of God's chosen people, knowledge of the truth as our religion has it, and the hope of eternal life.^a Yes, it is eternal life that God, who cannot lie, 2 promised long ages ago, and now in his own good time he has openly 3 declared himself in the proclamation which was entrusted to me by ordinance of God our Saviour.

To Titus, my true-born son in the faith which we share, grace and peace 4 from God our Father and Christ Jesus our Saviour.

My intention in leaving you behind in Crete was that you should set in 5 order what was left over, and in particular should institute elders in each town. In doing so, observe the tests I prescribed: is he a man of un- 6 impeachable character, faithful to his one wife,^b the father of children who are believers, who are under no imputation of loose living, and are not out of control? For as God's steward a bishop must be a man of unimpeachable 7 character. He must not be overbearing or short-tempered; he must be no drinker, no brawler, no money-grubber, but hospitable, right-minded, 8 temperate, just, devout, and self-controlled. He must adhere to the true 9 doctrine, so that he may be well able both to move his hearers with wholesome teaching and to confute objectors.

There are all too many, especially among Jewish converts, who are out 10 of all control; they talk wildly and lead men's minds astray. Such men must be curbed, because they are ruining whole families by teaching things they 11 should not, and all for sordid gain. It was a Cretan prophet, one of their 12 own countrymen, who said, 'Cretans were always liars, vicious brutes, lazy gluttons'—and he told the truth! All the more reason why you should 13 pull them up sharply, so that they may come to a sane belief, instead of lending their ears to Jewish myths and commandments of merely human 14 origin, the work of men who turn their backs upon the truth.

To the pure all things are pure; but nothing is pure to the tainted minds 15 of disbelievers, tainted alike in reason and conscience. They profess to acknowledge God, but deny him by their actions. Their detestable obstinacy 16 disqualifies them for any good work.

For your own part, what you say must be in keeping with wholesome 2

^a Or apostle of Jesus Christ, to bring God's chosen people to faith and to a knowledge of the truth as our religion has it, with its hope for eternal life.

^b See note on

1 Timothy 3. 2.

2 doctrine. Let the older men know that they should be sober, high-principled,
3 and temperate, sound in faith, in love, and in endurance. The older 4 women, similarly, should be reverent in their bearing, not scandal-
5 mongers or slaves to strong drink; they must set a high standard, and school 6 the younger women to be loving wives and mothers, temperate, chaste, and 7 kind, busy at home, respecting the authority of their own husbands. Thus 8 the Gospel will not be brought into disrepute.

9 Urge the younger men, similarly, to be temperate in all things, and set
10 them a good example yourself. In your teaching, you must show integrity 11 and high principle, and use wholesome speech to which none can take 12 exception. This will shame any opponent, when he finds not a word to say 13 to our discredit.

14 Tell slaves to respect their masters' authority in everything, and to 15 comply with their demands without answering back; not to pilfer, but to 16 show themselves strictly honest and trustworthy; for in all such ways they 17 will add lustre to the doctrine of God our Saviour.

18 For the grace of God has dawned upon the world with healing for all 19 mankind; and by it we are disciplined to renounce godless ways and 20 worldly desires, and to live a life of temperance, honesty, and godliness in 21 the present age, looking forward to the happy fulfilment of our hope when 22 the splendour of our great God and Saviour ^a Christ Jesus will appear. He 23 it is who sacrificed himself for us, to set us free from all wickedness and to 24 make us a pure people marked out for his own, eager to do good.

25 These, then, are your themes; urge them and argue them. And speak 26 with authority: let no one slight you.

27 Remind them to be submissive to the government and the authorities, 28 to obey them, and to be ready for any honourable form of work; ^b to 29 slander no one, not to pick quarrels, to show forbearance and a con-30 sistent gentle disposition towards all men.

31 For at one time we ourselves in our folly and obstinacy were all astray.
32 We were slaves to passions and pleasures of every kind. Our days were 33 passed in malice and envy; we were odious ourselves and we hated one 34 another. But when the kindness and generosity of God our Saviour dawned 35 upon the world, then, not for any good deeds of our own, but because he 36 was merciful, he saved us through the water of rebirth and the renewing 37 power of ^c the Holy Spirit. For he sent down the Spirit upon us plentifully 38 through Jesus Christ our Saviour, so that, justified by his grace, we might 39 in hope become heirs to eternal life. These are words you may trust.

40 Such are the points I should wish you to insist on. Those who have 41 come to believe in God should see that they engage in honourable occupa-42 tions, which are not only honourable in themselves, but also useful to their 43 fellow-men. ^d But steer clear of foolish speculations, genealogies, quarrels, 44 and controversies over the Law; they are unprofitable and pointless.

45 A heretic should be warned once, and once again; after that, have done with him, recognizing that a man of that sort has a distorted mind and 11 stands self-condemned in his sin.

When I send Artemas to you, or Tychicus, make haste to join me at 12 Nicopolis, for that is where I have determined to spend the winter. Do 13 your utmost to help Zenas the lawyer and Apollos on their travels, and see that they are not short of anything. And our own people must be taught to 14 engage in honest employment to produce the necessities of life; they must not be unproductive.

All who are with me send you greetings. My greetings to those who are 15 our friends in truth.^a Grace be with you all!

THE LETTER OF PAUL TO PHILEMON

A runaway slave

1 FROM PAUL, a prisoner of Christ Jesus, and our colleague
2 Timothy, to Philemon our dear friend and fellow-worker, and 3 Apphia our sister, and Archippus our comrade-in-arms, and the 4 congregation at your house.

5 Grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

6 I thank my God always when I mention you in my prayers, for I hear
7 of your love and faith towards the Lord Jesus and towards all God's 8 people. My prayer is that your fellowship with us in our common faith may 9 deepen the understanding of all the blessings that our union with Christ
10 brings us.^a For I am delighted and encouraged by your love; through you, 11 my brother, God's people have been much refreshed.

12 Accordingly, although in Christ I might make bold to point out your 13 duty, yet, because of that same love, I would rather appeal to you. Yes, I,
14 Paul, ambassador as I am of Christ Jesus—and now his prisoner—appeal
15 to you about my child, whose father I have become in this prison.

16 I mean Onesimus, once so little use to you, but now useful indeed, both 17 to you and to me. I am sending him back to you, and in doing so I am send-18 ing a part of myself. I should have liked to keep him with me, to look after 19 me as you would wish, here in prison for the Gospel. But I would rather do 20 nothing without your consent, so that your kindness may be a matter not 21 of compulsion, but of your own free will. For perhaps this is why you lost 22 him for a time, that you might have him back for good, no longer as a slave, 23 but as more than a slave—as a dear brother, very dear indeed to me and 24 how much dearer to you, both as man and as Christian.

25 If, then, you count me partner in the faith, welcome him as you would welcome me. And if he has done you any wrong or is in your debt, put that down to my account. Here is my signature, PAUL; I undertake to repay—not to mention that you owe your very self to me as well. Now brother, as a Christian, be generous with me, and relieve my anxiety; we are both in Christ!

26 I write to you confident that you will meet my wishes; I know that you
27 will in fact do better than I ask. And one thing more: have a room ready 28 for me, for I hope that, in answer to your prayers, God will grant me to you.

29 Epaphras, Christ's captive like myself, sends you greetings. So do Mark, 30 Aristarchus, Demas, and Luke, my fellow-workers.

31 The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit!

^a Or that bring us to Christ.

A LETTER TO HEBREWS

Christ divine and human

WHEN IN FORMER TIMES God spoke to our forefathers, 1
he spoke in fragmentary and varied fashion through the prophets.
But in this the final age he has spoken to us in the Son whom 2
he has made heir to the whole universe, and through whom he created all orders of existence: the Son who is the effulgence of God's splendour and 3 the stamp of God's very being, and sustains^a the universe by his word of power. When he had brought about the purgation of sins, he took his seat at the right hand of Majesty on high, raised as far above the angels, as the 4 title he has inherited is superior to theirs.

For God never said to any angel, 'Thou art my Son; today I have be- 5 gotten thee', or again, 'I will be father to him, and he shall be my son.'
Again, when he presents the first-born to the world, he says, 'Let all the 6 angels of God pay him homage.' Of the angels he says, 7

'He who makes his angels winds, and his ministers a fiery flame';

but of the Son, 8

'Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever,
and the sceptre^b of justice is the sceptre of his kingdom.
Thou hast loved right and hated wrong; 9
therefore, O God, thy God^c has set thee above thy fellows, by anointing with the oil of exultation.'

And again, 10

'By thee, Lord, were earth's foundations laid of old,
and the heavens are the work of thy hands.
They shall pass away, but thou endurest; 11
like clothes they shall all grow old;
thou shalt fold them up like a cloak; 12
yes, they shall be changed like any garment.
But thou art the same, and thy years shall have no end.'

To which of the angels has he ever said, 'Sit at my right hand until I 13 make thy enemies thy footstool'? What are they all but ministrant 14 spirits, sent out to serve, for the sake of those who are to inherit salvation?

^a Or bears along.

^b Or God is thy throne for ever and ever, and thy sceptre . . .

^c Or therefore God who is thy God . . .

- 2 Thus we are bound to pay all the more heed to what we have been told,
 2 for fear of drifting from our course. For if the word spoken through angels
 3 had such force that any transgression or disobedience met with due retribu-3 tion, what escape can there be for us if we ignore a deliverance so great?
 4 For this deliverance was first announced through the lips of the Lord him-
 4 self; those who heard him confirmed it to us, and God added his testimony by signs, by miracles, by manifold works of power, and by distributing the gifts of the Holy Spirit at his own will.
- 5 For it is not to angels that he has subjected the world to come, which is 6 our theme. But there is somewhere a solemn assurance which runs:

- ‘What is man, that thou rememberest him, or the son of man, that thou hast regard to him?’
- 7 Thou didst make him for a short while lower than the angels;
 thou didst crown him with glory and honour;
 8 thou didst put all things in subjection beneath his feet.’

- For in subjecting all things to him, he left nothing that is not subject. But 9 in fact we do not yet see all things in subjection to man. In Jesus, however, we do see one who^a for a short while was made lower than the angels, crowned now with glory and honour because he suffered death, so that,
 by God’s gracious will, in tasting death he should stand^b for us all.

- 10 It was clearly fitting that God for whom and through whom all things exist should, in bringing many sons to glory, make the leader who delivers 11 them perfect through sufferings. For a consecrating priest and those whom he consecrates are all of one stock; and that is why the Son does not 12 shrink from calling men his brothers, when he says, ‘I will proclaim thy 13 name to my brothers; in full assembly I will sing thy praise’; and again, ‘I will keep my trust fixed on him’; and again, ‘Here am I, and the children
 14 whom God has given me.’ The children of a family share the same flesh and blood; and so he too shared ours, so that through death he might break 15 the power of him who had death at his command, that is, the devil; and might liberate those who, through fear of death, had all their lifetime been 16 in servitude. It is not angels, mark you, that he takes to himself, but the 17 sons of Abraham. And therefore he had to be made like these brothers of his in every way, so that he might be merciful and faithful as their high 18 priest before God, to expiate the sins of the people. For since he himself has passed through the test of suffering, he is able to help those who are meeting their test now.

- 3 Therefore, brothers in the family of God, who share a heavenly calling, 2 think of the Apostle and High Priest of the religion we profess,^c who was faithful to God who appointed him. Moses also was faithful in God’s 3 household; and Jesus, of whom I speak, has been deemed worthy of greater 4 honour than Moses, as the founder of a house enjoys more honour than 4 his household. For every house has its founder; and the founder of all is 5 God. Moses, then, was faithful as a servitor in God’s whole household;

^a Or in subjection to him. But we see Jesus, who . . . ^b Some witnesses read so that apart from God he should taste death . . . ^c Or of him whom we confess as God’s Envoy and High Priest.

his task was to bear witness to the words that God would speak; but Christ is faithful as a son, set over his household. And we are that household of his, if only we are fearless and keep our hope high.

'TODAY', THEREFORE, as the Holy Spirit says—

'Today if you hear his voice,
do not grow stubborn as in those days of rebellion,
at that time of testing in the desert,
where your forefathers tried me and tested me,
and saw^a the things I did for forty years.
And so, I was indignant with that generation and I said, Their hearts are for ever astray;
they would not discern my ways;
as I vowed in my anger, they shall never enter my rest.'

See to it, brothers, that no one among you has the wicked, faithless heart of a deserter from the living God; but day by day, while that word 'Today' still sounds in your ears, encourage one another, so that no one of you is made stubborn by the wiles of sin. For we have become Christ's partners^b if only we keep our original confidence firm to the end.

When Scripture says, 'Today if you hear his voice, do not grow stubborn as in those days of rebellion', who, I ask, were those who heard and rebelled? All those, surely, whom Moses had led out of Egypt. And with whom was God indignant for forty years? With those, surely, who had sinned, whose bodies lay where they fell in the desert. And to whom did he vow that they should not enter his rest, if not to those who had refused to believe? We perceive that it was unbelief which prevented their entering.

Therefore we must have before us the fear that while the promise of entering his rest remains open, one or another among you should be found to have missed his chance. For indeed we have heard the good news, as they did. But in them the message they heard did no good, because it met with no faith in those who heard it. It is we, we who have become believers, who enter the rest referred to in the words, 'As I vowed in my anger, they shall never enter my rest.' Yet God's work has been finished ever since the world was created; for does not Scripture somewhere speak thus of the seventh day: 'God rested from all his work on the seventh day'?—and once again in the passage above we read, 'They shall never enter my rest.' The fact remains that someone must enter it, and since those who first heard the good news failed to enter through unbelief, God fixes another day. Speaking through the lips of David after many long years, he uses the words already quoted: 'Today if you hear his voice, do not grow stubborn.' If Joshua had given them rest, God would not thus have spoken of another day after that. Therefore, a sabbath rest still awaits the people of God; for anyone who enters God's rest, rests from his own work as God did from his. Let us then make every effort to enter that rest, so that no one may fall by following this evil example of unbelief.

^a Or though they saw . . .

^b Or have been given a share in Christ.

- 12 For the word of God is alive and active. It cuts more keenly than any 13 two-edged sword, piercing as far as the place where life and spirit, joints and marrow, divide. It sifts the purposes and thoughts of the heart. There is nothing in creation that can hide from him; everything lies naked and exposed to the eyes of the One with whom we have to reckon.
- 14 Since therefore we have a great high priest who has passed through the heavens, Jesus the Son of God, let us hold fast to the religion we profess.
 15 For ours is not a high priest unable to sympathize with our weaknesses, but one who, because of his likeness to us, has been tested every way,^a 16 only without sin. Let us therefore boldly approach the throne of our gracious God, where we may receive mercy and in his grace find timely help.

The shadow and the real

- 5 FOR EVERY HIGH PRIEST is taken from among men and appointed their representative before God, to offer gifts and sacrifices for sins.
 2 He is able to bear patiently with the ignorant and erring, since he too is 3 beset by weakness; and because of this he is bound to make sin-offerings for himself no less than for the people. And nobody arrogates the honour 5 to himself: he is called by God, as indeed Aaron was. So it is with Christ:
 he did not confer upon himself the glory of becoming high priest; it was granted by God, who said to him, 'Thou art my Son; today I have begotten 6 thee'; as also in another place he says, 'Thou art a priest for ever, in the 7 succession of Melchizedek.' In the days of his earthly life he offered up prayers and petitions, with loud cries and tears, to God who was able to deliver him from the grave. Because of his humble submission his prayer 8 was heard: son though he was, he learned obedience in the school of 9 suffering, and, once perfected, became the source of eternal salvation for 10 all who obey him, named by God high priest in the succession of Melchizedek.
- 11 About Melchizedek we have much to say, much that is difficult to 12 explain, now that you have grown so dull of hearing. For indeed, though by this time you ought to be teachers, you need someone to teach you the ABC of God's oracles over again; it has come to this, that you need milk 13 instead of solid food. Anyone who lives on milk, being an infant, does not 14 know^b what is right. But grown men can take solid food; their perceptions are trained by long use to discriminate between good and evil.
- 6 Let us then stop discussing the rudiments of Christianity. We ought not to be laying over again the foundations of faith in God and of repen-2 tance from the deadness of our former ways, by instruction^c about cleansing rites and the laying-on-of-hands, about the resurrection of the dead 3 and eternal judgement. Instead, let us advance towards maturity; and so we shall, if God permits.
- 4 For when men have once been enlightened, when they have had a taste

^a Or who has been tested every way, as we are. ^b Or is incompetent to speak of . . .

^c Or, according to some witnesses, laying the foundations over again: repentance from the deadness of our former ways and faith in God, instruction . . .

of the heavenly gift and a share in the Holy Spirit, when they have exper- 5 ienced the goodness of God's word and the spiritual energies of the age to 6 come, and after all this have fallen away, it is impossible to bring them again to repentance; for with their own hands they are crucifying^a the 7 Son of God and making mock of his death. When the earth drinks in the 8 rain that falls upon it from time to time, and yields a useful crop to those for whom it is cultivated, it is receiving its share of blessing from God; but 9
 if it bears thorns and thistles, it is worthless and God's curse hangs over it;
 the end of that is burning. But although we speak as we do, we are convinced 10 that you, my friends, are in the better case, and this makes for your salva- 11 tion. For God would not be so unjust as to forget all that you did for love of his name, when you rendered service to his people, as you still do. But 12 we long for every one of you to show the same eager concern, until your hope is finally realized. We want you not to become lazy, but to imitate those 13 who, through faith and patience, are inheriting the promises.

When God made his promise to Abraham, he swore by himself, because 13
 he had no one greater to swear by: 'I vow that I will bless you abundantly 14 and multiply your descendants.' Thus it was that Abraham, after patient 15 waiting, attained the promise. Men swear by a greater than themselves, 16 and the oath provides a confirmation to end all dispute; and so God, desir- 17
 ing to show even more clearly to the heirs of his promise how unchanging was his purpose, guaranteed it by oath. Here, then, are two irrevocable 18 acts in which God could not possibly play us false, to give powerful encouragement to us, who have claimed his protection by grasping^b the 19 hope set before us. That hope we hold. It is like an anchor for our lives, an anchor safe and sure. It enters in through the veil, where Jesus has entered 20 on our behalf as forerunner, having become a high priest for ever in the succession of Melchizedek.

THIS MELCHIZEDEK, king of Salem, priest of God Most High, met 7
 Abraham returning from the rout of the kings and blessed him; and Abra- 2 ham gave him a tithe of everything as his portion. His name, in the first place, means 'king of righteousness'; next he is king of Salem, that is, 'king of 3 peace'. He has no father, no mother, no lineage; his years have no beginning, his life no end. He is like the Son of God: he remains a priest for all time.

Consider now how great he must be for Abraham the patriarch to give 4 him a tithe of the finest of the spoil. The descendants of Levi who take the 5 priestly office are commanded by the Law to tithe the people, that is, their kinsmen, although they too are descendants of Abraham. But Melchizedek, 6 though he does not trace his descent from them, has tithed Abraham himself, and given his blessing to the man who received the promises; and 7 beyond all dispute the lesser is always blessed by the greater. Again, in the 8 one instance tithes are received by men who must die; but in the other, by one whom Scripture affirms to be alive. It might even be said that Levi, 9 who receives tithes, has himself been tithed through Abraham; for he was still in his ancestor's loins when Melchizedek met him. 10

^a Or crucifying again. ^b Or to give to us, who have claimed his protection, a powerful incentive to grasp . . .

11 Now if perfection had been attainable through the Levitical priesthood
 (for it is on this basis that the people were given the Law), what further 12 need would there have been to speak of another priest arising, in the suc-13 cession of Melchizedek, instead of the succession of Aaron? For a change of 14 priesthood must mean a change of law. And the one here spoken of belongs to a different tribe, no member of which has ever had anything to do with the altar. For it is very evident that our Lord is sprung from Judah, a tribe to which Moses made no reference in speaking of priests.

15 The argument becomes still clearer, if the new priest who arises is one
 16 like Melchizedek, owing his priesthood not to a system of earth-bound 17 rules but to the power of a life that cannot be destroyed. For here is the testimony: 'Thou art a priest for ever, in the succession of Melchizedek.'

18 19 The earlier rules are cancelled as impotent and useless, since the Law brought nothing to perfection; and a better hope is introduced, through which we draw near to God.

20 21 How great a difference it makes that an oath was sworn! There was no oath sworn when those others were made priests; but for this priest an oath was sworn, as Scripture says of him: 'The Lord has sworn and will 22 not go back on his word, "Thou art a priest for ever."' How far superior 23 must the covenant also be of which Jesus is the guarantor! Those other priests are appointed in numerous succession, because they are prevented 24 by death from continuing in office; but the priesthood which Jesus holds 25 is perpetual, because he remains for ever. That is why he is also able to save absolutely those who approach God through him; he is always living to plead on their behalf.

26 Such a high priest does indeed fit our condition—devout, guileless, un-27 defiled, separated from sinners, raised high above the heavens. He has no need to offer sacrifices daily, as the high priests do, first for his own sins and then for those of the people; for this he did once and for all when he 28 offered up himself. The high priests made by the Law are men in all their frailty; but the priest appointed by the words of the oath which supersedes
 the Law is the Son, made perfect now for ever.

8 NOW THIS IS my main point: just such a high priest we have, and he has 2 taken his seat at the right hand of the throne of Majesty in the heavens, a ministrant in the real sanctuary, the tent pitched by the Lord and not by 3 man. Every high priest is appointed to offer gifts and sacrifices; hence, this 4 one too must have^a something to offer. Now if he had been on earth, he would not even have been a priest, since there are already priests who offer 5 the gifts which the Law prescribes, though they minister in a sanctuary which is only a copy and shadow of the heavenly. This is implied when Moses, about to erect the tent, is instructed by God: 'See to it that you make everything according to the pattern shown you on the mountain.'
 6 But in fact the ministry which has fallen to Jesus is as far superior to theirs as are the covenant he mediates and the promises upon which it is legally secured.

7 Had that first covenant been faultless, there would have been no need to look for a second in its place. But God, finding fault with them, says, 8

^a Or must have had.

 'The days are coming, says the Lord, when I will conclude a new covenant 9 with the house of Israel and the house of Judah. It will not be like the 9 covenant I made with their forefathers when I took them by the hand to 10 lead them out of Egypt; because they did not abide by the terms of that 10 covenant, and I abandoned them, says the Lord. For the covenant I will 10 make with the house of Israel after those days, says the Lord, is this: I 11 will set my laws in their understanding and write them on their hearts; 11 and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. And they shall not 11 teach one another, saying to brother and fellow-citizen,^a "Know the 12 Lord!" For all of them, high and low, shall know me; I will be merciful 12 to their wicked deeds, and I will remember their sins no more.' By speak- 13 ing of a new covenant, he has pronounced the first one old; and anything 13 that is growing old and ageing will shortly disappear.

THE FIRST COVENANT indeed had its ordinances of divine service and 9 its sanctuary, but a material sanctuary. For a tent was prepared—the first 2 tent—in which was the lamp-stand, and the table with the bread of the 2 Presence; this is called the Holy Place. Beyond the second curtain was the 3 tent called the Most Holy Place. Here was a golden altar of incense, and 4 the ark of the covenant plated all over with gold, in which were a golden 4 jar containing the manna, and Aaron's staff which once budded, and the 5 tablets of the covenant; and above it the cherubim of God's glory, over- 5 shadowing the place of expiation. On these we cannot now enlarge.

Under this arrangement, the priests are always entering the first tent 6 in the discharge of their duties; but the second is entered only once a year, 7 and by the high priest alone, and even then he must take with him the 7 blood which he offers on his own behalf and for the people's sins of ignor- 8 ance. By this the Holy Spirit signifies that so long as the earlier tent still 8 stands, the way into the sanctuary remains unrevealed. All this is symbolic, 9 pointing to the present time. The offerings and sacrifices there prescribed 9 cannot give the worshipper inward perfection. It is only a matter of food 10 and drink and various rites of cleansing—outward ordinances in force until 10 the time of reformation.

But now Christ has come, high priest of good things already in being.^b 11
 The tent of his priesthood is a greater and more perfect one, not made by 11 men's hands, that is, not belonging to this created world; the blood of his 12 sacrifice is his own blood, not the blood of goats and calves; and thus he 12 has entered the sanctuary once and for all and secured an eternal deliver- 13 ance. For if the blood of goats and bulls and the sprinkled ashes of a heifer 13 have power to hallow those who have been defiled and restore their external 13 purity, how much greater is the power of the blood of Christ; he offered 14 himself without blemish to God, a spiritual and eternal sacrifice; and his 14 blood will cleanse our conscience from the deadness of our former ways 14 and fit us for the service of the living God.

And therefore he is the mediator of a new covenant, or testament, under 15

^a Some witnesses read brother and neighbour.
 which were (or are) to be.

^b Some witnesses read good things which, now that there has been a death to bring deliverance from sins committed under the former covenant, those whom God has called may receive the promise of the eternal inheritance. For where there is a testament it is necessary for the death of the testator to be established. A testament is operative only after a death: it cannot possibly have force while the testator is alive. Thus we find that the former covenant itself was not inaugurated without blood. For when, as the Law directed, Moses had recited all the commandments to the people, he took the blood of the calves, with water, scarlet wool, and marjoram, and sprinkled the law-book itself and all the people, saying, 'This is the blood of the covenant which God has enjoined upon you.' In the same way he also sprinkled the tent and all the vessels of divine service with blood. Indeed, according to the Law, it might almost be said, everything is cleansed by blood and without the shedding of blood there is no forgiveness.

If, then, these sacrifices cleanse the copies of heavenly things, those heavenly things themselves require better sacrifices to cleanse them. For Christ has entered, not that sanctuary made by men's hands which is only a symbol of the reality, but heaven itself, to appear now before God on our behalf. Nor is he there to offer himself again and again, as the high priest enters the sanctuary year by year with blood not his own. If that were so, he would have had to suffer many times since the world was made. But as it is, he has appeared once and for all at the climax of history to abolish sin by the sacrifice of himself. And as it is the lot of men to die once, and after death comes judgement, so Christ was offered once to bear the burden of men's sins,^a and will appear a second time, sin done away, to bring salvation to those who are watching for him.

10 FOR THE LAW contains but a shadow, and no true image,^b of the good things which were to come; it provides for the same sacrifices year after year, and with these it can never bring the worshippers to perfection for all time.^c If it could, these sacrifices would surely have ceased to be offered, because the worshippers, cleansed once for all, would no longer have any sense of sin. But instead, in these sacrifices year after year sins are brought to mind, because sins can never be removed by the blood of bulls and goats.

That is why, at his coming into the world, he says:

'Sacrifice and offering thou didst not desire,
but thou hast prepared a body for me.

Whole-offerings and sin-offerings thou didst not delight in.

Then I said, "Here am I: as it is written of me in the scroll,
I have come, O God, to do thy will."

First he says, 'Sacrifices and offerings, whole-offerings and sin-offerings, thou didst not desire nor delight in'—although the Law prescribes them—and then he says, 'I have come to do thy will.' He thus annuls the former to establish the latter. And it is by the will of God that we have been ^a Or to remove men's sins.

^b One witness reads a shadow and likeness . . .

^c Or bring to perfection the worshippers who come continually.

consecrated, through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once and for all.

Every priest stands performing his service daily and offering time after time the same sacrifices, which can never remove sins. But Christ offered for all time one sacrifice for sins, and took his seat at the right hand of God, where he waits henceforth until his enemies are made his footstool. For by one offering he has perfected for all time those who are thus consecrated. Here we have also the testimony of the Holy Spirit: he first says, 'This is the covenant which I will make with them after those days, says the Lord: I will set my laws in their hearts and write them on their understanding'; then he adds, 'and their sins and wicked deeds I will remember no more at all.' And where these have been forgiven, there are offerings for sin no longer.

SO NOW, MY FRIENDS, the blood of Jesus makes us free to enter boldly into the sanctuary by the new, living way which he has opened for us through the curtain, the way of his flesh.^a We have, moreover, a great priest set over the household of God; so let us make our approach in sincerity of heart and full assurance of faith, our guilty hearts sprinkled clean, our bodies washed with pure water. Let us be firm and unswerving in the confession of our hope, for the Giver of the promise may be trusted. We ought to see how each of us may best arouse others to love and active goodness, not staying away from our meetings, as some do, but rather encouraging one another, all the more because you see the Day drawing near.

For if we wilfully persist in sin after receiving the knowledge of the truth, no sacrifice for sins remains: only a terrifying expectation of judgement and a fierce fire which will consume God's enemies. If a man disregards the Law of Moses, he is put to death without pity on the evidence of two or three witnesses. Think how much more severe a penalty that man will deserve who has trampled under foot the Son of God, profaned the blood of the covenant by which he was consecrated, and affronted God's gracious Spirit! For we know who it is that has said, 'Justice is mine: I will repay'; and again, 'The Lord will judge his people.' It is a terrible thing to fall into the hands of the living God.

Remember the days gone by, when, newly enlightened, you met the challenge of great sufferings and held firm. Some of you were abused and tormented to make a public show, while others stood loyally by those who were so treated. For indeed you shared the sufferings of the prisoners, and you cheerfully accepted the seizure of your possessions, knowing that you possessed something better and more lasting. Do not then throw away your confidence, for it carries a great reward. You need endurance, if you are to do God's will and win what he has promised. For 'soon, very soon' (in the words of Scripture), 'he who is to come will come; he will not delay; and by faith my righteous servant shall find life; but if a man shrinks back, I take no pleasure in him.' But we are not among those who shrink back and are lost; we have the faith to make life our own.

^a Or through the curtain of his flesh.

A call to faith

11 AND WHAT IS FAITH? Faith gives substance^a to our hopes, and makes us certain of realities we do not see.

2 It is for their faith that the men of old stand on record.

3 By faith we perceive that the universe was fashioned by the word of God, so that the visible came forth from the invisible.

4 By faith Abel offered a sacrifice greater than Cain's, and through faith his goodness was attested, for his offerings had God's approval; and through faith he continued to speak after his death.

5 By faith Enoch was carried away to another life without passing through death; he was not to be found, because God had taken him. For it is the testimony of Scripture that before he was taken he had pleased God, and without faith it is impossible to please him; for anyone who comes to God must believe that he exists and that he rewards those who search for him.

7 By faith Noah, divinely warned about the unseen future, took good heed and built an ark to save his household. Through his faith he put the whole world in the wrong, and made good his own claim to the righteousness which comes of faith.

8 By faith Abraham obeyed the call to go out to a land destined for himself and his heirs, and left home without knowing where he was to go. By faith he settled as an alien in the land promised him, living in tents, as did Isaac and Jacob, who were heirs to the same promise. For he was looking forward to the city with firm foundations, whose architect and builder is God.

11 By faith even Sarah herself received strength to conceive, though she was past the age, because she judged that he who had promised would keep faith; and therefore from one man, and one as good as dead, there sprang descendants numerous as the stars or as the countless grains of sand on the sea-shore.

13 All these persons died in faith. They were not yet in possession of the things promised, but had seen them far ahead and hailed them, and confessed themselves no more than strangers or passing travellers on earth. Those who use such language show plainly that they are looking for a country of their own. If their hearts had been in the country they had left, they could have found opportunity to return. Instead, we find them longing for a better country—I mean, the heavenly one. That is why God is not ashamed to be called their God; for he has a city ready for them.

17 By faith Abraham, when the test came, offered up Isaac: he had received the promises, and yet he was on the point of offering his only son, of whom he had been told, 'Through the line of Isaac your descendants shall be traced.'^b For he reckoned that God had power even to raise from the dead—and from the dead, he did, in a sense, receive him back.

20 21 By faith Isaac blessed Jacob and Esau and spoke of things to come. By faith Jacob, as he was dying, blessed each of Joseph's sons, and worshipped

^a Or assurance.

^b Or God's call shall be for your descendants in the line of Isaac.

God, leaning on the top of his staff. By faith Joseph, at the end of his life, 22 spoke of the departure of Israel from Egypt, and instructed them what to do with his bones.

By faith, when Moses was born, his parents hid him for three months, 23 because they saw what a fine child he was; they were not afraid of the king's edict. By faith Moses, when he grew up, refused to be called the son of 24 Pharaoh's daughter, preferring to suffer hardship with the people of God rather than enjoy the transient pleasures of sin. He considered the stigma 25 that rests on God's Anointed greater wealth than the treasures of Egypt, for his eyes were fixed upon the coming day of recompense. By faith he left 27 Egypt, and not because he feared the king's anger; for he was resolute, as one who saw the invisible God.

By faith he celebrated the Passover and sprinkled the blood, so that the 28 destroying angel might not touch the first-born of Israel. By faith they crossed the Red Sea as though it were dry land, whereas the Egyptians, 29 when they attempted the crossing, were drowned.

By faith the walls of Jericho fell down after they had been encircled on 30 seven successive days. By faith the prostitute Rahab escaped the doom of the unbelievers, because she had given the spies a kindly welcome. 31

Need I say more? Time is too short for me to tell the stories of Gideon, 32 Barak, Samson, and Jephthah, of David and Samuel and the prophets. Through faith they overthrew kingdoms, established justice, saw God's 33 promises fulfilled. They muzzled ravening lions, quenched the fury of fire, escaped death by the sword. Their weakness was turned to strength, 34 they grew powerful in war, they put foreign armies to rout. Women received back their dead raised to life. Others were tortured to death, dis- 35 daining release, to win a better resurrection. Others, again, had to face jeers and flogging, even fetters and prison bars. They were stoned,^a they were 37 sawn in two, they were put to the sword, they went about dressed in skins of sheep or goats, in poverty, distress, and misery. They were too good for 38 a world like this. They were refugees in deserts and on the hills, hiding in caves and holes in the ground. These also, one and all, are commemorated 39 for their faith; and yet they did not enter upon the promised inheritance, because, with us in mind, God had made a better plan, that only in com- 40 pany with us should they reach their perfection.

AND WHAT OF OURSELVES? With all these witnesses to faith around 12 us like a cloud, we must throw off every encumbrance, every sin to which we cling,^b and run with resolution the race for which we are entered, our 2 eyes fixed on Jesus, on whom faith depends from start to finish: Jesus who, for the sake of the joy that lay ahead of him,^c endured the cross, making light of its disgrace, and has taken his seat at the right hand of the throne of God.

Think of him who submitted to such opposition from sinners: that will 3 help you not to lose heart and grow faint. In your struggle against sin, you 4

^a Some witnesses insert they were put to the question. one witness reads the sin which all too readily distracts us. the joy that was open to him, . . .

^b Or every clinging sin;

^c Or who, in place of

5 have not yet resisted to the point of shedding your blood. You have forgotten the text of Scripture which addresses you as sons and appeals to you in these words:

6 'My son, do not think lightly of the Lord's discipline, nor lose heart when he corrects you;
for the Lord disciplines those whom he loves;
he lays the rod on every son whom he acknowledges.'

7 You must endure it as discipline: God is treating you as sons. Can anyone 8 be a son, who is not disciplined by his father? If you escape the discipline 9 in which all sons share, you must be bastards and no true sons. Again, we paid due respect to the earthly fathers who disciplined us; should we not 10 submit even more readily to our spiritual Father, and so attain life? They disciplined us for this short life according to their lights; but he does so for 11 our true welfare, so that we may share his holiness. Discipline, no doubt, is never pleasant; at the time it seems painful, but in the end it yields for 12 13 those who have been trained by it the peaceful harvest of an honest life.
Come, then, stiffen your drooping arms and shaking knees, and keep your steps from wavering. Then the disabled limb will not be put out of joint, but regain its former powers.

14 Aim at peace with all men, and a holy life, for without that no one will 15 see the Lord. Look to it that there is no one among you who forfeits the grace 16 of God, no bitter, noxious weed growing up to poison the whole, no immoral person, no one worldly-minded like Esau. He sold his birthright 17 for a single meal, and you know that although he wanted afterwards to claim the blessing, he was rejected; though he begged for it to the point of tears, he found no way open for second thoughts.

18 REMEMBER WHERE YOU STAND: not before the palpable, blazing fire of 19 Sinai, with the darkness, gloom, and whirlwind, the trumpet-blast and the 20 oracular voice, which they heard, and begged to hear no more; for they could not bear the command, 'If even an animal touches the mountain, it must be 21 stoned.' So appalling was the sight, that Moses said, 'I shudder with fear.'

22 No, you stand before Mount Zion and the city of the living God, 23 heavenly Jerusalem, before myriads of angels, the full concourse and assembly of the first-born citizens of heaven, and God the judge of all, 24 and the spirits of good men made perfect, and Jesus the mediator of a new covenant, whose sprinkled blood has better things to tell than the blood 25 of Abel. See that you do not refuse to hear the voice that speaks. Those who refused to hear the oracle speaking on earth found no escape; still less shall 26 we escape if we refuse to hear the One who speaks from heaven. Then indeed his voice shook the earth, but now he has promised, 'Yet once again 27 I will shake not earth alone, but the heavens also.' The words 'once again'— and only once—imply that the shaking of these created things means their 28 removal, and then what is not shaken will remain. The kingdom we are given is unshakable; let us therefore give thanks to God, and so worship 29 him as he would be worshipped, with reverence and awe; for our God is a devouring fire.

NEVER CEASE TO LOVE your fellow-Christians. 13

Remember to show hospitality. There are some who, by so doing, have entertained angels without knowing it. 2

Remember those in prison as if you were there with them; and those who are being maltreated, for you like them are still in the world. 3

Marriage is honourable; let us all keep it so, and the marriage-bond inviolate; for God's judgement will fall on fornicators and adulterers. 4

Do not live for money; be content with what you have; for God himself has said, 'I will never leave you or desert you'; and so we can take courage and say, 'The Lord is my helper, I will not fear; what can man do to me?' 5 6

Remember your leaders, those who first spoke God's message to you; and reflecting upon the outcome of their life and work, follow the example of their faith. 7

Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, today, and for ever. So do not be swept off your course by all sorts of outlandish teachings; it is good that our souls should gain their strength from the grace of God, and not from scruples about what we eat, which have never done any good to those who were governed by them. 8 9

Our altar is one from which ^a the priests of the sacred tent have no right to eat. As you know, those animals whose blood is brought as a sin-offering by the high priest into the sanctuary, have their bodies burnt outside the camp, and therefore Jesus also suffered outside the gate, to consecrate the people by his own blood. Let us then go to him outside the camp, bearing the stigma that he bore. For here we have no permanent home, but we are seekers after the city which is to come. Through Jesus, then, let us continually offer up to God the sacrifice of praise, that is, the tribute of lips which acknowledge his name, and never forget to show kindness and to share what you have with others; for such are the sacrifices which God approves. 10 11 12 13 14 15 16

ObeY your leaders and defer to them; for they are tireless in their concern for you, as men who must render an account. Let it be a happy task for them, and not pain and grief, for that would bring you no advantage. 17

Pray for us; for we are convinced that our conscience is clear; our one desire is always to do what is right. All the more earnestly I ask for your prayers, that I may be restored to you the sooner. 18 19

May the God of peace, who brought up from the dead our Lord Jesus, the great Shepherd of the sheep, by the blood of the eternal covenant, make you perfect in all goodness so that you may do his will; and may he make of us what he would have us be through Jesus Christ, to whom be glory for ever and ever! Amen. 20 21

I beg you, brothers, bear with this exhortation; for it is after all a short letter. I have news for you: our friend Timothy has been released; and if he comes in time he will be with me when I see you. 22 23

Greet all your leaders and all God's people. Greetings to you from our Italian friends. 24

God's grace be with you all! 25

A LETTER OF JAMES

Practical religion

1 FROM JAMES, a servant of God and the Lord Jesus Christ.
2 Greetings to the Twelve Tribes dispersed throughout the world.

3 My brothers, whenever you have to face trials of many kinds, 4 count yourselves supremely happy, in the knowledge that such testing of 5 your faith breeds fortitude, and if you give fortitude full play you will go 6 on to complete a balanced character that will fall short in nothing. If any 7 of you falls short in wisdom, he should ask God for it and it will be given 8 him, for God is a generous giver who neither refuses nor reproaches any-9 one. But he must ask in faith, without a doubt in his mind; for the doubter
10 is like a heaving sea ruffled by the wind. A man of that kind must not expect 11 the Lord to give him anything; he is double-minded, and never can keep 12 a steady course.

13 The brother in humble circumstances may well be proud that God lifts 14 him up; and the wealthy brother must find his pride in being brought low.
15 For the rich man will disappear like the flower of the field; once the sun is 16 up with its scorching heat the flower withers, its petals fall, and what was 17 lovely to look at is lost for ever. So shall the rich man wither away as he 18 goes about his business.

19 Happy the man who remains steadfast under trial, for having passed that 20 test he will receive for his prize the gift of life promised to those who love 21 God. No one under trial or temptation should say, 'I am being tempted by 22 God'; for God is untouched by evil,^b and does not himself tempt anyone.
23 Temptation arises when a man is enticed and lured away by his own lust;
24 then lust conceives, and gives birth to sin; and sin full-grown breeds 25 death.

26 Make no mistake, my friends. All good giving, every perfect gift, comes 27 from above, from the Father of the lights of heaven. With him there is no 28 variation, no play of passing shadows.^d Of his set purpose, by declaring the 29 truth, he gave us birth to be a kind of firstfruits of his creatures.

30 Of that you may be certain, my friends. But each of you must be quick 31 to listen, slow to speak, and slow to be angry. For a man's anger cannot 32 promote the justice of God. Away then with all that is sordid, and the malice 33 that hurries to excess, and quietly accept the message planted in your hearts, 34 which can bring you salvation.

^a Or anything; a double-minded man never keeps . . .
tempted by evil.

^b Or God cannot be tempted by evil. ^c Or All giving is good, and every perfect gift comes . . .

^d Some witnesses read no variation, or shadow caused by change.

Only be sure that you act on the message and do not merely listen; for that would be to mislead yourselves. A man who listens to the message but never acts upon it is like one who looks in a mirror at the face nature gave him. He glances at himself and goes away, and at once forgets what he looked like. But the man who looks closely into the perfect law, the law that makes us free, and who lives in its company, does not forget what he hears, but acts upon it; and that is the man who by acting will find happiness.

A man may think he is religious, but if he has no control over his tongue, he is deceiving himself; that man's religion is futile. The kind of religion which is without stain or fault in the sight of God our Father is this: to go to the help of orphans and widows in their distress and keep oneself untarnished by the world.

MY BROTHERS, believing as you do in our Lord Jesus Christ, who reigns in glory, you must never show snobbery. For instance, two visitors may enter your place of worship, one a well-dressed man with gold rings, and the other a poor man in shabby clothes. Suppose you pay special attention to the well-dressed man and say to him, 'Please take this seat', while to the poor man you say, 'You can stand; or you may sit here^a on the floor by my footstool', do you not see that you are inconsistent and judge by false standards?

Listen, my friends. Has not God chosen those who are poor in the eyes of the world to be rich in faith and to inherit the kingdom he has promised to those who love him? And yet you have insulted the poor man. Moreover, are not the rich your oppressors? Is it not they who drag you into court and pour contempt on the honoured name by which God has claimed you?

If, however, you are observing the sovereign law laid down in Scripture, 'Love your neighbour as yourself', that is excellent. But if you show snobbery, you are committing a sin and you stand convicted by that law as transgressors. For if a man keeps the whole law apart from one single point, he is guilty of breaking all of it. For the One who said, 'Thou shalt not commit adultery', said also, 'Thou shalt not commit murder.' You may not be an adulterer, but if you commit murder you are a law-breaker all the same. Always speak and act as men who are to be judged under a law of freedom. In that judgement there will be no mercy for the man who has shown no mercy. Mercy triumphs over judgement.

MY BROTHERS, what use is it for a man to say he has faith when he does nothing to show it? Can that faith save him? Suppose a brother or a sister is in rags with not enough food for the day, and one of you says, 'Good luck to you, keep yourselves warm, and have plenty to eat', but does nothing to supply their bodily needs, what is the good of that? So with faith; if it does not lead to action, it is in itself a lifeless thing.

But someone may object: 'Here is one who claims to have faith and another who points to his deeds.' To which I reply: 'Prove to me that this faith you speak of is real though not accompanied by deeds, and by my deeds I will prove to you my faith.' You have faith enough to believe that there is one God. Excellent! The devils have faith like that, and it makes them tremble. But can you not see, you quibbler, that faith divorced from deeds is barren? Was it not by his action, in offering his son Isaac upon the altar, that our father Abraham was justified? Surely you can see that faith was at work in his actions, and that by these actions the integrity of his faith was fully proved. Here was fulfilment of the words of Scripture: 'Abraham put his faith in God, and that faith was counted to him as righteousness'; and elsewhere he is called 'God's friend'. You see then that a man is justified by deeds and not by faith in itself. The same is true of the prostitute Rahab also. Was not she justified by her action in welcoming the messengers into her house and sending them away by a different route? As the body is dead when there is no breath left in it, so faith divorced from deeds is lifeless as a corpse.

^a Some witnesses read Stand where you are or sit here . . . ; others read Stand where you are or sit . . .

3 MY BROTHERS, not many of you should become teachers, for you may be certain that we who teach shall ourselves be judged with greater strictness. All of us often go wrong; the man who never says a wrong thing is a perfect character, able to bridle his whole being. If we put bits into horses' mouths to make them obey our will, we can direct their whole body. Or think of ships: large they may be, yet even when driven by strong gales they can be directed by a tiny rudder on whatever course the helmsman chooses. So with the tongue. It is a small member but it can make huge claims.^a

What an immense stack of timber^b can be set ablaze by the tiniest spark! And the tongue is in effect a fire. It represents among our members the world with all its wickedness; it pollutes our whole being; it keeps the wheel of our existence red-hot, and its flames are fed by hell. Beasts and birds of every kind, creatures that crawl on the ground or swim in the sea, can be subdued and have been subdued by mankind; but no man can subdue the tongue. It is an intractable evil, charged with deadly venom. We use it to sing the praises of our Lord and Father, and we use it to invoke curses upon our fellow-men who are made in God's likeness. Out of the same mouth come praises and curses. My brothers, this should not be so. Does a fountain gush with both fresh and brackish water from the same opening? Can a fig-tree, my brothers, yield olives, or a vine figs? No more does salt water yield fresh.

13 WHO AMONG YOU is wise or clever? Let his right conduct give practical proof of it, with the modesty that comes of wisdom. But if you are harbouring bitter jealousy and selfish ambition in your hearts, consider whether your claims are not false, and a defiance of the truth. This is not the wisdom that comes from above; it is earth-bound, sensual, demonic. For with jealousy and ambition come disorder and evil of every kind. But the wisdom from above is in the first place pure; and then peace-loving, considerate, and open to reason; it is straightforward and sincere, rich in mercy and in the kindly deeds that are its fruit. True justice is the harvest 18 reaped by peacemakers from seeds sown in a spirit of peace.

^a Or it is a great boaster.

^b Or What a huge forest . . .

What causes conflicts and quarrels among you? Do they not spring from 4 the aggressiveness of your bodily desires? You want something which you 2 cannot have, and so you are bent on murder; you are envious, and cannot attain your ambition, and so you quarrel and fight. You do not get what you 3 want, because you do not pray for it. Or, if you do, your requests are not granted because you pray from wrong motives, to spend what you get on 4 your pleasures. You false, unfaithful creatures! Have you never learned that love of the world is enmity to God? Whoever chooses to be the world's 5 friend makes himself God's enemy. Or do you suppose that Scripture has no meaning when it says that the spirit which God implanted in man turns 6 towards envious desires? And yet the grace he gives is stronger. Thus Scripture says, 'God opposes the arrogant and gives grace to the humble.' 7
Be submissive then to God. Stand up to the devil and he will turn and run. 8 Come close to God, and he will come close to you. Sinners, make your hands clean; you who are double-minded, see that your motives are pure. 9 Be sorrowful, mourn and weep. Turn your laughter into mourning and your gaiety into gloom. Humble yourselves before God and he will lift 10 you high.

Brothers, you must never disparage one another. He who disparages a 11 brother or passes judgement on his brother disparages the law and judges the law. But if you judge the law, you are not keeping it but sitting in 12 judgement upon it. There is only one lawgiver and judge, the One who is able to save life and destroy it. So who are you to judge your neighbour?

A WORD WITH YOU, you who say, 'Today or tomorrow we will go off 13 to such and such a town and spend a year there trading and making money.'
Yet you have no idea what tomorrow will bring. Your life, what is it? You 14 are no more than a mist, seen for a little while and then dispersing. What you ought to say is: 'If it be the Lord's will, we shall live to do this or that.' 15
But instead, you boast and brag, and all such boasting is wrong. Well then, 16 17 the man who knows the good he ought to do and does not do it is a sinner.

Next a word to you who have great possessions. Weep and wail over the 5 miserable fate descending on you. Your riches have rotted; your fine clothes are moth-eaten; your silver and gold have rusted away, and their very rust 2 will be evidence against you and consume your flesh like fire. You have piled up wealth in an age that is near its close. The wages you never paid to the 3 men who mowed your fields are loud against you, and the outcry of the reapers has reached the ears of the Lord of Hosts. You have lived on earth 4 in wanton luxury, fattening yourselves like cattle—and the day for slaughter 5 has come. You have condemned the innocent and murdered him; he offers no resistance. 6

Be patient, my brothers, until the Lord comes. The farmer looking for 7 the precious crop his land may yield can only wait in patience, until the autumn and spring rains have fallen. You too must be patient and stout- 8 hearted, for the coming of the Lord is near. My brothers, do not blame 9 your troubles on one another, or you will fall under judgement; and there stands the Judge, at the door. If you want a pattern of patience under ill-treatment, take the prophets who spoke in the name of the Lord; remember: 'We count those happy who stood firm.' You have all heard how Job stood firm, and you have seen how the Lord treated him in the end. For the Lord is full of pity and compassion.

12 ABOVE ALL THINGS, my brothers, do not use oaths, whether 'by heaven' or 'by earth' or by anything else. When you say yes or no, let it be plain 'Yes' or 'No', for fear that you expose yourselves to judgement.

13 Is anyone among you in trouble? He should turn to prayer. Is anyone in good heart? He should sing praises. Is one of you ill? He should send for the elders of the congregation to pray over him and anoint him with oil in the name of the Lord. The prayer offered in faith will save the sick man, the Lord will raise him from his bed, and any sins he may have committed will be forgiven. Therefore confess your sins to one another, and pray for one another, and then you will be healed. A good man's prayer is powerful and effective. Elijah was a man with human frailties like our own; and when he prayed earnestly that there should be no rain, not a drop fell on the land for three years and a half; then he prayed again, and down came the rain and the land bore crops once more.

19 My brothers, if one of your number should stray from the truth and another succeed in bringing him back, be sure of this: any man who brings a sinner back from his crooked ways will be rescuing his soul from death and cancelling innumerable sins.

THE FIRST LETTER OF PETER

The calling of a Christian

1 FROM PETER, APOSTLE of Jesus Christ, to those of God's scattered people who lodge for a while in Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia—chosen of old in the purpose of God the Father, hallowed to his service by the Spirit, and consecrated with the sprinkled blood of Jesus Christ.

Grace and peace to you in fullest measure.

3 Praise be to the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who in his great mercy gave us new birth into a living hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead! The inheritance to which we are born is one that nothing can destroy or spoil or wither. It is kept for you in heaven, and you, because you put your faith in God, are under the protection of his power until salvation comes—the salvation which is even now in readiness and will be revealed at the end of time.

This is cause for great joy, even though now you smart for a little while, if need be, under trials of many kinds. Even gold passes through the assayer's fire, and more precious than perishable gold is faith which has stood the test. These trials come so that your faith may prove itself worthy of all praise, glory, and honour when Jesus Christ is revealed.

You have not seen him, yet you love him; and trusting in him now without seeing him, you are transported with a joy too great for words, while you reap the harvest of your faith, that is, salvation for your souls. This salvation was the theme which the prophets pondered and explored, those who prophesied about the grace of God awaiting you. They tried to find out what was the time,^a and what the circumstances, to which the spirit of Christ in them pointed, foretelling the sufferings in store for Christ and the splendours to follow; and it was disclosed to them that the matter they treated of was not for their time but for yours. And now it has been openly announced to you through preachers who brought you the Gospel in the power of the Holy Spirit sent from heaven. These are things that angels long to see into.

You must therefore be mentally stripped for action, perfectly self-controlled. Fix your hopes on the gift of grace which is to be yours when Jesus Christ is revealed. As obedient children, do not let your characters be shaped any longer by the desires you cherished in your days of ignorance. The One who called you is holy; like him, be holy in all your behaviour, because Scripture says, 'You shall be holy, for I am holy.'

If you say 'our Father' to the One who judges every man impartially on the record of his deeds, you must stand in awe of him while you live out your time on earth. Well you know that it was no perishable stuff, like gold or silver, that bought your freedom from the empty folly of your traditional ways. The price was paid in precious blood, as it were of a lamb without mark or blemish—the blood of Christ. Predestined before the foundation of the world, he was made manifest in this last period of time for your sake. Through him you have come to trust in God who raised him from the dead and gave him glory, and so your faith and hope are fixed on God.

Now that by obedience to the truth you have purified your souls until you feel sincere affection towards your brother Christians, love one another whole-heartedly with all your strength. You have been born anew, not of mortal parentage but of immortal, through the living and enduring word of God.^b For (as Scripture says)

'All mortals are like grass;
all their splendour like the flower of the field;
the grass withers, the flower falls;
but the word of the Lord endures for evermore.'

And this 'word' is the word of the Gospel preached to you.

^a Or who was the person . . .

^b Or through the word of the living and enduring God.

2 Then away with all malice and deceit, away with all pretence and 2 jealousy and recrimination of every kind! Like the new-born infants you are, you must crave for pure milk (spiritual milk, I mean), so that you may 3 thrive upon it to your souls' health. Surely you have tasted that the Lord is good.

4 So come to him, our living Stone—the stone rejected by men but 5 choice and precious in the sight of God. Come, and let yourselves be built, as living stones, into a spiritual temple; become a holy priesthood,^a to offer 6 spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God through Jesus Christ. For it stands written:

'I lay in Zion a choice corner-stone of great worth.

The man who has faith in it will not be put to shame.'

7 The great worth of which it speaks is for you who have faith. For those who have no faith, the stone which the builders rejected has become 8 not only the corner-stone,^b but also 'a stone to trip over, a rock to stumble against'. They fall when they disbelieve the Word. Such was their appointed lot!

9 But you are a chosen race, a royal priesthood, a dedicated nation, and a people claimed by God for his own, to proclaim the triumphs of him who 10 has called you out of darkness into his marvellous light. You are now the people of God, who once were not his people; outside his mercy once, you have now received his mercy.

11 DEAR FRIENDS, I beg you, as aliens in a foreign land, to abstain from 12 the lusts of the flesh which are at war with the soul. Let all your behaviour be such as even pagans can recognize as good, and then, whereas they malign you as criminals now, they will come to see for themselves that you live good lives, and will give glory to God on the day when he comes to hold assize.

13 Submit yourselves to every human institution for the sake of the Lord, 14 whether to the sovereign as supreme, or to the governor as his deputy for the punishment of criminals and the commendation of those who do right.
 15 For it is the will of God that by your good conduct you should put ignorance and stupidity to silence.

16 Live as free men; not however as though your freedom were there to 17 provide a screen for wrongdoing, but as slaves in God's service. Give due honour to everyone: love to the brotherhood, reverence to God, honour to the sovereign.

18 Servants, accept the authority of your masters with all due submission, not only when they are kind and considerate, but even when they are per-19 verse. For it is a fine^c thing if a man endure the pain of undeserved suffer-20 ing because God is in his thoughts. What credit is there in fortitude when you have done wrong and are beaten for it? But when you have behaved 21 well and suffer for it, your fortitude is a fine thing^d in the sight of God. To that you were called, because Christ suffered^a on your behalf, and thereby left you an example; it is for you to follow in his steps. He committed no sin, he was convicted of no falsehood; when he was abused he did not retort with abuse, when he suffered he uttered no threats, but committed his cause to the One who judges justly. In his own person he carried our sins to^b the gibbet, so that we might cease to live for sin and begin to live for righteousness. By his wounds you have been healed. You were straying like sheep, but now you have turned towards the Shepherd and Guardian of your souls.

In the same way you women must accept the authority of your husbands, so that if there are any of them who disbelieve the Gospel they may be won over, without a word being said, by observing the chaste and reverent behaviour of their wives. Your beauty should reside, not in outward adornment—the braiding of the hair, or jewellery, or dress—but in the inmost centre of your being, with its imperishable ornament, a gentle, quiet spirit, which is of high value in the sight of God. Thus it was among God's people in days of old: the women who fixed their hopes on him adorned themselves by submission to their husbands. Such was Sarah, who obeyed Abraham and called him 'my master'. Her children you have now become, if you do good and show no fear.

In the same way, you husbands must conduct your married life with understanding: pay honour to the woman's body, not only because it is weaker, but also because you share together in the grace of God which gives you life. Then your prayers will not be hindered.

To sum up: be one in thought and feeling, all of you; be full of brotherly affection, kindly and humble-minded. Do not repay wrong with wrong, or abuse with abuse; on the contrary, retaliate with blessing, for a blessing is the inheritance to which you yourselves have been called.

'Whoever loves life and would see good days must restrain his tongue from evil
and his lips from deceit;
must turn from wrong and do good,
seek peace and pursue it.
For the Lord's eyes are turned towards the righteous,
his ears are open to their prayers;
but the Lord's face is set against wrong-doers.'

WHO IS GOING to do you wrong if you are devoted to what is good? And yet if you should suffer for your virtues, you may count yourselves happy. Have no fear of them: ^c do not be perturbed, but hold the Lord Christ in reverence in your hearts. ^d Be always ready with your defence whenever you are called to account for the hope that is in you, but make that defence with modesty and respect. Keep your conscience clear, so that when you are abused, those who malign your Christian conduct may be put to shame. It is better to suffer for well-doing, if such should be the will ^d Or hold Christ in reverence in your hearts, as Lord.

- 18 of God, than for doing wrong. For Christ also died^a for our sins^b once and for all. He, the just, suffered for the unjust, to bring us to God.
- 19 In the body he was put to death; in the spirit he was brought to life. And in the spirit he went and made his proclamation to the imprisoned spirits.
- 20 They had refused obedience long ago, while God waited patiently in the days of Noah and the building of the ark, and in the ark a few persons, eight
- 21 in all, were brought to safety through the water. This water prefigured the water of baptism through which you are now brought to safety. Baptism is not the washing away of bodily pollution, but the appeal made to God by a good conscience; and it brings salvation through the resurrection of
- 22 Jesus Christ, who entered heaven after receiving the submission of angelic authorities and powers, and is now at the right hand of God.
- 4 Remembering that Christ endured bodily suffering, you must arm yourselves with a temper of mind like his. When a man has thus endured bodily
- 2 suffering he has finished with sin, and for the rest of his days on earth he
- 3 may live, not for the things that men desire, but for what God wills. You had time enough in the past to do all the things that men want to do in the pagan world. Then you lived in licence and debauchery, drunkenness,
- 4 revelry, and tipling, and the forbidden worship of idols. Now, when you no longer plunge with them into all this reckless dissipation, they cannot
- 5 understand it, and they vilify you accordingly; but they shall answer for it to him who stands ready to pass judgement on the living and the dead.
- 6 Why was the Gospel preached to those who are dead? In order that, although in the body they received the sentence common to men, they might in the spirit be alive with the life of God.
- 7 The end of all things is upon us, so you must lead an ordered and sober
- 8 life, given to prayer. Above all, keep your love for one another at full
- 9 strength, because love cancels innumerable sins. Be hospitable to one another without complaining. Whatever gift each of you may have received,
- 10 use it in service to one another, like good stewards dispensing the grace of
- 11 God in its varied forms. Are you a speaker? Speak as if you uttered oracles of God. Do you give service? Give it as in the strength which God supplies.
In all things so act that the glory may be God's through Jesus Christ; to him belong glory and power for ever and ever. Amen.
- 12 MY DEAR FRIENDS, do not be bewildered by the fiery ordeal that is upon you, as though it were something extraordinary. It gives you a share in Christ's sufferings, and that is cause for joy; and when his glory is
- 13 revealed, your joy will be triumphant. If Christ's name is flung in your teeth as an insult, count yourselves happy, because then that glorious Spirit
- 14 which is the Spirit of God is resting upon you. If you suffer, it must not be for murder, theft, or sorcery,^c nor for infringing the rights of others. But if anyone suffers as a Christian, he should feel it no disgrace, but confess that name to the honour of God.
- 17 The time has come for the judgement to begin; it is beginning with God's own household. And if it is starting with you, how will it end for those who ^c Or other crime.

refuse to obey the gospel of God? It is hard enough for the righteous to be 18 saved; what then will become of the impious and sinful? So even those who 19 suffer, if it be according to God's will, should commit their souls to him—by doing good; their Maker will not fail them.

And now I appeal to the elders of your community, as a fellow-elder and 5 a witness of Christ's sufferings, and also a partaker in the splendour that is to be revealed. Tend that flock of God whose shepherds you are, and do it, 2 not under compulsion, but of your own free will, as God would have it; not for gain but out of sheer devotion; not tyrannizing over those who are 3 allotted to your care, but setting an example to the flock. And then, when 4 the Head Shepherd appears, you will receive for your own the unfading garland of glory.

In the same way you younger men must be subordinate to your elders. 5
Indeed, all of you should wrap yourselves in the garment of humility towards each other, because God sets his face against the arrogant but 6 favours the humble. Humble yourselves then under God's mighty hand, 6 and he will lift you up in due time. Cast all your cares on him, for you are 7 his charge

Awake! be on the alert! Your enemy the devil, like a roaring lion, prowls 8 round looking for someone to devour. Stand up to him, firm in faith, and 9 remember that your brother Christians are going through the same kinds of suffering while they are in the world. And the God of all grace, who called 10 you into his eternal glory in Christ, will himself, after your brief suffering, restore, establish, and strengthen you on a firm foundation. He holds 11 dominion for ever and ever. Amen.

I write you this brief appeal through Silvanus, our trusty brother as I 12 hold him, adding my testimony that this is the true grace of God. In this stand fast.

Greetings from her who dwells in Babylon, chosen by God like you, 13 and from my son Mark. Greet one another with the kiss of love. 14

Peace to you all who belong to Christ!

THE SECOND LETTER OF PETER

The remedy for doubt

1 FROM SIMEON PETER, servant and apostle of Jesus Christ, to those who through the justice of our God and Saviour Jesus Christ share our faith and enjoy equal privilege with ourselves.

2 Grace and peace be yours in fullest measure, through the knowledge of God and Jesus our Lord.

3 His divine power has bestowed on us everything that makes for life and true religion, enabling us to know the One who called us by his own 4 splendour and might. Through this might and splendour he has given us his promises, great beyond all price, and through them you may escape the corruption with which lust has infected the world, and come to share in the very being of God.

5 With all this in view, you should try your hardest to supplement your 6 faith with virtue, virtue with knowledge, knowledge with self-control, 7 self-control with fortitude, fortitude with piety, piety with brotherly kindness, and brotherly kindness with love.

8 These are gifts which, if you possess and foster them, will keep you from being either useless or barren in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.
9 The man who lacks them is short-sighted and blind; he has forgotten how 10 he was cleansed from his former sins. All the more then, my friends, exert yourselves to clinch God's choice and calling of you. If you behave so, you 11 will never come to grief. Thus you will be afforded full and free admission into the eternal kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

12 And so I will not hesitate to remind you of this again and again, although you know it and are well grounded in the truth that has already reached 13 you. Yet I think it right to keep refreshing your memory so long as I still 14 lodge in this body. I know that very soon I must leave it; indeed our Lord 15 Jesus Christ has told me so.^a But I will see to it that after I am gone you will have means of remembering these things at all times.

16 It was not on tales artfully spun that we relied when we told you of the power of our Lord Jesus Christ and his coming; we saw him with our own 17 eyes in majesty, when at the hands of God the Father he was invested with honour and glory, and there came to him from the sublime Presence a voice which said: 'This is my Son, my Beloved,^b on whom my favour rests.' 18 This voice from heaven we ourselves heard; when it came, we were with him on the sacred mountain.

^a Or I must leave it, as our Lord Jesus Christ told me.

^b Or This is my

All this only confirms for us the message of the prophets,^a to which you will do well to attend, because it is like a lamp shining in a murky place, until the day breaks and the morning star rises to illuminate your minds.

BUT FIRST NOTE THIS: no one can interpret any prophecy of Scripture by himself. For it was not through any human whim that men prophesied of old; men they were, but, impelled by the Holy Spirit, they spoke the words of God.

But Israel had false prophets as well as true; and you likewise will have false teachers among you. They will import disastrous heresies, disowning the very Master who bought them, and bringing swift disaster on their own heads. They will gain many adherents to their dissolute practices, through whom the true way will be brought into disrepute. In their greed for money they will trade on your credulity with sheer fabrications.

But the judgement long decreed for them has not been idle; perdition waits for them with unsleeping eyes. God did not spare the angels who sinned, but consigned them to the dark pits of hell,^b where they are reserved for judgement. He did not spare the world of old (except for Noah, preacher of righteousness, whom he preserved with seven others), but brought the deluge upon that world of godless men. The cities of Sodom and Gomorrah God burned to ashes, and condemned them to total destruction, making them an object-lesson for godless men in future days. But he rescued Lot, who was a good man, shocked by the dissolute habits of the lawless society in which he lived; day after day every sight, every sound, of their evil courses tortured that good man's heart. Thus the Lord is well able to rescue the godly out of trials, and to reserve the wicked under punishment until the day of judgement.

Above all he will punish those who follow their abominable lusts. They flout authority; reckless and headstrong, they are not afraid to insult celestial beings, whereas angels, for all their superior strength and might, employ no insults in seeking judgement against them before the Lord.

These men are like brute beasts, born in the course of nature to be caught and killed. They pour abuse upon things they do not understand; like the beasts they will perish, suffering hurt for the hurt they have inflicted. To carouse in broad daylight is their idea of pleasure; while they sit with you at table they are an ugly blot on your company, because they revel in their own deceptions.^c

They have eyes for nothing but women, eyes never at rest from sin. They lure the unstable to their ruin; past masters in mercenary greed, God's curse is on them! They have abandoned the straight road and lost their way. They have followed in the steps of Balaam son of Beor, who consented to take pay for doing wrong, but had his offence brought home to him when the dumb beast spoke with a human voice and put a stop to the prophet's madness.

These men are springs that give no water, mists driven by a storm; the

^a Or And in the message of the prophets we have something still more certain.

^b Some witnesses read consigned them to darkness and chains in hell.

^c Some witnesses read in their love-feasts.

18 place reserved for them is blackest darkness. They utter big, empty words, 19 and make of sensual lusts and debauchery a bait to catch those who have 20 barely begun to escape from their heathen environment. They promise 21 them freedom, but are themselves slaves of corruption; for a man is the 22 slave of whatever has mastered him. They had once escaped the world's defilements through the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ; yet if they have entangled themselves in these all over again, and are mastered by them, their plight in the end is worse than before. How much better never to have known the right way, than, having known it, to turn back and abandon the sacred commandments delivered to them! For them the proverb has proved true: 'The dog returns to its own vomit', and, 'The sow after a wash rolls in the mud again.'

3 THIS IS NOW my second letter to you, my friends. In both of them I have been recalling to you what you already know, to rouse you to honest 2 thought. Remember the predictions made by God's own prophets, and the commands given by the Lord and Saviour through your apostles.

3 Note this first: in the last days there will come men who scoff at religion
 4 and live self-indulgent lives, and they will say: 'Where now is the promise of his coming? Our fathers have been laid to their rest, but still everything continues exactly as it has always been since the world began.'

5 In taking this view they lose sight of the fact^a that there were heavens and earth long ago, created by God's word out of water and with water; 6 and by water that first world was destroyed, the water of the deluge. And the present heavens and earth, again by God's word, have been kept in store for burning; they are being reserved until the day of judgement when the godless will be destroyed.

8 And here is one point, my friends, which you must not lose sight of:
 with the Lord one day is like a thousand years and a thousand years like 9 one day. It is not that the Lord is slow in fulfilling his promise, as some suppose, but that he is very patient with you, because it is not his will for any to be lost, but for all to come to repentance.

10 But the Day of the Lord will come; it will come, unexpected as a thief.
 On that day the heavens will disappear with a great rushing sound, the elements will disintegrate in flames, and the earth with all that is in it will be laid bare.^b

11 Since the whole universe is to break up in this way, think what sort of people you ought to be, what devout and dedicated lives you should live!
 12 Look eagerly for the coming of the Day of God and work to hasten it on; that day will set the heavens ablaze until they fall apart, and will melt the 13 elements in flames. But we have his promise, and look forward to new heavens and a new earth, the home of justice.

14 With this to look forward to, do your utmost to be found at peace with 15 him, unblemished and above reproach in his sight. Bear in mind that our Lord's patience with us is our salvation, as Paul, our friend and brother, 16 said when he wrote to you with his inspired wisdom. And so he does in all his other letters, wherever he speaks of this subject, though they contain

^a Or They choose to overlook the fact . . .

^b Some witnesses read will be burnt up.

some obscure passages, which the ignorant and unstable misinterpret to their own ruin, as they do the other scriptures.^a

But you, my friends, are forewarned. Take care, then, not to let these unprincipled men seduce you with their errors; do not lose your own safe foothold. But grow in the grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.^b To him be glory now and for all eternity! 17 18

THE FIRST LETTER OF JOHN

Recall to fundamentals

IT WAS THERE from the beginning; we have heard it; we have 1 seen it with our own eyes; we looked upon it, and felt it with our own 2 hands; and it is of this we tell. Our theme is the word of life. This life 2 was made visible; we have seen it and bear our testimony; we here declare to you the eternal life which dwelt with the Father and was made visible to 3 us. What we have seen and heard we declare to you, so that you and we together may share in a common life, that life which we share with the 4 Father and his Son Jesus Christ. And we write this in order that the joy of us all may be complete.

Here is the message we heard from him and pass on to you: that God is 5 light, and in him there is no darkness at all. If we claim to be sharing in his 6 life while we walk in the dark, our words and our lives are a lie; but if we 7 walk in the light as he himself is in the light, then we share together a common life, and we are being cleansed from every sin by the blood of Jesus his Son.

If we claim to be sinless, we are self-deceived and strangers to the truth. 8
If we confess our sins, he is just, and may be trusted to forgive our sins and 9 cleanse us from every kind of wrong; but if we say we have committed no 10 sin, we make him out to be a liar, and then his word has no place in us.

My children, in writing thus to you my purpose is that you should not 2 commit sin. But should anyone commit a sin, we have one to plead our cause^c with the Father, Jesus Christ, and he is just. He is himself the 2 remedy for the defilement of our sins, not our sins only but the sins of all the world.

Here is the test by which we can make sure that we know him: do we 3 keep his commands? The man who says, 'I know him', while he disobeys 4 his commands, is a liar and a stranger to the truth; but in the man who is 5 obedient to his word, the divine love has indeed come to its perfection.

^a Or his other writings. ^b Or But grow up, by the grace of our Lord and Saviour
Jesus Christ, and by knowing him. ^c Literally we have an advocate . . .

You therefore must keep in your hearts that which you heard at the beginning; if what you heard then still dwells in you, you will yourselves dwell in the Son and also in the Father. And this is the promise that he himself gave us, the promise of eternal life.

So much for those who would mislead you. But as for you, the initiation which you received from him stays with you; you need no other teacher, but learn all you need to know from his initiation, which is real and no illusion. As he taught you, then, dwell in him.

Even now, my children, dwell in him, so that when he appears we may be confident and unashamed before him at his coming. If you know that he is righteous, you must recognize that every man who does right is his child. How great is the love that the Father has shown to us! We were called God's children, and such we are;^b and the reason why the godless world does not recognize us is that it has not known him. Here and now, dear friends, we are God's children; what we shall be has not yet been disclosed, but we know that when it is disclosed^c we shall be like him,^d because we shall see him as he is. Everyone who has this hope before him purifies himself, as Christ is pure.

To commit sin is to break God's law: sin, in fact, is lawlessness. Christ appeared, as you know, to do away with sins, and there is no sin in him. No man therefore who dwells in him is a sinner; the sinner has not seen him and does not know him.

My children, do not be misled: it is the man who does right who is righteous, as God is righteous; the man who sins is a child of the devil, for the devil has been a sinner from the first; and the Son of God appeared for the very purpose of undoing the devil's work.

A child of God does not commit sin, because the divine seed remains in him; he cannot be a sinner, because he is God's child. That is the distinction between the children of God and the children of the devil: no one who does not do right is God's child, nor is anyone who does not love his brother. For the message you have heard from the beginning is this: that we should love one another; unlike Cain, who was a child of the evil one and murdered his brother. And why did he murder him? Because his own actions were wrong, and his brother's were right.

My brothers, do not be surprised if the world hates you. We for our part have crossed over from death to life; this we know, because we love our brothers. The man who does not love is still in the realm of death, for everyone who hates his brother is a murderer, and no murderer, as you know, has eternal life dwelling within him. It is by this that we know what love is: that Christ laid down his life for us. And we in our turn are bound to lay down our lives for our brothers. But if a man has enough to live on, and yet when he sees his brother in need shuts up his heart against him, how can it be said that the divine love^e dwells in him?

My children, love must not be a matter of words or talk; it must be ^a Literally the anointing.

we really are his children.

are God's children, though he has not yet appeared; what we shall be we know, for when he does appear we shall be like him.

19 genuine, and show itself in action. This is how we may know that we belong 20 to the realm of truth, and convince ourselves in his sight that even if our conscience condemns us, God is greater than our conscience^a and knows all.

21 Dear friends, if our conscience does not condemn us, then we can ap-22 proach God with confidence, and obtain from him whatever we ask, because 23 we are keeping his commands and doing what he approves. This is his command: to give our allegiance to his Son Jesus Christ and love one 24 another as he commanded. When we keep his commands we dwell in him and he dwells in us. And this is how we can make sure that he dwells within us: we know it from the Spirit he has given us.

4 BUT DO NOT TRUST any and every spirit, my friends; test the spirits, to see whether they are from God, for among those who have gone out into 2 the world there are many prophets falsely inspired. This is how we may recognize the Spirit of God: every spirit which acknowledges that Jesus 3 Christ has come in the flesh is from God, and every spirit which does not thus acknowledge Jesus is not from God. This is what is meant by 'Anti-christ';^b you have been told that he was to come, and here he is, in the world already!

4 But you, my children, are of God's family, and you have the mastery over these false prophets, because he who inspires you is greater than he 5 who inspires the godless world. They are of that world, and so therefore is 6 their teaching; that is why the world listens to them. But we belong to God, and a man who knows God listens to us, while he who does not belong to God refuses us a hearing. That is how we distinguish the spirit of truth from the spirit of error.

7 Dear friends, let us love one another, because love is from God. Every-
8 one who loves is a child of God and knows God, but the unloving know 9 nothing of God. For God is love; and his love was disclosed to us in this,
10 that he sent his only Son into the world to bring us life. The love I speak of is not our love for God, but the love he showed to us in sending his Son 11 as the remedy for the defilement of our sins. If God thus loved us, dear 12 friends, we in turn are bound to love one another. Though God has never been seen by any man, God himself dwells in us if we love one another; his love is brought to perfection within us.

13 Here is the proof that we dwell in him and he dwells in us: he has im-
14 parted his Spirit to us. Moreover, we have seen for ourselves, and we attest, 15 that the Father sent the Son to be the saviour of the world, and if a man acknowledges that Jesus is the Son of God, God dwells in him and he dwells 16 in God. Thus we have come to know and believe the love which God has for us.

God is love; he who dwells in love is dwelling in God, and God in him.
17 This is for us the perfection of love, to have confidence on the day of judgement, and this we can have, because even in this world we are as he is.

^a Or and reassure ourselves in his sight in matters where our conscience condemns us, because God is greater than our conscience . . . ; or and yet we shall do well to convince ourselves that if even our own conscience condemns us, still more will God who is greater than conscience . . .

^b Or This is the spirit of Antichrist.

There is no room for fear in love; perfect love banishes fear. For fear brings 18 with it the pains of judgement, and anyone who is afraid has not attained to love in its perfection. We love because he loved us first. But if a man says, 19 20
'I love God', while hating his brother, he is a liar. If he does not love the brother whom he has seen, it cannot be that he loves God whom he has not seen. And indeed this command comes to us from Christ himself: that 21
he who loves God must also love his brother.

Everyone who believes that Jesus is the Christ is a child of God, and to 5 love the parent means to love his child; it follows that when we love God 2 and obey his commands we love his children too. For to love God is to 3 keep his commands; and they are not burdensome, because every child of 4 God is victor over the godless world. The victory that defeats the world is our faith, for who is victor over the world but he who believes that Jesus 5 is the Son of God?

This is he who came with water and blood: Jesus Christ. He came, not 6 by water alone, but by water and blood; and there is the Spirit to bear 7 witness, because the Spirit is truth. For there are three witnesses, the Spirit, 8 the water, and the blood, and these three are in agreement. We accept 9 human testimony, but surely divine testimony is stronger, and this threefold testimony is indeed that of God himself, the witness he has borne to his Son. He who believes in the Son of God has this testimony in his own 10 heart, but he who disbelieves God, makes him out to be a liar, by refusing to accept God's own witness to his Son. The witness is this: that God has 11 given us eternal life, and that this life is found in his Son. He who possesses 12 the Son has life indeed; he who does not possess the Son of God has not that life.

THIS LETTER is to assure you that you have eternal life. It is addressed 13 to those who give their allegiance to the Son of God.

We can approach God with confidence for this reason: if we make 14 requests which accord with his will he listens to us; and if we know that 15 our requests are heard, we know also that the things we ask for are ours.

If a man sees his brother committing a sin which is not a deadly sin, he 16 should pray to God for him, and he will grant him life—that is, when men are not guilty of deadly sin. There is such a thing as deadly sin, and I do not suggest that he should pray about that; but although all wrongdoing is 17 sin, not all sin is deadly sin.

We know that no child of God is a sinner; it is the Son of God who keeps 18 him safe, and the evil one cannot touch him.

We know that we are of God's family, while the whole godless world lies 19 in the power of the evil one.

We know that the Son of God has come and given us understanding to 20 know him who is real; indeed we are in him who is real, since we are in his Son Jesus Christ. This is the true God, this is eternal life. My children, be 21 on the watch against false gods.

THE SECOND LETTER OF JOHN

Truth and love

- 1 THE ELDER to the Lady chosen by God, and her children, whom 2 I love in truth—and not I alone but all who know the truth—for 3 the sake of the truth that dwells among us and will be with us for ever.
4 Grace, mercy, and peace shall be with us from God the Father and from 5 Jesus Christ the Son of the Father, in truth and love.
6 I was delighted to find that some of your children are living by the truth,
7 as we were commanded by the Father. And now I have a request to make of 8 you. Do not think I am giving a new command; I am recalling the one we 9 have had before us from the beginning: let us love one another. And love 10 means following the commands of God. This is the command which was 11 given you from the beginning, to be your rule of life.
12 Many deceivers have gone out into the world, who do not acknowledge 13 Jesus Christ as coming in the flesh. These are the persons described as the 14 Antichrist, the arch-deceiver. Beware of them, so that you may not lose 15 all that we worked for, but receive your reward in full.
16 Anyone who runs ahead too far, and does not stand by the doctrine of 17 the Christ, is without God; he who stands by that doctrine possesses both 18 the Father and the Son. If anyone comes to you who does not bring this 19 doctrine, do not welcome him into your house or give him a greeting; for 20 anyone who gives him a greeting is an accomplice in his wicked deeds.
21 I have much to write to you, but I do not care to put it down in black and 22 white. But I hope to visit you and talk with you face to face, so that our joy 23 may be complete. The children of your Sister, chosen by God, send their 24 greetings.

THE THIRD LETTER OF JOHN

Trouble in the church

THE ELDER to dear Gaius, whom I love in truth. 1
My dear Gaius, I pray that you may enjoy good health, and that 2 all may go well with you, as I know it goes well with your soul. I was 3 delighted when friends came and told me how true you have been; indeed 4 you are true in your whole life. Nothing gives me greater joy than to hear that my children are living by the truth.

My dear friend, you show a fine loyalty in everything that you do for these 5 our fellow-Christians, strangers though they are to you. They have spoken 6 of your kindness before the congregation here. Please help them on their journey in a manner worthy of the God we serve. It was on Christ's work 7 that they went out; and they would accept nothing from pagans. We are 8 bound to support such men, and so play our part in spreading the truth.

I sent a letter to the congregation, but Diotrephes, their would-be 9 leader,^a will have nothing to do with us. If I come, I will bring up the 10 things he is doing. He lays baseless and spiteful charges against us; not satisfied with that, he refuses to receive our friends, and he interferes with those who would do so, and tries to expel them from the congregation.

My dear friend, do not imitate bad examples, but good ones. The well- 11 doer is a child of God; the evil-doer has never seen God.

Demetrius gets a good testimonial from everybody—yes, and from the 12 truth itself. I add my testimony, and you know that my testimony is true.

I have much to write to you, but I do not care to set it down with pen 13 and ink. I hope to see you very soon, and we will talk face to face. Peace 14 be with you. Our friends send their greetings. Greet our friends one by one.

^a Or who enjoys being their leader.

A LETTER OF JUDE

The danger of false belief

1 FROM JUDE, servant of Jesus Christ and brother of James, to those whom God has called, who live in the love of God the Father and in the safe keeping of Jesus Christ.

2 Mercy, peace, and love be yours in fullest measure.

3 My friends, I was fully engaged in writing to you about our salvation—which is yours no less than ours—when it became urgently necessary to write at once and appeal to you to join the struggle in defence of the faith, 4 the faith which God entrusted to his people once and for all. It is in danger from certain persons who have wormed their way in, the very men whom Scripture long ago marked down for the doom they have incurred. They are the enemies of religion; they pervert the free favour of our God into licentiousness, disowning Jesus Christ, our only Master and Lord.^a

5 You already know it all, but let me remind you how the Lord,^b having once delivered the people of Israel out of Egypt, next time destroyed those 6 who were guilty of unbelief. Remember too the angels, how some of them were not content to keep the dominion given to them but abandoned their proper home; and God has reserved them for judgement on the great Day, 7 bound beneath the darkness in everlasting chains. Remember Sodom and Gomorrhah and the neighbouring towns; like the angels, they committed fornication and followed unnatural lusts; and they paid the penalty in eternal fire, an example for all to see.

8 So too with these men today. Their dreams lead them to defile the body, 9 to flout authority, and to insult celestial beings. In contrast, when the archangel Michael was in debate with the devil, disputing the possession of Moses's body, he did not presume to condemn him in insulting words,^c but said, 'May the Lord rebuke you!'

10 But these men pour abuse upon things they do not understand; the things they do understand, by instinct like brute beasts, prove their un-11 doing. Alas for them! They have gone the way of Cain; they have plunged into Balaam's error for pay; they have rebelled like Korah, and they share his doom.

12 These men are a blot on your love-feasts, where they eat and drink without reverence. They are shepherds who take care only of themselves. They are clouds carried away by the wind without giving rain, trees that in with blasphemy.

season bear no fruit, dead twice over and pulled up by the roots. They are 13 fierce waves of the sea, foaming shameful deeds; they are stars that have wandered from their course, and the place for ever reserved for them is blackest darkness.

It was to them that Enoch, the seventh in descent from Adam, directed 14 his prophecy when he said: 'I saw the Lord come with his myriads of 15 angels, to bring all men to judgement and to convict all the godless of all the godless deeds they had committed, and of all the defiant words which godless sinners had spoken against him.'

They are a set of grumblers and malcontents. They follow their lusts. 16 Big words come rolling from their lips, and they court favour to gain their ends. But you, my friends, should remember the predictions made by the 17 apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ. This was the warning they gave you: 18
'In the final age there will be men who pour scorn on religion, and follow their own godless lusts.'

These men draw a line between spiritual and unspiritual persons, 19 although they are themselves^a wholly unspiritual. But you, my friends, 20 must fortify yourselves in your most sacred faith. Continue to pray in the power of the Holy Spirit. Keep yourselves in the love of God, and look 21 forward to the day when our Lord Jesus Christ in his mercy will give eternal life.

There are some doubting souls who need your pity;^b snatch them from 22 23
the flames and save them.^c There are others for whom your pity must be mixed with fear; hate the very clothing that is contaminated with sensuality.

Now to the One who can keep you from falling and set you in the presence 24 of his glory, jubilant and above reproach, to the only God our Saviour, be 25 glory and majesty, might and authority, through Jesus Christ our Lord, before all time, now, and for evermore. Amen.

^a Or These men create divisions; they are . . .
are some who raise disputes; these you should refute.

THE REVELATION
OF JOHN

ADITYA SINGH DE

1994

THE REVELATION OF JOHN

THIS IS THE REVELATION given by God to Jesus Christ. 1
It was given to him so that he might show his servants what must shortly happen. He made it known by sending his angel to his servant
John, who, in telling all that he saw, has borne witness to the word of God 2 and to the testimony of Jesus Christ.^a Happy is the man who reads, and happy those who listen to the words of 3 this prophecy and heed what is written in it. For the hour of fulfilment is near.

A message from Christ to the churches

JOHAN TO THE SEVEN CHURCHES in the province of Asia. 4 Grace be to you and peace, from him who is and who was and who is to come, from the seven spirits before his throne, and from Jesus Christ, 5 the faithful witness, the first-born from the dead and ruler of the kings of the earth.

To him who loves us and freed us from our sins with his life's blood, who made of us a royal house, to serve as the priests of his God and Father 6
—to him be glory and dominion for ever and ever! Amen.

Behold, he is coming with the clouds! Every eye shall see him, and 7 among them those who pierced him; and all the peoples of the world shall lament in remorse. So it shall be. Amen.

'I am the Alpha and the Omega', says the Lord God, who is and who 8 was and who is to come, the sovereign Lord of all.

I, John, your brother, who share with you in the suffering and the 9 sovereignty and the endurance which is ours in Jesus—I was on the island called Patmos because I had preached God's word and borne my testimony to Jesus. It was on the Lord's day, and I was caught up by the Spirit; and 10 behind me I heard a loud voice, like the sound of a trumpet, which said to me, 'Write down what you see on a scroll and send it to the seven churches: 11 to Ephesus, Smyrna, Pergamum, Thyatira, Sardis, Philadelphia, and Laodicea.' I turned to see whose voice it was that spoke to me; and when I 12 turned I saw seven standing lamps of gold, and among the lamps one like a son of man, robed down to his feet, with a golden girdle round his breast.
The hair of his head was white as snow-white wool, and his eyes flamed like 14 fire; his feet gleamed like burnished brass refined in a furnace, and his 15 voice was like the sound of rushing waters. In his right hand he held seven 16 stars, and out of his mouth came a sharp two-edged sword; and his face shone like the sun in full strength.

17 When I saw him, I fell at his feet as though dead. But he laid his right 18 hand upon me and said, 'Do not be afraid. I am the first and the last, and I am the living one; for I was dead and now I am alive for evermore, and 19 I hold the keys of Death and Death's domain. Write down therefore what you have seen, what is now, and what will be hereafter.

20 'Here is the secret meaning of the seven stars which you saw in my right hand, and of the seven lamps of gold: the seven stars are the angels of the seven churches, and the seven lamps are the seven churches.

2 'TO THE ANGEL of the church at Ephesus write:

"These are the words of the One who holds the seven stars in his right 2 hand and walks among the seven lamps of gold: I know all your ways, your toil and your fortitude. I know you cannot endure evil men; you have put to the proof those who claim to be apostles but are not, and have found 3 them false. Fortitude you have; you have borne up in my cause and never 4 5 flagged. But I have this against you: you have lost your early love. Think from what a height you have fallen; repent, and do as you once did. Otherwise, if you do not repent, I shall come to you and remove your lamp from 6 its place. Yet you have this in your favour: you hate the practices of the 7 Nicolaitans, as I do. Hear, you who have ears to hear, what the Spirit says to the churches! To him who is victorious I will give the right to eat from the tree of life that stands in the Garden of God."

8 'To the angel of the church at Smyrna write:

"These are the words of the First and the Last, who was dead and 9 came to life again: I know how hard pressed you are, and poor—and yet you are rich; I know how you are slandered by those who claim to be Jews 10 but are not—they are Satan's synagogue. Do not be afraid of the suffering to come. The Devil will throw some of you into prison, to put you to the test; and for ten days you will suffer cruelly. Only be faithful till death, 11 and I will give you the crown of life. Hear, you who have ears to hear, what the Spirit says to the churches! He who is victorious cannot be harmed by the second death."

12 'To the angel of the church at Pergamum write:

"These are the words of the One who has the sharp two-edged sword:
13 I know where you live; it is the place where Satan has his throne. And yet you are holding fast to my cause. You did not deny your faith in me even at the time when Antipas, my faithful witness, was killed in your city, the 14 home of Satan. But I have a few matters to bring against you: you have in Pergamum some that hold to the teaching of Balaam, who taught Balak to put temptation in the way of the Israelites. He encouraged them to eat 15 food sacrificed to idols and to commit fornication, and in the same way you 16 also have some who hold the doctrine of the Nicolaitans. So repent! If you do not, I shall come to you soon and make war upon them with the 17 sword that comes out of my mouth. Hear, you who have ears to hear, what the Spirit says to the churches! To him who is victorious I will give some of the hidden manna; I will give him also a white stone, and on the stone will be written a new name, known to none but him that receives it.”

‘To the angel of the church at Thyatira write:

“These are the words of the Son of God, whose eyes flame like fire and whose feet gleam like burnished brass: I know all your ways, your love and faithfulness, your good service and your fortitude; and of late you have done even better than at first. Yet I have this against you: you tolerate that Jezebel, the woman who claims to be a prophetess, who by her teaching lures my servants into fornication and into eating food sacrificed to idols. I have given her time to repent, but she refuses to repent of her fornication. So I will throw her on to a bed of pain,^a and plunge her lovers into terrible suffering, unless they forswear what she is doing; and her children I will strike dead. This will teach all the churches that I am the searcher of men’s hearts and thoughts, and that I will reward each one of you according to his deeds. And now I speak to you others in Thyatira, who do not accept this teaching and have had no experience of what they like to call the deep secrets of Satan; on you I will impose no further burden. Only hold fast to what you have, until I come. To him who is victorious, to him who perseveres in doing my will to the end, I will give authority over the nations—that same authority which I received from my Father—and he shall rule them with an iron rod, smashing them to bits like earthenware; and I will give him also the star of dawn. Hear, you who have ears to hear, what the Spirit says to the churches!”

Wake up, and put some strength into what is left, which must otherwise die! For I have not found any work of yours completed in the eyes of my God. So remember the teaching you received; observe it, and repent. If you do not wake up, I shall come upon you like a thief, and you will not know the moment of my coming. Yet you have a few persons in Sardis who have not polluted their clothing. They shall walk with me in white, for so they deserve. He who is victorious shall thus be robed all in white; his name I will never strike off the roll of the living, for in the presence of my Father and his angels I will acknowledge him as mine. Hear, you who have ears to hear, what the Spirit says to the churches!”

Your strength, I know, is small, yet you have observed my commands and have not disowned my name. So this is what I will do: I will make those of Satan’s synagogue, who claim to be Jews but are lying frauds, come and fall down at your feet; and they shall know that you are my beloved people. Because you have kept my command and stood fast, I will also keep you from the ordeal that is to fall upon the whole world and test its inhabitants. I am coming soon; hold fast what you have, and let no one

And I will write the name of my God upon him, and the name of the city of my God, that new Jerusalem which is coming down out of heaven from my God, and my own new name. Hear, you who have ears to hear, what the Spirit says to the churches!”

14 ‘To the angel of the church at Laodicea write:

15 “These are the words of the Amen, the faithful and true witness, the prime source of all God’s creation: I know all your ways; you are neither hot nor cold. How I wish you were either hot or cold! But because you are lukewarm, neither hot nor cold, I will spit you out of my mouth. You say, ‘How rich I am! And how well I have done! I have everything I want.’ In fact, though you do not know it, you are the most pitiful wretch, poor, blind, and naked. So I advise you to buy from me gold refined in the fire, to make you truly rich, and white clothes to put on to hide the shame of your nakedness, and ointment for your eyes so that you may see. All whom I love I reprove and discipline. Be on your mettle therefore and repent. Here I stand knocking at the door; if anyone hears my voice and opens the door, I will come in and sit down to supper with him and he with me. To him who is victorious I will grant a place on my throne, as I myself was victorious and sat down with my Father on his throne. Hear, you who have ears to hear, what the Spirit says to the churches!”’

The opening of the sealed book

4 AFTER THIS I LOOKED, and there before my eyes was a door opened in heaven; and the voice that I had first heard speaking to me like a trumpet said, ‘Come up here, and I will show you what must happen hereafter.’ At once I was caught up by the Spirit. There in heaven stood a throne, and on the throne sat one whose appearance was like the gleam of jasper and cornelian; and round the throne was a rainbow, bright as an emerald. In a circle about this throne were twenty-four other thrones, and on them sat twenty-four elders, robed in white and wearing crowns of gold. From the throne went out flashes of lightning and peals of thunder. Burning before the throne were seven flaming torches, the seven spirits of God, and in front of it stretched what seemed a sea of glass, like a sheet of ice.

7 In the centre, round the throne itself, were four living creatures, covered with eyes, in front and behind. The first creature was like a lion, the second like an ox, the third had a human face, the fourth was like an eagle in flight. 8 The four living creatures, each of them with six wings, had eyes all over, inside and out; and by day and by night without a pause they sang:

‘Holy, holy, holy is God the sovereign Lord of all, who was, and is, and is to come!’

9 As often as the living creatures give glory and honour and thanks to the One who sits on the throne, who lives for ever and ever, the twenty-four elders fall down before the One who sits on the throne and worship him who lives for ever and ever; and as they lay their crowns before the throne they cry:

‘Thou art worthy, O Lord our God, to receive glory and honour and power, because thou didst create all things; by thy will they were created, and have their being!’ 11

Then I saw in the right hand of the One who sat on the throne a scroll, with writing inside and out, and it was sealed up with seven seals. And I saw a mighty angel proclaiming in a loud voice, ‘Who is worthy to open the scroll and to break its seals?’ There was no one in heaven or on earth or under the earth able to open the scroll or to look inside it. I was in tears because no one was found who was worthy to open the scroll or to look inside it. But one of the elders said to me: ‘Do not weep; for the Lion from the tribe of Judah, the Scion of David, has won the right to open the scroll and break its seven seals.’ 5

Then I saw standing in the very middle of the throne, inside the circle of living creatures and the circle of elders,^a a Lamb with the marks of slaughter upon him. He had seven horns and seven eyes, the eyes which are the seven spirits of God sent out over all the world. And the Lamb went up and took the scroll from the right hand of the One who sat on the throne. When he took it, the four living creatures and the twenty-four elders fell down before the Lamb. Each of the elders had a harp, and they held golden bowls full of incense, the prayers of God’s people, and they were singing a new song: 6

‘Thou art worthy to take the scroll and to break its seals, for thou wast slain and by thy blood didst purchase for God men of every tribe and language, people and nation; thou hast made of them a royal house, to serve our God as priests; and they shall reign upon earth.’ 10

Then as I looked I heard the voices of countless angels. These were all round the throne and the living creatures and the elders. Myriads upon myriads there were, thousands upon thousands, and they cried aloud: 11

‘Worthy is the Lamb, the Lamb that was slain, to receive all power and wealth, wisdom and might, honour and glory and praise!’ 12

Then I heard every created thing in heaven and on earth and under the earth and in the sea, all that is in them, crying: 13

‘Praise and honour, glory and might, to him who sits on the throne and to the Lamb for ever and ever!’

And the four living creatures said, ‘Amen’, and the elders fell down and worshipped. 14

THEN I WATCHED as the Lamb broke the first of the seven seals; and I heard one of the four living creatures say in a voice like thunder, ‘Come!’ And there before my eyes was a white horse, and its rider held a bow. He was given a crown, and he rode forth, conquering and to conquer. 6

^a Or standing between the throne, with the four living creatures, and the elders . . . 2

3 When the Lamb broke the second seal, I heard the second creature say, 4 'Come!' And out came another horse, all red. To its rider was given power to take peace from the earth and make men slaughter one another; and he was given a great sword.

5 When he broke the third seal, I heard the third creature say, 'Come!'
And there, as I looked, was a black horse; and its rider held in his hand a 6 pair of scales. And I heard what sounded like a voice from the midst of the living creatures, which said, 'A whole day's wage for a quart of flour, a whole day's wage for three quarts of barley-meal! But spare the olive and the vine.'

7 When he broke the fourth seal, I heard the voice of the fourth creature 8 say, 'Come!' And there, as I looked, was another horse, sickly pale; and its rider's name was Death, and Hades came close behind. To him was given power over a quarter of the earth, with the right to kill by sword and by famine, by pestilence and wild beasts.

9 When he broke the fifth seal, I saw underneath^a the altar the souls of those who had been slaughtered for God's word and for the testimony they 10 bore. They gave a great cry: 'How long, sovereign Lord, holy and true, must it be before thou wilt vindicate us and avenge our blood on the 11 inhabitants of the earth?' Each of them was given a white robe; and they were told to rest a little while longer, until the tally should be complete of all their brothers in Christ's service who were to be killed as they had been.

12 Then I watched as he broke the sixth seal. And there was a violent earthquake; the sun turned black as a funeral pall and the moon all red as blood; 13 14 the stars in the sky fell to the earth, like figs shaken down by a gale; the sky vanished, as a scroll is rolled up, and every mountain and island was moved 15 from its place. Then the kings of the earth, magnates and marshals, the rich and the powerful, and all men, slave or free, hid themselves in caves and 16 mountain crags; and they called out to the mountains and the crags, 'Fall on us and hide us from the face of the One who sits on the throne and from 17 the vengeance of the Lamb.' For the great day of their vengeance has come, and who will be able to stand?

7 After this I saw four angels stationed at the four corners of the earth, holding back the four winds so that no wind should blow on sea or land 2 or on any tree. Then I saw another angel rising out of the east, carrying the seal of the living God; and he called aloud to the four angels who had been 3 given the power to ravage land and sea: 'Do no damage to sea or land or trees until we have set the seal of our God upon the foreheads of his 4 servants.' And I heard the number of those who had received the seal.
From all the tribes of Israel there were a hundred and forty-four thousand:
5 twelve thousand from the tribe of Judah, twelve thousand from the tribe 6 of Reuben, twelve thousand from the tribe of Gad, twelve thousand from the tribe of Asher, twelve thousand from the tribe of Naphtali, twelve 7 thousand from the tribe of Manasseh, twelve thousand from the tribe of Simeon, twelve thousand from the tribe of Levi, twelve thousand from 8 the tribe of Issachar, twelve thousand from the tribe of Zebulun, twelve thousand from the tribe of Joseph, and twelve thousand from the tribe of Benjamin.

^a Or at the foot of . . .

After this I looked and saw a vast throng, which no one could count, 9 from every nation, of all tribes, peoples, and languages, standing in front of the throne and before the Lamb. They were robed in white and had palms in their hands, and they shouted together: 10

‘Victory to our God who sits on the throne, and to the Lamb!’

And all the angels stood round the throne and the elders and the four 11 living creatures, and they fell on their faces before the throne and wor- 12 shipped God, crying:

‘Amen! Praise and glory and wisdom, thanksgiving and honour, power and might, be to our God for ever and ever! Amen.’

Then one of the elders turned to me and said, ‘These men that are robed 13 in white—who are they and from where do they come?’ But I answered, 14 ‘My lord, you know, not I.’ Then he said to me, ‘These are the men who have passed through the great ordeal; they have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. That is why they stand before 15 the throne of God and minister to him day and night in his temple; and he who sits on the throne will dwell with them. They shall never again feel 16 hunger or thirst, the sun shall not beat on them nor any scorching heat, because the Lamb who is at the heart of the throne will be their shepherd 17 and will guide them to the springs of the water of life; and God will wipe all tears from their eyes.’

Now when the Lamb broke the seventh seal, there was silence in heaven 8 for what seemed half an hour. Then I looked, and the seven angels that stand in the presence of God were given seven trumpets. 2

Then another angel came and stood at the altar, holding a golden censer; 3 and he was given a great quantity of incense to offer with the prayers of all God’s people upon the golden altar in front of the throne. And from the 4 angel’s hand the smoke of the incense went up before God with the prayers of his people. Then the angel took the censer, filled it from the altar fire, 5 and threw it down upon the earth; and there were peals of thunder, lightning, and an earthquake.

The powers of darkness conquered

THEN THE SEVEN ANGELS that held the seven trumpets prepared to 6 blow them.

The first blew his trumpet; and there came hail and fire mingled with 7 blood, and this was hurled upon the earth. A third of the earth was burnt, a third of the trees were burnt, all the green grass was burnt.

The second angel blew his trumpet; and what looked like a great blazing 8 mountain was hurled into the sea. A third of the sea was turned to blood, a third of the living creatures in it died, and a third of the ships on it 9 foundered.

10 The third angel blew his trumpet; and a great star shot from the sky, 11 flaming like a torch; and it fell on a third of the rivers and springs. The name of the star was Wormwood; and a third of the water turned to wormwood, and men in great numbers died of the water because it had been poisoned.

12 The fourth angel blew his trumpet; and a third part of the sun was struck, a third of the moon, and a third of the stars, so that the third part went dark and a third of the light of the day failed, and of the night.

13 Then I looked, and I heard an eagle calling with a loud cry as it flew in mid-heaven: 'Woe, woe, woe to the inhabitants of the earth when the trumpets sound which the three last angels must now blow!'

9 Then the fifth angel blew his trumpet; and I saw a star that had fallen from heaven to earth, and the star was given the key of the shaft of the 2 abyss. With this he opened the shaft of the abyss; and from the shaft smoke rose like smoke from a great furnace, and the sun and the air were darkened 3 by the smoke from the shaft. Then over the earth, out of the smoke, came 4 locusts, and they were given the powers that earthly scorpions have. They were told to do no injury to the grass or to any plant or tree, but only to 5 those men who had not received the seal of God on their foreheads. These they were allowed to torment for five months, with torment like a scorpion's 6 sting; but they were not to kill them. During that time these men will seek death, but they will not find it; they will long to die, but death will elude them.

7 In appearance the locusts were like horses equipped for battle. On their heads were what looked like golden crowns; their faces were like human 8 9 faces and their hair like women's hair; they had teeth like lions' teeth, and wore breastplates like iron; the sound of their wings was like the noise of 10 horses and chariots rushing to battle; they had tails like scorpions, with stings in them, and in their tails lay their power to plague mankind for five 11 months. They had for their king the angel of the abyss, whose name, in Hebrew, is Abaddon, and in Greek, Apollyon, or the Destroyer.

12 The first woe has now passed. But there are still two more to come.

13 The sixth angel then blew his trumpet; and I heard a voice coming from between the horns of the golden altar that stood in the presence of God.
14 It said to the sixth angel, who held the trumpet: 'Release the four angels 15 held bound at the great river Euphrates!' So the four angels were let loose, to kill a third of mankind. They had been held ready for this moment, for 16 this very year and month, day and hour. And their squadrons of cavalry, whose count I heard, numbered two hundred million.

17 This was how I saw the horses and their riders in my vision: They wore breastplates, fiery red, blue, and sulphur-yellow; the horses had heads like lions' heads, and out of their mouths came fire, smoke, and sulphur.
18 By these three plagues, that is, by the fire, the smoke, and the sulphur that came from their mouths, a third of mankind was killed. The power of the 19 horses lay in their mouths, and in their tails also; for their tails were like snakes, with heads, and with them too they dealt injuries.

20 The rest of mankind who survived these plagues still did not abjure the gods their hands had fashioned, nor cease their worship of devils and of idols made from gold, silver, bronze, stone, and wood, which cannot see or hear or walk. Nor did they repent of their murders, their sorcery, their fornication, or their robberies. 21

THEN I SAW another mighty angel coming down from heaven. He was wrapped in cloud, with the rainbow round his head; his face shone like the sun and his legs were like pillars of fire. In his hand he held a little scroll unrolled. His right foot he planted on the sea, and his left on the land. Then he gave a great shout, like the roar of a lion; and when he shouted, the seven thunders spoke. I was about to write down what the seven thunders had said; but I heard a voice from heaven saying, 'Seal up what the seven thunders have said; do not write it down.' Then the angel that I saw standing on the sea and the land raised his right hand to heaven and swore by him who lives for ever and ever, who created heaven and earth and the sea and everything in them: 'There shall be no more delay; but when the time comes for the seventh angel to sound his trumpet, the hidden purpose of God will have been fulfilled, as he promised to his servants the prophets.' 10

Then the voice which I heard from heaven was speaking to me again, and it said, 'Go and take the open scroll in the hand of the angel that stands on the sea and the land.' So I went to the angel and asked him to give me the little scroll. He said to me, 'Take it, and eat it. It will turn your stomach sour, although in your mouth it will taste sweet as honey.' So I took the little scroll from the angel's hand and ate it, and in my mouth it did taste sweet as honey; but when I swallowed it my stomach turned sour. 10

Then they said to me, 'Once again you must utter prophecies over peoples and nations and languages and many kings.' 11

I was given a long cane, a kind of measuring-rod, and told: 'Now go and measure the temple of God, the altar, and the number of the worshippers. But have nothing to do with the outer court of the temple; do not measure that; for it has been given over to the Gentiles, and they will trample the Holy City underfoot for forty-two months. And I have two witnesses, whom I will appoint to prophesy, dressed in sackcloth, all through those twelve hundred and sixty days.' These are the two olive-trees and the two lamps that stand in the presence of the Lord of the earth. If anyone seeks to do them harm, fire pours from their mouths and consumes their enemies; and thus shall the man die who seeks to do them harm. These two have the power to shut up the sky, so that no rain may fall during the time of their prophesying; and they have the power to turn water to blood and to strike the earth at will with every kind of plague. But when they have completed their testimony, the beast that comes up from the abyss will wage war upon them and will defeat and kill them. Their corpses will lie in the street of the great city, whose name in allegory is Sodom, or Egypt, where also their Lord was crucified. For three days and a half men from every people and tribe, of every language and nation, gaze upon their corpses and refuse them burial. All men on earth gloat over them, make merry, and exchange presents; for these two prophets were a torment to the whole earth. But at the end of the three days and a half the breath of life from God came into them; and they stood up on their feet to the terror of all who saw it. Then a loud 11 voice was heard speaking to them from heaven, which said, 'Come up here!' And they went up to heaven in a cloud, in full view of their enemies.

13 At that same moment there was a violent earthquake, and a tenth of the city fell. Seven thousand people were killed in the earthquake; the rest in terror did homage to the God of heaven.

14 The second woe has now passed. But the third is soon to come.

15 Then the seventh angel blew his trumpet; and voices were heard in heaven shouting:

'The sovereignty of the world has passed to our Lord and his Christ, and he shall reign for ever and ever!'

16 And the twenty-four elders, seated on their thrones before God, fell on their faces and worshipped God, saying:

17 'We give thee thanks, O Lord God, sovereign over all, who art and who wast, because thou hast taken thy great power into thy hands and entered upon thy reign. The nations raged, but thy day of retribution has come. Now is the time for the dead to be judged; now is the time for recompense to thy servants the prophets, to thy dedicated people, and all who honour thy name, both great and small, the time to destroy those who destroy the earth.'

19 Then God's temple in heaven was laid open, and within the temple was seen the ark of his covenant. There came flashes of lightning and peals of thunder, an earthquake, and a storm of hail.

12 NEXT APPEARED a great portent in heaven, a woman robed with the sun, beneath her feet the moon, and on her head a crown of twelve stars. She was pregnant, and in the anguish of her labour she cried out to be delivered. Then a second portent appeared in heaven: a great red dragon with seven heads and ten horns; on his heads were seven diadems, and with his tail he swept down a third of the stars in the sky and flung them to the earth. The dragon stood in front of the woman who was about to give birth, so that when her child was born he might devour it. She gave birth to a male child, who is destined to rule all nations with an iron rod. But her child was snatched up to God and his throne; and the woman herself fled into the wilds, where she had a place prepared for her by God, there to be sustained for twelve hundred and sixty days.

7 Then war broke out in heaven. Michael and his angels waged war upon the dragon. The dragon and his angels fought, but they had not the strength to win, and no foothold was left them in heaven. So the great dragon was thrown down, that serpent of old that led the whole world astray, whose name is Satan, or the Devil—thrown down to the earth, and his angels with him.

10 Then I heard a voice in heaven proclaiming aloud: 'This is the hour of victory for our God, the hour of his sovereignty and power, when his Christ comes to his rightful rule! For the accuser of our brothers is overthrown, who day and night accused them before our God. By the sacrifice of the

Lamb they have conquered him, and by the testimony which they uttered; ^a 12 for they did not hold their lives too dear to lay them down. Rejoice then, you heavens and you that dwell in them! But woe to you, earth and sea, for the Devil has come down to you in great fury, knowing that his time is short!'

When the dragon found that he had been thrown down to the earth, he 13 went in pursuit of the woman who had given birth to the male child. But 14 the woman was given two great eagle's wings, to fly to the place in the wilds where for three years and a half she was to be sustained, out of reach of the serpent. From his mouth the serpent spewed a flood of water after the woman to sweep her away with its spate. But the earth came to her rescue 15 and opened its mouth and swallowed the river which the dragon spewed 16 from his mouth. At this the dragon grew furious with the woman, and went 17 off to wage war on the rest of her offspring, that is, on those who keep God's 18 commandments and maintain their testimony to Jesus. He took his stand 13 on the sea-shore.

Then ^b out of the sea I saw a beast rising. It had ten horns and seven heads. On its horns were ten diadems, and on each head a blasphemous name. The beast I saw was like a leopard, but its feet were like a bear's and its mouth like a lion's mouth. The dragon conferred upon it his power and rule, and great authority. One of its heads appeared to have received a death-blow; but the mortal wound was healed. The whole world went after the beast in wondering admiration. Men worshipped the dragon because he had conferred his authority upon the beast; they worshipped the beast also, and chanted, 'Who is like the Beast? Who can fight against it?'

The beast was allowed to mouth bombast and blasphemy, and was given 5 the right to reign for forty-two months. It opened its mouth in blasphemy 6 against God, reviling his name and his heavenly dwelling. ^c It was also 7 allowed to wage war on God's people and to defeat them, and was granted ^d 8 authority over every tribe and people, language and nation. All on earth will worship it, except those whose names the Lamb that was slain keeps in his roll of the living, written there since the world was made.

Hear, you who have ears to hear! Whoever is to be made prisoner, a 9 10 prisoner he shall be. Whoever takes the sword to kill, by the sword he is bound to be killed. This is where the fortitude and faithfulness of God's people have their place.

Then I saw another beast, which came up out of the earth; it had two 11 horns like a lamb's, but spoke like a dragon. It wielded all the authority of 12 the first beast in its presence, and made the earth and its inhabitants worship this first beast, whose mortal wound had been healed. It worked 13 great miracles, even making fire come down from heaven to earth before men's eyes. By the miracles it was allowed to perform in the presence of 14 the beast it deluded the inhabitants of the earth, and made them erect an image in honour of the beast that had been wounded by the sword and yet

 16 speak, and could cause all who would not worship the image to be put to 17 death. Moreover, it caused everyone, great and small, rich and poor, slave 18 and free, to be branded with a mark on his right hand or forehead, and no one was allowed to buy or sell unless he bore this beast's mark, either name or number. (Here is the key; and anyone who has intelligence may work out the number of the beast. The number represents a man's name, and the numerical value of its letters is six hundred and sixty-six.)

Visions of the end

- 14 THEN I LOOKED, and on Mount Zion stood the Lamb, and with him
 2 were a hundred and forty-four thousand who had his name and the name of his Father written on their foreheads. I heard a sound from heaven like the noise of rushing water and the deep roar of thunder; it was the 3 sound of harpers playing on their harps. There before the throne, and the four living creatures and the elders, they were singing a new song. That song no one could learn except the hundred and forty-four thousand, who 4 alone from the whole world had been ransomed. These are men who did not defile themselves with women, for they have kept themselves chaste, and they follow the Lamb wherever he goes. They have been ransomed as 5 the firstfruits of humanity for God and the Lamb. No lie was found in their lips; they are faultless.
- 6 Then I saw an angel flying in mid-heaven, with an eternal gospel to proclaim to those on earth, to every nation and tribe, language and people.
 7 He cried in a loud voice, 'Fear God and pay him homage; for the hour of his judgement has come! Worship him who made heaven and earth, the sea and the water-springs!'
- 8 Then another angel, a second, followed, and he cried, 'Fallen, fallen is Babylon the great, she who has made all nations drink the fierce wine of' her fornication!'
- 9 Yet a third angel followed, crying out loud, 'Whoever worships the 10 beast and its image and receives its mark on his forehead or hand, he shall drink the wine of God's wrath, poured undiluted into the cup of his vengeance. He shall be tormented in sulphurous flames before the holy 11 angels and before the Lamb. The smoke of their torment will rise for ever and ever, and there will be no respite day or night for those who worship 12 the beast and its image or receive the mark of its name.' This is where the fortitude of God's people has its place—in keeping God's commands and remaining loyal to Jesus.
- 13 Moreover, I heard a voice from heaven, saying, 'Write this: "Happy are the dead who die in the faith of Christ! Henceforth",^b says the Spirit,^c
 "they may rest from their labours; for they take with them the record of their deeds."'

^a Or drink the wine of God's wrath upon . . .

Then as I looked there appeared a white cloud, and on the cloud sat one like a son of man. He had on his head a crown of gold and in his hand a sharp sickle. Another angel came out of the temple and called in a loud voice to him who sat on the cloud: 'Stretch out your sickle and reap; for harvest-time has come, and earth's crop is over-ripe.' So he who sat on the cloud put his sickle to the earth and its harvest was reaped.

Then another angel came out of the heavenly temple, and he also had a sharp sickle. Then from the altar came yet another, the angel who has authority over fire, and he shouted to the one with the sharp sickle: 'Stretch out your sickle, and gather in earth's grape-harvest, for its clusters are ripe.' So the angel put his sickle to the earth and gathered in its grapes, and threw them into the great winepress of God's wrath. The winepress was trodden outside the city, and for two hundred miles around blood flowed from the press to the height of the horses' bridles.

Then I saw another great and astonishing portent in heaven: seven angels with seven plagues, the last plagues of all, for with them the wrath of God is consummated.

I saw what seemed a sea of glass shot with fire, and beside the sea of glass, holding the harps which God had given them, were those who had won the victory over the beast and its image and the number of its name.

They were singing the song of Moses, the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb, as they chanted:

'Great and marvellous are thy deeds, O Lord God, sovereign over all; just and true are thy ways, thou king of the ages.^a Who shall not revere thee, Lord, and do homage to thy name? For thou alone art holy. All nations shall come and worship in thy presence, for thy just dealings stand revealed.'

After this, as I looked, the sanctuary of the heavenly Tent of Testimony was thrown open, and out of it came the seven angels with the seven plagues. They were robed in fine linen, clean and shining, and had golden girdles round their breasts. Then one of the four living creatures gave the seven angels seven golden bowls full of the wrath of God who lives for ever and ever; and the sanctuary was filled with smoke from the glory of God and his power, so that no one could enter it until the seven plagues of the seven angels were completed.

Then from the sanctuary I heard a loud voice, and it said to the seven angels, 'Go and pour out the seven bowls of God's wrath on the earth.'

So the first angel went and poured his bowl on the earth; and foul malignant sores appeared on those men that wore the mark of the beast and worshipped its image.

The second angel poured his bowl on the sea, and it turned to blood like the blood from a corpse; and every living thing in the sea died.

The third angel poured his bowl on the rivers and springs, and they turned to blood.

Then I heard the angel of the waters say, 'Just art thou in these thy judgements, thou Holy One who art and wast; for they shed the blood of thy people and of thy prophets, and thou hast given them blood to drink. They have their deserts!’ And I heard the altar cry, ‘Yes, Lord God, sovereign over all, true and just are thy judgements!’

^a Some witnesses read king of the nations.

8 The fourth angel poured his bowl on the sun; and it was allowed to burn
9 men with its flames. They were fearfully burned; but they only cursed the name of God who had the power to inflict such plagues, and they refused to repent or do him homage.

10 The fifth angel poured his bowl on the throne of the beast; and its kingdom was plunged in darkness. Men gnawed their tongues in agony, 11 but they only cursed the God of heaven for their sores and pains, and would not repent of what they had done.

12 The sixth angel poured his bowl on the great river Euphrates; and its water was dried up, to prepare the way for the kings from the east.

13 Then I saw coming from the mouth of the dragon, the mouth of the beast, and the mouth of the false prophet, three foul spirits like frogs.
14 These spirits were devils, with power to work miracles. They were sent out to muster all the kings of the world for the great day of battle of God the sovereign Lord. (‘That is the day when I come like a thief! Happy the man who stays awake and keeps on his clothes, so that he will not have to go naked and ashamed for all to see!’) So they assembled the kings at the place called in Hebrew Armageddon.

17 Then the seventh angel poured his bowl on the air; and out of the sanctuary came a loud voice from the throne, which said, ‘It is over!’ And there followed flashes of lightning and peals of thunder, and a violent earthquake, like none before it in human history, so violent it was. The great city was split in three; the cities of the world fell in ruin; and God did not forget Babylon the great, but made her drink the cup which was filled with the fierce wine of his vengeance. Every island vanished; there 20 was not a mountain to be seen. Huge hailstones, weighing perhaps a hundredweight, fell on men from the sky; and they cursed God for the plague of hail, because that plague was so severe.

17 THEN ONE OF THE SEVEN ANGELS that held the seven bowls came and spoke to me and said, ‘Come, and I will show you the judgement on the great whore, enthroned above the ocean. The kings of the earth have committed fornication with her, and on the wine of her fornication men all over the world have made themselves drunk.’ In the Spirit he carried me away into the wilds, and there I saw a woman mounted on a scarlet beast which was covered with blasphemous names and had seven heads and ten horns.

4 The woman was clothed in purple and scarlet and bedizened with gold and jewels and pearls. In her hand she held a gold cup, full of obscenities and the foulness of her fornication; and written on her forehead was a name with a secret meaning: ‘Babylon the great, the mother of whores and of every obscenity on earth.’ The woman, I saw, was drunk with the blood of God’s people and with the blood of those who had borne their testimony to Jesus.

7 As I looked at her I was greatly astonished. But the angel said to me, ‘Why are you so astonished? I will tell you the secret of the woman and of the beast she rides, with the seven heads and the ten horns. The beast 8 you have seen is he who once was alive, and is alive no longer, but has yet to ascend out of the abyss before going to perdition. Those on earth whose names have not been inscribed in the roll of the living ever since the world was made will all be astonished to see the beast; for he once was alive, and is alive no longer, and has still to appear.

'But here is the clue for those who can interpret it. The seven heads are 9 seven hills on which the woman sits. They represent also seven kings,^a of 10 whom five have already fallen, one is now reigning, and the other has yet to come; and when he does come he is only to last for a little while. As for 11 the beast that once was alive and is alive no longer, he is an eighth—and yet he is one of the seven, and he is going to perdition. The ten horns you 12 saw are ten kings who have not yet begun to reign, but who for one hour are to share with the beast the exercise of royal authority; for they have but a 13 single purpose among them and will confer their power and authority upon the beast. They will wage war upon the Lamb, but the Lamb will defeat 14 them, for he is Lord of lords and King of kings, and his victory will be shared by his followers, called and chosen and faithful.'^b

Then he said to me, 'The ocean you saw, where the great whore sat, is 15 an ocean of peoples and populations, nations and languages. As for the ten 16 horns you saw, they together with the beast will come to hate the whore;
they will strip her naked and leave her desolate, they will batten on her flesh and burn her to ashes. For God has put it into their heads to carry out 17 his purpose, by making common cause and conferring their sovereignty upon the beast until all that God has spoken is fulfilled. The woman you 18 saw is the great city that holds sway over the kings of the earth.'

After this I saw another angel coming down from heaven; he came with 18 great authority and the earth was lit up with his splendour. Then in a 2 mighty voice he proclaimed, 'Fallen, fallen is Babylon the great! She has become a dwelling for demons, a haunt for every unclean spirit, for every vile and loathsome bird. For all nations have drunk deep of^c the fierce 3 wine of her fornication; the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her, and merchants the world over have grown rich on her bloated wealth.'

Then I heard another voice from heaven that said: 'Come out of her, 4 my people, lest you take part in her sins and share in her plagues. For her 5 sins are piled high as heaven, and God has not forgotten her crimes. Pay 6 her back in her own coin, repay her twice over for her deeds! Double for her the strength of the potion she mixed! Mete out grief and torment to match her voluptuous pomp! She says in her heart, "I am a queen on my 7 throne! No mourning for me, no widow's weeds!" Because of this her 8 plagues shall strike her in a single day—pestilence, bereavement, famine, and burning—for mighty is the Lord God who has pronounced her doom!'

The kings of the earth who committed fornication with her and wallowed 9 in her luxury will weep and wail over her, as they see the smoke of her

^a Or emperors.

^b Or . . . kings, and his followers are faithful men, called and selected for service.

^c Other witnesses read have been ruined by . . .

10 conflagration. They will stand at a distance, for horror at her torment, and will say, 'Alas, alas for the great city, the mighty city of Babylon! In a single hour your doom has struck!'

11 The merchants of the earth also will weep and mourn for her, because 12 no one any longer buys their cargoes, cargoes of gold and silver, jewels and pearls, cloths of purple and scarlet, silks and fine linens; all kinds of scented woods, ivories, and every sort of thing made of costly woods,
13 bronze, iron, or marble; cinnamon and spice, incense, perfumes and frankincense; wine, oil, flour and wheat, sheep and cattle, horses, chariots,
14 slaves, and the lives of men. 'The fruit you longed for', they will say, 'is gone from you; all the glitter and the glamour are lost, never to be yours again!' The traders in all these wares, who gained their wealth from her,
15 will stand at a distance for horror at her torment, weeping and mourning and saying, 'Alas, alas for the great city, that was clothed in fine linen and 16 purple and scarlet, bedizened with gold and jewels and pearls! Alas that 17 in one hour so much wealth should be laid waste!'

Then all the sea-captains and voyagers, the sailors and those who traded 18 by sea, stood at a distance and cried out as they saw the smoke of her con-
19 flagration: 'Was there ever a city like the great city?' They threw dust on their heads, weeping and mourning and saying, 'Alas, alas for the great city, where all who had ships at sea grew rich on her wealth! Alas that in a single hour she should be laid waste!'

20 But let heaven exult over her; exult, apostles and prophets and people of God; for in the judgement against her he has vindicated your cause!

21 Then a mighty angel took up a stone like a great millstone and hurled it into the sea and said, 'Thus shall Babylon, the great city, be sent hurtling
22 down, never to be seen again! No more shall the sound of harpers and minstrels, of flute-players and trumpeters, be heard in you; no more shall
23 craftsmen of any trade be found in you; no more shall the sound of the mill be heard in you; no more shall the light of the lamp be seen in you; no more shall the voice of the bride and bridegroom be heard in you! Your traders were once the merchant princes of the world, and with your sorcery you deceived all the nations.'

24 For the blood of the prophets and of God's people was found in her, the blood of all who had been done to death on earth.

19 After this I heard what sounded like the roar of a vast throng in heaven; and they were shouting:

2 'Alleluia! Victory and glory and power belong to our God, for true and just are his judgements! He has condemned the great whore who corrupted the earth with her fornication, and has avenged upon her the blood of his servants.'

3 Then once more they shouted:

'Alleluia! The smoke goes up from her for ever and ever!'

4 And the twenty-four elders and the four living creatures fell down and worshipped God as he sat on the throne, and they too cried:

'Amen! Alleluia!'

Then a voice came from the throne which said: 'Praise our God, all you his servants, you that fear him, both great and small!' 5

Again I heard what sounded like a vast crowd, like the noise of rushing water and deep roars of thunder, and they cried: 6

'Alleluia! The Lord our God, sovereign over all, has entered on his reign! Exult and shout for joy and do him homage, for the wedding-day of the Lamb has come! His bride has made herself ready, and for her dress she has been given fine linen, clean and shining.' 7 8

(Now the fine linen signifies the righteous deeds of God's people.)

Then the angel said to me, 'Write this: "Happy are those who are invited to the wedding-supper of the Lamb!"' And he added, 'These are the very words of God.' At this I fell at his feet to worship him. But he said to me, 'No, not that! I am but a fellow-servant with you and your brothers who bear their testimony to Jesus. It is God you must worship. Those who bear testimony to Jesus are inspired like the prophets.'^a 9 10

THEN I SAW heaven wide open, and there before me was a white horse; and its rider's name was Faithful and True, for he is just in judgement and just in war. His eyes flamed like fire, and on his head were many diadems. Written upon him was a name known to none but himself, and he was robed in a garment drenched in blood.^b He was called the Word of God, and the armies of heaven followed him on white horses, clothed in fine linen, clean and shining. From his mouth there went a sharp sword with which to smite the nations; for he it is who shall rule them with an iron rod, and tread the winepress of the wrath and retribution of God the sovereign Lord. And on his robe and on his thigh there was written the name: 'King of kings and Lord of lords.' 11 12 13 14 15 16

Then I saw an angel standing in the sun, and he cried aloud to all the birds flying in mid-heaven: 'Come and gather for God's great supper, to eat the flesh of kings and commanders and fighting men, the flesh of horses and their riders, the flesh of all men, slave and free, great and small!' Then I saw the beast and the kings of the earth and their armies mustered to do battle with the Rider and his army. The beast was taken prisoner, and so was the false prophet who had worked miracles in its presence and deluded those that had received the mark of the beast and worshipped its image. The two of them were thrown alive into the lake of fire with its sulphurous flames. The rest were killed by the sword which went out of the Rider's mouth; and all the birds gorged themselves on their flesh. 17 18 19 20 21

Then I saw an angel coming down from heaven with the key of the abyss and a great chain in his hands. He seized the dragon, that serpent of old, the Devil or Satan, and chained him up for a thousand years; he threw him into the abyss, shutting and sealing it over him, so that he might seduce the nations no more till the thousand years were over. After that he must be let loose for a short while. 20 2 3

^a Or . . . worship. For testimony to Jesus is the spirit that inspires prophets.

^b Some witnesses read spattered with blood.

4 Then I saw thrones, and upon them sat those to whom judgement was committed. I could see the souls of those who had been beheaded for the sake of God's word and their testimony to Jesus, those who had not worshipped the beast and its image or received its mark on forehead or hand. These came to life again and reigned with Christ for a thousand years, though the rest of the dead did not come to life until the thousand years were over. This is the first resurrection. Happy indeed, and one of God's own people, is the man who shares in this first resurrection! Upon such the second death has no claim; but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him for the thousand years.

7 When the thousand years are over, Satan will be let loose from his 8 dungeon; and he will come out to seduce the nations in the four quarters of the earth and to muster them for battle, yes, the hosts of Gog and Magog, 9 countless as the sands of the sea. So they marched over the breadth of the land and laid siege to the camp of God's people and the city that he loves. 10 But fire came down on them from heaven and consumed them; and the Devil, their seducer, was flung into the lake of fire and sulphur, where the beast and the false prophet had been flung, there to be tormented day and night for ever.

11 Then I saw a great white throne, and the One who sat upon it; from his presence earth and heaven vanished away, and no place was left for them. 12 I could see the dead, great and small, standing before the throne; and books were opened. Then another book was opened, the roll of the living. From what was written in these books the dead were judged upon the record of their deeds. The sea gave up its dead, and Death and Hades gave up the dead in their keeping; they were judged, each man on the record of his deeds. Then Death and Hades were flung into the lake of fire. This lake of fire is the second death; and into it were flung any whose names were not to be found in the roll of the living.

21 THEN I SAW a new heaven and a new earth, for the first heaven and 2 the first earth had vanished, and there was no longer any sea. I saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down out of heaven from God, made ready like 3 a bride adorned for her husband. I heard a loud voice proclaiming from the throne: 'Now at last God has his dwelling among men! He will dwell among them and they shall be his people, and God himself will be with them.'⁴ 4 He will wipe every tear from their eyes; there shall be an end to death, and to mourning and crying and pain; for the old order has passed away!⁵ 5 Then he who sat on the throne said, 'Behold! I am making all things new!' (And he said to me, 'Write this down; for these words are trustworthy and true. Indeed they are already fulfilled.') 'I am the Alpha and the Omega, the beginning and the end. A draught from the water-springs of life will be 7 my free gift to the thirsty. All this is the victor's heritage; and I will be his 8 God and he shall be my son. But as for the cowardly, the faithless, and the vile, murderers, fornicators, sorcerers, idolaters, and liars of every kind, their lot will be the second death, in the lake that burns with sulphurous flames.'

⁴ Some witnesses read God-with-them shall himself be their God (see Isaiah 7. 14; 8. 8).

Then one of the seven angels that held the seven bowls full of the seven 9 last plagues came and spoke to me and said, 'Come, and I will show you the 10 bride, the wife of the Lamb.' So in the Spirit he carried me away to a great 11 high mountain, and showed me the holy city of Jerusalem coming down out 12 of heaven from God. It shone with the glory of God; it had the radiance 13 of some priceless jewel, like a jasper, clear as crystal. It had a great high 14 wall, with twelve gates, at which were twelve angels; and on the gates were 15 inscribed the names of the twelve tribes of Israel. There were three gates 16 to the east, three to the north, three to the south, and three to the west. 17
The city wall had twelve foundation-stones, and on them were the names 18 of the twelve apostles of the Lamb. 19

The angel who spoke with me carried a gold measuring-rod, to measure 20 the city, its wall, and its gates. The city was built as a square, and was as 21 wide as it was long. It measured by his rod twelve thousand furlongs, its 22 length and breadth and height being equal. Its wall was one hundred and 23 forty-four cubits high, that is, by human measurements, which the angel 24 was using. The wall was built of jasper, while the city itself was of pure gold, 25 bright as clear glass. The foundations of the city wall were adorned with 26 jewels of every kind, the first of the foundation-stones being jasper, the 27 second lapis lazuli, the third chalcedony, the fourth emerald, the fifth 28 sardonyx, the sixth cornelian, the seventh chrysolite, the eighth beryl, 29 the ninth topaz, the tenth chrysoprase, the eleventh turquoise, and the 30 twelfth amethyst. The twelve gates were twelve pearls, each gate being 31 made from a single pearl. The streets of the city were of pure gold, like 32 translucent glass.

I saw no temple in the city; for its temple was the sovereign Lord God 33 and the Lamb. And the city had no need of sun or moon to shine upon it; 34 for the glory of God gave it light, and its lamp was the Lamb. By its light 35 shall the nations walk, and the kings of the earth shall bring into it all their 36 splendour. The gates of the city shall never be shut by day—and there will 37 be no night. The wealth and splendour of the nations shall be brought into 38 it; but nothing unclean shall enter, nor anyone whose ways are false or 39 foul, but only those who are inscribed in the Lamb's roll of the living. 40

Then he showed me the river of the water of life, sparkling like crystal, 41 flowing from the throne of God and of the Lamb down the middle of the 42 city's street. On either side of the river stood a tree of life, which yields 43 twelve crops of fruit, one for each month of the year; the leaves of the trees 44 serve for the healing of the nations. Every accursed thing shall disappear. 45
The throne of God and of the Lamb will be there, and his servants shall 46 worship him; they shall see him face to face, and bear his name on their 47 foreheads. There shall be no more night, nor will they need the light of 48 lamp or sun, for the Lord God will give them light; and they shall reign 49 for evermore. 50

THEN HE SAID to me, 'These words are trustworthy and true. The Lord 51
God who inspires the prophets has sent his angel to show his servants what 52 must shortly happen. And, remember, I am coming soon!' 53

Happy is the man who heeds the words of prophecy contained in this 54

8 book! It is I, John, who heard and saw these things. And when I had heard and seen them, I fell in worship at the feet of the angel who had shown 9 them to me. But he said to me, 'No, not that! I am but a fellow-servant with you and your brothers the prophets and those who heed the words of 10 this book. It is God you must worship.' Then he told me, 'Do not seal up 11 the words of prophecy in this book, for the hour of fulfilment is near. Meanwhile, let the evil-doer go on doing evil and the filthy-minded wallow in his filth, but let the good man persevere in his goodness and the dedicated man be true to his dedication.'

12 'Yes, I am coming soon, and bringing my recompense with me, to 13 requite everyone according to his deeds! I am the Alpha and the Omega, the first and the last, the beginning and the end.'

14 Happy are those who wash their robes clean! They will have the right 15 to the tree of life and will enter by the gates of the city. Outside are dogs, sorcerers and fornicators, murderers and idolaters, and all who love and practise deceit.

16 'I, Jesus, have sent my angel to you with this testimony for the churches.
I am the scion and offspring of David, the bright star of dawn.'

17 'Come!' say the Spirit and the bride.

'Come!' let each hearer reply.

Come forward, you who are thirsty; accept the water of life, a free gift to all who desire it.

18 For my part, I give this warning to everyone who is listening to the words of prophecy in this book: should anyone add to them, God will add 19 to him the plagues described in this book; should anyone take away from the words in this book of prophecy, God will take away from him his share in the tree of life and the Holy City, described in this book.

20 He who gives this testimony speaks: 'Yes, I am coming soon!'

Amen. Come, Lord Jesus!

21 The grace of the Lord Jesus be with you all. ^a
